DIVINE PROVIDENCE IN HUMAN AFFAIRS.
 Many are the shapes of the things the deities direct, and many things the gods perform contrary to our expectations. And those things which we look for are not accomplished; but the God hath brought to pass things not looked for. Such hath been the event of this affair.—Wind-up of Greek play.

God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform. His paths are unsearchable, His ways are past finding out. What the Greek dramatist said so well and what the English poet said even better and more tersely applies with marked appropriateness to the political situation in Canada to-day, and especially to the events connected with Sir Wilfrid Laurier's visit to Toronto.

The World has been a close observer of things political in this country for some years back, and if we had formed one fixed opinion in our time it was the view we held of the future of the Liberal party after it took up Mr. Wiman and his fad of commercial union. We saw that man come over here as the prophet of a new gospel, as the advocate of a doctrine that the political salvation of Canada lay in commercial union with the United States and the surrender to Washington of our political and fiscal independence; we saw first a few, then many, then all of the Reform politicians and papers enlist in Wiman's cause; we saw and heard The Globe and Sir Richard Cartwright declare that the United States was our "natural market," and that "this was the continent to which we belong"; we saw The Mail newspaper, which had betrayed and deserted Sir John Macdonald, throw in its lot with Wiman and declare "so much the worse for British connection"; we saw Sir Wilfrid Laurier go on a stumping tour in the United States to promote the cause of "continental union," and we heard him declare in Boston:

"They tell us again that we should establish a league between England and her possessions, in virtue of which we would carry on commerce among ourselves, the British Empire, to the exclusion of the rest of the world. I have only this to say of this idea, that it is absolutely absurd. I prefer the Yankee dollar to the British shilling, particularly when the dollar is so near and the shilling so far off. We saw an organization put forth in New York under the auspices of Mr. Dana of The Sun and money raised to promote the incorporation of Canada within the United States, and the money raised by them sent into Canada to help the propaganda; we saw Mr. Charlton and Sir Richard Cartwright's missions to Washington and the secret interviews carried on by Mr. Farrer with prominent American Senators and Congressmen as to the best means of "squeezing Canada" into submission; and we saw, last of all, a small number of Liberals repudiate the conduct of their party and take themselves out of impending danger, most notably of all, Hon. Edward Blake, who, in his celebrated address, told the electors of West Durham that commercial union meant annexation. Seeing all these things and watching the drift of affairs at Ottawa and the speeches that were made there and the resolutions adopted at the Ottawa convention, we had made up our mind to one thing, and that was that the Liberal party would in the end become desperate and wind up its career in a pro-american and anti-British. Sir John Macdonald had become nothing but pro-American and anti-British. Sir John Macdonald seems also to have been forced to this conclusion, and recognizing what was likely to happen, and that the hour of his departure was at hand, he framed his farewell message to the Canadian people and his answer to his opponents in his glorious words: "A British subject I was born, a British subject I will die." The grasping Americans took the same view of the situation and they wrote and put down Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Richard Cartwright, The Globe and Mr. Fielding and Mr. Longley of the anti-federalists of Nova Scotia as the very best friends the Yankee eagle had outside of its own territory!

But what happened? A series of disasters to the Conservative party, resulting in four changes in the leadership within less than five years, and the advent on the scene of the notorious Manitoba school question and the fatuous conduct in connection therewith of certain Conservative leaders, with a temporary abandonment of all the progressive ideas that Sir John Macdonald had left as a heritage to his party—these things ended in the defeat of the Conservatives and the installation of the Liberals to power and office. This was in 1896. And since then what has happened? That on his coming into office Mr. Laurier sent an embassy to Washington to get better trade relations and his offer was repulsed; that under pretence of revising the Canadian tariff he was compelled to recognize the principle of protection to home industries and abandon his free trade professions; that for his "natural market in the United States" he gave a preferential arrangement to England; that when the Jubilee celebration came he had to be and was afterwards glad to be a pro-Britisher and not pro-American; that his former speeches led the Cobdenites of England to give him the Cobden gold medal and for him to repudiate in Toronto, as he did Wednesday night, 'the Cobden idea, and admit that it was possible, and, nay, more desirable, for two countries to make a trade arrangement based on tariffs or treaties that, while they were restrictive of trade in the wide sense, were conducive, by reason of their limitations, to the trade of two particular countries, Canada and the Mother Country, to wit; in short, that Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his party have had to repudiate themselves and swallow their principles.

The Conservatives have been punished for the sins of their leaders by removal from office, and the Liberals have been punished for their anti-Canadian record, their anti-British policy, by being put in office and being compelled to repudiate their past, to adopt the Conservative principles of British connection, the regulation of trade by treaty and tariff, the adoption of all those principles of their opponents which they had condemned, and the appearance on the public platform of the Right Honourable Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the political clothes of the Right Honourable Sir John Macdonald. It is a far cry from the Boston speech of Mr. Laurier to the Pavilion address of Sir Wilfrid!

The Conservatives have been punished by removal from office and the Liberals have been punished by being put in office and being forced to swallow themselves, and the more they are acclaimed, by reason of their present pro-British program, the more apparent is their former shame! The glorification of the Sir Wilfrid to day means the besouling of the Mr. Laurier of three short years ago!

And having observed these things, and seeing them develop as we have seen them develop and come to a head in this visit of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to Toronto, we are only able to seek their explanation in the words of the poets quoted above, and quoted as a close:

"Many are the shapes of the things the deities direct, and many things the gods perform contrary to our expectations. And those things which we look for are not accomplished; but the God hath brought to pass things not looked for. Such hath been the event of this affair."
 "God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform."
 But out of it all we have seen those principles which The World holds dear and which we have ever maintained more than vindicated, and we and all Canadians can rejoice in the fact that the trend of things in this country now and for many years to come is British, and still more, Canadian. There is no more looking to Washington for political salvation. Providence has brought us through, but in a "mysterious way."

THE SHACKLES MUST BE BROKEN.
 The business men of the Dominion are fairly clamoring for an insolvency law. Almost every city has declared itself in favor of insolvency legislation. What we cannot understand is why the Government delays putting through a measure that meets with such unanimous approval. Who is it that opposes the adoption of an insolvency law? We do not hear of any opposition to it in the press. It's a puzzle to know what is really the cause of the Government's long delay in following the example of Great Britain in dealing with insolvent debtors. President Gurney, in his speech at the Laurier banquet, enunciated a sound business principle when he said that we should break the shackles of every bondman who is in debt and who is honest. It is a sound law which permits a man to mortgage his house and lot. It is a foolish law which allows his fellow-citizens to hold a mortgage on an unfortunate debtor's future happiness and usefulness. Let it be known that one man cannot mortgage another's future life and business will speedily react to the changed conditions. The amount of credit given to any individual should be limited to that individual's visible resources. If those resources do not warrant credit being given, it should be refused. The law that permits of a life mortgage being placed in the hands of a creditor is not in advance of the law of slavery. The man whose life is mortgaged is indeed shackled. The whole country demands with Mr. Gurney that these shackles be removed.

An incident which occurred in the Division Court in this city yesterday affords a fine illustration of the misery that is endured by the unfortunate men who are wearing these shackles. Five years ago a Toronto merchant met with reverses and was obliged to assign in favor of his creditors. Three of the latter were appointed trustees to look after the estate. The property was badly handled and the result was that the creditors were left virtually nothing, while the debtor to-day owns several thousand dollars more than he would owe if his estate had been disposed of to advantage. A short time ago it came to the knowledge of one of the trustees in an underhand way that the debtor was about to receive $100 in connection with a certain transaction. This was furnished by the trustee, who used in his own name and sought to apply the money to his own credit, instead of suing on behalf of the creditors generally. The case is now sub judice, but as far as the debtor goes it does not matter whether the trustee or the creditors get the money. The man who wears the shackles has no hope of regaining his freedom. The bloodhounds are ever on his trail. As the American slaves found an asylum in Canada previous to the Civil War, so the shackled debtors of Canada can find a hand in the forgeries and interpolations in a new land. The country demands that the shackles of every bondman who is in debt and honest be broken.

THE DETROIT FIRE
 It was a Serious Affair and the Loss is Over Half a Million—Julia Arthur Lost Her Costumes.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 7.—Five large buildings and two smaller ones, with all their contents, were destroyed this morning by a fire which swept through a block situated in the centre of the business portion of Detroit, and bounded by the Campus Martius, Woodward, Gratiot and Monroe-avenues. The total loss is estimated at $900,000 to $700,000. The blaze started about 1 o'clock on the stage of the Detroit Opera House.

The origin of the fire is not determined. It was not noticed until the flames leaped out at the rear of the theatre, following a blowing out of a rear wall by the explosion of a calcium light.

Among the losses was that of the Julia Arthur Dramatic Company. All of its handsome costumes and stage settings were destroyed. Miss Arthur was prostrated over this serious blow to her enterprises. The Grand Trunk repair shops, located in the dock at the foot of Dequindre-street, nearly three-quarters of a mile distant, caught fire from a blazing barrel, and were destroyed and a quantity of lumber and material. It was 6:30 before the fire House was owned by the Clerk estate. Its value is calculated at $80,000; fully insured.

C. J. Whitney, lessee of the building and manager, loses about $20,000; partially insured. The Julia Arthur Company loses its stock and building, estimated at $100,000, and was fully insured. The principal other losers, most of whom are fully insured, are as follows: Central Savings Bank $10,000; Hugh Connolly, jeweler, $10,000; Vaughan & Turner $50,000; Ross's dye shops, $15,000; Traugott Schmidt estate, owner of the Werner building, $85,000; Grand Union Tea Company $25,000; Parisian Laundry $15,000; Central Storage Company $20,000; Grand Trunk repair shops $65,000; Ross's dye shops, $15,000; opera house musicians, $1,000; other minor losses, $50,000.

It ought to be possible to get men of standing, and above all business men, into the City Council. When one attends a meeting of that august assembly, we find an amiable shrewd man in the chair, watching so as not to be tripped up on some utterly unimportant point. Then we see a worklike armor, whose mouth is built for talking, enquire for half an hour and bandy smart nothings about whether any member of the Board of Control knows whether the City Treasurer has got certain tenders. That official is there all the time, but if it is not business but talk that is the order of the day, and citizens, to call us by our correct City Hall title, come sadly away, wondering why the Treasurer was not asked at once, instead of at the end of a wasted half hour.

Joseph Pope will remember how his efforts were most warmly by his English colleagues, who regarded making a treaty as their Pike's Peak, which they must reach or "bust." From that day, England has steadily maintained the attitude of a peer with us in our foreign affairs. Her decisions to denounce the German and Belgian treaties and to refuse to participate in a jughandled conference, about the seas, shows that to-day she is as staunch as ever.

It is no idle boast to say that ever since England has done this she has come out on top in her differences with the United States. Previously she had no luck at all, for she persisted in believing that no statesman would conceal evidence in his possession and assure his colleagues that it was non-existent. But since Canada has had a hand in the forgeries and interpolations in the United States case in the Behring Sea arbitration were found out and exposed. Our award after the Washington treaty, our successful fight at Paris and now our influence in preventing this conference are very gratifying to alert and watchful Canada.

It ought to be possible to get men of standing, and above all business men, into the City Council.
