THE GARLAND.

The following grand and beautiful lines to the Arctic Dove, are from a volume lately published in London, by the Rev. William L. Howard. For majesty of diction and loneliness and beauty of sentiment, we think they have seldom been surpassed.—Boston Statesman.

THE ARCTIC DOVE.

Ride on—the ark, majestic and alone
On the wide waste of the soaring deep.
Its hull scarce peering through the night of clouds,
Its keel, but for the mighty deep, has struck!
The ark, from its terrific voyage, rests
On Ararat. The raven is sent forth—
Send out the dove, and as her wings far off
Shine in the light, that streaks the evening clouds,
Bid her speed on, and greet her with a song—
Go beautiful and gentle dove,
But whither wilt thou go?
For though the clouds rise high above,
How sad and waste is all below!

The wife of Shem, a moment to her breast
Hold the poor bird and kiss'd it. Many a night
When she was listening to the hollow wind,
She would sit to her bosom, with a tear;
Or when it murmured in her hand, forgot
The long loud tumult of the storm without,
She kisses it, and at her father's word,
Bids it go forth.

The dove flies on! In lonely flight
She flies from the mountain's summit,
And now amid the gloom of night,
Comes weary to the ark.

Oh! let me in, she seems to say,
For long and lone hath been my way;
Oh! once more, gentle mistress, let me rest,
And dry my dripping plumage on thy breast.

So the bird flew to her who cherished it,
She sent it forth again out of the ark—
Again it came at the morning fall, and in
An olive leaf plucked off and in its bill,
And Shem's wife took the green leaf from its bill,
And kiss'd its wing again, and smilingly
Dropt it on its neck one silent tear for joy.
She sent it forth once more, and watch'd its flight,
Till it was lost amid the clouds of heaven;
Then gazing on the clouds where it was lost,
Its mournful mistress sung the last farewell!

Go beautiful and gentle dove,
And greet the morning ray
For lo! the sun shines bright above
And night and storm are past away.
No longer drooping, here confined,
In this cold prison dwell;
Go, free to sunshine and to wind,
Sweet bird, go forth, and fare thee well.

Oh! beautiful and gentle dove,
Thy welcome sad will be,
When thou shalt hear no voice of love
In murmurs from the leafy tree;
Yet freedom, freedom shall thou find,
From this cold prison's cell;
Go then, to sunshine and the wind,
Sweet bird, go forth, and fare thee well.

I DO NOT LOVE THEE!

I do not love thee!—no! I do not love thee!
And yet when thou art absent I am sad;
And envy even the blue sky above me,
Whose quiet stars may see thee and be glad.

I do not love thee!—yet I know not why,
What'er thou dost, I will be well done, to me—
And often in my solitude I sigh—
That those I do love are not more like thee.

I do not love thee!—yet when thou art gone,
I hate the sound, (though those who speak be dear),
Which breaks the lingering echo of the tone
Thy voice of music leaves upon my ear.

I do not love thee!—yet thy speaking eyes,
With their deep, bright, and most expressive blue;
Between me and the midnight sky arise,
Offener than any eyes I ever knew.

I know I do not love thee!—yet alas!
Others will scarcely trust my candid heart—
And oft I catch them smiling as they pass,
Because they see me gazing where thou art.

THE MISCELLANIST.

THE ELECTION—A TALE.

A few years back, a gentleman of the name of Danby came to reside in a small borough town—where, in Wiltshire or Cornwall matters not to our story, although in one of those counties the aforesaid town was probably situated, being what is called a close borough, the joint property of two noble families. Mr. Danby was evidently a man of large fortune, and that fortune was as evidently acquired in trade—indeed he made no more secret of the latter circumstance than the former. He built himself a large, square, red house, equally ugly and commodious; just without the town, walled in a couple of acres of ground for a kitchen garden, kept a heavy one-horse chaise, a stout pony, and a brace of greyhounds; and having furnished his house solidly and handsomely, and arranged his domestic affairs to his heart's content, began to look about among his neighbours; scraped acquaintance with the lawyer, the apothecary, and the principal tradesmen; subscribed to the reading room; became a member of the bowling green and the cricket club, and took as lively an interest in the affairs of his new residence, as if he had been born and bred in the borough.

Now this interest, however agreeable to himself, was by no means equally conducive to the quiet and comfort of the place. Mr. Danby was a little, square, dark man, with a rickety nose, a good humoured, but very knowing smile, a pair of keen black eyes, a loud voluble speech, and a prodigious activity both of mind and body. His very look betokened his character, and that character was not uncommon among the middle ranks of Englishmen. In short besides being, as he often boasted, a downright John Bull, the gentleman was a reformer, zealous and uncompromising as ever attended a dinner, at the Crown and Anchor, or made a harangue in Palace Yard. He read Cobbett; and his own scheme for the redemption of tithes; and a plan, which not least perfectly inoffensive, Mr. Danby condescended to smaller and more worrying observances; and was, indeed so strict and jealous a guardian of the purity of the corporation, and the incorruptibility of the vestry, that an alderman could not wear a finger, or a churchwarden stir a foot without being called to account by this vigilant defender of the rights, liberties, and purses of the people. He was, beyond a doubt, the most troublesome man in the parish—and that is a wide word. In the matter of repairs and inquiries Mr. Hume was but a type of him. He would mingle economy with a parish dinner, and talk of retrenchment at the mayor's feast; brought an action, under the turnpike act, against the clerk and treasurer of the commissioners of the road; commenced a suit in chancery with the trustees of the charity schools; and finally threatened to open the borough—that is to say, to support any candidate who should offer to oppose the nominees of the two great families, the one who had the other for his opponent. For majesty of diction and loneliness and beauty of sentiment, we think they have seldom been surpassed.—Boston Statesman.

What added considerably to the troublesome nature of Mr. Danby's inquisition was the general cleanness, ability and information of the individual. He was not a man of classical education, and knew little of books; but with things he was especially conversant. Although very certain that Mr. Danby had been in business, nobody could guess what that business had been. None came amiss to him. He handled the rule and the yard, with equal dexterity; astonished the butcher by his insight into the mysteries of fattening and dressing; and the grocer by his familiarity with the sugar and coffee markets; disarranged the perplexities of the confused mass of figures in the parish books with the dexterity of a sworn accountant; and was so great upon points of law, so ready and accurate in quoting reports, cases and precedents, that he would certainly have passed for a retired attorney, but for the zeal and alertness with which, at his own expense, he was apt to rush into lawsuits.

With so remarkable a genius for tamul, it is not to be doubted that Mr. Danby, in spite of many excellent and sterling qualities, succeeded in drawing upon himself no small degree of odium. The whole corporation were officially his enemies; but his principal opponent, or rather the person whom he considered as his principal opponent, was Mr. Cardonnel, who was the rector of the parish, who, besides several disputes pending between them (one especially respecting the proper situation of the church organ, the placing of which harmonious instrument kept the whole town in discord for a twelve month) was married to the lady Elizabeth, a sister of the Earl of B., one of the parsons of the borough; and being, as well as his wife, a very popular and amiable character, was justly regarded by Mr. Danby as one of the chief obstacles to his projected reform.

With however, our reformer was, from the most patriotic motives, doing his best or his worst to dislike Mr. Cardonnel, events of a very different nature were gradually operating to bring them together. Mr. Danby's family consisted of a quiet, lady-like woman, with very ill health, who did little else than walk from her bed to her sofa, eat water gruel and drink soda-water, and of an only daughter who was in a word, the very apple of her father's eye. Rose Danby was indeed a daughter of whom any father might have been proud. Of middle height and exquisite symmetry, with a rich, dark glowing complexion, a profusion of glossy, curling, raven hair, large affectionate black eyes, and a countenance at once so sweet and so spirited, that her very expression was like that which a smile gives to other faces. Her temper and understanding were in exact keeping with such a countenance—playful, gentle, clever and kind; and her acquisitions of the very highest order. When her father entered on his new office, she had just completed her fifteenth year; and he unable longer to dispense with the pleasure of her society, took her from the excellent school near London, at which she had hitherto been placed and determined that her education should be finished at home.

It happened, however, that this little town contained one celebrated artist, a professor of dancing, who kept a weekly academy for young ladies, which was attended by half the families of gentility in the county. Mr. Le Grand (for the dancing master was called by that name) was delighted with Rose. He declared that she was his best pupil, his very best, the best that ever he had in his life. "Mais voyez, donc monsieur!" he said he one day to her father, who would have seemed to know the French for how long he had been in the country, dans ses entretiens! "Qu'elle est leste, et legere, et petrie de graces la petite!" And Mr. Danby comprehending only that the artist was praising his darling, swore that Monsieur was a good fellow, and returned the compliment, after the English fashion, by sending him a haunch of venison the next day.

But Mr. Le Grand was not the only admirer whom Rose met with at the dancing school. It chanced that Mr. Cardonnel also had an only daughter, a young person, about the same age, bringing up under the eye of her mother, and a constant attendant at the professor's academy. The two girls, nearly of a height, and both good dancers, were placed together as partners; and being almost equally possessing in person and manner, (for Mary Cardonnel was a sweet, delicate, fair creature, whose mild blue eyes seemed appealing to the kindness of every one they looked upon) took an immediate and lasting fancy to each other; shook hands at meeting, and returned the compliment, after the English fashion, by sending him a haunch of venison the next day.

After this, the young people became every day more intimate. Lady Elizabeth wrote on Mrs. Danby, and Mrs. Danby returned the call; but her sole health precluded visiting, and her husband who piqued himself on firmness and consistency, contrived, though with some violence to his natural kindness of temper, to evade the friendly advances and invitations of the sector.

The two girls, however, saw one another almost every day. It was a friendship like that of Rosalind and Celia, whom by the way they severally resembled in temper and character—Rose having much of the brilliant gaiety of the one, and Mary the softer and gentler charm of the other. They rode, walked and sung together; were never happy asunder; played the same music; read the same books; dressed alike, worked for each other and interchanged their little property of tin and darning needles, with a generosity that seemed only emulous when should give most.

At first Mr. Danby was a little jealous of Rose's partiality to the rector; but she was so fond of him, so attentive to his pleasures, that he could not find in his heart to check her, and when after a long and dangerous illness with which the always delicate Mary was affected, Mr. Cardonnel went to him and with tears streaming down his cheeks, told him he believed that under Providence he owed his daughter's life to Rose's unobtrusive care. The father's heart was fairly vanquished; he wrung the good rector's hand, and never grumbled at her long visits again. Lady Elizabeth, also, had her share in producing this change of feeling; by presenting him in return for innumerable baskets of peaches and melons and hot house grapes (in the culture of which he was curious), with a portrait of Rose, drawn by herself, a strong and beautiful likeness; a picture which he would not have exchanged for "The Transfiguration."

Perhaps too consistent as he thought himself, he was not without an unconscious respect for the birth and station which he affected to despise; and was at least as proud of the admiration which his daughter excited in those privileged circles, as of the sturdy independence which he exhibited by keeping aloof from them in his own person. Certain it is, that his spirit of reform insensibly relaxed particularly towards the rector; and that he not only ended the contested point of the organ but presented a splendid set of pulpit hangings to the church itself.

Time wore on; Rose had refused half the offers of gentility in the town and neighbourhood; her heart appeared to be invulnerable. Her less affluent and less powerful friends were generally under-wood (and as Rose, on hearing the report, did not contradict it the rumour passed for certainty) to be engaged to a nephew of her mother's, Sir William Frampton, a young gentleman of splendid fortune, who had lately passed much time at his place in the neighbourhood.

Time wore on; and Rose was now nineteen when an event occurred, which threatened a grievous interruption to her happiness. The Earl of B's member died; his nephew, Sir William Frampton, supported by his uncle's powerful interest, advanced himself for the borough; and an independent candidate started at the same time; and Mr. Danby found himself compelled by his vaunted consistency, to insist on his daughter's renouncing her visits to the rector, at least until after the termination of the election. Rose wept and pleaded, pleaded and wept in vain. Her father was obstinate; and she, after writing a most affectionate note to Mary Cardonnel, retired to her own room in very bad spirits, and perhaps, for the first time in her life, in very bad humor.

About half an hour afterwards, Sir William Frampton and Mr. Cardonnel called at the rector's.

"We are come Mr. Danby," said the rector, "to solicit your interest—"

"Nay, my good friend," returned the reformer—"you know that my interest is promised, and that I cannot with any consistency—"

"To solicit your interest with Rose," resumed his reverence.

"With Rose?" interrupted Mr. Danby.

"Ay—for the gift of her heart and hand,—that being I believe, the suffrage which my good nephew here is most anxious to secure," rejoined Mr. Cardonnel.

"With Rose?" again ejaculated Mr. Danby: "Why I thought that your daughter was engaged to Sir William Frampton?"

"Do you wish me to tell him that you will not marry him?"

"To this question Rose returned no answer; she only blushed the deeper, and looked down with a half smile.

"Take her then," resumed Mr. Danby: "I see the girl loves you. I can't vote for you, though, for I've promised, and you know my good Sir, that an honest man's word—"

"I don't want your vote, my dear Sir," interrupted Sir William Frampton; "I don't ask for your vote, although the loss of it may cost me my seat, and my uncle his borough. This is the election that I care about; the only election worth caring about—It is not my own sweet Rose—the election of which the object lasts for life, and the result is happiness. That's the election worth caring about—It is not, my own Rose!"

And Rose blushed an affirmative, and Mr. Danby shook his intended son-in-law's hand, until he almost wrung it off, repeating at every moment—"I can't vote for you, for a man must be consistent—but you're the girl I love you. I can't vote for you, though, for I've promised, and you know my good Sir, that an honest man's word—"

PROGNOSTICS OF THE WEATHER.—"Red clouds in the west, at sunset, especially when they have a tint of purple, portend fine weather. The reason of which is, that the air, when dry, refracts more red or heat making rays; and as dry air is not perfectly transparent, they are again reflected in the horizon. A copper or yellow sunset generally foretells rain; but as an indication of wet weather approaching, nothing is more certain than the halo around the moon, which is produced by the precipitated water; and the larger the circle the nearer the clouds, and consequently the more ready to fall. The old proverb is often correct:

A rainbow in the morning is the shepherd's warning;
A rainbow at night is the shepherd's delight.

A rainbow can only occur when the clouds, containing or depositing the rain, are opposite to the sun; and in the evening the rainbow is in the east, and in the morning in the west; and as our heavy rains in this climate are usually brought by the westerly wind, a rainbow in the west indicates that the bad weather is on the road, by the wind, to us; whereas the rainbow in the east, proves that the rain in these clouds is passing from us. When the swallows fly high, fine weather is to be expected or continued; but when they fly low and close to the ground, rain is almost surely approaching. This is explained as follows: Swallows pursue the flies and gnats, and flies and gnats usually delight in warm strata of air; and as warm air is lighter, and usually moister than cold air, when the warm strata of our air are high, there is less chance of moisture being thrown down from them by the mixture with cold air; but when warm and moist air is close to the surface, it is almost certain that, as the cold air flows down into it, a deposition of water will take place.—Mdm. New Phil. Jour.

ENRICHING PROPERTIES OF WATER.—Water, even in the purest state in which it can be found, is an enricher. Spring-water uniformly produces the earliest bite, and calcareous springs the best grass. Water in which flax has been steeped, and which the farmer is often puzzled to get rid of, without polluting the streams of his neighbourhood, forms a superior substance for irrigating; but, in short, the more abundant water is impregnated, either from running through a tract of rich soil, or from receiving the refuse of towns and manufactories, or even from being expected to mixture with putrid substances (and so becoming putrid itself), in ponds or reservoirs, so much the more are its effects beneficial; and it has been frequently remarked, that no watering is so enriching as that which is given in summer floods.—Trans. of the Highland Society.

SOURCE OF SALT IN SEA WATER.—It has been supposed by some naturalists, that the salt in the sea has been gradually augmented by saline particles brought into it by rivers, but this cause is totally inadequate to explain the immense quantity of salt existing in the whole mass of the ocean. If the average depth of the sea be ten miles, and it contains two and a half per cent. of salt, were the water entirely evaporated, the thickness of the saline residue would exceed 1000 feet.—Bakewell's Introduction to Geology.

PRODUCTION OF COTTON.—Cotton is furnished by the fibrous threads in which the seeds of the gossypium of the order of malvaceae, are enveloped. These threads, when examined by the microscope, will be seen to be finely toothed, which explains the cause of their adhering together with greater facility than those of bombax and several apocynaceae, which are destitute of teeth and which cannot be spun into thread without an admixture of cotton.—Magazine of Natural History.

VITAL PARTS OF A TREE.—The innermost layers of the bark and the outermost layers of the wood, are the most vital parts of the stem of a tree, and those on the healthy condition of which the health of the whole plant most immediately depends.—Hence many trees continue to exist for centuries when the central part is completely decayed, or even not present, so that the trunk is a hollow cylinder sometimes of most spacious dimensions.—Quar. Jour. of Agri.

WHITE HOOF IN HORSES.—Even in a wet soil and climate, white hoofs are more brittle and more liable to accident and lameness than black ones; and in the stony and more arid soils and climates, white hoofs do not stand nearly so well, and are much more liable to break and to contract than those of a dark colour; and, in point of fact, horses having white legs and feet, do not bring so much money as those of precisely the same description which have them not.—Quarterly Journal of Agriculture.

WEST INDIAN LADIES.—"When the young ladies in the West Indies fancy themselves too much tanned by the scorching rays of the sun, they gently scrape off the thin outside of the stone belonging to the cashew-tree, and then rub their faces all over with it. Their faces immediately swell and grow black; and the skin, being poisoned by the caustic oil of the nut, will, in the space of five or six days, come entirely off in large flakes, so that they cannot appear in public in less than a fortnight; by which time the new skin looks as fair as that of a new born child.

In Spanish S. America, the ladies sometimes ornament their heads with a bandeau of living fire, it being formed of the fire-fly, fastened on a black velvet band by the wings, an insect which emits a bright coruscation every time it breathes. What are diamonds compared to this? There are two species of the fire-fly, one of which emits its light, from the abdomen every time it inhales its breath, and the other, which is considerably larger, from a round prominence just behind the eye on each side of the head, like a pair of globe lamps. I have often read by the light afforded by two or three of them confined in a glass phial. The largest kinds are about two thirds of an inch in length, the other about a quarter of an inch."—Am. paper.

SECURITY OF FODDER.—Here I cannot omit mentioning a curious circumstance which I witnessed about six years ago, the consequence of the privation undergone by our unfortunate beast. Lolling one day in my tent, rambling on the hardships of a soldier's life, and on the shifts to which he is often reduced, my eyes and my thoughts were naturally attracted to my poor cattle, who stood picketed at a short distance, with nothing to chew but the end of a cud of disappointment, having waited since morning in expectation of the return of a foraging party. I observed one of these, whose well defined ribs bore testimony to the scantiness of his fare, gradually stretching out his head to a turban, belonging to one of my servants which happened to lie within the length of his tether. After giving it a turn or two with his nose, I suppose to ascertain the possibility of its being masticated he seized the loose end in his mouth, and actually began to swallow it. He swallowed, and swallowed, and as the voluminous folds of the turban unrolled so fast did they disappear down the throat of the bullock until of at least ten yards of stuff, there remained only a small bit protruding from his jaws. I was so amused with the whole process, that I could not find it in my heart to stop him; but lay on my couch, observing his operations for at least an hour. Another minute, as the turban, which had then nearly reached its latter end, would have been safely deposited in the stomach of the bullock, to be brought up for rumination at a favorable opportunity. Just at this critical moment the owner returned, when looking about for his turban, he beheld the end dangling from the mouth of the animal. With an oath he flew at the animal, and seized the only visible portion of his garment, pulled and pulled, hand over hand, and oath upon oath, while the tattered, but still connected cloth came forth, like measuring tape out of its case. The man's rage and gestures at the destruction of his turban, the beast's astonishment at the novel kind of exercise he was undergoing and the attitudes of both, formed a scene absolutely irresistible.—Military Adventures of an Officer in India.

MAN'S MISFORTUNES; OR A MODERN FINE LADY.
False rumps, false teeth, false hair, false faces;
Alas, poor man! how hard thy case is!
Instead of woman's—heavenly woman's charms—
To clasp cork—buckram—varnish—in thy arms!

The following, slightly altered from the original which was published many years ago, is not inapplicable to the fair patronizers of false curls, basks, and other artificial appendages to the modern-butt lady.—

A lady seamstress of our acquaintance says that she has taken the trouble to count the number of stitches required in making a common shirt, and found it to be 15,532.—Boston paper.

The following letter, written by the Emperor Napoleon to the Empress Josephine, within a few days after his first abdication, is extracted from the Memoires sur Josephine:
"Fontainebleau, 16th April, 1814.
"Dear Josephine,—I wrote to you on the 8th of this month (it was on a Friday); probably you did not receive my letter, as the fighting still continued, and it is possible that it was intercepted; now, however, as the communications are again established, I have taken my part, and I do not doubt but that it will reach you in safety. I shall not repeat what I then said to you; I then complained of my situation, but now I congratulate myself on it. My head and mind are stripped of an enormous weight. My fall is great, but at least it is said to be useful. In my retreat I am about to substitute the pen for the sword. The history of my reign will be curious. I have been viewed but in profile—I will now exhibit myself in full. What events have I not to publish to the world! How many men are there of whom erroneous opinions are entertained! I have heaped benefits on thousands of miserable wretches, but what have they lately done for me?
"They have all betrayed me—yes, all! I except from this number the good Eugene, so worthy both of yourself and me. May he be happy under a sovereign intent to appreciate the sentiments of nature and of honour!
"Farewell, my dear Josephine. Resigned, as I am, never lose the remembrance of him, who never has, and who never will forget you. Farewell, Josephine. NAPOLEON

A GRECIAN SURGEON.—This portentous personage now approached the dying seaman, felt his pulse, examined his tongue, and, tearing open his jacket, inspected the orifice of the wound. The ball had penetrated the right breast, below the clavicle, and was imbedded somewhere out of his reach. Melodious business, however, was less with the bullet than with the unseemly hole it had made; this he squeezed, and proceeded to business. He first poured a little brown tarry balsam into the wound, then closing the sides, he made all snug with some strips of adhesive plaster, leaving the ball as carefully secured within as if the patient's life depended on its sedulous retention in his bosom. The poor sailor was then carried, bullet and all, to his birth, from whence it is needless to say that he never returned.—Emerson's Letters.

NOVEL PUNISHMENT.—At Paris, in the year 1673, a murderer, whose crimes were marked by peculiar atrocity, was punished in a most peculiar manner. A gibbet was erected, under which a fire was lighted—the delinquent was then hung up in a large iron cage, in company with sixteen wild cats, which had been caught in the woods for the purpose. When the heat of the fire had become intolerable, the whole of the ferocious animals flew on the woman, as the cause of the agonizing pains they experienced. In about a quarter of an hour she presented a most shocking spectacle, but continued to live for 20 minutes longer, imploring, but in vain, some of the spectators to despatch her at once. Before she expired twelve of the cats had died, and the other four only lived about two minutes longer.—New-York Courier.

SCOLDING.—I never knew a scolding person that was able to govern a family. What makes people scold? Because they cannot govern themselves. How then can they govern others? Those who govern well are generally calm. They are prompt and resolute but steady and mild.

One hour of the free intercourse of a ship can do more towards softening the cold exterior in which the world encrusts the best of human feelings, than weeks of the unmeaning ceremonies of the land. He who has not felt this truth, would do well to distrust his own companionable qualities. It would seem that man, when he finds himself in the solitude of the ocean, feels the deepest how great is his dependency on others for happiness. Then it is that he yields to sentiments with which he trifled, in the wantonness of abundance, and is glad to seek relief in the sympathies of his kind. A community of hazard make a community of interest, whether person or property composes the stake. Perhaps a metaphysical and a too liberal reasoner might add, that as in such situations each one is conscious the condition and fortunes of his neighbour are the mere indexes of his own, they acquire value in his eyes from the affinity to himself. If this conclusion be true, Providence has happily so constituted the best of the species, that the sordid feeling is too latent to be discovered.—Red Rover.

INTEGRITY.—Integrity is a great and commendable virtue. A man of Integrity is a true man, a bold man, and a steady man; he is to be trusted and relied upon. No bribe can corrupt him, no fear daunt him; his word is slow in coming, but sure. He shines brightest in the fire, and his friend hears of him most, when he most needs him. His courage grows with danger, and conquers opposition by constancy. As he cannot be flattered or frightened into that he dislikes, so he hates flattery and temporising in others. He runs with truth, and not with the times—with right and not with might.—Penn's advice to his Children.

MANNERS.—"Never judge from manners," says Lord Byron, "for I once had my pocket picked by the civiliest gentleman I ever met with; and one of the mildest persons I ever saw was Ali Pacha."

The Observer.

SAINT JOHN: TUESDAY, APRIL 14, 1829.

Four o'clock.—Just as our paper was going to press, the barque Forth, 30 days from the Clyde, arrived off this Harbour; the letter bag has been brought to Town, but we have not been able to obtain any late papers.

In consequence of the Packet from England bringing the February Mail having had a tedious passage of 55 days, and a vessel from Bristol which came to this port yesterday after a passage of only 32 days having brought no papers, our latest European intelligence is by an arrival at Halifax from Aberdeen in 38 days, which has brought us London dates to the 21st February, 14 days later than our last week's advices. The tone of His Majesty's Speech which we had the pleasure of inserting in our last, naturally led us to expect a wonderful excitement on the subject of the CATHOLIC CLAIMS. We are, therefore, not surprised to find that it forms the all-engrossing topic in the latest English Journals, but we are almost inclined to infer that miracles have not ceased when we witness the side now taken by the Duke of WELLINGTON in the House of Lords, and Mr. Secretary PEEL in the Commons—a change so complete in the case of the latter, and so much at variance with the sentiments of the great body of his constituents that he has felt himself impelled by an imperious sense of duty to resign his seat in Parliament as Member for the University of Oxford. Whilst many will be disposed to charge both of these illustrious individuals with vacillation and timidity, we are inclined to think that they have been guided by principles of general expediency, and that they are honestly convinced that the much agitated question is now ripe for adjustment. For our own parts we have long been most sincerely desirous that like the Cora question it would either in one way or another be set at rest, and trouble us no more. From the effects in the former case, we may in some measure conceive the vast change which must pass over the whole aspect of a Sessions business, should this "never ending, still beginning" Catholic question be annihilated by some devious Bill: And as we anticipated many months ago we would hail in conscience and with an enthusiasm we want words to signify, the decided expression of the opinion of the Legislature respecting it. We have found it impossible to insert all the Speeches delivered on the subject, and have confined ourselves to those delivered in the House of Lords. It was not to be expected that there should be much novelty of argument or illustration. It is less for novelty of statement that men are now looking, than for the result of that sure though slow evolution of the public mind, which often moves on to unexpected changes without any very striking assignable cause and which must ultimately carry the decisions of Parliament along with it. It was by no new arguments that the repeal of the Corporation and Test Acts was brought about; and the repeal of the laws against the Catholics may be consummated by means equally energetic and unostentatious. —The spirit of the Legislature we are happy to observe, has been met by the Catholics in a proper temper. Mr. O'CONNELL has not pressed his individual claims upon the House, and as an act of prudence the Catholic Association has been formally dissolved.

PORTUGAL.—Don Miguel is not only dead as reported, but has completely recovered the use of his fractured limb which retains not even the smallest deformity. The Constitutional party have not concerted nor matured anything which may entitle them to the name of patriots, and from all that we have yet seen or heard of them they do not promise to succeed in ameliorating the condition of their unhappy country. The state of affairs in Portugal has all along been contemplated by Britain exactly as a real lover of his country could wish, with indignation, and at the same time caution, with a firm resolve to leave the wretched Portuguese to fight out their own battles in behalf of their own loved abatement.

PROVINCIAL.—We are gratified to learn that an official communication of a most satisfactory nature, has lately been received at Head-Quarters, from Mr. VAUGHAN, by order of the President of the United States, in which the sentiments expressed in his Inaugural Address, respecting the relations between Great-Britain and America, are fully borne out. The General is pleased to characterise in high terms of commendation, the conduct of Sir HOWARD DOUGLAS, and the whole proceedings of our Provincial Government, in the case of the Disputed Territory, to express his cordial wish to facilitate the adjustment of all matters in dispute between Great-Britain and America, and to cultivate the most friendly habits between the two countries, as conducive to the best interests of both.

His Excellency Sir HOWARD DOUGLAS reached Halifax on the Saturday after he left us. It will be seen, by a subsequent notice, that the Packet Myrtle, in which he was to sail for England, has been wrecked coming from Bermuda. We understand that in consequence he has taken passage in the Government vessel Tyne, Capt. GRANT, which is about to sail for England.

His Honor the President arrived in Town on Friday last from Fredericton, by the Nerepis road, and a salute was fired from the North Market Wharf, where a Flag, on which was painted the City Arms, was displayed.

His Majesty's Attorney-General came to Town same day.

This day, LAUCHLIN DONALDSON, Esq. was sworn in, by His Honor the President, in the presence of three Aldermen, Mayor of this City and Chief Magistrate for the City and County. Mr. D. has resided about twenty-five years in this Town, nearly half of which time he has acted as a Justice of the Peace; and his known activity and business habits, afford surerties that the duties of the highly responsible situation to which he is now appointed, will be faithfully attended to.

We understand that ROBERT PARKER, Esq. Recorder of this City, this day sent in his resignation of the Recordship.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—On Thursday last, Lieut. SPEARMAN of the 81st Regiment, accompanied by two men, went down the Bay in his pleasure boat, and when in Musquash Harbour a sudden squall came from the land, in consequence of which the boat was upset and suddenly went down, when one of the men, named DENNIS PHILAN, lately married, sunk to rise no more. GEORGE IRVING, who lives in a log house close to the water, went out in his boat and was the means of rescuing the survivors from a watery grave, and did all in his power to make them comfortable. They clung to the masts till taken off. The water was 20 feet deep, and Mr. S. was up to the chin. He has not yet returned to town. The boat was raised on Saturday.

WEATHER.—It appears that the weather in the latter part of January was uncommonly severe in Great-Britain, as it was on this side of the Atlantic. Immense masses of ice were floating in the Thames, Clyde, &c. and what is a very rare occurrence in Scotland, the Thermometer was one day as low as 15 below the freezing point. But, after all, what was that compared to our 29 below Zero?

Yesterday, the body of JAMES TIERNY, a carpenter, who was drowned in our harbour some months ago, was found by his own son, a little boy, who immediately ran for his mother, who was soon the witness of the melancholy spectacle, and fainted at the sight, and was taken home almost senseless. The body was in a most shocking condition. In his pocket were his compasses, rule, &c. An Inquest was held on view of the body.—Verdict, Found drowned.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL.—Pursuant to adjournment, the Directors met, yesterday, at the Public Grammar School, and awarded Prizes to the following Scholars, who had particularly distinguished themselves at the examination on the previous Monday—viz. Masters Charles Gallagher, John Marsh, Robert Duvernet, James Gallagher, George Lee, William Sands. Prizes were also given by Mr. Patterson, to Robert Duvernet, for his Mathematical attainments, and William Haythue, for general good behaviour and attention to studies. Tokens of approbation were likewise conferred upon Alexander Robertson and Robert Parker.

The following Charter Officers, elected on Tuesday last, for the Western side of the harbour, were omitted in our last number: Brooks' Ward. George Bond, Esq. Alderman. John Ring, Assistant. Coy's Ward. William Olive, Esq. Alderman. Joseph Ketchum, Assistant.

We understand that Mr. Vaughan has demanded a scrutiny for the office of Assistant Alderman for Duke's Ward, and that the same is appointed for to-morrow.

Abstract of the Coroner's Report.—Between the March Sessions 1828, and the March Sessions 1829, say one year, in the City and County of St. John, were held thirty inquests: viz. within the limits of the City 17, at Campbell's point 2, Portland over the bridge 4, Indian Town 1, Red Head 2, Musquash 1, Bridge Settlement at Loch Leonard 2, Sand Cove 1. Of these there were white men 15, white women 4, boys 4, girls 2, new born infants 1, coloured men 1, coloured women 3.

The manner of their deaths were, drowned 15, visitation of God 6, freezing 2, burned 2, jammed by a stick of timber 1, dislocation of the neck 1, run over by a sled 1, excessive drinking 1, manner of death unknown 1. The occupations of the men were, Merchant 1, Carpenter 2, Mariners 5, Cartman 1, Labourers 6, Unknown 1.

Number of Coroner's Inquests held in the City and County of St. John for six years. In the Year ending at the March Sessions.

The Miranichi Mercury says:—"By accounts taken at two separate camps in the South West, we have been informed the average depth of snow which has fallen this winter, has been thirteen feet."

PROVINCIAL APPOINTMENTS. John Black, Esq. to be Private Secretary to His Honor the President. Lauchlin Donaldson, Esq. an additional Commissioner for Partridge Island Light House.

COLONIAL. We are concerned to state, that His Majesty's Packet Myrtle, commanded by Lieut. Sison, on her passage from Bermuda to this Port, unfortunately struck upon the Western end of the Rugged Island Rocks, near Sable Point, on the night of Friday last, and, in a very short time, was completely wrecked.

At noon, on that day, an Observation was taken, and a course shaped for Sambre Island Light House, but, owing to an unusually strong N. W. Current, the Ship was carried in shore, and at midnight the distressing occurrence took place. The Officers and Crew were happily saved, as also the Mail, but the Cabin Furniture, Stores, and most of the Clothing of the Officers, and Men, were lost.

Mr. Hamilton, late Surgeon of the Myrtle, arrived here yesterday afternoon, in a small Skullop, from the wreck, with the Mail, and sailed again this morning in the Lady Ogle, (kindly offered for the purpose by Messrs. Cunard) with provisions, for the subsistence of Lieut. Sison and his Crew, who are employed in saving what materials they can from the wreck.

In consequence of this untoward event, the Mutine Packet, will return immediately to Falmouth—and the Mail and Despatches received by her from England for Bermuda, will be forwarded by the Government brig Chebucto, which vessel will sail in a few days.—Royal Gazette.

From the Nova-Scotian of April 8. THE ASSEMBLY.—On Saturday last, a novel scene occurred within the House. Mr. BARRY, with the particulars of whose suspension, the public are already informed, having expressed his determination to take his seat, the gallery was filled soon after the doors were opened—and in a few moments Mr. B. entered and took his seat. He rose to address the Speaker, who immediately called him to order; and repeated injunctions of silence, from the chair, he said, "Mr. Speaker, I have exerted myself in every possible way, in order that the interests of my Constituents might be represented and considered in this House, but without avail; and therefore appear here with the determination of taking my seat and retaining it while it is in my power so to do." Mr. B. having resumed his seat, the Speaker said, that seeing the Hon. Gentleman enter, he was about to ask him if he had come to comply with the Order of the House. He having already answered that question in the negative, it now became his duty to direct him to withdraw. To which Mr. Barry replied in an audible voice, "I will not Sir." The proper officer was then directed to have the Gallery cleared, on which an indecent and injudicious expression of opinion arose from a part of the audience, which has induced the House to exclude the public from the Gallery during the remainder of the Session. Whatever men's opinions are, or however warmly their feelings may be excited, the Representatives of the people, though they may be censured, should never be insulted by the people. The audience having withdrawn, a motion was made that Mr. B. should be committed to the custody of the Sergeant at Arms. Mr. Hartshorn moved, as an amendment, that he should be removed at the Bar; some discussion arose on this question, which was finally negatived, and Mr. Barry was escorted across the street to his dwelling, in custody of the Officer, and saluted by the cheers of those, who, after their exclusion from the lobby, awaited the close of the scene in the Hall of the Building.—The House will probably rise on Tuesday. The Pictou Academy bill has been sent down disagreed to by the Council.

Since the above was written, five Petitions have been presented to the House from the County of Shelburne, approving the conduct of Mr. B. and calling on the House to vacate his seat.

Neilson's Quebec Gazette of 19th ult. says:—"The season continues remarkably chill. Last year the navigation was open on the 6th April. The snow on the ground at this season the same year, was not above four feet. This year the snow is fully five feet and a half in the vicinity of the town, and a few feet back of the mountains it is seven feet, an average depth almost without precedent."

UPPER-CANADA. PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENTS.—The session was prorogued by the Lieutenant-Governor on the 20th ult, on which occasion His Excellency delivered the following SPEECH. Hon. Gentlemen of the Legislative Council, and Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

I cannot close this Session without expressing my regret, that the people will derive no immediate advantage from your deliberations on two subjects of primary importance—improvement of Public Schools, and measures that should be adopted to ensure good Roads and safe bridges throughout the Province. In allowing your Roads to remain in their present state, the greatest stimulus to Agricultural Industry is lost. Gentlemen of the House of Assembly.

I thank you for your offer of making a provision for the support of the civil government, which I should gladly have accepted in His Majesty's name, had not the revenue arising from the statute of the 14 Geo. 3 Chap. 88, the appropriation of which for the public service is under the control of the crown, appear quite sufficient to defray the expenses of the current year. An intimation to this effect was conveyed to you in my reply to one of your addresses early in the present month.

In legislating for the general and local interests of the Province, due time should be afforded to each branch of the legislature for the consideration of Bills that may be for assent. In consequence of the number of Bills, Addresses, and Resolutions that have been transmitted to me a few hours since, it becomes necessary to remind you, that serious embarrassment may be experienced from the delay of the Province, which has occurred to accumulate towards the conclusion of the Session; and I am persuaded that you will coincide with me in thinking that this inconvenience should in future be remedied.

DIED. On Monday evening, WILLIAM PITT, son of Mr. W. P. Scott, aged 4 years and 6 months. On Tuesday last, after a short illness, Mr. JOHN FAWCETT PAYNE, aged 27 years. His remains were interred on Thursday last, honorably and respectfully attended. On Thursday morning last, after a short illness, Mr. GEORGE HAZEN, fifth son of the late William Hazen Esquire, in the 23rd year of his age. On Friday morning, Mrs. ELIZABETH ANN, wife of Mr. Joel Prince, of the Parish of Hampton, aged 85 years. Her loss will be severely regretted by a numerous circle of relatives and friends. On Saturday morning, at Golden Grove, in the Parish of Portland, after a short illness, Mrs. HANNAH, wife of Mr. John Stackhouse, aged 29 years—leaving a husband and seven small children to lament their irreparable loss.
