Laws Protecting Sheep Raisers.

There should be some way in which those who have had sheep killed by dogs could, in a measure at least, be reimbursed for the losses sustained. In some parts of the world, not far distant, dog taxes are imposed and the town or the county, made richer by the tax collected, pays for the sheep killed.

There should be a dog tax in Carleton county and each year the money collected should be paid to those who have lost sheep, up to the fair value of the loss sustained. Recent serious losses in Wakefield and Wilnot parishes should urge the Councillors representing them to bring forth a bye-law embodying the measure.

There is a provincial law touching the matter but it is small comfort to know that the Hazen government has legislated in favor of the dog rather than the sheep.

Under the former government
the law permitted the shooting of any dog found wandering on any farm whereon sheep are kept, except dogs owned on premises immediately adjoining such farm, etc. The present government has changed the law in such way that only stray dogs may be killed when wandering on the premises of the person who desires to kill it.

In either case no dog may be killed when accompanied by any person owning or having charge or care of it, unless there is reasonable apprehension that the dog, if not killed, is likely to harm sheep.

Either law gives farmers little protection, but under the present law a farmer is liable to prosecution who shoots a dog that he knows is a sheep-killer unless it be on his own farm.

A Neat Piece of Work.

There has been on exhibition at H. Nixon's store a beautifully engrossed scroll, the work of Clarence Steeves, son of Rev. E.
L. Steeves, bearing the names of Mr. Nixon's Sunday School class who were the donors of the beautiful art window in the annex of the United Baptist church.

The names are: Mesdames F.
A. Aiton, Allen Ward, W. E.
Thornton, Scott Sippell, Herbert
Pierce, Ethel Webster, Cary
Dickinson, Ella McAdam, George
Nicholson, B. Seeley, H. Y. Tommy, George Wilkinson; Misses

The scroll is nicely framed and will hang in the church.

Big Drive to Come Yet.

The only thing which will make a fall drive possible on the St. John river is heavy rain which will continue for some time.
There is little hope for that now but contractor John S. Scott who was in charge of the corporation drive this year is ready to make the attempt to bring more logs out if there is the least chance.

As present 15,000,000 feet of of lumber is hung up on the upper river. Part of this is in the neighborhood of Edmundston and part is at Grand Isle. At present the intention is to put on large crews of men and bring the logs out to the St. John Lumber

Company's booms and sort them there. The logs of that company will be retained and the others driven to Van Buren with the intention to hang them up for the winter.

The mills in and about St. John are expected to stop sawing shortly, the scarcity of logs being the cause. It is thought that the logs now hung up will come out safely next spring.—

Double Wedding.

The home of Mr. and Mrs.
Marshall Donnelly was the scene of a very brilliant double wedding on October the 5th, at 11 a. m., when their daughter Lena A.
became the wife of George Fisher of Lynn, Mass. and another daughter, Velma E., was united in holy wedlock to Ira E.
Shaw of Lowell, Mass.

The ceremony was read by Rev. J. M. Mallory in the presence of nearly a hundred guests.

The many beautiful presents arrayed were evidence of the high esteem in which the young people were held by their many friends.

There were also several substantial checks.

The happy couples took the evening train for their future homes, Mr. and Mrs. Fisher for Lynn, and Mr. and Mrs. Shaw for Lowell, followed by the best wishes of their many friends.

YOUNG FOLKS

PRECIOUS STONES.

"At length the little princess wandered into a beautiful garden. Fountains, showers of pearls and sapphires into basins of the purest silver, and golden birds, flitting among the trees, brought huge diamonds, rubies and amethysts for her to play with."

Marion frowned and closed the fairy-tale book with a snap.

"O dear," she sighed, "I wish I could be a princess in a fairy tale for once, and have rubies and diamonds to play with, and gather gold by the pailful as the Princess Irene did—and sitting up on the sofa, she gazed disconsolately into the fireplace."

Aunt Grace stopped sewing and looked at her little niece, then smiling, she turned and looked out through the window. The lawn was velvet in the warm sunshine and ablaze with flowers. Out beyond, the yellow cornfields rippled in the wind, and through the violet marsh-lands the river curved and glittered.

"You can gather jewels far greater and more wonderful than those the little princess played with," said Aunt Grace, pushing the window up, "and you can walk on gold if you wish to, Marion."

Marion inhaled and sat up, her dark eyes wide with astonishment. "Then I must find them by brown ing into a sooty fireplace," said Aunt Grace. "We must hunt for them; we may find the princess, too—who knows!" And laughing gaily, she began to fold her sewing.

The frown disappeared from Marion's face, and jumping up, she followed her aunt across the piazza and out on the green lawn.

"What jewel shall we look for first, and what color is it, Marion?"

"Rubies," said Marion, growing interested, "and they are red, a deep, beautiful red, and pearls are—"

"Hold on," said Aunt Grace. "One at a time, please. See! I have found rubies, gorgeous ones." And she stooped with her eyes shaded, looking toward the south end of the garden.

"Where! I don't see any," said Marion, in a doubting tone.

"Look hard and you'll see them glowing and nodding in the sun."

"Oh, the roses!" cried Marion. "You mean flowers, don't you, aunt?"

"Yes, dear, I think the beautiful, fragrant, living flowers are the rarest gems of all. We will call them God's jewels. Just see how He has studded our garden with them!"

They had reached the roses by this time, and Marion, with eyes glowing, stooped and broke one off, smoothing its satiny petals with the tips of her fingers. She loved beautiful things, and this thought, that the flowers were God's jewels, was new and wonderful.

"See the blue forget-me-nots, Aunt Grace; they are turquoise; and the white pansies are pearls, and the purple are big amethysts. The astors must be topazes." "Oh, how rich we are! Much richer than the Princess Irene, for our jewels are fragrant and growing, and in each jewel are the seeds of a hundred more jewels. Uncle Ed cut one open once, and showed them to me."

Suddenly, she remembered the gold.

"But, Aunt Grace, where is the gold?" she asked.

Slipping her arms round the little girl, Aunt Grace turned her round until she faced the corn-fields.

"Look, dear, and you'll see it rippling and shifting through every where."

"Oh, I see it! I see it, aunt!" cried Marion, jumping up and down. "It's the sunshine! God's gold, and it glids everything—the fields, trees, and even the rocks! See! The dandelions on the lawn are junks of gold!"

Aunt Grace was brushing her hair back from her face, and the diamond upon her finger glittered in the sun.

"Aunt," said Marion, soberly, "we can't find any diamonds, and they are prettiest of all."

Aunt Grace turned and pointed down to the river, shimmering and flashing in the sunlight.

"See them, Marion!" she cried. "See them sparkle! Thousands upon thousands, each one set in silver and it looks as though we were going down to them," she added, as Uncle Ed came up from the barn with two long, slim oars on his shoulder.

Marion gazed at the river with a new wonder in her heart.

"I never noticed it was so beautiful before," she murmured. "There's something beautiful everywhere!"

"The fairy-tale has all come true; Aunt Grace!" she cried, throwing her arms round her aunt.

"And you may be the princess," exclaimed Uncle Ed, coming up in time to hear the last remark, "and I will row the princess up to the Eagle's Nest in time to watch the TRUST.

Isaiah 12: 2.

In Thy name, O Lord, most holy I will trust.

In Thy kind protection solely I will trust.

With my heart and spirit wholly I will trust.

When the skies are dark above me I will trust.

When the world has ceased to love me I will trust.

When Thy faithful words reprove me I will trust.

For the help my soul is needing I will trust.

For all grace from Thee proceeding I will trust.

For Thy all-sufficient leading I will trust.

Lest my heart fresh care should borrow I will trust.

When I tread the vale of sorrow I will trust.

For success in my endeavor I will trust.

Lest most sacred ties should sever I will trust.

LITERAL.

"What is your last name, my boy?" asked the teacher of the new pupil, a frightened-looking young star of some half-dozen years.

"Tommy."

"Tommy what?"

"Tommy Tompkins."

"Then Tompkins is your name," turning to his record-book.

"No, sir," came the reply, with the air of one accustomed to render literalness to inquiring elders, "I don't think so, sir. Tompkins was my name already when I was born, and aunt says they didn't give me the other for a whole month afterwards."

The "Sting" of Death.

The sting of death physically is nothing; a man who has lost consciousness in the water, a man who has been under an anæsthetic, a man stunned in an accident—these have been in effect dead, and yet they know nothing of death. In speaking of it the most glaring contradictions pass quite naturally for axioms. It is the "gentle hand," but it is also the "grizzly terror." It is "beautiful" and "wonderful," but it is also "terrible."—London Spectator.

A Cargo Hard to Handle.

Asphalt is said to be the most difficult cargo for a vessel to unload. The asphalt is taken out of the asphalt lakes in Trinidad in a semifluid state and by the time the vessel reaches a northern port has hardened, so that to unload it is necessary for the men to go into the hold and dig it out with pick and shovel. This takes time, and a vessel carrying such cargo always has to arrange for a considerable stay in port.

Hippocratic Face.

The hippocratic face is a condition of the human face produced by death, long illness, excessive hunger and the like. The nose is pinched, the temples hollow, the eyes sunken, the ears cold and retracted, the skin of the forehead dry, the complexion livid and the lips relaxed with cold. This appearance is so named from having been accurately described by Hippocrates, the father of medicine.—New York American.

CLICK OF THE KEY

The Reading of Telegraph Messages by Sound.

STORY OF THE FIRST TRIAL.

A Lack of Tape Caused Alonzo B. Cornell to Attempt Interpreting the Morse Code by Ear—The Discovery That Abolished the Use of the Tape.

Ezra Cornell is known in history as the father of Cornell university, as one of the men who helped to build the first telegraph line and as an ardent organizer of telegraph systems in the early days, being instrumental in the formation of the now famous Western Union Telegraph company. His son, Alonzo B. Cornell, became ultimately vice president of the Western Union and governor of New York state—high commercial and political honors.

Yet he once confessed to me that he felt he should be credited with the additional honor of having made the discovery that telegraph messages could be read by ear, and he seemed to take much pride in his part in bringing this about than he did in any of his other achievements.

"I was trained as a telegraph operator," said Mr. Cornell in telling me the story. "I suppose I took to telegraphy naturally because of my father's deep and large interests in the then new mode of communication. Anyway, I learned the Morse key in my early days, in fact, very fond of telegraphing from both the practical and the scientific standpoint."

"One afternoon, sometime in the early fifties, when I was stationed at Albany, N. Y., there was an unusual rush of newspaper dispatches—I was in charge of the press key—and in the midst of the task of receiving them I found to my consternation that I was out of tape. Before taking my seat before the key I had neglected to replenish the tape reel."

"There was a bountiful supply of tape in the cellar of the building, but it was a long trip there—there were no elevators in those days—and I knew that to go there I would waste precious time. And there were those anxious newspaper men hanging over my shoulder."

"Suddenly, as I fished about mentally for the quickest way out of my dilemma, this thought popped into my head: 'You don't need any tape. Half the time you don't look at it when the dispatches are coming in before you write them out. You trust to your ears to tell what the instrument says. Why not do so now?' Instantly I determined to see whether or not I could take the dispatches by sound alone."

"I put my fingers on the key and broke in on New York, whence the dispatches were coming. 'Send rather slowly and very distinctly,' I asked the man at the other end of the wire. He at once began to do so—without my hired help. There are many orchards doing much better than this, and solely because they get better care; but this moderate result shows most clearly the possibilities of scientific orchard culture in the Annapolis Valley."

"Thus I continued taking the dispatches to the very end. The New York operator called me. 'What are you doing up there?' he asked. 'Why do you want me to send slowly and distinctly?'"

"I answered that I had said goodbye to the telegraph tape forever and told him of the discovery I had made. He was immediately interested. 'Send me slowly and very distinctly fifteen or twenty words, and I'll see whether or not I can do the same thing,' he requested."

"I did so, full of confidence, and a little later there came to me this message: 'I've done it too. Some of the other boys say they can. I predict that within a month there won't be an inch of tape used in the New York office.'"

"Years later," added Mr. Cornell, "I was told that about the time that I discovered for myself a new and revolutionary method of receiving telegraph messages the same method was also discovered by an operator in the main office in Pittsburg. I have no doubt that this is true. Sooner or later the discovery was bound to be made not only in one, but several offices. But I have always felt that I was the first to make the discovery and should be credited with it in telegraphic history."—Boston Globe.

Watering the Horse.

It is allowable when a horse is hot to let him have three or four swallows of cool water, but no more. The few swallows will help cool him, and another limited drink may be given every few minutes for four or five times, after which he may drink his fill without danger. In careless or inexperienced hands, however, the only safe way is to let the horse stand for half an hour or more with no water until he is fairly cooled off.—Country Life in America.

Descriptive.

"The eye of a little miss was attracted by the sparkle of dew at early morning. 'Mamma,' she exclaimed, 'it's better'n I thought it was.'"

"What do you mean?"

"Look here, the grass is all covered with perspiration."—St. Louis Star.

Failures are with heroic minds the stepping stones to success.—Halliburton.

On the Farm

THE USE OF FERTILIZERS.

That reliable fertilizers will not exhaust, but on the contrary will build up the poorest land into highest productivity, has now been proven beyond cavil or doubt, writes G. C. Miller, Middleton, N. S. The writer has used only chemical fertilizers for over thirty years, and those who adopted his system of fertilization 20 years ago are now corroborating his experience. In apples, the crops have been most satisfactory. There have been no off years, and the fruit has always been of first quality. While the crops have not been surprisingly large, they have been good compared with the quantity of the fertilizer used. A larger quantity would probably have insured heavier crops. This is now being tested. The quantity used has never exceeded $3.00 or $3.00 worth per acre, or less than 8 cents for each barrel of apples packed. During the past ten years there have been an average yield of 110 bbls. of packed fruit per acre, which means 1,100 bbls. from every acre under cultivation during that period. On a valuation of $1,000 per acre the fruit has paid all the expenses incident to its production, and left for the owner a surplus of from 14 to 17 1/2 per cent. Others report heavier crops than any I have grown, but large crops are of little value unless they are of comparative barrenness, it is the long steady pull that counts.

Below is a brief report of the only 4 acres in full bearing in 1908. The balance of 30 acres is still in various stages below full production. The crop of 1909 is equally good, but at this writing has not all been realized on.

Pruning $ 10 00
Fertilizers for 4 acres at $9 36 00
Hauling and sowing fertilizers 2 00
Dicing 4 times at $2 8 00
Yield 2 bushels at $2.10 4 20
Buckwheat 2 bus. at 75c 1 50
Sowing cover crop 1 50
Spraying 3 times 22 40
Bbls., 451 at 25c 113 00
Picking, packing and trucking at 25c 113 00
Sundries 4 80

Total expenses $316 40

451 bbls. apples, net proceeds $701 34

Balance $384 94

This is about 17 1/2 per cent. for the owner on a valuation of $1,000.00 per acre, and reckoned as though all the work had been done by hired help. There are many orchards doing much better than this, and solely because they get better care; but this moderate result shows most clearly the possibilities of scientific orchard culture in the Annapolis Valley."

A Weighty Family.

William Snell, of Nar-Nar Goon, Victoria, sends to us some particulars of his own family which he thinks will be of interest as showing that Victoria holds the world's record for family giants. Mr. Snell's family consists of two girls and a boy, and the total weight of the three is over half a ton. Clara, the eldest of the trio, is 23 years of age, and weighs 514, being the heaviest female known of in the world. Tom, her brother, is 19 years old, and weighs 266; and Anna, the youngest of this remarkable family, is only 16, and already weighs 355. For these particulars, readers can see that Mr. Snell's talk of being able to challenge the world is no idle boast.—World's News.

An Equine Epicure.

A Sydney delivery-van owner has a unique horse, which displays a decidedly carnivorous appetite. The animal is frequently given pieces of cold cooked beefsteak, mutton-chops, stale savoyels, meat-pies, and sausages, together with stale bread and buns—a menu which he digests with marked and manifest gusto. When the above-named flesh food, which comes from a ham-and-beef shop, at the rear of which his stable is situated, is placed before this horse, possessing such an extraordinary equine taste, he immediately turns away from chaff and maize he may be eating at the time to partake of it.—World's News.

One Thing Unbroken.

Standing over the shattered remains of their last Dresden china statuette, the exasperated mistress said to the awkward servant:

"Is there anything you haven't broken since you have been with me?"

"Yes, m'm," replied the servant. "I have yet to break me record for destructiveness."—Baltimore American.

Canadian Appreciation

Langham Hotel, London.

Gentlemen,—I wish to express my appreciation of the 33 h.p. Daimler which you have delivered to me. Before shipping the car to Canada I made a three weeks' trial of it, covering some 1,200 miles. The car ran perfectly, and I never had the slightest trouble of any kind, and I think it quite lives up to the many claims you make for it. The silence, smoothness of running, and power of acceleration on hills is really remarkable.

My petrol consumption was 16 miles to the gallon, including a great deal of driving in traffic. The tyres show no appreciable signs of wear, and I think it will prove light on tyres. I am really delighted with the car.—Yours sincerely, Goods Returned.

Last week before Police Magistrate Dibbles a Scott Act conviction was secured in a case in which a man named White, a barber at Bath was the accused. Later a warrant of distress was issued and Detective Green went to make the seizure. So eager was he to do this that he took the barbers chair in which a prominent business man was seated, half shaved. This man was in a sorry plight and there has been a good laugh at his expense. Detective Green was among those who laughed but on Monday the laugh was turned as the goods he had seized were taken back to Bath, the first claim on them being held by another man.

Centreville

Dr. Green arrived home on Friday from the Miramichi woods. The doctor was acting as guide for two hunters from Porto Rico. The party was successful, each man getting a moose.

The agricultural fair was held Oct. 5-6 under adverse weather conditions. The attendance was small first day as it was raining slightly all day. The second afternoon the attendance was about 2,000. The show was good, especially horses, sheep and swine. There were pure bred Percheron mares, colts and stallions and Clyde mares and colts. One Percheron colt five months old was sold at reported price of $250 on the grounds. Some excellent general purpose teams were shown and splendid driving horses, also standard bred stallions, mares and colts.

A pulling match was won by S. W. Burt's team was an excellent exhibition. Cattle were not up to the average. The farmers are neglecting cattle for potatoes. There was a good display of sheep and swine. One large fat pig died on the grounds from heat.

Roots, grains and fruit were shown in large variety as well as butter and all kinds of home produced goods.

Vernon Gilland, who left here this spring, is ill with typhoid fever in Ashatoun.

While C. M. Sherwood and crew were quarrying rocks near his mill Monday afternoon seven sticks of dynamite exploded with a deafening report which jarred the whole village and rattled the windows. Mr. Sherwood had built a fire to heat the dynamite which he had placed on an old scrapper over the fire. It apparently got too hot and exploded. No one was hurt but a pair of horses standing a short distance away were deafened and cannot yet hear.

New Brunswick S. S. Convention

At Wednesday afternoon's session of the New Brunswick Sunday School Association the reports from the different departments were given. The home department, the temperance and the Bible reading, all reported through their different superintendents. All reports were of a very encouraging nature and were received with much applause by the convention. The reports from the different countries were completed. These were of a very gratifying nature.

The reports of Charlotte and Carleton counties were worthy of special note. The first named claimed to be a banner county, but Carleton surpassed it only in the amount collected for the advancement of the work. In the number of schools reporting, the number contributing, both counties were about equal. The spirit of friendly rivalry which exists between these two countries has been productive of much good. Both the secretaries, C. W. Farham and Miss A. S. Calder, received hearty applause upon giving their reports.

A strong spirit of enthusiasm is upon the convention and it promises to be very successful. The organization of one adult class was demonstrated at the evening session.

Rev. Mr. Ganong acted as president, and with the assistance of Rev. W. C. Ross and Robert Reid, showed the plan for information and the carrying on of this important branch of Sunday school work.

Grand Falls Horse Thief

Tuesday night a valuable horse and carriage was stolen from Guy Balloch, C. E. of the G. T. P. at Grand Falls. Suspicion rested on William Irving and Officers Foster and Herbert, of the G. T. P., were put on his track. Pursuing in an auto, they traced the man to Washburn, thence to Fort Fairfield, where they overhauled the fugitive, who waived extradition and he is now in jail at Grand Falls. He had traded the rig for another and $60.

Mrs. W. H. Sharp.

The death occurred on Tuesday of Mrs. W. H. Sharp, of Hartland, after a long illness. Her maiden name was Lavinia Morgan and she was a brother of D. E. Morgan. The funeral was held yesterday at the house, Rev. J. D. Wetmore officiating

The Markets.

There has been little movement in the potato business this week as the prospect is for advance in the prices and farmers are therefore holding them. The price paid this week is $1.

Crushed Coffee— what it is

By a process of crushing between steel rollers, instead of grinding, the skin, which remains in the eye of the bean after roasting, is separated from the kernel and removed by air suction, while the kernel is broken into small even grains. These grains when steeped, being free of the skin or chaff, settle quickly, leaving the liquid clear and bright, and give the true coffee flavor.

Estabrook's Red Rose crushed Coffee is as easy to make as Red Rose Tea. Directions are in each tin.

BREADS.

Kneadless Bread.—Break two cakes of compressed yeast in a cupful of blood warm water, with two teaspoonfuls of granulated sugar. Let it start about fifteen minutes. Now stir a bowl full of flour, about two quarts, make hollow in center, into which place one tablespoonful of salt, one-quarter cupful of sugar, and a tablespoonful of lard. Melt the lard if you like. Now two cupfuls of milk and one of water, heat milk in water until blood warm, and if you use less milk just add more warm water; place this in the bowl with the yeast added and mix gradually with the flour (I use a wood paddle for this). A paint paddle which comes with a fresh can of paint with holes in it is excellent for this and costs nothing, as you can get one for the asking at any department store; until it can be handled. Place back in the bowl, cover with the bread board, and let it stand fifteen minutes. This is necessary, as this does the work of kneading. Now butter raising bowl, place dough in and turn over to butter top; let raise until doubled, for forty minutes. Make into loaves; let raise again, and bake. This recipe makes four medium sized loaves.

Nut Bread.—Four cupfuls pastry flour, one-fourth cupful sugar, one teaspoonful salt, six level teaspoonfuls baking powder, one cupful nut meats (chopped), one and one-half cup milk; stir to smooth dough, turn into prepared pan and let stand thirty minutes and bake forty minutes.

Butter Thins.—Fine and keep well. Three cups of flour, one cup butter, one-half teaspoon soda, all rubbed together. In another dish have three eggs, two cups of granulated sugar, one teaspoon vanilla, for any flavor desired. Mix with flour sufficient to roll. Roll thin and bake in quick oven, using care not to burn on bottom. Cut in any desired shape.

White Bread.—Almost every one who uses dry yeast stiffens the sponge the evening before. Here is an excellent recipe for summer. Have the water from boiled potatoes at noon, mixing in about one cup of mashed potatoes and one-half cup of sugar and one yeast cake. Cover and set away until next morning. Then add lukewarm water until you have one quart of liquid and stiffen with flour until it will drop from spoon. Let stand until it doubles. Put two spones of flour in bread bowl, hollow out and pour in sponge with two tablespoonfuls of salt and lard size of walnut. Knead well, let raise twice and divide into four loaves; let raise again and bake for one hour. Do not think yeast is spoiled in morning, as it will have fermented.

Graham Nut Bread.—Three cups graham flour, one-half cup white flour, one teaspoonful salt, three teaspoonfuls baking powder. Sift three times, then add two and one-half cups milk, one-half cup raisins, cup chopped nut meats. Mix well and bake about one hour.

MEATS.

Mock Roast.—One cup of beans, boiled and mashed; one cup of peas, boiled and mashed; one cup of finely chopped peanuts or pecans, one cup of dry bread crumbs. Moisten the bread crumbs with water and mix with the mashed peas, beans, and nuts. Season with salt, pepper and onion juice. Put into a buttered baking dish, cover with a cup of rich cream and bake about an hour and a half. This is very healthful and a fine substitute for meat.

German Chop Suey.—Two pounds hamburger, fry a nice brown, three onions, one-half box of noodles, one small bunch of celery chopped up in small pieces, one can tomatoes, salt and pepper; boil one hour.

Hungarian Goulash.—Cut one pound of good round steak into inch cubes and add an equal quantity of thinly sliced onion. Put one-half cup butter into a large saucepan and when it bubbles put in the meat and onion. Let it brown slightly, then stew slowly for three hours, or until the meat is tender. Do not add water, as the juice from the meat and onion will make

HOME

FOR THE VEGETARIAN.

Dessert.—A pretty dessert for a vegetarian dinner may be made in the following manner: Cook rice in water without stirring and form it in circles on fruit plate. Fill in the centre with fresh strawberries and pour over all a ladleful of pineapple juice which has been sweetened. Serve very cold.

Diced Beets.—To three-fourths cupful of cooked diced beets take one-fourth cupful of bread crumbs. Place these in alternate layers in a baking dish, arranging the crumbs on top. Then pour over them one-half cupful of hot milk, to which has been added one tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper. Bake twenty or thirty minutes.

Vegetarian Pie.—Take any one of the flaked, ready cooked breakfast foods and mix with about half the quantity of rich cream to form a moist paste. With this mix a well greased pie plate, molding it around the edges as you would pie crust. Pour in a filling of custard, cocoanut, cream, lemon, or apple, and bake as an ordinary pie. While the filling is cooking the cereal will bake out dry and crisp, becoming firm enough to hold the pie when cut. The indigestible qualities of an ordinary pie crust are missing and a delicious light pastry is the result. A meringue should be placed on top instead of a crust.

DESSERTS.

Chocolate Ice Cream.—Three squares sweet chocolate, melted, to which add pint of milk, and beat until mixture reaches boiling point. Add well beaten mixture of three eggs, pinch of salt, one teaspoon vanilla, two cups granulated sugar. While cooking beat until quite thick, then remove from stove to cool. Whip one pint cream, add to above, and freeze.

Delicious dessert.—Cut even slices of bread not less than one day old, butter and stack three or four high. Heat fruit juice left from canned fruit, or melt a glass of jelly, adding enough water to cover the bread which has been placed in a dish deep enough that the liquid can cover the bread. Have the liquid hot and let it stand on bread until thoroughly soaked and then allowed to get cold. Turn bread out on plate and slice like layer ice cream. Serve with plain or whipped cream. When canning fruit in a good plan to put any surplus juice in pint cans for this purpose.

THE LAUNDRY.

Ironing Hint.—When ironing starched clothes, if the iron is dipped quickly into cold water each time when taken from the stove the starch will never stick and the clothes iron smooth and so quickly you hardly realize you're started before you're done.

To Clean Lace.—Powdered boracic acid sprinkled on lace yoke or collar, then laid away for a day or two, then well shaken out, will remove the soil.

Beading Help.—Fasten firmly at the center of back tape or ribbon, which is run through beading in underwear. This keeps it from being pulled half out or lost entirely in laundering.

Ironing Board Help.—Linen pieces should never be put through the wringer if you would avoid the little wrinkles that are so hard to press out. Small tucks will iron smoother and look better if ironed on the wrong side. If knitwear, bath towels, etc., when taken from the lines are smoothed with the hands and put on the bars to air, will be ready to put away by the time the bars are needed for the ironed clothes. To avoid the unsightly fold so often seen on top of a sleeve of starched shirt waists, fold at the seam, iron the upper, then the lower side, not letting the iron pass within an inch or two of the edge; then open the sleeve fold with the unironed part in the center of the sleeve and press carefully.

COOKING HELPS.

Serve a loaf of baked dressing with your roast of beef. Try a spoonful or perhaps two of maple syrup on your warm apple pie.

HOW BOTHA WILL DEAL WITH SOUTH AFRICA'S PROBLEM.

Premier's Release of Dinizulu Marks a New Era in the History of South Africa—Despite His Cause to Hate the Zulus Louis Botha Has Commenced His Regime With an Act of Clemency.

The initial act of clemency exercised by the Botha Ministry at South Africa was the release of Dinizulu, son of Cetawayo, late paramount chief of the Zulu nation, who was recently convicted of fomenting rebellion. Customary at it is upon the inauguration of a new reign to pardon political prisoners and others guilty of minor offences, the action of Prime Minister Botha and his Cabinet in releasing Dinizulu and then bestowing upon him a pension of £2,500 per annum during his good behavior, is one of those things which members of Aboriginal Protection Societies never would have believed of former Boer leaders. To a certain extent, the new regime at South Africa is confident of its ability to make the grotesque figure officially representing the Zulu people—the Royal Zulus—amenable to reason. To his indunas, or subchiefs, Dinizulu will doubtless continue to be hailed as Bayete—their king—but to those controlling the destinies of the white residents of South Africa, he will be a superannuated person impotent for mischief and inconsequential in his influences upon the black races.

Without the assistance of Gen. Botha and his contemporaries, Dinizulu never would have attained to pre-eminence as the successor of Cetawayo, after the latter's capture and exile, a fratricidal war ensued upon the removal of Cetawayo, his two sons, Dinizulu and Sebepe, claiming priority. Their respective impis engaged in warfare, such as the African races alone are capable of in point of savagery. Zulu-land is rugged and its bush is adapted to stratagems peculiar to these peoples. It was a war and tuck as between Sebepe and Dinizulu until the latter conceived the idea of enlisting Boers under Botha, Cetawayo, and others in his behalf. In this Dinizulu displayed his cunning. He realized the Boers had trounced his followers on various occasions, and he made a bargain by which those who supported him should be allowed to select farms in northern Zululand.

Several hundred Boers took advantage of Dinizulu's terms. They stipulated that Dinizulu's impis should lead in all attacks, and when the Boers "got busy" with their assegais and spears, each other, the Boers effectively put Sebepe's adherents. It did not take long to settle the matter. Sebepe could not withstand the combined forces operating under Botha. Dinizulu was duly installed as Chief of Zululand. Gen. Botha and Lukas Meyer and the allied Boers who were to have the farms as their reward for fighting services rendered, were present at Dinizulu's coronation. It is related that, for the first time, Dinizulu, who had been a head piece consisting of the remnants of an ancient silk hat.

Subsequently, in order to maintain a firm hold upon Dinizulu and his warriors, and to prevent the Boers of the Transvaal from getting control of Zululand, the British Government placed Dinizulu upon the pay roll. Zululand came under the administration of Natal.

Dinizulu grew obese. His life of idleness at his kraal, his devotion to the chase and his fondness for the chase engendered a longing for more power than he had. Pride of ancestry and ill-concealed resentment of his subordinate position rankled in the chief. He was required to report so often to the Native Commissioner for Zululand, and he was supposed to notify the authorities of any and all evidences of treachery. There is little doubt in the minds of those acquainted with Dinizulu's character that he always was a heart traitor. The Boer he disliked and the British he thought he could bamboozle. During the Boer war he donned a discarded khaki uniform, but it was a toss-up for a while whether he was in sympathy with the British or the Boers, as he calculated to avoid malcontents among the Zulus considerable gratification and to confuse the native mind which had all along assumed that the British were indomitable and powerful. Not until Lady Smith fell and Pretoria was occupied did Dinizulu co-operate with the British forces. Then he assisted in scouting and in preventing the Boers from over-running Zululand and raiding British troops native scouts enabled the Boers to raid the farms Dinizulu had ceded to them. Kitchener's determination was to cut off the Boer commissariat. With the help rendered by the Zulus he succeeded in doing so. One of the Boers in the closing activity of the war was the massacre of a party of Boers who had burned some Zulu kraals and driven off a lot of cattle. The Zulus surrounded the sleeping Boers and slaughtered them, only two or three of the party escaped. That was one of the atrocities of the war. Louis Botha's neighbors were the victims, and although the British were accused of complicity in the affair, it is denied that they knew of the intention of the Zulus.

The Boer has not forgotten the horrible butchery of that tragic night. The writer has in his possession the narrative as it fell from the lips of a youth who miraculously escaped from the frenzied Zulus, and as it was written by General Emmet, a brother-in-law to Louis Botha, Potgieter's sleeping burghers aroused by the Zulus fought until their ammunition was exhausted, and then to alive could no longer be killed. Boers cannot be made to believe that the British officials were ignorant of the intention of the Zulus. Yet Gen. Botha's Ministry has pardoned Dinizulu, conceded to him a pension and would obliterate the animosities of the late war.

Dinizulu will be harmless in the hands of the Botha administration. No sooner was the war at an end than he did not participate in the Bambata rebellion. For this he was deposed and imprisoned, notwithstanding the efforts of misguided philanthropists in England to save him. Now he is free by the favor of those whom he and his warriors would have exterminated, and it is plain that Gen. Botha and his colleagues will govern gently and firmly.

GOING! GOING! GONE!!!

When Auctioneers Sell by Hour-Glass and Candle.

The English property market is in such a bad way that well-known firms of London auctioneers have recently tried selling by Dutch auction.

This auction is the exact reverse of the ordinary English method. Instead of starting at a low price, and running up by putting up the property at the highest possible price, and then lowering it until someone makes a bid, when it is at once knocked down, this is the exact reverse. The auctioneer starts at a high price, and then lowers it until someone makes a bid, when it is at once knocked down. This is a very good way out of the way parts of the country. It was the great King Alfred who is said to have invented the method of measuring time by candles, and one place where his memory is still kept green is in Alderminster, a quaint, old-world village near Reading.

Alderminster possesses a field known as the "Churchwardens' acre," which is let each year to the highest bidder by candle auction. The churchwardens measure a certain length of candle, and measure the candle is lighted, and bids are received until it goes out, the last bidder becoming tenant for the year. Peeps, in his diary, records the sale of the acre, by the candle method. "So keen was the competition," he says, "We have much to do to tell who did cry last."

Bidding by sand-glass is still more ancient than that by candle. It is now almost extinct, but still survives in the Somerset town of Chard in connection with the annual letting of the market tolls. A sand-glass is placed upon the table, and at a given point in the proceedings a bidder over. As the sand runs down bids are made, and when the sand is all run down becoming the lesson for the ensuing year.

A field known as the White Bread Meadow, at Bourne, in Lincolnshire, is let by auction annually. The auctioneer takes his stand upon a bridge over the Eastgate, and as each bid is made a boy is started to run to a certain public house, and so long as the last boy has not returned the bids continue. The last bid which is successful when the last boy returns is the successful one.

South Africa For Holidays!

It may be the fine climate that makes the arranging of holidays a certainty at almost any time; or maybe it is a trait of indifference to the work of the world that has developed in the colonial character; but it is certain it requires a very small excuse for the South African Colonial to claim a general holiday. They began with a pension day on the 5th; then, on the arrival of the news of the death of Edward, they had a day of mourning; while a few days afterwards it was Whit Monday. Then came the day of King Edward's funeral, which was another holiday; and on the 24th they celebrated Victoria or Empire Day, whilst on the 21st they had a grand finale in the proclamation of the Union of South Africa. On the day the world was supposed to pass through the tail of Haley's comet a workman at Pretoria coolly asked if there was any chance of getting a holiday on the strength of it!

Loudest Voice in the Lords.

The credit of having the loudest voice in the House of Lords belongs to Lord Ashbourne. The tones that were once his pride have been modified by time, use, and age, but he can still, like John Peel, "awaken the dead." There is a story that when Mr. Gibson, as he then was, made his debut as an Irish law officer in the Commons a colleague, hurrying into the House, met another coming out. "Why, where are you going? Don't you know that Gibson is up?" "Yes, I know, and I am going to the Lords." "To the Lords? Don't you want to hear him?" "I don't! I shall hear him with more comfort from the distance."

Champion of Women's Suffrage.

Mr. David Shackleton, who introduced the Women's Franchise Bill, in the British House, is the son of an Acorning watchmaker. When he was nine he started work as a half-timer in the mills, and such were his energy and industry that before he was thirteen he had charge of three looms—a record in the weaving industry. "I was a good elementary scholar," says Mr. Shackleton, "and so nearly all my time as a pupil at the elementary school was spent as a teacher, instructing men old enough to be my father in the three R's. The result was that I had to educate myself after leaving that school."

Take Their Flasks Maybe.

Col. Seely admitted in the British House of Commons recently that in certain native courts in Southern Nigeria flasks had been received in evidence although the practice was abolished by law in 1901.

ROYAL THEATRICALS.

Britain's Reigning House Frequently "Put on a Little Show."

Several royal stage representations have taken place in Britain's palaces since the late Queen Victoria ascended the throne, and although descriptive accounts of them have appeared in the press on one or two occasions, they have not been the work of writers invited to the performances, owing to the fact that newspaper representatives are never invited to such functions.

King Edward is said to have arranged more than one private theatrical performance when he was Prince of Wales, and the actors and actresses who took part in them were all of royal rank. Queen Victoria was very fond of these little functions in more than one stage production. Princess Louise is a very capable amateur actress, and has appeared, not only at the royal palaces, but at the houses of well-known society people. Princess Beatrice acted a good deal at Windsor, and Prince Henry of Battenberg was once given a part. He had such a poor opinion of his own talents, however, that after the first rehearsal he resigned in favor of another royal personage.

The royal plays have a considerable amount of money spent on them, and Queen Victoria's little secret performances generally cost about $2,500 each. As a rule Her Majesty acted as stage-manager, while Princess Louise, when not on the stage, did the prompting.

It has always been the practice of having not only new clothes but also new wigs specially made for each performance, and to employ a certain gentleman, who is pledged to secrecy, to assist the royal actors and actresses in "making-up" for the characters they are to portray.

Private concerts are, of course, very common in the royal palaces, and on these occasions it is not unusual for the members of the royal family to sing and play.

Queen Victoria was very fond of music and often sang Mendelssohn's songs. When the great musician visited Buckingham Palace in 1842 both Prince Albert and Queen Victoria sang and played. Her Majesty sang two songs, and Mendelssohn said that she rendered "the Elger spruch, 'Lass dich nur,' really quite faultlessly, and with charming feeling and expression."

Poised as a Man.

Death has just brought to light a most astounding story of an elderly woman who had for twenty-five years successfully and without suspicion masqueraded as a man. She was known as Harry Lloyd, and was seventy years of age. For many years she had lived in Alma Road, London, with Miss Lloyd, a school teacher, who always referred to her as "father." Lloyd had been ill for some weeks, but for an unaccountable reason which is now, however, made plain, refused to see a medical man. About 4 feet 10 inches in height, quietly dressed in masculine attire, with dark grey hair kept fairly short, and using a monocle, she was frequently to be seen in the streets, and no one seemed to have had any suspicion as to her sex. Apparently, French in extraction, she was well educated and gave lessons in French. When Dr. Foote was called after her death he found to his surprise that the "man" was in reality a woman, and Miss Lloyd appeared profoundly astonished when he communicated his discovery to her. An amazing feature in the case is that about twenty-one years ago Dr. Foote's partner attended a woman who was said to be Harry Lloyd's wife.

Arrested as a Spy.

Some remarkable experiences have fallen to the lot of Mr. Alan H. Burge, M.P. for North Kensington. He was walking through Manchuria from Peking to Port Arthur, knows the heart of China, and during the last Russian War was imprisoned for five days in a fortress as a spy. He climbed the Japanese sacred mountain, Fujiyama, he has journeyed through New Guinea, Siam, Ceylon, and Mexico, interviewed cannibals, and written thrilling war stories for boys. He is interested in maritime subjects, and is a prominent member of the Navy League.

The New Tennis Champion.

No form of athletics seems to come anis to Anthony Wilding, who recently carried off the lawn-tennis championship of the world. As a motor-cyclist he has won the medal for the run from Land's End to John o' Groat's and he is also a capital cricketer. He is all bone and muscle, and certainly no man who plays lawn tennis keeps himself in such perfect physical condition. Mr. Wilding, who is a New Zealander, learnt tennis as a boy from his father, and has confessed that his youthful ambition was to win the tennis championship.

King's 'Phone Privileges.

The King has certain privileges when using the telephone which no one else enjoys. For instance, when he requires to speak over a trunk line, instead of waiting, as others often have to do, for at least half an hour, he has priority over all who may be waiting to use the same line. Also, while for all the others three minutes is the limit allowed for a call, the King can speak as long as he likes. As a matter of fact, however, he practically never exceeds the time limit.

ZULUS IN WOOD.

Eccentric Englishman Left Queer Collection of Statues.

However accustomed a traveler might be to strange sights and queer happenings, he would receive something of a shock in visiting the tiny, old-fashioned village of Castlethorpe, in Buckinghamshire. For in that quiet corner of rural England is to be found a collection of curios which for striking originality and workmanship would be difficult to beat.

This collection consists of life-sized figures of Livingstone and Stanley, Zulu men and women, crocodiles, snakes, monkeys, cats, prairie dogs, heads of lions, tigers, and jaguars—all carved out of solid blocks of wood, with every detail in color, etc., most faithfully delineated.

The collection belongs to Mr. Geo. Rainbow, the superintendent of the Castlethorpe postoffice, who takes such a pride in his collection that he has built a couple of arbors in his garden and arranged the figures in a tableau, which at first have a somewhat alarming effect on the casual visitor. For some of the black figures have been carved in fighting attitudes, and grasp heavy African spears. Many offers to purchase parts of the collection have been made to Mr. Rainbow, but he refuses to sell.

"They were given to me," he said to a visitor recently, "by my grandfather, who died a short time ago, and who must have devoted something over fifty years to carving them. Of course, he did not work at them all the time, for he varied this curious hobby by other things, but he was a hammer and a block of wood and fashioning a figure of the African jungle and forest. Curiously enough, he did not take any great pride in the work. While always willing to allow people to see them if they asked to do so, he never forced his works upon their attention."

"He got his ideas from books and museums, and I suppose it was his passion for reading about African exploration which led him to carve these figures. One of the best Zulu figures which he carved is in the museum at St. Neots, where he lived. Where did he keep the figures? In his garden, and I remember the garden gate open, one night he let the garden gate open, and the first thing the light fell on was the terrible-looking fellow there"—and here Mr. Rainbow pointed to one of the biggest figures in the collection, with a huge spear. "That bobby turned tail and fled, but summoned up courage to come round the next morning and tell the story of a savage brandishing a spear which he had seen in my cousin's garden."

Perhaps the most remarkable feature of the collection is the wonderful manner in which every detail has been observed in modelling the figures. Properly-colored glass eyes have been let into the wood, and are carefully carved bone teeth have been inserted in the mouth. The hair, too, has been carefully carved out on the wood, the figures being decorated with necklaces of African beads and carrying out of foot anklets are twisted and d tigers heads, beautifully modelled, are cunningly arranged in the woodwork behind the figures, to give the visitor a shock as he or she walks round to inspect the collection.

To some people the idea of having these huge black figures in a beautiful garden—by Mr. Rainbow can boast of one of the prettiest in Castlethorpe—may seem a little incongruous. One may forget the strangeness of these queer garden ornaments, however, when gazing how beautifully modelled each figure is, showing every muscle and line of the body, and it would be very surprising if, are long, some of the figures collector does not permit Mr. Rainbow to part with what is certainly the most unique collection of wood statues in the country.

"Dawgery" Going Out.

The word "dawgery" seems to be going quite out of fashion, many people should so style themselves prefer to use instead their Christian names. Strictly speaking the mother of a married peer or baronet is, the name, but it has become the custom when two ladies bear the same title to call the elder one by her Christian name, the distinction dowager being dropped altogether.

At court, however, all widows of peers and baronets are styled dowagers when the peer or baronet name was married. The Christian name was adopted some years ago in cases where there were more than two ladies bearing the same title in order to make a distinction between the dowager (the wife of the holder of the title), and the innovation has become so popular that peeresses and baronesses who should style themselves dowager elect to be known by their Christian names. Thus the widow of the late Earl of Dudley is known as Georgiana Lady Dudley, but actually she is Dowager Lady Dudley.—Court Journal.

A Little Maori Meal.

The Maoris of New Zealand, whilst holding their annual gatherings, do not believe in going hungry, as a glance through the following list of food consumed during a recent gathering will show. There were nine bullock-cylind, there were seven tons of potatoes, twenty sheep, seven tons of shellfish, eight tons of sugar, 200 thirteen 56-pound bags of sugar, 220 gallons of milk, 4 cwt. of flour, eight 50-pound boxes of butter, six large tins of fancy biscuits, four cases of jam, two tons of peas, the ton of pumpkins, and besides condiments and sundries. Fourteen tons of firewood were used for cooking. The number of Maoris present was 1,300.

The Heat of Australia.

Australia is the hottest country on record. I have ridden for miles as wide of the equator, but I have never found heat to compare with this. Out in the country in the dry times there appears to be little more than a sheet of brown paper between you and the lower regions, and the people facetiously say that they have to feed their hens on cracked ice to keep them from laying boiled eggs.—Sydney Telegraph.

NURSING SISTERS AT CAMP.

Canada Is Now Equipped Like Armies of the Older World.

Canadian girls, like their sisters everywhere, get the reputation of having a weakness for brass buttons. For instance, at a dance, what chance has a soldier's girl against a girl who has a military training? So far in Canada this reputation is not only passive, which is to say that the girls of the Dominion have been largely content to be mere spectators of the splendours of military pomp, sometimes it is time being carried away by the glitter and then expressing their effervescent spirits as smart cadets in amateur theatricals or at the college masquerade. Till this year in Canada there were no real soldier girls—five soldier girls who could rest off the Militia List and gossip volubly of the summer camp. June, 1910, is somewhat of a memorable date in the history of military Canada; six girls went to Niagara camp in full regalia—and for once the dashing capitalists in their proud plumage were not the heroes. There were heroines—Nursing Sisters Morris, Leitchman, McGiffin, Daymon, Hammel and Hatch. On the pretty blue uniforms are shoulder straps, and the brass buttons on the spaulders indicate that each of the young ladies is dignified with the rank of Lieutenant during her stay in camp.

The Nursing Sisters are attached to the Army Medical Corps. Bringing them to camp—that was a step in advance for the corps, another example at the progress which has characterized the militia during the past ten years; which has substituted the Army Service Corps for the bull-beef contractor, and organized the Army Medical Corps in place of the regimental doctor and his slim, black bag, turning the whole Canuck army from a cruddy into a system.

"What useful purpose is served by bringing trained nurses to a summer military camp?" the sceptic will ask. Talk to Col. Fenlon, C.O. Field Ambulance No. 10. He will dilate upon the advantage of the nurse with military experience.

Nursing experience to be found in summer camp? you say. "Fshaw! Then the colonel and his assistants will quickly laugh at your incredulity, and tell you how dead wrong you are.

This year there were eleven days of Niagara camp. Now for the casualty list. In that period out of 4,000 soldiers, 120 sick and wounded were cared for by the Nursing Sisters. The casualties ranged from indigestion and gonorrhoea down the list to colds and pneumonia.

One case of appendicitis was recorded—quite notable, for the victim for the first time in the Canadian military history was operated on, and successfully too, in the open air.

What of the hospital equipment at Niagara? Eight tents comprised the hospital, each tent a ward containing 120 beds. The capacity of the hospital was, therefore, 48 patients and the maximum was well averaged during the eleven days. There was an operating tent and a diet tent. The wards were regularly patrolled; diet sheets were kept, records of the patients, his progress and treatment, were set down. In fact the canvas institution was a city hospital in miniature—one difference; the ozone slipped through the tent walls, chasing away the odors of the apothecary.

The innovation of the Nursing Sisters at Niagara camp was a distinct feature. It is understood that the Department have it under consideration to invite more trained from the big hospitals to the camps throughout the Dominion.

This policy would bear fruit in case of active service; the girls who have learned the routine of the regimental lines would then be able to superintend the operations of the military hospitals which would be established.

A Versatile Soldier.
Chartered accountant, graduate in agriculture, traveler, athlete and soldier, Lieut.-Col. James George Ross is one of the most all-around men in Montreal, where he was born in 1861.

He has seen long service in the Canadian militia; beginning with the Ontario Field Battery at Guelph in 1879. At that time he was plugging up agriculture at the O. & A. Co. Just after he got his degree of B.S.A. from Guelph he took a trip to far-away Manitoba—about the time the C.P.R. was poking a nose into the province. After an extensive tour in the West he returned to Montreal and went into accounting in his father's office. At the same time he linked up with the Victoria Rifles; became identified with all the athletic and club life there was in Montreal—as well as much of its financial development, being soon at the head of his deceased father's firm.

Snowshoe runner, life member of the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association, expert canoeist, crack player of Britannia Football Club, particularly on snowshoes, he has made a name, having several medals and records on the wickers. But always interested in the militia, he went from the Victoria Rifles to the 5th Royal Highlanders, of which in 1909 he became lieutenant-colonel.

Shorter, But Not Uglier.
The English word "typist," as applied to a stenographer, has become familiar lately through the newspaper stories of the capture of Dr. Crippen and Miss Lenoir. The word is much more concise than stenographer, and might well be adopted in this country. The words "lift," as descriptive of an elevator, and "tram" of a street car, have also the advantage of brevity. The nomenclature of many things in England is preferable to that we in Canada employ.

Both Were Scared.
Charles Fox of Long Lake, near Brockville, more a lion than a highway recently, and to escape a mix-up climbed a slender tree. The limb on which he stood broke and he fell to the ground directly in front of Bruin. The bear became frightened, as well as Fox, and both ran away in opposite directions.

CHICKEN RACES.

The Ridiculous "Hen Derby" Instituted by Sir John Astley.

It is said that the crowning triumph of Sir John Astley, that inventor of absurd contests, whose forte it was to arrange races between animals, which nature apparently had made most unsuitable for the purpose, was the institution of the only races that ever took place between chickens.

The story is that the idea came to Sir John during a visit to a friend who kept a large number of hens. He noticed how rapidly the chickens used to scurry to their mother when food was thrown to her. This furnished the ingenious Sir John with a clever notion, and at mess, he then being quartered at Windsor, he accordingly unfolded to his brother officers his plans for a great chicken race.

He bought from a farmer a hen and a brood of chickens. Each officer was to choose a chicken and mark it with a ribbon, so that he could easily recognize it. The chickens were to be placed about fifty yards away from their mother, and whichever of them reached her first in answer to her cackle when food was thrown to her was to be adjudged the winner.

And so this ridiculous "hen Derby" came off in the barrack at Windsor and was witnessed by nearly the whole brigade of guards, who traveled down from London especially to see it.

The race was such a success that it was arranged to repeat it the following week. It might possibly have become a regular institution and a racing stable of chickens might have been added to the attractions at Windsor had not Sir John's chicken won on each occasion with such ease as to cause suspicion in the minds of his competitors. Indeed, it was found, it is said, that in both races Sir John had selected a sturdy young cocker who was much too speedy for his sisters.

When victory was a certainty for one particular competitor the contest, of course, lost interest, and so the chicken races at Windsor came to a sudden end.—New York Herald.

TURNER'S AMBITION.

The Great Painter Achieved It by Years of Self-Sacrifice.

Turner could not bear to sell a favorite painting. He was always melancholy after such a transaction. "I lost one of my children this week," he would sadly exclaim. At a meeting at Somerset House it was decided to purchase his two great pictures, the "Rain" and the "Fall of Carthage," for the National gallery. A Mr. Griffiths was commissioned to offer $5,000 for them. "A noble offer," said the painter, "a noble offer; but no, I cannot part with them. Impossible." Mr. Griffiths, greatly disappointed, took his leave. Turner smiled at him. "Tell those gentlemen," he said, "that the nation will most likely have the pictures after all." Long before this Turner had matured a purpose which continued to be his dominant idea while life lasted. This was to bequeath to his country a Turner gallery of pictures and to amass $100,000 to build and endow an asylum for decayed artists. It was for this great object that he denied himself all pleasures that cost money, all luxuries. His resolve, once made, could not be shaken. On one occasion he was offered $100,000 for the art treasures locked up in the "don't." "Give me the key of the house," Mr. Turner said a Liverpool merchant, "and here is the money." "No, thank you," replied Turner. "I have refused a better offer." And that was true. By his will he bequeathed $140,000 to found an asylum for poor artists born in England and a magnificent art collection to his country. This latter bequest was, however, coupled with the condition that his "Rain" and "Fall of Carthage" should be hung in the National gallery between Claude's "Barn" and "Mill."—London Graphic.

Didn't Give Him the Chance.
Schoenbauer, when staying in Geneva, used to go every day to a table d'hôte at which now and then appeared other distinguished visitors. Once Lady Byron sat next to him.

"Doctor," said the host after she had left, with a twinkle in his eye, "doctor, do you know who sat next to you at the table today? It was Lady Byron."

"Why the deuce did you not tell me this before?" replied Schoenbauer: "I should have liked to be rude to her."

"That was what I feared," said the host, "and for that reason I kept it quiet."

Very Thorough.
New York's collector of customs was talking about smuggling.

"Smuggling must cease," he said. "We'll make it cease, if we have to be as strict and thorough as the French customs officer. This strict officer, standing on the pier, frowned on a tourist with a swollen cheek.

"What have you got there?" he said, pointing to the swelling.

"An abscess, sir," was the reply.

"Well," said the officer impatiently, "open it, please!"—Washington Star.

SUMMER RECORDS OF CHILDREN'S DEATHS

Records show that by far the greatest number of deaths among little ones occur during the hot summer months. The excessive heat, the difficulty of keeping baby's milk sweet, improper food all tend towards bringing on those dreaded baby troubles—cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentery and other stomach and bowel troubles.

To guard against these troubles Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in the house. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent these deadly summer complaints or cure them if they come on suddenly. Mrs. O. Morin, Ste. Tite, Que., says: "My baby suffered from a severe attack of cholera infantum, but after giving him Baby's Own Tablets the trouble disappeared and he regained health splendidly."

The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TOO REALISTIC.
Fuddy—"What kind of a singer is Jones?"

Duddy—"Why, he sang 'Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep' last night with such feeling that more than half the audience were seasick and had to leave the hall."

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is compounded specially to combat dysentery, cholera morbus and all inflammatory disorders that change of food or water may set up in the stomach and intestines. These complaints are more common in summer than in winter, but they are not confined to the warm months, as undue laxness of the bowels may seize a man at any time. Such a sufferer will find speedy relief in this Cordial.

WHAT MISSIONARIES DO.
Two little girls saw the wide-open mouth of a crocodile in a picture-book.

"Crocodiles is awful," said one, seriously. "They eat up little heathen babies what don't say their prayers." In my Sunday school we give pennies to buy missionaries to go and shoot them."

There are millions of packets of Wilson's Fly Pads sold every year, and every Pad will kill every fly that drinks the poisoned liquid from it.

It Keeps the Muscles Pliant.
Men given to muscular sports and exercises—those who suffer from muscular pains from bicycle riding will find Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil something worth trying. As a lubricant it will keep the muscles pliant and free from pains which often follow constant use of them, without softening them or impairing their strength. For bruises, sprains and contusions it is without a peer.

Sleeplessness—Sleep is the great restorer and to be deprived of it is vital loss. Whatever may be the cause of it, indigestion, nervous derangement or mental worry, try a course of Paralee's Vegetable Pills. By regulating the action of the stomach, where the trouble lies, they will restore normal conditions and healthful sleep will follow. They exert a sedative force upon the nerves and where there is unrest they bring rest.

GETTING BACK AT FATHER.
Father—"This is your little sister, Tommy; you will love her very dearly, will you not?"
Tommy—"Yes, of course; but it will cost a great deal to keep her, won't it?"
Father—"I presume so."

Tommy—"Yes, and when I asked you the other day to buy a white rabbit, you said you couldn't afford it."

"Mr. Skimmerhorn," inquired the landlord, "how did you sleep last night?"
"Like a top," answered the guest. "I thought so. I could hear you—aw—humming all night long."

Perhaps time is money because it manages to slip away so fast.

HIS STUPID MISTAKE.

Much to His Surprise It Was Promptly Rectified.

A well known Londoner was planning an entertainment on an elaborate scale to be given to various friends in the neighborhood of his country seat. Unfortunately his nearest neighbor, a close relative, is highly unconventional to himself and his intimates, and he racked his brains to devise a scheme by which he might avoid the necessity of inviting the undesirable cousin to be among his guests.

"I have it!" he announced to his wife at breakfast on the morning of the event. "I'll send him some tickets for the play tonight in town. Of course he'll be delighted, as he seldom has an opportunity of going to the theater."

The tickets were accordingly sent, and the host with an easy conscience proceeded to enjoy the company of his friends. But his satisfaction was of short duration. At the height of the festivities, much to his surprise, in walked the objectionable neighbor.

"Such a stupid mistake you made!" he announced as he approached his cousin. "As soon as I heard about your party I knew that you must have sent me the tickets for the wrong night, so I got them changed for tomorrow evening and came right over here as soon as I could!"—London Tatler.

What Napoleon Couldn't Do.
An incident connected with Napoleon when he was in exile in Elba is commemorated on the island to this day by an inscription affixed to the wall of a peasant's house. A man named Giaccone was plowing when the famous exile came along one day and expressed an interest in his work. Napoleon even took the plow handles and attempted to guide it himself, but the oxen refused to obey him, overturned the plow and spoiled the furrow. The inscription runs thus:

"Napoleon the Great, passing by this place in MDCCCXIV, took in the neighboring field a plow from the hands of a peasant and himself tried to plow, but the oxen, rebellious to those hands which yet had guided Europe, heaving sed from the furrow."

More of Mr. Flemming's Road Policy.

Another illustration of how Hon. Mr. Flemming tried to squander public money for the purpose of making political gain, has just come to our notice.

A prominent farmer, who lives in Lower Brighton, and who has always been an ardent Conservative, became so disgusted with the shameful manner in which the Government is carrying on the business of the County, that about three weeks ago he told Mr. Flemming to his face that he and his whole Government were rotten to the core. Mr. Flemming immediately went to one of his superintendents in Brighton and wanted him to go to this farmer and give him the repairing of a bridge a short distance below Hartland, at his price and without tender. This the superintendent refused to do. Mr. Jackson was then ordered to sell the bridge, and on the morning of the sale went to the farmer and invited him to come up and bid on it, but Mr. Farmer was not for sale, and in the end, notwithstanding the efforts of Mr. Flemming to the contrary, the country will secure the construction of one public work along honest lines.

And this Mr. Flemming is the same man who only three years ago was promising the voters of this County that, if they would trust him and his party with the reins of Government every dollar expended in public work would be by public tender.

If Mr. Flemming wants the name of the farmer and superintendent we will gladly furnish them. Some people only require a short piece of rope with which to hang themselves. —Sentinel.

You are not experimenting on yourself when you take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a cold, as that preparation has won its great reputation and extensive sale by its remarkable cures of colds, and can always be depended upon. It is equally valuable for adults and children and may be given to young children with implicit confidence as it contains no harmful drug. Sold by all dealers.

At the Dominion Exhibition.

Quite a number of firms who are well known to readers of the "Maritime Merchant" had very attractive exhibits at the Dominion Exhibition, which closed recently in St. John.

One of the first to attract attention on entering the main building was that of T. H. Estabrooks, who had a very artistic booth with polite attendants, to serve Red Rose Tea and Coffee to all comers. Needless to say it was always filled. —Maritime Merchant.

Don't trifle with a cold is good advice for prudent men and women. It may be vital in case of a child. There is nothing better than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs and colds in children. It is safe and sure. For sale by all dealers.

His Position Unmistakable.

J. W. Correll, late editor of the Victoria County News, is noted for his outspokenness. In his salutatory editorial to the people of St. George, where he has purchased the Granite Town Greetings, he says:

In Politics which is always an important point in newspaper work we will while under the present management as far as the Greetings is concerned be strictly Independent, the columns being open to both sides to air their views, while we retain the right to refuse all matter of too personal or bitter a nature. During election periods while space is available it can be purchased by politicians of either side, the same as by business men as newspaper space is the goods we have to sell and the funds received from them are what oils the cogs of the machinery.

Lame back is one of the most common forms of muscular rheumatism. A few applications of Chamberlain's Liniment will give relief. For sale by all dealers.

His Farewell.

James W. Correll, formerly of St. John West, and for some years editor and proprietor of the Victoria County News, published at Perth, makes formal announcement of his retirement from the paper, which will in future be under the management of the Victoria Printing and Publishing Company, composed of a number of the business men and citizens of the county, with Mr. J. Louis Milmore as editor. At the close of a long article, Mr. Correll says: "In leaving the county, wherever my lot is cast I will always have a warm feeling for Victoria, and will be pleased to know of its prosperity and advancement, and the welfare of the many friends I am leaving and also of the people generally." —Globe.

Beaufort

Joseph Lee (Sen) returned home on Friday from Riviere du Loup where he met with a serious accident to his foot a few weeks ago. Everyone is glad to know that Mr. Lee has now almost completely recovered and is looking as well as ever.

Mrs. James Scovil's at home, prior to her departure for Princeton, B. C. on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Cummins was largely attended. Mrs. Scovil started on Monday morning on the three thousand mile trip and her numerous friends wish her a pleasant journey and an enjoyable holiday in the Pacific Province. It is her intention to remain west till the spring.

Several fine moose have been obtained near here recently. Joe Lee shot one having a spread of 41 inches. It is a very pretty, symmetrical head with fourteen points on either side. Some sportsmen from the Empire State, guests at the MacKenzie camp near Beede Brook, have the pleasure of returning to Broadway with one having a 42 inch span. Dr. Green's guests got several fine specimens near Miramichi Lake under the able guidance of Charles McEwen.

Willard Kennedy got a small moose on Teague Brook, and only avoided encountering the strong arm of Mr. Grimmer by one point.
