SENATE SURRENDERS

Withdrew Its Hostility to the Dominion Franchise Bill.

sir Mackenzie Bowell Engineered the Retreat.

Ottawa, June 11.-The senate last aight withdrew from the position it took of hostility to the House of Commons and the government on the franchise bill, and on motion of Sir Mackenzie Bowell resolved that the senate do not insist upon the second and and that they do insist on the seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth amendstances of Prince Edward Island, where there are no voters' lists, and in the manner provided by provincial law, and that the senate does insist upon its constitutional right to reject or amend said bill or any bill of a simiar character. The amendments here abandoned are the objectionable amendments affecting the principle of the bill which were originally made against the protest of the government. This motion followed the suggestion of Mr. Mills, the leader of the senate, that they should abandon the appeal to the judge amendment and insist upon the other amendments described by the solicitor-general in the House Commons as unnecesary but harmless. Otherwise, he said, the government would insist upon the bill as it originally came from the House Commons. Regarding the appeal provided for in the amendment to the judge from the final revision of the ist Mr. Mills said he would urge the three provincial governments to provide such an appeal by local legislation. that they are not meeting a strong The Saginaw News says that Capt. Miles, of the Saginaws, is too severe on his team, and roasts a man unmercifully when he makes an error. Friske struck out eight of the Londons on Thursday.

St. Thomas has at least three Canadians on its team—Humphrey, Rodden and Reid-and they are all good. Saginaw News: London is having the same trouble Saginaw is. The players are hitting the ball hard enough, but there are always fielders in the way.

Steve Griffin, the hard-hitting second baseman and outfielder of the last year's Saginaws, is looking for a job in the International League. Here's a hint for Manager Holman. I have seen grizzly bears carrying the carcasses of pigs that must have weighed 70 pounds several miles across a mountain side to their lair, and I have heard hunters tell of having seen cows knocked down as if by a thunderbolt with one blow of the forepaw of a bear. Three summers ago I spent the season in the coast mountains up in Monterey county, and one moonlight night I saw a big she grizzly bear in the act of carrying a dead cow home to her cub. I had a position on the mountain side where I could see every movement of the bear in the sparsely-timbered valley below me. The critter carried the dead in her forepaws for at three miles, across jagged rocks ten feet high, over fallen logs around the rocky mountain sides, where even a jackass could not get a foothold, to a narrow trail up rest for a moment, but went right along. I followed, and just about half mile from the beast's lair I laid her low. The heifer weighed at least 200 pounds and the bear would have tipped the beam at about 450 pounds. -Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Washing the Tiger. A good story has been copied in the papers from La France du Nord concerning a Cossack, ignorant of the French language and equally agnorant of fear, who was hired at Moscow by the lion tamer, Pezon, to clean the cages of his wild beasts. The understanding or misunderstanding was arranged by that unfortunate Tower of Babel hinzon thought that the man thoroughly understood what he had to do. The next morning the Tartar began his new duties by entering with bucket, sponge and broom, not the cage of a tame beast as his master had done, but of a splendid untamed tiger, which lay asleep upon the floor. The fierce anion appeared upon the scene and was Any sound or motion on his part would intensify the danger of the situation by rousing the beast to fury; so he quietly waited till the need should arise to rush to the hand, approached the animal, and, rfectly fearless, proceeded to rub him down, as if he had been a horse or a dog; while the tiger, apparently de-lighted by the application of cold waer, rolled over on its back, stretched out its paws, and, purring, offered every part of its body to the Cossack. Then left the cage, and would have recompare with those in the arms and peated the hazardous experiment upon another savage from the desert, had not Pezon drawn him off with difficulty.

A Clever Monkey.

There is a very popular monkey in the Zoological Gardens of the Prater Vienna just now, says a correspondent of the London Daily News, and she is much admired. "Miss Maja" has an exquisite bicycle, which she rides to perfection, imitating to a nicety all the novements of a cyclist. She jumps nto the saddle without touching the pedal, kisses her hand to everybody while she waits for the signal, then flie off at a splendid pace. From the wheel she jumps on a trapeze, and then on the wheel again before it can fall. When she has shown all her arts and graces she claps her hand, calling upon the public to applaud. She thanks tily for applause by bowing and putting her hand to her heart. The nonkey has not been trained at allonly made to look on while men and women cycled. She has taught herself everything without anyone's When money is given to her she runs to her nurse, takes her purse, and puts it in. It has been proposed to let her have one of the many cycling medals distributed in Vienna, but the societies refuse to give it to her.

The Virtue

Next to the bully as a social plague comes the bore. We all know him, day must be repeated. This line is the though his shapes are Protean. There is the social bore who consumes your precious time in dragging you through what Lowell calls the "goose-pond of village gossip," presuming in your tolerance to make life a burden. There is the ecclesiastical bore who cannot attend the meeting of a church court without speaking on every subject that comes up, who wearies you with his inanities, with "words that sound, rather than sound words." There is the mal awoke and fixed his eyes upon academic bore-in some respects the the man, who calmly proceeded to wet his large sponge and, unterrified, to apries your soul with wire-drawn subtleties, and painful refinements, and balancing of imperceptible points. How is the Christian to deal with these persons? The answer is. With It must be confessed that at times this appears to be a counsel of perfection. Yet some help to its performance may be found in calling to mind how pathetic it is that so many should spend their lives in being rial and a distress to their neighpors, and in reflecting that you, too, may have bored somebody or other in the past. The bore stands as a repremass of ignorance, stupidity, prejudice. arrogance, common-placeness. How re we to relate ourselves to it? Shall fly out at it, or denounce it, hold it up to ridicule, rush the shafts of our st withering sarcasm against it? Is there not a more excellent way? Juggling With a Day

Puzzles Offered by a Crooked In ternational Date Line.

What Day Is It Here When It Is Sunday in Manila and Monday in Hong Kong?-Rather Hard to Keep Straightened Out.

[Boston Herald.]

Everyone knows that when it is midday with us it is midnight at every place on diametrically the opposite side of the globe. In other words, the difplace so situated is exactly 12 hours. is 8 a.m. in Bombay, it is 8 p.m. in Bos- case when an event has occurred at ton, and so on around the dial. Just now all eyes are turned upon Hong Kong and Manila, which are situated very nearly, but not quite, half-way round the globe, the distance being reckoned westward. The difference in the time between Manila and Boston is 11 hours. When a Manila is 4 p.m., and the same difference holds of every hour, of course.

To change Manila time to Boston time therefore we must add eleven hours, treating the case as though the Manila Manila at 10 a.m., we can figure out at once that it was 9 p.m. with us: if the event is said to have happened at 4 p.m., then it must have happened when we were asleep, or should have been asleep, at 3 o'clock in the morning. Thus far the reckoning is easy. But now comes a very important question, which, unless it is answered correctly, may put us in error 24 hours as to the time of occurrence-how about the day of the month and week? This matter is not so simple as it may seem at first sight, for here again we must make a "correction," and unless we are clear-headed we shall make mistakes sometimes. In fact, it makes a difference, which we must allow for, whether an event is dated in Manila time or in that of Hong Kong. For example, among the cablegrams first received by us relating to Commodore Dewey's victory in Manila Bay was one dated Hong Kong, May 2, announcing, though prematurely, as it proved, the bombardment of Manila supposed to be then taking place. day was then Sunday, May 1, in Manila, but in Hong Kong it was Monday, though the actual difference in time between the two places is less a training for these operations." The answer of this question depends

When it is Monday or the west side. When it is Monday order to make progress on the third, day on the east side it is Tuesday on the west side, and so on through the week, and there is, of course, the same difference in the days of the month, the first of May, for instance, on the east side, being the second of May on the west side, and so on, though actually it is one and the same day. The reason for this peculiar state of things is that this is the line at which, by the common consent of the commercial nations, the day is considered to begin. It is not easy to make per-fectly clear in a few words the ne-

H. Robertson, registrar of the election court trial held in London in the fall of 1897, determining the right of Thomas Beattie to sit as member for the city of London, in connection with the said trial, vouchers and certificates and all correspondence relating thereto. I may say in connection with this that under section 41 of the Dominion Controverted Election Act, the judges are empowered to employ stenographers, and the expense thereof shall be considered as costs of the case, and chargeable to the unsuccessful party. Section 43 of the same act provides that the Judges shall forward to the speaker of the House of Commons a copy of the evidence or notes of evidence taker at the trial, and by an order in council dated Dec. 22, 1875, the fees to be paid the registrar of the election court for a copy of the notes sent to the speaker of the squalid surroundings." The auditor-general, when he received this account, refused to pass it for the full amount, but reduced it by 451 folios, or from 7,962 to 7,511, and the government paid Mr. Robertson $751 10 for a copy of the evidence that he had received for nothing, and which he simply mailed to the speaker of the House of Commons. As I understand it, the expenses that shall be paid by the unsuccessful party, so far as the stenographer is concerned, are $5 per day and traveling expenses, and that the charge for copying the evidence shall Mr. Robertson received from the gov-our present leaders in every departernment this $751 10, the petitioner cerment of public administration. tainly expected that the money taken fused to return the money, and the

Mr. Calvert then read the correspondence, as recently summarized in these dispatches, concluding with the statement of the deputy minister of justice to the effect that "he was very much surprised to hear that the Judges would not consider an application to compel the registrar" to refund the money he obtained, to be used to pay the general expenses in connection with the petition. The deputy minister held that the retention of the $75110 which Mr. Robertson received was quite improper, but as the judges had provided by their order that he could collect it, the department could not interfere. Mr. concluded. Now, Mr. Chairman, the expenses in connection with this trial were enormous. Of course the trial lasted a long time, and the expenses for which the overnment are responsible were also very great in comparison with other election trials; the London election trial exceed them all. Take, for instance, the South Brant trial, where two judges were employed, the same as in all the other election trials, and each judge received $100. The expenses n connection with South Brant, all told, were $248 75; in connection with North Brant, $365 52—this is the amount money paid by the government; ast Durham, $236 45; North Grey, $227 15; East Northumberland, $240 63. In connection with the London election trial the government paid for the judges, $200; sheriff, 21 days, $105;

21 days, $1 50 each per day, $220 50; crier calling cause, 60 cents; administering 131 oaths, $19 65. Then we paid Election Trial. Wr. So we have these two young men employed 24 days, and the eminent literary critic, Emile Ottawa, June 9.—When the estimates a total of $1,950 95, a sum equal to that were under consideration, Mr. Calvert, paid to two "Hansard" reporters who spend four months in this house, or connected with the London election here. I think the judges acted wrongly in this case. Whether these claims were justified or not, and the deputy minister of justice has his doubts on the point, I would ask the government if it is possible that they take such proceedings as will result in the money being returned to the treasury and from the treasury to the petitioner, who, I think, is entitled to it; and if not, I think the department of justice should at all events wipe out the order in council which cannot be of any use in the present state of affairs.

Her wheel chair was in waiting for her there, and in it she was conducted through the hospital. When she arrived where Findlater was sitting, he made an attempt to stand, but was graciously commanded by her Majesty to remain seated. Her Majesty asked where he hailed from, and he replied in a low voice, "From Aberdeenshire." Major-General MacNeill, who was in attendance on the Queen, repeated the answer, and her Majesty said, "Oh! another Aberdeenshire man." After words of commendation on his bravery the Queen pinned the much-coveted Victoria Cross on the left breast of his jacket, and congratulated him on getting the most coveted honor in the British army. Piper Findlater was quite overcome, and burst into tears at receiving such a high and unexpected honor, being quite unable to say anything for a while Her Majesty spoke to Piper Kidd, also of the Gordon Highlanders, to whom she said: "You pipers must have suffered a lot. The names of several dealers who handled union label hats and other articles were brought up, and it was decided to report to the various organizations the firms who made and sold union-made articles, so as to increase the demand for this class of goods as much as possible.

The delegates to the Social Reform Union gave a report of the last meeting of the organization. The report was discussed for some time, it being decided to continue the Kelegates. The question of tax exemptions and fixed assessments was next taken up, It was pointed out that both were un-

If we could really get that eight-hour working day which workingmen-and clerks and other men holding clean collar and cuff places are as much workingmen as the rest of us-if we could get that eight-hour working day and a Saturday half-holiday, there would be a better chance for the workingman to get the cobwebs out of his brain, the healthier and happier, and the work of level bottom runs right away from the the world would be done just as well. You notice that the first excuse the great manufacturers give when they form a trust is that production must be limited. Why not limit it by giving working people a chance to really live? That is a good concrete issue for every hour day and the weekly half-holiday. It isn't a final or an all-curing reform, but it is a change for the better, and light. a change that can be made. If workingmen will put their own people in every body that makes a law, from the board of aldermen to the United States Senate, it can be done in a jiffy. A Great Danger Threatens Our Most Popular Sport-Skating Rink Proprietors Up In Arms.

Graceful skaters skimming fleetly over the ice is a pleasing picture which, alas! has a reverse side, for thousands of cases of Hasty Consumption are traceable indirectly to this sport. The youth of both sexes, and often persons of riper years, congregate in large numbers in our rinks and skate until their bodies are exhausted, their blood over-heated and perspiration is oozing from every pore. In this condition they sit down to rest or else walk slowly home; and what is the result? A chill, a check of perspiration, a cold which settles on the weakest part of the larynx, the bronchial tubes or their ramifications in the chest, and, lastly, a cough more or less racking and severe. Common sense dictates that the pores should be opened and the circulation of the blood equalized at once by a hot foot bath, with mustard or wood ashes in it, and the inflamed throat and air-passages soothed by a medicine combining healing, expectorant

IRISHMEN AND CANADA.

Opportunities Which the Dominion Presents to Sons of Erin.

Mr. C. R. Delvin scored recently in his work as commissioner of immigration in Ireland. The Dublin Evening Telegraph having published an article denouncing the present policy of the British Government as one of "manacles and Manitoba," Mr. Delvin wrote a temperately expressed but convincing letter expostulating against the coupling of the words, and setting forth the fair play shown all comers in Canada as well as the excellent opportunities afforded by the Dominion. He succeeded in his object, for the paper immediately explained that it opposed the policy of encouraging emigration, but that if they had to go, Canada would be a good choice for their future home. The Evening Telegraph concluded as

A Nervous Toronto Woman Walked the Floor During the Night for Hours at a Time-She Makes a Statement. TORONTO, ONT .- "I was troubled with nervousness. It was impossible for me to keep still and if the spells came over me during the night I had to get up and walk the floor for hours at a time. My blood was very poor and I was subject to bilious attacks. My feet would swell and I was not able to do my own housework. I treated with two of the best physicians here but only received relief for a time. I became discouraged. One way a friend called and advised me to try flood's Sarsaparilla. I laughed at the advice but I was prevailed upon and procured one bottle. Before I used it all I began to feel better. I took several bottles and also several boxes of Hood's Pills. Now I can eat and drink heartily and sleep soundly. Hood's Sarsaparilla has entirely eured me and also strengthened me so that I now do all my own work. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsapazilla to all sufferers from nervousness, weakness or general debility." Mrs. H. F. PARM, Degrassi Street.

Outlook and Acreage in the United States. Washington, D. C., June 11.—Preliminary returns of the spring wheat acreage, with the two Dakotas in particular, subject to revision, indicate a total area seeded of 16,800.000 acres, which, added to the area in winter wheat-26,200,000 acres-makes a total wheat acreage of 43,000,000, or rather over three and a half million acres greater than last year.

The average condition of winter wheat is 90.8 as compared with 78.5 at the corresponding date last year, and 81.6 the corresponding average for the last ten years. The average condition of spring wheat is almost, if not a entirely unprecedented one of 100.9, as compared with 89.6 on June 1, 1897, and 92,5 the average for the past ten years. Nearly all the states of principal pro duction report a condition exceeding that indicative of a fall normal crop. The condition of oats is 98, as com pared with 93.3 on June 1, 1897, and 99.5 the average for the corresponding date for the past ten years.

Here and there, along the walls or in nooks of chapels, were a few silent lookers-on or figures bowed in devotion.

The clergy were coming out of the sacristy, and passing across the church toward the Borghese chapel, where the Immaculata was celebrated. Miss Cromo watched them with enthusiasm. "What beautiful purple silk stockings! and what lovely yellow clouds along their ermine! And as for the lace, I should like to get behind one or two

The two got up and began to walk about; saluted some of their acquaintances; went into the chapel of the Blessed Sacrament to look at the veiled Tamar between her twin boys, and the wolf's head that nature had taken a fancy to paint in a block of Egyptian marble; came out again and li tened to a hymn sung with a full choir and orchestra, the music of which rolled in long waves of complex harmony that, from time to time, cast up the refrain, like a pearl on the shore. Valeria sat stupefied, not hearing a word. This, then, was Miss Cromo's motive in asking her what and when she was going to write—for a pitiful theft like this! And what had she hoped to gain? Had she hoped to intercept her thus every month, and drive her out of the path?" "I could give her a thousand ideas and never miss them!" thought Valeria, with a swell of contemptuous pride.

The reading ended, and the reader folded up her manuscript. "How do! you like it?" she asked, without looking up. Her nostrils had a slight tension, her lips were slightly compressed, as if she half expected a combat, and were prepared for it. "Oh, of course it is quite charming!"

They exerted themselves to fulfill their social duties, and expected others to do the same. They could not weigh nicely to find when the exertion might be too great. One disillusion caused Valeria great disappointment. She had fancied that, in foreign countries, Americans stood by each other, and that they would have a certain union, which did not mean intimacy, indeed, but which would give to each a sense of protecon, and, at need, the strength of the whole. It was not so. The greater number of those of whom she knew much, either personally or from report, were divided by petty jealousies and dissensions, and seemed to rejoice in each other's misfortunes. They struggled and intrigued for fine acquaintances, and, when they were successful in obtaining them, assumed a state that was pitifully ridiculous. The English had more dignity. They were proud of being English. Americans were ashamed of being American, and longed to be European, and to efface their nationality as much as

An amendment was moved to drop the matter, on the ground of Mr. Madill having already undergone one year's one Edition of the Book That Was Roast ed by the Author.

The Providence Gazette of Oct. 6, 1793, contains an extremely amusing advertisement of Nonh Webster's, denouncing an edition of his book published in New York. The advertisement reads: TO THE PUBLIC.

Whereas, In the fourteenth edition of my Spelling Book, printed in New York, for Samuel Campbell, Robert Hodge, etc., the Publishers have inserted a declaration that the edition contains my latest corrections and that it is the most correct edition printed in the conti ment. This is to notify all persons concerned that the Declaration was inserted without my knowledge or consent, and that after examining the work I find it the most incorrect edition I have ever seen. There are in it between 200 and 300 errors in printing, great numbers of them very materfal ones, not to say anything of two or three sheets of the work which are printed on bad paper and old wornout letter. DISINFECTION OF ROOMS.

Vaporized Corresive Sublimate and Sulphur Do the Work. Professor Konig of Gottingen, in a recent article on this subject, says that at one time, while he was practicing medicine in Hanau, he suddenly discovered that his bedroom was thickly inhabited by obnoxious insects. A friend assured him that he could easily get rid of the pests and proceeded to fumigate the apartment with corresive sublimate. The success of this measure was most gratifying, and when the room was opened the dead bodies of various kinds of insects were seen etrewn about the floor. This incident led the professor to hope that the same means would be effectual in destroying the infectious elements of contagious diseases, and a trial in private houses after scarlet fever or measles and in hospitals after erysipelas or pyæmia gave most satisfactory results. Since adopting this method he has never seen a second case of a contagious disease which could be attributed to infection remaining in the room in which the patient had been confined.

The mode of procedure is very simple. From 11/2 to 2 cunces of corrosive sublimate is put on a plate over a chafing dish, and then the windows and doors of the room are closed. At the expiration of three or four hours the windows are opened and the apartment is thoroughly aired. The person entering the room should take the precaution to hold a sponge or cloth over the mouth and nose in order not to inhale the vapor. The following day the windows are again closed, and some sulphur is burned in order to neutralize any of the mercurial fumes which may linger about the furniture and other articles. The room should then be again aired and cleaned, when it will be ready for occupancy.-Philadelphia Record.

A TALE OF LOVE IN A FRESHET

Railroad Man Tells of How His Ardor Was Cooled.

Romance That Couldn't Survive in Blue Jeans and Gum Boots-An Agent Who Had Qualities That Soon Brought Him Promotion.

"Right here, at this placed spot in the historic Delaware valley," said Colonel J. P. McCann, traveling passenger agent of the Missouri Pacific Railway company, as the Erie train was approaching Callicoon, "I had an adventure that for a time promised to leave a vacancy in the passenger service of my company. It happened when I was somewhat younger than I am now and had a right to be moved by the circumstance that led to the adventure.

"The lady in the case was visiting at the house of a friend of mine up the state when I met her. She was a charming girl, and when she started home a week or so later I got permission from her to call and see her at her father's house. "We live near Callicoon,' she said.

'Do you know where Callicoon is?' "I knew where Callicoon was, and if I hadn't known where Callicoon was I'd have soon found out. A month passed becall, and then, having business along the Erie road, I stopped off at Callicoon. Charley Newman was agent of the Erie at Callicoon. I asked Charley, in a careless, offhand, businesslike sort of way, if he knew where Mr. So-and-so lived.

" 'Certainly,' said Charley. 'He's one of the best farmers around here. Ain't going west, is he?' 'Well,' said I, 'I don't know. He's been writing about land along our line.' "'I want to know,' said Charley. 'First I'd heard of it. Sorry. Why, yes, Joe. He lives only a couple of miles from here.' "I didn't know Charley as well then as I did afterward. I don't wonder now that his company jumped him from ticket agent at that backwoods station to city passenger agent at Jersey City. Where'll I get a rig to drive to the old man's place?' said I. "Charley showed me where to get a rig, and when it was ready I get in the buggy and started. "'Hold on,' said Charley. 'It ain't that way. It's over yonder on the Pennsylvania side of the river.'

"'Oh,' said I. 'Where's the bridge?'

"'There ain't any bridge, 'said Charley. 'You ford the river.' "I looked at the river, which wasn't far away. Fording rivers wasn't exactly in my line, but what was a little matter of fording a river in comparison with the circumstances that had called me thither? I thought of Leander and what he did once upon a time and said, 'Geedap.'

'The horse started. "'Let him pick his own way,' the liveryman hollered after me. 'Don't pull the lines on him. He knows the path.' "'The river's up a little, Joe,' hollered Charley. 'But it ain't more than an ordinary freshet, I guess.' "I have to cenfess that for a moment I wished that I hadn't stopped over at Callicoon, but I put such a base thought aside at once and went on. The road led straight into the river, and the horse went confidently forward. We were half way across, and the water wasn't up to the horse's knees. Then it began to rise higher. It kept on rising. It covered the hubs of the wagon. The horse's legs were out of sight. It came into the wagon. I stood up on the seat. It reached nearly to the top of the horse's back.

"The light buggy began to float. I climbed over the dashboard and got on the horse's back, determined to cling to him to the last. The water covered the horse. I grabbed him round the neck. The water rose to his ears. Then only his nose was out, and that was out only because he raised his head to get it out. And he was swimming. The shore was yet a long way off. Then it was that I momentarily wondered who would be my successor in office and was thankful that there would be no widow to mourn my untimely taking eff. Just as I had fully made up my mind that the golden shore was the only shore I'd reach, and that I'd reach that one within the next minute or so, the horse struck bottom, and we were soon high, but not dry, on Pennsylvania soil. I tumbled off the horse, soaked through and through, from head to foot. I had scarcely got te the ground when I heard, coming from a distance:

"Hel-1-co-o, Joe!" "I turned and looked back across the giver. There stood Charley Newman on the bank, holding his hands to his mouth like a speaking trumpet. 'I forget to tell you,' he hollered. 'that I guess she ain't home. I think she went east on No. 6 this morning.'

"Then Charley turned and went back to the station and never looked round at me once. It would take too much time and require the reproduction of language out of place in a drawing room car to tell you what my feelings were and how I gave expression to them for a few minutes on the shore of that flowing river. By and by I concluded that the best thing I could do would be to drive on to the farmer's, stay there incognite until I could get my clothes dry and then return by some other route if it took me the whole week to do it.

"'I'm glad she isn't home,' I said. 'I'm a fine looking chump to visit a lady, I "I soon reached the house and was about to holler for the farmer or the hired man when from the other side of the road came

" 'Why, Mr. McCann! Did you fall in?" Of course I needn't tell you that the voice was hers. She hadn't gone away that morning on No. 6 at all. Did I fall in? No, but I felt just that minute as if I'd fall dead. And, say, didn't I have to stay there until the next afternoon rigged out in a pair of the hired man's blue jean overalls, one of his hickory shirts and his gum boots, because her father's clothes were not big enough for me? Yes, sir. It took all that time to dry those things of mine. She tried to make everything pleasant fer me, but I want to tell you that blue jean overalls, hickory shirts and gum boots don't belong in the same class with love's young dream, and there wasn't any use. The romance had been knocked higher than Gilderoy's kite, and as soon as I could get my own clothes on again I called for my herse. The river had gone down meantime, and I got back to Callicoon all

"'Did he conclude to go west?' asked Charley Newman. "There was a real good tavern acress the way, and I asked Charley if he'd go over and look at it, and he did. ROYAL SONGSTERS.

Well Known European Rulers Who Like to Sing and Do. Few outside the intimate court circle at Berlin are aware that the kaiser has a very fine baritone voice, and that he is exceedingly fond of singing German and English ballads, which he does with a good deal of expression and feeling. His performances in this direction are restricted to the evening which he spends with his family, none but the most intimate friends and nearest relatives being admitted to the imperial

The emperor never sings unless either his wife or his brother consents to accompany him, fer singing is one of the few things-perhaps the only one-in which he is not absolutely sure of his superiority, and it is probably precisely on that account-that is to say, in consequence of his diffidence—that he really sings in & very pleasing manner. It is King Oscar, however, who possess the finest baritone voice in Europe, and experts have declared that had be been forced to sing instead of reign for a living he would have surpassed every professional baritone now on the stage. Margherita of Italy is passionately fond of singing and of music, but her husband, King Humbert, like King Leopold of Belgium, abominates the very sound of music, which grates upon his nerves. None of Queen Victoria's family professes to have a sufficiently good voice for singing to encourage him to perform solos. But they are all glad to join in singing, no matter when or where, and their voices are easily distinguishable above those of the remainder of the people singing. I never have been able quite to make out whether this is due to the peculiarity of their accent or if it is attributable to the fact that owing to their royal rank they have a right to pitch their voices higher and louder than

Du Maurier's Estimate of Leech.

All that was 80 years ago and more. $ may say at once that I have reconsidered the opinion I formed of John Leech at that time. Leech, it is true, is by no means the one bright particular star, but he has recovered much of his lost first magnitude. If he shines more by what he has to say than by his manner of saying it, I have come to think that that is the best thing of the two to shine by, if you cannot shine by both, and I find that his manner was absolutely what it should have been for his purpose and his timeneither more nor less. He had so much to say and of a kind so delightful that I have no time to pick holes in his mode of expression, which at its best has satisfied far more discriminating experts than I. Besides which, the methods of printing and engraving have wonderfully improved since his day. He drew straight on the wood block, with a lead pencil. His delicate gray lines had to be translated into the uncompromising cearse black lines of printers' ink -a ruinous process, and what his work lost in this way is only to be estimated by those who know. True, his mode of expression was not equal to Keene's-I never knew any that was in England or even approached it-but that, as Mr. Rudyard Kipling says, is another story. - George du Maurier in Harper's Magazine. Shakespeare Versus Burns. At the close of a lecture to the members of a certain literary society the following dialogue between a Scotchman and the lecturer was overheard:

"Ye think a fine lot o' Shakespeare, doo-"I do, sir," was the emphasic reply.

"An ye think he was mair clever than Robbie Burns?" "Why there's no comparison between them!

"Maybe no, but ye tell us the nicht it was Shakespeare who wrote 'Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.' Now Robbie would never have written sic nonsense as that." "Nonsense, sir!" thundered the indignant dector.

"Aye, just nonsense. Robbie would hae kent fine that a king, or a queen, either, disna gang to bed wi the crown on his head. They hang it ower the back of a chair." The doctor's face dropped, for he realized that his lecture had been given in vain. - Scottish Nights.

"Solomon In All His Glory." We have recently read a description of a donation party given to a good country clergyman, in part payment of his small salary, the principal result being 27 bushels of beans and a large variety of second hand clothing for his five children. The patience of the clergyman's wife gave out. On the next Sunday she dressed all her five children in the donated second hand clothing, and under her direction they marched up the aisle just as the good pastor was reading that beautiful passage, 'Yet Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." We need not add that the next donation party was of an entirely different character.-Pittsburg

SUDDEN DEATH OF MRS. WM. FRASER.

Wife of the Proprietor of "The Fraser," Port Stanley, Suffered a Stroke of Apoplexey.

The death of Mrs. Wm. Fraser, of The Fraser, Port Stanley, occurred last evening after an illness of only two plexy while feeding her parrot on the lawn. It was the second attack, and she never rallied. Dr. Gustin, of St. Thomas, the family physician, arrived an hour after Mrs. Fraser was taken ill, and until she passed away, at 6:30 o'clock last evening, devoted himself to the unequal struggle with death. Mrs. Fraser was a most estimable lady. For some years past she regularly spent the winter months in London, and a host of friends here will learn with the deepest regret of her sudden off. Her husband, proprietor of The Fraser, and the well known exconductor, two sons, Donald, of Port Stanley, William, of Omaha, Neb., and two daughters, Mrs. W. G. Fowler, of Detroit, and Mrs. Heneysett, of Toronto, survive, and will have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their bereavement. Mrs. Fraser was born in Devonshire, England, 59 years ago, and had Mved at Port Stanley for the past 27 years. She was a sister of Robert Fulford, of New York (husband of the late Annie Pixley), and of Edwin Fulford, of England. Mr. Fulford, of New York, and Mr. Fraser, of Omaha, are expected in Port Stanley today. The funeral will take place on Wednesday, leaving Port Stanley at 1 p.m., and on arriving here will proceed to Woodland cemetery.

NEW THEATER MANAGER.

Mr. R. A. McVean, of This City, is to Manage the Chatham and St. Thomas Houses-Plenty of Experience

The theaters at St. Thomas and Chatham next season will be under the management of Mr. R. A. McVean, of this city. Negotiations have been going on lately towards combining the two houses under the one management and the owners of the theaters have closed with Mr. McVean. Many of the latter's friends will be surprised to hear of this, as it was understood that he had accepted a summer engagement and would next season go out in advance of one of the best farce companies traveling. A good selection has been made in engaging Mr. Mc-Vean. He has had many years of experience in the dramatic world and this will be of great value to him in his managerial capacity. His knowledge of the newspaper work required in this position will be of immediate help. He was connected with The Advertiser for some years and is thoroughly posted on the advantage to be derived from the press. The theater at St. Thomas for him to put a stop to it unless he is being rebuilt on a modern scale and will be ready by September. It is to be hoped that Manager McVean will do independent booking and not allow the theaters to be controlled by the Theatrical Syndicate, in whose clutches London Grand Opera House was last season. He leaves for New York on Sunday to book dates for the both houses.
