NO COMPROMISE STAND TAKEN BY BOTH CARSON AND REDMOND NO YIELDING AT CONFERENCE

Carson Took Lead Over Chiefs and Did Most of Talking—Cabinet Meets on Monday to Decide Attitude on Amending Bill—No Immediate Irish Outbreak.

[By Special Wire to the Courier] NEW YORK, July 25.—A copy-righted cable to The World says: The failure of the royal home rule conference created no sensation because it was regarded as a foregone conclusion after the first session. Great secrecy was maintained as to what actually happened, but the World has been able to gather some unpublished facts on direct authority. Carson maintained from start to finish a perfectly uncompromising stand. He absolutely refused to consider anything short of the clean cut exclusion of six Ulster counties, together with the promise of dissolution of parliament in the fall. Such terms were impossible to the Nationalist and Liberal members of the conference, who offered their former conditions, namely, to give any Ulster county the right to vote itself out of home rule for a term of six years, provided a majority of its parliamentary electors so decided. But Carson is afraid to trust the ballot even in the counties where the Unionists have a supposedly large majority, because he fears that numbers of Unionists would either abstain or vote for inclusion. Even Ulster Unionists do not like the idea of exclusion, and no party believes in it. Carson Took Lead.

The World hears that Carson took the lead at the conference completely out of the hands of Lord Lansdowne and Bonar Law, his titular chief. He hardly allowed them to speak, and whenever they showed any sign of giving way he repudiated them on the spot. They were anxious to come to terms but Carson was bound helplessly by the instructions of the Ulster Orange Council.

Lord Lansdowne did not shine at the conference, and revealed an amazing ignorance of the accepted facts of the situation. The Irish representatives were equally against conceding one iota beyond the offer already made, and the Nationalists felt generally relieved that the offer was refused and that the home rule bill will pass in its unaltered form.

Hope for Fall of Government

The Unionists latest hope is that the government may come to grief over the amending bill. It is to be taken up Tuesday, but even the cabinet has not yet made up its mind whether to proceed with it or drop it. The bulk of the Irish party is for dropping it but will meet Monday to decide upon its attitude. The king is deeply chagrined that the conference failed, especially after the severe criticism that his share in it evoked in the Liberal papers. He feels especially sore that his ultra-ultra friends, the Orangemen, refused to make any concession to save him from this humiliation. It is not believed that there will be any immediate outbreak of Orange violence in Ulster, but when it does come the Nationalists declare themselves quite prepared. They haven't as many rifles as the Orangemen, but are fully supplied with the latest pattern of automatic magazine pistols, which are far handier for street fighting. In the County of Tyrone, the critical spot, there are twenty thousand fully armed Nationalist volunteers with five maxims awaiting an Orange attack.

AUSTRIA IS KEEN TO SETTLE ROW WITH SERBIA

Ultimatum is Backed Up by Public Support -- Serbia Has Been Arrogant.

[By Special Wire to the Courier] VIENNA, July 25.—Although the peremptory character of Austria's ultimatum and the brief time allowed Serbia to reply, came as a surprise to the Austrian public, the government's action meets with universal approval. The relations between Serbia and Austria were felt to have become intolerable. The attitude of Serbia toward Austria since Serbia's success in the last Balkan war has been unbearable in its arrogance. It was believed in Serbia that the time had come for the disintegration of the Austro-Hungarian Empire and that Austria would suffer anything rather than run the risk of a European war. Hence Serbian statesmen aspired to bring Bosnia and other Austrian Slav provinces under German and Austrian influence for several years attributed the bad trade in the monarchy and crushing taxation caused by repeated mobilizations to Serbian hostile intrigues and there is a feeling of relief therefore that matters now have been brought to a head and that Serbia will be settled with, once for all.

It is believed here that the Serbian crown prince, who is now acting regent during the king's illness, is under the influence of the war party and will reject the ultimatum. Election Postponed. BELGRADE, Serbia, July 25.—The election of members of the Serbian parliament has been postponed and the members of the old parliament have been ordered to meet in special session to-morrow to discuss the situation between Austria and Serbia. The Serbian press in its comments is divided in opinion some of the newspapers demanding the refusal of and others compliance with the Austrian Government's demands. Evacuating Belgrade. LONDON, July 25.—An Exchange Telegraph Company's despatch from Vienna says news was received there to-day to the effect that the Serbian government was making preparations to evacuate Belgrade, the capital. It adds that many of the troops already have left the city, which is considered untenable and are retiring toward the South.

Graduates from all over Canada and the United States will attend Dean Galbraith's funeral to-day in Toronto.

Europe on Brink of War Russian Bear Gnarls

Amazing Thunderbolt From Vienna Caused Consternation in Diplomatic Circles in London, Paris and St. Petersburg.

[By Special Wire to the Courier] LONDON, Saturday, July 25.—Austria's ultimatum to Serbia in which she demands that there shall be a cessation of acts which led to the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess of Hohenberg at Sarajevo on June 28 has fallen like a bombshell in diplomatic and all other quarters here. It goes without saying that it is regarded as having evoked a most grave European crisis.

There is some defence of Austria's action in view of the evidence of cumulative provocation on the part of Serbia, but the bulk of opinion is for the unexampled acerbity of the language and the drastic, humiliating nature of the monarchy's demands is such that neither Serbia nor any other independent country, even if insignificantly small and impotent from a military standpoint could possibly bow without surrendering its independence and abandoning sovereignty.

If Serbia takes this view (and there is nothing as yet to indicate what attitude will be), the Austrian Minister at Belgrade will leave his post on Saturday evening, and Austria will forthwith prepare to enforce her demands. If this were to be the only outcome, Europe might watch the struggle with comparative calm, but it is felt that an Austrian attack on Serbia would entail the gravest risk of a clash between Austria and Russia with consequences to the peace of the Continent which it is impossible to foresee.

Slavs vs. Teutons. That such a clash would not be unwelcome in some quarters where war is ordinarily regarded with repugnance, is obvious from despatches from several continental capitals. It has long been felt that a gigantic struggle between the Slavs and Teutons is bound to come, and there seem to be many reasons for supposing that the present is widely regarded as a favorable moment for the inevitable outbreak.

The political correspondent of the Daily Telegraph at Vienna sends the following: "Everybody hopes fervently that the long threatened storm will burst not because the national sentiment had suddenly become bellicose, but because the people of Austro-Hungary are sick to death of the periodic crisis which throw public and private life out of gear, paralyze commerce and inflict enormous losses on the wealthier classes, and are then settled for a couple of months or years only to break out anew. This view is shared on the boerse which has become relatively quiet since the publication of the ultimatum.

The newspaper correspondents at Berlin speak in the same tenor and say that the enormous financial burden imposed upon Austria and incidentally on Germany, by the Austro-Slav tension has become intolerable and Austria's resolute action has already cleared the atmosphere. While it is not necessarily held in Berlin that Russia will champion Serbia by force of arms, it is foreseen that such action is possible, in which case it is assumed that Germany will surely appear by the side of her ally. It is undeniable that a war against Russia would never be more popular in Germany than at the present moment.

RUSSIA DUMFOUNDED.

Will Back up Serbia in Resisting Demand.

[By Special Wire to the Courier] ST. PETERSBURG, July 25.—There has been no expectation here that Austria would approach Serbia with velvet gloves, but nobody anticipated the astonishing character of the ultimatum sent by the dual monarchy to the Balkan kingdom and presented to Government at Belgrade. The interpretation of the note is that Austria desires and intends war, as it is contended no State with the least pretensions to independence would dream of accepting such dictation.

Russia's well-known friendship and sympathy with the Serbian Slavs (a friendship which, it may be remembered, is natural as well as official) is regarded as placing the empire now in a position in which it must be prepared to take up arms. It is perhaps fortunate that the great strike now prevailing in Russia prevents the newspapers of St. Petersburg from appearing, as their comment on the ultimatum would certainly not conduce to peace.

The Council of Ministers held a four hours' session to-day and considered the amazing thunderbolt from Vienna. What decision it took is not known, and it will not be known until approved by the Czar in a further council, over which he will preside.

ULSTER VOLUNTEERS TO MUSTER IN BIG ARMED DEMONSTRATION NEXT MORE RESTS WITH CARSON

Should Asquith Show No Sign of Yielding, Provisional Government Will Probably Be Set Up in Ulster Before Home Rule Bill Is Passed—How the Situation Stands.

[By Special Wire to the Courier] BELFAST, July 25.—The failure of the Buckingham Palace conference on home rule was known definitely in Belfast last night through telegrams from the Ulster leaders, and the official announcement yesterday afternoon caused no excitement here.

The leading businessmen, clergymen, bankers and manufacturers who had declared for an anti-home rule movement were unanimous in endorsing the uncompromising attitude of Sir Edward Carson and Captain James Craig in demanding the total and permanent exclusion of Ulster from the workings of the home rule bill. The business community is suffering severely through stagnation in trade and tight money. There is unwillingness to order new stocks of goods with the fear of civil war hanging overhead. A large proportion of the commercial world would endorse a settlement of the controversy on a compromise basis, but, realizing that popular sentiment is against it, they dare not insist on anything less than Sir Edward Carson's original demand.

Mobilization Next Step.

The Ulster provisional government awaits orders from Sir Edward and Captain Craig, who are still in London. It is believed here the next step will be a general mobilization of the volunteer force as a kind of an "armed demonstration," which may impress the government. If the government is still unyielding, it appears certain, according to declarations by prominent Ulster men, that a provisional government will be set up before the home rule bill is passed. The belligerent minority has desired to seize the post office and customs house and conduct that kind of armed republic under martial law, but the conservative element in Ulster has overruled them. The present policy is to continue all the public services as they now are, not interfering with traffic or the telegraphs, so that if the government does not adopt coercive measures the ordinary life of Ulster will continue.

To Police Belfast. Belfast probably will be policed by volunteers drawn from four local regiments, who will be known as the "town guard." The same regiments also will furnish a quota of 10,000 men, fully armed, for the second line fighting force.

A so-called special service corps, consisting of about 40,000 men, most of them old soldiers, to be officered by former regulars, and having full transport and machine guns sections, will comprise the first lines of a "flying column." This force will be ready to rush to any quarter of Ulster where the nationalists defy the provisional government by rioting and reinforcing local citizen troops. It is understood the police in Belfast probably will be withdrawn immediately a provisional government is set up, thus leaving everything in the hands of volunteers.

BIG PARADE ON MONDAY IS DECISION OF THE COMMITTEE

Meeting Was Held Last Night—Over One Hundred Autos Already for the Big Opening Day of Old Home Week Celebration

A largely attended and enthusiastic meeting of the Parade Committee of Old Home Week was held last night in the Temple Building. Reports from the different sub-committees were very encouraging and where at first some opposition was met with, the merchants and business men of the city, and public spirited citizens generally are falling into line. Many merchants the reports showed are taking an active interest in the reunion, but unfortunately a few are laboring under the idea that 1914 is too poor a business year for Old Home Week. The majority of the merchants, however are convinced, and have so made themselves to the executive, that Brantford's big enough and will be enthusiastic enough to make Old Home Week a decided success. The question of when the big parade of all the merchants' parade, would take place was finally decided on last evening, the parade being held on Monday afternoon, the opening day. All the merchants will be called upon by the committee to assist this parade, and to co-operate in making it a great success. Already nearly 100 automobiles have been signed up to enter this monster parade. Merchants will have floats decorated to represent their business, and the old boys and visitors from abroad will be given an opportunity to see how Brantford has expanded. Every merchant and business man will be welcome in the parade, to have whatever floats or decorations they wish for which prizes will be given. The trouble between the executive and the baseball management has all been smoothed over and amicably settled. The parade will wind up at Agricultural Park, where Erie will be playing Brantford.

The Philadelphia Athletics will be here on Tuesday, and on this day a big old boys' parade will be held. Dr. E. C. Ashton, chairman of the Parade committee is working hard and is deeply interested in the success of Old Home Week and if the few merchants who are not already in line will only do their part, there is no doubt but that the success of the Merchants' parade will be assured.

Will Fight Duel To Settle Row

[By Special Wire to the Courier] PARIS, July 25.—A challenge to a duel was sent to-day by Judge Louis Albanel, presiding judge of the court trying Madame Henriette Caillaux for the wilful murder of Gaston Calmette, to Judge Louis Dagory, one of the judges sitting on the bench with him.

The quarrel between the two judges arose out of an incident which occurred at the Palace of Justice late last night, but the nature of which could not be ascertained.

The seconds appointed by Judge Albanel are General Jules Dalstein, former military governor of Paris and Emile Bruncau De Laborie.

Description Is Sent.

Mrs. Charlton, who may be the wife of the man found dying in St. Catharines, has been located in the city by the police, and she has given the authorities a detailed description of her husband, from whom she has been separated for some years. The description has been sent to the police of St. Kitts, who will report to the local department if it tallies with the unidentified man. Mrs. Charlton has been out of the city for a short while.

GRAVEST SITUATION EUROPE HAS HAD IN MANY YEARS, IS OPINION AT PARIS, FRANCE

Quarrel Between Austria and Serbia Can Only Be Settled With Cannon—Germany and Russia Are Deeply Involved in the Affair

[By Special Wire to the Courier] PARIS, July 25.—That Austria's ultimatum to Serbia has caused the gravest situation in which Europe has found itself for a long time is the general comment of the newspapers this morning. The opinion expressed depends almost entirely upon the attitude of Germany and Russia.

Serbia says The Journal, will not low itself to be strangled without appealing to Europe, but its adds that it regards the quarrel such as can only be regulated by cannon. Austria and Germany, according to the newspaper are simply taking the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand as a pretext to a resign more grave and vast. It concerns the recognition by the nations of Europe of the superiority of the Triple Alliance.

Other newspapers take the view that while the situation is grave it is not so desperate that it cannot be regulated.

Its Attitude.

ROME, July 25.—The attitude that Italy will take in the Austro-Serbian crisis will be simply to safeguard her interests against any change in the equilibrium on the Adriatic and in the Balkans, it is said. It is reported that two nations, the names of which were not made public, have advised Serbia to tell Austria that she will submit the questions at issue to arbitration. The Tribuna says Italy is making representations to Austria, Serbia and Russia counselling a calm and conciliatory attitude.

Mobilize Army.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 25.—Orders for the prompt mobilization of the Russian army were anticipated to-day as a result of the council of Ministers held over by the Emperor of Russia, presided at the Palace of Peterhof early this morning.

From present indications Russia appears prepared to go to any extremes rather than tolerate the downfall of Serbia.

Dufferins at Galt.

The military tattoo which was held in Dickinson Park, Galt, last night, was a great success, and easily eclipsed anything of a similar nature held in the busy town to the north. There were many present from Waterloo, Berlin, Preston, Hespeler and other points, and the affair was attended by thousands of people. The Dufferin Rifles band, under Conductor Frank C. Johnson, played up to their usual form, and their playing was well received by the crowd. The fire works were splendid, special attention being paid to this part of the program.

The outlook in Ulster is very much worse.

EMPERESS OF IRELAND BEGINS TO TURN OVER

Now Constitutes Menace to Navigation and Blasting Will Be Necessary.

OTTAWA, July 25.—The marine department was advised to-day that the Empress of Ireland, at the bottom of the St. Lawrence, near Father Point, has started to right herself. In place of lying on her side, the ship's position has changed so that her masts at low water are only 35 feet from the surface. As they might easily constitute a menace to navigation instructions have been sent down to divers to blast them off with dynamite. As to what has caused the ship to turn over the officials have not decided a view, but probably the strong currents have something to do with it.

The firm frankly announce that they must raise a large amount of money immediately and prices have been reduced to a most attractive point. See the display ad. on page 4, and visit the store to-night. Harvesting has commenced in Manitoba.

ELECTED TO EXECUTIVE COUNCIL OF THE AMERICAN OPTICAL ASSOCIATION

Charles A. Jarvis, the well known Optometrist, returned to-day from the National Convention of the American Optical Association, which has been in session at St. Louis, Mo., for the past week, when he was elected to the Executive Council of the A. O. A., the supreme organization of Optometrists of the United States. Dr. Jarvis is the only Canadian member of the association, but because of the prominent part he has taken in the development of the optical profession to its present high standard, his election was unanimous, he receiving the highest number of votes cast in the convention. At the convention Dr. Jarvis was also admitted to the Scientific section of this organization and given the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Optometrical Science. This honor is a hard earned one, as admittance is had only upon acceptance of a thesis on original research. Dr. Jarvis received the convention was a success and that he received many new and valuable ideas while there. All the latest inventions in the optical world were shown, and the good ones will find a place in the Jarvis establishment.

Armed Lunatic at a Palace
The arrest of a woman carrying two revolvers outside Buckingham Palace was mentioned at a meeting of the Bristol Health Committee on Tuesday, when it was stated that she was part owner of property regarding which closing orders had been made. She had lived in Australia, and after arriving in England last week she began to make remarkable appeals to the police. It was evident that she was a lunatic, but she disappeared, and efforts were made to track her all over the country. These efforts failed until she was arrested outside the Palace.

TWO JAPANESE TRIED TO ESCAPE FROM MARU

Rainbow's Cutter Picked Them Up and Returned Them to Ship.

VANCOUVER, July 25—As the Komagata Maru was passing through Plumper's Pass two Japanese were seen to dive over the side, and the "man overboard" signal was given to the convoying cruiser. Within a few seconds one of the warship's cutters was lowered and manned. With a strong breast stroke the two Japanese swam seaward endeavoring to combat the fast-running current, but they were speedily becoming exhausted. In the nick of time the Rainbow's cutter overtook them, and brawny arms soon hoisted the half-drowned men into the boat. They were then put aboard the Rainbow and placed under the care of the ship's doctor.

The Japanese had evidently carefully planned to escape from the ship, as when they were picked up they were clothed in bathing suits and had their clothes strapped to their backs. They were unacquainted with the strong nature of the tide running through the pass. Commander Rose, when nearing Victoria, returned the two Japanese aboard the ship from which they had so suddenly taken their departure. The Komagata Maru passed out beyond Cape Flattery last night. The Rainbow is expected back from sea to-night.

Laundry Girls on Strike

All the girls at a large Bath laundry suddenly went on strike at breakfast time on Tuesday in sympathy with a clerk and a foreman who had been dismissed. An excited meeting was held outside the laundry, and 60 of the girls made speeches. Others picketed the premises. The girls informed the management that their terms were a change in the management and the reinstatement of the dismissed employees.

DUKE'S HUGE LAND DEAL

Sir J. Beecham Buys Covent Garden — Mr. Mallaby-Deeley's Rights

It was announced on Monday that Sir Joseph Beecham, one of the King's birthday baronets, had signed an agreement for the purchase of the Covent Garden estate from the Duke of Bedford. Associated with Sir J. Beecham in this transaction is Mr. A. L. Ormrod, a Manchester stock-broker.

Only last winter the Press was full of the contract by which this enormously valuable estate was to pass into the hands of Mr. Mallaby-Deeley, M. P., for the Harrow division, for £2,750,000. The purchase was never completed, however, the reasons being stated as follows by Mr. Mallaby-Deeley:—

In the early part of this year a dispute, wholly unconnected with the financial aspect of the contract, but turning upon boundaries, arose between the Duke as vendor and Mr. Mallaby-Deeley as the intending purchaser. The financial ability of Mr. Mallaby-Deeley to carry out the contract is not and has never been in doubt or question; and, as stated at the time, he was purchasing solely for himself, and not on behalf of any one else, directly or indirectly.

The dispute resulted in legal proceedings being commenced by Mr. Mallaby-Deeley for specific performance of the contract. Before these proceedings had received and refused at various times offers for the resale of the property at considerably enhanced prices.

After these proceedings had been commenced, an original offer by Sir Joseph Beechman was very largely increased, and other benefits attached thereto, and Mr. Mallaby-Deeley then felt he was justified in accepting it, and £75,000 has already been received by him by way of deposit.

Mr. Mallaby-Deeley's Sop

Thus Mr. Mallaby-Deeley withdraws in favor of Sir J. Beecham in return for a sum at present undisclosed on account of which the member for Harrow has already been paid £75,000. On account of the new transaction a quarter of a million has already been deposited by the purchasers.

Besides the Duke of Bedford and Mr. Mallaby-Deeley, the principal figure in this colossal transaction is Sir J. Beecham, who was created a knight in 1912 in virtue of his large outlays in providing first-class opera for the multitudes, and a baronet last month. He has amassed a large fortune from pills. Already proprietor of the Aldwych Theatre, he will now become owner of the Royal Opera House, where for two seasons he has financed Russian ballet with notable success, Drury Lane Theatre Royal, and the Strand Theatre.

The negotiations were initiated and conducted on behalf of Sir Joseph Beecham and Mr. Ormrod by Mr. James White, with the assistance of Mr. Charles L. Samson, past president of the Law Society, and senior member of the firm of Grundy, Kershaw, Samson, and Co solicitors, of London and Manchester and with the co-operation of Sir Henry Paget-Cooke, of the firm of Russell-Cooke and Co. solicitors, of Lincoln's Inn.

Messrs. Goodard and Smith, Piccadilly, were the estate agents connected with the re-sale of the property, which has been disposed of en bloc. The price paid is not disclosed. According to the assessment rolls of the City of Westminster, the occupiers of property in the Covent Garden estate pay close on a quarter of a million a year in rents. That of Drury-Lane Theatre figures at £5,920 pounds.

Valuable Market Rights

The annual rental of Covent Garden Market is £20,000, and, in addition the Duke of Bedford has the right to levy tolls on the vegetables, flowers, and fruit exposed for sale in the market, as well as on the hundreds of carts which bring in the produce to be dealt with by the stallholders. From this source he receives something like £10,000 a year. Cherries are charged by the sieve, the amount being 1-2d. while for oranges the toll is 4d. a chest, or 2d. a box. The method of assessing rents to the stallholders is by the square foot.

The area (of nineteen acres) includes twenty-six streets, Covent Garden Market, Waldorf Hotel, Bow-street Police Court, National Sporting Club and several well-known printing offices.

For the last ten years the Duke of Bedford, one of the richest land proprietors in the country, has been turning his realty into cash. At present, he is the owner of 41,596 acres, but in 1904 in addition to his "private London gold-mine," he held about 87,000 acres in the country, valued at some £142,000. The largest areas were in Bedfordshire, Devon, and Cambridge-shire the total for the three counties being then 74,000. Recently, however, many of these properties have been sold, lock, stock and barrel.

William Fraser of Owen Sound was in all probability drowned while canoeing.

Austrian and Hungarian reserves have been warned to hold themselves ready.

RATHER SHABBY

Young Man Given Ten Cents For Three Weeks Work on Farm.

Hugh McIntosh, a good strong looking youth of 20, asked the police for a night's lodgings last night, and his story was one of manifest injustice. Coming to Brantford three weeks ago he found himself stranded and knowing a great deal about horses he agreed to work for a Burford road farmer. He had made no stipulation as to wages, and had during the three weeks obtained board from his boss. Yesterday he asked for a little loose change, as he thought he was entitled to some, and was handed a ten cent piece. He was told this was all that was coming to him and that he would get no more. So he has quit, and is as penniless as he was at the beginning, although he is an experienced horseman.

Light Police Business
There was very little business today at the police court, four drunks, who were all banded together from Terrace Hill last night, comprising the only offenders.

The Appreciation of Diamonds

More and more diamonds are bought, sold and worn every year. And this in spite of the fact that the tendency of diamond prices is steadily upward.

Which last fact makes the purchase of a good diamond a worth-while investment.

Our diamond display to-day is away above the average. We import our diamonds direct from the cutters and set them in our own workshop.

We are positive we can save you money.

PRICES ON THE LOCAL MARKET

Raspberries and yellow harvest apples were the principal new produce on this morning's market. The red raspberries sold for two boxes for 25c. Yellow harvest apples of a good variety were for sale by several dealers at from 25c to 40c per basket, and at 5c per quart. The outlook for the apple crop this year around Brant County at least, appears to be just medium and fair. The early harvest apples are very fair and fairly good quantity of them, but the later ones will be just medium.

So far as the meat department goes prices remain at about the same high level. The general opinion among city people that the farmers are making a whole lot of money these days appears to be unfounded according to "I was asked to pay ten dollars for a young calf the other day," he gave as an example of how the farmer has larger expenditure to-day than ever. The general opinion among the local farmers on the market appears to be that within a few years the meat supply will have to come from other fields as the farmer is going in more and more for dairy business and beef raising is not as profitable as heretofore. To-day's quotations are:

EAST LAMBTON CASE

Chief Justice Sir William Meredith is noted for his common sense and his finding in the East Lambton case is just what might have been expected of him.

It will be remembered that in a recount before the local judge 123 ballots were thrown out because, a deputy returning officer had failed to remove the counterfoils. This served to give the Liberal a small majority. There was no charge of wrong doing in any particular but simply that a blunder had invalidated the number of votes named.

The Chief Justice has very properly reversed the decision and awarded the seat to Dr. Martyn, Conservative, who wins out by a majority of four. In reaching this decision the learned judge pointed out that the law was clear that effect should be given to the manifest intention of voters rather than that they should become disenfranchised by an error not of their own commission.

The conclusion is not only logical but will be applauded by all fair minded men no matter what their politics.

THE WORLD'S UNREST

It is not going too far to say that in all quarters of the world there is an unrest with potentialities of bloodshed, not paralleled since the days of Napoleon.

In Mexico they are still at it, in Ulster the volunteers who will fight against Home Rule have been warned to be in readiness for mobilization and in the Balkans nothing but the greatest diplomacy will serve to avert another bloody struggle.

Austria and Serbia are on the very edge of open conflict and if so, with Russia backing the last named country, a general European embroilment would be almost sure to be the outcome. As far as Great Britain is concerned the fact must not be lost sight of that the Vancouver incident is bound to lead to more or less native unrest in India. Peace conferences and peace palaces to the contrary the unalterable fact remains that hostilities are bound to break out at intervals in this high tensioned, over-armed world. And the mind reels at the thought of the horrors of the next important conflict with the all round addition of the many modern devices for destructing and killing by land sea and air.

AUSTRALIA APPROVES

The people of Australia have naturally taken a very keen interest in the attitude of Canada towards the invading Hindus.

Mr. Cook, Premier of the Commonwealth, in referring to the subject made the following emphatic statements with regard to the attitude of our "underneath" cousins.

"The 'White Australia' ideals must be defended at all costs. That was a cardinal principle of Australian political belief. Japanese civilization differed radically from that of Australia which had been compelled to see that there should be no mixing of the races in her territory. That was the principle at the bottom of the Australian policy. Everywhere one looked, the need of maintaining that policy with the greatest possible vigor and alertness was emphasized."

The Sydney "Daily Telegraph" made the following comment on the matter:

"The fact that a shipload of Indian emigrants with money at their backs are attempting legally to force their way into Canada may harbor with it the germ of one of the biggest questions with which Imperial statesmen have ever had to deal. And no part of the Empire is more vitally interested in the result than Australia. The Canadian law undoubtedly empowers the local authorities to prevent the landing of these emigrants and it goes without saying that its provisions will be enforced. What else is an exclusion law for but to exclude those to whom it applies?"

If the deported Indians take their case to the Privy Council the validity of this concession is therefore what they will have to attack, not only in regard to Canada, but to the whole of the Empire's self-governing dependencies. Were they to succeed, the position here would become one of vital crisis. For if we had to open our doors to all the colored subjects of the Empire it would mean good-bye to 'White Australia.' This is the danger to which we may be sure the Mother Country would go any length to avert."

The main difficulty as far as the Overseas Dominions are concerned is of course that so many alien races are included in the term British and that they desire to enjoy all the privileges without a hindrance wherever the Union Jack floats. At the same time neither the residents of the Dominion nor of Australia can afford to have any marked influx of Asiatic undesirables whose presence would menace social conditions and tend to racial degeneration.

EUROPE ON BRINK

It is understood that this will initially take the form of strong representations at Vienna in favor of Serbia.

It will probably be pointed out that inasmuch as Serbia's declaration of 1909, to which the ultimatum refers, was made before all the powers, Austria's grievances should first be submitted to the powers with the view of a combined decision as to the necessary steps to be taken. A request will probably be made for the prolongation of the period of the ultimatum in order to enable European diplomacy to act.

It is realized that as some such Russian action must have been foreseen by Austria, it is not likely to prove effective, and the talk to-day is that Russia is prepared in that case to follow with an ultimatum to Austria.

It is declared that a Russian army is ready to support such an ultimatum, thanks mainly to her experiences in the war with Japan, as a result of which a general reorganization plan has been carried out.

The day has been a busy one in diplomatic quarters. M. Sazonoff, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, had interviews with the French, German, British and Servian Envoys.

AN ARROGANT DOCUMENT How the French Newspapers Speak of the Austrian Ultimatum

PARIS, July 25.—The prevailing tone of the French press in connection with the Austrian note to Serbia is expressed by the Temps to-day. The newspaper says the document is without precedent for its arrogance and unlimited demands, and considers that if Serbia allows Austrian police activities the independence of Serbia is lost.

A suggestion is made by the newspaper that an international commission under the rules of The Hague should be accepted by Austria and Serbia, as the question has ceased to be a local one and has become a European one.

It argues that if Great Britain and Russia felt that they could submit the serious Dogger Bank incident during the Russo-Japanese war to an international enquiry, certainly Austria and Serbia ought to be able to take a similar course in connection with their differences.

The Dogger Bank incident referred to was the firing by Russian warships on English fishing boats in the North Sea and was the subject of an enquiry by an international commission in Paris.

EVERY COUNTY IN WESTERN ONTARIO HAS BEEN RAVAGED

Invasion of Pest One of Most Serious Insect Outbreaks in Many Years.

With the discovery of army worms in Huron County, 13 unlucky counties of Western Ontario are now affected. The ravages of the pest in West Nisourri Township, Middlesex has called out a small human army to cope with it in digging trenches and using poison. In Kent, however, the farmers have made no organized effort to stop the advance of the caterpillars and there is no telling where the damage will cease unless natural forces take effect soon and stop their ravages.

Dispatches from several points tell of the worms attacking fields past hitherto it has been chiefly oats and corn which suffered. In Essex, even a four-acre field of tobacco was cleaned out. A 30-acre field of oats in Comber neighborhood, Essex County was destroyed, with loss of about 1,000 bushels of grain. A Zurich dispatch credits the voracious crawlers with rubbing a cedar telephone pole in front of the Neuschwanger farm on the Goshen line.

News from Lambton is more reassuring; farmers there are hoping the pest will not spread. Oxford, too, believes the worst may be over, although the worm is reported on an East Nisourri farm as late as yesterday.

Attacks Pea Field GALT, July 25.—This morning the department of agriculture received a report that the army worm had made its appearance in a pea field in Beverly Township. This is the first case in this county where the pest has invaded a pea field.

Decrease in Oxford WOODSTOCK, July.—While many of the other counties of Western Ontario are just now having their first experience with the army worm plague Oxford County it is thought is beginning to set the last of the pests. Mr. G. R. Green, district agricultural representative when seen to-day stated that the worms were rapidly assuming a chrysalis form or dying off. While there are plenty of the worms still to be seen throughout this section, the number is not nearly so large as it was a few days ago and discouraged farmers are again beginning to look on the bright side of life. They feel that they have had their share of hard luck in connection with the present plague. Mr. Green, while unable to estimate the amount of damage done in Oxford by the worms, says it will amount of thousands of dollars.

Growing Worse in Kent. RIDGETOWN, July 25.—The ravages of the army worm in this section continue to grow steadily worse. Since their first appearance at the end of last Sunday and Monday practically the whole of South Howard is affected. James Stevens, second concession, reports a ten-acre field of oats totally ruined last night while many farmers are cutting the crop green in an effort to save it. J. C. Smith, residing two miles northeast of Ridgetown, had a field of peas, which he was growing for the canning factory here, attacked. He started to cut the crop and draw it to the factory. Numbers of the worms, which were on the pea vines, were brought into town and during last night created havoc with the beautiful flower beds in front of the factory. From South Harwich comes stories of destruction of fields of tobacco, the pests cutting off the tender plants. No organized effort has yet been made to cope with the situation and it looks as though the whole of Howard Township will suffer through the operations of the worm.

Oat Field Stripped. COMBER, July 25.—The army worm has made big inroads in the field crops of this district. The writer was out to the farm of Mr. J. S. Ainslie, a mile northwest of the village. This farm is one of the largest in the Comber district is well under-drained and the crops until a couple of days ago gave promise of big returns. A field of 30 acres of oats is completely stripped of the ripening grain and if the grain was cut it could not exceed five bushels to the acre. In this field alone it is estimated that 1,000 bushels of grain has been destroyed by the pest. What is true of Mr. Ainslie's farm is true of many other farms in the same neighborhood. Having destroyed the oat crop the worms have crossed the lane and are now attacking a 20-acre cornfield. The corn in this field is out in tassels and if the worm can be checked, the crop will be early and the yield heavy. From 12 to 20 worms can be counted on a single leaf of a cornstalk. It is too late to save the oat crop but a determined fight should be put up by the farmers of Essex County to save the corn from destruction. It is about 16 years since the last visitation of the army worm in this district.

Tobacco Damaged. BLENHEIM, July 25.—The army worm which has hitherto not shown itself in South Kent arrived yesterday in hordes, and has already done a lot of damage. Some of the farmers who have suffered in South Harwich are: Walter Sterling, A. W.

Wiley, Thomas McCall, John A. Cameron T. H. Nichol, Garnet Thomson and others. It was not known whether the worm would bother the tobacco fields but it has already done much damage to them, one farmer reporting that a four-acre field was completely destroyed.

Lambton Situation. PETROLEA, July 25.—The latest reports from the farms in Enniskillen Township effected by army worms are more reassuring. As hinted yesterday the conditions are not as bad as reported from other counties. The number of worms is not overwhelming, nor do they seem to move from place to place rapidly. With the hatching period well over, Lambton farmers are hoping for immunity from too serious invasion by the pest.

South Huron ZURICH, July 25.—A report has reached here to the effect that the army worm had commenced its operations on the farm of Mr. J. Neuschwanger, of Goshen line, one and a half miles north of Zurich. Much excitement prevails as was shown this morning by the number of people assembled at the farm to get a glimpse of the pest that has been destroying the crops. The worm resembles the ordinary caterpillar, from which the butterfly gets its wings and life, except that it has no hair, and that its cutting equipment is distinctive and much more effective in its work. It made its appearance here some years ago but seemed to pass away with its development into winged form. They climb the stem and attack the grain on top. On this occasion in order to corral and prevent further ravages the farmer cut swaths and plowed a ditch around where they were seen working. To save as much as possible of the crop the farmer is cutting the barley and oats, partly ripe, to-day.

A bunch of worms were found on a cedar telephone pole in front of the farm. They had cut it almost through.

In East Nisourri THORNDALE, July 25.—The army worm has now made its appearance on the farm of Mr. John Pearson, 8th concession East Nisourri, just half a mile from West Nisourri border, and is still moving rapidly.

Derby Township Overrun OWEN SOUND, July 25.—Millions of army worms in Derby Township, and spreading rapidly is the latest news from the farms in the vicinity of Kilsyth, where the farmers are waging a war of extermination on the dreaded pest, which has already devastated several oat fields. The farmers are using lye and Paris green to check the inroads of the hordes. Vast numbers have been destroyed, but there seems to be no diminution in the numbers.

In Niagara District ST. CATHARINES, July 25.—Notwithstanding the belief that the numerous water courses in the Niagara district would keep this section immune from the army worm, the pest has arrived. It has become evident in large numbers in the vicinity of Niagara-on-the-Lake, and is now holding sway on the military camp grounds. In Louth Township, it has so far done the greatest amount of damage, a field of rye being wiped out in a short time.

WALT MASON. No Safety Anywhere

A motor car crashed into the tightly shut doors of an engineering works at Dartford on Monday and hurled them open. It threw a man named Frank Rider, who was standing in the yard, a distance of twelve yards, and went on through the yard until it ran into a shed.

There were three men in the car. One, the owner, jumped out before it ran into the gates, and was badly

Must Marry the Living And Bury The Dead Free, Says Gen. Villa

Rebel Leader Issues Orders That Priests Refusing to Obey These Orders Are to be Executed.

(By Special Wire to The Courier) EL PASO, July 25.—General Villa is reported to-day recruiting his army vigorously in all sections of the country controlled by him. It is known that he is recruiting men in Juarez, and the report comes from Torreón and other sections that Villa is offering such flattering inducements to men to join his army that the mine-owners desiring to resume operations are unable to secure men. Only recently Villa declared that he meant to see industry resumed even if he had to reduce his army to supply the help wanted. This recent change in his attitude is looked upon by Carranza men as another evidence to cause anxiety.

Father Antonio Janett has arrived in Juarez to take charge of the Catholic parish there under orders from Villa. He is the first priest to be assigned a parish under the new rule which Villa says he will enforce in his territory, by which he or his lieutenants will name all parish priests. Those not appointed by Villa will not be allowed to serve. The State is to pay for their services and they are to perform marriages and christenings and officiate at funerals without charge under penalty of death. It is common knowledge that there are many large illegitimate families in Mexico because their parents were never able to pay the cost of a marriage ceremony. Under Villa's orders the priests cannot refuse to perform a marriage or christening ceremony nor to officiate at a funeral, and if they exact pay for any of these performances they will be executed.

The driver and the other man stayed in the car and were not hurt, but Rider was so seriously injured that he died in a hospital two hours later. The driver was detained by the police.

Mr. Michael Basso says that 80 per cent of foreign laborers are swindled by contractors in Toronto.

CATARRH LEADS TO CONSUMPTION

Catarrh is as much a blood disease as scrofula or rheumatism. It may be relieved, but it cannot be removed by simply local treatment. It breaks down the general health, weakens the lung tissues, and leads to consumption.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is so successful in the treatment of catarrh that it is known as the best remedy for this disease. It purifies the blood. Ask your druggist for it.

JUDGE SAID THAT ASSESSMENT WOULD BE VERY UNFAIR

Reduction on Muir Schultz Properties Made.

Judge Hardy threw down his gauntlet at the hearing of the appeals against assessment in the Township by Colonel M. F. Muir and George Schultz, and declared that the assessment placed upon these properties was unfair to the parties concerned. He did not see, he said, why the dents of Ava Road should be set out for such unfair treatment as reduced the assessment from $30,000 to $10,000.

He stated that the sworn statement of the owner to the assessor as to the value of the property should be used as evidence by the assessor in the Court of Revision.

In the case of the Muir property much evidence was given to show the property known as Gaywood was unfairly assessed. In the spring of 1913 it was assessed by the Township at $20,000 and this was reduced to $18,000. The evidence showed that one exception the houses were not assessed for more than $10,000, while the Bennett bought last year for $31,000 was assessed for $8,600.

TORONTO, July 25.—A meeting of the executive of the general committee of the organization of the Presbyterian church was held on Thurs day in Knox Church, Toronto, Mr. John Penman presiding and Rev. Hugh Munroe acting as secretary.

There was a large attendance from various points in the city and from a distance. Gratification was expressed at the vote of the assembly which showed the growth of the movement for preserving the church, especially as the resolution passed at Woodstock did not commit the church to organic union, and in that respect was much milder than anything that had formerly passed the assembly. A good many people formerly in favor of union have reported that they were now desirous of having the organic union propaganda discontinued, as the agitation was hurting the cause of religion and threatening the disunion of the church. In view, however of another vote being possible, sub-committees were appointed to attend to the matter of extending the organization and issuing special literature giving information on the subject.

A number of petty thefts have occurred in the city and last night thieves were operating in Eagle Place From a house upon Erie Ave. a number of pennants were stolen, while various small articles of value have been taken while the owners were absent for a moment.

A valuable camera was taken from an automobile which was standing upon Ontario street, while a straw hat was also taken. The thefts are looked upon as the work of men who have already arrived to loot the town during the old home week celebrations. A resident of Port street had a number of flowers plucked from the front lawn during the night.

[By Special Wire to the Courier]
LONDON, July 25.—Since the failure of the conference on the Ulster situation between the leaders of the various political parties at Buckingham Palace, politicians have turned their attention to the next step to be taken in the home rule controversy.

Premier Asquith and the other members of the cabinet remained in town for the greater part of today, and several communications passed between King George and the Premier, but no meetings were held.

It is understood that much depends on the result of the meeting of the Irish Nationalist party on Monday, when the Irish members of parliament will decide what attitude they are going to adopt toward the bill to amend the Irish Home Rule Bill. The amending bill comes up for discussion on Tuesday in the House of Commons. Many of them consider that as the Ulster Unionists rejected the offer of a settlement embodied in the amending bill as originally introduced, the bill should be withdrawn and the home rule bill allowed to pass and become law under the operation of the parliament act. The government, however, is generally expected to urge the passage of the second reading of the amending bill as amended by the House of Lords. This, it is pointed out, would give another chance for discussion upon the possibility of reaching an agreement. Few, however, expect this step to be successful.

The Unionists are meanwhile preparing for a general election, in the belief that, failing a settlement by consent, Premier Asquith will advise the dissolution of parliament.

Oiling of Streets a Success
The oiling of the city streets by oil instead of water to lay the dust, has proved a great success where it has been tried out and another car of oil has been ordered by the board of works for further use. Chairman G. A. LONDON, July 25.—Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, in a speech at Melbourne, in Cambridgehire to-day, said the Government will go forward with its previous proposals in regard to the amendment of the home rule bill. This will enable each county in Ulster to vote itself in or out of Home Rule. His forecast was that the counties of Antrim, Down, Armaagh and Londonderry would vote to remain outside the provisions of the Home Rule measure, while the counties of Fermanagh, Cavan, Monaghan, Tyrone and Donegal will vote to come in under the Home Rule Government. Mr. Birrell warned the public not to be bamboozled by the newspapers into believing that there would be a civil war in Ireland. He said he was convinced that no such thing would happen. If it did the government would inevitably interfere.

Lodge Notes

ROYAL TEMPLARS

The Royal Templars had a special gathering on Thursday evening. A new electric sign had been installed and this was the occasion of the opening ceremony. A regular Lodge meeting was held during the first part of the evening when Initiations took place Dr. C. V. Emory, the Dominion Councillor for Hamilton acted as Secretary and the evening was conducted the ceremonies which he did in first rate style, without the aid of the Ritual book.

After the regular business had been gone through, the doors were thrown open to member's friends. Bro. Percy North, the assistant editor of the Royal Templars acted as chairman and immediately called upon Bro. J. Ham, M. P. P. to switch on the light for the new sign.

The next item was the chairman's remarks and Bro. North urged advancement along the temperance line and asked the members to use the words, R. T. of T, which was embedded on the sign as a motto viz "Resolved To Try." The next item followed To Try." The next item to follow was a quartette sung by the Messrs M'Gregor and Stevenson and Messrs. Townsend and Daniels, Bro. W. Carley next gave words of welcome to the visitors and Bro. North says that his mission to the west has returned thanks. Miss M'Gregor and no connection with what is called in Mr. W. Unsworth next gave a duct the report an "anti-union propaganda" and were loudly applauded. Dr. C. He has had for some years a desire V. Emory was next called upon to enter the work of evangelism, and a speech. During the course of a the way opened up last fall through lengthy speech, the doctor made a offer made by western friends delusion to the saloon and theatre signs siring him to return to that country. He has not changed his view on the should not have signs.

Bro. Brown, Jarvis and Townsend then spoke a few words. Miss Stevenson sang "In the garden of my heart," and then Bro. J. W. Shepperson spoke a few words during which he said that he hoped the new sign would attract both new and old members to the lodge room. He regretted that he, as an older member, could not attend regularly, but he assured them that he was with them in their work. Refreshments were then served and a most enjoyable evening brought to a close. Much regret was occasioned by the unavoidable absence of Mr. M. McFarland, Adjutant Hargrove, Mrs. Steel and others.

Mr. MacBeth's Position.

Rev. R. G. MacBeth who recently resigned his charge in Paris to take up special preaching engagements in the west, called at a Toronto newspaper yesterday to say that the report as to a meeting in Toronto of those desiring the continuance of the Presbyterian Church was liable to give the wrong impression. A Few Things You May Not Know About Alaska

Of course you have heard of Alaska—that cold territory of Uncle Sam's way up in the northwestern corner of the continent where gold has been found in great quantities. You have learned much about it in school, no doubt, and you have heard grown-ups talking about it, for it is a most interesting section of the globe. But here are a few facts concerning it that you may not know:

To begin with, it is not all ice and blizzards and deep, deep snow. Especially in this part of a certain elevated section of the country about as large as the state of Texas. Up in the Klondike, of course, it is very very cold; also, there is a strip of territory along the coast that is bleak and damp all year round, with no vegetation whatever growing upon it.

But men who live in the elevated part of the interior go coatless in the summer and the women wear light, summer dresses. And—imagine how strange a sight this must be—how can you see men standing on a shore of solid ice appearing waist-deep in the water? The air is so dry that they are not conscious of the cold.

Yes, Alaska has a summer—and a spring and a fall, too. During the months of sunshine, many vegetables and flowers grow in the open air. The ground in Alaska is really frozen from the bottom up; but there is a stratum of soil on top about two feet deep that is not frozen in the warm months and can be sown with vegetable and flower seeds.

There are birds, too, in Alaska, among them being northern robins, geese, swans, ducks, owls, grouse and swallows. Also you will find bees and yellow jackets fitting about in the air. Just think of it—mosquitoes! Yes, indeed, such swarms of them in the summer season that often the people have to build what are known as smudges for protection. A smudge is a fire, coaxed to almost blazing point and then covered with big pieces of moss that keep it down and cause a dense smoke that rises and drives the mosquitoes away.

Eggs sell for an average of $5 per dozen, though for that quantity, it is a single dollar for that quantity. It isn't that chickens are hard to raise in Alaska but that it costs so much to raise them, since every single thing they eat has to be imported. Also, during the six months of winter, it is necessary to keep a stove burning brightly in chicken-houses all the while.

It is only rarely that you see the midnight sun in Alaska, though the sun shines for twenty-four hours steadily on June 22. At Fairbanks, on that date each year, a baseball game between two picked teams starts promptly at midnight. The far-famed midnight sun of Norway drops just below the horizon in Alaska and a half uncertain light is visible, but not the rays.

From June 22 on, the days gradually shorten and then, on September 22, there are twelve hours of light and twelve of darkness. Three months from then, and on the same day of the month, there are twenty-four hours of solid darkness and the people have to use lights all the time.

A strange and somewhat amusing fact on the day when the sun shines for twenty-four hours is that the chickens have to be literally put to bed. No normal, healthy chicken would go to bed in the daytime; so they walk around and finally fall down from exhaustion, since they won't retire for their usual night's rest.

Therefore, the people who raise them have to drive them into their houses and shut out the light before the chickens will hop up on their roosts.

big, largely roosters—and flapped their wings every now and then.

"And the little baby chickens were so cute—lots cuter than the pigeons! They were just little round, yellow, fluffy balls with thin yellow legs and bright black eyes. And they were so teeny-weeny. Grandpa caught one of them and let me hold it a moment.

"Poor little chick, he just peeped and peeped and wiggled so that I was afraid I would hurt him, so I put him down on the ground and he ran right to his mamma as fast as his little legs would carry him.

"And then his mamma—a big brown hen—made a funny little noise to her. There must have been about fifteen of them. The mamma-chicken stood still a moment until lots of the chicks ran under her; then she ruffled up her feathers and stooped down and you couldn't see a one of those chicks!

"You knew they were there, of course, for you had seen them—but their feathers covered them just like you can pull the bed-clothes over your head and hide. Grandpa said that was the way the little chicks went to bed at night in their warm, straw-lined nests. It was so cute and the mamma-chicken looked, oh, so proud of them.

"Next we went to—my goodness, Dorothy, it's way past your bed-time. Here, jump into bed right away. I'll have to tell you some more about the wonderful things I saw on the farm some other time. Goodness me, you should have been asleep twenty minutes ago!"

covered with feathers and their little mouths when they opened them just seemed bigger than all the rest of them put together.

"One big mamma-pigeon was sitting on her nest and when Grandpa put his hand up to stroke her she pecked at him and ruffled up her feathers and squawked most horribly.

"After that we went to see the chickens. Oh, there were just hundreds of them, all in a big yard enclosed with a wire fence. Some were black and some were white and others were brown and still others gray. They scratched in the dirt and clucked and scratched up and down—especially the

The Race for the Money—How Merle Won It

MERLE'S father was a transfer man. Every small town has a transfer man. It is the business of such a person to wait on the main corner of the town with his team and wagon for business, doing such odd jobs of hauling as might come to him. Of course, it is not a very remunerative business and Mr. Jennings didn't get very rich from it. But it was an honest home for his wife and two sons. For it must be remarked that Merle had an older brother, Chester, who was a junior in high school.

Why, if we—that is, if you could make five dollars that easy, you'd be tickled. My wouldn't he be glad?"

"Well, don't worry," replied Chester cynically. "There probably won't be any fire. It isn't my luck to have such a chance."

"I should think it would be un-lucky if there was a fire," suggested Merle.

"Fiddle!" said Chester. "You baby, you haven't got the least speck of business sense."

"Go It, Bess And Jim," He Shouted.

"Don't Let That Fellow Beat Us."

One day Mr. Jennings came home sick. The doctor told him to stay in bed two weeks. Of course Mr. Jennings was worried about his transfer business and was quite discouraged. But fortunately, it was during vacation, when Chester and Merle did not have to go to school. This made it possible for Chester to take up the responsibility of providing for the family by continuing the transfer business. To be sure, Chester couldn't do nearly as satisfactory work as his father. He wasn't strong enough to lift heavy loads, but with the help of Merle he managed to get along very well.

It was not long after this conversation that something happened. Chester had said to Merle as he often said before:

"You stay here and watch the team. I'm going to play catch with Kenneth Dunn. Business is dull anyway."

"All right," replied Merle. Chester went over to the vacant lot about a block from the wagon and began to toss the ball back and forth with his chum, Kenneth.

Merle was always glad to be left in charge of the team. He felt important, even though there wasn't much of anything to do. It was a dull time, to be sure. Merle often wished he could do something all by himself for his father, who lay suffering at home. But, of course, as he reflected, he was too little to be of much use. As he sat swinging his legs under the high seat he talked kindly to the horses as if they were companions who could talk back. Once he got down from his perch and gathered a handful of grass—growing in the gutter and watched the beasts nibble it gracefully. Then he returned to his seat, reins in hand, and watched his brother in the distant lot playing catch.

Just then he was startled by a shriek. The mill whistle set up an alarm of fire. It was only a second's work for Merle, quickly comprehending the situation, to slip the reins on the backs of the team and shout: "Get up!"

Somewhat frightened at the unexpectedness of it, the horses started with a jolt that nearly threw Merle from his seat. But he stuck to it and shouted once more to his horses, turning the corner skillfully in a swift loop toward the firehouse, where the hose cart was kept. The firehouse was two blocks south on a side street next to the telephone exchange.

So quick was Merle in starting that with the first shriek of the wild-wail whistle he was off on a flying start. As the wagon rumbled down the street at a "runaway" rate of speed, Merle congratulated himself that, so far as he could see, he was the only one in the race for the five-dollar bill. The horses seemed to understand the necessity of speed. They had often made the race before and needed no urging to extend themselves. Mr. Jennings had always taken the best of care of his team, consequently they were in fine condition.

"I've got the field to myself!" muttered Merle as he held the reins firmly and urged the horses on. "I guess the other wagons were too far away."

But Merle was mistaken. He had just traveled a block when he saw coming around the corner at a fast pace a rival's team yet!

"So I'm to have a race, I see," said Merle to himself and he gritted his teeth and slapped the reins. "Come on, Jim and Bess, will you!"

The driver of the other wagon, equally anxious to capture the five-dollar fee, took the corner sharply, so that as the two teams entered the last block of the race he had a fair lead. This made Merle angry.

"Go it, Bess and Jim," he shouted. "Don't let that fellow beat us! That money belongs to us!"

The horses seemed almost human, for they fairly flew down the street in an effort to pass the rival team. It was easy to see which team was in the better condition. Inch by inch, foot by foot, Merle's team crept up on his opponent's. Finally, just in front of the firehouse, the wagons were abreast. Then, by a dexterous turn, Merle brought his team around ahead of his rival's and turned just in front of the waiting horse cart while the volunteer firemen hitched it on to the rear of the victorious wagon.

"Good for you, Merle!" shouted one of the men. "You sure took the money in good shape."

Glad to hear that he had won the race and feeling proud that he had made five dollars for his father, Merle drove triumphantly toward the fire. So quickly did he make the run that the fire boys were able to save the house before much damage had been done. As a result, when Merle was ready to give the five dollars to his sick father he was able to hand him fifteen dollars instead, ten dollars of it having come from the grateful owner of the house.

Merle's father, who was forced to join in the general admiration of his "kid" brother.

"Why," he declared, "I don't believe I could have kept cool enough to win that race. After this, Merle, you can have full charge of the fire business of this firm."

SLEEZY-TIME TALES FOR THE LITTLEST ONES

A Day in the Country.

ONLY three days more now, Dorothy," said Mamma as she undressed a very excited little girl, "and then you'll see all of the wonderful things to see on Uncle Arthur's farm. Oh, you have no idea how different it is from the city—no hard streets and trolley cars and rows and rows of houses. But green fields and plants and trees and flowers and so many living things around you—horses and cows and chickens and ducks and pigeons; why, it will seem so strange to you that I know you'll enjoy every moment of it."

"I remember the first time I ever went to the country, Dorothy, and what a wonderful time I had. Tell you about it? Well, now, let me see. To begin with Grandpa—for it was on his farm—met us at the station with a big black horse and carriage; and he let me sit right up on the front seat with him all the way to the house.

looked like until then. Such queer squatty, waddling things they were, too, with their long white necks and bright yellow bills and short, stumpy little legs! All splashing round in a long trough filled with water.

"Now watch," Grandpa said to me, "what they do when I call to them." He put his hands to his mouth and called out, "Waddle-waddle-waddle!" several times in the queerest fashion. And almost right away first one duck and then another looked around and began making noises that sounded for all the world like the way Grandpa was calling. Then I tried to do it, but I couldn't make it sound the way he did. And yet one duck—the biggest of them all, too—did look at me a moment and call back, "waddle-waddle!" I'm sure he understood me!

"Next, Grandpa took me to see the pigeons. They were kept way up in a loft, right near the barn, and we had to climb up a tall ladder to reach the tiny door of their home. But Grandpa took hold of my hand so I wasn't afraid—that is, not very much—though it was just awful high up in the air.

"Now, daughter," he said as he opened the door, oh, so slowly, "you mustn't move quickly or raise your arms; just follow me in, one step at a time, or you'll frighten the pigeons and they'll fly all about."

"As he opened the door he called out softly, 'Coo-coo-coo-coo.' There was a little flutter of wings and presently the pigeons began answering him, 'Coo-coo-coo-coo.' And then I tried it and they answered me, too. It was ever so much easier to do than to call like the ducks.

"They were the cutest little pigeons you ever saw. Some of them were big mamma and papa pigeons—and they had little baby pigeons, too. My, but they were ugly. Their little bodies were scrawny and thin and just half-

FIGHTING QUAIL

IN India—that land of so many strange things—the natives take keen delight in training quail to fight each other and make wagers on the bird they think will win. No doubt, you have seen two roosters ruffle up their feathers and fly at each other in the barnyard; well, in India, the quail are encouraged to do the same thing by the cruel natives. And they train them to be good fighters in a most peculiar way. First, a young quail is taught to eat millet seed from the hand of his master. Then, after he has become accustomed to being handled and to pick up the seed, he is placed on a table, or on the floor, upon which is a small mirror and several seeds.

as he is about to pick them up. So, enraged, he flies at the mirror.

Then an older and a thoroughly trained quail is brought on and—the young quail attacks him, thus receiving his first lesson in fighting. Like game roosters, the quail have long and sharp spurs; and often one bird kills another in a fight, while the native crowd around and make wagers and utter cries of delight and encouragement to their chosen fighter.

Her mamma told Mary she must never say such a naughty word again, as it was a bad word, and to impress the fact upon the child her mamma washed out her mouth with soap and water.

The next day Mary was again playing with the kitten, when again there was trouble, and she was heard to remark: "You is just the same kind quail that is gobbling up the seed just

The Story of Richard Doubledick

His object was to get, he thought he might as well die as to be the trouble of my relative's Christian name, Richard, but he was better as Dick. He dropped his own on the road down and took Doubledick. He was passed and Doubledick, age twenty-five foot ten, native place which he had never been in life. There was no cavalry regiment when he limped over here with half a shoe in his bare leg as he enlisted into a regiment and was glad to get it, forget all about it.

You are to know that this time had gone wrong and his heart was in the right place was sealed up. WORLD'S GREATEST SHORT STORIES

NO. VII. The Story of Richard Doubledick.

BY CHARLES DICKENS

PART I. IN the year 1799 a relative of mine came limping down on foot to this town of Chatham. My relative came to Chatham to enlist in a cavalry regiment if a cavalry regiment would have him; if not, to take King George's shilling from any corporal or sergeant who would put a bunch of ribbons in his hat. His object was to get shot, but he thought he might as well ride to his death as be at the trouble of walking. My relative's Christian name was Richard, but he was better known as Dick. He dropped his own surname on the road down and took up that of Doubledick. He was passed as Richard Doubledick, age twenty-two, height five foot ten, native place Exmouth, which he had never been near in his life. There was no cavalry in Chatham when he limped over the bridge here with half a shoe to his dusty feet, so he enlisted into a regiment of the line and was glad to get drunk and forget all about it.

You are to know that this relative of mine had gone wrong and run wild. His heart was in the right place, but it was sealed up. He had been betrothed to a good and beautiful girl whom he had loved better than she—or perhaps even he—believed, but in an evil hour he had given her cause to say to him solemnly: "Richard, I will never marry another man. I will live single for your sake, but Mary Marshall's lips—her name was Mary Marshall—never address another word to you on earth! Go, Richard! Heaven forgive you!" This finished him. This brought him down to Chatham. This made him Private Richard Doubledick, with a determination to be shot. There was not a more dissipated and reckless soldier in Chatham barracks in the year 1799 than Private Richard Doubledick. He associated with the dregs of every regiment, he was as seldom sober as he could be and was constantly under punishment. It became clear to the whole barracks that Private Richard Doubledick would very soon be flogged.

Now the captain of Richard Doubledick's company was a young gentleman not above five years his senior, whose eyes had an expression in them which affected Private Richard Doubledick in a very remarkable way. They were bright, handsome, dark eyes—what are called laughing eyes generally—and, when serious, rather steady than severe—but they were the only ones now left in his narrowed world that Private Richard Doubledick could not stand. Unabashed by evil report and punishment, defiant of everything also and everybody else, he had but to know that those eyes looked at him for a moment, and he felt ashamed. He could not so much as salute Captain Taunton in the street like any other officer. He was reproached and confused, troubled by the mere possibility of the captain's looking at him. In his worst moments he would rather turn back and go any distance out of the way than encounter those two handsome, dark, bright eyes.

One day, when Private Richard Doubledick came out of the Black Hole, where he had been passing the last eight and forty hours and in which retreat he spent a good deal of his time, he was ordered to betake himself to Captain Taunton's quarters. In the stale and squalid state of a man just out of the Black Hole, he had less fancy than ever for being seen by the captain, but he was not so mad yet as to disobey orders, and consequently went up to the terrace overlooking the parade ground, where the officers' quarters were, twisting and breaking in his hands as he went along a bit of the straw that had formed the decorative furniture of the Black Hole.

"Come in!" cried the captain when he knocked with his knuckles at the door. Private Richard Doubledick pulled off his cap, took a step forward and felt very conscious that he stood in the light of the dark, bright eyes. "There was a slight pause. Private Richard Doubledick had put the straw in his mouth and was gradually doubling it up into his windpipe and choking himself.

"Double-dick," said the captain, "do you know where you are going to?" "To the devil, sir," faltered Doubledick. "Yes," returned the captain. "And very fast." Private Richard Doubledick turned the straw of the Black Hole in his mouth and made a miserable salute of acquiescence. "Double-dick," said the captain, "since I entered his majesty's service, a boy of seventeen, I have been pained to see many men of promise going that road, but I have never been so pained to see a man determined to make the slenderest journey as I have been, ever since you joined the regiment, to see you." Private Richard Doubledick began to find a film stealing over the floor at which he looked, also to find the legs of the captain's breakfast table turning crooked, as if he saw them through water. "I am only a common soldier, sir," said he. "It signifies very little what such a poor brute comes to."

"You are a man," returned the captain, with grave indignation, "of education and superior advantages, and if you say that, meaning what you say, you have gone lower than I had believed. How low that must be I leave you to consider, knowing what I know of your disgrace and seeing what I see." "I hope to get shot soon, sir," said Private Richard Doubledick, "and then the regiment and the world together will be rid of me." The legs of the table were becoming very crooked. Doubledick, looking up to steady his vision, met the eyes that had so strong an influence over him. He put his hand before his own eyes, and the breast of his disgrace jacket swelled as if it would fly asunder. "I would rather," said the young captain, "see this in you, Doubledick, than I would see 5,000 guineas counted out upon this table for a gift to my good mother. Have you a mother?" "I am thankful to say she is dead, sir."

"If your praises," returned the captain, "were sounded from mouth to mouth through the whole regiment, through the whole army, through the whole country, you would wish she had lived to say, with pride and joy, 'He is my son!'" "Spare me, sir," said Doubledick. "She would never have heard any good of me. She would never have had any pride and joy in owning herself my mother. Love and compassion she might have had, and would have always had, I know, but not—spare me, sir! I am a broken wretch, quite at your mercy!" And he turned his face to the wall and stretched out his imploring hand.

"My friend"—began the captain. "God bless you, sir!" sobbed Private Richard Doubledick. "You are at the crisis of your fate. Hold your course unchanged a little longer and you know what must happen. I know even better than you can imagine, that after that has happened, you are lost. No man who could shed those tears could bear those marks."

"I fully believe it, sir," in a low, shivering voice said Private Richard Doubledick. "But a man in any station can do his duty," said the young captain, "and in doing it can earn his own respect. You are at the crisis of your fate. Hold your course unchanged a little longer and you know what must happen. I know even better than you can imagine, that after that has happened, you are lost. No man who could shed those tears could bear those marks."

"I understand you. I will be a watchful and a faithful one." "I have heard from Private Richard Doubledick's own lips that he dropped down upon his knee, kissed that officer's hand, arose and went out of the light of the dark, bright eyes an altered man."

In that year, 1799, the French were in Egypt, in Italy, in Germany—where not? Napoleon Bonaparte had likewise begun to stir against us in India, and most men could read the signs of the great troubles that were coming on. In the very next year, when we formed an alliance with Austria against him, Captain Taunton's regiment was sent to India. And there was not a finer non-commissioned officer in it—no, not in the whole line—than Corporal Richard Doubledick.

In 1801 the Indian army were on the coast of Egypt. Next year was the year of the proclamation of the short peace, and they were recalled. It had then become well known to thousands of men that wherever Captain Taunton, with the dark, bright eyes, led there, close to him, ever at his side, firm as a rock, true as the sun and brave as Mars, would be certain to be found while life beats in their hearts that famous soldier, Sergeant Richard Doubledick. Eighteen hundred and five, besides being the great year of Trafalgar, was a year of hard fighting in India. That year such wonders done by a sergeant major who cut his way single handed through a solid mass of men, recovered the colors of his regiment, which had been seized from the hand of a poor boy shot through the heart, and rescued his wounded captain, who was down and in a very jungle of horses' hoofs and sabers—saw such wonders done, I say, by this brave sergeant major that he was specially made the bearer of the colors he had had risen from the ranks. Sorely cut up in every battle, but always re-encouraged by the bravest of men—for the fame of following the old colors, shot through and through, which Ensign Richard Doubledick had saved, inspired all breasts—this regiment fought its way through the peninsula war up to the investment of Badajos in 1812. Again and again it had been chased through the British ranks until the tears had sprung into men's eyes at the mere bearing of the mighty British voice so exultant in their valor, and there was not a drummer boy but knew the legend that wherever the dark, bright eyes, and Ensign Richard Doubledick, who was devoted to him, were seen to go, there the boldest spirits in the English army became wild to follow. Conan Doyle In Jasper Park

Sir Conan Doyle, Lady Doyle and party in Jasper Park. It will be observed that Lady Doyle is standing in British Columbia and Sir Conan is in Alberta.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, during his recent visit to the Dominion, was impressed by nothing so much as by our national parks. His journey from Great Britain was primarily to inspect the latest of these great national reserves—Jasper Park, along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific—and he was truly delighted with his trip. "It was the most enjoyable adventure we ever had," said Sir Arthur, before sailing. "It was like a Garden of Eden; we just wandered about among the animals and began to think we were all alone in the world until we bumped up against a huge cinnamon bear, then 'our dreams' vanished and so did we."

As a result of Sir Arthur's visit, Canada's national parks, and Jasper in particular, will soon be better known to European tourists. It is the famous author's intention to make use of the good material he found in Jasper Park for another book. Mr. J. B. Harkin, Commissioner of Dominion Parks, has already shown how valuable these national reserves are to Canada from a commercial standpoint. Once their reputation as ideal playgrounds becomes known throughout the world, they will attract travellers by the thousand. His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught is among those who took upon the creation of these great reserves with warm approval. The Governor-General has gone on record as saying: "I do not think that Canada realizes what an asset the nation possesses in the parks. These areas have been preserved from the vandal hand of the builder for the use and enjoyment of the public, who may take their holidays there and keep close to nature under the most comfortable conditions, amassing a store of health which will make them better able to cope with the strenuous life to which they return after their vacation."

"When deciding on where to take their holidays, Canadians might well consider," continues the Governor-General, "the claims of places within their own frontiers, and spend their money in the Dominion, instead of carrying it away to swell the millions annually spent in Maine, in Florida and in California." Hundreds of millions of dollars are spent by tourists in France, Switzerland, Italy and other old world countries and the figures indicate that Canada—with incomparable scenic attractions—can reasonably expect an annual revenue from the tourist traffic which will bulk far into the millions and justify the expenditure of large sums of public money upon development and work to render its scenic attractions easily, comfortably and safely accessible.

However, the commercial side of national parks is only an incident, though, indeed, a very important one. National Parks exist primarily to the needs of the Dominion's own people. National Parks are in reality national recreation grounds. They are set aside because it is being recognized more and more that recreation where fresh air, sunshine, beautiful national scenery are combined, means an uplifting of spirit, a renewal of strength of body, a stimulation of mind. National Parks provide the means of recreation in the great, out-of-doors for all who wish to take advantage of them; they stand out as a national recognition that recreation in the out-of-doors is essential for the physical, mental, moral health of the people.

The name park has apparently created some confusion in the public mind in regard to National Parks. The city park is a breathing space which the traveller needs as a necessity for their well being, but for the most part it is artificial in appearance and small in area. The national park, on the other hand, is huge in area and in reality is a wilderness in its natural state. A city breathing spot can in a small way provide refreshment of mind and body but adequate relations and recuperation is realized only from the influence of nature—the nature of the wilderness. As yet in Canada the people for the most part can reach, without great difficulty, many places where nature is still in its wild state, but Europe and the United States teach the lesson that time will soon change this unless precautions are taken now. There are a few matters of more importance to the well-being of the city dwellers than facilities for getting close to nature. If all Canada's city dwellers are to be ensured of such facilities—and all require them—the time, Mr. Harkin says, has arrived for making provision. What is required is quite distinct from the park areas that a city can itself provide, namely breathing spots in the city or picnic parks of one hundred or two hundred acres in the suburbs. What is required is an area in its natural state large enough to constitute a square wilderness, an area measured in square miles, where all who wish may camp and roam and holiday. A place which may not provide as spectacular a scene as the Mountain Parks of the west but which like them, will belong to and be free to all the people, and will be preserved for them from the exploiter and the vandal for all time. Each year's delay in the creation of such parks will increase the difficulties in the way of their establishment. If action is taken now, the poor of Canada's cities, and the public in general, will for all time, says this expert be sure of a place where they can secure the advantages of recreation in the out-of-doors. Playgrounds and camp sites such as suggested would mean much for the country, because of their uplifting effect upon the city children. A concrete illustration of this is in the condition reported in 1909 for Chicago. It was found there that within a half mile radius of her twelve playgrounds juvenile delinquency had decreased 44 per cent, while the same year it had increased eleven per cent. in the city as a whole. If it is right for the country to spend millions on charitable and penal institutions it is surely wise to spend something on measures which will help to make better citizens and thus render penal and charitable institutions less necessary. But to revert to Jasper park, it has been the business of the Grand Trunk Railway system for many years to find out, develop and open to the tourist from time to time new pleasure resorts. Through the efforts of the Grand Trunk, more than all other agencies, the Highlands of Ontario, Muskoka and the Lake of Bays were made known to those who seek health and happiness in the native forests. The Lake Lands of Northern Ontario, Temagami and the waving wilderness that reaches from Georgian Bay to Hudson Bay have, within the past decade, become known, and have attracted hundreds of thousands of lovers of the outdoors. With the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific there has been opened to the traveller and the tourist a new country, grander and greater than has yet been made accessible upon the American continent. From Edmonton west to Prince Rupert, the new line travels through a veritable wonderland—a land of great lakes, majestic mountains, deep canyons and mighty rivers.

Jasper Park, situated in Northern Alberta has within its borders the most varied and fascinating scenery. It comprises an area of 1,000 square miles to miles on each side of the railway from Parkgate to the Yellowhead pass. It possesses innumerable snow-capped peaks, waterfalls, canyons and crystal lakes, and at Miette 14 miles from Fiddle Creek, some remarkable hot springs have been discovered, which seem likely to rank with the famous springs of the Continent. These springs have a temperature of from 112 degrees to 128 degrees

Fahrenheit, and possess valuable curative properties. The main valley of the park is the Athabasca, along which the railway line runs. It is from one and one-half to three miles broad and affords wonderful panoramic views of the ranges of snowy peaks, thrusting their rugged heads often above the clouds. The Athabasca river widens out into the park into two fine lakes, Brule Lake and Jasper Lake. To the south of Bruce Lake rises Folding Mountain, a peculiarly shaped rocky mass with precipitous sides. A little to the west of the lake is Fiddle Creek townsite near which the Grand Trunk Pacific plans to erect a fine hotel, the Chateau Miette. One of the sights of this district is in the Fiddle Creek canyon, with sheer walls of rock over 200 feet high. From Fiddle Creek a trail now leads to the hot springs, but it is intended in the near future to build a carriage road which, when completed, will be one of the finest scenic drives in the mountains. Twenty-five miles west of Fiddle Creek is Jasper townsite, the officials headquarters of the park and the residence of the superintendent. The town has an ideal situation on the north bank of Athabasca and has been laid out on artistic lines which provide splendid picnic grounds.

It is from one and one-half to three miles broad and affords wonderful panoramic views of the ranges of snowy peaks, thrusting their rugged heads often above the clouds. The Athabasca river widens out into the park into two fine lakes, Brule Lake and Jasper Lake. To the south of Bruce Lake rises Folding Mountain, a peculiarly shaped rocky mass with precipitous sides. A little to the west of the lake is Fiddle Creek townsite near which the Grand Trunk Pacific plans to erect a fine hotel, the Chateau Miette. One of the sights of this district is in the Fiddle Creek canyon, with sheer walls of rock over 200 feet high. From Fiddle Creek a trail now leads to the hot springs, but it is intended in the near future to build a carriage road which, when completed, will be one of the finest scenic drives in the mountains. Twenty-five miles west of Fiddle Creek is Jasper townsite, the officials headquarters of the park and the residence of the superintendent. The town has an ideal situation on the north bank of Athabasca and has been laid out on artistic lines which provide splendid picnic grounds.

These springs have a temperature of from 112 degrees to 128 degrees Fahrenheit, and possess valuable curative properties. MRS. PANKHURST WRITES A LETTER TO THE KING Claims Suffragettes Should Be Granted Interview Same as Irish Leaders.

LONDON, July 24.—Mrs Emmeline Pankhurst has written a letter to the King reiterating her demand for a personal interview and claiming that since His Majesty, of his own initiative had invited certain militant men, namely Carson, Craig, Dillon and Redmond, to Buckingham Palace, the Suffragettes should be awarded the same right of an interview. The letter was conveyed to the palace to-night by Lady Isobel Margerson and another, but they were refused admission and told they might forward the letter to the king's secretary who would send it to the Home office. The women, dissatisfied with this reply announced their intention to present the letter at the palace again to-morrow.

FATAL MOTOR ACCIDENT OCCURRED AT OAKVILLE

At Sharp Turn Car Skids and Upsets Chauffeur is Killed.

OAKVILLE, July 24.—A fatal accident occurred at 7 o'clock yesterday morning at the foot of what is known as the Sixteen Hill, about four miles from town. William Bartrup of Bowmanville was driving an Overland car containing Elias Trimm, his wife and daughter of Darlington, travelling west. The car was going, it is stated, at a terrific rate of speed, although Bartrup was cautioned by Mr. Trimm not to travel so fast. At the foot of the steep hill is a sharp turn, the steering gear failed to respond, and the car turned turtle, skidding about fifteen feet from the impetus of its speed.

The three passengers were thrown out of the car, the daughter receiving a broken arm. The chauffeur was pinned beneath the back of the seat, the base of his skull was fractured, and he received other injuries sufficient to cause almost instant death. Deceased was an Englishman, twenty-one years of age, and was a member of the Sons of England and the Odd-fellows. The body was prepared for burial here, and shipped to Bowmanville this evening.

THE PRISONER COLLAPSED IN COURT ROOM

Tragic Scene at French Murder Trial Today in Paris.

(By Special Wire to The Courier)

PARIS, July 25.—Madame Henriette Caillaux soon after she was brought into court today for the sixth day's hearing of the charge of wilful murder of Gaston Calmette, totally collapsed when the reading began of the letters handed in by Madame Gueydan. She was carried insensible from the court.

The sitting of the court was immediately suspended amid great uproar.

As soon as the court had opened today Maitre Labori began reading of the Gueydan letters. He remarked when he took up the second one:

"In this you will find burning love, but nothing indecent as a common rumor has indicated."

In the letter M. Caillaux writing to the present Madame Caillaux before his divorce from Madame Gueydan, referred to the happiness he would feel when he could "press a million kisses over your dear body."

While the reading was going on Madame Caillaux, with her head bent low, was crying bitterly. Her sobs could be heard all over the court room.

Then with a sigh she fell prostrated to the floor. Two republican guards standing near, raised her and carried her out of the chamber.

The four judges at once rose from their seats and Judge Albanel announced the suspension of the hearing.

In the meantime, Mme. Caillaux had been laid upon a bench in an ante-room where she was surrounded by doctors. One of the Republican guards took off his tunic and made a pillow for her. The physicians, who had thought she was suffering merely from a passing fainting spell, decided when she remained unconscious, to give her a hypodermic injection of ether.

Madame Caillaux appeared to have broken down completely and was breathing with difficulty, and such was her condition, that her husband was admitted to her side.

The letters were written in the second order singular indicating the closest friendship. The first of them said:

"My dear little Riri (an affectionate diminutive for Henriette) when I met thee I felt the impulsion of all my being towards thee. I was unhappy. I was humiliated and wounded. I threw myself towards thee with a furious passion. With splendid courage thou hast reconquered thy liberty asking me but one promise—to give thee my love. There was between another person and myself such a difference of character—"

While this portion of the letter was being read Madame Caillaux disappeared completely behind the side of the prisoners' enclosure and her crouched body was shaken with nervous tremors. The reading continued:

"We have everything to fear from a woman's fury."

M. Caillaux in his missive, then entered into the details of the local political situation and other matters and said he thought he might not enter the contest at the general elections for the chamber of deputies in 1910.

The second letter sixteen pages in length was begun on October 18, 1909, and finished on the following day. It was written on the official note paper of the Prefecture of the department of the Sarthe, and said:

"My beloved Little Riri—At last I have a minute to write thee."

Then followed a long account of a cattle show at Le Mans and of a visit by M. Caillaux to Paris and it then resumed:

"Thou must be very reasonable and stay at home for the present. I fear only one thing—blackmail. Perhaps someone will make a scandal. Sometimes I am very discouraged. What a life—"

"I have but one consolation—three." The letter concludes:

"A thousand million kisses over all your adorable little body."

TRAINED NURSE SENT TO MERCER REFORMATORY

PETERBORO, July 25.—Mary Nixon, a trained nurse, leaving a patient in a cab at the door, entered Turnbull's departmental store a week before. She was arrested, and on being tried at the police court this morning, she was sentenced to the Mercer Reformatory for six months. Del Chase Was Chased After Four Innings

Brantford Lost At Saint Thomas Yesterday, 8-1.

Star Heaver Got His Bumps in Proper Style.

ST. THOMAS, July 25.—The Saints woke up yesterday and trotted the Red Sox 8 to 1. It was a slugging match for the Saints, who garnered 14 bingles. Chase started for Brantford, but retired in favor of Deneau in the first of the fifth, after six runs had been scored off his delivery.

Deneau pitched steady ball and but three bingles were secured off him. Reilly worked for St. Thomas and had everything breaking fine. The whole line-up looked different and a fast exhibition was given. Craven and Kading started at bat, Kading getting two blows, a sacrifice fly and sacrifice hit, and was hit once in five trips up. Dudley and Barrett both looked good both in the field and at bat. The score:

NOTED BILLIARD MEN AT DINNER GIVEN TO ENGLISH CHAMPION

DINNER TO MELBOURNE INMAN. R. B. BENJAMIN, GEORGE SLOSSON, WILLIE HOPPE, MAURICE DALY, MELBOURNE INMAN, T. W. WALSH, A. TROESCHER.

Preliminaries of one of the greatest international billiard matches known to the history of billiards, which is to be played in New York, Chicago and Canada within the next three months, were discussed by experts in that sport at a complimentary dinner given to Melbourne Inman, the English champion, and "Willie" Hoppe, the American champion, in New York. Some twenty men, many of them billiardists of world wide fame, representatives of billiard table manufacturers, sporting writers and others were in attendance.

Sudden Jump of the Boston Braves Looks Like Record

THE GRAND OLD PASTIME When you've figured out a cinch With a double-coppered clinch That it couldn't happen so, Merely twist the situation Upside down and with elation Quickly kick in with your dough.

These may sound like harsh, not to say cruel, words, but we have the papers and the proof. "George Stallings told us one day, as we have mentioned before, that he would be out of last place before August. When he issued that statement his club had won four games and lost eighteen. On the same date Pittsburgh had won fifteen games and lost two. Boston's percentage was .181; Pittsburgh's was .804.

On Sunday, in Cincinnati, Stallings made good his boast with ten days lost in July. And the club he first passed to emerge from the rut was Pittsburgh. In two months' time the worst looking club, then, had wiped out a margin of 715 points against the best looking club at that date.

Record Mystery "I've followed baseball for thirty years," says official scorer John H. Gruber, "but the showing of the Pittsburgh team is the greatest mystery the game has ever known." The Yanks of 1908 slipped from first to last place, however, showing that it can be done if you go at it in the proper way and at the proper speed. Freddie Welsh will fight Ritchie upon the same terms that Ritchie set for Welsh. In other words Welsh is to be allowed to battle for his health deriving the benefit of an evening's exercise.

Sense And Nonsense

A rector and his churchwarden were playing a round of golf. The man of the cloth was completely off his game, and after fooling most of his shots and suffering from the disadvantage of being unable to use the common expletives which give comfort to the ordinary golfer, he gave up in despair. "Cheer up my friend," consoled the layman. "There's one thing—you will get your own back when you have to bury me."

The ball player has the greatest contempt for the fan, and yet it is the fan who pays his salary. Old General Public is undoubtedly a hard taskmaster. The rooster isn't interested in the money side of baseball. The player who makes a good catch is a hero and the man who strikes out in a pinch is a horse thief and a murderer.—N. Y. World.

Sporting Comment

"I am amazed at the size of your city," said President Ban Johnson of the American League last night in Toronto, before his departure for Detroit, along with President Barrow, of the International League. These two baseball moguls arrived yesterday morning and were the guests at a civic banquet at the National Club, where speeches were made by several gentlemen, including Sir Allen Aylesworth, formerly Minister of Justice for Canada. The latter made a hit with President Johnson, who remarked that if Toronto had more speakers and fans like Sir Allen they would be in the big league right away, the American League head being surprised at Sir Allen's knowledge of the game. Talk of Major League ball for Toronto is coupled with President Johnson's visit, but it is a little too early for such talk. However the favorable impression carried away by President Johnson of Toronto will go a long way when it comes to forming a third major league.

Canadian League Notes

Rough Work at Montreal. Toronto Telegram: "The old rough work was in evidence in Montreal last Saturday between Nationals and the Irish Canadians, and it is regrettable if the big four has not enough control over its club to carry out its avowed policy of providing clean lacrosse. When the difference of the players cannot be subdued by the referees but must be the subject of police court attendances the national game certainly receives a black eye."

Gilhooley Yanked Again. Hamilton Spectator: The Hamilton Baseball club directors and Manager White are confronted with another bit of trouble, with player Gilhooley again causing the rumpus. Gilhooley is the player who was suspended some time ago for indifferent playing. At that time it was felt by some of the fans and by the press that there was room for reasonable doubt in his case, and finally, at the command of Secretary Farrel of the National Association, to whom Gilhooley carried his troubles, Gilhooley was finally reinstated. An effort was made to trade him, but his services were in demand, and when Cunningham and Broadbent met with their accidents he was used in the game, playing regularly until early in the first game Wednesday when Manager White yanked him for loafing.

Pari-Mutuels on all Tracks. Hamilton Spectator: It seems evident that the pari-mutuel betting machine will succeed the bookies on all the Canadian tracks next year. The indications all point that way, with the result that a great deal of interest will be taken in the test case now under way in British Columbia to decide whether or not betting machines can be construed as gambling under the Miller act. The officials of the Hamilton Jockey Club have been looking into the matter of installing machines here and only recently some data on them were received here. However, an officer of the local club stated this morning that nothing definite had decided upon, and that as far as the kiew-thing would be done.

JOHNSON MAY PITCH NOW CHICAGO, July.—Judge Baker of the appellate court yesterday refused a petition of the Cincinnati Nationals that he grant a stay of dissolution of the injunction prohibiting Pitcher Johnson from playing with the Kansas City Federals. Judge Foell has dissolved the injunction and there is now no legal impediment to Johnson's playing.

Sir William Meredith decided in favor of Dr. Martyn in the East Lambton recount appeal.

GRANDOLDDOPE

(By Grantland Rice.)

Kidding the eminently honorable Bombardier Wells has been a popular arrangement for some time, but in place of being spoofed it is now belief that Mr. Wells should be given greater credit than any other denizen of pugdom.

We make this statement without any thought of levity. Figure it out for yourself. Here we have a prize fighter who has been knocked out in every habitable spot on the globe. He has been hammered to a gory pulp by every known nationality, including translations into the Scandinavian. Al Palzer killed him in four rounds. Gunboat Smith murdered him in two or three and Carpenter tore him off inside of a minute or so. All the way through, against average performers, Wells has been unable to carry on his profession through four rounds.

But a career that would have terminated the great receipts of any other fighter—a career that would have been a light to the rest of the tribe—has seemingly lifted. Wells all the higher. After all this pounding and piffle do we find Mr. Wells eliminated forever, as one might think? Not exactly. On the contrary, as the phrase goes, we find Mr. Wells matched for another championship with another $35,000 house in the offering and a long line already forming to purchase, choice seats.

Now any winner or renowned victor can put this sort of thing across without much effort, but it takes a genius to get beaten constantly and still retain drawing power at the gate. And the joke of it is that Wells has an outside chance to land a wallop before Carpenter taps his jaw, and, by landing this wallop, to become the heavy-weight pale face champ of the ring.

Quite So.

Our English correspondent at the front sends us a copy of the London Times with this paid ad inserted in the personal column of the paper.

"In loving memory of British rowing which passed away at Henley on Saturday, July 4. Deeply lamented by many sorrowing followers, who here-place their regret on record."

If Uncle Sam should issue any paid regret for his 1914 record, the bill would soon call for another congressional appropriation.

Figured from this date a year ago or thereabouts in comparison with to-day's standing, both Giants and Athletics have suffered heavy losses and yet are leading their fields. The Mackmen are 101 points back of their 1913 standing at this stage of July. The Giants are 94 points behind. And yet, in spite of these deficits, the two leaders are still comfortably ensconced in front of the two parades.

The biggest gain in percentage points, showing the greatest improvement in the past year, has been established by Detroit, with a jump of 170 points above July 20 1913. The next biggest gain has been established by the two St. Louis clubs, Cards and Browns, with 120 points uplift. The biggest deficit is shown by Cleveland, who at this date a year ago possessed the tidy figures of .593. The Naps have lost over 250 points, which is an eloquent explanation of the main reason for their skidding from second place to last.

Discussing sudden and startling changes in the percentage column, the record slump belongs to our Uncle Samuel. A year ago his percentage was something like 1019. To-day it is about .121. Eliminating the alleged levity, America's international record late in July, 1913, was .800. To-day it is .289. So, when you figure "the land of the free and the home of the brave" has slumped athletically more than Cleveland, Pittsburgh and the Philadelphia Nationals combined, you may have some idea as to the speed employed in taking the descent.

The Red Uplift.

The Reds, under Herzog's hustling tactics, have also shown a worthy spurt. Herzog, despite the loss of many of his best people has added 100 points to the Red count within a year.

Bowling

The W. O. B. A. turney wound up yesterday afternoon with the playing off of the first and second match finals of the Scotch Doubles. Goddard and Nickells, of the Toronto Kew Beach Club, carrying off the honors in the first event getting victory from Lou Tillson, of the London Thistles and his partner T. Manness, four up. The finals of the second match turned out to be rather an easy victory for George Nightingale and W. C. Lashbrook, of the London Thistles, over Booker and Monteith, the last of the Aylmer delegation, the latter giving up the ghost when the London pair had them seven up, with one end to go.

The Scotch Doubles, like the other events of the tourney, were keenly contested and each match had its quota of excitement. The game between the Kew Beach pair and Tillson and Manness was a splendid game for the first six ends, but after that point the London pair, who had been running up large scores against the best duets in the tourney, including among these, Heaman and Keene and Ashplant and Vining, seemed to lose control and the rest was easy for the Queen City men.

Civic Pride and Civic Spirit

Civic pride and civic spirit are not necessarily synonymous. The fact that a citizen boasts about his city is no sign that he loves the city. He may "do" it the first chance he gets in taxes and contracts. The fact that he exaggerates every favorable thing about the city and side-steps or denies every unfavorable or undesirable thing is no sign that he loves the city. A city which should become known as one of its citizens love would be bound in this age of publicity to attract a great deal of favorable comment. If so, how is a city going to become that kind of a city? Certainly by doing the needed things to improve itself in every respect as a place where all elements of its citizens find their interests considered where sanitation is as perfect as possible, regardless of expense, open air recreation is recognized as a vital need and therefore amply provided for, the city authorities alert in providing all the necessities and conveniences, where also its attention and welfare receive attention and the beautification of the city by a harmonious city plan is considered essential.

That kind of a city, notwithstanding the increasing number of citizens who do serve the city faithfully, is still the exception, the rule being that the citizens expect the city to come out all right, that things will work themselves out, provided only that the individual is left free to work out his private interest. That principle does not bring about the expected results.

It is good as far as it goes, but it falls short of proving to be a principle that builds a city that the whole citizenship can admire and love as their city, because in it everything is considered that can contribute to the general welfare.

Cities will never be what they should be until all the citizens get the idea that they should do things for, instead of to, the city. Results will always fall short, so long as citizens figure how they can get more out of the city than they give to it. Cities will begin to be such as to win the love of their citizens when the citizens as a body are duty give the city freely and generously their best thought, their valuable time and where necessary their money to make it serve all their municipal needs. Otherwise people will not particularly love their city, and the way the city grows up will be haphazard, without rule or principle, "a child of the streets."

Like Topsy, most cities have "just grown." They have been neglected by their proper parents, the citizens, and have been allowed to grow up any way they could, following lines of least resistance. The result is that the old saying, "God made the country, and man made the town," contains a slur on the town that has always reflected on citizenship. The time will come when what citizens will do for their cities will completely revolutionize the character and appearance of these congested places that heretofore have only "just grown."—Exchange.

If We Only Knew

By Rudyard Kipling

If we knew the cares and trials,
Knew the efforts all in vain,
And the bitter disappointment,
Understood the loss and gain—
Would the grim eternal roughness
Seem—I wonder—just the same?
Should we help where now we hinder,
Should we pity where we blame?

Ah! we judge each other harshly,
Knowing not life's hidden force—
Knowing not the fount of action
Is less turbid at its source;
Seeing not amid the evil
All the golden grains of good;
And we'd love each other better,
If we only understood.

Could we judge all deeds by motives
That surround each other's lives,
See the naked heart and spirit;
Know what spur the action gives,
Often we would find it better
Just to judge all actions good;
We should love each other better
If we only understood.

The trade union movement of El Paso, Texas, has endorsed the "shop early" movement of the American and Spanish Retail Clerks Union, which is urging a 6 o'clock closing of all stores on week days and 9.30 on Saturdays.

Because two large business houses have started an early closing movement the local trades and labor assembly of Huntington, W. Va., has thanked these merchants. The stores will be closed every afternoon at 5 o'clock and at 12 o'clock noon on Saturdays.

Price of Meat Still Goes Upward

Packing Interests say all Records will be Broken Despite the Enormous Grain Crop

Advices from Chicago are to the effect that packing-house representatives assert that meat prices will rise above the record figures of recent years despite the huge grain crop. They claim that the present scarcity of cattle and the effect of dry weather on grazing lands will more than offset the enormous grain yield. The dry summer in the west last year is the chief cause of present scant supply on the hoof. Another factor is that the demand for meat exceeds the supply.

How consoling this information must be, for instance, to the good wife of the workman who happens to be on short time and prospects ahead looking none too rosy.

If scarcity is one reason for the rising price of meat, how would it do for the Dominion government to take that thirty-five million dollars that it proposed to sink in Dreadnoughts and get right out on the job of establishing state-owned cattle ranches in the different provinces, where most suitable, and utilize the thousands of unemployed who during the coming winter will inevitably become charges on public or private charity.

Of course, it might be said that the same would be a Socialistic innovation, but if it would have a tendency to cheapen the price of food and furnish work for the unemployed, it might be worth while experimenting on as a starter. It is said that leather is also scarce and advancing in price, which makes boots and shoes dearer and harder to buy so that the establishment of state ranges would not only provide a more abundant supply of meat foods, but of leather at the same time. Then many of the out-of-work could be employed in raising grain and fodder on government-owned farms, or a scheme might be devised to enable the unemployed to acquire the farms and ranches upon easy terms by the government providing the stock and other necessary utensils for start.

Trades and Labor Congress of Canada

Convention Which Meets in St. John, N. B., in Sept. Has its Work Cut Out.

The annual convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada which will convene in St. John, N. B., this coming September will be one of the most important gatherings of representative Labor men that has ever assembled in the Dominion. Never before have so many grave social and economic problems been pressing for solution as at the present time and one of the greatest with which the Congress will have to deal will be that of unemployment.

There is a feeling prevalent throughout Labor circles generally that organized Labor must take a decided stand on the question of immigration and put up such a fight as has never been put up before. In fact the workers have been so aroused by the spectacle of an army of idle men at this season of the year when ordinarily nearly everybody is employed that they will expect the Congress to take a decided stand upon the proposition. The politicians must be given to distinctly understand that the lines are being drawn and that Organized Labor has come to see that no half-way measures will prevail. The question of immigration and employment insofar as Canada is concerned go hand in hand and the politicians of both parties in Ottawa, it is claimed are distinctly to blame for the alarming conditions that have developed within the past couple of years. There will only be straight talk when the delegates assemble in St. John and moreover the kind of talk that there will be no danger of misunderstanding.

Settle Live Questions

The convention of the Ontario Provincial Council of Carpenters, which met in Chatham on June 30th, was without doubt the best and most largely attended of any as yet held. Eighteen local unions were represented, only four locals of the original United Brotherhood being unaffiliated at the present time. The conference was originally composed of U. B. bodies only, but after the consolidation of the two organizations several locals of the Amalgamated Society have become affiliated and before the next convention convenes it is confidently anticipated that practically every local of the two sections will be in line.

The report submitted by Secretary Treasurer T. Jackson was of a most encouraging nature and showed that the council was making steady headway and was now on a sound financial basis.

General Organizer Martel, of Montreal, was present as fraternal delegate from the Provincial Carpenters' Council of Quebec and gave a most entertaining address on prevailing conditions in that section of the Dominion also dealing with the outlook in the western states, which he recently toured in the interests of the Brotherhood.

Among other business transacted it was decided to issue a quarterly circular with full particulars as to state of trade, rate of wages in the various localities, throughout the province and any other information necessary in the interests of the craft.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has recalled its furlough employees at the Grafton, W. Va., repair shops. At Keyser, W. Va., 500 men have returned to work. The railroad has issued orders to have each section gang placed on full force of sixteen men.

The Detroit (Mich.) Barbers' Union is holding "get together" meetings for the purpose of starting an early closing movement, which will call for a shorter week-day hour and for Sunday closing. Employers are in sympathy with the plan.

The strike at the local plant of the Wheeling Corrugating Company, Martin's Ferry, O., which involved the laborers and the men in the galvanizing department, has been settled. The agreement provides that all employees will be reinstated and wages will not be cut.

The strike of firemen and shopmen which tied up the Louisiana and Northwestern Railroad, has ended. The men struck because of the failure to receive wages for the past two months. On being guaranteed prompt payments in the future, they declared the strike off and returned to work.

The Indianapolis Central Labor Union, has declared for a state workmen's compensation law and has appointed a special commission in advertising the need of such a law and obtaining the co-operation of all union men in the state.

Before the Federal commission on Industrial Relations, George W. Yost, of Clarksburg, W. V., president of the Glass and Bottle Manufacturers National Assembly, agreed with the views of trade unionists that collective bargaining brought about peace between employer and employee and that agreements entered into are not violated.

The report of the Seattle, Wash., municipal public employment office shows that during the last year 27,352 men and 3,798 women were supplied with positions either in the city or state. Because no fee is charged by the office either to the employer or the applicant, a substantial increase in the number of positions filled in comparison with 1912 is shown. The positions thus filled were for the most part those requiring no skilled labor.

One of the greatest victories ever won by organized labor has been the result of an eight years fight between the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and the big firm of Irving & Casson, with headquarters in Boston, Mass. This firm refused to pay union wages or conduct its business along union lines, and a result a strike was called and all over the country union men have refused to handle the trim made by the company. Since that time hundreds of thousands of dollars have been expended in state and federal court proceedings, injunctions, strike benefits, etc. The agreement reached calls for a strictly union shop with union wages, hours and conditions, and affects carpenters, wood carvers, cabinet makers, hardwood finishers, upholsters and painters. In the city of Boston alone thousands of workers in the buildings trades are affected by the settlement, to say nothing of men employed in other cities.

Problems

It must be plainly apparent to the individual who reads and thinks and observes the trend of events at the present time, that things cannot continue to progress as they have been doing during the past few years.

Throughout the whole civilized world the ever-growing spirit of discontent can no longer be discounted by the fact minimized that the great majority of the wage-earning classes are everywhere on the verge of revolt.

The struggle for a mere subsistence was never more severe or seemingly hopeless, under existing conditions, than in this year of grace, 1914. Unemployment was never more rife than at the present moment, and right here in Canada, in the Province of Ontario, and the City of Brantford, as is also the case in every city, town or hamlet throughout the country, the majority of the workers, even those most favorably situated, are hardly one week removed from actual want if overtaken by sickness or other misfortune.

There is more wealth in the world to-day than ever before. Men are just as anxious and eager for employment as at any stage of the world's history, and in Canada, perhaps, more so than in any other country, the sources of natural wealth, easily accessible, lie all around us in bounteous plenty, but undeveloped.

Not for long will the working masses, the majority of humanity, stand idly or passively by while conditions grow steadily worse and the battle for a bare existence becomes ever more strenuous.

The breaking point must some day inevitably be reached and the reckoning scored. Things are not as they are for lack of opportunity; nature was never more prolific than to-day, when the triumphs of science have enabled man to produce more abundantly, easily and economically than could have been dreamed of a hundred or even twenty years ago.

The problem of government in 1914 as in the years to follow, is how to get the idle hands upon the idle lands, and to equitably control and distribute the wealth production of the nation.

Support Labor's Demands

BUFFALO, July 25.—At a meeting of the Buffalo Federation of Churches the following was included in a report of its social committee which was unanimously adopted:

"The churches must stand: For equal right and complete justice for all men in all stations of life.

"For the fullest possible development for every child especially by the provision of proper education and recreation.

"For the abolition of child labor.

"For such regulations of the conditions of toil for women as shall safeguard the physical and moral health of the community.

"For the abatement and prevention of poverty.

"For the conservation of health.

"For the protection of the worker

My Creed

My creed is work; to follow duty's call
However far it leads across the plains
Through trackless woods or ringing on the hills;
To seek for pleasure in the realms of toil—
Still ever striving for a larger self
With which to do a service for the rest
To lay a new path through the unbroken way.
And leave some heritage, e'en though so small
No other hand would love or care to leave.
Rejoicing ever in my brother's craft,
To follow system and the perfect law
Be what I am, and do my very best
To lead a life which towers above the hills.
And points the way across the plains to God.

After the Boer war there was a very distinct anti-British sentiment. This is now passing away. Another notable tribute to Anglo-Saxon sentiment and sports is the taking up of tennis and golf by the Germans. Tennis is now immensely popular and golf too, is finding an increasing number of adherents. The Doctor himself plays a very good game and was one of the pioneers of the sport in Berlin which now boasts three links. The fishing near the latter resort is reported as most encouraging for the man who is of the Izaak Walton brotherhood. One of the clerical guests at the hotel opened the season the year by catching six fine salmon trout the first day and ten the second day. Black bass, pickerel and musk-nonges are also abundant in these northern waters. Among the many guests at this resort are: Lady Howland, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Rutherford, Mr. Norman Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Parson, Mr. Charles Procter, Miss Procter, Mr. L. L. Anthes, Mr. Law, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Allan, of Belleville; Mr. and Miss Kershaw, of Philadelphia.

UNUSUAL CASE OF DEATH OF TWIN BABIES

Mother at Copper Cliff is Suspected — Children Found Buried.

COPPER CLIFF, Ont., July 25.—Mrs. Anton Hawry Luk, a young Austrian woman, is under surveillance in the hospital here, and her husband is also in custody, in connection with the death of their infant twins, whose bodies were unearthed where the mother had buried them on the shore of Kelly Lake, two miles from her home the same morning they were born.

From the evidence taken at the inquest here last night the man seems to have had no knowledge of the birth of the twins nor of their disposal. Chief Clark testified that the woman told him she took the children to where they were buried right after they were born, early Wednesday morning.

The couple were married six months ago, and the man said at the inquest that he had known his wife only two weeks before they were married.

The woman denied to both Chief Clarke and Dr. Bennett that there had been any birth, but on cross-examination by the Chief she admitted there had, and led them to where the bodies were concealed.

Dr. Bennett made an examination, and testified at the inquest that both children had received respiration, and that they were properly formed. He found a wound on the neck of one, which he thought was caused by violence, and a splinter in the mouth of the other. Dr. Bennett thought death was due to asphyxiation.

A rough board three feet long and one foot wide with a rough edge and three-inch spikes was exhibited. There were fresh blood marks on it as if an attempt had been made to saw the heads off with the rough edge.

Coroner Doan conducted the inquest, and R. R. McKessock, Crown Attorney for the district of Sudbury, examined the witnesses. After the evidence was taken the jury returned a verdict that the children came to their death, but did not say at whose hands.

The preliminary trial will be held next week, when a murder charge will likely be laid.

"The wonderful power of Personal Influence, Magnetism, Fascination, Mind Control, and what you will, can surely be acquired by everyone, no matter how unattractive or unsuccessfull," says Mr. Elmer Blaisworth, author of the new book entitled: "The Key to the Development of the Eastern Forces," and describes a simple, though effective system of controlling the thoughts and acts of others; how one may gain power over those who might otherwise remain indifferent; how to quickly and accurately judge the character and disposition of an individual; how to cure the most obstinate diseases and habits without drugs or medication of the inner forces." The book lays bare many astounding facts concerning the complex subject of projecting thoughts (telepathy) is explained. Miss Josephine Davis, the popular stage favorite, whose portrait appears herewith, declares that Prof. Knowles' book opens the door to success, health and happiness to every mortal, no matter what his or her position in life. She believes that Prof. Knowles has discovered principles which, if universally adopted, will revolutionize the mental status of the human race. The book, which is being distributed broadcast free of charge, is full of photographic reproductions showing how these unseen forces are being used all over the world, and how thousands upon thousands have developed powers which they little dreamed they possessed. The free distribution of the 100,000 copies is being conducted by a large London institution, and a copy will be sent post free to anyone interested. No money need be sent, but those who wish to do so may enclose 5c per postage, etc. All requests for the free copies (stamps of your own country) to be sent should be addressed to: National Institute of Sciences, Free Distribution Dept., 115, A. Liquid Helium Reduces Resistance of Metals to the Electric Current Noted German Professor Makes Discovery That May Result Eventually in a Substantial Reduction in the Cost of Electricity for Every Day Use.

(Special Dispatch.) LONDON, July 25. PROFESSOR KAMERLINGH ONNES, of Leyden University, has discovered a method by which the resistance of various metals to the passage of electric current through them may be reduced to the vanishing point, and apparently abolished. Professor Onnes found that mercury subjected to a temperature of 4.19 degrees centigrade, or to one of 3.8 degrees, or to a temperature of 6 degrees, would offer no resistance to the passage of electric current, and would become superconductive. The professor then wound a thousand turns of very fine lead wire on a bobbin. At an ordinary temperature the wire offered a resistance of 736 ohms, but when plunged into a bath of liquid helium it offered none at all, and the current introduced into the wire by induction persisted for many hours without the least perceptible diminution. It is expected that the discovery will open a new path of research into the constitution of matter. Details of Professor Onnes' experiment were laid before Professor Howes, of the South Kensington Royal College of Science. "It has been known for some time," said this authority, "that the resistance of a metallic wire to electric current decreases when the temperature of the wire is reduced. The colder you make your wire the more easily the current passes through it. It was known that this reduction in resistance went on continuously with the reduction in temperature, and it looked as if, in order to abolish resistance, we should have to reduce the temperature of the wire to absolute zero, which is 273 degrees centigrade below freezing point. How cold this is may be imagined from the fact that boiling point is 100 degrees centigrade above freezing point. That seemed to be an unattainable ideal. "Professor Onnes has, however, succeeded in reaching temperatures lower than have ever been reached before. "It will be noticed that he obtained this extraordinarily low temperature by the use of liquid helium, which he was the first to produce. He spent an enormous amount of money in producing liquid helium, and there was great joy among scientific persons when he produced a few spots. He must now have found how to secure it in larger measure, but its production in such quantities must still be very expensive, since the gas from which it is procured is very rare. "The discovery of a method of abolishing resistance to electricity does not lead toward the electric storage battery, but suggests the possibility of a reduction in the cost of electricity. "If you can abolish resistance you abolish the heat caused by resistance, and therefore you could use a very thin wire for a very high voltage. The cost of electrical wiring would thus be reduced very considerably. But in order to do this you must first bed your wires in liquid helium, or find some other way of reducing the temperature of the wire to nearly zero. "Sir Oliver Lodge, interviewed at Birmingham, said Professor Onnes was one of the best experimenters on the Continent, and to all of his assertions great weight was attached. "The discovery he announces," continued Sir Oliver, "does not take us altogether by surprise, because many experiments have found that as temperature goes down conductivity improves to a surprising extent. "So much has been known from the researches of many observers, but Onnes has gone further, and by utilizing the low temperature at present known—that of liquid helium in a vacuum—he has reached a conductivity far lower than anything previously known. "It appears probable that lead does, as he says, offer hardly any resistance to the electric current. One consequence of that is that the current can go on circuiting in accordance with the first law of motion like a railway train without friction and without any propelling power—not for ever, of course, but for a long time. "What the practical bearing of this discovery will be it would be premature to guess. It may effect something in regard to the perfect transmission of wire, although in what way a wire can be kept at so low a temperature in practical circumstances I do not see. "But whether it has practical application or not, it is a discovery of very considerable magnitude. It will throw a good deal of light on electricity and matter, and cannot fail to be a revelation of the utmost importance."

The city of Paris has a population of 2,000,000. Your correspondent was seeing Paris in one of the automobiles that leave from in front of the American Express Company every afternoon, with a guide to tell about the points of interest along the route. Your correspondent thought he had seen Paris before—a little of it, at least—but this was seeing it in a new way, and through the eyes of visitors recently arrived from New York, Pawtucket, Denver, Salt Lake City, Springfield (Ill.), Lafayette (Ind.), Montgomery (Ala.), Peoria (Ill.), Sheboygan (Wis.), from the far off Philippines and from Canada, upon whom the city was making its first impression. "The population of France," continued the guide in a megaphone voice which rose superior to the din of the Paris streets, "is forty-three millions—diminishing all the time. "There's one less now," called out the Doctor from Sheboygan, Wis., in a voice vibrating with professional interest, as the automobile just failed to cut down a pedestrian crossing the street. "The guide ignored the interruption. He took the view that if any jokes were to be made he could do it himself. DRINKING IT ALL IN. As for the Doctor, he did not look as if he could easily be squelched. He sat with his mouth as well as his eyes open, the better to drink in everything that came along. On his knees he had a prescription pad, upon which he made voluminous notes in lead pencil. In the seat behind the writer sat a Young Thing in a blue serge dress and blue silk stockings. (The latter detail was noted when she got out of the automobile at the Louvre.) Beside the Young Thing was Her Ideal, who also wore a blue suit and had the beatified smile of the newly wed. (Your correspondent did not notice the color of his stockings.) It was obviously a honeymoon couple. "On the left," the guide was saying, "is the largest dry goods store in Paris. "Forget it!" objected the Doctor. "My wife knows too much about the shops of Paris already. I've barely enough money to get home on now." The party left the automobile and entered the Louvre. "To visit all the galleries," said the guide, "requires a walk of twenty miles. We will omit a few of them." The statue of Washington occasioned more interest, and the Lady from Peoria clapped her hands. Veracity, it would appear, still has some standing in the company. Enthusiasm Grows. The avenue du Bois de Boulogne was entered, and the enthusiasm of the party was visible as the great Arc de Triomphe loomed closer and closer. The Young Thing stood up, camera in hand, and

What the Surgeons Say on Question of Vivisection

Dr. Foveau de Courmelles, of Paris, in an Interesting Article, Shows That It Is His Opinion New Methods Should Replace Tortures Inflicted on Man's Most Loyal Friend.

(Special Dispatch.) PARIS, July 25. THE question of vivisection and the arguments both for and against it are once more being discussed with great earnestness. What distinguishes the present controversy from former ones is that physiologists are no longer content to treat the question with silence and disdain, but now condescend to discuss it to state their case and to declare that vivisection is necessary. The arguments are the same—The affirmation that without vivisection there can be no physiology, and other aphorisms of the same nature, such as, war and the killing of animals are necessary evils, and necessary evils; vivisection is also an unfortunate necessity, but even more useful. Its opponents, who are so sentimental and whose feelings are so easily affected, would, it is said, do better to put the interests of man above those of animals and to devote their attention first of all to the scourge of war and to the killing of animals for sport. These are very unscientific reflections for men of research and erudition, and are merely generalities and side issues. Practice Is Useful. Indeed, they entirely lack the clear thought which would be necessary to convince medical men who disapprove of torture, thinking, as they do, that suffering is worse than death, and who have realized the uselessness of vivisection, and even the hindrance it has been to research. Our friends, the protectors of animals, have also taken their part in the discussion, and it would have been pleasing to find them more scientific in their argument than their adversaries. The contrast afforded would have been amusing and instructive for the general public. But notwithstanding the many scientifically trained minds formed during the last few years and the spread of scientific knowledge, none of the opponents of vivisection have made use of such arguments. This has been particularly regrettable because the supporters of vivisection have scored a momentary triumph. The public has been moved by the descriptions of the horrible tortures suffered by animals, which, for that matter, were old and oft repeated, but it has none the less preferred the idea that such sufferings are necessary. Tell every mother the world over—say the vivisectionists—that the torture of thousands of dogs is necessary to save her child, and it will soon be seen whether a single one of them would hesitate for an instant if the choice were given her! Vivisection of No Avail. The defenders of animals describe the heartrending sufferings which are inflicted on the latter, but they do not demonstrate that these tortures are useless. As a consequence, and I have said so for nearly twenty years, they engage in a fruitless task. What should be shown—and I have already said so in these columns some years ago—is exposed at great length in my book, "La Vivisection, Erreurs et Abus," published in 1911, which M. L. Millevoye, the anti-vivisectionist. It is that vivisection is useless, and, more important still, this should be irrefutably proved. My book has not been refuted point by point, as I disapproved in detail the arguments of the vivisectionists. When we showed the exact shape of the stomach, obtained in 1898 by a repeat operation to the X-rays, and when by means of the same discovery of Rouget's we traced the course of digestion, the action of drugs and the action on the head and lungs as well as the life of these organs, at the same time correcting many of the errors into which the physiologists had fallen, no answer was forthcoming to our assertion. When we advanced the fact that animals were so dissimilar to man—as witness the frog, which is never killed by electric currents; the horse, which succumbs to currents which exercise curative effects on human beings—no one was able to deny these differences, which have caused so many erroneous conclusions and which render the greatest variations met with in drugs and have led to many mistaken treatments in the practice of medicine. Used Cinematograph. When we proposed the use of the cinematograph, which can show thousands of times, without pain, the operations considered useful for the purposes of instruction, and which are so imperfectly to be observed when performed upon animals, for an illustrative course of lectures, which are otherwise more of a school of cruelty than anything else, clever surgeons made use of the newly invented apparatus in their teaching. Did not this offer to those surgeons, who had until then done no teaching work, and were merely acquiring a reputation for skill in their profession, a new means of displaying their skill, while avoiding the necessity of suffering and death? When many eminent surgeons, such as Professors Nilaton, Lawson, Tait and Quenn, proved that animal vivisection was of no use as practice for operations, and did not result in the acquirement of skill, many surgeons unsuccessfully tried to prove the contrary. When we showed, with the support of Professors Albert Robin and Huchard that in medicine, the art of curing and the curative treatment by drugs have rather been hindered by the errors, than advanced by the merits of vivisection, not a few doctors supported us with applause.

A LION HUNTING STORY WITH REAL THRILLS

Stewart Edward White, Author, Kills Monster Beast in East Africa After Most Exciting Experience and Hairbreadth Escape.

(Special Dispatch.) LONDON, July 25. THOSE who have been "on safari" hunting big game in East Africa—and their number must now amount to thousands—will read with great interest Mr. Stewart Edward White's modestly told story of a hunting journey from Mombasa through the Shimba Hills, Nairobi, Kapiti, the Taoro River and Masailand. Mr. White had the good fortune to shoot almost a "record" big lion. He thus describes the incident:— "We had proceeded in this fashion for about a mile, when suddenly, and most unexpectedly, the biggest lion I ever saw leaped straight up from a bush twenty-five yards in front of me, and with a tremendous roar vanished behind another bush. I had just time to throw up my .405 shotgun-fashion and let drive a snapshot. Clifford Hill, who was ten yards to my right, saw the fur fly, and we all heard the snarl as the bullet hit. Naturally we expected an instant charge, but, as things turned out, it was evident the lion had not seen us at all. He had leaped at the sight of our men and horses on the skyline, and when the bullet hit him he must have ascribed it to them. At any rate, he began to circle through the tangled vines in the direction of the "From their elevation they could follow his movements. At once they set up howls of terror and appeals for help. Some began frantically to run back and forth. None of them tried to run away; there was nowhere to go! The only thing that saved them was the thick and spiky character of the cover. The lion, instead of charging straight and fast, was picking an easy way. We tore directly up hill as fast as we were able, leaping from rock to rock and thrusting recklessly through the tangle. About half way up I jumped to the top of a high, conical rock, and thence by good luck caught sight of the lion's great yellow head advancing steadily about eighty yards away. I took as good a sight as I could and pulled trigger. The recoil knocked me clear off the boulder, but as I fell I saw his tall go up and knew that I had hit. At once Clifford Hill and I jumped up on the rock again, but the lion had moved out of sight. We all manoeuvred rapidly for position. Again luck was with me, for again I saw his great head, the mane standing out all around it, and for the second time I planted a heavy bullet square in his chest. This stopped his advance; he lay down. His head was up and his eyes glared, as he uttered the most reverberating and magnificent roars and growls. The dogs leapt and barked around him. We came quite close, and I planted my fourth bullet in his shoulder. Even this was not enough. It took a fifth in the same place to finish him, and he died at last biting great chunks of earth."

Paris Becomes a Bit Too Gay

Vulgurities Displayed for Benefit of Visitors, Who Return Home Severely Shocked.

(Special Dispatch.) PARIS, July 25. PARIS is tired of having the epithets "Parisian" and "gay" applied to it for the vulgurities that are displayed chiefly for visitors. For some time past there has been a revolt against the indecencies of certain of the Paris revues, which are produced mainly for the foreign visitor. It is from these revues that the foreign visitor returns to his homeland satisfied that Paris is living up to its reputation as the "gay" city. Proceedings have now been instituted by the authorities against two revues whose posters are certainly the most frank to be seen on the boardings to-day. They are "Cache ton Nu," at the Moulin Rouge, and "L'Orgie a Babylone," at Olympia. The managers of both these music halls are charged with offending the public morals. Furthermore, the principal dancers in each revue, whose costumes would not be difficult to describe, since there is so little of them, have also been called to answer for the alleged indecencies of the production. The campaign against the inartistic nude has resulted in the closing of a number of minor establishments, but it is on the first time that an attempt has been made to bring well known halls to book for being too "Parisian." Prudence. Washington Star:—"A fat man is always good natured," said Mr. Dolan. "He is who you get home," replied Mr. Raftery. "He has to go easy in an argument with a friend because he knows he's not in condition to see it through to a finish." To Be Determined. Washington Star:—"What are you going to do when you get home?" "I don't know yet," replied Senator Sorghum. "I've got to wait and see whether my reception by the town folks is in the nature of an ovation or the third degree."

English Women Mill Slaves

Data Collected by Government Inspectors Show Life of Drudgery in Factories.

(Special Dispatch.) LONDON, July 25. SOME unhappy stories of factory life are contained in a Blue Book which gives the result of a year's work by the Government's staff of 217 men and women factory inspectors. Nearly 300,000 factories and workshops in which more than 5,000,000 men, women, boys and girls labor were under inspection. It is stated that the number of fatal accidents increased from 1,200 to 1,300 last year, and other accidents increased from 154,972 to 176,882. Last year was a period of trade activity, and better trade means more accidents. Miss Tracey, one of the inspectors, describes the effect on girls of the succession of long days in a factory. "A well known man in a Lancashire town," she says, "was telling me only the other day about how he would wake in the morning to the clatter of the girls' and women's clogs as they went past his house at half-past five in the dark on their way to the mills. "He had exceptional opportunity of judging of the effect of the long day's work, and he told me how bonny children youthful to him lost their color and their knowledge to energy in the hard drudgery of this daily toil, how the girls would fall asleep at their work, and how they grew worn and old before their time. "We see it for ourselves and the women tell us about it. Sometimes one feels that one dare not contemplate too closely the life of our working women, it is such a grave reproach. "Miss Tracey gives an account of a day in the life of one of these women:—"She told me she left home at 5:15 A. M., walked two and a half miles to the factory, stood the whole day at her work, and at six, sometimes later, started to walk home again, and then had to prepare her meal, mend, and do her household work. This case is only typical of thousands of women workers. "Some of the women and girls have to handle heavy weights. Miss Whitworth, another inspector, found a delicate woman helping another to carry fifty-three pound weights. "Is it right I should have to do this kind of work or only have eight shillings a week?" asked the woman. A case of a woman who worked as a jute spinner until six P. M. on the night her baby was born is mentioned. Another woman returned to the factory eleven days after the birth of a child. Women in a laundry had to work from six A. M. until midnight on Friday and from six A. M. to nine P. M. on the next day. In a Midlands bakehouse a boy of seventeen was at work from one A. M. until one A. M. the next day, being allowed only an hour or two for sleep. In a jam factory women and girls were kept at work from six A. M. until nine P. M. four or five days in the week. Words of Cheer. Washington Star:—"Won't you join our sunshine society?" asked the kindly stranger. "No," replied the man from the mountains. "We take sunshine as a matter of course. But if you can show us any new ideas about moonshine we might listen with interest." Extremists. Boston Transcript:—"We recently heard of a man so stingy he wouldn't even give you a pleasant look. Of another man so economical he could live a double life on it a week. Of a third man so bold he makes an egg look like the head of a violin virtuoso."

WHAT EUROPE POSSIBLE

Better Feet Petersburg May for Worst Back Ho

LONDON, July 25.—The Berlin papers while fully recognizing the gravity of the situation are to find grounds for the hope Austro-Serbian conflict will be averted. The news that Austria laying crossing the Danube has ended hopes that the interchanges between the chief capitals result in checking the outbreakilities until Serbia finds a means of satisfying Austria's demands. Much attention is given to the alleged expressions of French statesmen that France means to leave Russia to her fate and Russia is attacked by another exertions at St. Petersburg.
