CHAPTER XLIII.

"It is not that, Sir Charles, which nearly made an invalid of me," she tried to smile. "And I think it will relieve you to know the truth. I went for a walk in the woods, and met the man who shot you. He fancied that I was the woman who—who has caused everybody so much misery; he was mad—he wanted to kill me. It was this that made me ill."

"Poor Ada," he whispered. "And where is the fellow? You see, no one has talked to me for days. My mother only complains, and I will not listen. I have been left to brood over the emptiness of my useless life. I expected Gardner to see me, but he does not seem to think that I am—"

"Oh, Sir Charles, do not blame your friend," interrupted Ada. "I promised to write to him—to send for him—and I have not done so. I am the cause of all your trouble."

"What nonsense you talk," he replied. "I will not listen to it. You are the only friend I have now."

"I am your greatest enemy," she sobbed. "I am your only enemy, and yet I love you better than my very life."

He moved restlessly, and said: "I know that you care for me, dear. I will keep my promise if I live; but I have lost all desire—I feel so utterly weak and helpless. You did not say what had become of Spiers. I almost wish that his bullet had killed me."

"He was mad and is now under control. He will trouble us no more."

Her tones were hard and strained, and she stopped, unable to say more for a few minutes.

"Mad-mad!" muttered Sir Charles, "and so am I. Ada, I will keep my promise, but it will be a poor return for your goodness to me. I have no love to give you, for my heart is dead."

She dropped on her knees and wept in her bitterness and weakness. She felt mad with herself for giving way, but it was impossible to control the torrent that surged within her.

"Oh, my love," she whispered, at last. "No, no! do not shrink from me. I am bent upon doing an awful duty—a duty that renders my very soul loathsome! It is my great unselfish love for you that speaks. For your sake, darling, I would renounce even life itself. It may be that I shall never speak to you again. You will spurn me as you would a viper; but I am content to suffer the lash of your detestation, for I shall have

Mrs. Geo. Warman Tells How Cuticura Healed Pimples

"I had a breaking out of pimples on my face which irritated so much at night that I began to scratch and they broke out in deep, sore eruptions. My face looked so badly that I did not want to go anywhere. I saw an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I bought them. After using one and a half boxes of Cuticura Ointment, with the Cuticura Soap, I was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Geo. Warman, 15 Duchess St., Toronto, Ont.

Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Talcum promote and maintain skin purity, skin comfort and skin health. The Soap to cleanse, purify and beautify, the Ointment to soothe, soothe and heal and the Talcum to powder and perfume.

ceased the torments that are killing me. I was tempted and I fell, but not so low that I cannot redeem myself."

He stared at her wonderingly. He even laid his hand upon her soft black hair, tenderly, almost reverently. He feared that her mind was wandering, that she had not recovered from the shock of the meeting with the madman, Spiers. He reproached himself for his selfishness, for his cruelty in making his misery and dependency so apparent to one who was devoted to him, who was even now suffering through him.

"Ada, Ada!" he said. "You are ill. Go to your room. I beg of you."

He raised his hand to reach the bell-cord that was suspended over his head, but she interrupted him with a quick movement.

"I am not ill in the way you imagine. I have come to say to you an eternal farewell!"

The tones were firm again, almost cold, and he looked at her in a dazed, half-disbelieving way.

"I have come to tell you that when will make you happy. I will not dwell upon what might have been if you could have torn the old love from your breast. I am here to tell you, Sir Charles, that Lady Gladys Howard, the girl you love, is free."

"No, no!"

"It is true, and I have no further claim upon you."

"Poor Ada!"

"No, do not pity me. I have deceived you from the first. Lady Gladys wrote to you, and I stole the letter in my jealous hatred. She wrote asking you to go to her—she was in trouble—that she and Lord Cecil Stanhope had mutually cancelled the engagement between them. I stole that letter for love of you! I stole that letter, and extracted a promise from you to marry me. You can never gauge the depth of the misery and shame of this confession—this renunciation—all for love of you. I give you back to Lady Gladys. Here is the letter she sent to you."

LADY IRIS MISTAKE;

Hero of 'Surata'

CHAPTER III.

The news of the arrival of the earl accompanied by his daughter was soon known everywhere. Lady Clyffarde had been one of the first to hear of it, and she at once told her son Sir Fulke.

Sir Fulke was handsome, clever, and intellectual, the idol of his mother's heart, and loved by his relatives and the tenants. He had a fine stalwart figure, a rich bass voice, a genial laugh, and was generous and good natured to excess. He was proficient in every manly accomplishment, was a dashing rider, an excellent shot, a good fencer, and what the ladies of Eastshire thought even of higher consequence, an excellent dancer.

Sir Fulke had many noble traits in his character, but he had one fault. He was vain—vain of his handsome person, vain even of the whiteness of his hands and the gloss of his hair, and especially vain of his success amongst ladies. He liked to hear it said that he rode the finest horses and kept the best dogs in the county. Being a handsome young man and sole master of Clyffe Hall, with a clear rent roll of twenty thousand a year, Sir Fulke was of course a favorite. He could tell a good story and sing a good song; he had plenty of animation; and he was a true friend where he gave his friendship. He was a good and dutiful son, a kind and generous landlord, and an excellent master; it was the general opinion in the county that he would make an equally good husband. But where should he choose his wife? Lady Mavers had three handsome daughters. Mrs. Cecil had one only, who would inherit a large fortune; Lady Blakewell had five daughters, the youngest of whom, Violet, was a beauty. Several times there had been a rumor of an engagement. The pretty young widow Lady MacKenzie lived near, and Sir Fulke had visited her more than once in her affliction. When rallied about any of these fair ladies, he would look wise, and at the same time confused. Much was to be pardoned him. He had received far more flattery than was good for him, and he had been too much sought after. He knew why he was pressed to attend every ball in the county, and why at picnics anxious mothers besought him to take the greatest care of their daughters; therefore, much was to be excused. He was treated as a young prince who had never yet been in love.

One morning, when he came down to breakfast, his mother looked up at him with a bright happy smile.

"Fulke, what do you think has happened?" she cried.

"Whatever it may be, mother, it has evidently pleased you," he answered, as he began to open his letters.

"Yes—more than anything else could," she said. "The earl has arrived at Chandos, and Lady Iris is with him. I wonder if she is as beautiful as she gave promise of being?"

Sir Fulke stroked his mustache. "Did she give such promise, mother? It must be some time since she was at Chandos. I can just remember her as a slim, fair-haired child; but, if my memory serves me rightly, she was very proud."

"The Fynes are all proud," said Lady Clyffarde. "I shall drive over this morning. Will you accompany me, Fulke?"

"I am afraid that is impossible—I have an engagement at Kingsdown; but, if you will tell me at what time you will be at Chandos, I will join you and see you home."

This arrangement pleased his mother very much. The one desire of her life for many years past had been that her son should marry the heiress of Chandos. She believed there was no one else in the county good enough for him.

So, in the breakfast-room at Clyffarde Hall, mother and son discussed the new arrival. In all England there was not a more refined gentleman than Lady Iris. Sir Fulke inherited his mother's taste, and, whatever defects he might have, he was a perfect model of good-breeding.

The same news was discussed at the same time at Hyme Court, but in a very different manner. Richard Bardon had brought to his household the welcome of the earl's return. His wife, who had the most profound respect for every word that fell from her husband's lips, listened to him in silence. He was somewhat excited.

"Now we will show some of these fine people who and what we are, Jalla; we will show them who Richard Bardon is. They laugh at me, and they call me the coal-merchant. Why, I could buy them all up! They will see that the Earl of Caledon, one of the proudest noblemen in England, will visit me."

S. Government Issues Injunction Against Strikers.

Labor Unions May Also be Proceeded Against - Canadian Troops Will Leave Cape Breton - Griffith's Body to be Exhumed.

A DRASTIC STEP.
CHICAGO, Sept. 1. - One of the most drastic steps ever attempted in a strike situation, the United States Government today obtained a temporary restraining order from the Federal Judge James H. Wilson, upon petition of United States Attorney General, Harry Bagbert, who came here from Washington to argue for the action. The order enjoins, until the hearing, railway employees, attorneys, sergeants, agents, associates, and all persons acting in aid or in conjunction with them in any manner, from interfering with, hindering or obstructing the railway companies, their agents, agents or employees in the operation of their respective railroads and from transportation of passengers and property in interstate commerce and carriage of mails and from any manner interfering with the employees engaged in the repair, operation and use of trains, locomotives and other equipment and from attempting to prevent any person from freely entering into or continuing in the employ of the companies for the purpose of inspection and repair of locomotives and cars etc. The underlying principle involved in the action, the Attorney General said, is survival and supremacy of the Government of the United States. He asserted the government expected to use its authority to prevent labor unions from destroying the open road.

TROOPS WITHDRAWING.
SYDNEY, N.S., Sept. 1. - The official responsible for bringing the troops in to the Cape Breton area signed a request on Friday for their withdrawal, and it is expected that all will have left by Saturday night. The strike is now over and the men are expected to return to work on Tuesday, the referendum results having been three to across the river, accompanied by rifle firing. The Free State garrison promptly returned the fire and after twenty minutes the irregulars fled. To-day was the third or fourth time the Four Courts hotel has been attacked recently. The other attacks were as easily repulsed.

BRITISH COLUMBIA RAILWAY.
VICTORIA, Sept. 1. - Unless the people of British Columbia are prepared to continue paying two and a half millions annually for the ten years on the investment already made in the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, the whole system should be abandoned, asserts J. G. Sullivan, in his report to the Provincial Government which dismisses the possibility of handing it over to a private concern as no large privately owned concern would take it.

NO HOPE.
JACKSON, CALIF., Sept. 1. - There is no hope of getting a tunnel through to the forty-seven miners entombed in Argonaut mine until next week, but strenuous efforts are being made to bore through the intervening wall of earth. Fire is out in the Argonaut mine but the heat is intense and rescue workers cannot get through.

BOOZE RUNNER FIRED ON.
NEW YORK, Sept. 1. - The steam trawler Gamma, bound from Halifax to Havana, with three thousand cases of whisky, was fired on by a prohibition cutter of Montauk Point before her capture on Wednesday night according to the New York World, which declares that three shots were fired at the alleged booze runner. It is claimed the Gamma was attempting to discharge her cargo of liquor into small boats within the 3 mile limit.

Time and place of drawing will be announced at a later date. Return Stubs and Cash Receipts to members from whom books of tickets were obtained, to B. B. Stafford, treasurer, or to the undersigned.

ST. ANTHONY'S RADIIUM.
MONTREAL, Sept. 1. - "St. Anthony's Hospital is in possession of fifty milligrams of radium, the only supply of that precious metal in Newfoundland, and as a result we have been swamped by cancer cases, and fortunately we have been able to do good for those suffering from external infections, such as those of lip and mouth." The speaker was Dr. Wilfred Grenfell, C.M.G., Superintendent of the Labrador Medical Mission. Dr. Grenfell, accompanied by Mrs. Grenfell, arrived in Montreal to-day, having booked passage to Europe on the liner Regina.

FOUR COURTS AGAIN ATTACKED.
DUBLIN, Sept. 1. - Snipers this morning attacked the Free State army posts, and citizens became alarmed by the sustained rifle fire and machine gun fire and the explosion of hand grenades at various points. Revolver fire was directed at the Grand Bank of Ireland and at the Four Courts hotel. The mutineers also had a Thompson gun on the south side of the quays from which they sent a hail of bullets.

EDITOR EVENING TELEGRAM
Dear Sir - As a supporter of the Opposition in the House, and a member of the Party's Committee, I take this opportunity of endorsing the views expressed by two contributors in the Evening Telegram this week. The open letter to Sir Michael Cashin expresses fairly the sentiments of the great majority of supporters in the city as well as the outports, and if something is not done immediately to organize the party, thousands will refuse to vote for, much less support a party that is practically defunct. If Sir Michael Cashin has resigned the leadership he should say so publicly and not have all the blame for present conditions that is being ascribed to him. If not, then his followers should be told what he intends to do. For my part I will never vote for any member of the present government, but I will never vote, if I am left to vote, for any member of the Opposition as it is to-day. It would be better for the Opposition to resign, and then the people would have a chance to get busy and raise a party that will sweep Squires and Ceaser out of power forever. The time for nonsense is over. Get busy, or resign.

Yours truly,
ONE OF THE DISGUSTED.

Ignorance Was Bliss.

The new Cabinet Minister, the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, is fond of telling the story of a certain young man about town who was notoriously careless in money matters. One evening, however, when dressing for dinner, he took his money from the pocket of his lounge coat, and, acting on the impulse of the moment, he counted it - a thing he had never done before.

There were six five-pound notes - thirty pounds in all. These he laid on his dressing-table before going to the bath-room.

On returning from his tub he found his valet in the act of laying out his dress clothes, and of the six five-pound notes one was missing.

"That night in the smoke-room he told the story to a couple of friends, winding up as follows: "A clear loss of five pounds! First time, I ever counted my money, and, by George, it'll be the last! It doesn't pay."

No Need of Government

IMPORTS A GENERAL MANAGER FOR THE RAILWAY.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir—In my last contribution to your esteemed journal on railroad matters I expressed the opinion that while Mr. Morgan may be as good as any other man in his particular sphere of railroad and intimating that he could not be considered as having that intimate knowledge of our railway to warrant him in dealing with the specific wants of our road in an intelligent and economical way, I also suggested that I would give reasons for doubt as to the wisdom of the Govt. securing his services as such cost to the taxpayers, to handle our railroad problem, which is so much unlike anything that he has ever had to deal with or will ever have to deal with again. However, we will no doubt learn something to his advantage while here amongst us which will be of value to him, though it will be learned at a great cost to us, but since others have come in here ostensibly learned, but in reality so learn and whose schooling we have given free, it is hardly likely that any objection will be offered to giving Mr. Morgan his tuition likewise.

In this letter I shall mention only minor incidents in substantiation of my belief that we could have been found in this country to handle our railroad, and that there was no need of importing a man from a foreign road which no relation to our road other than the financial relations between them. There are generalities that apply to all railroads alike, but each railroad has its own peculiarities and specific requirements, which can be learned and understood only by years of arduous study and tedious observation while working on the road. This means that any man that comes in from foreign lands, requires a number of years of study, under all railroad conditions before he begins to learn enough about the particular wants of our road to warrant him in suggesting measures that would place the railroad on a sound working basis. Only a few of the minor requirements will be mentioned here; the main ones will be allowed to stand over until a more opportune time, possibly when the government attempts to justify its bringing Mr. Morgan in here and giving him a salary that is sufficient to pay the salaries of a efficient staff of officials who would be on the road on a sound and economical basis.

There is one thing that should claim the attention of the General Manager, and that is the abolition of that costly, and worse than useless, despatching office at Bishop's Falls. It is worse than useless because it hinders the proper operation of trains. The office at Bishop's Falls conflicts with the despatching office at St. John's in much the same way as two women cooking on one stove, using the same set of pots, interfere with each other in their cooking. Here is the way the office at Bishop's Falls interferes with the office at St. John's, and the proper operation of trains: an engine is lying in the yard there, and the Superintendent orders it to go West, and just a few minutes after he has given the order to start the engine West, the office at St. John's orders it to go East. Now, since it is impossible for the engine to go both ways the same time, the office that can bring the most pressure to bear will get the use of the engine. Again, sometimes an engine will be ordered out of the station for the Western section of the road, with part train, a few minutes before the arrival of the train from the eastern section of the road, which (read in not, the antecedent for the relative "which") has cars for the Western division. This means that "two" trains must be run over the Western section at double the cost that would be required for the running of one train. If the movement of trains on the Western division of the road had been controlled from St. John's, the West bound train that was started from Bishop's Falls would have awaited the arrival of the train from the Eastern division, taken the cars for West, and thus pull in the train at half the cost of what would require the running of two trains at double the cost of operating one train.

This is a point to which I wish to draw the attention of the General Manager, in the hope that the road and therefore the country might be relieved of the burden of maintaining that useless despatching office at Bishop's Falls.

According to figures submitted by Mr. Morgan in his railway report, it costs the people of this country $3.08 every time a train is run one mile. In another part of his report he says that it costs $1.46 to run a train one mile. Which figure we can accept as the correct one, or whether either of them are correct is not for me to say here, further than to intimate that in some future day shall strip this most cunning and rattlesnake-like document of its allegories and lay bare its hidden meanings to the full gaze of public scrutiny. If, as the report says, it costs $3.08 to pull a train one mile, and since the distance between Bishop's Falls and Fort aux Basques is 28 1/2 miles, it would cost $882.86 to pull a train from Bishop's Falls to Fort aux Basques. This shows how important it is to reduce the train mileage to the lowest possible minimum. This can be done on the Western division only by closing the despatching office at Bishop's Falls and controlling the movement of trains on the Western section of the road from the office at St. John's, which would have the effect of reducing the mileage to a point consistent with the volume of traffic to be handled.

Neither the length of the road nor the volume of traffic offering calls for a centre of control at Bishop's Falls. The office that was built there first could and can very well look after the trains on the Western division at any time St. John's is out of touch with Bishop's Falls. Trains could be handled by the small office much better than they are now handled, and without extra cost to the country. The office was built in the first place to satisfy the ambition of two minor officials and to keep them from quarrelling. This kind of a thing is a good deal like the mother who places a candy on each chair so as to keep her pugnacious children from fighting, because Johnny has a better candy than Sammy. The fact is, the road is a family affair, and as such, the hard pressed fishermen are taxed to pay for the bungling and incompetency of those that have been given positions, not because of their merit, but because of their consanguineous relations to those higher up. But the starving and oppressed slaves of Newfoundland shall be aroused from their sleep into which the pitiless, spineless tools and teadies of the Big Interest have placed them. They shall know that the millions of dollars they are called upon to hand over to the road in little short of legalized plunder.

Another thing which would suggest to the present General Manager, Mr. Morgan, is not conversant with general conditions, and the requirements of the road particularly, is his recommending the building of 100 box cars. Why? he suggested the building of more cars is not apparent to anyone other than himself. Nearly every siding along the road is filled with box cars which have been lying up so long that the mice have built their nests in the oil caps; the bees have built their hives in the cars; the spiders, going instinctively from the law of continuity, in experience, that the jar axles would serve as permanent anchorages for the main cords of their webs, have woven their webs between the axles and thus makes a trap for the unwary fly; while the cars serve as a rendezvous for the sheep, under which the animals find shelter from the burning rays of the sun, and will possibly serve as a haven against the inclemency of the coming winter, un-

Just Folks
By EDGAR A. GUEST.

IF I HAD HIS MONEY. I wish I had his money. There's a thousand things I'd do. I'd build a children's hospital and keep it going, too. If I had all his millions I'd go round from day to day just looking for a mortgage I could lift and throw away; If I were rich as he is, I would make it my motto.

I've told it to my neighbors and I've told it to my wife. What I could do with money in this vale of mortal strife. And never a rich man passes but I nod my head and say: "Now if I had his money 'twould be spent a different way; I know a lot of needy folks that fellow doesn't see. And you can bet I'd help them if his wealth belonged to me."

I wish I had his money. I believe that I could cure a dozen cases this minute that my relatives endure. There's trouble all round me, there are men in want to-day. Yet he never seems to see them as he goes along his way. But if I had his money I would know the cause of all my grief.

Until I'd done the thing to which the rich are all so blind. I'm saving for the future and it's little I can give. It takes the most of what I earn in decency to live. There's still a mortgage on my house and while it lingers there, my neighbors can't expect that I will shoulder their debt. Sometimes they say I'm stingy, but at heart I'm really so. For if I had a fortune I would gladly do a lot.

Whitbourne Notes.

The work begun some weeks ago on the Colinet Bridge progresses steadily. The bridge, which is being constructed of concrete and steel, will be a fine structure when completed, and will be a connecting link with Placentia and a fine run to Whitbourne for motorists. Let them all come!

The bridge at Rocky River, Whitbourne—opposite Mr. Hesketh Mercer's picturesque and rustic water-wheel sawmill, had some necessary repairs done last week.

Our roads have had "a lick and a promise" once again. Much more could be done if funds permitted, no doubt.

A new store has been opened here of late to supply the men engaged in the pit-prop work with the necessary provisions and outfit. Mr. Parsons being in charge at present.

Mrs. Murrin, widow, has opened a small shop during the past month. Her friends wish her good success in her new venture.

Our wild fruits, especially raspberries, have been very plentiful and the blueberries are in abundance. The much coveted "bakeapple," or cloud-berry, was unfortunately quite scarce again.

The hay crop has been a good one, and in most gardens the potato crop appears to be up to expectations. A cause for thankfulness to a good Providence.

Mr. Reuben Sparkes, who left for Vancouver in July, writes enthusiastically of the land of the Maple Leaf, and will undoubtedly make good in that wonderful country. We wish him all good fortune.

The first thunder storm of the season visited us on the 19th inst., accompanied by heavy rain. The storm was soon over, only lasting for half an hour, however.

The marriage of Mr. Nathaniel Gosse to Miss Hilda Morgan took place here on July 31st in the Anglican church, Rev. C. Jeffery performing the ceremony.

Mrs. Eales and son of St. John's spent a few days here last week with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie, who spent a few days at Heart's Content, returned home on Monday, where they are camping out and with their daughters are enjoying their holiday time, visiting old scenes and favourite haunts at Whitbourne.

Miss Roberts Bond is spending the summer months at "The Grange" with her uncle.

Mr. Gordon Sparkes who terminated his connection with the Reid Mfd. Co. last month, is now engaged in survey work at Colinet with Messrs. S. Miller, Hearn and Kelly, surveyors.

Miss Cowan of St. John's is visiting at the Leslie camps. (Aug. 30th.)

Miss Lena Kilpatrick and Miss Sarah Sharpe, teachers, are spending vacation-time here with their relatives.

Miss Gertrude Sharpe, of Blaketon, late of the Spencer College Staff, will teach at Green's Harbor the coming year, where she has previously taught school and is very popular.

The Anglican School is, we understand, to be re-opened here on or about September 1st. Dr. Blackall has appointed Miss M. Morgan of Clarke's Beach to take charge of the school this year.

A successful Garden Party took place here on Wednesday, 23rd ult., when all denominations joined forces and celebrated the half-holiday in the grounds owned by the Pettipas and kindly lent for the occasion. All the children were formed into a procession early in the afternoon, and carrying flags, banners and gaily decorated poles and headed by the L. O.A. Band, paraded to these picturesque meadows, which overlook one of our beautiful lakes, and with the railway immediately below, winding in and out of the landscape, presents a pretty scene. Special efforts had been made to make it a happy and merry time for the children, and boys and girls were seen engaged running races. Much fun and excitement ensued, especially over the prize-giving. Messrs. G. Sparkes, W. J. Larner, H. and J. Mercer and P. Pettipas organized and successfully carried through the programme of sports. The small people were served with tea on the grass later in the afternoon and fared sumptuously. A daily tea for the adults was served about 5.30, the tables being nicely arranged near the tea tent. Among the visitors were Mr. and Mrs. S. K. Bell, St. John's, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie and family, Miss Cowan, Mrs. Eales, Miss May Murphy, St. John's; Messrs. Parsons and Kent. A lovely day having been thoughtfully provided by the clerk of the weather, Whitbourne was an ideal for the time being. Mr. and Mrs. S. K. Bell contributed most generously to the prize-giving for races won. Several $2 and $1 prizes were bestowed on the young men and maidens who won first and second places, the little folk not being forgotten by the above kind donors who earned everyone's best thanks. Shades of evening falling brought to an end what was undoubtedly a perfect day.

Mr. Albert Morgan, son of Mrs. Morgan, Sr., was united in Hymen's Bonds to Miss Annie Morgan of Blaketon in St. John's Church on the 28th inst. Rev. C. Jeffery joining the happy couple.

Mrs. Albert Noseworthy presented her husband with twin boys on the 28th. The trio are all flourishing at present (Aug. 30th.)

"Loch Leven Hotel" has constantly a stream of visitors, Mrs. John Sparkes being a very busy landlady. Among the visitors from town of late weeks we notice Mr. and Mrs. S. K. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Hall, Mr. and Miss Rogers, Mr. Martin, Miss May Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Crawford and family, and many transients come and go.

Chief Justice, Lady Horwood and Miss Horwood have been spending a quiet holiday at Colinet again this summer.

Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Bond returned from a visit to town this afternoon. CORRESPONDENT. Aug. 31, 1922.

For years I have never considered my stock of household remedies complete unless a bottle of Minard's Liniment was included. For burns, bruises, sprains, frostbites or chilblains it excels, and I know of no better remedy for a severe cold in the head, or that will give more immediate relief, than to inhale from the bottle through the nasal organ. A recent experience in reclaiming what was supposed to be a lost section of a valuable cow's udder has again demonstrated its great worth, and prompts me to recommend it in the highest terms to all who have a herd of cows, large or small. I think I am safe in saying among all the patent medicines there is none that covers as large a field of usefulness as does Minard's Liniment. A real truceism-good for man or beast. CHAS. K. Tom Moore Scores In "Beating the Game."

AT THE NICKEL THEATRE LAST NIGHT.

"Beating the Game" the new Goldwyn picture, starring Tom Moore, which is now running at the Nickel Theatre, is the work of Charles Keaton, the author of several successful stage plays. The picture is an exceptionally good production and has been directed by Victor Schertzinger. In support to Tom Moore, the leading feminine role is played by Hazel Daly who, away from the screen, is the wife of a former Goldwyn director, Harry Beaumont.

The new Tom Moore picture is a fitting tribute for the star, as it gives him a chance to reveal his ability as an actor of both comedy and drama. The story itself dramatizes the honest truth that an honest life is more satisfying both in a material and in a spiritual way than a career outside the pale of law. An excellent cast in support of Tom Moore includes DeWitt C. Jennings, Dick Benson, Nick Clegg, Tom Ricketts, Lydia Knott, William Orlamond and Lydia Yezman.

Titus. The programme was balanced by a splendid comedy subject that kept the audience in good humor. This together with a cartoon reel provided an entertainment of unusual attractiveness.

WHAT HELP ARE YOU MISSING?

About once in so often I have a certain experience. I wonder if other people have it. No, that's not it. I don't wonder. There was an experience which any one person had all the time. Whatever you think, whatever you feel, whatever reactions to your experience, you may be sure that others have been there.

It is the kind of experience I have never had time to take up in the day time, and have half the strength I need. I have discovered that if I will immediately after lunch, in short spells of drowsiness that I can usually get for just a few minutes, and I am infinitely refreshed, and I am better able to handle the business of the day. Yet I have not taken half of the most three-quarters of an hour.

A Recipe for a Nap.
 Some years ago I knew a woman who did not exactly this thing. She was at an inn where I was staying a few weeks and she always napped directly after lunch. "If you go right off," she would say, "the sleepy feeling and then it is a long while to get to sleep." I told her my whole afternoon. It was a lot of good. I wish I could try it.

It always takes me a long time to sleep in the day time. I can't sleep, and besides, I can't get up in the time.

But you would feel so much better.

It would pay in the end," she would insist.

She Didn't Understand.
 And I would smile and shake my head and think that she didn't understand my case, that I was different. But I wasn't different. And everything she told me was true. Only I had to wait to have experience teach me the lesson. Now so often when I lie down for my little nap I think of that woman and say: "How foolish I was not to have formed the habit when she advised it—I know I should be better off to-day if I had."

And then I wonder: Am I doing the same thing to-day? Am I turning deaf ears to counsel that might make me far happier and more efficient? Shall I learn its value some day by experience and look back and say: "How I wish—" and so on.

We MIGHT Suspect.
 I suppose I shall. We all do. But it does seem as if after we had had experience like this a few times we should begin to suspect that some of the things people say to us are worth listening to, and trying.

I wonder if you remember that some years ago I advertised in this column for a favorite poem I had lost track of. Several of my readers sent me copies of the poem I wanted. I have it in my files now and I think it fits in here:

"When I was one-and-twenty,
 I heard a wise man say
 Give crowns and pounds and guineas
 But not your heart away;
 Give pearls away and rubies
 But keep your fancy free;
 But I was one-and-twenty,
 No use to talk to me.
 When I was one-and-twenty,
 I heard him say again,
 The heart out of the bosom
 Was never given in vain;
 'Tis paid with sighs a plenty,
 And sold for endless rue,
 And I am two-and-twenty,
 And oh, 'tis true, 'tis true."
 —A. E. Housman.

Artificial Eyes.

Besides the artificial limbs the construction of which has derived unwelcome activity from the war, the manufacture of artificial eyes has for some time been most extensive. So far from being a mere esthetic question, this, in fact, is a matter of the highest practical, hygienical importance.

Artificial eyes are manufactured in a rather interesting way. To the flattened end of a colorless, transparent enamel stick there is first applied the pupil, after which the iris is formed plastically by means of a thin, sharpened, colored enamel stick. Or else, an even more satisfactory, though more laborious, process, the lines and circles of the iris are traced with the aid of pulverized enamel and well melted into the background.

The enamel tube of the color of the eye is blown out ovally and pierced in front, the edges of the hole being, by means of a little stick of enamel pressed uniformly round and slightly convex. The iris is now inserted into the aperture by means of the colorless stick and well melted in.

Up to Dr. Jones.

It was a party but very polite person who sat next to Jones in a railway station.

"Pardon me," said he to Jones, "but what would you say if I sat on your hat?"

"Suppose you sit on it and then ask me," sarcastically suggested Jones.

"I did," said the party person imperturbably.

He Butted In.

The plumber, quite a man of the world in his way, had called at the club to see the secretary, and someone sent him as a joke into a room where a special sub-committee was sitting in solemn conference. The four important persons turned and glowered at him (writes a correspondent).

Canada's New Flags.

The Department of the Naval Service has issued coloured prints of the new Canadian Red and Blue Ensigns. These prints have been distributed to Dominion Government Departments, Provincial Authorities, and to flag manufacturers.

The Red and Blue Ensigns are Marine flags. When used by Canadian vessels they are defaced by the Shield of the Canadian Coat of Arms in the Fly. The Canadian Red Ensign was authorized by Admiralty Warrant of the 2nd, February, 1892, and is flown by Canadian Registered Merchant Vessels. The Canadian Blue Ensign is flown by Canadian Government ships.

With the adoption of a new Canadian Coat of Arms it was necessary to also adopt new flags. The Canadian Red and Blue Ensigns were altered by substituting the Shield of the new Coat of Arms for that of the old. The new Ensigns are authorized for immediate use but authority has since been granted to use the old flags up to the 31st March, 1922, in order that stocks at present held by Merchantile concerns may not be lost.

HUMOUR OF SCOTTISH POETS. (Contributed.)
Robert Burns, Scottish Poet, was the son of a gardener, and was born at Alloway, near Ayr, Scotland, 1759 and died in 1796.
Sir Walter Scott, Scottish novelist and poet, was born at Edinburgh, 1771 and died in 1832.

There have been few great poets—few poets of any appreciable quality, indeed—anywhere, who have not had a lively and appreciative sense of humour, if they have not actually been positive and productive humourists. It is a faculty of the human mind without which no man can be intellectually great—without which no view of life can be comprehensive and true; a faculty without which Shakespeare could no more have sounded the gamut of human feeling as he did, than a man who is colour-blind could describe the glowing iridescence of the rainbow. In Burns and Scott the most notable among Scottish poets—and mighty influences both in the republic of letters—the faculty of original humour was revealed to an extraordinary degree. In the case of Scott the playfulness of his fancy was made manifest essentially, no doubt, in the Waverley Novels, and in conversation with individuals; his poetry being mainly martial and moving, and severe rather than lightome. In Burns, the greater poet, and the more impulsive genius, there was revealed the greater humourist and the reader wit, as well as the finer sentimentalist.

Alone amid the subtleties of Nature, or touched by the sunbeams in her driving moods, he was reverent in spirit and glowed with adoration as fervid and sincere as ever animated the breast of the royal Hebrew bard himself; but prompted to join the social circle at the festive board, and fired by the spirit of fun, he would dabble and delight a party for hours together by the brilliance and rapidity of his flashes of ready wit and humorous satire. The most ample and effective examples of Burns's humour occur, of course, in his poems, notably in "Tam o' Shanter," and "The Jolly Beggar," in his songs "Duncan Gray," "Tam Glen," and "Sic a Wife as Willie Had," and in some of the rhymed epistles. The impromptu epigrams and epigrams, which find a place in nearly every edition of his works, afford convincing evidence of the pungency of his electric wit, and the annihilating weight of his equally ready satire.

But with all these—particularly the poems and the songs—every adult person in Scotland is so familiar that to quote from one or other of them here would be something like superfluous labour. A few of the number of the impromptu rhymes and epigrams, with descriptions of the circumstances under which they were provoked, may, however, be reproduced en passant. The process will freshen the reader's memory, if it does not actually enlighten his mind.

Burns, like true steel, was ever ready to give fire at the touch of the flint, and being present in a company where an ill-educated pretentive was boring everyone by boasting of the many great people he had fatally been visiting, the poet gave vent to his feelings in the following impromptu stanza, which may be sure effectually silenced the babbling snob before him:

"No more of your titled acquaintances boast
And in lordly circles you've been;
An insect is only an insect at most
Though it crawl on the curls of a queen."
Having been storm-sted one Sunday at Lamington, in Clydesdale, the poet went to church, but the day was cold, and the place so uncomfortable, and the sermon so poor, that he left this protest on the pew which he had occupied:

"As could a wind as ever blew,
A cauldier Kirk, an' it's not few;
As could a preacher's ever speak—
Ye'll a' be hot ere I come back."
While in Edinburgh, he visited at the studio of a well-known painter, who was at that time engaged on a picture of Jacob's dream. Burns embodied his criticism of the work in the following lines, which he wrote on the back of a sketch still preserved in the painter's family:

"Dear— I'll gie some advice,
Ye'll tak' it if ye canvill;
Ye shouldna paint at angels' maid,
But try and paint the devil.
To paint an angel's little mark,
Wi' Auld Nick there's less danger;
Ye'll say draw a weel-kent face
But no see weel a stranger."

Never perhaps was there a neater compliment paid to feminine loveliness than that paid by Burns to Miss Ainslie in an impromptu rhyme. During the poet's border tour he went to church on Sunday, accompanied by the sister of his travelling companion, Mr. Robert Ainslie, of Berrywell, Dunfermline. The text for the day happened to contain a severe denunciation of obstinate sinners, wi' lang, tongue, mischief makers, and d—llars, and the poet, observing the young lady intently turning over the leaves of her Bible in search of the passage, took out a small piece of paper and wrote the following lines, which he immediately passed to her:

"Fair maid ye need not take the hint
Nor idle texts pursue;
Twas guilty sinners that he meant
Not angels such as you."

Ready-witted graces before meat were evolved, by the poet on demand, time and again. Having met some friends to dine with them at the Globe Tavern, Dumfries, on one occasion, when a sheep's head happened to be the fare provided, he was asked to give something new as a grace, and instantly delivered the following:

"O God, when hunger pinches sore,
Do thou stand us in stead;
And send us from thy bounteous store
A few o' weel's head."

After having dined, however, and greatly enjoyed the repast, he was appealed to return thanks, and did so in four lines revealing native wit by saying:

"O Lord, since we have feasted thus,
Which we so little merit;
Let Meg now take away the flesh,
And Joek bring in the spirit."

Than Burns's epigram "On a Suicide," nothing more scathingly sarcastic was ever written. It is as if he could not express too much scorn of the miserable coward who would eschew the obligations of life by an act of self-destruction:

"Earth'd up, here lies an imp o' hell,
Planted by Satan's dibble;
Poor silly wretch, he's dammed himself—
To save the Lord the trouble."

Burns was standing one day on the quay at Greenock, when a wealthy merchant belonging to the town had the misfortune to fall into the harbor. He was no swimmer, and would certainly have been drowned had not a sailor, at the risk of his own life, plunged in and rescued him from his dangerous situation. The merchant, plunged in and rescued him from his plight, put his hand into his pocket and presented the sailor with a shilling. The crowd, who were by this time collected, loudly protested against the insignificance of the sum, but Burns, with a smile of ineffable scorn, entreated them to restrain their clamour, "For," said he, "the gentleman is, of course, the best judge of the value of his own life."

When Things Go Wrong

and it Seems Difficult to Rectify Them.

BY JEREMY BENTHAM, JR.
ARTICLE I.
POSITION OF THE WRITER DEFINED.

In the Evening Telegram's pages, I shall speak plainly in my opinions from time to time under the caption, "I am not identifying myself with any political party, and have no special interest in any one side of the question." I want to tell the truth fearlessly and as effectively as possible, and my manner of writing has been in the highest manner in accordance with me. I have learned from my own experience that to mean what I say and to say what I mean and to mean what I say—to cut my sentences short and to be afraid of repeating the word, not to talk about "the state of the nation," but to call things what they are, and to be learned from him to say what I want to say in the purest, the most, the strongest, and, and the most rhythmic English that I can command in the most of the political matters which I have given any thought at all, I have come to my own conclusions first; and I have had the pleasure of seeing many practical men to the same conclusions.

REASON TO BE ALARMED.
When the very fountains of legislation are polluted by "lobbying" and corrupt means; when the hand of the law is extended, and not allowed to rest, to Municipal councillors and to Municipal legislators; when lawmakers become the pious tools of some selfish and greedy capitalists, instead of subserving the interests of the people and the commonwealth; then, indeed, all patriotic citizens have reason to be alarmed about the future of their country.

TO BRING ABOUT A BETTER CONDITION OF THINGS.

Obviously, to bring about a better condition of things, several expedients will have to be adopted. First, there must be the enactment of strict and wholesome laws for preventing bribery and corruption, accompanied with condign punishment against the violators of the law; second, a pure, enlightened, and independent magistracy to interpret and enforce the laws. Third, a vigilant and fearless press—such as we had here from 1888 to the end of the last century—that will reflect and create a healthy public opinion. And fourth, the maintenance of party lines, which is an indispensable method for preserving political purity.

SHORTCOMINGS OF OUR SCHOOL SYSTEM.

Then we should insist upon the incorporation into our school system familiar lessons embodying a reliable history of our country, a brief sketch of her heroes, on land and sea, statesmen and patriots, whose civic virtues the rising generation will thus be taught to emulate. The duties and rights of citizens, along with reverence for our political institutions, should likewise be inculcated. There is danger that the country whose history is not known and cherished will become to the masses only an abstraction, or, at least, that it will be in touch with them only on its less lovable side, the taxes and burdens it imposes. Men lost in an unnatural isolation, strangers to the past life of their country, living on a soil to which they hold, only by the passing interests of the present, as atoms without cohesion, are not able to realize and bring home to themselves the claims of a country that not only is, but that was before them, and that will be, as history alone can teach, long after them.

EVENTS WE OUGHT TO COMMEMORATE.

As we learn from sacred history, the Hebrew people were commanded to commemorate by annual observances their great experiences as a nation. This is certainly in accordance with the fitness of things. In nearly all civilized countries there are certain days set apart to recall outstanding events in their history, and to pay honor to the memory of the heroes who figured in them. If holidays are useful to those that are to the manor born, they are still more imperatively demanded for people of foreign birth, such as the Chinese and Assyrians, who sometimes come into our city and who are strangers to our civil institutions. The annual recurring holiday will create and develop in their minds a knowledge of our colonial history, if not an admiration for our system of government as at present operated. It will help, also, to mould our people into unity of political faith. By the young, especially, are holidays welcomed with keen delight, and as there is a natural, though unconscious, association in the mind between the civic festivity and the cause that gave it birth, their attachment to the day will extend to the patriotic event or to the men whose anniversary is celebrated.

LIVING IN A MOMENTOUS TIME.

The political outlook to-day is not an inspiring one. We are living in a momentous time in which our influence may be brought to bear to tell for good or for evil. In such times one word spoken strongly and decisively will tell more than whole years of work when things are not so critical. Hitherto all politics and public affairs have been largely decided without the exercise of that authority by the masses of the people; but now democracy, having entered upon its heritage, has to decide whether "this Newfoundland of ours," is, in all that relates to family life, to be a model dominion or the contrary, whether or not the ideal of Christian morality, of Christian living, of Christian government is to be our guide, or whether as a people, disclaiming all that has made our history great and glorious, we are to say: "It does not matter a straw about morality or immorality in public life; the one thing needful is to get your clever man and see that he votes straight."

THE THINGS TO STAND UP FOR.
Any way, the things our soldiers fought for and died for during the World War of 1914-18 are the things they should stand up for now. Sir William Jones, who lived in England while the American revolutionary war was going on, put the sum total of civic duties in a nutshell in these lines:—

"What constitutes a state?"
Not high-raised battlements or thick wall or moated gate;
Not cities proud with spires and turrets crowned;
Not bays and broad-armed ports where, laughing at the storm, rich navies ride;
Not starred and spangled courts where low-browed business waits perhaps to pride!
No—men, high-minded men; Men who their duties know, And know their rights and know-civil institutions. The annual recurring holiday will create and develop in their minds a knowledge of our colonial history, if not an admiration for our system of government as at present operated. It will help, also, to mould our people into unity of political faith.

HEIRS OF THE OLD HEROIC STRAIN.
There ought still to be men of honor and integrity amongst us, such as really "constitute a state." We had them in days gone by—honest men like Little, Hoyle, Carter, Shea, Whiteway and Winter. Most of these, when pretty well worn out in the public service, retired on a not too liberal allowance, and died, if not poor men, at any rate in very unpretentious circumstances. But they were incorruptible and patriotic to the end! In the ruins of Ross Castle, at Killybegs, are the graves of the ancient Kings of Ireland. On their tombstones may still be deciphered the symbols of royalty; but close beside them are other monuments marked with the transverse sword and cross. "These," said the guide, "are the 'tombs of crusaders.'"

"Their swords are rust,
Their good steeds dust,
Their souls are with their God, we trust."

"The days of chivalry," wrote Edmund Burke, "are long gone by." No, never—never, while men are ready to pledge life and sacred honor for God and humanity. The former days were not much better than now. "The world turns on its axis every twenty-four hours, and with every turn it rolls a little further into the light of Providence." The trouble with us, in public life, is that we are too liberal with the people's money. As Solon says: "It has always been more difficult for a man to keep than to get; for, in one case, fortune aids, which often assists injustice; but, in the other case, sense is required. Therefore, we often see persons deficient in intellectual equipoise rise to wealth; and then, from want of prudence, roll head over heels to the bottom." Any way, it is necessary, imperatively necessary, at such an extremely critical juncture as the present, that the government of the country, which does not represent a clique or a privileged class, which is supposed to be the organized expression of the wants and wishes of the whole colony, should rise to a true conception of its duties, and should use the resources, the experience, and the talent at its disposal to promote the greater happiness of the masses of the people.

Householders
PREPARING TO BURN WOOD INSTEAD OF COAL.

READING, Pa., Aug. 28.—The Berks County Conservation Association's campaign, urging throughout the country the use of timber of little marketable value to avert a possible fuel famine, has been endorsed by the state department of forestry at Harrisburg. The plea of the association to Berks land owners has already borne fruit, and many householders have laid in a supply of wood. The association is posting placards throughout the county urging householders to use wood cut from such timber, in order to save coal for hospitals, schools, churches and industries. Harvey P. Heintz, president of the association, has received the following letter from Major R. Y. Stuart, State Commissioner of forestry:—

"I think the Berks County Conservation Association's plan for calling the attention of the public to the availability of suitable wood, particularly hignood chestnut, for fuel as a means of averting distress this winter, is an excellent one. The department in turn is encouraging the use of chestnut on the state forests for this purpose. I believe the campaign will do much good, particularly in those sections of the state wherein it is feasible to use wood as fuel without a change in equipment. Further, to the extent to which hignood chestnut can be utilized, the winter-kill forest are benefited."

The bans had been published for the first time in an English rural church. After the service the prospective bridegroom went to the vicar and asked if he could have his bans changed. "Of course," said the vicar, but with great surprise. "You are not married nor bound yet in any way. But why do you want them changed?" "Well, parson, it's just that I've been thinking it over, and seems to me I'd rather have her sister." "You can please yourself," replied the vicar coldly, "but of course new bans must be published." The bridegroom-to-be looked anxious. "Ah, parson," he stammered, "I paid a half crown for putting up those bans. Will I have to give another half crown?" "Certainly," said the vicar brusquely, and prepared to go. "Ah," sighed the rural swain, and then, with sudden determination, "Ah, well, vicar, leave 'em be as it is."

Why Does A Cup of Tea In the Woods Taste Better?

Some of the "kill joys" will tell you it is imagination. But you mustn't mind them for that is what they lack.

The joys of troutling are not for them. The music of the salmon reel they will never know. The beauty of the berry patch, the red of the partridge berry, the blue of the whort berry and the satisfaction of the well filled basket are not for them.

Even the beauty of our Newfoundland scenery, the glory of the Topsail sunset will leave them cold. But let us forget them and let us make for the old Southside Hill, now carpeted with the green and red of the partridge berry, or out to Topsail, or up to Manuels River, or let us make for the old "Cow Path" leading to beautiful Holyrood (and along the said "Cow Path" the whorts never grew thicker than they do this year) and let us "boil the kettle", and I bet you it will be a good "cup of tea", unless your grocer has done you dirty altogether. For the secret of it is, you steep the tea as soon as the kettle boils, and any old tea will taste pretty good, I'll bet you.

But it is just as well to take the best tea with you, it doesn't cost much more. The last time we were out we had a splendid tea and it only cost us 65c. lb. It had a sort of artistic name—"Mount View". We bought it at Henry Blair's. They had another good tea there at 50c. per pound, but the clerk said "the best is the best", and we believe him.

Freshly boiled water is the secret of the cup of tea you drink out camping, fishing, berry picking or picnicking, but it is just as well to have the best tea. You can get it for 65c. per lb. at Blair's "Mount View", that is the slogan.
