110 PRINCE WM STREET, ST. JOHN N. B. FOR EVERY ONE!

Subscribers of this Paper. Read. The London Publishing Company have just issued three beautiful Chromatic works of art in the shape of mottoes, which for beauty and worth are without an equal; these Chromatic paintings comprise the following subjects:

NO. 1. GOD BLESS OUR HOME.—In old English type, beautifully embellished with vines and roses running through the entire work; in the centre of the letter G a mother is seen teaching her two children to repeat a prayer, while to her right are two larger figures robed in white—angels singing praises to God; the background is a beautiful landscape scene representing No. 2. THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD.—In old English type, elegantly embellished with the most beautiful vines, ferns and flowers. The central figure is here represented by the Lord as a shepherd carrying in his arm the shepherd's crook and the lost lamb. The effect is delivered beautiful. In the land.

These works of art are given to you upon the following conditions, which please observe closely: The cost of postage, malling, tubing, wrapping, etc., is 25 cts. for each picture when sent singly, or 50 cts. for all three when sent to one address. The following order must be cut out and sent with 25 cts. for any one picture ordered, or 50 cts. for all three. Be sure to draw your pen through the picture you do not want.

ORDER. On receipt of this order, and 25 cts. for any one picture, or 50 cts. to r-turn to the sender the pictures so ordered, viz:

GOD BLESS OUR HOME. THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD.

PRAISE THE LORD.

All pictures are guaranteed to reach you safely, with charges fully paid.

Signed: LONDON PUBLISHING CO., 183 and 185 West 2d St., Cincinnati, O Note:—No pictures will be sent without the order being enclosed; when only one or two are ordered, the balance must be crossed off. The above order is only good for 90 days from the date of this paper, after which our arrangement for supplying these pictures ceases. All orders must be addressed LONDON PUBLISHING CO, 188 and 185 W. Second St. Cincinnati, O.

CHAPTER VII.—TENTED.

Sir Frederick was dressed pretty much as he had been on the occasion of his visit to Brauxholme, vestring the same heavy overcoat and overlapping cap.

"Hallo," cried Dick Phillimore "hallo the Been's my wife—I was thinking that suppose I could put off the marriage with this American girl for some two or three months, and that in the meantine you and I and Kitty were to take a little contage in some vurnl district, not a con bout to make.

Mr. Philimore emitted a long, low

"You can understand, perhaps, the object of that journey?" asked the baronet, looking hard at him.
"I conclude," said Mr. Phillimore, "It was to see Kitty."
"Rightly guessed," said

"And you have seen her?"
"Thave."
"Explained what you wished?"
"Sufficiently."
"And the result?"

"She refuses," said Sir Frederick.
"By the Lord, I knew it?" said Dick Phillimore, bringing his hand heavily down upon the table.
"Test, sir," said Sir Frederick, rising and she refused."

"How did she take it?" asked Dick

It might have been done with some women; a good pension and a new line of life would be an object to them, but not with such a woman as Kitty. The American scheme is blown into the air, dear sir, and no two ways about it."

"By all the saints, it shall not be bloom into the air, dear sir, and no two ways about it."

"Certainly," said Dick Phillimore; "Certainly," said Dick Phillimore; the might have been done with some women; a good pension and a new line of life would be an object to them, but not with such a woman as Kitty. The American scheme is blown into the air, dear sir, and no two ways about it."

"By all the saints, it shall not be bloom into the air," said Sir Frederick, pausing in his walk, and glaring at his companion; "but I will carry it through one way or the other."

"Certainly," said Dick Phillimore; "never say die and that sort of thing.

"Do you think she would trust you" asked the barronet.

"Do you mean with money?" asked Dick Phillipsore. "If so, she would be the first person that ever did."

"Pahaw!" said Sir Frederick, "we are talking serious business. I mean, do you think she could put confidence in you—do what you tell her—act as you advised?"

"To a certain extent, yes," said he. Sir Trederick was silent for a 'few minutes. Them in a lower tone, he said:

"All the drinking, all the card playing and general dissipation which you have gone through during the last few years have not obliterated your medical knowledge, I suppose?"

"Not in the least," said he. "At the worst times I could always dip my head into a bucket of water and steady myself sufficiently to comprehend the condition of a case, and I can do it now. But what on earth are you driving at?"

"I was thinking," said Sir Frederick, speaking alony and looking nervously round—"I must tell you that I made company forever. This is not a very swell apartment," he added, looking round, "but it is too good for such a Hannah as soon as possible; and as soon round, "but it is too good for such a crawling serpent as you. Get out of it!" and he pointed to the door.

"So this is your gratitude, is it, Richard Phillimore?" and Sir Frederick, slowly rising; "this is the way you talk to a man who has many a time shood between you and starvation. All yight he it as your gar. Labell live to the door, and the next strength of the strength of the hair immediately; often renews the growth she saw Sir Frederick at the window.

He points to the door, and the next stripe and as soon as possible; and as soon as soon as the soon as the girl was gone, as the right, be it as you and starvation. All right, be it as you say. I shall live to see you rotting in a ditch yet!"

"And I shall live to see you swing-ing on a gallows!" cried Dick. "Clear out now, while there is time, for, by the Lord, I can not control myself much from his chair, and nervously walking up and down the room with short, rapid steps. "I put it to her as strongly as I could, brought all the tact I had to bear upon it, made her see, as I thought, how plain it would be for both our interests and she refused."

There's a precious villain for you!" at his companion, and disappeared.
"There's a precious villain for you!"
muttered Dick Phillimore, sinking into

"How did she take it?" asked Dick Phillimore, leaning back in his chair, and looking up at his friend; "quietly?"
"Quietly!" echoed Sir Frederick; "as quietly as a tigress would, if you were to endeavor to steal one of her cubs out one way or the other."

"Certainly," said Dick Phillimore;
"never say die and that sort of thing.
I admire your pluck; but what is the other way?"

There was a light thin haze, what is commonly known as a sea-fog, rising from the surface of the water, and rendering dim and shadowy all the objects which had been encircled in its embrace;

"Certainly," said Dick Phillimore; "mever say die and that sort of thing. I admire your pluck; but what is the other way!"

"Do you really want to know?" said the baronet, in a low voice.

"Well," said Dick Phillimore, producing the previously mentioned coins from his pocket, "as these are the only two portraits of her majesty—not like het, by the way, too young, and an arrangement of the hair such as I never saw her wear—as those are the only two rayal portraits which I possess, and as we have for some years past been hunting in couples, during which you have provided most of the provender, I confess to a not unnatural interest in the subject."

"See here, then," said Sir Frederick, seating, himself at the table, on which he leant are arma, and brought his face close opposite to his companion's; "I have not thought it out much; it is all in the rough as I lay it before you, but an idea has crossed my mind that—if this plan is carried out, it is clear that Kitty must be gotten rid of somehow—is it not!"

"If you are to marry Miss Minnie Adams—and the law against bigamy is not annulled—it is perfectly clear that your present wife must be gotten rid of," said Dick Phillimore.

"Stop that fooling and listen, man," said Sir Frederick. "You and Kitty have been always very good friends, have you not?".

"It hink so," said Dick. "She used to think me funny and odd, and laughed at my queer ways—oil, yes, she and I always got on very well together.

"Do you mean with money?" asked Dick Phillimore. "If so, she would be the first tersor that ever went your mark the poor creature was deranged.
