

MARSHAL VON HINDENBURG IS REPORTED DEAD

SIR HINDENBURG'S GOVT. HIGHEST EXCEEDING POWERS LEMOUX REMINDS MASTERS

Former Postmaster-General P. points Out That Borden Was Advised Many Times To Act Carefully—Objects to Ministers Being Abroad During Critical Time.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Quebec, July 13.—In an interview here today, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, former postmaster-general, who is now to look after the exemptions of employees of local shipyards, in company with W. N. Tilley, K.C., who has been appointed to investigate the matter, stated: "I do not want to discuss for the present the climax reached by the military and the civil authorities regarding the writs of habeas corpus, but will state that this comes under one of the many warnings given by Sir Wilfrid Laurier to the Government every time it wanted to go beyond its powers."

POLITICAL ANARCHY.
"We are now living in a period of political anarchy. While great problems need to be settled at home, while during a war a country needs its leaders, Canada sees its ministers traveling from place to place instead of remaining at home to look after its destinies. I do not want to be a prophet, but the people are irritated. All classes are now protesting against a Government which has shown such incapacity."
"Strange to say the kicking does not come from Quebec, but from the other provinces, and has been brought into a legal sphere. You hear men like Justice Beak, of the Appeal Court of Alberta, saying the order-in-council has abolished the law."

AVALANCHE OF WRITS MADE OUT AGAINST ARMY OFFICERS IN THE DISTRICT OF QUEBEC

Quebec, July 13.—Today witnessed a veritable avalanche of applications for writs of habeas corpus on behalf of men recently drafted into the service under the military service act. The total for the week is 23, and in addition to these there were a few outstanding from last week.
In each case the court, as a matter of course, ordered the writs to issue, and called upon the various conscripts to appear before the court in person.

UNITED FARMERS BEHIND MOVE TO SECURE TEN DRAFTED MEN

Toronto, July 13.—Acting for ten men who have been drafted and who are held in the army under compulsion, one of whom has already been dispatched overseas, Gordon Waldron is applying to the courts on their behalf for writs of habeas corpus. In some of the cases Mr. Waldron is acting as the instance of the United Farmers.
The ten men whose release is sought are:

FORMER ENGINEER COMMITTS SUICIDE, TAKING PARIS GREEN

Harry White Found in Bridges Street House.

LEFT ASYLUM MONDAY No Inquest as Coroner Is Satisfied as to Cause of Death.

Harry White, aged about 50 years, a former M. C. engine was found dead in bed at a house at 1156 Brydges street at noon today.
The discovery was made by some residents in that vicinity who had not seen White since morning, his habit being to rise early.
White committed suicide by drinking a quantity of paris green mixture which was found close at hand, and the mouth and teeth showed evidences that the poison had been taken.
White boarded at the home of a family named Hill, a few blocks away, but lived alone at the house where he was found dead.

Dr. Robert Ferguson, coroner, was called and decided that an inquest was unnecessary, and pronounced the case as one of deliberate suicide.
White was discharged from the asylum on Monday, and his rash act is believed to be due to despondency.
The body will be held for 48 hours awaiting relatives.

EVIDENCE UNDER OATH Royal Commission Powers Granted Toronto Board.

Toronto, July 13.—Sir Wm. Hearst, who has agreed to the request of the earliest striking civic employees to give the powers of a royal commission to the board of arbitrators who will adjudicate on the differences between the city and the men. He told a deputation of labor men this morning that this authority would be given as soon as the complete personnel of the board was decided on.

FOUR LYING ON STREET, INJURED, BOY IS UNABLE TO TELL CAUSE

Was Riding His Bicycle When Some Accident Happened.

UNCONSCIOUS FOR TIME Blake Whitcroft Later Able To Say Nothing Struck Him.

Found lying unconscious on King street, between William and Maitland streets, by two teamsters at 10:30 this morning, Blake Whitcroft, about 15 years of age, of 747 Grey street, was taken to the office of Dr. Graham, 510 King street. In the absence of Dr. Graham, Dr. Black was called, and had the lad removed to Victoria Hospital. He is suffering from concussion of the brain, and his face is badly cut; he has also several bruises on the arm. He partially regained consciousness, and was able to tell his name and address. How the accident happened he could not remember. He says that he was not struck. As he was riding a wheel, Dr. Black says it is possible that he fell off the bicycle and sustained the injuries. All the lad remembers of the accident is that he stopped wheeling suddenly. The rest is a blank. His condition is improving, and hope his recovery is entertained by the doctors.

MONTREAL PLANT WRECKED; EIGHT PERSONS KILLED

Upper Floor of Munitions Factory Plunges to the Basement.

Montreal, July 13.—The upper floor in the munitions factory, Limited, St. Paul street, collapsed this morning, estimated at five, being injured.

The accident occurred shortly after the day shift had retired to the night shift, when there were between 400 and 500 workmen in the factory. A large section of the floor, which was supported by its load of shells and the second floor, which broke like paper under the weight.

With added impetus and the additional weight of machines that fell from the second floor, the debris hurtled to the first floor, where several steam-fitters and tinsmiths were at work.

The accident occurred shortly after the day shift had retired to the night shift, when there were between 400 and 500 workmen in the factory. A large section of the floor, which was supported by its load of shells and the second floor, which broke like paper under the weight.

Those who were in the building at the time declare that the collapse of the floor occurred without the slightest warning, the first intimation being in the form of a terrific crash with mingled screams, followed by a avalanche of debris, shells and machines.

Firemen and policemen worked feverishly to get at those buried beneath the debris, but it was soon seen from the weight of the wreckage that those entombed would never escape alive.

TOUCHED LIVE WIRE.
Montreal, July 13.—Eight men were killed by coming into contact with a live wire at the plant of the Metal Box Company at Montreal East this morning.

A German raiding party, which advanced upon the British lines in Flanders, in the Meuse sector, was repulsed.

The German artillery developed activity during the night on the Flanders front, and opposite Beaumont Hamel.

CUBANS HAVE ADOPTED COMPULSORY SERVICE

Havana, Cuba, July 13.—The bill to establish compulsory military service in Cuba, followed by 189,648 J. N. Rose, was approved by the House last night by a vote of 45 to 28. By previous agreement a committee consisting of three Conservatives and an equal number of Liberals, was then appointed to revise the provisions of the bill, and is expected to report on Monday, when debate will be taken up on the amendments.

The bill is based on the Chilean military law. As it now stands, it would make it compulsory to draft all able-bodied male citizens between the ages of 20 and 30, and would be perpetual in its operation.

WHO KNOWS THIS HERO?

A Canadian corporal, who went over the top alone at 8:30 a.m., and approached an enemy pill-box from the rear, and while doing so was spotted by one of the enemy. He shot this man and three others who came out of the pill-box, seized a fourth, and started for his own line again. Six of the enemy were made up fired at him, but still he drove his prisoner towards his own trench. He emptied his revolver into the six Germans, who were then sniped at by the corporal's men. His revolver was hit by a bullet and grazed. He brought his prisoner in.—Canadian Official Photo. Copyright Canadian War Records.

TEUTON PEACE EMISSARY IS "TURNED DOWN" BY ALLIES

Washington, D. C., July 13.—Reports of the repulse by Allied legations in Bern of an alleged Austrian emissary have been confirmed by the Journal of Geneva, says an official dispatch today from Switzerland.

According to the reports an Austrian from the pacifist party of Professor Lammach, arrived several days ago at Bern. This emissary presented himself at several legations of the Allied powers, but in no case was he received. Professor Lammach is the individual who on several former occasions is said to have made peace overtures to Americans as well as representatives of other Allied countries.

FULL SUPPORT OF NEW SIBERIAN GOVT. IS GIVEN ENTENTE

Renews All Treaties Thrown Out by Bolsheviks.

London, July 13.—The Allies will have the full support of the new Siberian Government, according to assurances sent by the provincial board of the new government, which has been proclaimed provisional ruler of Siberia, to the corresponding Daily Mail at Harbin. From his headquarters at Paganitsa, in Eastern Manchuria, Gen. Horvath, who is the Russian correspondent as follows:

"Paragraph 5 of the program of my Government, which establishes the renewal of all treaties with the Allied powers, is at once confirmed by the intention on our part to act in complete accord with our brave allies and to return to the Russian ranks those who are fighting with the enemy."

Commenting on developments in Russia where, it says, events are moving with great rapidity, the Times contends that the Russian revolution, who have practically seized all Siberia, must be helped without delay.

"Manifestly Japan is in the best position to send help quickly," the Times adds, "but we trust that eventually all the allies will participate in an enterprise so full of promise."

GENERAL RAIN GIVES PRAIRIE CROPS BOOST

Winnipeg, July 13.—Rain was general in Manitoba yesterday, according to information reaching here last night from the various centres throughout the province. Great benefit will be derived from the rainfall, which started yesterday afternoon and continued this morning, as practically all crops were in need of moisture, though the conditions in the West are generally favorable. It is reported as far west as Moomsmin, Sask.

10,000 SLACKERS ARE CAUGHT AT CHICAGO

Chicago, July 13.—More than 1,000 men of draft age spent last night at police stations owing to inability to show registration or classification cards.

Approximately 10,000 men were brought into police stations and the federal building in the round-up of alleged slackers during the last two days. The men were released after obtaining their credentials from their homes.

Major Tolman, supervisor of the selective draft work here, said the canvass for slackers was successful, but that Chicago shows a low percentage of draft avoiders.

BRITISH CASUALTIES 14,911 FOR LAST WEEK

London, July 13.—British casualties reported in the week ending today totalled 14,911 officers and men, compared with the aggregate of 17,335 in the previous week.

FORCE SENT BY BRITISH TO SIBERIA Will Help Guard Vladivostok From the Advancing Bolsheviks.

Washington, July 13.—British reinforcements have been dispatched to Siberia, according to official information received here today, to assist the Russians and Czechoslovakians guarding the Allied stores from Bolsheviks acting with German prisoners, who are reported to be advancing upon Vladivostok.

FRENCH PUSHING ADVANCE POSTS ON OISE FRONT

500 Yards More of the Crown Prince's Holdings Taken by Foch.

Paris, July 13.—In an operation carried out last night on the front between Montdidier and the Oise, the French pushed their advance posts forward a distance of approximately 500 yards in the vicinity of the Porte France, the war office announced today.

THE WAR SITUATION

[By Associated Press.]
Success has crowned further Allied advances into the German lines between Ypres and Rheims. For more than two weeks the Allies have been jamming into the German defences here and there, and the results now are just as favorable as at the beginning.

For the first time since the attrition campaign was undertaken, the French have struck with force in the Picardy battlefield. Along the Aisne River, northwest of Montdidier, the French advanced their lines more than a mile on a front of three miles, and captured over five hundred prisoners. This blow, like the recent ones by the French, has been made by the British and the French, and is the first German offensive begun on March 21.

German Position Endangered.
In capturing Castel and strong fortified positions the French have advanced almost to the western bank of the Aisne. Further gains southward toward Malen-Raineville will endanger seriously the German positions west of the Aisne, and toward the Somme, or go on the valley of the Aisne, which joins the Somme near Amiens.

Between the Aisne and the Marne the Germans apparently still do not take seriously the French advance in the forest of Villers-Cotterets. Several villages and fortified farms, including Corcy and Longpont, have been taken by the French this week, but the Germans have made no serious efforts to retake the positions.

Bad weather continues on the British front, and the British are slowly being forced off the high ground.

HAN COMMANDER DIES OF APOPLEXY FOLLOWING CLASH WITH THE KAISER

Von Hindenburg Succumbs To Congestion of Brain Is News From German Headquarters Through Amsterdam Sources—Said To Have Quarrelled Furiously With Emperor Over Paris Offensive.

Amsterdam, July 13.—Field Marshal von Hindenburg is dead, according to the newspaper Les Nouvelles. His death is said to have occurred after a stormy interview with the German emperor at great headquarters.

The newspaper Les Nouvelles, which reports the death of the German leader, is a newspaper in the French language published at The Hague.

The violent interview between von Hindenburg and Emperor William occurred on May 16, Les Nouvelles says. It was followed by an apoplectic stroke, which ultimately resulted in the field marshal's death.

The newspaper says its information was obtained from "good sources in the occupied portion of Belgium."

KAISER'S ARMY CHIEF IS REPORTED DEAD

In the last six months there has been a growing rumor of the death of Field Marshal von Hindenburg, and there have been many reports that he has been in poor health. A dispatch received in London Friday from The Hague quoted a Dutch traveler from Germany as declaring that a report that von Hindenburg was ill, and that the work at great headquarters had been turned over to Gen. von Ludendorff, had spread all over Germany. The newspapers were not permitted to mention the matter.

Keeping step with the reports of Field Marshal von Hindenburg's health have been statements from Germany indicating that the field marshal and Emperor William had had violent and stormy interviews regarding the conduct of the campaign. The Tribune of Geneva reported Hindenburg to be suffering from an acute nervous disease. The newspaper declared that he had learned from a reliable source that his mental capacity was much affected, and that he was confined in a private sanatorium. It added that the field marshal had taken no responsible part in the offensive on the western front.

At the outbreak of the war Field Marshal von Hindenburg was a general almost to the westward. He was credited with evolving and carrying out the campaign against the French in the West. He was the chief of the general staff in succession to Gen. Falkenhayn, who had been killed in the battle of the Marne. He was the chief of the general staff in succession to Gen. The emperor and the field marshal are said to have had serious differences of opinion concerning the German offensive in the West. The field marshal was reported to have been in poor health, and the emperor was reported to have been in poor health.

CONGRESS IS PLANNING TO TAKE RECESS UNTIL THE END OF AUGUST

Washington, D. C., July 13.—Plans of a recess of Congress until the middle or last of August, which failed a week ago, were said to have been revived today.

In the Senate, adoption of the resolution authorizing the recess was over the telephone, cable and radio systems for the period of the war, was expected to be a final vote today. Favorable action on the resolution seemed assured. Prohibition advocates were said to have agreed to postponement of a vote on the national war time prohibition amendment until after the recess.

Despite strong opposition, Administration leaders were confident that the agricultural appropriation bill, voted yesterday by the president because of its amendment fixing a new wheat price which would be passed today, was being considered as leaving the Senate calendar free of necessary legislation, and as permitting a recess.

WILL AWAIT JUDGMENT ON THE CALGARY CASE

Vancouver, B. C., July 13.—A case involving the administration of the Canadian military service act, was started in supreme court here yesterday, when John Corning, a young Vancouver lawyer, instituted habeas corpus proceedings to secure his release from the present term of the court.

The order nisi was made, but it is said the decision of the court here will be withheld until the result of the Calgary cases is known.

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE PEOPLE.

A SERIOUS-MINDED reader of The Advertiser, who has been a consistent and conscientious Liberal since he came into possession of the franchise, has written to ask what attitude should be taken toward the Government by a Canadian who has several sons at the front, but who is out of sympathy with the present Government both because of its origin and its methods of transacting the business of the country. Should he remain silent as to the defects of the Government or its individual components? Should he swallow their blunders in silence and utter no word of complaint when he believes the country cries for unifying and strong leadership? In a word, as he stated the case:

"My loyalty cannot be disputed, but am I truly loyal in the manner of Junius when I submit to arbitrary measures or measures that appear to be arbitrary to me? Should I not raise my voice in protest over weakness and dishonesty and mismanagement? Am I loyal if I advise or submit to those things which in my opinion sap the strength of the country in its moment of peril?"

Whether or not the Government of the country was honestly elected, whether it has carried out its pledges and fulfilled its duty to the men at the front, it may be said that it is the only body to which the war program of Canada has been entrusted. It is the only Government Canada has or can have, and those of its enactments which concern the prosecution of the war should be supported in a positive manner. Every order concerning military service or national service, every tax imposed, every regulation framed for the control of foodstuffs, should be obeyed to the letter and with the firm resolution that these things are done in the interests of the war. In a sense the country is like a regiment of soldiers. These soldiers may or may not have had anything to do with the selection of their officers, and little respect for them, but insofar as they are related to their officers as soldiers they must carry out the orders of their officers. "Theirs not to reason why, theirs but to do or die" is the proper spirit of a country at war.

Every Canadian worthy of the name is aware that the enemy this country has been fighting is a dastardly enemy, a menace to the future of civilization, a symbol of the anti-Christian philosophy which would wreck all moral law and translate hell to earth. Only the pro-German element which exists in every country will seek to deny that the participation of this country in the war is just and positively necessary. Canada is in the war not only as a unit of the British Empire, but as a unit of that world civilization that is now solidly arrayed against the Hun. The more the people realize this the stronger will be the war effort of the country. Lack of leadership, the failure to achieve an inspiration that will make everyone anxious to place himself on a war basis, is not a question for individual conduct. A man should not slacken his war effort because he disagrees with the country's Government. The stronger he is in genuine patriotism the further he will go in advance of that Government to make the country's effort count for more. The Government is only a number of people; the whole people are the country. But he will stand with the Government in its enactments that concern war service. His criticism of that Government should be indicated by the distance he goes beyond that Government rather than the distance he lags behind it.

Disagreement as to the proper methods of winning the war are certain to occur. Honest disagreement as well as dishonest agreement have marked the pathway of the nation. A union of parties appealed to some, unselfishly to many, but selfishly to many others. Broad men saw a greater success for war effort through the organization of the war administration apart from the politicians and the profiteers. Those leaders who had proved themselves should have been retained, and the "big men" from all walks of life should have formed the backbone of government, as has been the case in Britain and the United States. Merit, rather than political standing or favoritism with the political powers should have been the measure of a man's capacity to sit in an ideal wartime government. But that was not to be. A government which will itself to power won the day and has carried on the war policy.

The Canadian Government is deserving of support from every citizen worthy of the name in its war undertakings. The Canadian Government is also deserving of receiving the full force of the public opinion by means of which it claims to be elected. No government in Canada or any of the allied countries can carry on with adequate momentum unless it consults the people and gets its inspiration from the spirit of the people. If a people has no spirit it deserves to perish, but no one will dare to say that the spirit of the Canadian people has not been tuned to a high pitch of patriotic devotion, and no one will say that this spirit is not capable of inspiration to an even higher pitch of service to the cause. Only by appealing to this spirit, rather than by invoking the force of the strong arm of a majority, can the country become thoroughly harnessed for the war. Even today Canada is playing with many of its war problems, or blundering with them. Thousands of people do not realize that a conflict is in progress. The country has never reached a complete war footing. Why? For one reason, because public opinion has been largely snuffed out as the flame of a candle is snuffed out. There is no great beaconlight beaming from Ottawa to light the way to service. The policy of conscription makes for blind allegiance. But how much is being done to make the service of the drafted men an inspired service? How many ministers are staying with the ship of state at a time when sight-seeing tours across the ocean are going out of favor? The kudos of Canada's war service should be paid after the war or to the men at the front.

How much can be done to bring the Government to an appreciation of the vast opportunities for a re-creation of war spirit in this country? How much is being done at the present time, in city or country, to carry the message to those who have become war-weary and fainthearted? Getting the men may have been a great achievement for the Government, but if the heart of the country is lost for the cause because of stupid or weak leadership, has the future of the nation been improved or injured?

Since war began Canada has not developed a war leadership that has caught the hearts and souls of the people as well as their minds and pockets. The Advertiser has always believed that the people of Canada could have been inspired to conscript themselves with their ballots if an educational campaign necessary to teach them and inspire them had been carried on with the united forces of public men and the press. But the strong arm that swept aside all conciliators and beat down those who would have done much to unify and to advance the cause gained the day. Let it be said that the place for the use of that strong arm is on the fields of France and its strength can only be maintained if the whole body of the nation is given the nourishment and exercise as well as the spirit to support that arm to the final punch. No gladiator with a strong right arm and a wasted body or a faint heart ever won his fight.

Honest criticism of government in wartime has had its greatest test and greatest vindication in the United States. Immediately the red tape or the grafting or the partisanship that tied up war effort was revealed, pitiless exposure and merciless prodding brought the Government to a realization of what public opinion demanded. Army methods, aircraft building, shipbuilding and almost every department of the administration of Woodrow Wilson have been ruthlessly torn to pieces in the sixteen months since the United States entered the war. Wilson did not, could not, remain immovable, as many of Canada's leaders have. He saw where the remedy was required and he applied the remedy. Thus has the republic to the south achieved a momentum that has placed one million men in France and launched a hundred ships in a single day. The slow and secret methods of ordinary government will not do for war time. Special interests and profiteering should be cut to the roots in their carnal of sucking up the finest rewards of the war from the country's specially fertilized soil. Parliaments should not be dragged with a club and the representatives of the people should rule, rather than a few men who make constant use of a ready weapon, known as the order-in-council, sometimes with the result of placing the very military welfare they profess to serve in the greatest jeopardy, and involving warfare between the courts and the military authorities. The people of Canada with few exceptions are lawful and ready to obey the Government. But it may soon come to pass that the people of Canada will be forced to lead rather than to follow these ministers who have not proved worthy of the tremendous responsibility placed upon them. For some time the war was conducted from the standpoint of the patronage list. Only public opinion can administer the thorough purging that is even today necessary.

A LACK OF IMAGINATION.
MANY of our great railway magnates, supposed to be gifted with the vision that builds empires, sometimes seem to be sadly lacking in poetic imagination. For instance, when the Government's specially selected board of arbitrators awarded to the C. N. R. $500,000 more than the limit of $10,000,000 fixed by the Government, what an opportunity for Sir William Mackenzie and Sir Donald Mann to make their names imperishable and their popularity undying by donating this extra half-million to the Red Cross or patriotic fund. Just by way of saving the commissioners from the embarrassment of being criticised, and silencing the charge that they (M. & M.) controlled the Government, the signing away of this gift award would have been utopian and magnanimous. The very word "magnanimous" suggests a combination of the cognomens of these two celebrated railway knights, who accepted a railway from the people of Canada and then sold it back to the dear people's government all over again.

We have read of the many exploits of Big Jim Wallingford and his partner, Mr. Daw, and we realize that as the headlines of the profession their methods are accepted as a standard. It is true that they have separated many worthy persons from their bank accounts, but quite often, it should also be remembered, they have done the gracious thing even while they hunted the unsuspecting "chick" in big town and small. Jim and Blackie usually slipped the kids some candy or took the old folks for a motor ride before they applied the well-known gaff. They had taking ways, but they also gave a bit.

If Wallingford and Company had been handed a half million added to ten millions for railway stock which the Government's extra special commission declared was without value, we honestly believe they might have handed the half to the payees to take the curse off the thing. But of course Wallingford is a character of fiction, a creature of someone's imagination. He is tolerated because he is a clever rogue and a free spender. But things aren't the same in real life or railways.

ONLY FAIR.

[Toronto Star.]

If workers cannot be permitted to strike—and it seems clear that they cannot be permitted to do so without much injury being done to the general welfare—then some remedy other than the strike must be provided by the authorities, insuring the workers that advantage will not be taken of the fact that they cannot strike. If a worker were not permitted to quit one job and accept a better one with more pay, the authority which forbids him to do it should see whether he is being sufficiently paid and rightly used in the place where he is ordered to remain.

NO SHORT CUTS TO VICTORY.

[London Chronicle.]

The ultimate victory over Germany remains as necessary for us and for the world as ever it was. But by this time we should most of us have realized that there are no short cuts to it, and that the only way for us to get home is to travel unflinchingly the long, stony and uphill road.

"HENRY ENLISTS."
By Louise Oliver.

Henry Emerson paced his office thoughtfully, his hands clasped behind his back, his head bent. For the first time in a dozen years something had happened which had shaken up his dormant emotions to the point of demonstration.

"To be brief, our friend had, that morning, risen, shaved and bathed, and breakfasted as usual, and read his morning paper over his grapefruit; but beyond that his daily program had received a severe jolt. For, reading of the German drive and how they were inching toward Amiens and Ypres, then of the taking of Kammei Hill, a queer sensation had seized him in the region of his stomach, which rose slowly and seemed to smother him with indignation. For the first time Henry realized that the Allies might possibly—just possibly—need help, his help.

Pushing aside the bowl of smoking hot oatmeal and the pitcher of thick cream that had just been placed before him, Henry pushed the paper into his pocket, his hat on the back of his head, and his way through the morning crowd to the nearest recruiting office, whence, after a thorough examination, he emerged, a couple of hours later, as a full-fledged member of Uncle Sam's great army, the wonderful army to which the whole civilized world now looked for succor.

So now, back in his office, high over the roofs and chimneys of most of New York, he had occasion to feel reasonably disturbed by his action, and proud thereof at the same time.

Now, emotions are like troubles—they never come singly. And Henry, being disturbed to the uttermost by the thought of the German drive, and the thought of the Allies' need, discovered several varieties of latent sensations in his make-up that he had thought long dead, or that he had not thought of at all, and one of them was Louise Woods.

It was queer how he had got over his disappointment about Louise, or thought he had, for now as he remembered her clear, shaven and wonderful hair that had a habit of blowing in the wind, and the way she would look at him, a queer longing seized him to see her again. He must see her and tell her what he had done.

He sat down at his desk and made up his mind to putting his affairs into shape to leave. But the uneasy feeling about Louise had come to stay. Somehow he felt that he wanted her to know he had enlisted and to retrieve himself in her eyes.

It was a warm day in late April, so warm that he had left the door open into the cool, marble corridor from which other doors of ground glass like his own opened into other offices and business rooms of various sorts, such as one may find in any metropolitan office building.

Suddenly, a little breeze, playing with the papers on his desk, brought to Henry's nostrils a whiff of exquisite fragrance, and he lifted his head, and, as if by magic, the door was closed.

Narcissus! He was sure of it—he had seen a florist's window full of it that morning, and that, too, had taken him back to Greendale and Louise. There had been a large bed of the flowers in her garden, and the last time he had seen her she had stood beside it, a few of the blossoms in her hand.

Surely all roads today seemed to lead to Louise!

The perfume came again through the open doorway. He would have to see just where those blossoms were.

Across the hall was the Visiting Nurses' Association, as he understood by the large type on the door. He had never been within. Today, however, the door was open, and, as he stepped into the centre of the room was a crystal bowl of white narcissus.

But it was not the flowers that held him spellbound, but the woman in white quietly writing at the desk upon which they stood. It was Louise herself—Louise of fond memory.

Suddenly she looked up and smiled, not a surprised, startled smile, but the confident, welcoming smile of one who has always expected the prodigal to return.

"Henry," she cried, laying down her pen and rising, both hands outstretched.

"You, Louise! I didn't know you were here." He peered down deep into her eyes. "I thought you were back in Greendale. And if you were, getting ready—believe me if you can, Louise—to go back and say good-bye."

"Good-bye?"

"Yes, I've enlisted. I'm going away."

"Oh, Henry, I'm so glad! Oh, you don't know how glad I am! I mean you see, I couldn't stay in Greendale after father died, knowing I was needed here. And now I feel the same way—I can't stay here in New York knowing I am needed over there. So I'm going, Henry. They've accepted me at last. And you're going, too! Oh, it's all so wonderful to believe." "Yes, Louise. But tell me, did you know I was here?"

"Yes, I discovered it weeks ago. I saw you go out one day."

"And you gave no sign?"

"Did you?"

He was silent a moment. "I suppose I've no right to ask your forgiveness, Louise, but at first I worked for you. Then I believe I thought you didn't care, and I gave it up too easily. I still love you, dear. And when the war's over I'm going to ask you if you'll give me the right to take care of you, if there's no one else."

She shook her head, and soft little wisps of hair caressed her forehead. "No, I don't want to be a burden."

"Why wait?" she whispered. "Why not ask me now? I'll do anything for a soldier."

It was all he needed. So he did his wisp of hair, and her eyes and mouth, then and there, without a second invitation.

Stammering Not a Physical
Only an Emotional DefectBy DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG.
A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins University.)

Tantalus starved and thirsting in the water, with the finest fruits hanging overhead, only to reach when he strove to drink or eat to find himself suffering from the same ailment. The stammerer is no different. He is not a physical defect, but an emotional one. He is not a physical defect, but an emotional one. He is not a physical defect, but an emotional one.

Evidently, then, stammering is panicky interference with normal speech. The least common denominator for the most frequent cause of practically all stammering is a temporary interruption of speech of the following:

How Cousin Agatha Unconsciously Aided Madge.

I went straight to my mother-in-law's room as soon as I entered the house, for I wished to make certain that I would not be disturbed while reading the note which the Japanese servant of the mysterious man next door had slipped into my hand in such stealthy fashion. I knew that to enlist her aid was the surest means of attaining my end. She was sitting by the window looking out into the side lawn where my personal plants, transplanted a few weeks before from the old Brennan place, were just beginning to show their first blossoms. Cousin Agatha, a book of poems in her hand, was sitting near her and evidently had been reading aloud. Cousin Agatha's reading voice is an anomaly. It is entirely different from her speaking voice, which, with its martyr-like whine, usually makes the cold chills run up and down my back. But put a book into Cousin Agatha's hand, and her cadences become musical, a delight to the ear.

Neither woman looked up as I entered. It is a discourteous little custom common to both of them when a member of the immediate family or a servant comes into the room. Even Dicky is generally so when he more courteous than they do me.

That's due to Jim," I returned, with

THE ECHO

By Frank Crier

When the ships sail away on the great adventure and one of them bears the ONE man of her heart, she calls to him wherever she may be her farewell—"Good night, my love, and I shall be with you in the morning."

Agatha, drawn with beating reluctance, although I knew that she was simply bubbling with eager, malicious mischief, knowing to her that she was going to tell the fortune teller what she would include me in her resentment.

But to my surprise she turned to me with a look that touched me deeply. It held so much of loving gratitude. "Margaret, will you let me come to your room a while, she asked. I am very tired of this one."

Her tone was so significant that I saw her cousin wince. But she was not with her reading as if she's noticed nothing.

What makes you think so?" asked a merry voice, and Squeedee jumped up to reply to Dicky.

"Because he's acting so strangely," replied Dicky.

"Then without warning Bunny Rabbit rushed from under the bush and went through his funny antics again."

laughed Squeedee. "Only he's so happy that he's foolish. That's his way of showing 'Good morning.' The, turning on to the frisky creature, Squeedee said, 'Bunny, Dicky thought you were in trouble.'

Dunlop and Auto History

Practically speaking the automobile has been in existence in Canada only since 1903.

Years before that we made hundreds of thousands of tires for the bicycle.

And since that time we have made hundreds of thousands of tires for the automobile, until the manufacture of Dunlop Auto Tires—"Traction," "Special," "Plain"—has become a big industry in itself. To you it is as important that Dunlop preceded the automobile as it is that Dunlop grew with it—became an every-day factor in this new utility of the nation.

The automobile knows no better running mate—than Dunlop Tires.

She had a lovely fortune teller. I heard her tell a poor little tired woman that she wasn't going to be tired very much longer, that something very nice was going to happen to her, and the little woman's eyes lit up and she didn't look tired any more.

And then the fortune teller told a woman with tired lines around her eyes that the one she loved was going to get well, and the one she worried over was all right.

Then she told a big, prosperous man that he was going to be glad of it and that he was going to be glad of it.

Sowing Strange Seeds. She told all the girls that they were going to be married once, and he divinely happy; she told the middle-aged women that they were going to be married twice, and none of them looked very sad about it, even though to her certain knowledge some of their husbands were enjoying the best of health.

To all the elderly women she brought good news, and she told them to watch. It was the funniest thing in the world to see the look of suspicion on the faces of the young women when they heard that the poor business man had told that peculiar fortune. I really think that the old woman was a fortune teller.

New and Interesting Facts from Science and Life

HOW FRENCH SCIENTISTS SOLVED WAR PROBLEM OF FOOD

WE have had our meatless days, and wheatless days we still have with us, to remind every one that the war is really a serious question. How serious it is the Europeans have had to learn from severe trials of four years past. As a result careful studies have been made of rations and substitutes, and the latest results obtained by French scientists are presented in this article from La Nature.

In France they formerly slaughtered 52,000 head of cattle per month, but now hardly 30,000 are killed, and it is not known how long this rate of consumption will be allowed. Before the war the per capita consumption of meat in France was 166 pounds per annum; the English 144 pounds, and the Germans 120 pounds for each inhabitant during a year. It is known that, with two or three meatless days each week, the German meat ration has been reduced from 166 grams per day to 450 grams per week, and with no apparent diminution of strength or fighting power.

The consumption of meat can be studied and regulated, if all the facts are made known generally. When we buy meat at least 20 per cent. is waste, bone and tendons, 50 per cent. water and the remaining 30 per cent. the really nutritive part, has an average of 15 per cent. lean and 15 per cent. fat. A kilogram (2 pounds) of meat will show:

100 grams bone and tendon, nutritive value, 0.
100 grams water, nutritive value, 0.
100 grams nitrogenous matter, nutritive value, 10.
100 grams fat, nutritive value, 9x150 equals 1350.

This is a total of approximately 1500 calories or heat-producing units to two pounds of meat.

There are other foods containing 100 grams of albumen in two pounds of food furnishing more than 2000 calories, as will be shown.

Of course, meats differ according to the animal and the cut.

Why do we eat meat at all? Chiefly for the albuminous matter required by our organism and also because it is an agreeable food easily digested and assimilated.

We know that food is intended to nourish our bodies with plastic substances, the albumens and energy-substances, the fats and carbohydrates. The need of albumens has been measured by various scientists. Pettenkofer and Voit say that a man requires 120 grams a day. Hirschfeld, Kumagawa and Ruebner say this is too much. Lapicque moved by experiments on himself that we can live on 87 grams and that the Malays consume 60 and the Abyssinians only 50. It is figured as an average that if we allow one gram per two pounds of our own weight per day (except for young children and adolescents) we are safe. If in normal times we eat more meat it is only to give ourselves pleasure for the taste of this succulent, easily digested food. We can live easily on from 60 to 80 grams of albumen a day, but even this is not necessarily derived from meat. Bread contains 6 to 7 per cent. milk 3 to 4 per cent., eggs 11 per cent., beans 25 per cent., peas and lentils 18 per cent., etc., so the cutting down of the meat ration is really not a hardship.

Careful STUDY of RATIONS and Their SUBSTITUTES That POINTS the WAY to GREAT LIMITATIONS to DAILY FARE Without DANGER of STARVATION or LOSS of VIGOR

There have been many difficulties surrounding the meatless days in Europe. Some try to avoid the regulation by buying meat in advance, thus raising prices, and others buy fancy pastries costing more than meat. It has proved more practical to issue cards showing meat values, so that individuals may get the best values and not expend money needlessly or unwisely. We may be certain of the necessary amount of albumen by securing fish, eggs, milk, cheese, bread, vegetables and fruit, affording a mixed as well as a nutritious diet.

Fish contain from 8 to 10 per cent. of albumen, eggs have 11 per cent., almost as much as meat. As an egg weighs about 60 grams it is easy to calculate how much albumen is furnished by each. If one eaten, eggs and milk will entirely replace meat. It is difficult to get fresh milk, condensed milk may be used, though it is more expensive. Cheese contains all of the albumen of the milk in concentrated form, is easy to keep, and not expensive.

The nitrogenous foods required by the human system are not, however, limited to animal sources, for vegetables furnish just as much or more. The gluten of the bread gives us albumen, 6 to 7 per cent. of the bread, so that two pounds of bread alone would give as much albumen as needed, though not in the most digestible form, when taken exclusively.

Dried vegetables are very rich in albumens: lentils, peas, beans containing from 20 to 25 per cent. of this necessary element; 200 grams of these vegetables are the equivalent of 500 grams of meat, and, of course, much cheaper.

Almonds and other nuts have from 10 to 15 per cent. of albumen, and, in fact, everything we eat except sugars and fats has some proportion of nitrogenous matter.

We can, therefore, accept very graciously any limitation placed upon the consumption of meats by food commissioners, without danger of starvation or loss of vigor.

The Germans have devised a meat substitute which is based upon nothing but yeast. The dried yeast of beer contains 50 per cent. of albumen and costs about 40 cents for two pounds, and it can be produced in unlimited quantities. It has, however, quite a bitter taste, making it unpleasant to eat. The skilful chemists of Germany have secured another yeast from a combination of molasses and ammonia sulphate, securing a powder with 46 per cent. of albumen, 8 per cent. of fat and 26 per cent. of carbohydrates. Huge quantities of this is made as a by-product of starch, which is used by the ton on meatless days throughout Germany. Ten grams of this material are mixed with various foods used on other days, thus making them far more nutritious. While it is not as digestible as meat, still 86 per cent. is absorbed by the human body. Important as the nitrogenous elements in the food are for the repair of the body, the sugars and starches grouped as carbohydrates are essential as generators of energy, being consumed by muscular labor and in the production of heat, and the fats which seem to supplement both the albumens and the carbohydrates in many important functions.

There are also certain salts which the organism requires, in many foods, especially vegetables. These are also the mineral substances such as sulphur, potassium, calcium, phosphorus, iron, manganese, etc., which are indispensable for our bodies and are secured when the digestion acts properly upon a diet of food mixed in the right proportions.

WHY SOME WOMEN LOVE WORTHLESS MEN

By MARIE LEIGHTON

WHEN people boldly ask me why women love worthless men I get something of a shock. I ask myself three questions:

1. Unless there is something very wrong about the way of women, how can anybody suppose for a moment that womanhood does waste its affections on the less deserving members of the opposite sex?

2. And is it true? Do we really love doubtful men?

3. And am I to suppose that they think women—including myself—love bad men better than good men as personal friends, or only that we love them better to talk about and to observe from a distance?

Of course, this last point makes a lot of difference.

It takes any little sting out of the suggestion that I, for instance, have a natural yearning toward the wicked among men. When it comes to talking about saintly people, or writing about them, or watching their doings, one finds them rather unsatisfying. Perfection leaves one with nothing to do.

If you were yourself a professional saint and moral reformer, like Patrick or Augustine, you would feel distinctly mortified, and even a little disgusted, if on arriving in a strange country where you had imagined yourself to be needed, you found it full already of people living on herbs and wearing hair-shirts and grieving over their sins all day. In the same way, if you were burning with a desire to help the sick and suffering, you would hate to go to a place that you had thought was a hospital and find it full of hale and sound men. Again, for the same reason, ever so many good and sweet women let good men pass by unnoticed. They admire the good men and would trust them completely, but they turn their active attention to the men with a few smudges from an erratic past left upon them.

The sweet woman doesn't like the smudges. Oh, dear, no! She often cries over them. But they make a job for her and her love to do, and she hugs the idea that nobody else could do it.

So we women bow the knee to it because we really do admire it immensely, and then we call out for a man who will do the world's work as he comes along and do something startling against the background of the white, in order that we may be kept from slipping into boredom and may feel that we have something to live for. Besides, bad men never preach to us.

These are the reasons why we have a weak spot in our hearts for what is called a worthless man. He isn't stagnant. He's an active force, all alive from the top of his head to the ends of his toes. He does things. What is more, he often has the luck to take considerable risks in doing them; and, when he's very bad, he wakes up our faculties in order to fight him and to counter his tricky moves. We sharpen the edge of our cleverness upon him. He does us a world of good by saving us from sloth. If there were no dangers about us, compelling us to be constantly on guard, we should all become limp-muscled, slow and placid.

So, for our own selfish sakes, some of us take the worthless men to our hearts. It is not because we prefer evil to good. We never really do that. Even those of us who are fond of bad men have a quite fierce hatred for the badness in itself. But they are alive, they hop about, they charm us in spite of their wrongdoing, and they make us active in order that we may thwart them and cure them. The black tracings of their wickedness stand out grippingly against the shining white background of sainthood, and we start scurrying round to rub out the dirty lines. They are our driving force, giving us the energy to keep goodness always glowing. In fact, there wouldn't be so much of the white light of goodness about us without them. We can imagine villains being in the world without saints, but we can't imagine saints being in the world without villains; because it is only by fighting against villainy that saints are made.

And these worthless men often look very nice and have captivating manners, and we women do love the pictures. Yet we never actually lose our heads over even the nicest bad lots. We know they're bad and we don't let them angels. We see them exactly for what they are. This makes us all the prouder when they begin to improve under our scorings.

Even the rashest woman of us all knows that there are scoundrels and scoundrels. There are some of them that we don't appreciate at all, not even in our capacity of reformers and cleaners-up. If we do fancy a few of them—"love" is too strong a word—we are only won over, as I have said, by our hunger for change and color in life. I don't call black a beautiful color in itself, and yet I glory in touches of it in pictures to show up pink and cherry-red and gold and primrose-yellow and other colors that really are beautiful. Well, it's the same thing that makes me smile upon the black sheep among men. I do it—and we all do it—for the sake of variety.

I can't help adding, though with a deep sigh, that bad men are not as charming as they used to be. They've lost their dark, rolling eyes and their elegant figures and their good manners and their chattering ways. They don't shave as smoothly as they did, or choose their neckties as well—not to speak of the way they tie them—or look as carefully after the cut of their clothes. They haven't got now the manners that made the old-time highwayman offer his arm to ladies with the most delicate politeness. Their voices, too, are losing their softness, and they don't know any longer how to smile with their eyes, to push their hair back from their brows with a woman-subduing gesture. In short, they are losing ground all round.

So, if by chance any worthless man should read this, let him take warning by these last remarks and make himself as charming as possible, test his power, and that of the rest of his kind, over us women should become a thing of the past.

What Would Happen IF the SUN EXPLODED

Is the sun in danger of blowing up? We may reason not, because we have never seen one explode. On the other hand, we must remember that suns are not made in a hurry, and that they take their own time about what they do, and that while man's knowledge of suns covers only a few thousand years, their ages could not be expressed in any manner intelligible to the human mind. Still we must draw the line somewhere, and although our sun may have weathered the celestial storms of an eternity, that very fact may prove that the time for some variation may soon arrive. Our sun is said to be a veritable star and variables of a certain class are those stars which are due to explode!

When our sun explodes what else will happen? If a little ripple among the superficial layers of the sun, known as a sun-spot, 93,000,000 miles away, upsets the operation of electrical utilities on earth how much of a jolt will we get when the gas composed of stone, iron and other substances even heavier and harder, but so hot that they are reduced to vapor, and so elastic that from their sudden release they expand to the limits of the solar system, a region 556,000,000,000 miles in diameter.

"In such a maelstrom I apprehend that the earth and the other planets and satellites would each flash once like the firefly, and be lost in nebula," says Benjamin O. Baxter in Popular Astronomy. "We are told that our sun is of advanced age, as ages are reckoned among suns. All other things in creation, suns are brought into existence and pass away, we pass out of the class of celestial objects known as suns, or stars."

"Man has learned to distinguish age among stars by the color of their light. A white star is a young star; perhaps only a few hundred million years of age since it gathered from clouds of hot gases into globular form and started out as an independent sun. Yellowish light denotes middle age, and red or crimson indicates mature age which, as viewed by humanity, would look like several thousand eternities."

"We are also told that all stars, which are merely distant suns, are shrinking in size as the cool off and contract, and the theory was advanced by George Henry Lepper, that while the volume of the star diminishes through contraction, the heat of the core increases with the pressure brought to bear on it and that when this pressure reaches the limit the pent-up materials explode and the star, or sun, is reduced to a cloud, or puff of fog, called nebula."

Here's a BATHTUB for the EYES

UPON consulting an eye-specialist some time ago, Friedrich Maier of Elizabeth, N. J., was advised to bathe his eyes frequently in cold water. He soon found that these baths were very effective, but the primitive way of doing them did not appeal to him. So he made a pair of miniature bathtubs for his eyes, fitting them to the curve of both tubs and equipping them with inlet and outlet passages so that with the aid of a small rubber tube he was able to conduct the water direct from the faucet to his eyes and back to the drain without the inconvenience of putting his head in the water. After using his eyewash cups for some time with the best results the inventor put a pair in the hands of the director at the local eye clinic.

who found them of excellent service. When foreign substances such as lime, acids or poisonous gases enter the eyes, and continuous washing with fresh water is essential, some such device as this affords the best means of meeting the situation. This eye-washing device, as described in The Scientific American, is made of good, acid-proof material. The cups are provided with glass fronts so that the doctor or the patient can observe the action of the washing liquid; and especially advantageous is the fact that application may be made in any position whatever, and with one or both cups at a time. The water can be led direct from the faucet, or, if a special solution is to be used, from an elevated reservoir as shown in the illustration.

Health Hazards of the Stone Cutting Industry

IN Public Health Reports, Dr. J. P. Leake, past assistant surgeon, and Dr. D. L. Edsall, consultant in industrial hygiene, United States public health service, report on their investigation of the extensive quarrying and stone-cutting industry at Bedford, Ind., relative to the extent to which it affects the health of the workers. The chief attention was given to tuberculosis and the effect on the nervous system of stone cutting, which is done chiefly by compressed air tools.

Conditions surrounding the industry were found to be good, the cutting sheds being well constructed and lighted, and conditions for eliminating dust being admirable. Some of the work is done under water spray and some of it dry. The inhalation of dust was found not to be excessive, and the tuberculosis rate in the community among women equalled that among the men; therefore dust was not an important factor in the promotion of this disease.

The cutters are men of a superior class, make good wages, work short hours and live well, many in their own homes. The pulmonary hazard is said to be less than in the stone industry in general. In some mills sanitary conveniences and guards against the spread of intestinal infection are satisfactory. But in studies made in the work shops in the hands of stonecutters who use pneumatic hammers, a hypertonicity of the blood vessels was found, appearing as an exaggerated reaction to low temperatures. This is not serious as to life or function and can be overcome to an extent by proper management.

LEARN to PLAY the CORNET and STRENGTHEN Your LUNGS

INVESTIGATIONS made recently by a well known doctor lead him to conclude that musicians who play wind instruments are exceptionally long lived.

Cornet players are credited by him with an average life of 69.1 years. Clarinet players are next with 64.4, while the average oboe and bassoon player lives to be about 63 years old. The lowest duration of life by these players of wind instruments is in men who handle the flute. Because of the formation of their instruments, they do not have opportunity for full exercise of their

DANDRUFF MAKES HAIR FALL OUT

Girl! Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair in a few moments.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair, and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance. Get a small bottle of Danderine for a few cents at any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

IN MEMORIAM.

McDERMOTT - In loving memory of our dear father, Mr. Michael McDermott, who died one year ago today, July 13, 1917. b

One year ago today, dear father, you were taken from our midst; you gently called you to him, and you sweetly answered, yes, though the way was dark and lonely, yet we knew you were with us. For in crossing over Jordan, you were meeting Jesus there. We missed you, dear father, but we hope to meet again. When our home will not be broken, but we shall be reunited. And faith's loving consolation: The tears of love restrain; O when that parting hour could wish there here again? - Loving Wife and Son. b

SMITH - In memory of the late Willard Smith, who died July 8, 1917, and was buried a year ago today. b

Broken again the family circle, Another form has passed away. Passed from earth and earthly dark. Into light and perfect day. b

Sudden was the call that summoned him to leave this world of care. But he sought and found salvation. And he entered heaven through prayer. b

Yet how badly we do miss him. Tongue nor pen can never tell. Everwhere we miss his presence. Miss the voice we loved so well. b

But, dear mourners, cease to languish. O'er the grave of him we love; Strive to be prepared to meet him. In that world above. - Mother, Sons and Daughters. b
