

Students to remain on committees...

As council rejects hard line stand on parity, openness and agreement

By GATEWAY STAFF

Students' council Monday night rejected a move to get students off university governing committees and put the future of its academic vice-president in question.

Councillors defeated a motion by dent rep Jerry Connolly that would have allowed council participation on committees only under three conditions:

- that there be at least parity between students and faculty or administration representatives.
- that committee meetings be open.
- and that students' council agree with the functions and purposes of the concerned committee.

The motion went down 11 to three with five abstentions.

Mr. Connolly brought the motion to the floor in an attempt to convince council that "we have to set up our own parameters and start to work from there."

He said it was useless for council to continue its membership on committees controlled by the administration.

Had council voted in favor of the motion, it would have meant student pull-outs from General Faculty Council and the Board of Governors, as well as many other lesser bodies.

Students' union President David Leadbeater moved an amendment that council wait until after meetings of the GFC committee on student representation to put the motion into effect.

The amendment was defeated after both Judie Quinlan (rehab. med.) and academic vice-president Liz Law accused Mr. Leadbeater of stating a principle and then refusing to act on it.

Mr. Leadbeater told council there was no sense in pulling out now before councillors found out what recommendations were being made concerning student representation.

Voting against the motion were Dennis Fitzgerald, Kenneth Stickland, Willie Heslop, Graham Begg, Trevor Peach, Frank MacInnis, Barbara Huston, Ellen Singleton, Wayne Armstrong and David O'Reilly.

Voting in favor were Jerry Connolly, Liz Law and Judith Quinlan.

Abstentions were David Leadbeater, Sue Good, Karen Campbell, Lucien Royer and Jennifer Shuman.

Mr. Connolly's motion closely coincided in purpose with a move by academic vice-president Liz Law to have council remove her from the committees she is now on, with the exception of GFC.

Councillors split on that motion, and chairman Dennis Crowe killed it with his deciding negative vote.

But early this morning Miss Law said her resignation from the committees is still pending.

"It depends if I can stand the contradictions I pointed out to council," she said.

"What I was trying to do was to force them to take some principled stands and follow through on them. I have to consider that it was a tie vote on that question and in that way it is now my decision."

She made the following heated discussion by council over the GFC law and order report. The report had recommended that a general disciplinary board be created to "adjudge general offences now being heard by deans' councils", and that it be composed of three faculty and two student representatives.

Miss Law adamantly disagreed with that proposed composition.

She said the law and order committee now works on a consensus basis, and that any inequalities between student and faculty members make democratic decision-making impossible.

"Now is the time for a strong confrontation between students' council and GFC to determine the students' role in the university's new Bill of Rights," she said.

Miss Law suggested that if the law and order committee cannot work through the democratic process, students' council should move to withdraw its representatives. She said all GFC committee meetings and documents should be opened to the public.

To back her demands for parity on GFC committees, she moved for her resignation "from all university government committees, to which I have been delegated by this Council, with the exception of General Faculty Council, where I am elected by the student body at large".

Explaining her motion after the meeting, she said "operation as a quote, 'representative', of this council on university governing committees has become a contradiction which I cannot support when direction from this elected Council is either completely missing or totally contradictory."

Philosophy undergrads to sit on tenure body

Two undergraduates may be elected Thursday as voting members of the Philosophy Department's tenure committee.

The Department has asked for two undergraduates to sit on its Tenure Advisory Committee.

Thursday night, philosophy students first decide whether or not they want two members on the committee. If so, their election will take place immediately. The meeting is 8 p.m., Tory 13-15.

At a meeting Monday, originally called to hold the election, 15 undergraduates decided to postpone the election until all persons taking philosophy know about the department's offer. Some persons thought not enough were present for a fair election. Others were against having the election at all.

Discussion centred on whether to put undergraduates on the committee. Most of those present were in favor. They thought students ought to help run the department and help select the people who would be teaching them. One student said the aim should be to get teachers who are working on research now, and not those who teach out of someone else's books which are ten years old.

Another student said that a professor's teaching ability is more important than his academic qualifications or number of articles published.

One student suggested that two members on the committee would be just a token representation. The other members of the committee are four faculty members who have tenure, and two graduate students. Richard Dalon, one of the two graduate students, replied that the student members are not supposed to be representatives of the students, but are supposed to make an objective decision from the evidence like any other member.

Another student said that electing students to the committee might give tacit approval to the tenure system. Someone else said she agreed that tenure was a bad idea, but was in favor of putting members on the committee. Another question was whether a student on the committee would be able to vote against a faculty member without risking discrimination. Mr. Dalon insisted that all the information would remain within the committee and would not become public knowledge.

Defense Fund requests grant

The Native People's Defense Fund's request for a $1,000 grant from the students' union was tabled to next week at Monday night's meeting.

Rose Auger, president of the NPDF, told council native people are starting to realize their rights, but they can't depend on the legal aid available through normal channels. "Most lawyers aren't as interested in Indian cases as in their other private cases," she said.

To help alleviate this problem, the NPDF provides legal assistance to Indians. The requested grant would help extend this service to more Indians sooner. She said, "Cases keep coming up and we just haven't enough money right now to help people who have been sitting in jail eight or ten weeks."

After Mrs. Auger's speech, strong disagreement among council members became apparent. It was during this discussion, after 11 p.m., that Liz Law moved the issue be tabled.

Situation less serious Advertising created summer jobs

By JANNIE STAFFORD-MAYER

In retrospect, last year's student unemployment situation was less serious than in previous years.

Mike Zuk, Manager of the Student Placement Office, Canada Manpower Centre on campus says: "last year more students were placed than any other year but we have to try to keep pace with the student population explosion."

About 3,000 graduate and 7,000 undergraduate students registered with the Student Placement Office and most were channelled into some sort of employment according to Mr. Zuk.

This was largely due to a concentrated advertising program conducted by Manpower that appealed to employers to accommodate student summer replacements.

This year, no specific advertising campaign has been organized.

Manpower is waiting to get an approximate estimate of the number of students looking for work, and the type of employment they are seeking.

To speed up this feed-back program, 3,000 random questionnaires have been circulated to students. "The sooner we know the numbers looking for work, the more effective job we will be able to do," Mr. Zuk said Tuesday.

Employers start submitting job opportunities to Manpower early in November. Applicants have a better chance of obtaining employment if they submit their applications immediately.

The Student Placement Office is located on the fourth floor of the Students' Union Building. Students looking for part-time, summer or full-time employment can fill out an application form and talk to one of the counsellors. Applications will be put on file and students contacted if a job is found for them.

Simon Fraser strikers plan peaceful action against faculty and students going to class

BURNABY (CUP) — With the threat of dismissal hanging over the heads of faculty who refuse to teach, striking faculty and students in Simon Fraser University's department of political science, sociology and anthropology will attempt to convince all students taking PSA courses to boycott classes.

Even though the department voted overwhelmingly September 22 in favor of the strike, six classes within the department are still functioning, following a statement by the SFU administration that all faculty who did not teach their normal classes could be dismissed for breach of contract.

The administration decree applies even if only one student shows up for the class.

"Our approach should be directed against teaching faculty and administration, not against students," said PSA teaching assistant John Cleveland at a strike meeting Monday.

"Don't call them scabs, it is the faculty who are scabbing. We must realize the potential victimization and resulting alienation of these students," he said.

Cleveland suggested strikers attempt to initiate discussion in the continuing classes, and ask the students to vote on whether or not the issue of the strike should be debated during the class.

"If the professor disapproves, prevents freedom of discussion, inform him that the onus is on him, and that informational pickets will be set up," Cleveland said.

The in-class work would be done mainly by students registered in the classes, who support the strike.

During the first five days of the strike which began Wednesday, PSA members have concentrated on organizing counter-courses—"an alternative to Strand's university"—rather than on forcing the issue of PSA's political freedom to a conclusion.

Parity isn't

Acceptance of parity in principle by the arts faculty may be just so much more dust to blow west.

On the surface, it is what students have needed for so many years and what some have been demanding in recent ones.

But students should beware that they are not being divided and conquered. As the situation seems to stand now, a sprinkling of students from several committees (some with parity, some very important ones without) gather in the general governing body in numbers nearing parity.

What is needed at all levels is a united student voice to keep all those wandering committee members from adopting the views of their committees, instead of pushing the demands of the students.

Parity is just a word, and like democracy, equality or any other politically expedient expression can be just as empty, just as misleading.

It could mean buying the students off, as many of them are bought off by the beautiful facilities around them. Or it could mean the start of a revolution in consciousness on this campus—if the students combine parity with a strong structure of their own.

Students should not be placed in the position of a continuing opposition and then told that is the "democratic" method — after all, there are 20,000 people here and most of them are students.

They do have the manpower if they are willing to mobilize it. And once they have that power mobilized in the form of a duly elected arts association, then they should remember the words of CUS president Martin Loney when he criticized an attempt to form an alternative to CUS that would do things only 95 per cent of its members agreed to: "anything that 95 per cent of the students ay they want, they have probably already got," he said.

There is one other rather sticky problem to get around which should relegate the above to irrelevancy anyway.

Just what is this magical division between faculty and student that seems as insurmountable in the minds of the people in this university, as the difference between grade 12 and first-year university seems to parents and employers?

The simple fact is that the power structure at this and all universities is basically anti-democratic—it pits the faculty against the students even in the ways it forces the students to gain power "legitimately".

The "legitimate" channel to power is now parity—something slightly reminiscent of the good guys and the bad guys, depending which side you are on.

That good old-fashioned tournament of reason will never work when there are vested interests stacking the odds—and not, mind you, in favor of the students.

If this university is ever to become an institution of learning as opposed to one primarily devoted to socialization and training, then those barriers of vested interest that separate students and faculty must be breached.

Students must become more than apprentices at the benevolent knee of their masters.

Which brings up one last point: the very benevolence of that knee, in all its tolerant repressive kindness may have co-opted the students when, paradoxically, a harder master would sooner have betrayed the fallacies in the present system.

The students have not had to fight that hard for parity here, and now they must drag their minds out of the apathetic sludge of the lecture system university and learn to fight.

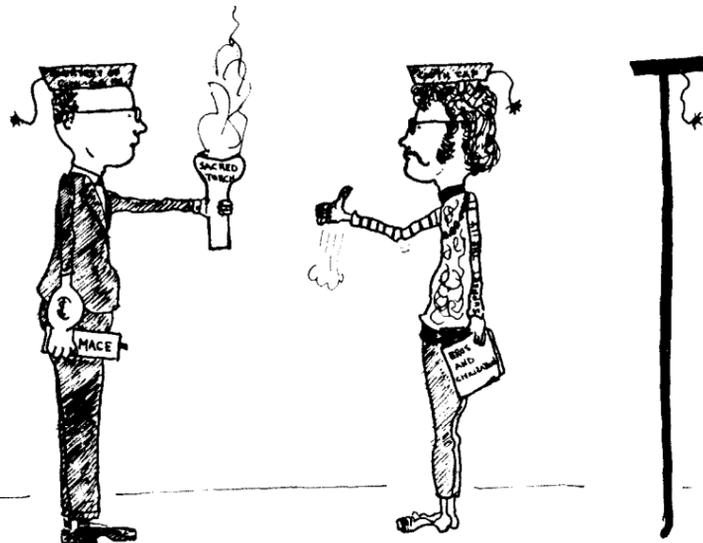

Parity is not the total solution.

Don't let it worry you, It's just a puppet show

by Winston Gereluk

Fellow students: it strikes me that among us there are many first-time visitors to our country who have never been properly introduced.

They have been left instead to flounder in the wilderness which is the Canadian scene. This columnist, however, feels there are a few things that they absolutely must be informed about. So, in the interest of a better informed populace, allow the following points to be made.

Foreign student! You are now in Canada, a fairly large geographical area which serves as the hinterland for a large industrial nation to the south, the United States of America. Canada is not a particularly healthy place to be in now because the U.S.A. has definite plans to use it as a fallout area in case their ABM System has to be employed.

That word 'Canadian' that you see plastered all over—Don't let it bother you. It used to mean something. Now it is only a word that American branch managers use in the brand names of products which they want to sell north of the 49th parallel.

Especially with the oil strikes up north, you will hear a lot of people talking about 'national sovereignty.' What they are referring to is the right of the U.S.A. to expand anywhere it wants to—something like the Manifest Destiny and the Monroe Doctrine rolled up in one.

Our Canadian government is a really interesting phenomenon. It's something like a puppet show, and yet just a little different than a puppet show. That is, parties compete periodically for the right to be the puppets.

The Canadian wilderness that people refer to is a criss-cross of railway lines and logging roads, dotted with mines, pulp and paper plants, as well as several cesspools that used to be streams and lakes.

It used to refer to an area full of beauty, abounding with wildlife, but we soon changed that under the astute guidance of the Social Credit government. Oh yes! The Japanese are helping us more than ever now.

We have an abundance of natural resources in Canada. Natural resources are something that you 'develop,' following the plan laid down below the 49th parallel. That is, you exploit, ravage, ruin, lay waste, and misuse.

The Department of Northern Development and Indian Affairs which you hear so much about is an unnecessarily long name given to a government agency whose job it is to see that the Indian people aren't exploited — too quickly.

Canadian desire for freedom, pride, and idealism are ideas which we have picked up from certain European philosophers. However, they have lost all meaning in the translation to the dollar sign.

High schools blasted

Regarding the Casserole article on high schools, I find the situation in high school deplorable—including the students. And there doesn't seem to be any immediate remedy.

Discuss with any administrator the possibilities of treating high school students like human beings, and you'll have a tough case. "Why give them more freedom?" he asks. With the freedom they have already they strew garbage, deface washrooms, abuse equipment, break into lockers. Why treat them with respect? They have no respect or consideration for the caretakers, secretaries, teachers, or other students.

Why encourage originality and intellectual query? When discussion comes up in class, they stare blankly or make inane comments. And the administrator is right.

is
Five

The high school student body is one of the most decadent groups in our society. They contribute nothing towards supporting themselves, yet they are provided with a high standard of living.

Instead of using this rare opportunity to construct, to do things they enjoy, to learn about life, high school students waste their time in their favorite activities: smoking, eating, strewing garbage; that is, consuming large amounts of nearly everything.

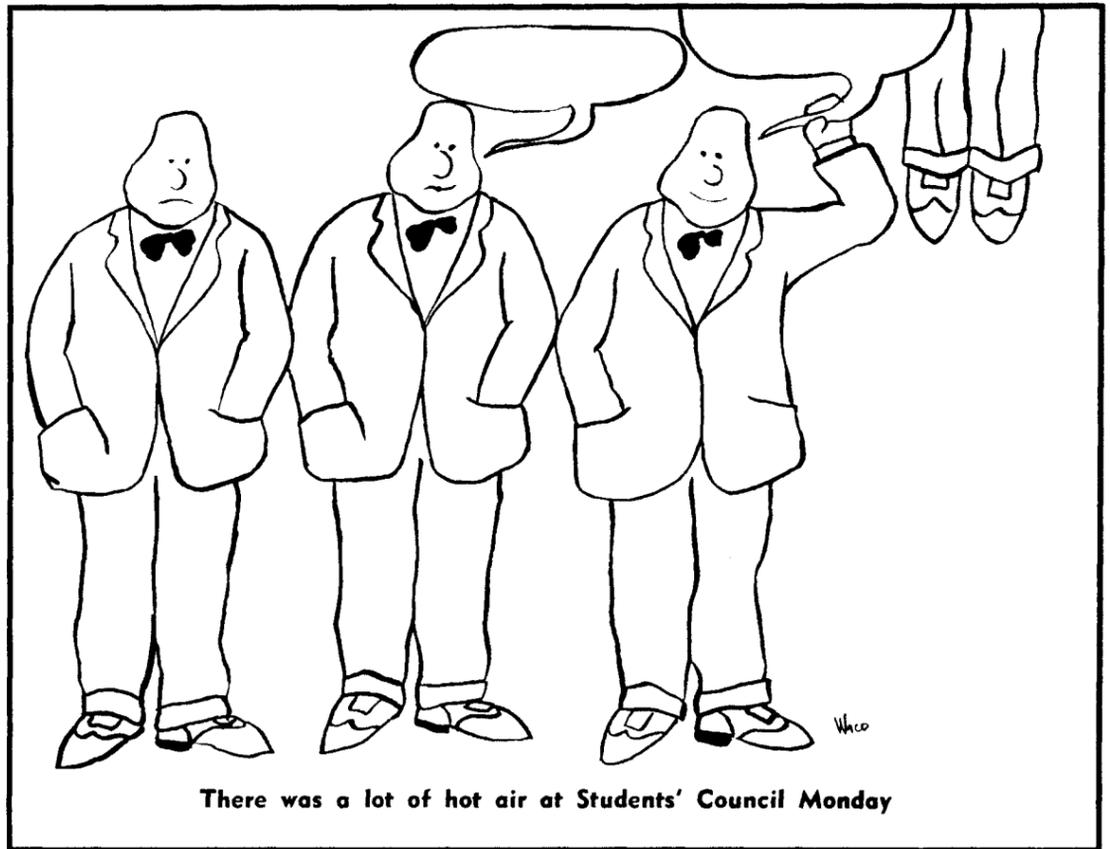

Instead of growing and learning while supported by their parents, the students are merely parasites.

Who causes high school students to be like this? The rigid education system is largely responsible: external discipline prevents the student from maturing and discovering himself. If teachers stifle the student from creativity and original thought for nine years, they can expect blank stares and inane comments when they finally attempt discussion.

Parents don't want freer, more educative schools: they were also taught to be afraid of freedom by a rigid school system. Now, the present generation of high school students is displaying materialism, pettiness, and intellectual atrophy similar to the shortcomings of their parents.

I have little hope that this vicious cycle can be broken easily or quickly.

Is free love the best thing?

You made one very good point in your editorial of Sept. 25 when you said that those of you in the newspaper world "have been insulated from how people run things elsewhere." Only I would go even further and say that you have become insulated from other things as well, not least of which is common sense. At least it doesn't seem to be very common in your circles.

Now I am not accusing you, Mr. Editor, of being a notoriously bad man because of your apparent views on free love. Perhaps I feel the same way Adlai Stevenson felt about the individual of whom he said, "If he were a bad man, I wouldn't be afraid of him. But this man has no principles. He doesn't know the difference."

Since when did it become "medievalist" to believe in principles? I challenge you or anybody else to stand up and categorically affirm that the handbook on Birth Control is going to eliminate ALL problems connected with premarital intercourse. Until you do this, you are not being fair to advocate a line that has already caused many to become so disoriented sexually that sex has eventually lost its value and importance.

It's smart to remember that kicks have kickbacks. Not least of these is the fact that easy sex is often frustrating because it is impersonal and incomplete. It is frustrating to discover that you have been used as a sex object, not loved as a person. If you say that it is possible to love fully where sex is easy, I will ask you to tell me how much genuine appreciation a man has for the prostitute, or she for him?

I believe that the greatest sex is not something that happens by chance. It has prerequisites which include total involvement, permanently. Anyone who has the opportunity to work towards a fulfilled relationship and secure experience like this would be a fool to settle for less.

Roger Armbruster

Editor's note—The editorial mentioned argued for freedom of choice, not free love. And just how a "fulfilled relationship and secure experience" is going to prevent unwanted children for either the wed or unwed, we fail to understand. That is why birth control information should be readily available, no morals attached.

Let's burn it

A few words arising from Simon Segal's letter about physicists irradiating whole cities, etc. (Tuesday, Sept. 23). Mr. Segal contends that chaos would result if marking and testing were eliminated in universities.

What is interesting though, is that every point he makes refers in some way to technical knowledge. It is a pity that Mr. Segal sees university as nothing more than a place to produce professional technicians.

Certainly, learning to build bridges and drill teeth has nothing to do with education. It is mere training. And this is the maddening problem. University is one huge training machine. It is not a place where people learn to think, to act, to feel, to become aware. Let's burn it down.

Handbook corrections

I have seen a copy of the September 1969 edition of "Birth Control Handbook" published by the Students' Society of McGill University. This letter is written because of factually incorrect statements on page 2 and on page 21 under the heading "The IUD and Genocide," and because of the harmful effects of the confused racist — economic — cultural — socio — political material included on the pages cited.

The incorrect statements and the melange mentioned have real potential for and probability of adversely effecting large numbers of people, primarily poor people, and of causing much unnecessary human misery. I submit that inclusion of that material in the "Birth Control Handbook" must be explained by one or some combination of the following circumstances:

- Through ignorance or carelessness or irresponsibility or immaturity (or combinations thereof) those responsible have published something which is likely to adversely affect at least a portion of the people the authors purport to help.

- Those responsible are ruthlessly promoting and pursuing their political objectives without concern for the misery and suffering they are knowingly creating. In this case the philosophy would be that the political goals justify use of any means to attain those goals, regardless of the effects on people.

Of course the authors may be

How come

The time has come to expose a crass piece of discrimination in this university.

We have been silent too long!

Now we must cry out our protest to the masses.

We must unshackle ourselves from these chains of oppression. The rights of the minority must be asserted.

Why in the hell aren't there any left-handed desks in any of my classes?

merely the naive dupes of persons who are using them for political purposes.

- The authors may revel in personal publicity and the limelight which the various media so generously accord some things and activities. Here the fascination of possible self aggrandizement and publicity would have motivated the writing of the sections concerned, again overriding any concern about the effects on people who may be influenced by the material.

If the student societies listed as having financed your publication did so after having seen the material being discussed, they are as responsible and culpable for the unnecessary creation of additional human problems as you are. I am therefore sending copies of this letter to the president of the student societies at McGill University and the University of Alberta, as well as to the student newspaper at those two institutions.

If pages 2 and 21 of the "Birth Control Handbook" are representative of student leadership and responsibility, the future of mankind is indeed uncertain.

SFU strikers advised

As a result of the decision of the Political Science, Sociology and Anthropology (PSA) Department of Simon Fraser University to begin a strike and teach-in which began on September 24 at 12:30 p.m., Professor Willard Allen, President of CAUT, has issued the following statement.

The Canadian Association of University Teachers was recently asked by a number of faculty members in Simon Fraser University's PSA Department to act on their behalf in seeking solutions to the disputes and problems which have arisen between them and the university. It was also asked by President Strand to co-operate in setting up an outside review committee for the PSA Department. While investigations and discussions were in progress, the possibility of a hard confrontation developed into a major probability late last week.

In an effort to prevent such an event the President of CAUT, Professor Willard Allen, issued a statement last Friday asking for restraint and proposing a number of steps which might lead to an acceptable solution. At the same time both parties were privately urged to agree to negotiation and the PSA faculty were specifically warned that the CAUT regarded their threat of strike action as unacceptable and improper. If strike action is ever justifiable it is certainly not while recognized channels of discussion, negotiation or appeal are still open. On September 21, a telegram warning that this strike action might jeopardize CAUT's willingness to act on behalf of PSA members was sent to Professor Briemberg, spokesman for the PSA group.

It should be perfectly clear that Professor Allen's statement and CAUT's actions did not make judgments on the basic disputes involved and that no such judgments could be made until more complete information was available.

Both parties have now responded:

President Strand issued a statement on Monday which, whatever its limitations, did leave the way open for further discussion. The PSA Department, in response, laid down precise, and in some ways objectionable terms which they demanded be accepted by the university by Wednesday noon, under threat of strike action. Prof. Allen has called for the immediate retraction of the strike plans and has stated that failing this, he will recommend immediately to the CAUT a complete withdrawal of any form of support for PSA faculty who participate in any way.

Freedom of any kind, and academic freedom especially, requires the acceptance of the time-consuming processes of discussion, debate and negotiation, none of which is possible in the emotion-laden atmosphere of confrontation and strike.

Soccer Bears win twice Victoria, U of C victims

BEARS 5, DINNIES 1
BEARS 3, VICTORIA 2

The soccer Golden Bears are a second-half club.

They proved it once again as they came from behind to soundly defeat the Calgary Dinosaurs 5-1 on Saturday.

The Bears started the game rather nervously and the Dinos capitalized early in the game. Dinos' centre forward beat the hesitant Karol Krotki to a loose ball in the Bears' goal and kicked it home to give Calgary a 1-0 lead.

Jim Barton tied the score minutes later as he converted a free kick by Andy Scanlon.

Barton was forced from the game by a pulled muscle during the first half.

The first half ended with no further scoring.

As in the recent Ranger game, the Bears became a new team after the first half. The half-backs dominated the midfield area and the forwards began to see plenty of the ball. Bears had complete command of the situation.

Right-winger Guy Borthwick played a very strong game for the Bears, beating his man to the ball almost continually. Following a run to the bye-line, Borthwick pulled the ball back for Barney Sadler to head home. He also scored one himself on a lob shot.

Dinnies were hemmed in their own end the entire second half, but did score a goal. The Dinos' centre-half put the ball in his own net while being severely harassed by Borthwick.

Coach Stuart Robbins was satisfied with the Bears' second half performance. "If we can continue in this vein the coming Western Collegiate Tournament in Winnipeg (Oct. 17) can be approached with confidence," he said.

Fullback Terry Whitney played another strong game and it is hoped that Jim Barton's injury is not severe enough to keep him out of too many games.

Next action for the soccer Bears is next Saturday, as they travel to Calgary for an exhibition game with the Dinos.

The Bears completed a highly successful weekend by breaking the powerful Edmonton Victoria team 3-2 on a rainy Sunday afternoon at Varsity Stadium.

This was surely the best performance to date by the Bears who played very effectively as a team and built up some snappy moves by a series of man to man passes.

Druids wipe out rugby Bears

BEARS I 0, DRUIDS I 15

BEARS II 0, DRUIDS II 9

The Bears were hexed by the Druids.

Neither of the U of A teams were able to score a point as they lost to the league-leading Druid teams Sunday.

In the first game, Bears fought a strong wind in the first half. Although hard-pressed, they did not allow a point until late in the first half when Brian Ivy of the Druids kicked a penalty goal to put the Druids ahead 3-0. Consequent Druid points came on tries by Ivy and Jim Parton. Both converts were missed, and the half ended 9-0.

The Bears fared little better with the wind at their backs, and Druids increased their margin during the second half. Ivy kicked another penalty goal, and Jerry Haliday scored an unconverted try on the last play of the game to close out the scoring at 15-0.

Bear captain Pom Pomeroy was not disappointed with the play of the team. He felt the Bears had been just slightly outplayed on all sides by the Druids. Penalties had again hurt the Bears.

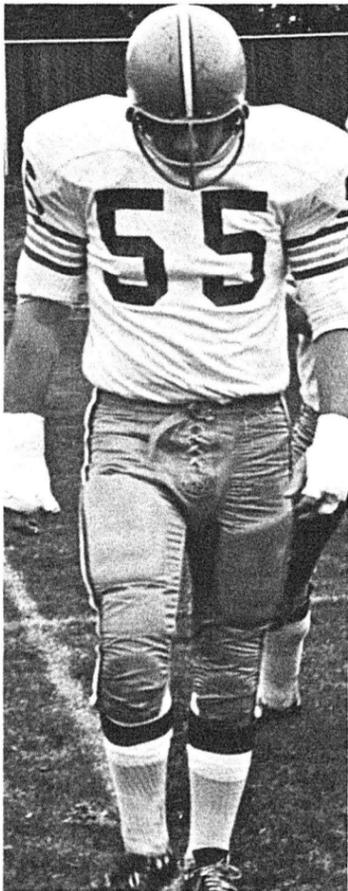

"The fact that Druids have been provincial rugby champions for the past three years, and that six of their players have played for the Alberta team is very important," he said.

Coach Mike Stiles agreed. "The Bears held a strong team very well. Holding the Druids to a 9-0 lead at half time against the wind is respectable play," he said.

"Druids' experience in the back line killed us," he added.

The Golden Bear II-Druid II game was a very dull and lifeless affair. The teams fought through a mediocre first half to a 0-0 deadlock. Bears could not contain the Druids in the second half, though. Mike Booth opened the scoring with a penalty kick, and unconverted tries by Dave Schaeffer and Edwin Woods wrapped up the game for the Druids.

The rugby Bears have decided to send one team to the UBC Invitational Tournament Oct. 11-12.

"THAT (CENSORED) HRY-CAICO IS DOING IT TO US AGAIN" . . . mutters a dejected Golden Bear during last Saturday's fiasco in Winnipeg. Bisons thrashed Bears 27-17, but Bears will get another chance this Saturday as they tangle with U of C Dinosaurs. Game time is 2:00 p.m. at Varsity Stadium.

U of A Ski Club unique among all campus clubs

Among other clubs on campus, the U of A Ski Club is unique.

As most members of other clubs realize, their organizations usually provide only one type of activity. Despite the high quality of this activity, members are restricted to that one activity—not so for Ski Club members.

Their club endeavors not only to provide ski trips, but their new location at Rabbit Hill enables them to provide: the best skiing in the Edmonton area, ski instruction from an excellent Ski School, and social events that are only possible in a club of 700 members with its own chalet.

Started in 1964, the club has progressed rapidly from providing only three Alberta trips in its inaugural year, to this year's international excursions to Whitefish (Montana), Kimberly (British Columbia), and Switzer Basin (Idaho). Augmenting these are the usual trips to Banff and Jasper, and this year to places like Silver Summit, Westcastle, and Snow Ridge. Ski Club members are already looking forward to the Christmas trip to Whitefish and the relaxed atmosphere of the Bierstube.

Social life with the Ski Club promises to test the hardest of party addicts. This year parties will erupt on the average of once every two weeks during the winter season with a variety of themes; bar-be-que, hay rides, costume parties, etc. The main purpose of these parties (aside from the obvious) is to introduce the members to others with similar interests and outlooks, and to provide a social base for students who are at the U of A to learn not only from books but from the interactions with their fellows.

The club extends a warm welcome to all those students who not only ski, or wish to learn to ski, but to those who enjoy meeting and being with others.

Hockey Bears to open practices rookies first to lace up blades

By BOB ANDERSON

Those deep-throated chuckles coming from somewhere over in University Hall are not just a figment of the imagination.

Rather, they are emitting from Brian McDonald, Assistant Vice-President, Academic, who also has another hat—that of Golden Bear hockey coach.

And one can't really blame McDonald for being a bit pleased, as a glance at the registration list for Bear hopefuls shows a lot of talent. In fact, McDonald is going to have a tough time selecting 15 players plus 2 goalies once regular season competition starts.

Workouts begin early next week, with a different system being tried out.

"This year, we're running a rookie camp for the first three days," McDonald states, "with October 7, 8 and 9 being set aside for this purpose. Then, on the tenth, the regular camp begins with returning players, plus those who showed well in the rookie camp."

McDonald hopes to cut out the marginal players in the rookie camp before getting down to preparing for the rough schedule ahead.

"In past years, we've run one big camp, rookie and returnees, and as a result, it's difficult to assess what you've got on hand. The only guys that won't have to attend the rookie camp are those who have previously played varsity, junior varsity or junior 'A' hockey."

A total of 112 assorted bodies will try out for both the varsity Bears and the junior Bearcats, coached by Dick Wintermute. Only two members of last year's Western champions, Wayne Wiste and Jim Seutter, will not be back with the club.

As well, McDonald will have on hand several ex-Bears plus one or two players who have had previous college experience at another campus.

Falling into the latter category is Bob Devaney, older brother of Bears' regular Tom Devaney, who toiled the last four years with Brown University in Rhode Island.

Headlining the parade of ex-Bears who are coming back this year is Sam Belcourt, a right winger who was instrumental in the Bears winning the national championship in Montreal two years ago. Other members of that victorious squad returning this season are Dave Couves and Merose Stelmaschuk. Both sat out last year.

Other exciting newcomers to watch will be the parade of Molsons' scholarship winners, including Mike Snider, Clarence Wanchulak, Rick Wyrozub, Grant Lenz, Bill Holland and Ian Harvey, up from Junior "A" ranks.

If there are any changes to be made in this year's lineup, they likely won't be back on defence. Regulars Gerry Braunberger, Mike Ballash, both members of the first all-star team last season, Mel Baird and Dan Bouwmeester are all returning.

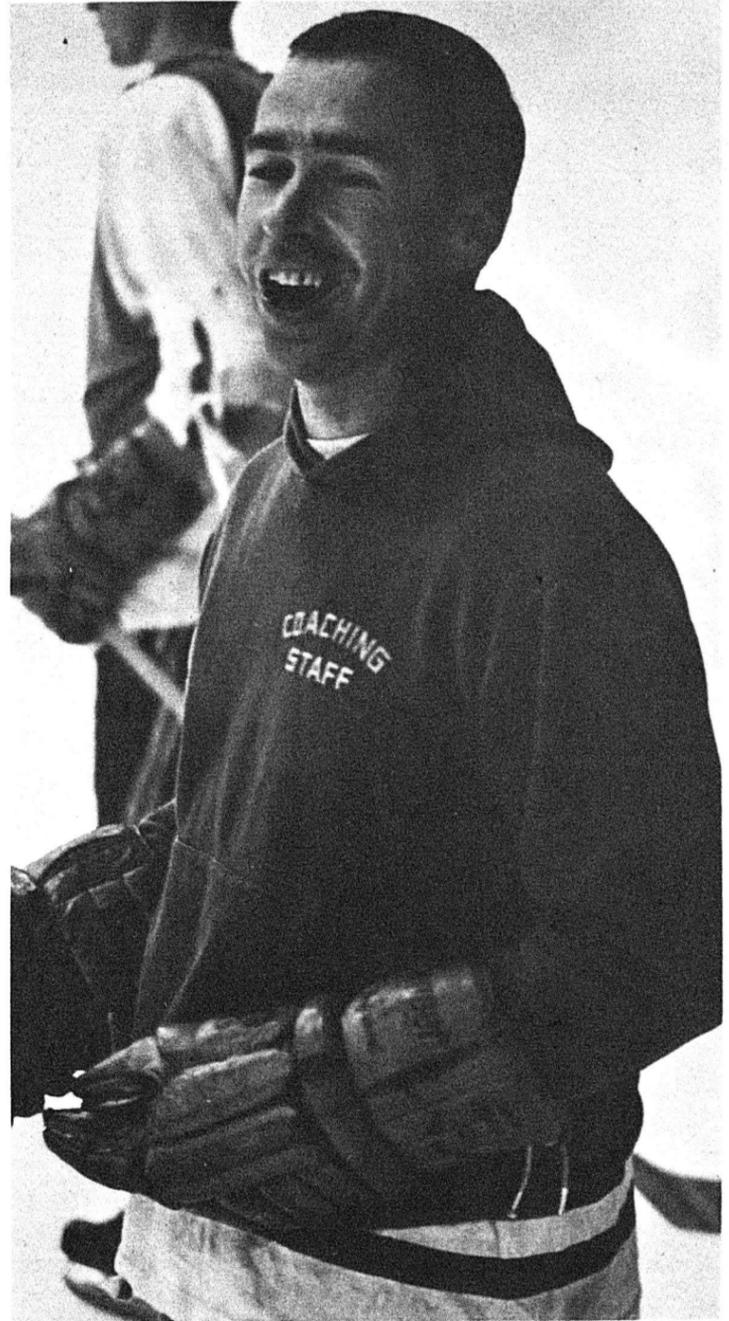

The Bears don't open regular season play until November 26, but will have several exhibitions prior to that date.

SOCCER BEARS—from page 6 but Tony Crossley soon got the equalizer when he rapped the ball home from close range. Guy Borthwick then put the Bears ahead from the penalty spot following a handling foul by Victoria, but the visitors soon made the score 2-2.

After the interval the Bears really turned it on and Victoria were subjected to a constant barrage of attacks. The winning goal came from Tom Varughese who headed home an accurate cross by Ken Lewis. The visitors' goalie made some fine saves particularly from drives by Robin Ison and Ron Kosky to keep the score respectable for his team.

Geoff Salmon played a great game on defense and completely sealed up the centre. Ron Kosky combined well with the three linkmen.

All in all it was an excellent result for the Bears as Edmonton Victoria are the mother club of Edmonton's Western Canada Pro team, and they are probably the strongest local soccer team.

THIS LOOK OF HAPPINESS will undoubtedly be flashed across hockey Coach Brian McDonald's face many times this fall as Bears prepare for the upcoming season with much fine talent on hand. Practices commence October 7.

30 seek new council seats

By ANNE HOOKINGS
of The Gateway

"This year's 30 nominations for extra faculty reps looks promising," Frank MacInnis, returning officer and law rep said Monday night.

The election is an attempt to rectify faculty misrepresentation on student council. Previously, each faculty had one representative, giving the 141 students in the School of Rehabilitation Medicine the same power as 3,841 Education students.

After the election there will be one rep on council for every 750 students in their faculty.

This means that Arts gets three more reps, Commerce one, Education five, Medical Lab Science one, Nursing one, Science three and Engineering one.

"This year's nominations turnout has been the largest ever and should solve the problem of unqualified reps who have got on council by acclamation", added Mr. MacInnis. Competition will be the greatest in Commerce, which has four people running for one position.

Mr. MacInnis attributed the success of this year's nominations to the ads that were run in The Gateway and to the extended nomination time.

"More people were made aware of the need for faculty reps and were able to get their nominations in with the extra time given them", he said.

"If the interest in the election nominations is any indication of what the turnout will be for the October 10 elections, we can expect a good showing," he said.

Nominees for faculties are as follows: Arts: Ron Bouchard, Jeff Caskenette, Henry Dembicki, Kim Hancock, Peter Jasper, Curtis Long, Brian MacDonald, Maureen Markley; Commerce: George Bell, Robert Everitt, Rod Ponech, Gerry Riskin; Education: William Askin, Vittorio Calaresu, Dennis Cebuliak, Ron Gillman, Donald Lucas, Barrie Lydiatt, Brian McLoughlin, Gerald Obara, William Tomlinson; Engineering: Ralph Holt, John McCook; Nursing: Bonnie Patterson; Science: Robert Blair, Valerie Keates, Ann McRae, Thomas Payne, Daniel Ponlin, Matt Yedlin.

Jennifer Shuman was acclaimed as the Medical Lab Science rep and sat on council for the first time on Monday night.

General Faculty Council says Commission too powerful

By KATHY YOUNG
of The Gateway

The Universities Commission has complete control over the establishment of new faculties at provincial universities—and the University of Alberta does not want it that way any longer.

The General Faculty Council Monday voted to allow the university's Board of Governors to take action in this matter.

The Board will request that the Universities Commission ask the provincial government to strike from the Universities Act the clause giving the Commission control over new faculty formations.

Some GFC members suggested that the three Alberta universities and the Commission discuss this proposal before presenting it to the Legislature.

York University in Ontario has set a precedent in this matter. It has established a faculty which is not supported by the government of the province.

The Universities of Calgary and Lethbridge have not expressed great concern in this matter and have neither supported or opposed the proposed action.

Recently, the University of Calgary was awarded a Faculty of Architecture by the Universities Commission over strong protest from the University of Alberta.

A committee was established by the council to screen the various amendments to the Universities Act that arose from recent meetings with the Commission. This committee will report back to a special meeting of the GFC.

David Leadbeater and other student representatives on GFC opposed the formation of this committee, saying that it could not represent all segments of the university community.

The motion to form the committee passed over their opposition.

No five-centers today, thanks

Rumors that five cent chocolate bars cost ten cents in SUB vending machines are untrue, says Al Sturn, supervisor of the vending machines. "Someone has lowered himself pretty low to start this rumor," he said.

Mr. Sturn is most emphatic to point out that the machines are owned and operated by the students' union, and that he and his staff are ready to help students derive the most benefit from them.

The machines are not infallible, however, and occasionally someone is bound to lose money in them, he said. When this happens, don't just kick about it, Mr. Sturn advises. Tell the attendant about it and he will arrange a refund and attend to the machine.

If no attendant is available, there are refund forms which should be filled out, or Mr. Sturn may be contacted in Rm. 022D, north end of the poolroom.

Street theatre plays societal contradiction

By DOROTHY CONSTABLE
of The Gateway

Theatre is a vehicle for change. It is a creative medium for the expression of ideas which can touch people.

So say members of the Vancouver Street Theatre.

The group was formed about four months ago in Vancouver where they originally performed in public parks. Its members include Bob Mercer, Paula McKeown, David Anderson and "Edmonton's own" Mark Dalgoy.

"The atmosphere was entirely different than that of a street performance," said Bob Mercer, who played a corrupt city policeman in Monday's performance. "Our performance here was in a very formal setting which tends to inhibit audience reaction."

The main purpose of the play is to make people aware of the contradictions of society. It satirizes not only the economic system, but also the racial tensions and sexual hang-ups which exist.

They consider the play anti-capitalistic rather than communistic.

"We haven't had the time to go through the struggle necessary for that," said Mr. Mercer.

The group tries to adjust to its audiences and improvies to a large degree.

"The script changes considerably every time we do the play, but the message is always the same," said Paula McKeown.

They are searching for an answer to what theatre really is, and are very interested in guerrilla theatre, where a point is made very quickly if not brutally.

The group both writes and performs its own plays. They are trying to keep the group small so they can work together easily to put across what they want to say.

"Politics, in itself, is sterile. What we are trying to do is to go into the community and talk to the people," Bob Mercer summed up.

Campus guards are not armed Provost A. A. Ryan has denied in an interview that guns are being worn by Campus Security Service guards.

He contradicted rumors currently circulating that the guards were being armed.

He further stated that no provision is being contemplated for the use of arms in the future. Even in the case of riot, the security services will not be issued weapons.

Dr. D. G. Tyndall, vice-president for finance and administration, said, "In the case of riot to the point where it is endangering property and students, the City Police would be called in."

Both men said the possibility of riot on campus is extremely remote.

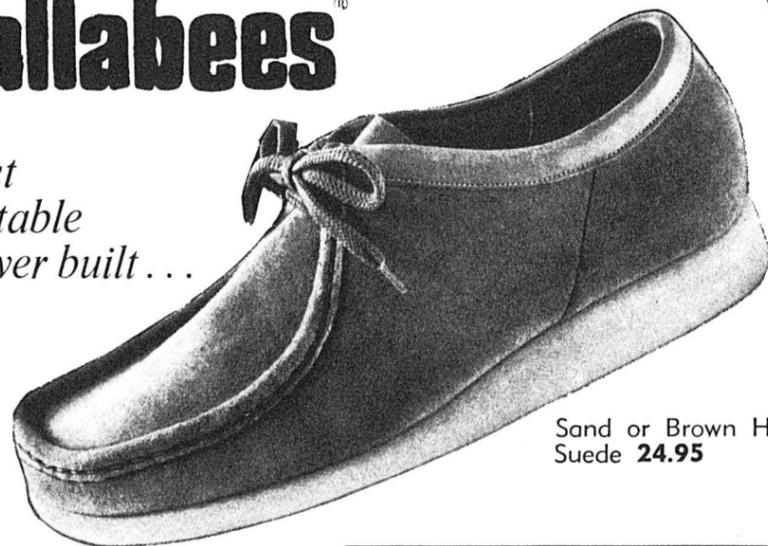

At the moment the security services employ 34 men, excluding clerks. This includes 4 members on fire and dsafety details, with the rest responsible mainly for traffic.

According to Students' Union President, David Leadbeater, students' council is planning to present a brief to the Committee on Campus Security, outlining student views on the subject.
