broke from her pale lips. The marioness, pale herself, but smiling, laid her hand on Constance's arm. "Don't be afraid, my dear," she said, quietly, and with a gentle touch of pride. "Wells will come to no harm and will harm no one."

She was quite right. Constance saw him struggling in the confused mass of men for a moment, a moment in which the blood seemed to well from her heart, then she saw him single out one great hulking fellow, and seeing him in his arms raise him bodily and carry and push him to the door.

In another moment the man was outside, and the marquis, composedly setting his collar and scarf to rights, was making his way back to the platform through a lane of excited and cheering demotics.

Constance dropped her lips, her eyes, a faint color in her cheeks as the roar of applause was renewed again and again.

"Splendidly done!" exclaimed some one near her; and as a lady, carried away by excitement, taking out her handkerchief, was waving it, all the rest, with the exception of the marioness and Constance, followed suit.

The marquis got back quickly to his seat, feeling rather ashamed of himself, but Rawson Fenton's face was pale then before, and he looked up with a quick glance of envy and hatred toward the gallery. No applause he could wish that night could wipe out that which the marquis, his rival, all unwittingly and unwillingly evoked.

But the marquis had procured silence in the most effective fashion, and the candidate began to speak.

His voice, clear and distinct, could be heard all over the hall, and in a moment or two he was listened to with rapt admiration. On Constance's ears the voice sounded as a false note in music, and jarred; but not so on the others. And she could understand the spell he cast upon them. She scarcely listened to his words, but present, it seemed to her that he was addressing herself. It was a wild fancy, she thought, born of her peculiar state of mind, but she raised her head and looked down at him, and she met his eyes fixed upon her. Then she listened. What was it he was saying?

"My friends, everything comes to him who waits--waits and works. I do not wish to speak of myself, I do not desire to claim anything, not even the smallest amount of cleverness. I am fully aware of my manifold shortcomings, and I own them with sincere humility. But this I will say: that throughout the course of my checkered life I have never set my heart on an object and waited and worked for it without getting it. Sometimes the wait was long, the work was hard and painful, but too often seemingly quite hopeless; but the object was attained at last. And so, while this hand has strength, and this brain sentiment, I will cleave to the faith that is in me. I will say, and I have said, that there is no purpose in the world that cannot be achieved, no desire unattained, if a man will but wait and work."

There were consciousness of power in his face, in the lithe, upright figure, in his attitude, as, with one foot lightly resting on the low rail that edged the platform, he leaned forward, waiting for comparative silence.

They were fighting in the crowd, and shrieks of rage and pain mingled with the yells of cheering. Several of the men on the platform were pale and excited, but this man stood perfectly calm and patient.

His manner fascinated Constance and as one looks at a tiger or a beautiful make she looked at him.

"You are not frightened, dear?" inquired the marioness, placidly. She had seen several elections.

"No, no," replied Constance; and she tried to force some color into her face, which she felt was white, but she could not take her eyes off the face of Rawson Fenton.

The duke got up and shouted for silence, but the row continued, when suddenly the marquis, who had sat perfectly still, rose, and walking slowly to the edge of the platform, dropped into the body of the hall.

Constance sprang to her feet and clutched the rail in front of her, watching his stalwart figure as it forced its way into the densest and most exciting part of the mass.

"Oh, what is he going to do?"

POETRY.

A Song of the Toilers.

Early and late we have borne
The burden and heat of the day;
Visions and dreams of the morn
Have vanished forever away.
Heavily, friend by friend,
Our willing hands we have set
To the weight of the world--to the end
Hath not come yet.

Once in the dawning, we stood
By the side of a beautiful stream,
Slowly, strong from a wood,
With songs on its lips, and the gleam
Of light from the heavens above
Aster in its tranquil breast;
But the name of that stream was love
Was love--not rest.

We toiled on the mountain at morn,
We stood on the glorious height
And saw the full valleys of corn
In a rapture of plenty and light;
But the reaper came forth from his cot
His parted lips still wet
From a hasty repast, and his lot
Finds no rest yet.

We sat in the shade of the trees
A moment when noontide was won,
Uncovered our heads to the breeze,
And smiled in the face of the sun.
But the trees were building a space
Staunch timbers the storms to fret,
And the sun wrought on in his place--
There is no rest yet.

Steadfastly, gladly, till eve
We bore our full part with the strong;
Why should we falter or grieve,
Thus doing our brothers wrong?
We said: "We shall rest to-night
When the flowery ways are wet";
But the moon in the east shines bright--
There is no rest yet!

Oh, strongly the world hath stood
On pillars of toil till now;
The taste of our bread is good
Seasoned with sweat of the brow.
The streams are turning the mills,
Their hands to the firm wheels set,
And the slow dark trees on the hills
Are building yet.

The vigilant stars in the sky,
Each on his errand pressed,
Goes with his torch borne high,
Nor falters, nor asks for rest.
Patience! be strong, O soul,
In God's high purpose set!
Somewhere, at some fair goal,
Thou'lt rest thee yet!

Wolfe the Ranger.

There was consciousness of power in his face, in the lithe, upright figure, in his attitude, as, with one foot lightly resting on the low rail that edged the platform, he leaned forward, waiting for comparative silence.

They were fighting in the crowd, and shrieks of rage and pain mingled with the yells of cheering. Several of the men on the platform were pale and excited, but this man stood perfectly calm and patient.

His manner fascinated Constance and as one looks at a tiger or a beautiful make she looked at him.

"You are not frightened, dear?" inquired the marioness, placidly. She had seen several elections.

"No, no," replied Constance; and she tried to force some color into her face, which she felt was white, but she could not take her eyes off the face of Rawson Fenton.

The duke got up and shouted for silence, but the row continued, when suddenly the marquis, who had sat perfectly still, rose, and walking slowly to the edge of the platform, dropped into the body of the hall.

Constance sprang to her feet and clutched the rail in front of her, watching his stalwart figure as it forced its way into the densest and most exciting part of the mass.

"Oh, what is he going to do?"

CHAPTER XXVII.

"You frightened Constance to-night, Wolfe," said the marioness.

They were standing in the drawing-room, and Constance had gone upstairs to take her things off.

"Well, I suppose I did," he said, remorsefully. "I didn't think of that or anything," he added, apologetically. "I felt I could not stand that row any longer, and that I must stop it. I'm very sorry; I thought she looked pale."

"She has very often of late," said the marioness. "Sometimes I have fancied that she was not quite happy. No, not that, Wolfe," she corrected herself quickly, as he turned swiftly to her. "Not unhappy, but as if something were troubling her."

"Mother!"--nothing could exceed his concern and even alarm--"surely you are fancying things. Constance troubled! Great Heavens!"

The old lady put her hand on his arm gently.

"Perhaps it is fancy, Wolfe," she said. "I wish you were married," she sighed.

Wolfe stared at her and laughed abruptly.

"Ah, so do I," he murmured, eloquently.

"Well, why don't you ask her?" said the old lady.

He absolutely started, and his hand some face flushed hotly.

"Ask her! Do you think she would marry me so--so quickly, so soon after our engagement?"

The marioness smiled.

"I don't know; but I should ask her, Wolfe," she said, softly, and left the room.

He paced up and down, his brain in a whirl. Could it be possible that Constance would marry him straight away--say in a couple of weeks? If so--but it was almost too good to bear thinking of.

When she came down, a few minutes afterwards, looking somewhat pale still, but, oh, how beautiful! he felt that he must take her in his arms; but he wisely refrained, and instead seated himself in a chair beside her.

"Well, dearest," he said, "glad it's all over and you are back home?"

"Very!" she said. "But it isn't all over--the election, you mean, do you not? There are ever so many events, aren't there? meetings, and all that kind of thing."

"Yes."

She sighed.

"I detest the whole of it," she said, with a little sigh. "You won't speak again, Wolfe?"

"No," he replied, with a laugh; "but I suppose I shall be mixed up with the affair more or less."

Her face fell.

"Unless," he added, "I cut it all and get away."

He felt her start under his hand, which was lovingly caressing her shell-like ear.

"You are going away," she said, trying to speak calmly; but her voice failed pitifully.

"Well, I thought of it," he said, speaking as naturally and easily as he could. "You see, I could escape all this election nuisance, as you suggest."

"Yes, you would," she assented; but her heart sank lower and lower.

"The only objection is that I don't care about going alone," he resumed, in the same tone.

"No? Is there no one who could go with you?"

"Well, yes; there is one person I should like as a companion. But I don't know--"

"You don't know whether he would go! Have you asked him? No? Why not do so?"

"I will," he said, in a low voice. "It isn't a him, but a her," and her name in Constance's Grahame."

Constance started, and looked at him with a vague trouble and surprise in her lovely wide-open eyes.

"I? Wolfe!"

"Yes," he said, coolly, though his heart was beating fast; "why not?"

"But--" she said; "her brows knit."

"But what?" he asked. "Where is the difficulty? Cannot two persons be legally married in October?"

"Married!" The color swept over her face and neck, and her eyes dropped.

"Married! Oh, Wolfe!"

"Yes," he said, more boldly, now that the ice was broken. "Why not? Why should we wait? A couple of weeks hence you and I might be starting for the glorious South! Think of it! You and I together at the Riviera for the winter, and then on to Rome! Home, Florence, Venice! Ah, Constance, don't say 'no' to such a dream of happiness as that! Think of it, child. You and I together--alone!"

Her breath came fast. He could see her lips quiver.

"And then," he went on, with a smile, "we shall both escape Mr. Rawson Fenton and this terrible election, which you hate so much."

She almost started. How little he dreamed that this last reason weighed so much with her!

"But--but," she murmured, her heart craving to say "Yes! yes, oh yes!" "But the time is so short. My--my dresses."

He laughed outright.

"Now, Constance, that is, to use an Americanism 'a little too thin.' You to care about dresses and that kind of thing! You can buy better things abroad than you can here, I'm sure!"

"Yes," she murmured; "and--and it will be a very quiet wedding, Wolfe?"

He saw that she was yielding, and caught her to him, his heart bounding.

"My dear little maiden, we will, if you like, go out one morning for a walk, like the couple in Dickens's novel, and I'll say, 'By George! here's a church. How would it be if we got married?'"

She smiled and looked down, plucking the lace on her dress with nervous fingers.

"Not quite that," she said, in a low voice. "I know what is due to you, Wolfe."

"Then pay it, by all means!" he retorted, "and in any shape you like. So that I marry you, I don't care whether it's done by an archbishop and a full choral service, or in a little village church with the pew-opener and sexton for witnesses. I want you; dearest; and the sooner I can call you my own--my very own, the better I shall be pleased." She put her white arms round his neck and looked him full in the eyes, in one of those moments of complete self-abandonment which were so frequent with Constance.

"I will do whatever you wish," she answered. "My love! My master!"

Then she glided from his passionate embrace, and left him to think over his happiness. The marioness's door was open, and as Constance passed the old lady called to her.

Constance went in, and sank down on the great leopard skin on which the marioness's chair was placed before the huge wood fire, and hiding her face in the old lady's lap, told her what had passed.

The marioness kissed her.

"I am very glad, my dear," she said, simply. "It is better for you both, and better for me. You love each other dearly, and I want to see you back soon both in your right places here at the castle. In a fortnight--"

"Three weeks," said Constance.

"Very well, dear. We shall have to work hard--"

"But it is to be a very quiet wedding," said Constance, looking up earnestly.

The old lady nodded.

"That is for you and Wolfe to decide. Which means that he will do just as you please. And now you must tell me whom you would like to have here, dear."

Constance started, and her face grew red.

"I--I forgot!" she murmured. "I--I cannot be married from here!"

The marioness smiled, and stroked the long tresses of silken hair which had got loose and streamed over her knee, serving to partly hide the lovely face.

"Well, it is not usual but I don't think it matters in the very least, dear. You see, this is your home."

Constance shook her head. She cared little for conventionalities, but she knew that such a breach of etiquette as would be committed by her going from the castle to the church was one which the world would talk about; and as the wife of the Marquis of Brakespearie believed her to cause so little gossip as possible.

"I--I might go to London," she said. The marioness shook her head.

"No, my dear, not that. All the Brakespearies for years past have been married in their own church, and I should like Wolfe and you to plight your vows at the old altar."

"What is to be done?" murmured Constance, her eyes filling. "I have no friends--"

The marioness stopped her.

"Don't say that, dear. You have so many. Ah! why, yes, of course! You broke off her phalaris lace lightness up. 'The duchess will be only too delighted.'"

"The duchess!"

"Yes," and she patted her hand lovingly and soothingly. "She will be only too glad to have you married from the Towers. There is nothing the duchess loves better than a wedding, and for your and Wolfe's wedding she would do anything. My dear, it is the very thing! You can go and stay there two or three days before the day, and Wolfe can remain here. You will only be separated by a few miles from each other, and that is something, isn't it?" And she smiled.

"But--but it will have to be a grand wedding then?" said Constance, reluctantly.

"Not necessarily. A little grand, perhaps. We mustn't deprive the duchess of a little gaiety. I will go over and see her to-morrow, dear. And now go to bed and get a good night's sleep. I can't tell you how happy you have made me."

ALL PRIZE GOODS

Colored by the Diamond Dyes.

It is a fact worthy of note that all the best rag carpets, rugs and mats shown at country fairs and exhibitions last year were dyed with the best and brilliant Diamond Dyes.

This season, we hear that even more extensive work is going on for the coming autumn fairs. The ladies who are experts in the art of carpet, rug and mat making are now buying Diamond Dyes in large quantities to color their materials for the manufacture of exhibition goods.

At all fairs, aims out of every tax exhibitors of homemade carpets, rugs and mats use the Diamond Dyes, knowing full well that the imitative dyes can never give satisfactory results.

If you are about coloring materials for exhibition goods, do not allow a very dealer to sell you the imitation, crude dye. He makes a large profit, but you suffer loss of your money, time and materials if you are unfortunate enough to use them.

Every ingredient in Manley's Celery-Nerve Compound is a blood maker and health-giver. If you are weak or run down, try it.

Dear Sir: It is with pleasure I can recommend others to take Manley's Celery-Nerve Compound. It is a thoroughly scientific and a sterling preparation, and as a tonic I think it has no equal. Other members of my family besides myself have used it, and in all cases it gave the most gratifying and pleasant results.

Yours respectfully,

Editorial Chat.

At a recent luncheon given by Sir Frank Smith at the Albany Club, Sir McKenzie Bowell declared his intention of remaining in politics.

On Tuesday the Conservatives of Queen-Sunbury, nominated Mr R. D. Wilnot to contest the constituency against Mr Blair, the Minister of Railways.

A convention in Ottawa of the Conservative members of the Senate and Commons is arranged for Wednesday the 19th. At this convention the leadership as to the policy of the Opposition will be decided upon.

The citizens of New York are sweating through one of the most fatal periods of heat in the history. Four hundred have already succumbed to the deadly temperature, and the thermometer shows no indications of lowering.

The conference of the sound money Democrats held at Indianapolis on the 7th was largely attended. The conference decided to call a national convention for the announcement of a platform and the nomination of candidates for President and vice.

The Dartmouth branch of the Inter-colonial Railway at Halifax is now complete. This will be the only construction work carried out by the I. C. R. this year; but some maintenance work will be accomplished, among which is a new stone and brick station at Moncton to cost $40,000 or $50,000.

Only two of the six bye-elections for the local house will be contested on the 15th. At Saturday's nomination Murray in Victoria, Longley in Annapolis, Wallace in Halifax and Farrel in Queens, were declared elected by acclamation. In Colchester and Lunenburg the Conservatives have nominated Turner and Parker to oppose McLure and Morash, Liberals.

Sir Donald A. Smith, Canadian High Commissioner in England, had an interview with Li Hung Chang, the Special Envoy of the Emperor of China, on Tuesday last, and on behalf of the government of the Dominion, invited him to visit Canada as the guest of the country. Li Hung Chang accepted the invitation and said that he had been looking forward to a visit to Canada with great interest. He will be over in a very few weeks.

The report made recently that the Hon. Edward Blake had been appointed on the advice of Mr Laurier as the Canadian member of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, is incorrect. Mr Blake would admirably adorn this position but the terms of the act authorizing the appointment of colonial judges which specify that no one shall be appointed who has not before received an appointment of local judge, renders him ineligible.

The Irish Land Bill passed through committee in the House of Lords on Saturday last, after a very vigorous continuation of the debate. Lord Salisbury intimated privately that if the Government was again defeated on any important point, he would seriously consider the advisability of resigning. The bill has been most strenuously opposed by the Irish landlords, who seem to regard their tenants in much the same light as the old time feudal lords did their serfs. The bill contains a number of reforms, which will greatly ameliorate the condition of the tenants. It is considered that the bill is now safe.

The Value of Good Roads.

We stated a week or two ago, says the Monetary Times, in writing upon improved country roads, that the Canadian farmer required to be shown that good roads would put money in his pocket before he would take much trouble to secure them. An instance which came up in our reading since, may serve to illustrate to Canadians how improved roads act in bettering the fortunes of a locality. Conditions such as recently existed in a small town in New Jersey, situate about seven miles from Philadelphia, form a striking lesson on the profit of good roads. In consequence of the bad roads the wagonmakers near the town in question, constructed four-horse vehicles to carry 55 bushel baskets as a maximum load, which was regarded as heavy hauling. Real estate thereabouts had gone begging for years; there was no possible market for it. It had been impossible to settle up estates because no purchaser could be found for the land. But a few years ago the people of the community woke up. The town issued $40,000 worth of bonds, and applied the proceeds to making better roadways. As a result the New Jersey wagonmakers are making two-horse vehicles to carry not 55 bushel baskets, but loads made up from 90 to 125 bushel baskets. Now that the roads are improved two horses are able to do more work than four horses. It is stated that on the old roads four horses, with a wagon weighing 1,000 pounds, could take two and one-half tons of produce to market and bring back an equal weight of fertilizer, making one return trip a day. To-day, on the good roads, one man with two horses, and a wagon weighing 2,300 pounds, takes four tons to market bringing back an equal weight and making two return trips a day. Here is an enormous saving. If this result could be brought about in Canada and the United States generally it would mean a heart-warming profit to tens of thousands of producers and carriers.

Grand Division, S. of T.

The third quarterly session of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance was held in Wolfville this week. The attendance of representatives and visitors was quite large, considering the busy season of the year. The following officers were in attendance: G. W. P., Rev. B. Hills; G. Scribe, W. S. Sanders; G. Treasurer, G. F. Hills; P. G. W. P., W. H. Guild. The vacancies were filled as follows: G. W. A., J. Parsons; G. Chaplain, Rev. Thomas Hutchings; G. Conductor, T. J. Burden; G. Sentinel, Wm McKinley. At the first session on Tuesday afternoon the hall was well filled, and twelve candidates were initiated to membership. The reports of the Grand Worthy Patriarch, Grand Scribe and Grand Treasurer, and of the various committees, showed that progress has been made during the past quarter in the work of the order. The discussion that took place at the meetings was of a most interesting nature. The report of the committee on the state of the order among other things recommended that the local and federal governments be petitioned to pass such prohibitive legislation as comes within their respective jurisdictions, as indicated by the report of the imperial privy council. At the session on Wednesday Mr W. J. Gates, who at the recent meeting of the national division was elected to the honorable position of Most Worthy Associate, was received and presented paternal greetings from the highest branch of the order. All the meetings were of an interesting and profitable character, and a fraternal and kindly feeling pervaded the discussions throughout.

A public meeting under the auspices of the Grand Division was held in Temperance Hall on Tuesday evening. The gathering was most enthusiastic and successful. Grand Worthy Patriarch, Rev. Benj. Hills, filled the chair and opened the meeting with a few happy remarks. Messrs J. Parsons, W. J. Gates, W. H. Guild, D. W. Reid, T. Hutchings, E. Blackadder, Andrew Hulley, W. S. Sanders, Dr Chipman and C. V. Rand then followed in pleasing and effective addresses bearing on the different phases of the temperance question. An agreeable feature of the meeting was the musical renderings by members of Wolfville and "Lily of the Valley" Division, and readings by Miss Mable Reid, of Port Williams, and Messrs Crowe and Hills. The meeting was in every way a success and should do much to strengthen the temperance sentiment in our town.

Sudden Deaths.

The people of Wolfville were startled on Tuesday afternoon at the news of the death of an esteemed townsman, Mr Thomas E. Sherwood. The deceased formerly resided in New York, and came to Wolfville about three years ago in consequence of poor health. On the afternoon of the day of his demise he appeared to be in his usual health, and was out on his farm consulting with his foreman regarding work to be done. Mr Eys left him for a short time and on his return found him reclining on a garden seat as he supposed in a faint. Dr Bowles was at once summoned, but on his arrival found that it was death that had come as a gentle sleep. The deceased was 59 years of age and was highly respected by all who knew him. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon and was attended by a large number of acquaintances and sympathetic friends of the family. The services were conducted at St. John's church by the rector, and the remains were interred in the picturesque little cemetery adjoining. THE ACADIAN joins the community at large in sympathy to the bereaved widow and family.

Mr Leander Palmer, a respected and worthy citizen of Long Island, aged 71 years, died very suddenly at his home at that place on Sunday morning last. The deceased had been indisposed for a few days, but was not thought to be seriously ill. On Sunday morning Mr Palmer left him for a few moments to prepare some nourishment for him, and returning shortly after, found that he had died during his absence. Deceased was well known and highly esteemed as an upright man and a good citizen. THE ACADIAN extends hearty sympathy to the sorrowing widow and family.

Mr Cecil Rhodes is being talked about ever more than Mr Chamberlain. He should endeavor to imitate the latter in his indifference to petty criticism. Fancy a general in command upon active service endeavoring to prove his capacity by deliberately placing himself in a likely position to get shot. A soldier's courage is tested long before he reaches the top of the tree. When there his life is more valuable to the army than that of the private whom he directs, and it is his duty to the army to remain as Moltke did—in as safe a spot as possible, so long as he can witness the performance of the manoeuvres he is there to direct. Mr Rhodes exposing himself unnecessarily to aitable bullets to prove his courage is not a heroic figure.

A Fibre Chamolis Ad.

Men as a rule care more for comfort than for style, still no man is averse to a neat well hanging coat that keeps its shape through all kinds of knocking around. This is one of the extra that Fibre Chamolis offers when used as an interlining in men's clothing. It not only makes garments thoroughly weather proof, providing a healthful warmth which can't be penetrated by the severest wind or cold; but its flexible spring and stiffness make the coat or vest fit well and keep its proper hang till worn completely out. And the beauty is that it is so light you wouldn't know you were carrying anything extra around, and so cheap that it is every one's reach.

Local and Provincial.

We would call the attention of our readers to the notice "Lost" in another column.

Tourists from no less than fourteen different States of the Union, were at the American House one day this week.

Lots of picnics this week. Where? Oh, different places. Nothing takes quite so well with the young fry as a picnic.

The Superintendent of Streets has had number of men at work this week getting up the hay on Main street. There was a fine crop.

"Champs" owned by Dr. Bowler, of this town, starts to-day in the 2.50 class at Kentville. She is a very fast mare, and will no doubt give a good account of herself.

The three-masted schooner J. P. Durant, Capt. F. C. Durant, from New York, is unloading a cargo of hard coal at the wharf for Messrs. Vaughn and Armstrong.

An Ottawa despatch says: Nearly all the D. A. G.'s who have been heard from favor the holding of militia camps this year. The maritime provinces deputy adjutants-general are unanimous in advocating fall camps.

We had the privilege on Monday morning last of seeing for the first time a "real, live bloomer girl." She was a strident a gentleman's wheel, and was certainly a thing of beauty, and possibly a joy forever—if she would keep out of sight.

Rev. Mr. Fraser, pastor of the Coburg road Presbyterian church, Halifax, occupied the pulpit of St. Andrew's church, of this town, on Sunday morning and evening last. His discourses evinced much ability and were listened to with great pleasure by those in attendance.

The Berwick Camp Meeting was very successful this year, large numbers being in attendance throughout the week. On account of the new regulations, closing the grounds to visitors on Sunday, the number taking advantage of the Sunday railway excursion was not as large as in former years, but it is thought more attended on other days. Messrs. Crosley and Hunter, evangelists, began services on Monday, which resulted in an immense amount of good.

SEASONABLE TANGLECOAT PLY PAPER—Regular and small, by the single sheet or box. HARTUNG AND FURS, Cream of Tartar, Drug Store.

The small boy has already begun to court death. He may be found every day with the pockets of his jeans stuffed out with green apples—after the pockets become empty, the doctor is usually called in. Such is the philosophy of youth. If it will give me any pleasure, I'll do it, no matter what the consequences may be. It is not always thus.

The ladies of the Baptist church at Hantsport intend holding a grand Garden Party on their church grounds at Hantsport, Thursday evening, August 20th, commencing at 4 o'clock, p. m. An excellent meal supper will be served. Ice-cream and other refreshments will be present, with some entirely new and startling features. Special arrangements are being made for the accommodation of bicyclists. The famous 78th Band of Windsor, will furnish music for the occasion.

Many of our readers will remember seeing a few days ago an account of the death of a young man in Montreal, caused by the bite of a tarantula, which had been concealed in a bunch of bananas he was handling. While in the grocery store of F. J. Porter, on Monday afternoon, Mr. J. M. Shaw happened to be speaking of the occurrence, and reached out his hand to a bunch of bananas and pulled one off to illustrate. As he did so a tarantula leaped out and landed across the floor. He was captured, but not until after a fairy-like foot had badly mutilated him. It was quite a coincidence.

A Prohibition Candidate.

A correspondent for the Halifax Herald under date of Aug. 3d, writes:

Prohibitionists were very much in evidence in Baltimore last week. The state convention met and the notification committee formally notified Joshua Leveering of his nomination for the presidency. Prior to the mass meeting at the Lyceum a thousand or more enthusiastic cold water advocates, carrying banners and transparencies, paraded the streets and entered the already well-filled theatre headed by a brass band. The Rev. W. O. Stewart, of Illinois, chairman of the notification committee, was then presented. In addressing Mr Leveering he said: "Your position in the politics of the nation is a peculiar one. There is only one candidate for the presidency who deserves to be elected, and you are that one. In the affairs of this nation the prohibition party holds a unique position. Other so-called third parties rise and fall, but this goes on forever. It will continue to call attention to the awful havoc of the saloon, and the wreck and ruin caused by the liquor power until a majority of voters have been whipped and scourged into its ranks by the stinging lash of an aroused conscience. No other party can hold one whose heart has been crushed and whose soul has been pierced by this evil. In asking you to accept this nomination we offer you a platform long and wide. It goes far enough before us to include the needs of humanity; back of us it takes in all the people wounded in the Chatsworth disaster, was in the fourth car with her husband. In this car was a party of six young people. In order that they might sit together, Mr and Mrs Grant changed seats with a man and his bride. Their courtesy saved their lives, for the young people were both killed. Mrs Grant thought this party were concert singers, they were so jolly and so well-dressed. They could sing, and they laughed and told stories and anticipated the pleasure of the trip until late at night. Then Mrs Grant composed herself in her chair and covered her face with her handkerchief to go to sleep. Nearly everybody was quiet in the car except the jolly party of six. About this time the young bride was requested to sing "Nearer My God to Thee." Something in the desire to sleep and recall the dear old song. The young woman sang and all listened while the train sped on. As the little gleam of fire appeared far ahead the track their voices were heard: "Nearer my God to Thee."

"Nearer my God to Thee." When passing under the red, she read the experience of Jacob at Bethel, the runaway, the sleep, the dream, the angel, the waking, and from the inspiration came the song.

Not the hymn had not yet been finished. There was another petition to add, and this was done some time after. Her much-loved sister Eliza, who was as famous for music as she was for her sewing, was taken with consumption, and a new experience of sorrow gave the poetess to see another round in the ladder, another mode of transportation, and turning over her old manuscript, as she saw the shades of coming departure on the countenance of her much-loved sister, she added to the manuscript of her favorite hymn one verse more.

"Or if on joyful wings," which stanza was blessedly realized in her own experience two years later, for she closed the earthly pilgrimage while engaged in repeating this last stanza she had written.

"Or if on joyful wings." The late Mrs Merriam Grant, one of the people wounded in the Chatsworth disaster, was in the fourth car with her husband. In this car was a party of six young people. In order that they might sit together, Mr and Mrs Grant changed seats with a man and his bride. Their courtesy saved their lives, for the young people were both killed. Mrs Grant thought this party were concert singers, they were so jolly and so well-dressed. They could sing, and they laughed and told stories and anticipated the pleasure of the trip until late at night. Then Mrs Grant composed herself in her chair and covered her face with her handkerchief to go to sleep. Nearly everybody was quiet in the car except the jolly party of six. About this time the young bride was requested to sing "Nearer My God to Thee." Something in the desire to sleep and recall the dear old song. The young woman sang and all listened while the train sped on. As the little gleam of fire appeared far ahead the track their voices were heard: "Nearer my God to Thee."

"Nearer my God to Thee." The speed of the train increased down the grade. Again the song swelled: "There let the way appar, steps unto heaven."

"The way was already in sight." "All that thou sendest me in mercy given."

And then with but a moment of life left for each of them, even when poor El. McClintock's hand was giving its last desperate wrench to the engine, the singers sang to their God, who seemed not to be holding them in the hollow of His hand:

"Angels to beckon me, Nearer my God to Thee."

Enough. It was finished. The engine struck the frail bridge and it sank. The car containing the singers crashed like a bolt of fire through the two cars in front of it, killing and grinding as a foot kills a worm. In the same instant another car crashed through it and the singers were dead.

They Deserve Pity.

Safety and Life Depend Upon Pain's Celery Compound.

We must sympathize with, and pity the poor, weary and jaded sufferer whose life is made miserable and almost unbearable in this hot weather.

The healthiest of us have all we can do to withstand the enervating effects of scorching days and sweltering nights. The sick mortals—leaves help them—must suffer increased agony during these hot days.

The troubles that bring low the majority of people at this season are nervous prostration, nervous debility, dyspepsia, indigestion, headache, and a host of troubles that result from impure and poisoned blood.

The above troubles attack men and women because their supply of nerve force is almost exhausted. Loss of this nerve force and feebleness is at the root of nearly every case of sickness.

A true nerve medicine is what is needed; it health is to be restored, and the dark grave avoided. Pain's Celery Compound is a perfect and unfailing restorer of nerve force and power to the weakened and debilitated system. It quickly cures prostration, sleeplessness, headache, dyspepsia, indigestion; it cleanses the point of blood and gives new life and permanent vitality and strength.

Pain's Celery Compound combines the most effective alterative, laxative, and diuretic, and soon restores the sick one to complete health. To-day it is earth's most reliable medicine; it is made from your special sense upon the strength of pollution, and then attempting to reach the consciousness. In the light of the temperance reform, truer words were never spoken of a blinded, woe and woful humanity.

"Nearer my God to Thee."

SARAH FLOWERS ADAMS. As a garden without a rose, such would be a collection of hymns without this one. About 53 years ago the daughter of an English editor and writer and wife of an English engineer composed a hymn that has undertaken to rival in popularity that magnificent Marseillaise of the church, "O God Save the King." Her father, Benjamin Flowers, was proprietor of the Cambridge Intelligencer, and trained her literary tastes that early manifested themselves. Her husband's name was William Adams, and she is best known as Sarah Flowers Adams. She was of the Unitarian faith, but all denominations have adopted her inimitable hymn, and it is now incorporated into almost every hymn-book extant for sale. It is sung in nearly every language in which the Bible is read, and is every day accompanying the gospel into the distant lands that lie beneath the shades of overcast and gloomy death. In itself it is the same as Cowper's "Oh for a closer walk with God," and Wesley's "My God, the Spring of all my joys." It contains the fresh and touching expression of aspiration after God, and is the best expression of burning desire for more intimate acquaintance with God that can be found in any of our hymns. Intimacy in any terms is the language of the hymn.

Ever upward is the song, though a cross be the ladder. Ever upward, though the chariot be the whirlwind. Ever upward; though the pinnacles be flame.

By the thorny way of deep affliction she had been brought nearer to God, and her experience was God's answer to the simple prayer which she has embalmed in song.

"Nearer to Thee," When passing under the red, she read the experience of Jacob at Bethel, the runaway, the sleep, the dream, the angel, the waking, and from the inspiration came the song.

Not the hymn had not yet been finished. There was another petition to add, and this was done some time after. Her much-loved sister Eliza, who was as famous for music as she was for her sewing, was taken with consumption, and a new experience of sorrow gave the poetess to see another round in the ladder, another mode of transportation, and turning over her old manuscript, as she saw the shades of coming departure on the countenance of her much-loved sister, she added to the manuscript of her favorite hymn one verse more.

Scrap for Odd Moments.

A gallon of coal oil poured on the live coals in the stove will clean out the stove, also the kitchen.

"What helped you over great obstacles of life?" they asked a successful man. "The other obstacles," he answered.

Mrs O'Brien—Sure, it's a dandy hat entirely. Come over here, Patsy, and see how elegant ye look at a distance.

Visitor—Johnny, do you ever get any good marks at school? Johnny—Y-yes'm, but I can't show 'em.

An agricultural exchange asks: "How can we prevent cider from working?" You might get it a government position.

Minards Liniment Cures Dandruff. She—When they hear you are going to be married, dear, won't they raise your salary? He—Yes, am afraid, not, but they have heard it so often before.

A good man is the best friend, and therefore someone to be chosen, longer to be retained, and indeed never to be parted with, unless he cease to be that for which he was chosen.

"Now, Eleanor, you weigh 130 pounds, and the weight gauge on the hammock registers 300 pounds. Where did that other 170 pounds come from?" "From N-new York, I think."

Minards Liniment for sale everywhere. Judge (to a prisoner)—Did you really call this gentleman an old fool last night? Prisoner (ring to collect his thoughts)—The longer I look at him the more probable it seems to me that I did.

Aunt Dorothy—How many commandments are there, Johnny? Johnny (glibly)—Ten. Aunt Dorothy—And now suppose you were to break one of them? Johnny (tentatively)—Then there would be nine.

"Brown had to give up trying to be an after-dinner speaker." "Why so?" "He at last came to the conclusion that he was one of the unfortunate men who cannot talk when they are sober nor think when they are drunk."

Minards Liniment relieves Neuralgia. Mrs Maloney—I beat that yer good man is into the asylum wit' softenin' of the brain? Mrs Maloney—Arrah, that, an' it's true. Poor man, he fell off a four-story house, an' his plump on the top of his poor head, an' he's been actin' queer ever since!

Mrs Figg—What on earth did you get a new lawn-mower for? Isn't the old one good enough for all the work we have to do? Mr Figg—Yes, it's good enough, but it's a surprise which does not fit your foot the first time you wear it. It promises little comfort for the woman in the time. It costs more money to secure the footing than the Eskimo does when he goes on snow shoes. That's why they possess more foot-comfort, wear and appearance than other shoes. Stamped on the sole $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 per pair.

Minards Liniment Cures Burns, etc. Belows—Talk about your moving speech! I never heard a more thrilling and effective one than Sparkins delivered at the mass meeting last evening. Follows—Sparkins made a moving speech! Impossible! Belows—You'd never think so, if you'd been at the meeting last night when he got up and yelled "Fire!"

In that newspaper we picked up on the stairs, and I read to you when Willie, there was a piece which said that death does not always bring happiness. Do you suppose that's so? Yes, it's so, replied Wealthy Willie. I know it from experience. You don't say! When did you have wealth? "Well, I had wealth once, but it did not bring happiness." "Tell me about it." "Once when I was trampin' in Iowa I found a silver dollar, an' I had to walk four days before I came to a place where I could buy beer. I never went to Iowa after that."

Don't torment yourself about what people are going to think about this and that action. No matter what you do or leave undone some one will criticize you severely, and the very best rule for getting through life with comparative comfort is after you have made up your mind as to the propriety and advisability of a certain course, pursue it calmly, without paying the slightest attention to the criticisms and the looks on from the outside. You see, just because they are on the outside they can only see the surface. It does not matter in the least what they think.

The shoe which does not fit your feet the first time you wear it promises little comfort for the woman in the time. It costs more money to secure the footing than the Eskimo does when he goes on snow shoes. That's why they possess more foot-comfort, wear and appearance than other shoes. Stamped on the sole $3.00, $4.00, $5.00 per pair.
