At the Mouth of the Treacherous Pit

STORY OF LOVE, INTRIGUE AND REVENGE

CHAPTER XXII.

Dolores was living in Paris when she heard that the Villa Baira was to let, and it occurred to her that Florence would be a very suitable place of residence for her. There she would have every opportunity of educating her daughters, and at the same time would find a haven of rest and the happiness to be derived from a lovely climate and beautiful scenery.

So to the Villa Baira, as to a haven of rest, she came, with her two little children and faithful, old servant, John Frodsham; and there for sixteen years she lived.

But she had never grown accustomed to her pain. It was as keen now as of old. If she woke in the middle of the night her first thought was always this—why had Karl left her whom he loved for one whom he had not loved? She never quite reconciled to the loss—she never quite understood it. One other thing was a mystery to her. Sir Karl had never drawn any money; and she wondered from what source he derived his income, and decided in her own mind that it was merely a strong sense of justice on his part that had caused him to leave his money untouched for his wife and child. Then her heart rebelled against the notion that he was living on Lola's money. It was so unlike the brave, generous, manly husband who had been her hero.

Kathleen was over twenty now, and Gertrude a beautiful, blooming girl of seventeen. They had not suffered by their mother's voluntary exile. They had received an excellent education; masters came every day from Florence to instruct them. They could not fail to imbibe every pure, high, and holy principle from Dolores; and from her they inherited also that high-bred grace-of-manner and refinement of taste that made her one of the most charming of women. They moved in the highest society. Dolores made but one stipulation. They might make the acquaintance of Italians, Austrians, Spaniards—people of every and any nationality except English; they were forbidden, under the severest penalties, ever to allow any introductions to the latter, no matter what their rank or position.

As the golden-haired lady with the sweet, sad face stood looking over the Arno, the waves of which were slowly brimming over until they reached her feet, she thought of all those long years, and wondered if her peaceful rest from sorrow and shame must, on account of her dear children, come to an end. They would not always be content here.

Everything was so peaceful and calm. The crimson light was lying now on the river. The same thought occurred to her which, like a poisonous snake, had stung her every hour of her life since her husband had left her—"What is he doing now? Is he standing by Lola's side, watching with her some scene as fair as this?"

She turned from the river with a cry of pain on her lips. She felt more lonely than usual this evening, for her children had asked for a holiday, and with a good-natured Neapolitan Countess for their escort, had gone to see the famous Pitti palace. Dolores had wished the old butler to accompany them—he was in her eyes a bodyguard in himself; but her daughters had laughed so merrily, and the countess had seemed so amused that she had been compelled to abandon the idea. Frodsham was always on the alert when there were any English about, and Dolores knew that she was beginning to think that the children were rather late when she heard the carriage stop.

Ah, what a difference those sweet, fresh, young voices made! She heard them in the distance, and her heart beat at the sound. "My darlings!" she said to herself.

Presently Gertrude cried: "Frodsham where is mamma?"

"I saw her by the river, Miss Gertrude, not three minutes ago."

"Oh, Kathleen, there she is, under the vines! I can see the gleam of her golden hair. Come, Kathleen, quickly!"

But the elder sister drew back, as though reluctant, which was something unusual.

"She will be so very angry, Gertrude, and we have never seriously displeased her before—never."

"Yes, I am afraid she will be vexed. The best way will be to tell her the truth at once. We have done wrong; but how could we help it? I almost dropped when that dear old lady caught hold of me. Why, Kathleen, it is quite an adventure! Come and let us tell our mother all about it!"

They hastened to the vine-walk. Dolores's fair face brightened as she saw them, and the sadness died out of her eyes. Gertrude went up to her. "Darling mamma," she said, "do not kiss us until you have heard what we have done."

Dolores was somewhat startled, and her face paled a little, but she answered quietly:

"I am quite sure, my darlings, that you have done no wrong. But where is the Countess?"

"She had to drive off at once; a message came to her at the palace. She left every possible apology and compliment for you, mamma. She has been very kind to us, and we have had a happy day. But, oh! mamma, how am I to tell you what has happened? Kathleen says you will be dreadfully angry. I feel that too, yet I cannot see how we could possibly have avoided it."

"My dear Gertrude, you forgot that all this time you are keeping me in suspense," her mother said, half smiling.

They made a striking group, these three fair women—Dolores in the fair splendor of matronhood, Kathleen with her pathetic beauty, and Gertrude in the freshest bloom of her girlhood, dainty, delicate, and lovely.

"I will tell you at once, mamma," she said, "and you must promise me not to be very angry."

CHAPTER XXIII.

Mother and daughter walked down to the water's edge.

"If you have a long story to tell me," said Dolores, "let us sit down here; these bamboo chairs are quite inviting."

She did not feel alarmed. Her children had not hitherto caused her any uneasiness. Still it was plain that something out of the usual current of events had happened. Kathleen had grown pale, and Gertrude rosy red.

"Mamma," began Gertrude, "it is better to tell you the truth, though I am afraid a great deal of mischief has been done. You know that Kathleen and I have not asked you any questions about England; we both knew that if there was anything to tell you would tell it in good time. But, Mamma, to-day, for the first time, we have heard that there is something strange—"

"Strange, Gertrude?"—and Dolores's face was troubled.

"Yes; but, darling, never mind what comes of it. Kathleen and I are your devoted children; if you say that we are to forget this, and never ask any questions about it, we will do so."

"I know that you are the best children in the world," said Dolores; "but what is it you have heard, my dear?"

"You know we went with the countess to see the Pitti palace, and one room in it delighted us above all others. Some of Raphael's most beautiful Madonnas are there, and a lovely Dolores—ah, mamma, how like your name—by Fra Angelico. Kathleen and I stood before it for a long time. Other people were in the room; and at last I saw a group that I felt sure were English. Presently we heard the sound of their voices. It was right in my surmise, for they spoke pure, beautiful English. The young gentleman walked away to look at a picture at the other side of the large saloon, so that he was at some distance from his mother. I think she had grown tired, for she sat down in one of the great chairs and sighed. A few minutes afterward she dropped her purse, and it slid along the polished floor until it came to my feet. Now, mamma, in common politeness, could I help picking it up?"

"No, my dear," said Dolores, gently—"certainly not." She had always taught her children to be attentive to the aged.

"I did pick it up; and as a matter of course, handed it to the owner. My face flushed, and I felt very uncomfortable. I knew that she was English, and that you had forbidden us to speak in such a case. Madam," I said, "I think this is yours." They were very simple words, but the effect upon her was something marvelous. She sprang up and caught me by both hands with a cry that rang through the great saloon. But, mamma, you are growing pale and paler!"

"Go on, my dear," said Dolores—"never mind me."

"She caught me by both hands, and cried out, 'Child, who are you, who are you?' She was a beautiful lady, mamma—quite old, with a fine face that had many lines on it—not fair and smooth like yours—and white hair. When she laid me and looked at me, her eyes flashed. 'Who are you?' she cried. 'What is your name—your name with Karl Allanmore's face?' That was the name, I am sure, mamma—Karl Allanmore."

Britain's Most Curious Colony

THE "TIT-BITS" MAN VISITS OUR "ELLIS ISLAND."

I had the unique experience recently (writes the Tit-Bits man) of paying a visit to what is perhaps the strangest spot in Britain—one which, while situated in that typically English country of Hampshire, is yet, if one is to judge by its inhabitants, a Russian village!

What and where is this strange place? It is at Eastleigh, about five miles from Southampton, and, while it is in no sense an island, the name which has been given to it—Britain's "Ellis Island"—conveys the best description of it although its comforts are far superior to those of the latter place.

A Home for Emigrants. A collection of huts and airship hangars which have been converted into homes and recreation rooms, Atlantic Park Hostel—to give its proper name—is a temporary home for many thousands of emigrants—mostly Russian and Polish—who are held up from time to time in this country owing to the fact that the emigration quota in America is full.

Under the United States emigration laws only a certain number of emigrants from each country are allowed to land on American soil within specified times; thus emigrants who reach Southampton when the quota has been exhausted are taken to Atlantic Park and housed and fed there until the next quota is opened in America.

Atlantic Crossed in Vain. When I visited Atlantic Park Hostel, which is conducted by Colonel R. D. Barber, the manager for the three principal Atlantic steamship lines—the Cunard, the Canadian Pacific, and the White Star—I discovered a very happy and contented colony of almost a thousand emigrants, most of whom had been there nearly six months. Two hundred of them actually crossed the Atlantic only to be turned back, within sight of the promised land, when they reached Ellis Island. They are now awaiting the time when they will be able to proceed.

The hostel extends over an area of twenty-five acres and the huts in which the emigrants live are provided with every reasonable comfort. The occupants are encouraged to beautify their temporary homes, which, as I saw in the course of my visit, they are ready and eager to do. There is a large and well-equipped hospital ready to deal with any outbreak of disease—a contingency which, of course, must be guarded against in such circumstances—while, as the emigrants comprise both Jews and Gentiles, there are two different kitchens with special cooks, one for Kosher (Jewish) food and the other for ordinary food.

After Twenty Years. The inhabitants, who have little of which to complain regarding lack of luxury, are also waited upon in the dining-rooms by waitresses. There is a large recreation room, and a football field, as well as a school, at which the young ones are taught various subjects, principally English.

"They are all very likeable people," Colonel Barber told me. "They are just like big children. But perhaps I am prejudiced because I have lived so long in Russia, know the people so well, and speak their language. They are remarkably intelligent, particularly the children, who show the most remarkable aptitude and eagerness for learning."

"The hostel has been in existence for some years now—since the war—and many thousands of emigrants have passed through it. They are all very orderly, though coming from Russia as they do, and holding widely different political opinions, it is necessary to keep some of the men separate from their companions."

"Once I had rather a bad few minutes when I heard what sounded like pandemonium break out in the dining-room. I immediately thought it must be a racial riot. But my fears when I got to the room soon allayed. One man who had sat down at table next to another had turned to discover that his companion was the man who had saved him from drowning twenty years before, and they had not seen each other from that day. It was certainly a dramatic meeting, and the two proclaimed their mutual delight in no half-hearted fashion."

"On another occasion a very well-dressed and gentlemanly-looking visitor called to see me at the hostel. He had, he said, just come from America—where he had made his fortune—to visit his brother, who was staying at Atlantic Park. He asked me to send for his brother, but not to mention who had called. I did so, and the emigrant came into my room, his eyes fixed upon me a little fearfully, no doubt wondering what he had done to warrant this 'carpeting.'"

Russia in Hampshire. "After a little his eyes wandered round the room and at last settled on a corner. The shout of joy that emigrant gave could almost have been heard miles away! I have heard pleasant reunions, but this one enacted before my eyes surely reached the high-water mark of happiness."

Charles C. H. believes in eating fish three times a day; he says it is a wholesome diet that keeps disease away. He says it stimulates the brain and makes it function fine; and though I hold him scarcely sane, it's no concern of mine. Pete Foulch fills himself with beef, the well done sort and rare; he says he sidesteps lots of grief by such a bill of fare; I know that such a diet's bad for short-necked men like Pete, but I don't chase around the grad denouncing what men eat. James Jumbleton is fond of eggs, he eats them raw and fried; they put new vigor in his legs, and brace him up inside. I feel that there is better food for gangling men like James; but I would think it coarse and rude to chide him for his games. We stir up trouble every day by taking men to task for eating prunes or prairie hay, or sauerkraut from a cask. What others do, within the law, is no concern of mine; and if they eat their turnips raw, my soul will not repine. And if they read the sort of slush that has a vile renown, I will not to their doorways rush, to harshly call them down. And when I cut a slice of soup, I call no man my friend who comes severely to my coop, to lecture without end.

U. S. Ambassador Acts as Mediator

French Views Not in Accord With Those of U. S. Financiers—3000 Killed and Wounded in Brazilian Insurrection—8 Killed When Banker Crashed Into the Boston.

ANOTHER HITCH.

LONDON, July 22. With the Inter-Allied Conference on the Experts Reparations plan not yet a week old, the United States Ambassador, Frank B. Kellogg, has been called upon to play the delicate role of mediator, which all the delegations confidently predicted would be necessary, sooner or later, when the statesmen opened their parleys here last Wednesday. Mr. Kellogg's opportunity came this evening, when the French ideas of security were found to be out of harmony with the guarantees required by the United States financiers, who are expected to take up a considerable portion of the forty million pound loan to Germany with which the Dawes plan is to be inaugurated. The situation although tense tonight is regarded by most observers as capable of amicable solution, through the office of United States Ambassador and his colleagues. On one principle all the delegations seem still to be agreed, that the experts' plan affords the only solution for Europe's ills and that the alternative is chaos. Accordingly the position is one of anxiety but not of despair and the delegations do not regard the hitch which has occurred because of the bankers' demands for protection for the loan in the light of a crisis.

3000 KILLED AND WOUNDED.

WASHINGTON, July 22. Three thousand civilians are reported to have been killed and injured in fighting at Sao Paulo between Brazilian Federal and Revolutionary forces. This report was received today by the State Department. The heaviest fighting of the revolt, the message said, took place during the night of July 20th, but the result did not materially change the situation.

DEFEATED ON LIQUOR ISSUE.

CHRISTIANA, July 22. The Ministry of Premier Abraham Berge has resigned as a result of the defeat of the Government's proposals for balancing the budget by repealing the present prohibition law and permitting in liquors under Government control. It was estimated this trade would bring in an income of thirty million kroner.

THE WRECK OF THE BOSTON.

NEWPORT, R.I., July 22. Four passengers, three men and one woman, are known to have been killed when the oil tanker Swift Arrow crashed into the Eastern Steamship liner Boston of Point Judith last night. Their bodies were seen in the wreckage of two state rooms when the Boston was towed into Newport Harbour and beached there today. They were caught behind the ship's plates that had been crushed in and it was said the plates would have to be cut with gas torches before the bodies could be extricated. Several passengers are known to have been injured. Half an hour after the collision the steamer appeared to be settling, with the engine room filled with water and power and lights gone. The work of lowering boats was begun then and was carried on without danger, the women and children leaving first, men passengers next, then the crew, the Captain and Radio Officer alone remaining.

THE GRAIN CROP SITUATION.

WINNIPEG, July 22. Liberal rain falls during the past week have brought relief to grain crops in many sections of Western Canada's crop area, but there are still districts in Saskatchewan and Alberta where moisture is urgently needed and in some instances the situation is critical, according to the crop report issued by the Agricultural Department of the C. P. R. here today. Manitoba, where prospects have greatly improved, following heavy rains, gives promise of average crops. Conditions are generally good in Southern Saskatchewan, except in certain parts of the Southwest, where more rain is needed. Northern and Central Saskatchewan did not experience sufficient rain to benefit the crops to any appreciable extent. Rain arrived in Alberta too late to be of material benefit. It is estimated the crops in the south will be 35 per cent below last year's. In the balance of the Province the yields will be light and straw short.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

HALIFAX, N.S., July 22. Lewis Bev's, alleged self-confessed slayer of police officer Charles Fulton, and principal figure of the most sensational man hunt ever staged in this city a hunt in which hundreds of armed citizens joined the police, and which threw the entire city into turmoil on Monday last, was arraigned in the police court this morning, charged with murder and attempted murder. Fourteen witnesses were heard, including two who stated they had seen the shooting of Officer Fulton. The court adjourned at one o'clock to resume this afternoon when it is thought preliminary examination will be conducted. Bevis, during the proceedings, maintained the same calm which has marked him ever since his arrest. He smiled quite frequently while the evidence of various witnesses was being given.

DIES FROM INJURIES RECEIVED HORSEBACK RIDING.

WINCHESTER, Eng., July 22. Lord Ashburton's youngest daughter, the Hon. Violet Alma Madeline Baring, died yesterday, from injuries received while horseback riding. The accident occurred when the young woman was exercising a colt alone. The animal became frightened and pitched her off its back. It was at first thought her injuries consisted only of a slight concussion, but a hemorrhage set in which soon caused death.

DE VALERA ACCLAIMED.

DUBLIN, July 22. Eamonn de Valera made his first public appearance since his release from prison, at the Mansion House last night, when he delivered a speech and was enthusiastically acclaimed "President of the Irish Republic."

RIVER BOATS AGROUND.

CINCINNATI, July 22. At least five river steamers are aground and innumerable house boats are stranded as the result of an unprecedented drop of ten feet in the Ohio River, within the last twenty-four hours. The drop was caused by sudden raising of the wickets in the dam above Cincinnati.

Old Coast Guard Cutter Bear

PINCHED IN ICE UP BEYOND ARCTIC CIRCLE, ABANDONED TO FATE.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The venerable Coast Guard cutter, the Bear, has made her last journey to the Arctic. She is pinched in the ice some a thousand miles north of Unalaska, two propellers are broken she has a score of dents in her side, and Coast Guard headquarters has radioed orders to give up, to return home from the 50th annual cruise into the far North.

So "Healy's Puk Ooniak" will not take the mail and the messengers from civilization to Point Barrow this year. The old vessel, named "Healy's fire canoe" by the natives when Capt. Healy used to guide her into the northern wastes, no more will brighten the lives of those lost from the world for a year at a time. She has been branded unsafe, unseaworthy, and when she gets back to the States, if she does, her last voyage will be ended. She will be dismantled.

It was on May 2 that the Bear, in command of Capt. Cockran, steamed away from the Golden Gate. Her skipper bore the usual broad instructions "to aid all peoples, to assist commerce, to open lines of communication," and last, but one of her most important duties, to carry the mails to every village it reached by the Bering sea patrol. The farthest north of these is Point Barrow.

Her thin steam of smoke and her white sails, for they use sails wherever possible to conserve stores of coal, eagerly have been watched for many long days each summer by the missionaries, the teachers, the traders and the natives; but their watches this time will be in vain in many villages.

A brief radio came through from Capt. Cockran. It told in a few words the story of a disappointed crew and insurmountable ice that blocked the northern way. Half a dozen times in June the Bear was caught in the ice. Men acquainted with the North, brawny and willing, freed her and she sought another means of egress, but July 5 found her facing "heaviest" ice, and a day later she was held fast again. When she was loose, Capt. Cockran was ready to start back.

Although Capt. Cockran's last message indicated his belief that he would have little difficulty in returning as soon as ice conditions permit, Rear Admiral Billard, the commandant, and others at Coast Guard headquarters, fear that the old boat may not emerge safely. She should never have gone this year, they said, but Capt. Cockran urged that the old Dundee whaler, whose boat had made 49 trips into waters that none other dared penetrate, including his journey to the rescue of Greely, should be given another trial.

Congress was asked at its last session to appropriate money for a new craft to replace the Bear, but the bill got lost in the jam of the cloister days. Her sister ships, the Thetis and the Resolute, long ago were dismantled, but not until each had served the Government faithfully for years and had carried such names as Sobieski and Usher and others in the most hazardous of journeys. Only the Bear remained. But now even the Bear, which has failed in so few attempts to reach those who know no other means of communication with the outside world, has been doomed by the hazards of time and must be cast aside.

Note.—The Thetis mentioned above is still doing duty, and this spring prosecuted the seal fishery, being one of the high liners of the fleet.

Kilbride Garden Party This Afternoon

After a strenuous week's work, the committee has completed all arrangements for the Garden Party this afternoon. Great enthusiasm is being manifested in the Pony Races, and the Three Mile Road Race, already the following competitors have entered: Messrs. O'Toole, Linegar and Stone. The first prize is a beautiful silver cup, and the second prize a gold medal. Beautiful medals will be given for the football races. A special programme of the very latest musical hits will be given by the C.G.C. full brass band. As for the ladies they have prepared a variety of good things for the needs of the inner-man. As announced by advertisement appearing elsewhere in our columns intending visitors are reminded that a special train will leave the Station at 3 p.m. sharp, and the buses will run to the ground all the afternoon.

A Sensational Story

MYSTERIOUS SHOOTING IN A PROMINENT CITIZENS HOME.

At five minutes before midnight, according to the story of MIDNIGHT, an intruder was shot in the home of a prominent citizen. Five minutes later, as the church bells were chiming midnight, an eloping couple was being married a few blocks away in the home of the bishop of the cathedral. The intruder who had been shot was the man who years ago had been married to the girl, but who had been long given up as dead. Whether the stain of bigamy should rest upon this girl's soul depended on whether the intruder was shot BEFORE or AFTER her midnight marriage. The shattered clock which was stopped by a bullet at five minutes before twelve was the silent witness.

That the public thoroughly enjoys strong, virile drama flavored with a dash of romance and a sprinkling of comedy was evidenced at the Majestic Theatre last evening where "Midnight," starring Constance Binney, met with the apparent approval of a large audience.

The drama of the piece hinges around an unfortunate early marriage of the heroine, a subsequent happy period of tender romance—and a denouement which has been played to give the utmost of dramatic suspense.

At the Star Movie

MR. PAUL CADIEAUX SINGS AT THE STAR MOVIE TONIGHT.

Ever alert and always looking forward to procure for its patrons the best obtainable, the Management of the popular Star announces that for tonight and the remainder of this week, they have closed a contract with Mr. Paul Cadieux, of Montreal (and who was the singer at Last Mass at the R. C. Cathedral on Sunday last) by which for a very short stay the music loving people of this city will have an opportunity of hearing this great vocalist.

Mr. Cadieux is here on a vacation, and all our papers were most loud in their praises of his singing after Sunday, and those who were so privileged to hear him, speak in glowing terms of him. He with Mr. Caruso will therefore afford us a feast of singing and as the latter has already earned for himself a reputation, the Star Movie will be the scene of large audiences.

Communism and Trade Unions

London Daily Mail: If Great Britain is to prosper, or indeed to exist, work must be done and we must all put our backs into doing it. So long as every few weeks there is a more or less serious labor upheaval, and so long as the Communists are able to secure the repudiation of agreements between trade unions and employers, no one can go ahead and no industry can prosper. We are convinced that trade unionists are in agreement with the public outside the trade unions in detesting the Communists and their intrigues. The money which the Reds waste is not all from Russian pockets, much of it is siphoned from trade union funds provided for the sick and old. The Government that crushes the Communists will be the most popular Administration for a decade.

The Possibilities of Our Marine Grass.

"The oddity in the form of eel grass," to which reference was made in the Broadsheet issued by the Management of the Empire Exhibition, and which was further commented upon by the Daily News and The Mail yesterday, was not forwarded as a floral exhibit, but to attract attention as an article of commercial value.

Goose grass is not, as one of our contemporaries stated, a product found in our inland waters, but grows in profusion around many parts of our coasts, particularly in such places as Sandy Point, Dildo, and Clarke's Beach.

The process of preparing and drying it for market is simple and inexpensive, and it is estimated that three men are able to cure about five tons a day. The grass which should be collected during the first two weeks in August, as it ripens about the middle of the month, and is torn from the bottom by the first storm after that date.

The prices quoted for this article vary from £7 to £27 in the London market, and the value of this industry if properly developed can readily be appreciated.

The immense possibilities which this industry presents demand that it should be put to the test, and we suggest that the Government undertake the carrying under capable supervision of about twenty tons and shipping it to Wembley. This would have to be done immediately. The very fact that the Broadsheet has considered the small quantity on exhibition of sufficient importance to refer to it justifies our carrying out such an experiment.

In 1911 very high offers were made in London for a supply of this grass, but either because those who were approached were sceptical, or because they were too closely interested in other industries, no steps were taken to forward a shipment.

We trust that the opportunity which offers to develop a new industry will not be passed over, for even if it proved to be an unsuccessful venture, the cost to the country would be very little. When we recall that the valuable deposits of limestone at Aquathuna were considered until recently just rocks, and that the only use made of the wonderful iron deposits at Bell Island was to ballast ships, we should not hesitate to make a thorough investigation into the possibilities of establishing a new industry.

Serious Accident to East Bound Express

TWO MEN KILLED. At the moment of going to press we have received the following report from the Railway Management of an accident to the East Bound Express, which resulted in the death of two of the train hands:—

No. 2 Express, in charge of Conductor Nebuccet, which left Port au Basquet at 9 am. to-day, got engine, two baggage cars, and 2nd class car off track about one mile west of Cape Ray. Engine and tender turned over on side, other cars upright.

Fireman R. Penney and Mail Clerk Perchard were killed, and Engineer Lawlor severely wounded.

Head Clerk William Perchard appears to have been riding in the engine at the time.

Full investigation as to the cause of derailment is being made.

PEPS BEHIND THE SCENES.

July 22.—Up betimes, and the weather grown cold, with a great fog, which chills me to the marrow almost. That Lord, the silliness of women, since my wife would have me wear a chest protector that she made for me, that I might not be taken with a chill which is, alas, the most likely at this time of the year.

The House this afternoon on Supply, and among other things, the Fortune Bay service discussed, and is definitely decided by the Cabal to take the West off the route, in the interests of economy. A list of payments on the Labrador Boundary established, and discussed with every think that some men are so fortunate as to receive commissions such as this, where I must slave to buy clothes for my wife.

Mr. McKay tells me this day that many booths at his Industrial Fair are now taken and will have all the space filled soon. Indeed, he takes the greatest pleasure in organizing the Fair, and like to meet with huge success.

Home all the evening, being mighty cold, and to read a while in a detective book, and did he but know, would be the greatest regret of my great ancestor that it was not his good fortune to have such tales in the days of the second Charles.

Knocked Down by Motor Car

A boy named George Cooper who lives on Monroo Street was hit by motor car No. 5649 as he was coming from St. George's Field after the football match last evening. The car which was driven by Mr. Pierce White was proceeding up Parade Street when the accident occurred. Cooper was knocked to the ground and appeared to be much injured. He was picked up by Mr. E. Power placed on board the car and rushed to hospital. An examination was made by Dr. Gaylor who pronounced the lads injuries as not serious. Mr. White reported the matter to the police. He will be discharged from hospital this morning.

Wedding Bells

FLYNN—GUSHUE. A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Thomas's Church, Brooklyns, New York, on June 25th, at 7.30 p.m., by the Rev. Fr. MacOroy, when Miss Molly Flynn was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Wm. Gushue, both of this city. The bride was given away by her brother Mr. Thomas Flynn, and looked very pretty in her dress of delicate blue canton crepe, rose buds and satin ribbon; a lawn hat of georgette and old lace, and carried a bouquet of orange blossoms, lilies of the valley and maiden hair fern. The bridesmaid was Miss Stella Ryan, also of this city, who wore a dress of peach color silk and hat to match. Mr. James Connolly, also of this city, acted as best man in a suit of blue and white, the bride was a cheque, to the bridesmaid and best man a gold piece. After the ceremony the happy couple motored to Conroy Island and through Central Park to the home of the bride's brother where a very enjoyable supper was partaken of, after which a musical programme was rendered by many of the guests, which lasted until the small hours of the morning. The bride and groom were the recipients of very many costly presents. We wish them many years of wedded bliss.—Com.

C. OF E. GARDEN PARTY TO-DAY.

The annual Garden Party in aid of the C. of E. Orphanage, takes place this afternoon at the Orphanage grounds. Last night a large number of willing workers were on the grounds and the tents, tables, and stalls for the various shows were all erected. The C.L.B.C. are in charge of the sports programme, which promises to be very interesting, competing as it does all the popular track events. The football will also be interesting. The matches have been arranged as follows:—(a) B.L.S. vs. Cadets; (b) Star vs. C.E.I. The Mount Cashel and C.L.B. bands will be in attendance. The various stalls will be well supplied and the most delicious teas will be served. As the Orphanage is badly in need of funds, it is hoped there will be a large attendance, especially in view of today's glorious weather.

NO FOOTBALL TO-NIGHT.

Owing to the Church of England Garden Party taking place there will be no Junior League Football game on St. George's Field to-night. The teams will, however, take part in the Football Relay Race at this garden party and will play a series of fives at Kilbride.

KILBRIDE GARDEN PARTY THIS AFTERNOON.

Extensive preparations have been made to accommodate the large gathering who will assemble at Kilbride this afternoon to take part in the annual Garden Party. Arrangements have been made for a special train to leave the Railway Depot at 3 o'clock, and no doubt many of the patrons will avail of this special opportunity. The pony race, three mile road race, and football fives by the Junior League are the special attractions, while the usual side shows will be in evidence, all of which will complete a very interesting programme. The C.C.C. Band will furnish the musical entertainment in their own good style. Delicious teas and refreshments will be served by ladies of the Parish. The day being fine, the success of the Garden Party is already assured.

To-Night's Dance

The big attraction to-night will be the popular dance to be held in the C.C.C. Hall commencing at 9 o'clock, the proceeds of which go to the Church of England Orphanage.

A full dance programme comprising all the latest dance hits has been prepared by the C.L.B. Band and the programme is one that will suit everybody.

During the interval (about eleven o'clock) songs will be rendered by Miss Cassels whose charming voice will delight all present. Mr. Arthur Williams who has not been heard in public for over a year and the ever popular, Mr. Karl Trappell, Professor F. J. King will be the accompanist.

Refreshments consisting of sandwiches, cakes, iced aerated drinks, and ice cream will be on sale all evening and a special room has been reserved for those desiring to play "Bridges" or "Forty-fives." It is anticipated that the guests will be a big attendance and patrons are again reminded that they may wear "what-aver they find the most comfortable to dance in on a warm night." The dance is being championed by Mrs. Allan Fraser and Mrs. W. J. Edgar.

Off to Camp To-morrow

The C.L.B.C. 115 strong, will leave the Armoury at nine o'clock to-morrow morning, en route to their camping ground at Topwell. The final arrangements were made last night and both officers and lads are eagerly looking forward to a good time. The Commandant is Capt. G. House; Capt. Harold Hayward undertakes the responsible duties of Adjutant, and Lt. Moty will again attend to the Quartermasters Department, a job upon which depends to a very great extent the success of the event. In the cook house and canteen are included in his management. In his capable hands however, there is no reason to fear that the camp will have to put up with short rations of starchy or that the singer pop will run out.

2nd Period.

Upon changing over the Guards pressed matters and secured a corner. The ball was nicely placed and from a scrimmage in front of the net Macklin quickly sent the leather home scoring No. 2, three minutes after the commencement of play. The Star boys quite undaunted, played even harder, and confined the ball almost at will to their opponent's territory, but through weakness on shooting several excellent chances were lost. As the game progressed, with Charlie Quick and Macklin leading in the attack, many good attempts were made to increase the score; but the pink and white shirts marked their man down to a nicety and no further scoring resulted. The Star goalies was called upon to save several hot shots towards the goal, for which he received full appreciation from the fans.

The game on the whole was very good and was devoid of anything bordering on rough play. The Star team turned in a strong game, and it is hoped they will have better luck in the future. Referee, F. C. Brien.

House of Assembly Proceedings

TUESDAY, July 22.
The House met at 3 o'clock.
Mr. Ashbourne presented a petition from the District.
The following Bills were read a first time:—
An Act to provide for the encouragement of shipbuilding.
An Act entitled "Of Payment of certain fees and charges by stamps."
An Act respecting the Game and Inland Fisheries Board.
An Act respecting the Boy Scouts.

American Bond Note Co. printing interims	461.83
Sending cables	128.43
Gyan, Mills, Currie, Holt & Co. stamps, duty, etc.	9,469.82
British Loan	80.58
Nfld. Express Co.	2,227.78
American Bank Note Co. Printing Bonds	1,203.96
Insurance on Bonds	3.90
Cable	100,000.00
Nfld. Govt. Railway operating acct.	1,250.00
W. H. Cave, expenses to New York, re loan	1,144,812.34

In answering the question the Minister stated that an item in the Estimate of $5,500,000 was puzzling to the House yesterday because it was known that only $3,500,000 had been raised. He had since discovered that the two million was for bonds floated by the Reid Nfld. Co., which paid them the two million dollars for the railway. In this connection he drew attention to an item appearing above for 9,469.82 for the printing, etc., of the debenture bonds. He understood all expenses of this nature had to be borne by the Company.

Mr. Warren agreed with Sir John and said it should never be heard of again. He had not heard of it until read out by the Minister this afternoon. He could not understand why the late Minister of Finance and Customs had paid the amount.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

Mr. Scammell asked the Minister of Marine and Fisheries if the Dredge Priestman is now in commission and if so, where operating, etc.
In reply the Minister stated that she is now operating at Bell Island. She has been operating during the present season at other places under arrangements made by his predecessor at the rate of $80.00 per day. He considered this rate too low and so when the Bell Island Company desired her services he asked $120.00 per day and succeeded in getting that price.
Mr. Peff asked Hon. the Prime Minister if it is the intention of the Government to give grants of timber to individual applicants, or will they sell them by tender to the highest bidder for the benefit of the revenue, and to furnish a list of timber lands in Newfoundland and Labrador on which the rentals have not been paid.
The Prime Minister in reply stated that the Government had no intention of granting timber lands to individual applicants. The Government intended to pursue a policy of putting the lands up to public auction and give same to the highest bidder. The last part of the question was in course of preparation.

Mr. Warren asked the Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs if any new appointments have been made in connection with his department since he assumed office or are in contemplation of being made, and if so what are the reasons therefor.
The Minister replied that no new appointments had been made since his assumption of office. Regarding what was in contemplation, he could give him no information at present but would tell him at the next session of the changes made between now and then.

Mr. Warren asked the Hon. Minister of Finance and Customs to lay upon the table of the House a statement showing all payments from the loan raised this year and for what object the payments were made and to whom.
In reply the Hon. Minister read the following statement:—
Deficit 1921-22 . . . . . $37,861.87
Deficit 1922-23 . . . . . 675,529.00
Militia Expenditure . . . . . 114,044.07
Codfish Returns . . . . . 115,000.21
Balance transferred to loan 1923 . . . . . 37,564.85
1,030,000.00
The above amount retired temporary debentures.
Cheque to signature Co. . . . . $ 35.20

When had to endure on being dismissed with only a few weeks' notice. The new crew would be taken from the northern part of the island also. If the Government practised throughout what they started in Fortune Bay then the only services kept on would be those that paid.
Captain W. E. Wasser said that when the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs made the statements alluded to it was thought that the lower boat on the Labrador coast could be dispensed with. She was not necessary last year as only fifty schooners were down there. During the last week it has been discovered that all the schooners that were in the Straits have gone to Northern Labrador and up to the present about one hundred and fifty are down there. They deserve some consideration. These schooners carry 1,700 men. They have no means of carrying for sick people or anything else. Taking all things into consideration he had come to the conclusion that a boat should be sent down. He had consequently asked for tenders and yesterday had accepted one agreeing to perform the service for two and a half months at the rate of $2,800 per month. This was far different in cost from the service of last year. He understood it had cost $35,000. This year the same service would be given for $7,000. If a large saving like that could be had there was some reason in again starting the service. In reply to Mr. Warren he said he did not discharge the crew neither did he recommend it to the owners who had done so, and neither did he recommend any of the newly engaged crew. Mr. Warren had stated that the North had all kinds of railway facilities. He had lived in Westville for 47 years and he had yet to see a railway track within a large distance. In winter time when he wanted to get to St. John's he had to strap on his snow shoes and tramp 45 miles to Gumbo, the nearest railway station to Westville. He wanted a square deal to everyone in the island, North, South, East and West and was prepared to see that the fishermen especially was given fair play to catch fish. People walking around St. John's drawing large salaries from the Government could afford to have some surplus cash lopped off as well as the fishermen.

Continuing Sir John emphasized the fact that these expenditures were not only enormous but unfortunate. The practice was of late years to vote

some money as provided by the estimates, but to spend as much as it was thought necessary, irrespective of what was voted. Consequently $15,000.00 was voted for Fortune Bay Service; but $42,000.00 was spent. The estimates in past years were a joke. They were cooked and not cooked but baked. They were treated with contempt. He would inaugurate a different state of affairs. The House and country would be amazed when he announced the deficit the country had to face up to June 30th last.
Mr. Lake said the people of the South Coast were satisfied to make sacrifices. They had agreed to have the Gloucester taken off provided the Fortis made Argentinia her terminal. This he was pleased to say had been agreed to. He was with the Government in their policy of economy. It was an absolute necessity that money be saved. The Government could not afford to spend $42,000.00 for one boat, therefore the Wren had to be taken off on account of the cost of the service. He firmly believed the people of Fortune Bay would be taken care of by the Government. He had talked to a large number of them during the past week and all were most reasonable.
The Prime Minister said the service on Fortune Bay was very expensive and something had to be done to economize. He was most anxious to give a square deal to all the people. The service on Fortune Bay did not seem to be required as it did not seem

Mr. Lake said the people of the South Coast were satisfied to make sacrifices. They had agreed to have the Gloucester taken off provided the Fortis made Argentinia her terminal. This he was pleased to say had been agreed to. He was with the Government in their policy of economy. It was an absolute necessity that money be saved. The Government could not afford to spend $42,000.00 for one boat, therefore the Wren had to be taken off on account of the cost of the service. He firmly believed the people of Fortune Bay would be taken care of by the Government. He had talked to a large number of them during the past week and all were most reasonable.
The Prime Minister said the service on Fortune Bay was very expensive and something had to be done to economize. He was most anxious to give a square deal to all the people. The service on Fortune Bay did not seem to be required as it did not seem some money as provided by the estimates, but to spend as much as it was thought necessary, irrespective of what was voted. Consequently $15,000.00 was voted for Fortune Bay Service; but $42,000.00 was spent. The estimates in past years were a joke. They were cooked and not cooked but baked. They were treated with contempt. He would inaugurate a different state of affairs. The House and country would be amazed when he announced the deficit the country had to face up to June 30th last.

THE CROWS FEET OF THE HEART.

"I ever sleep well the first night in a new bed," I heard a woman say the other day. She didn't make it as a confession. Rather, I thought, as a boast.

Now she is a woman who prides herself very much on looking young. She is about 40 and looks 35. Sometimes in a kindly light she can pass for 30. And she is very proud of the fact.

And yet she freely, even proudly, makes a confession that advertises her advancing age as plainly as anything possibly could do.

There is no surer sign of age than the development of kinks in this sort.

If you want to keep young, you don't want to let either your physical muscles or your mental muscles get set.

Keep Flexible.

Just try to keep limber in body, try to keep limber in your mind and in your habits.

When you catch yourself getting fussy about little things, not wanting to write a letter unless you can have a certain kind of paper, not being able to sleep except on a certain kind of bed, not being able to eat unless you can have just the kind of food you are used to; not being willing to eat your soup unless you have a certain kind of spoon—beware. That means you are losing your flexibility, and that is something to fight away from not to boast about.

Every "Have To Have" Is A Chain.

Every "have to have," every "can't bear" is a chain that binds you down into a fixed routine. If you can't be comfortable unless things are just so, you can never again so adventuring, for things are never "just so" when one is adventuring.

As Ugly As Face Wrinkles.

All these little kinks and fuddy-duddisms are the crows feet of the character. And they are just as ugly as real crows feet. Youth isn't just a matter of unwrinkled skin and soft contours; it is a matter of spirit. Perhaps you can't keep the crows' feet off your face, but you can surely keep them out of your heart if you want to enough.

Women's Week at Wembley

HOSPITALITY FOR VISITORS.

Women's Week at Wembley is the fourth week in July. To each of the Dominions has been allotted one day, on which subjects specially interesting to it will be discussed, and appropriate entertainments enjoyed.

Lady Allen is looking after the arrangements for New Zealand's Monday, Lady Buxton after South Africa's Tuesday, Lady Cook after Australia's Wednesday, Lady McLaren Brown after Canada's Thursday, Lady Willington after India's Friday, and Lady Morris after Newfoundland's Saturday.

It is still a long time until July 21-26, but the Women's Section of the Exhibition, which has general charge of Women's Week, is making the whole of this Empire summer in one sense a women's responsibility. With the Queen as patron, and the Duchess of York as president, it set itself the duty of helping overseas visitors to the best England could give them, and already it has so far succeeded as to have drawn from some of these visitors the assurance that they "never had such a time in their lives."

The broad aim is to secure hospitality for people who otherwise might be inadvertently missed out. There was a Women's Section "list" for the Royal garden-party last week; there was another for the Government garden-party at Hampton Court on Friday, London hostesses, thanks to the Women's Section, have found guests among those not before known to themselves or their circle, and are delighting to make their stay in town the pleasanter, and to introduce them to the country house week-end. Apart from the official Dominion parties, receptions have been given by the Duchess of Devonshire, the Duchess of Norfolk, the Duchess of Atholl, M. P., and others. Indeed, there is something almost every day which there would not have been but for the Women's Section, with Lady Galway, its chairman, and Mrs. C. C. Grove, its secretary.

The programme includes excursions to historic places; as, for example, Oxford and Cambridge, which have entertained parties in their "learned halls," and Eton, where the visitors were the guests of the College at tea. Then, for the Trooping of the Colours the other day, the Colonial Office allowed the Women's Section 500 seats for overseas spectators; and the Women's Section, in its gratitude, has asked that the kindness may last over future years, "guaranteeing" to sell the tickets.

These are but specimens of numerous activities, whereby many an overseas visitor is gathering the family significance of the Empire Exhibition, and, what might have been perhaps more difficult, a little insight into the significance of England.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

GOVERNMENT FORCES GAINING UPPEE HAND.

SANTOS, Brazil, July 23. Reliable information received today from Sao Paulo is to the effect the Government forces have recaptured several outlying sections of the city from the Rebels and are bringing up heavy artillery and placing it at Strategic points commanding the Rebel strongholds. Monday night there was a brisk artillery duel between the Federals and the Rebels which lasted 12 hours. The Rebels failed to dislodge the Government forces who are now surrounding the city on three sides leaving the Rebels only the west for retreat. It is claimed that effective marksmanship of the Government gunners who are landing shells on the barracks of the Rebels is beginning to break the morale of the Rebels.

REPORT OF FATALITIES ON THE BOSTON VERIFIED.

NEWPORT, R.I., July 23. The fact that 3 persons were killed and one fatally injured in a collision between the oil tanker Swift Arrow and the Easter S. S. lined Boston off Point Judith, late last night was definitely established today. The bodies of a woman and two men were brought here on the Boston when she was towed in the harbor and beached. Charles L. Copeland of Brooklyn, Mass., who was rushed into port on the coast guard cutter Acushnet, died later at hospital.

GIVEN UP AS LOST.

SYDNEY, July 23. The three Glace Bay men, Allen McNeil, George Adams and Wilson Jessop, missing since last Thursday night when they failed to return from a visit to the rum fleet ten miles off the Glace Bay coast, have been given up as dead. The last hope held by relatives that they might have reached their destination, the schooner Grace, which parted her cable in the gale of St. Pierre, was forced to run for St. Pierre, was dispelled today by the receipt of a message from the Collector of Customs at the French port, stating that there were no Glace Bay men on the Alice on her arrival there. Although boats patrolling the coast have found no wreckage or trace of the missing men, it is generally conceded that their trail fifteen foot craft foundered in the gale.

THE FEMINE PASSION.

Janet has to be in style. Bless her heart! That's all there's to it! I'll keep working all the while And wear shabby clothes to do it. That's a whim that's truly human, Downright feminine, my guess is: Well I know the ways of women— She must have her pretty dresses.

Facts are what I bank upon. Circumstances alter cases. But they never change this one— Women live for silks and laces! Take 'em young and take 'em old. If they're of the female gender, Pretty, winsome, shy or bold, They must wear the latest splendor.

Ribbons pink and ribbons blue Seek to be their ruling passion, Everything from hat to shoe Always has to be in fashion; That's the very nature of 'em, Kept the men who vowed to love 'em Busy buying dresses for 'em.

Now, there's Janet! Bless her heart! Scarcely two years old, yet showing When it comes to raiment smart. She wants everything that's going. Born a girl! That's all there's to it And her dotting dad confesses, Just as long as he can do it, Gladly will he buy her dresses.

De Luxe Taxi Company Joins the Motor Association

Membership in the Newfoundland Motor Association is increasing daily and it is interesting to note that yesterday the De Luxe Taxi Company who have recently established offices at 137 Water Street joined the Association in a body. These enterprising taxi men have not been backward in recognizing the benefits accruing to motorists through membership in the Newfoundland Motor Association and as an instance of the De Luxe Taxi Company's interest and support joined the ranks of the Association. In view of the fact that all the leading Taxi Companies are now members of the Association of are joining up, surely this should be an incentive to the few private car owners who are not yet members of the Association to help along the good work being performed by the Association by becoming members.

Swell Pickpockets Caught in London
 --Working the Busses

Three foreign criminals in the dock at the Old Bailey would have provided excellent material for a Dumas novel. Good-looking, well-dressed fellows, they had come to England after a quick trip from Berlin with the German police hot on their trail. They are well known all over Europe as the cleverest pickpockets in the world. Smart work by a City detective put an end to their activities in London, and the Common Serjeant made things a little more uncomfortable for them by sentencing all three to six months' imprisonment and recommending deportation.

A DETECTIVE LOOKS ON.

Nothing trick among City Clerks—Light-Fingered Trio's Descent on England. World-wide notoriety has been achieved by this elusive trio, who in the indictment were described as: Gedolz Brodsky, 38, tailor. Joseph Bear, 37, merchant, and Isak Mirkin, 33, merchant. There were charged with picking pockets in the City of London. All three were resplendently dressed and possessed an air of gentility strange at variance with their profession. The average English pickpocket is usually a stout old gentleman who carries an umbrella and an overcoat, used as a cover for his operations. Most of them are so well known to the police that they have given up frequenting the City and the West End. However, the fear of arrest did not trouble the three international crooks who carried in this country only a few weeks ago after making a somewhat hurried exit from Germany with the detectives of that country on their heels. About six o'clock on June 11, when the City workers were pouring out of the offices, Det. Kirby happened to be standing by the Royal Exchange watching the crowds board the buses. Presently he noticed three men behaving in a very suspicious manner. They were jostling about in the approved pickpocket style, and the detective kept them under observation for some time. He watched them board a motorbus going west, but almost immediately they left it and crossed over the road and entered a Liverpool-street bus with other passengers. One of the gang got in and then attempted to push his way out again, thereby causing a good deal of confusion. This is exactly what the clever pickpocket wants, and in the scrimmage Mirkin utilized the opportunity to put his hand in the pocket of one of the other passengers. Detective Kirby, an interested spectator while this was going on, also boarded the bus and went on to Liverpool-street with the three suspects. There the pickpockets made another attempt at robbery. They wedged their victim between them, and two tried to pick his pocket on either side. Whether or not they got anything the detective could not say. At all events, they Waited at the Stopping-Place at Liverpool-street for some time until three men came out of Liverpool-street and boarded a bus. They looked as though they hailed from the country, and the pickpockets jumped at the opportunity. They followed the three men on board, pushed between them, and went as far as the Bank. Again the detective could not be certain that robbery had taken place. At the Bank the trio got out and once more boarded a Liverpool-street bus, where they again jostled the passengers. For half an hour the three were under close observation by the detective, and during that time they made three journeys to Liverpool-street. The detective thought he had seen enough, and when for the fourth time the three pickpockets returned to the Bank he called another officer and took the men into custody. None of them could speak English, but a search of their pockets revealed a considerable quantity of money in Treasury notes. Joseph Bear was found in possession of a wallet containing $14, which was subsequently identified by Brigadier-General Cox as having been stolen from him that day. The general was able to identify one of the prisoners as a man who had knocked up against him. The three all had a story to tell to account for their presence in this country. They had arrived here on the same boat as recently as June 7, and Mirkin and Bear had gone to a certain hotel in the East-end which is well known to the police as the headquarters of the pickpocket fraternity. Brodsky went to an hotel in the Mirkin. Their version of the matter was that they had accidentally met each other crossing over to England, and, becoming friendly, had agreed to visit the West-end of London together. One of the trio suggested that as they could not understand English it would be better for them to go to a Jewish theatre in the East-end, and it was through getting on a wrong bus that they found themselves at Liverpool-street. Returning to the Bank, they robbed the wealthy German women of their jewels. Brodsky, in particular is known to be wonderfully clever at snipping jewels from a woman's neck. He worked in conjunction with the two other men, who would jostle their victim and apologise to her while Brodsky made off with the plunder. The moment they found themselves watched by the police they were off to another place after making a rendezvous where they could meet without suspicion. In this manner they frequented dozens of European cities and seem to have reduced the picking of pockets to a fine art. It is a crime not so well known on the Continent as here, and so far as the police can discover the three men are in league with practically all the pickpockets in Europe. Brodsky has a number of relatives in this country, several of whom have been in prison. In October last the gang were in Paris, and after putting up at one of the most fashionable hotels were discovered by a detective hanging about the other guests' bedrooms. They were promptly turned out of the hotel and the police notified, with the result that they were shadowed all over Paris, and eventually deported as undesirable aliens. From Paris they went to Berlin, where they had quite a profitable time for some months. All three had plenty of money when they arrived in this country, and no doubt they would have had considerably more had not Detective Kirby so promptly stopped their little game. Bear in particular is a man of very good family. He has a beautiful wife and four very fine children; but none of them have the slightest idea that he is an international thief. He sends money home regularly, and so far as his relatives know, he is a commercial traveller with connections all over Europe. However, he will now have the responsibility of explaining his sudden return from England, because the Common Serjeant, in sentencing him, as well as the other two men, to six months in the second division, recommended that all three should be returned to the land of their birth immediately their sentences have expired.—News of the World.

Again Lost Their Way, which accounted for their repeated journeys. Bear pleaded he had come to England to dispose of a number of electrical patents, though all he could produce in the way of evidence was a number of business cards in which he described himself as an agent. Brodsky stated that he was a dealer in dolls who had come here from Germany to take orders, while Mirkin accounted for himself by saying that he was on his way to Canada and that he had just called in here to pick up a sum of money owing to him. But the police in Germany, Holland, America, Austria, France and Italy have an altogether different story to tell of this interesting little gang. They have been known for years past as the cleverest pickpockets in Europe. They travel all over the place, putting up at good hotels and dressing in a manner that easily disarms suspicion. Bear was born in Warsaw, where he has a wife and four children. He has supported them for years past by crime, and his appearance in any city is the signal for the police to keep him under observation. Brodsky first saw the light of day at Batoum, in the Caucasus. He calls himself a Greek, though as a matter of fact he is a Russian Jew, well and unfavorably known in a dozen different European countries. For some years past his home has been in Athens, and, like Bear, he has lived on crime. Mirkin is a native of Czecho-Slovakia, and for some years he lived in America, where he was associated with a gang of jewel thieves who carried out many big coups. He was concerned, it is alleged, in the robbery of a $50,000 diamond necklace from a millionaire's house in Fifth-avenue, where he obtained employment as a waiter at a big dinner. The robbery was not discovered until late at night, when Mirkin had gone, and the New York police, though they had subjected him to very severe interrogation, could find nothing definite to connect him with the crime. Another of his exploits concerned a big robbery in a Chicago train, when the treasurer of a wealthy corporation

Had His Coffee Drugged by two men who got into conversation with him. While the treasurer was sleeping off the effects of the dope, the two men seized his wallet and from it took bills to the value of $7,000. They filled up the wallet with pieces of paper and left their victim totally unaware of what had taken place until he arrived in Chicago and went to get some money. By that time the thieves had disappeared and he easily lost himself among the foreign population of the city. The City Police know that all three men belong to a gang of international pickpockets who for some time past have been travelling Europe. They remain in a big city for some weeks, working the theatres and crowded places where detection is difficult. In Berlin they used to hang about the theatres in evening dress

Medals of Mystery

REWARDS FOR THE HEROES OF INDUSTRY. At a recent presentation of medals and certificates to members of the London Fire Brigade, attention was drawn to what may not inaptly be termed the fireman's V.C., the silver medal awarded for extreme bravery in saving life, or attempting to save it, in cases of fire. At the present time only a dozen men hold the medal, which is invested with so much mystery that its recipients do not know that it has been awarded them until the time of the actual presentation.

One of the last of these medals to be awarded was won during a Zeppelin raid on London. A bomb exploded in Red Lion Square, and in the fire that followed a fireman saved eighteen lives at the sacrifice of his own, the medal in this instance being a posthumous award.

An Electrified Ladder. Equally little known is the Carnegie Gold Medal for Courage, which has been given to only eighteen people. Endowed by the late Andrew Carnegie the medal is bestowed on persons whose bravery is considered by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission to constitute heroism of the very highest order. Many of its holders have earned it without realizing in the slightest degree that they were qualifying for the reward. Here is a typical example:— A fireman was perched on the top of a tall scaling ladder when it touched some high-power electric cables covering a burning building. On attempting to descend the fireman found that his foot had become fixed on one of the rungs of the ladder. For some minutes he fought fiercely to free himself; then the flames from the fire overcame him, and slowly but slowly he sank backwards. Two other firemen went to his rescue, but were forced to descend owing to the strength of the current with which the steel frame of the ladder had become charged.

Thrilling Bravery. At this juncture an architect named McNeil, seeing the fireman's plight, volunteered to go up and rescue him. Avoiding contact with the metal part of the ladder, McNeil reached the helpless man, after himself being stung by the flames. Taking out his pocket knife, he sought to cut off the man's foot, but received a shock through the knife that not only sent him reeling backwards off the ladder, but released the fireman's foot by its force. The brave rescuer was badly hurt, but survived to receive the coveted Carnegie Medal.

Another decoration that is seldom heard of is the Edward Medal, founded sixteen years ago to reward acts of courage in saving life in mines. An Underground Inferno. A typical example of the courage that earns this medal was afforded by a worker at Hoyland Silkstone Colliery. A girder fell into a boiler in an underground engine house, releasing tremendous volumes of steam and plunging the place in darkness. In this inferno, Francis Chandler, although badly scalded, crawled too and fro, cheering his comrades until they were rescued, largely through his courage in making his way to the shaft. The Stanhope Gold Medal is a decoration given to the man who is judged to have performed the most valorous act of the year, the recipient being chosen from those who have been awarded one of the medals of the Shipwrecked Fishermen's and Mariners' Royal Benevolent Society. Other medals of a similar character are the Lifeboat Gold Medal, holders of which recently were received by the Kings, the Albert Medal, the Medals of the Royal Humane Society, and certain decorations given by the Board of Trade and Lloyd's.
