The Steel Rails Test. The fact that an American company has, nadian Pacific railway, is something that her own excrement, an unfortunate little tree traders will not easily account for, on girl whom he had taken from the worktheir theory. It is one of their arguments that the consumer always pays all the these men were all more or less pecuniarily cheaper by at least the amount of the duty were they admitted free. The present selling prices of American steel rails bring claimant, payable on his attaining the this argument to the test of a reductio ad absurdum. American steel rails have recently been sold (delivered at the works) for as low as $26.50 per ton; but there has been some stiffening of prices within the Recently the Canadian Pacific railway past fortnight; and present quotations are probably about $27.50. Now, the American duty being $17 per net ton, we are to believe, according to the free trade theory, that, were the duty thrown off, English rails would be furnished to the American onsumer for $10.50 per ton, say with cost of freight added. But nobody believes this to be possible at all; and therefore the free trade theory is absurd; which was to be demonstrated. It is also absurd in that part of it which maintains that any manufacture, requiring protection at home, can never compete in neutral markets with the same manufac ture in a free trade country. The present fact is a knock-down argument. Our neighbors firmly hold their grip on protection, to the extent of $17 per net ton on steel rails. And yet, though they will not allow a ton of English rails to enter without paying that duty, they are able to sell, against English competition, in the neutral market of Canada. As there is no duty at all to be paid in Canada, wherever the steel rails may come from, the American makers have no advantage except in shorter distance and lower freights, which of course counts for something, as we are quite willing to allow.

But how and by what means have steel rails been made so cheap in the United States, it may be asked? One thing we do know for a fact, and that is that all the time the manufacture has been extending been held up at the high figure of $25 per net ton, or $28 the gross ton. That isuntil just about a year and a half ago, when the duty was reduced to $17 per net ton. In this, as in so many other points, the free trade theory is squarely contradicted by the hard facts of business experience. We copy in another column what the New York Commercial Bulletin says about this important transaction; also a London cable despatch informing us how it is viewed on the other side of the sea,

The Canadian road certainly does no suffer by the comparison. The alleged superior advantages enjoyed by settlers on the American side of the border do not lie in cheaper freight east at all events.

Practical Independence. Whatever this man or the other man may have talked about the independence of Canada, it is beyond question that Sir John's government has done more for it, within the last five or six years, than a'l that was ever done before. First, Sir John gave us the national policy, the adoption of which was substantially a declaration of commercial independence Next, he sent a Canadian to reside in London, there to exercise some thing very like the functions of an ambassador from an independent state, though under the veil of a less ambitiou title. New, again, he carried into effect an independent, national Canadian scheme for the building of the Pacific railway, right in the teeth of the Grand Trunk and the money power of London. And now it is announced that Sir Charles Tupper has obtained assurance from Earl Granville and Earl Derby that England will confirm the commercial treaty between Canada

Now, if all this be not practical inde pendence, we would like to know what is. It is in reality solid, material ind pendence for Canada, carried almost to the outsid verge of what is practicable, this country still remaining within the empire. Our new nationality is developing its autonomy pretty rapidly as things are; we have but to take care that political cranks be held duly in check by the stern command of "hands off." No fooling, we say, no "crank" business for 'dominion" turns out to have been well chosen: it answers all practical purposes just as well as the word "republic" would. In the particular work of making Canada a nation we are getting on swimmingly; and it will be our wisdom to hold fast to that system of national development which is doing its work so well.

> The Tichborne Claimant. High born or low born, Rich born or poor born, Decastro or Tichborne.

The Telegram has been stultifying itself England, but by such men as Onslow, Wally and Kenealy." Now the impression conveyed by this statement would be that these people were men of reputation and their views carried weight; but what are the facts? Onslow was a well known horse racing gambler and turf fraud, Wally alunatic, and Kenealy had been, with his sale of 10,000 tons of steel rails to the Ca. beaten, maltreated, and compelled to eat duty, and that he would get the goods interested in the result of the case, by hav-company closed a contract with the Lackawanna steel and iron company for 10,000 tons of steel rails at $28.50 per ton, delivered in Canada. On this the New York Commercial Bulletin remarks:

Commercial Bulletin remarks:

A genuine surprise was created in the iron market yesterday by the announcement that the Lackawanna iron and steel company had under-bid several English manufacturers and secured a contract for about 10,000 tons of steel rails from the Canadian Pac fic railroad. The contract was made at $28.50 per ton, delivered along the line of the road. Aside from a few smallsales for Cuba and South America, this is the first export trade in American steel rails, but, it is hoped, not the last. It was alleged in some quarters that the rails are to be made from foreign material, and that the manufacturers will therefore secure a "drawback." This, however, is positively denied by officials of the company in question, who state that all the materials used will be American products. The price accepted is very low, but whether or not it leaves any margin of profit to the manufacturers is problematical and a matter upon which they throw very little light. That the cost of production is covered would not be surprising, however, in view of the fact that, since competition has become unprecedentedly sharp, our largest manufacturers have introduced all known improvements calculated to cheapen the cost of production. Whatever may be the facts as to the financial part of the transaction, it certainly is a most important forward step, and one that may be placed among the greatest achievements in the history of the trade in this country.

And a London cable despatch, dated the 20th, says:

The excitement on the stock exchange to-day after American and Canadian securities amounted to a small panic. The depression at the opening was so marked and sudden, that even consols, as well as English railway shares, showed a sympathetic weakness. The fall in the latter is, however, a tributed by some large dealers to the recent successes of American manufacturers of steel rails, who have secured favorable contracts in Canada and elsewhere, notwithstanding the sharp competition of English producers. In this connection, the contract of the Canadian Pacide railway company with a Pennsylvania 20th, says: connection, the contract of the Canadian Pacific railway company with a Pennsylvania firm is prominently mentioned. In financia circles to-night it is predicted that the tide will be turned in the movement of gold; and that it the present state of affairs continues, engagements for large shipments of gold to America will be entered into to-morrow.

ness, and he would be a bold man who

the event of the fourth of November is to he over the horder Vet this much may safely be said, as a statement of present facts-that just now things look very much like a victory for the republican side. There are divisions in that party, to be sure, but not half so serious as the divisions in the democratic ranks. St. John unquestionably taking from Blaine, and Butler is taking votes from Cleveland. As for which of the two will do the most harm to the side he is working against, it is all guesswork until the ballots are counted. The New York Tribune calls St. John the ssistant democrat candidate and such he is in reality. "Ben" Butler is freely called everything but a gentleman; but he is a "hard old seed," and is not easily put out in a contest of calling names. Just now, two weeks before the eventful day that is coming, one can scarcely read the American papers without getting the impression that the steam is highest in the republican boiler, and that the strongest enthusiasm is on that side.

During some years past, while large quantities of hay were being shipped from astern Canada, mostly into the New Engand states, the American customs author ities charged 20 per cent. duty on every ton of it. Canadian shippers formed an association, and took steps to show that 10 per cent. was the proper duty, by the American statute. After a long and wearisome fight over the matter this interpretation of the law has been confirmed at Washington, and now the secretary of state announces that all overcharges of duty will be refunded on application. The duty will be refunded on application. The claims already put in foot up to something over a million dollars. This seems to be a case of the exporter paying all the duty, and getting half of it back again. So far we hear nothing of American importers in the matter at all. The Association of hay exporters, which pushed the business to this conclusion, is a Canadian institution entirely, with headquarters somewhere in the eastern townships.

And these men were all more or less pecuniarily interested in the result of the case, by having possessed themselves of certain bonds called "Tichborne bonds" issued by the claimant, payable on his attaining the estates, and which they acquired by a payment of something like 5 or 10 cents on the and the house we could say with some degree of cheerfulness, let them fight it degree of cheerfulness, let them fight it out. But it is not so. Men all over the country will not only be seriously embarrased, but ruined. And more than that, nearly every wholesale house in the country will have a direct loss to face, as well as losses with every victim of the defunct firm. And still more, this failure will seriously affect the credit of the trade in England and America, and come back again to the bankers. It is not difficult to imagine how these people are burst by again to the bankers. It is not difficult to imagine how these people are burst by folk that are hard up; but if a firm gets in deep water, is it not better to let it go down, than to carry it along as has been done in the above case, in violation of legitimate business principles, bringing ruin and loss to a great many people, and injuring the reputation of the entire trade abroad?

Banking Morality.

To the Editor of The World.

Sirs, The developments in a recent failure makes the question of banking morality a pertinent one. We believe that it is generally understood that our Canadian banks are to a large extent the conservators of commercial uprightness, that is to say they are supposed to loan money on strictly legitimate business principles. It appears in the case referred to, that for a series of years the house has been floating a large day. Will this approach continue, or will the star presently appear stationary and them recede? If the motion is orbital the latter will occur. There is, however, nothing in the rates observed to indicate any such orbital motion, and as the observations extended over five months this has some weight. Still it may be traveling in a mighty orbit of many years' duration, the bending of which may in time be indicated by a retardation of the rate of approach, then by no perceptible movement either towards or away from us, and this followed by a retardation of the rate of approach. If, on the other hand, the 4,500,000 of miles per day continue the star must become visibly brighter to posterity, in spite of the enormous magnitude of cosmical distances. Our 81 ton guns drive forth their projectiles with a maximum velocity of 1400 feet per second. Arcturus is approaching us with a speed that is 200 times greater than this. It thus moves over a distance equal to that between the earth and the sun in twenty-onedays. Our present distance from Arcturus is estimated at 1,622,000 times this. Therefore, if the star continues to approach us at the same rate as measured last year, it will complete the whole of its journey towards us in 93,000 years.

Picturesque Account of a Sandwick Island Suicide.

From the Hawaiian Gazette, Sept. 17. A sacrilegious son of Belial, who suffered from bronchitis, having exhausted his finances, in order to make good the deficit, resolved to ally himself to a comely, lenient and docile young lady of the Malay or Caucasian race. He accordingly purchased a calliope and coral necklace of a chameleon hue, and securing a suite of rooms at a principal hotel engaged the head waiter as his coadjutor. He then despatched a letter of the most unexceptional caligraphy extant, inviting the young lady to a matinee. She revolted at the idea, refused to consider herself sacrificable to his desires, and sent a polite note of refusal, on receiving which he procured a carbine and bowie knife, and said he would not force fetters hymenial with the queen, went to an isolated spot, severed his jugular vein and discharged the contents of his carbine into his abdomen. Mr. Grant says they will not put in a very large gang this fall, but will employ sufficient next spring to complete the work in the time specified. They have an outfit and a large number of teams in the country at present. Mr. Grant has a large contract on the North Shore section of the Canadian Pacific railway, which will be completed early in the spring. When this is done the outfit now used there, together with the large gang of men, will be brought west and set to work on the Galt contract. The men and teams that will be employed on the work this fall will be sent into the mountains during the winter to take out ties for the road, as Grant has the entire work to do, and the rant has the entire work to do, and the ize in its own defense, has appointed a comies must be obtained from that source. Mr. Willoughby Vane was a bachelor, good-looking. He lived with a widowed mother in a pleasant house in Albany, and,

having nothing else to do, had fallen determined to address her anonymously by letter.

Having decided upon taking this step, the next thing to be done was to put it into execution, and having shut himself in his little study, after many futile attempts, he succeeded in framing an epistle to the lady to his satisfaction, begging her, if she valued his peace of mind, to return an answer to "W. V., Postoffice, Albany." That done, he went out for a walk and dropped the letter in the nearest box.

Regularly three times a day for a week afterward he called at the postoffice to see whether an answer had arrived for him. As the week advanced Willoughby began beyond the doctor's skill to cure.

He was beginning to despair of ever receiving a reply, when, to his great delight, on the seventh morning a letter was handed to him by the postraster, written in a dainty female hand, and addressed to "W. V." Almost unable to conceal his emotion he quitted the postoffice, broke open the seal and drank in the contents.

For a moment his first impulse was to salute her respectfully; but immediately afterward he bethought himself that as he was still incegnito, the young lady would perhaps feel insulted by the action. Besides, how could she have any idea that he was "W, V.?" So he went in-doors and amused himself for three hours in inditing a reply to her letter, which he posted the same afternoon, and in due course a second answer arrived.

And so matters went on, a constant interchange of letters being kept up for a fortnight, during which time Mr. Willoughby Vane spent his days in running to and from the postoffice, writing letters and watching his fair neighbor from the window of the dining-room.

"Confound it!" he would sometimes say to himself. "How very provoking the dear girl is! She never will look this.

"Dearest Eva."
At length, three weeks having flown At length, three weeks naving nown rapidly away in this manner, he received a letter one morning from the young lady; which ran as follows:

"To W.V." "Sir—As it is useless to Believe me that and position to one to whom you are not totally indifferent. Believe me that nothing inspires love like mutual confidence. Prove to me that I have not been impudent in answering your letters by at once informing me who you are. It is with no feeling of idle curiosity that I ask this, but simply for mutual satisfaction.

To which Willoughby replied by return of post:

"Say about the average," said Willoughby, timidly."

To which epistic came the following answer:

DEAR SIR—Your explanation is perfectly satisfactory. I may also add that your features are not at all repulsive to "Eya."

"Bless her! what a delightful little soul she is!" ejaculated Willoughby.

And hang me, sir, if I don't riddle you with bullets! Gad, sir, I'm a man of my word, and I'll do what I say, as sure as my word, and I'll do what I say, as a fill down the word, and I'll dow

The answer was as follows:

"My Own Eva—Do what you consider best. My fate is in your hands. If your papa should refuse his consent, I—. But I will not think of anything so dreadful. Fear not that I shall ever retract. Life without you would be a desert, with no oasis to brighten it. Yours, until death, WILLOUGHSY."

That evening, just as Willoughby had finished dinner, he heard a loud double knock at the street door, and on its being opened a strange voice inquired in a loud tone:

tone:

"Is Mr. Willoughby Vane at home?"
His heart beat violently as Jane, entering the room, said:

"A gentleman wishes to speak with you in the library, sir."
And she handed him a card inscribed, "Captain Choker Black, 101 Regiment."

"I will be with him in a moment," said Willoughby, and he swallowed a couple of Willoughby, and he swallowed a couple of glasses of sherry to nerve him for the interview. "Captain Choker Black, I believe?" he said, as he entered the library.

"Your servant, sir," said the gallant cap rour servant, sir, sate the gaman cape tain, who, glass in eye, was busily engaged in scrutinizing an engraving of the Battle of Gettysburg. "Your servant, sir. Have I the pleasure of addressing Mr. Willough

"Come, come, sir, don't be afraid to speak out! My daughter has made me her confidant, so let there be no reserve between us. Eva has told me all!"

Here poor Willoughby blushed up to the roots of his hair.

"You see, I know all about it. You have fallen desperately in love with the poor girl; and, although you have never exchanged three words together, you are already engaged to be married. Mighty expeditious, upon my word! Ha! ha! ha! Pray, excuse me for laughing, but the idea is somewhat comical! Ha! ha!

As the captain appeared to be in a very good humor, Willoughby's courage began "Don't mention it, sir. You are he

"I have had the pleasure of seeing her frequently—from the window, sir."
"And you think you could be happy with her?'

"Think, captain! I am certain of it."
"Very good. Now, hark ye, Mr. Willoughby Vane, marry her, treat her well, and be happy; neglect her, blight her young affections by harshness or cruelty, and hang me, sir, if I don't riddle you with bullets! Gad, sir, I'm a man of my word and I'll do what I say, as sure as my

The worthy lady was a red-hot politician, and for three mortal hours she kept him at his delightful task, at the expiration of which time he succeeded in escaping to his own room, where he wrote the following note to Eva:

"Am I to understand that you consent to our union?"

"Certainly. You can be married to finy dear obild is my first consideration. Gad, sir, I am not a brute—not one of those unnatural parents people read of in novels. Choker Black may be a fire-eater on the field; but, at any rate, he knows how to treat his own flesh and blood."

"Is my SECOND WIFE, sir!"
Mr. Willoughby Vane fled from his home that night. About a month later his almost broken-hearted mother received a letter from him explaining the whole affair, and the post-mark bore the words: "Montreal, Canada."

Bismarck and His Son.

Prince Bismarck has two sons, the elder f whom, now 34 years of age, has been appointed vice-chancellor of the German en pire. The appointment is significant as showing that the grim chancellor intends that his successor shall be his own son Bismarck is now approaching his 70th birthday, in health which has occasioned not a little alarm to his friends, and he, no less than venerable Emperor William, feels the need of setting his affairs in order for his departure from his seat of earthly power. The character of "Unser Fritz," the German crown prince, is already well understood, but there is much uncertainty as to the qualifications of Count Herbert von Bismarck to be to him what Bismarck has been to Emperor William, and interest in the career of the young vice chancellor will now be very great throughout the world. In early manhood he was unruly and indiscreet, but so was his father until he wooed Joan Puttkammer, and if he has inherited the sterling qualities of his parents he may yet develop into a great diplomatist. His brother William studied law and entered the husband of his only sister, works in the office of the chancellor. But there is scarcely a newsdealer in this city who does not offer for sale, more or less publicly, a class of evil papers filled with suggestive pictures and even more wicked reading matter. The windows of many shops are hung with illustrated papers that disgrace the name by pandering to the vicious tastes of humanity. The danger lies in the effect such license has upon the minds of youth. Girls and boys alike cluster about the bul-letin boards in front of these places and see the prominence given to criminal characters. This familiarity with forbidden subjects breeds a low tone in morals, and creates a desire in undiscriminating minds to emulate the example of those whose acts of sir are their only title to public notice. The reports of daily violation of chastity and of assaults upon the sacred person of innocence prove that there must be some one great cause for the depravity which prevails. The tendency of the times is toward indifference to purity, and the salacious stories published in these papers re unquestionably furthering the alarming They are exposed gratuitously to Those societies formed to suppress vice should move boldly in this matter, and with the consciousness of being upheld in their work by the press, the pulpit and the better elements of society.
