not hope to travel over the road himself, but he could look down upon those who would travel over it. Some of his opponents, however, told him he was more likely to look up. (Laughter.) He had disappointed both friends and foes by doing it upon horizontal lines. The importance of the road could not be exaggerated. It had made the Dominion a great country, not only in our own eyes—and we did not think a little of ourselves—but in the eyes of the rest of the world, and especially in the eyes of our fellow-countrymen in Great Britain and Ireland. Instead of being a drag upon the Empire and a source of danger, Canada was now felt to be a source of substantial strength to its military forces. He had never been more convinced of this than on his last visit to England, when the project had been warmly endorsed by the military and naval authorities. He referred to the uncertainties and dangers of the present route to India, and said no troops, cannon and munitions of war could be carried across the continent without danger of interruption.—

The road had added immensely to the security of her Asiatic possessions, while greatly benefitting the commercial resources of Canada. Some people had stated, and with some show of reason, that the road had been built to fast—that it should have been done that way for many reasons the principal of which was the carrying out of the agreement with British Columbia. He hoped soon to travel westward and see the magniticent harvest and grand scenery of the Rockies and British Columbia. He had been told that his expectations would be more than realized, but he promised, with their consent, to give his impressions on his return. Alluding to the Asiatic trade he said he did not think its magnitude was yet comprehended. A great portion of the trade between China and Japan to give his impressions on his return. Alluding to the Asiatic trade he said he did not think its magnitude was yet comprehended. A great portion of the trade between China and Japan and England would cross this continent over the Canadian Pacific road. When in England last winter he had consulted with Lord Salisbury in reference to aiding a line of steamers between British Columbia and Hong Kong, and he was glad to say that the Premier was convinced of the importance of the undertaking, and promised to recommend it to the Cabinet. The vessels would be constructed to carry guns in case of war, and the Canadian Pacific directors promised to transport troops and munitions of war at the lowest possible rate. When Lord Salisbury went out of office he left a memorandum for his successor stating what would have been done in the matter had he remained in power. By the result of the late elections either Lord-Salisbury would return to power to Lord Hartington would take office. In either event he believed the control for the fact. he believed the arrangement with Lord Salisbury would be carried out, and a fleet of steamers would be built as rapidly as possible and placed out he Asiatic route next season. Canada would yet have the richest trade with China and Japan purpose of establishing trade between this nustry and Australia. He had the honor of and Australia. He had the work and they were anxious to encourtrade. He believed the people of Canacquaintance with the leading public men of the colonies, and they were anxious to encourage the trade. He believed the people of Canada, through their representatives, would also encourage this trade by subsidizing a line of steamers connecting the two countries. Mr. VanHorne had told him he had been enquiring closely into the San Francisco trade, and said that ninety per cent. of the articles sent to Australia could be furnished by the manufacturers and other producers of this country. Referring to the Hudson Bay Railway, Sir John said he wished the enterprise success. The Government had given a liberal grant of land, and for three seasons had sent a wessel to test the navigation question. It had been said that the "Alert" was not a veasel of sufficient power, but he thought she was better calculated to solve the problem of practical navigation than a vessel of greater power. The reports received showed that navigation was possible for a longer period fhan had been expected. He hoped the capitalists would take hold of the enterprise. He had no doubt that a good deal of difficulty would be experienced, but they could take courage from the experience of the Canadian Pacific railway, and hope with equal energy to ultimately succeed. In concluding, Sir John stated that this was his first visit to this country, while Lady Macdonald now visited it for the third time. He thought he should have some difficulty in persuading the latter to return to the east, and jocularly alluded to the possibility when retiring from public life of his settling in the North-West." ed to the possibility when retiring from life of his settling in the North-West." After the applause had ceased, a number of presentations were made to Sir John and Lady Macdonald, and the party then attended the promenade concert which was given in their honor by the 90th Band. The next day they left for Boissevain, and will soon proceed on It for Boissevain, and will soon proceed way to Victoria.

DEAR ADVOCATE.-We were nonored this week, by a visit from Hon. P Mitchell, M. P., who was accompanied by M. Adams, Esq., M. P. P. Mr. Mitchell has been visiting his constituents in the parishes of Blackville, Blissfield, and Ludlow, and so far as we can hear, met with a cordial reception all along the line. While here he was requested to give his views on political matters, a like invita-tion being extended to Mr. Adams.— Mr. Mitchell reviewed his parliamentary career, and justified his course to the en-tire satisfaction of his audience, who, at the close of his remarks, seemed to be entirely in sympathy with him. Mr. Adams' remarks were also well received. We sometimes hear it said that the younger men of this County know but little of Mr. Mitchell. From this it would be inferred that as the older pass away he must eventually be forgotten. With this view we are not a cord. No other man could possibly have served this County as Mr. Mitchell has done—the results of his labors are all the new generation of men daily reap the benefits. We venture to say that for many years to come no man can be found as willing a: Mr. Mitchell to serve the County regardless of his own personal advantage, nor one so capable of guarding our interests in the changes that seem about to take place in the general management of the country. Many thinking men believe that we are on the eve of great and important changes. Whether we retain our present connection with the Mother Country, or become a member of an Imperial Federation, or assume the responsibilities of Independence, we shall need the guiding hands of MASTER MINDS in the Councils of the Nation. Northumberland County cannot afford to dispense with the services of one whose vast parliamentary experience, spirit of manly in-dependence, and oft proved devotion to the best interests of this his native county, have proved him worthy of our full-

The lobster factory of Messrs. Burnham & Morrill, at Charles Cove, Tor Bay, N. S., was burnt on Friday. The fire was caused by the accidental upsetting of some paint, which was mixed with benzine. This ran through the floor on to the soldering stoves below and instantly exploded. In a few moments the whole building was in flames, Nothing could be done to save the building or contents. About eight hundred cases of contents. About eight hundred cases of lobsters were destroyed. The loss is estimated at $15,000.

That is what a great many people are doing. They don't know just what is the matter, but they have a combination of pains and aches, and each month they grow worse. The only sure remedy yet found is Davis' Quinine Iron and Wine, and this by rapid and thorough assimilation with the blood, purifies and enriches it, and rich, strong blood flowing to every part of the system repairs the wasted tissues, drives out disease and gives health and strength

Burton, Sun. Co., July 17, 1883. GEO. H. DAVIS:

Dear Sir,—I was a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and for several weeks could eat nothing, and was growing weaker every day. I tried Davis' Quinine Iron and Wine, and am happy to say I now have a good appetite and
