

CLAIM ELECTRIFICATION WOULD ADD MILLION TO LONDON'S BURDEN

Stationary Engineers Emphatically Declare Against Project—Robert Lyons Leads Debate Against Scheme.

OUTLAY ON LINE, $335,000
WITH $600,000 FOR EQUIPMENT

Passengers and Package Freight the Only Source of Revenue—George Moll Favors Large Expenditure on the Road.

By a large majority the Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers declared against the electrification of the London and Port Stanley Railway at a debate held in their rooms Friday night, Mr. R. S. Lyons led the debate against the electrification, while Mr. George Moll presented the negative.

Several members took part in the discussion, but there was no doubt as to the attitude of the speakers.

Mr. Robert S. Lyons first presented his case. He thought that the question was one of sufficient importance to be more widely discussed.

"The electrification of the London and Port Stanley Railway will be a matter soon to be subjected to your close consideration," said Mr. Lyons. "I have gone into the matter rather closely, and the only object I can see for this course is that it will give another customer for hydro. Other than this I can see no logical reason for the course advocated by some people."

Benefit All Cities.

"This will not prove a greater advantage to London than it will to other municipalities in the power zone. Supposing 2,000-horsepower were used in the operation of the road, this would reduce the cost of power to London. This would be of advantage, provided that this city alone would benefit. This is not the case, however, Hamilton and all the other cities in the zone would benefit, the price of power being reduced to all, that great London would be in the same relative position that it is at the present time. This city pays $28 per horsepower, while Hamilton pays but $17. The same relative difference would be used in the electrification of the wire, but this is not what actually takes place.

Heavy Burden to City.
"The London and Port Stanley is already a heavy burden for the city to bear. More than a million dollars are tied up in the line at the present time, with but little return. It will take at least $335,000 to electrify the road, and in addition the cost of $600,000 for the freight business, will be hauling over the line if it is electrified. The road will be used for passenger and parcel freight only—nothing more.

A Great Benefit to London.
"In my opinion it is not fair to electrify the line in order to compete with an electric line already established. The people who went into that enterprise have a right to be given a run for their money. The road has proved to be of great benefit to London, and should be protected, not driven out of business.

"It has not yet been demonstrated that municipal ownership is a decided success. Numerous experiments have been tried, but none of them have demonstrated that any enterprise can be operated as economically as privately-owned lines. The road has proved generally is not operated successfully, and I doubt that the electrification of the London and Port Stanley will provide a better example than we already have.

Passengers and Freight.
"If the city has money to spend on electric railways, why not build a line to the north? Let us have a road to Grand Bend and on to Sarnia. This will open up a new territory and bring an additional line to London. We have two lines to Port Stanley already. Why not get a line somewhere else, if the city has the money to spend?

Passengers and Freight.
"When you get down to the last analysis the L. and P. S. R. will have nothing but passenger and package freight business if it is electrified. That will not mean much for the city. Mr. Moll favored electrification. He read a paper, dealing with the history of the line since its inception. The Great Western first leased the line. Later it was taken over by the Grand Trunk. This company allowed the road to become practically useless. Later the Lake Erie and Detroit Railway got control and finally the Pere Marquette. "The L. and P. S. R. has been of decided advantage to coal users," said Mr. Moll. "Low rates have been secured on this commodity, with the result that London is in a much more advantageous position than other cities. It is my opinion that with electrification all our merchants and businessmen would be given the same advantages as coal users. That is what the road was built for and what it will ultimately produce.

Points to Hydro as Success.

"Public ownership in London has been a success. The waterworks is undoubtedly a success. The electrical department has been demonstrated to be a success. The electrification of the London and Port Stanley will prove to be as great a success in my estimation. The progress of the world is towards public ownership, and it is my opinion that London can set an example in this matter by electrification. "It is to be expected that some of the railways will object to this proceeding. None of them has ever shown sympathy towards the city's line. In fact, they have done all they could to close it up. They have shown no sympathy in the past, and we can expect none in the future. It is to be hoped that the city will also take over the London street railway. The two systems would work wonderfully together. Freight could be distributed at night, decreasing the cost of power. The two systems would be electrified. Continued on Page Four.

JAMAICA LOOKING TO UNITED STATES

English Observer Says Younger Generation Favors Commercial Union.

A PREFERENCE WANTED
That Alone Would Restore Allegiance to Great Britain. It Is Believed.

[Canadian Press.]
New York, Sept. 14.—A cable to the Tribune from London says:

Jamaica's probable future as a dependency of the United States has a prominent position in the Morning Post. A gentleman who is closely connected with Jamaica says that so far as the sentimental side is concerned it is unfortunately true that the younger generation of whites and educated negroes believe that the prosperity of the island lies in the direction of a commercial union with the United States. Even political union they regard with complacency unless Great Britain adopts a policy of colonial preference, and thereby assists the West Indies. The increasing production of sugar, coffee, cocoa, etc., offers no alternative to the ever-increasing cry for association with the United States either by reciprocity or by a political union, or at least closer connection with Canada.

An additional impetus to the movement toward the United States may arise upon the completion of the Panama Canal. Old West Indian planters say that the growth of feeling in Jamaica in favor of America is only natural, but that a preferential treatment would restore the allegiance of Jamaicans to Great Britain.

NEW WITNESS OFFICE

Montreal Paper to Put Up Fine Ten-Story Building.

[Canadian Press.]
Montreal, Sept. 14.—The proprietors of the Montreal Witness today announced that "owing to the present phenomenal development and growth of the paper" since the recent campaign in its favor had commenced, they had decided to build a ten-story building. They have already acquired land nearly half an acre in extent next to their present premises for this purpose. The Witness proprietors promise that their new offices will be the finest in Canada.

AUDACIOUS LAUNCHED.

[Birkenhead Eng., Sept. 14.—The new British built ship Audacious, one of the King George V. class, was launched here today. The warship already has been eighteen months in building, the delay in her construction being caused by labor troubles, which have seriously affected all British naval construction. Many improvements have been introduced in the Audacious, the details of which, however, have been withheld by the admiralty.

KILLED BY CARS WHEN WIND BLEW OUT LAMP

Len Eastman, Aged 22, of Sarnia, Stepped Between Cars at Strathroy, and Lived Long Enough To Tell How Accident Occurred.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Strathroy, Sept. 14.—Grand Trunk brakeman Len Eastman, of Sarnia, was killed here about 3 o'clock this morning, when his lamp went out, and he stepped between the cars in the darkness. The accident occurred just as the train was pulling into Strathroy station, and it had only a few feet to go before stopping. Eastman, who was rear-end brakeman, had only been on the road two weeks, and was out on top of the cars when his lamp went out. As soon as the train stopped he was missed, and the crew on searching for him found him lying beside the tracks, terribly mangled. He lived barely long enough to tell the railwaymen how the accident occurred. Eastman was on the through run on a fast freight from Mimico to Sarnia. He is the only son of George Eastman, of Sarnia, one of the employees in the railroad two weeks, and was out on top of the cars when his lamp went out.

MURDER CHARGE IN HAMILTON MYSTERY

James Bruce To Be Charged With Causing Death of Rose Zeipe.

[Canadian Press.]
Hamilton, Sept. 14.—Crown Attorney Washington announced this morning that James Bruce would be charged with murder in the death of Miss Rose Zeipe, into whose case an inquest was held last evening, following her death some weeks previously at the City Hospital after she had eaten some chocolates taken to the institution by Bruce for his wife. The analysts' report submitted at the inquest last evening showed that there was strychnine in the girl's stomach, but that there was no poison in the chocolates.

PINNED BENEATH CAR

Montreal Lad Fatally Injured From Bike Colliding With Car.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—Hurrying on his bicycle to get to work, Ernest Chevalier, a young lad residing on Bangor street, collided with a street car at the corner of Ontario and St. Denis street this morning. The lad was pinned down under the car. When it was lifted it slipped from the jack and fell back again on the boy. Chevalier stood the agony he suffered with Spartan pluck, and repeatedly asked that his mother be not told of the accident. What he was finally removed from under the car, an examination showed that his injuries included a fractured skull from which he is not likely to recover.

HE'S NOT DEAD

Reported Demise of C. P. R. Official Proves to Be Mistake.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—The reported death of Allan Cameron, of the C. P. R., in a London cable on Thursday, was an error. Mr. Cameron, according to telegraphic advices received at C. P. R. headquarters yesterday, is alive and well at Alberta. Mr. Cameron left England three years ago, and was the C. P. R. traffic agent in New York until six months ago, when he was appointed superintendent of the land division of the department of natural resources, with headquarters at Calgary.

LOST PROPELLER BLADE

Liner Olympic Meets With Slight Accident On the Atlantic.

[Canadian Press.]
London, Sept. 14.—The White Star liner Olympic, which arrived at Plymouth today, lost a propeller blade during the voyage from New York, which port she left on Sept. 7. The vessel, which is scheduled to sail from Southampton on Sept. 18, will, however, leave that port on the date planned. The Olympic only left the drydock at Belfast on Aug. 27, where she had been well at anchor being fitted with a new propeller, which was broken through striking a submerged obstruction while the vessel was on a recent voyage to New York.

OTTAWA AND LONDON ARE NECK AND NECK

For Six Full Days Eastern Exhibition's Estimated Attendance Is 170,000—Receipts Will Reach $40,000.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Ottawa, Sept. 14.—The Ottawa exhibition, held simultaneously with the Western Fair, is closing the most successful week in its history with a big Saturday attendance. It is estimated the total attendance will be 170,000. On Monday the attendance was 18,000; Tuesday, 18,000; Wednesday, 50,000; Thursday, 45,000; Friday, 26,000; Saturday, 13,000. The paid attendance will amount to over $40,000. It is estimated that the fair brought over a million dollars to Ottawa from outside points.

MERCHANTS REAP HARVEST OF COIN THIS FAIR WEEK

Business Better Than For Many Years Before Is Report Received.

MANY FORCED TO SLEEP ON COTS

Estimated That Between $750,000 and One Million Dollars Was Left in the City in Five Days.

London merchants have had no cause to complain of trade during the past week. For the Western Fair has served the double purpose of attracting people to the city and causing them to leave a large sum of money in local hands. The estimated number of visitors in the city during the past week is placed at 150,000.

It is natural to suppose that each one of these people made some purchases while in the city, besides spending money at the local theatres and other places of amusement. Supposing that each of these people spent an average of $5 apiece, which is a low average, during the stay in the city, it would mean that the large sum of $750,000 was left in London. However, it is believed that close onto a million dollars was left in the city during the past week by fair visitors.

Best Week in Years.
Local merchants claim it is the biggest fair week in years, and that they did more business than in any fair week during the past 25 years. Every line of business was patronized, and many places the clerks were kept as busy as at Christmas time. The hotelmen report a record-breaking week also. In many hotels every room was taken up, and people were sleeping in cots in the hallways, parlors and kitchens.

Better Than Toronto.
The Midway proprietors had a great week, and one of them stated that he had not done as well at the Toronto exhibition. It was his first time in London, but he intended to come back every year in future. Many other Midway owners remarked the same thing. Altogether it was the most profitable week that the city of London has enjoyed for some years.

Secretary A. M. Hunt and representatives of The Advertiser and Free Press drew tickets to decide the ownership of a $200 acetylene outfit awarded to the holder of the lucky ticket of the week. The holder of the successful ticket, No. 489, was Mr. J. D. Drummond, who resides near Ailsa Craig.

RAILWAYS WERE BUSY HANDLING THE CROWDS

Dozen Specials Carried Visitors to Fair From All Points of Compass.

Nearly all the trains running out of London today are carrying special coaches to accommodate fair visitors who are going home. Monday is the last day for the special rates, but the great majority of those who came in to spend a few days are going home today.

A Grand Trunk official stated to The Advertiser this afternoon that while the returns are not complete yet, the company expects that all previous traffic records will be broken. The C. P. R. officials state that they never handled more fair visitors than came in during the week. The other steam lines and the Traction Company also did a record business.

CANADA AND PANAMA

Shipping Men Notified By U. S. That Tolls Must Be Paid.

[Canadian Press.]
Montreal, Sept. 14.—Several shipping men are today in possession of a circular, which has been sent out by the navigation bureau of the United States department of commerce, and which contains an official declaration of the fact that neither Canadian vessels nor those of other foreign countries will be permitted to use the Panama Canal free of tolls. It is anticipated by shipping men who have been spoken to on the subject from time to time, that the Panama Canal will be virtually closed to Canadian trading vessels as long as the present operation of the canal act remains in force.

It is pointed out that since a Canadian vessel cannot sail from a Canadian port to an American port through the canal to an American or a Canadian port on the Pacific coast without paying tolls, that rail transit will still continue to be the means of sending freight from east to west or vice versa.

TORONTO CHURCH NEARLY SCENE OF A BOLD MURDER

Caretaker Attacked in Dark by Unknown Person, and Skull Fractured.

POLICE BELIEVE JEALOUSY CAUSE

Woman Assistant Admits Had Been Living in Church and Was to Marry Sexton.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Toronto, Sept. 14.—Edin Street Methodist Church was the scene of a deliberate attempt at murder at midnight last night, and as result Chas. Scott, aged 69, caretaker of the church, is in St. Michael's Hospital, with a fractured skull. He was unconscious all night, and a little hope is entertained for his recovery.

A few minutes before twelve, while Scott was lying on a lounge in the vestry, Mrs. Henrietta Sinclair, Scott's assistant, sitting in a room in the same room, heard some one turn the handle of the vestry door. She roused Scott, who went to the door, and received a crashing blow on the head from a man concealed behind it. The caretaker fired a shot at his fleeing assailant, but his aim was wild, and the bullet struck the brick wall. With blood pouring from his head, Scott continued the pursuit, but without result.

Motive Was Jealousy.
The theory of the police and others was burglary, until Mrs. Sinclair confessed to Detective Newton this morning that they were to be married in two weeks. The police are now convinced that it is a case of jealousy.

Mrs. Sinclair is a young, sickly-looking woman of about 25. In her arms was a small baby. "I have been married to Mr. Scott for some time," she said after a little persuasion. At first Mrs. Sinclair said that she had been living at different places, but when pressed for the addresses, by detectives, broke down and confessed that she had been living at the church. The injured man is a widower, his wife having died in February last. He has two married children living in the city, and had been caretaker of the church for a number of years.

MIKADO'S BODY TAKEN TO ROYAL MAUSOLEUM

Final Burial of the Japanese Emperor To Take Place On Sunday.

[Canadian Press.]
Kyoto, Japan, Sept. 14.—The imperial funeral train, bearing the body of the late Emperor Mutsuhito, which left Aoyama early this morning, arrived here this afternoon. The body of the dead Japanese ruler will receive final burial tomorrow in the imperial mausoleum at Moroyama, an imperial estate five miles south of Kyoto.

During the six miles journey the train made several stops, to permit the people of the country districts to pay their last respects to the dead sovereign. The train was divided into three compartments, the centre one being reserved for the coffin. This middle compartment was divided into three compartments, the centre one being reserved for the coffin. The outside of the car was painted crimson, and the interior covered with white silk. The coffin rested on a low dais, raised two feet above the floor.

The party of mourners which accompanied the late emperor's body on its journey to the imperial mausoleum consisted of the holders of the orders of merit, of ministers of state, of the army, of the navy, of the various grades of officials. The commander of the sixteenth division of the army and the commander-in-chief of the Madozawa naval station accompanied the train, together with the presidents of the House of Peers and the House of Representatives, the President of the Kyoto Assembly, and a number of peers residing in the district of Kyoto.

HAYES DISMISSED FROM THE FORCE

Found Guilty of Making False Statements in Regard to Commissioner Waldo.

[Canadian Press.]
New York, Sept. 14.—Cornelius G. Hayes, the police inspector, who was recently placed on trial for making a statement alleged to be false, reflecting on Police Commissioner Waldo, was found guilty of the charges today and dismissed from the department. First Deputy Commissioner McKay, who presided at the trial, announced his findings shortly after noon.

The statement by Hayes which led to his trial was due to the effect that Waldo had enjoined him from raising disorderly houses without express instructions. Hayes thus declared himself not long after the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, at a time when there were inquiries afoot to determine what the police were doing to better conditions in the Tenderloin.

REVOLT'S BACKBONE BROKEN.

New Orleans, Sept. 14.—The backbone of the Mexican revolution, according to Ernesto Fernandez Y. Artago, recently minister plenipotentiary from Mexico to Honduras, has been broken. Minister Artago is en route to his new post. Besides declaring that the federals had the situation well in hand in Mexico, he would not discuss the situation.

SUPERIORITY OF SMALLMAN & INGRAM MERCHANDISE STOCKS

We never make claims for this store without carefully weighing the facts. Hit-or-miss declarations of supremacy or of "largest business" in this or that line are indulged in by some stores, doubtless making an advantageous impression, if believed. But when we state that our fall stocks in every section of the store are the most comprehensive we have ever shown and the most varied assortments shown by any store in the city or in Western Ontario, we state a plain truth easily verified by any practical observer upon careful investigation. Never were the millinery and women's salons of fashion so filled with beauty. Never were the fall decorations in the dress goods section more gorgeous. The whole store has changed in the past few weeks, as if by magic, from summer to fall, with its new millinery, new suits and dresses, new wear for young women, new things for children, new clothing for men and boys. And every day come more and more. So we go on, ready with the best things that people need, ready with earnest service, enthusiasm and the kind of business that has time to do things well.

New Reversible Cloaking, 52-Inch, $2.50 Yard

Fashion's most favored cloaking, as you will see by every authentic display or reliable style review. Last fall as the season advanced, the scarcity of reversible cloakings was most remarkable, as it was impossible to get any repeats on these lines, and few anticipated the demand. This season we have stocked a beautiful assortment of reversibles, yet we would advise an early selection as the inquiry through our Mail Order Department already for samples indicates another big season and possibly scarcity later.

Checks, Plaids and Plain Back Cloths

The Queen Coat Foundation

THE AMERICAN LADIES' TAILOR'S FRIEND.

No home dressmaker or ladies' tailor should attempt to build a coat without these forms, which insure a shapely coat that will not wrinkle; that will produce a correct figure for slender or stout women without padding. These forms are molded over the latest standard figure by a new and scientific process, and are not affected by dampness, being treated by cold water shrinking process. Sizes, bust measure, 32 to 42. Price, pair 50¢ and 65¢

ARM AND SHOULDER SHIELD—A sure remedy for sloping shoulders, with adjustable pad reinforced. Price, pair 25¢

LONDON, SATURDAY, SEPT. 14.

THE LABOR CONGRESS AND THE LEMIEUX ACT.

The Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, by a large majority, has asked for the repeal of the Industrial Disputes Act, better known as the Lemieux Act, which was passed by the Dominion Parliament in 1907, and endorsed by the Trades and Labor Congress the same year.

The debate revealed sharp differences of opinion. The advocates of repeal asserted that the act militated against the workers in the case of a dispute by prohibiting a strike until an arbitration board had reported, when an immediate strike might have been effective. The president of the Maintenance of Ways Employees, a railway union, and the delegate of the Railway Telegraphers' International Organization, declared that the members of these bodies had profited by the act, and wished it retained. Mr. Joseph Marks, of London, pointed out that it had been asked for by many labor leaders. The resolution passed by the congress admitted that "benefits have accrued at times to various bodies of workmen under the operation of the act."

The act, which applies to mines and public utilities, such as steam and electric railways, steamships, telegraph and telephone lines, gas, and electric light, water and power works, assumes that in a dispute which threatens to tie up any of these concerns there are three parties—the employers, the employees and the public. In behalf of the public, which would suffer inconvenience and in some cases hardship, by the suspension of a public service, the act stipulates that employers shall not lock out employees, nor employees go on strike, until arbitration proceedings are finished. The act provides for the appointment of three arbitrators, one chosen by the employers, one by the men and a third by the other two, or failing that, by the department of labor. The act has been invoked successfully during the past five years in scores of disputes, which if they had run their course would have resulted in strikes and lockouts involving an army of men, profound disturbance of business, great public inconvenience, and enormous financial loss. Even the present opponents of the act admit that in many cases these evils have been avoided without sacrifice of the interests of the workers.

Politicians who have continually fomented opposition to the act are now in office, and have to face the issue. If they repeal the act in toto, they will have to put something in its place or reduce the public to the role of an impotent spectator of industrial conflicts which vitally affect the public itself. The Minister of Labor, who has been talking a good deal in industrial questions without laying a hand on the Lemieux Act or introducing legislation of any kind, is now on his trial. Nearly every progressive nation on earth has been studying and applauding Canada's labor statutes. The Dominion has been hailed as a pathfinder and pioneer. Is she to go backwards?

LORD BRASSEY ON THE NAVY.
Lord Brassey, in a recent speech, in reply to an address from the municipality of Sandwich, England, said that from personal communication with eminent persons, "he could give the assurance that those responsible for German policy did not aim at rivaling Britain's fleet." He added:

"We had built up noble squadrons of cruisers, though these were never brought into reckoning by critics. Of battle cruisers we had five in commission against Germany's two. In armored cruisers, not of the Dreadnought type, we had a commanding superiority. The nine completed in 1906-07, in displacement, armament, protection and cost, were fully equal to the pre-Dreadnought battleships of Germany, and had in speed a conspicuous advantage."

"If the older German ironclads were reckoned as battleships, the British armored cruisers should be similarly classed, thus bringing the total of British battleships in commission in the home fleet to 35, with 9 pre-Dreadnoughts in reserve, against Germany's 25 in commission, and none in reserve."

"In laying down ships we had recently fallen behind, but there was little cause for regret in this, seeing that ships grew obsolete so rapidly, while our resources for building remained unimpaired."

Lord Brassey's reputation as one of the most eminent living authorities on naval subjects, and his detachment from active politics, combine to give his utterance peculiar weight. He does not believe that Germany has any notion of rivaling Britain on the sea; he does believe that Britain's present naval strength admits of nothing approaching rivalry. This is a cold douche for the panic-mongers in Britain and Canada. There are journals and politicians in this country who are deliberately "exploiting"—Sir Richard McBride's apt word—the German scare for party purposes. Lord Brassey's opinion is worth more than all their "scap-chewing."

THE SUICIDE OF THE NOGIs.

The suicide of General Nogri and his wife, "in honor of the Emperor," might seem to confirm the current belief that some radical difference separates the Japanese mind from our own. We have heard much of a spirit which prompted Japanese soldiers to lay down their lives for the Emperor even to no useful purpose, simply as a sacrifice to his dignity. Christianity with its emphasis on the value of the individual life and its abolition of sacrifice as such, contrasts sharply with the indifference of "Bushido" to the single life.

But Bushido is a code which does not bind the Japanese as a whole. The Samurai or warrior class, to which General Nogri belonged, has ceased to exist as a privileged and separate caste, and its sterner standards of conduct will less and less distinguish the nation at large. Moreover, the conventionalization of the idea of sacrifice, the whole elaborate etiquette of Japanese conduct, in fact, marks not a peculiar type of humanity, but is characteristic of primitive society everywhere. All uncivilized peoples speak and act on elaborate etiquette. Their life is full of rigmarole. They are also less regardful of the single life and addicted to sacrifice in various degrees. Sacrifice and martyrdom are no more peculiar to the Far East than they have been and probably still are to the Christians of the Occident. But as a race grows more modern, its actions become less conventional or stereotyped. The same development will appear in Japan, is already very marked, as Japan grows more and more European.

Mr. George Kennan, who has been writing a series of most interesting articles on Japan for the New York Outlook, shows that in the war the Japanese soldiers did not as a rule sacrifice their lives except on good calculation of utility. They were willing to die, but very rarely just for the sake of the Emperor. The suicide of the Nogis, as of some others since the death of the Emperor, is in Japan itself a startling event, suggestive of an older day. It is a flicker of the dying chivalry of Samurai, with its barbaric etiquette, it is not essentially very different from the impulse which made Horatio say to the dying Hamlet, "I'm more an ancient Roman than a Dane," and try to drink from the poisoned cup. It is merely more conventionalized, and with other semi-savage etiquette of the older Japan it is doubtless a dying usage that soon will be no more.

As to the navy, Borden and McBride do not appear to be in the one boat. The Roosevelt party has put a candidate in the field against Congressman Longworth, of Cincinnati, Roosevelt's son-in-law. Will father-in-law speak in Cincinnati?

Western farmers are dissatisfied with the price of No. 1 Northern wheat. But these men are always unreasonable, having actually demanded last September the privilege of selling their wheat to the best advantage.

The Kaiser says he solves political problems by reading the Bible. It would be interesting to know his favorite passages—Ottawa Journal.

The scare mongers pretend to find it in Ezekiel vi, 3, "Behold I, even I, will bring a sword upon you."

A man in this city has been found dead after a drunken debauch of two weeks. Why should a man be able to indulge in a drunken debauch for two weeks? It is to be hoped some light will be thrown on this question at the inquest.

It having been reported that Sir James Whitney would introduce legislation to prohibit the issuance of licenses to hotels within three miles of a city of 25,000 population or over, the London Advertiser denounced the move as "an act of weakness." Two days later the report being contradicted—the agile Advertiser said "it would be a real reforming stroke," and Sir James might well consider it. But having taken the position that it is not his business to abolish the bar, he is consistent at the expense of well-doing.—Ottawa Free Press.

The Packet is grossly unfair or grossly deceived. We challenge it to quote anything from this journal denouncing the proposed legislation.

THE WHEREFORE OF WHISKERS.
[Toronto Star.]
Sidewalkers are coming back in England. In this case sidewalkers are not a man's own fault. The old male nobility has decided to protest against Lloyd George's insurance act by looking like butlers.

JUST WHAT SHE WANTED.
[Victoria, B. C. Times.]
An amusing story is told by the Westminster Gazette of a "tax"-resisting lady, who thought to dodge the insurance act by engaging a German servant, who would know nothing about the new law. The servant came, but after a few days seemed to develop acute melancholia. She was not home sick. She did not dislike the house. What, then, was the matter? The German servant burst into tears, and with many sobs explained that she was miserable because no one saw after her. No one cared for her, no one had even spoken to her about being insured, and she did not know what would happen to her if she were ill and were no longer wanted. Every Dienstmadchen was insured in Germany, and provided with a home and payment while she was ill, and was it possible that she had come to a country where poor servant girls were not insured?

WHAT IT MEANS.
[Judge.]
"Pa," what does it mean when it says a man has arrived at years of discretion?
"It means, Johnnie, that he's too young to die and too old to have any fun."

NO SMOKING IN CHURCH.
[Manchester Guardian.]
The vicar of Lancaster, who has been obliged to put up a notice forbidding visitors to smoke in church, may not know that smoking in church is not only inhuman but a breach of the law. Some time ago an Essex farm laborer found out. He was seen to be smoking when he entered the church for a watch-night service, and during the service was observed to be issuing from his pipe. One of two witnesses saw him with a lighted cigarette between his lips. The result was that he was fined 12s 6d and costs.

Had the offender lived one or two centuries ago he could have smoked with impunity in church. Wooden spitoons filled with sawdust were placed about the church for the smokers, and the smokers left their long clays, or "churchwardens," in the care of the vergers until next Sunday came around. It is said of the incumbent of a Warwickshire church that he used to smoke regularly in the vestry while the congregation were singing the hymn before the sermon. He made a point of selecting a long hymn to give the smokers a chance to smoke a pipe. "My people," he said, "like long hymns, but I prefer a long pipe."

BY CONTRARIES.
[Washington Post.]
"You never get what you want in this restaurant," said the irritable person.
"You can if you know how to order," replied the sad, sarcastic man. "If I want something I ask for a cup of hot coffee, and if I want something warm I call for iced tea."

NO CHANGE.
[Pittsburgh Post.]
"Do you think we are likely to have a revival of Shakespeare this season?"
"No," replied the tragedian. "I'm afraid there's no chance for it. The managers seem to be bent on producing the bunny hog or ragtime in a Shakespearean production."

TOMMY AT DINNER.
[Judge.]
Tommy went out to dine at a friend's house one evening. When the soup was brought Tommy did not touch his, and the hostess looked very seriously at him. "Why, Tommy, dear, what's the matter? Aren't you hungry tonight?"
"Yes," replied Tommy. "I'm quite hungry, but I'm not thirsty."

THE TRUTH ABOUT BELFAST.
[London Correspondent Manchester Guardian.]
I have heard today some opinions on the actual effect in Belfast, extracted from a letter written by a very distinguished servant of the crown who is at present staying there, and whose name has recently been very prominently before the public in another connection. What he says coincides with what one has already heard from other sources—namely, that the Ulster loyalist propaganda is managing Belfast business very seriously by the sense of insecurity which it is creating, that business men are becoming alarmed at the possible consequences of its continuance on the prosperity of the town, and that it is by no means unlikely that this financial and commercial uneasiness will very soon knock the bottom out of the whole agitation.

The writer adds, "If it persists it will undoubtedly bring about a transference of business operations from Belfast to other more law-abiding towns in Ireland, and that some firms are already considering this move. If one of them were to take it there would undoubtedly be an end to the whole Carson movement."

APPRECIATIVE SOL.
[Mac's National Monthly.]
Solomon Pittman, a bookworm, had been caught on the jury in town and was boarding with a lady who was running a cheap boarding house. Astonished at the amount of money he was earning, she said: "Sol, that butter cost me 25 cents a pound."
"Yes, ma'am," said he, taking another large slice, "and it's worth every cent of it."

IMPORTANT ADJUNCT.

"He's a tiresome mutt. Let's leave him off."

A CHALLENGE.
[Toronto Star.]
Sir George Reid says that in Canada we talk loyalty just as well as they do in Australia. Just yesterday, however, he said: "Sol, that butter cost me 25 cents a pound."
"Yes, ma'am," said he, taking another large slice, "and it's worth every cent of it."

AILSA CRAIG MAN WINS BIG PRIZE.
Holds Lucky Ticket Entitling Him to Davis Lighting System, Valued at $200.

The contest conducted at the fair grounds this week by the Davis Lighting System of 288 Richmond street has aroused a great deal of interest, no less than 850 persons residing outside lighting districts securing tickets, entitling them to a chance of securing free of charge, an acetylene system costing $200. The winner of the prize was Mr. J. D. Drummond, a farmer, residing near Ailsa Craig. He held ticket No. 380, which was drawn by Secretary Hunt and representatives of the press when the drawing took place yesterday.

The Davis System is recognized as an absolutely safe system, on the permitted list of all insurance companies. The company has never had an accident in its history. The reason for this is that the gas in the system is made only as it is consumed.

The firm will shortly be occupying its new factory at Niagara Falls, Ont.

HERE'S "GYPSY" AGAIN.
Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 11.—A highwayman, who robbed a farmer near Collins, 40 miles southwest of here yesterday, was captured later by a posse and the report was circulated that he had turned out to be "Gypsy the Blood," wanted in connection with the Rosenbaum murder in New York. All efforts to secure additional information from Collins concerning the identity of the highwayman were fruitless. A large amount of money was found in his clothes and shoes.

Latest Broadside On Shakespeare-Baconian Question

[By Special Arrangement With the Winnipeg Telegram.]

Sir Edward Durning-Lawrence, Bt., is still shooting up England on the Shakespeare question. Over a year ago this licensed Baconian wrote a book in which he tried to prove that Shakespeare was nothing but an ignorant actor, and could not possibly have written the plays that tradition ascribes to his authorship. Sir Lawrence sent a copy of this book to every library in the world, which piece of extravagance must have cost him a pretty penny. But with the stick-to-it-iveness of an obdurate Briton whose blood is aroused, the Baconian baronet is once more riding furiously down the trail emptying his literary rifle as he goes against the Stratfordians who still believe that Shakespeare knew a thing or two and wrote his own plays. Sir Durning's latest broadside reached me yesterday. It is a pamphlet entitled "The Shakespeare Myth," and is being sent out in large quantities to people in all parts of the British Empire.

In this pamphlet Sir Durning-Lawrence advances the same arguments that are to be found in his more elaborate work. One of his main contentions is that Bacon selected as one of the keys to the mystery of his authorship the number 53. "The second column of page 53 in the first folio of the collected works," he says, "commences with the first scene of the fourth act of the 'Merry Wives of Windsor.' In this act the Merry Wives of Windsor, 'Evans,' 'Dame Quickly,' and a boy named 'William,' appear. The object of the introduction of the Welshman seems to have been that he might mispronounce 'c' as 'g,' and so call 'hic' 'hig' and 'hoc' 'hog.' William also is made wrongly to say that the accusative case is 'hine' instead of 'hunc,' and Evans, the Welsh schoolmaster, who should have corrected this error made by the boy, repeats the blunder with the change of 'c' into 'g,' so as to give without confusion the right signature key-words which appear in the second column of the first page 53, as follows:

Evans. I pray you have your remembrance (child) Accusative, hing, hang, hog.

Qu.—Hang-hog is latten for Bacon, I warrant you.
"Observe that 'Bacon' is spelled with a capital 'B,' and also note that in this way we are told quite clearly that Hang-hog means Bacon. In very numerous instances a hog with a halter (a rope with a slipknot) round its neck appears as part of some engraving in some book to which Bacon's name has not yet been publicly attached."

Thus Sir Lawrence conducts his search for Bacon, and claims to find it on three several pages numbered 53. "Hang-hog is Bacon"—this he claims is the Shibboleth by which the real author of the immortal plays is revealed. Many more ciphers are found, but the Hang-hog one is to me the most amusing. It has stirred the humorous soul of Mr. S. L. Hughes, M.P., who writes the brilliant Sub Rosa column in the London Daily News. Mr. Hughes' rally will make the blood of Sir Durning boil, but it will be very entertaining to the friends of Wm. Shakespeare. Mr. Hughes says:

"I am rather surprised by the fact that Sir Edwin Durning-Lawrence, that eminent advocate of the Baconian theory, has not noticed the use of the word 'rasher' in 'The Merchant of Venice.' It is possible that he has mentioned the word, and if so I apologize for having overlooked the allusion. That word may, of course, be used as meaning 'more rash,' but as a rule it suggests bacon. Any experienced reader who finds at the bottom of a page or a column the words 'the bottle was hermetically' knows well enough that the next word will be 'sealed.' And in the same way, if you read that some people were cooking 'a rasher' of you feel quite safe in predicting that the next word is 'bacon.' The writer of 'The Merchant of Venice'—I mention no name, and am prepared to suppose that it was written by some seventeenth century Snooks—makes it quite clear, however, that he really does mean bacon, for in the same sentence he alludes to the price of hogs and to pork-eaters."

"Again, all history has shown that there is a subtle affinity between eggs and bacon. There was once an ornament of the judicial bench known as Vice-Chancellor Bacon, and when some ruffian hung an egg at another judge, that learned gentleman, having dodged the missile, remarked complacently, 'That must have been intended for my brother Bacon.' I need not, however, insist on this close relation between eggs and bacon, as all intelligent readers admit it at once."

"Having established that point, let me invite the readers' attention to this significant remark in 'The Merry Wives of Windsor,' written by a man whose name is so well known that I need not mention it:
"Falstaff—Go brew me a pottle of sack, finely.
"Bardolph—With eggs, sir?"

"Falstaff declined the eggs, and indeed no one can imagine that the suggestion about putting eggs in the sack was made seriously. Then why was it made? Obviously old Bacon was up to tricks again, and he knew that when really discerning people appeared on the scene the phrase 'with eggs, sir?' would most certainly suggest the word 'bacon,' and thus once more the true authorship of these meritorious plays would be revealed to those who have eyes to see and minds to understand."

EXHIBITION PORTRAYS LIFE OF HOLY LAND

Layman's Missionary Society Will Bring Panorama Depicting Palestine to City.

Next November, a replica of the land of Palestine, the ancient home of the Jews and the scenes of biblical history, will be transplanted, metaphorically speaking, to the city of London. This is known as the Palestine exhibition, and is being brought to London by the Laymen's Missionary Society.

Canon Tucker unfolded the proposition to the Laymen's Missionary Society at a meeting Friday night in the Y. M. C. A. parlors, and it received the unanimous approval of the society. Not only the laymen of the city but all the churches are joining to advance this radical step in missionary work.

As Canon Tucker stated: "The farmers have their agricultural fairs, and give an exhibition of their products; school teachers in convention have concrete material displayed to illustrate the different phases of the work in their profession, and the missionary society has undertaken to demonstrate the object of its work along similar lines by means of the Palestine exhibition."

Rev. H. H. Bingham proposed a banquet for the various missionary committees, and to make the affair undenominational as possible. It was unanimously decided to hold the banquet on Nov. 25. The following committee were appointed to make the arrangements: Messrs. J. B. Campbell, J. K. H. Pope, A. J. Morgan, C. B. Germond, W. C. Curran, I. Taylor, Rev. H. H. Bingham, Rev. Dr. Manning and Canon Tucker.

Sunday, Nov. 10 or 17, will be missionary Sunday in all city churches, and the pulpits will be occupied by the laymen instead of the clergy.

The resignation of W. M. Manning from the office of vice-president was accepted, and W. H. Winning was appointed. A letter of condolence will also be sent to Mr. Manning, owing to his recent bereavement.

WIDESPREAD PLOT TO SACK MEXICAN CITIES
Uprising Had Been Arranged for Independence Day Celebration.

[Canadian Press.]
Mexico City, Sept. 14.—That the plot to occupy and sack the capital on Sept. 15, the anniversary of Mexico's independence, has been more widespread than at first imagined, is believed to be indicated by reports received here by the Government that similar plans were on foot against Puebla, Monterey and Saltillo. In all of these places arrests of alleged conspirators have been made. The authorities now believe that they have the situation well in hand in all the larger cities.

BISPHAM AND NORDICA
First Methodist Church Choir to Bring Great Artists to This City.

An important event in musical circles will be the appearance here on Oct. 26 of David Bispham and Lillian Nordica, two of the world's greatest vocalists, who will be remembered all your life. By his magnificent voice, consummate art, and dramatic genius he has won a place all his own in the hearts of the world's music-lovers. His name brings to the mind of one who has had the privilege of hearing him all that is great, beautiful and ideal in the world of song.

And of Madame Lillian Nordica, admittedly the greatest dramatic soprano of the present day and known the world over, into every cultured country Nordica's fame has penetrated, and her name is synonymous with everything that is fine and splendid in vocal art. Mrs. Nordica and her company will appear Nov. 12.

The third attraction will be a pianist, by no means least interesting of the great artists. Miss Hallock is younger and not as well known as Nordica or Bispham, but she has already achieved great fame in the east and abroad.

These three exceptional attractions will be given as a course. All orders must be addressed to Edwin Smith, city, and must contain cash or money order for the tickets required. Allotment of seats will be made as course is received. Coupons will be found on another page.

FRIDAY, THIRTEENTH YIELDS MANY DRUNKS
Fourteen Discharged, but "Here-Again" Have to Pay Up.

Judging from the number in the police court this morning, a good many whiffwhus spent Friday, the 13th, in a state of alcoholic abstraction. Perhaps some regarded it as a good way to counteract any ill-luck which might come on such a date. But a night in the cells did not enlarge this idea, for some of them at least.

CANADIANS LEAD IN PALMA SHOOT

Have Slight Advantage Over Americans at the 800 Yards Range.

BULLS EYES NUMEROUS
Russell Hits Centre of the Target Seventeen Times in Succession.

[Canadian Press.]
Ottawa, Sept. 14.—The shooting for the Palma trophy began here today. At the 800 yards range the Canadians led. The shooting at the first range was remarkable. Capt. Russell, of the last Palma competition at Rockcliffe, the Americans got such a lead that there was no hope of catching them. Out of a possible of 600 points today the Canadians only dropped seven points, and the Americans ten. On the first squad of four men the Canadians only dropped one point. They made 59 bulls out of 60 shots. Russell put on 17 bulls in succession, two being starters. The second squads had a little harder weather conditions and consequently lost more points.

The Canadian scores were: Sergt. Munroe 75, Capt. Smith 74, Sergt. Russell 75, Lieut. Morris 75, Lieut. Steek 73, Sergt. W. A. Smith, Sergt. Freshorn 74, Sergt. Kelly 73.

The 900 yards distance was started immediately after the completion of the 800 yards at 10:45 o'clock.

LATER.
Ottawa, Sept. 14.—The Americans secured a 10-point lead on the 900 yards range of the Palma trophy match, giving a net lead of 7 points. The scores: Canadians 571, Americans at 900 yards..... 571
Americans at 800 yards..... 590

Total
Canadians at 900 yards..... 1181
Canadians at 800 yards..... 593
Total..... 1154

The first squad for the 900 yards beat the Americans at 900 yards by two points, but on the second squad, Sergt. Kelly, of Toronto, broke, dropping 13 points.

Canadian scores at 900 yards: McInnes 69, N. Smith 73, Russell 74, Lieut. Morris 72, Freshorn 69, Kelly 62, Steek 73, W. A. Smith 69.

History of Trophy.
The Palma trophy competition was inaugurated in the United States in 1890 for the military rifle championship of the world, and was called the "Centennial trophy." It was won by the United States team from Scotland, Ireland, Australia, Canada, and the United States, the match taking place at Greenwald, N. J. The trophy was won by the United States by 22 points over the Irish team, which finished second.

In 1897 a team from Great Britain competed for the trophy at Greenwald, but was defeated by the United States by a majority of 82 points.

In 1898, the competition was first at Palma, the United States team who had donated $1,000 to the competition as prize money. No further contest for the trophy occurred until 1901, when upon an invitation from the National Rifle Association of the United States, a Canadian team entered for the contest, which on that occasion was held at Sea Girt, N. J. The Canadians won by 32 points, and thus the trophy came to Canada.

In 1902 Canadians defeated the trophy at the Rockcliffe range, when teams representing Great Britain, the United States and Canada competed, the trophy being won by Great Britain with 12 points over the United States and 87 over Canada.

In 1903 Great Britain defended the trophy at Bisley, the competing teams being from the United States, the United States, Canada, Australia, Natal, Norway and France. The United States team won by 15 points over the British team, but as a result of a protest against the rifle barrels used by the Americans, which were not those of the military arms of that country at the time, the trophy was returned to a decided advantage. Public ownership has been shown to be a success. It will be a still greater success in this case.

"Guelph found out that it cost $300 more to permit a pump water Niagara power than at steam," said Mr. Midden. "The advantage would be still greater where exhaust steam was used. I am opposed to electrification, and I cannot see what advantage the city would obtain."

After some further desultory discussion, the president put the vote, eight voting against electrification and two (including Mr. Moll) voting in favor of it.

LUPAKOFF KILLED
Head of the Russian Political Police Shot to Death.
[Canadian Press.]

PORT STANLEY.
Port Stanley, Sept. 14.—Mrs. E. A. McCorckill and son have left for Michigan to visit Mrs. Moggie's parents for a month.

The work on the new breakwater is getting on nicely.

As a result of a number of the cottagers coming back to Port it has been decided to hold a dance this evening under the auspices of the Hillcrest Club.

Mrs. Thomas Fitzpatrick, of Aylmer, who has been the guest of Mrs. C. A. McCorkill at Port Stanley for the past few days, left for home yesterday.

Mrs. O. P. Sherry, of Port Stanley, is in Cleveland attending her sister who is very ill.

Mrs. Graham, of Southampton, is the guest of Mrs. Sandere for a week.

Master Norman Taylor, Port Stanley, who has been spending his summer holidays in Union, returned yesterday.

CONGO REFORMS BEING PROVED

British and American Consuls Investigating Present Conditions.

"UP" TO THE BELGIANS
Must Now Meet the Demand for Reforms in Important Particulars.

[Canadian Press.]
London, Sept. 14.—The London Times understands that the British and American consuls in the Congo are conjointly engaged in an extensive tour of the Upper Congo for the purpose of reporting to their respective governments upon the general situation of the country, travelling in one of the steamers of the American Presbyterian Mission, which was hired for the purpose. Upon the nature of their reports, the paper says, will largely depend the action of the British and American Governments with regard to the formal recognition of Belgian annexation.

Reforms have been in operation for two years in one part of the Congo, for one year in another, while in a third section the reforms were inaugurated in July last. The Belgian Government must now meet the demands for reforms in important particulars, except the land question, which was recently the subject of an influential signed memorial to Sir Edward Grey.

The problem which will engage the attention of the British and American governments is the Belgian Government are being applied in practice. That the general condition of the Congo has vastly improved is acknowledged on all sides. This improvement, in the main, is undoubtedly due to the abandonment of the central policy of the Congo Free State Government, which was based upon a claim to a monopoly of the natural products of the country, the native population being compelled to collect this produce, chiefly rubber, for the Government, and concessionaires and were debared from disposing of it for trade purposes.

It is still alleged against the present administration in some quarters that merchants are being kept out of the country owing to the vexatious imposts, unfair treatment, and the tax in silver coinage, imposed upon natives in lieu of the old rubber tax, which was then at the discretion of considerable hardships, and is much higher in its incidence than it should be.

Upon these and kindred allegations the consuls inquire, and are expected to throw necessary light. Sir Edward Grey has repeatedly stated that recognition of the annex territory will be withheld until his majesty's government is in a position to lay before parliament and the country reports satisfactory in character from the British consular standpoint.

 "A Scrape of the Pen"

First Musical Comedy of the Season.
 Arrangements have just been completed whereby the Grand is to have a special engagement of that king of comedians, Harry Bulger, on Tuesday night, in the delightful musical comedy, "The Flirting Princess." This company has been strengthened especially for this tour by the well-known Crescent City Four, a male quartette of splendid singers. Harry Bulger is one of the best-known comedians on the stage, and has had some of the greatest successes in musical comedy. The show is one that appeals to the theatre-going public, not only being staged in a lavish manner, but filled with a chorus, especially chosen for their dancing, singing and good looks. To hear and see Harry Bulger sing "Go Back to the Town Where You Were Born," and "What Us Poor Girls Go Through," is to have one continual laugh. His comedy is always clean, but merriment is king while he is on the stage. He is practically the originator of the patter song. This is just the usual more or less inane musical plays which come from abroad. There are two elaborate scenes, the first being laid in a hotel in the Riviera, the second in the Villa Wildenberg. The costuming of the play is one of the many features. Everything is strictly modern in spirit and treatment, and the chorus, which is called upon to do an unusual amount of work, is one of the big bright spots in the operetta. Seats Monday, 9 a.m.

The Great Scotch Comedy, "A Scrape of the Pen."

There is intense interest manifested by playgoers and litterateurs alike in the coming performance at the Grand Opera House next Saturday, matinee and night, of Graham Moffatt's "A Scrape of the Pen," which the Messrs. Weber and Fields will present. Coming from the pen of the man who gave to the world that Scottish classic, "Bunt Pulls the Strings," and being the only other play from his pen that this country has known, it is not surprising that attention is very much aroused. "A Scrape of the Pen" was produced at the Haymarket Theatre, London, England, on Sept. 4, and was proclaimed as a more than worthy successor to "Bunt." The company which the Messrs. Weber and Fields are bringing to Canada, and from there for a year's engagement at Weber's Theatre in New York, was on the cobben, has offered to buy the two statues and find a site for them in Copenhagen, and the city authorities of Bergen have also offered to grant them asylum, so perhaps public opinion in Christiania will now veer round in favor of keeping them.

GOVT. GIVES TORONTO FIRST CHANCE AT PARK

Deputation Waits on Premier Whitney in Connection With the Matter.

Toronto, Sept. 13.—Regarding the securing of the Normal School grounds for park purposes, a deputation consisting of Mayor Geary, Ald. Rawlinson, Graham and Anderson, along with Park Commissioner Chambers, interviewed Sir James Whitney, Hon. J. J. Foy, and Hon. I. B. Lucas. Modesty at once was apparent, and no suggestion was made to the Government that the square might be presented to the city.

The mayor mildly pointed out that the square was especially adapted for park purposes, as in a few years that part of the city would be entirely composed of a factory population, and this was the only spot where recreation could easily be obtained.

"Your idea is that it would be desirable to find out what the property is worth, and before we do anything finally to give the city the chance of taking it over," said Sir James.

That was the position, replied the mayor, and Sir James added that the Government was not obliged to accept any tender, and before taking any final action the Government would call the city in first to see what it could do.

"Would this feature impress the Government?" asked Ald. Anderson, "that the city of Toronto would require the property for park purposes only?"

"We are only discussing the general question now," said Sir James, adding that he did not think Toronto ever made a better purchase for park purposes than the Trinity College grounds.

"The parks do not benefit the city only," said Ald. Graham, "but everybody who comes in from outside."

"Yes," agreed the Prime Minister, "and the people who come in from the outside get back a little of what the whole province has done towards increasing its value."

"Well, Sir James has not offered to make us a present of the property today," said Mayor Geary, rising.

"What's that?" interrupted the Premier. "You never asked for it." And with a laugh all round the deputation departed.

GERMANY'S AIRSHIPS

Expert Declares That They Are of Small Value for War Purposes.

Berlin, Sept. 13.—The belief held widely both in Germany and abroad that the German airships already represent an invincible force, is contradicted by an article in the military and naval organ, Tagliche Rundschau.

"It must be finally declared with ruthless frankness," says the Rundschau, "that even the very best of Germany's present dirigibles must become something radically different before we can speak of their actual worthiness for war."

"People are always talking about their capacity for strategic observations on account of their radius of action. But what will become of them if at the end of the first 50 miles they are attacked by a dozen or two of three dozen armed aeroplanes, having regard to the weak guns which airships themselves are able to carry to fight a swarm of hostile flying machines?"

The article points out that no airship is worthy of serious consideration for purposes of war unless it fulfill the following requirements:

Radius of action, thirty hours with a minimum speed of fifty miles an hour. Capacity to sail safely to England and back.

Capacity to sail at least as fast as aeroplanes carrying several passengers.

Carrying capacity for two and a half tons of explosives.

Sleeping room for crew.

Complete searchlight and wireless apparatus equipment, with lifeboat for sea cruises.

CHEERS FOR DIAZ; HISSES FOR MADERO

Chief Executive of Mexico Subjected to Hostile Demonstration.

[Canadian Press.] Mexico City, Sept. 14.—The name of Madero was hissed here yesterday in the chamber of deputies, and that of Diaz was cheered by a crowd that packed the galleries. In the streets later disapproval of the president was loudly voiced by the throngs who watched the chief executive pass in his carriage. The same throngs called heart vivas for the deposed Diaz.

RELIC OF ANDREE

Buoy From Ill-Fated Expedition Picked Up in the Arctic.

Tromsø, Norway, Sept. 14.—The Norwegian steamer Beta, which sailed Sept. 1 from Foulness Sound, Spitzbergen, has arrived here. She reports having picked up a buoy marked "Andree's North Pole Expedition in 1896; No. 10 Buoy."

Prof. Salomon August Andree, the Swedish Arctic explorer, ascended in a balloon from Dances Island, near Spitzbergen, July 11, 1891, in an effort to reach the North Pole. He had with him two other Swedish scientists. The party was never heard from afterwards.

A REBEL REPULSE

Mexican Insurgents Fail in Attempt to Take El Tigre.

[Canadian Press.] Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 14.—The attack of Inez Salazar's rebels on El Tigre yesterday ended in a repulse for the rebels by the small band of federal garrisoning the camp.

The attack began at 6 o'clock in the morning. At 7:30 Salazar sent a messenger under a flag of truce to the federal commander, demanding the surrender of the town to avoid further bloodshed. As no one in the camp had been warned it was believed Salazar's request came as the result of loss among his own men.

When the demand for the town's surrender was refused Salazar renewed the attack and firing continued until 5 o'clock in the evening. At that hour Salazar withdrew his force but at nightfall they began firing upon the town at long range, the federals replying to the fire.

During the day's fighting two federals were wounded. The rebel loss is unknown. One rebel was killed on the streets in an attempt to break through a section of the camp. It is thought the rebel loss in the hills was heavy.

RAINY DAY PUZZLES

Swiss Suggestion Evoked by the Weather of the Summer.

London, Sept. 13.—Evidently the summer of 1912 is a problem to the Swiss as well as to other people. The Bonne Revue comes forward with an answer to the question, "What are we to do indoors?" instead of bemoaning the inclement weather, it says people should solve the following problem:

Divide the number of Job's camels before they were captured by the Chaldeans by the number of men sent to take Jeremiah out of the dungeon; add to the quotient the number of lords entertained at Belsazzar's feast.

Subtract from the sum the number of just persons who could have saved Sodom. Multiply by David's age when he commenced to reign. Divide by the number of Philistines that Samson slew with the ass' jawbone. Subtract the number of Solomon's Songs. Multiply by the number of days during which Job did not speak to his friends.

Subtract the number of fish taken in the miracle of Jesus fishing. Add to the result the number of prophets hidden by Abdias. Subtract the number of ungrateful lepers healed by Jesus, and you will have a mysterious figure contained in the Apocalypse.

MORE CHINESE HORRORS

Mongolians Reported Being Put to the Sword and Torture.

Nova Vremya's, Harbin (Manchuria), Nova Vremya's, Harbin (Manchuria), correspondent says that Mongolia is being subjected to Chinese horrors resembling the atrocities perpetrated by the savage hordes in the middle ages. The Chinese troops, the correspondent declares, are massacring women and children to repress the natural increase of Mongolians, while the adult Mongolians are being tortured by being roasted alive over slow fires. Six thousand Chinese troops are preparing to continue these atrocities throughout the winter, according to the correspondent.

The Viennese Opera, "The Kiss Waltz."

At the Grand Opera House, Thursday night, Sept. 19, the Messrs. Shubert will present Valeska Suratt and the Valeska Suratt Opera Company, in the New York Casino success, "The Kiss Waltz." The critics of New York, Boston and Chicago heralded this "sweet operetta as the nearest approach to the melody of Gilbert and Sullivan. Miss Suratt will have the support of a notable company of Broadway favorites, including a beauty chorus. The new opera is to be staged elaborately, and the display of the newest London and Paris gowns will be a great feature. "The Kiss Waltz" is described as the daintiest, dandiest and dancingest of all musical plays. "The Kiss Waltz" was originally produced in Vienna. The music is by C. M. Ziehrer, composer of "Mile. Mischief," another Viennese success, made famous by Fritz Scheff. However, in adapting the opera for the American stage, the Messrs. Shubert will control the rights of the play, gave Edgar Smith free rein, and the librettist has aimed to make of his book something more than

BJORNSON PROTESTS

Seeks Removal of Statues of His Father and Ibsen in Christiania.

Christiania, Sept. 13.—A fierce dispute is now raging about the statues of Ibsen and Bjornson in Christiania. Both statues are the work of a well-known sculptor, Sinding, but they do not seem to be very happy examples of his craftsmanship. A movement has now been started by Bjornson's son, Bjorn Bjornson, for their removal.

The pedestals consist of several round blocks of granite, which look like big cheeses, and Mr. Bjornson declares that the two writers look like cheesemongers who have climbed up on a pile of their wares.

He says his father would have regarded the caricature in front of the National Theatre as a personal libel, and that Ibsen would have been so annoyed by his statue that he would always have taken a roundabout way so as to avoid it.

NEW YORK SHERIFF APPROVES OF BOUTS

Declares That They Uphold the Manhood of the American People When Conducted Within Law.

[Canadian Press.]
New York, Sept. 14.—The official seal of approval has been placed upon the sport of boxing as conducted in New York City, by Sheriff Julius Harburger, who recently had some correspondence with Governor Dix regarding the suppression of the proposed Volga-McFarland fight. Sheriff Harburger attended the Attell fight in Madison Square Garden last night, and afterwards said:

"Before the boxing began I made a formal statement to the referee. I said that if the affair developed into a brutal prizefight I would stop it myself, arrest the principals, and arrest the referee. I think from my observation of what happened, that the affair was conducted in an orderly manner in strict accordance with the provisions of the law."

"The bout, to be explicit, was, in my opinion, a pure and simple boxing exhibition, and instead of being a brutal affair, it was a contest that might be conducted in any respectable household or in any reputable institution devoted to this branch of sport. If boxing is to be conducted under the law on this plane, it will be conducive to the department of athletics, and at the same time uphold the manhood of the American people. I propose to visit every boxing exhibition under my jurisdiction as sheriff of New York County, and will exercise my authority in such a manner that brutality cannot and will not occur."

CHAMPION QUOTERS ARRIVE ON MONDAY

Sabine, Callender, Carlyle and Nichol, Together With Others, Will Attend London Tournament.

The Forest City Quoting Club will hold its annual fall tournament next week, starting Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock and continuing Tuesday and Wednesday. Callender, Sabine, Carlyle and Nichol will be present, and will be members of the Woodstock and other nearby clubs. The Woodstock tournament just closed yesterday, Sabine carrying off the honors by defeating Carlyle by the score of 61 to 55. It was a magnificent game, and the appearance of these quoters in this city should attract a great deal of interest. The tournament will be held on the quoting club's grounds on Horton street, near the traction station.

GRAND PRIX RACE POSTPONED UNTIL 23RD

[Canadian Press.]
Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 13.—The international grand prix automobile, scheduled for Milwaukee on Sept. 17, is postponed until Sept. 23 (Monday), because the track cannot be suitably prepared in time to run the race as originally scheduled. The Wisconsin trophy and the Pabst trophy races will be held on Sept. 20, and the Vanderbilt cup race on Sept. 21, as already planned.

Coroner's Jury Says 'Bugs's' Death Was Due to Violence

Chicago, Sept. 12.—Arthur L. Raymond, known to the baseball public as "Bugs," came to his death from "internal hemorrhages and injuries to his brain, due to external violence," according to a verdict of a coroner's jury today. Fred Cigranz, 26 years old, was held to the grand jury accused of causing Raymond's death. Witnesses testified that Cigranz kicked Raymond into unconsciousness in a fight on Sept. 1.

Raymond was found dead in a downtown hotel last Saturday.

PACIFIC COAST TEAM TO TOUR AUSTRALIA

Arrangements Being Made For Trip Next Winter.

[Canadian Press.]
San Francisco, Sept. 14.—A baseball team to be composed largely of Pacific Coast League players, with the addition of a few major league stars, probably will make a tour of Australia next winter. J. Cal. Ewing, former president of the Pacific Coast League, and W. J. C. Kelley, of Sydney, who is head of the Australian baseball managers, besides being the representative of Hugh McIntosh and other light promoters of Australia, are now working on the proposition. It is planned to take fifteen players, including two extra pitchers and catchers, who are to be loaned to the Australian clubs in the games. The promoters of the trip intend to sail from San Francisco on Nov. 18, and return Jan. 11.

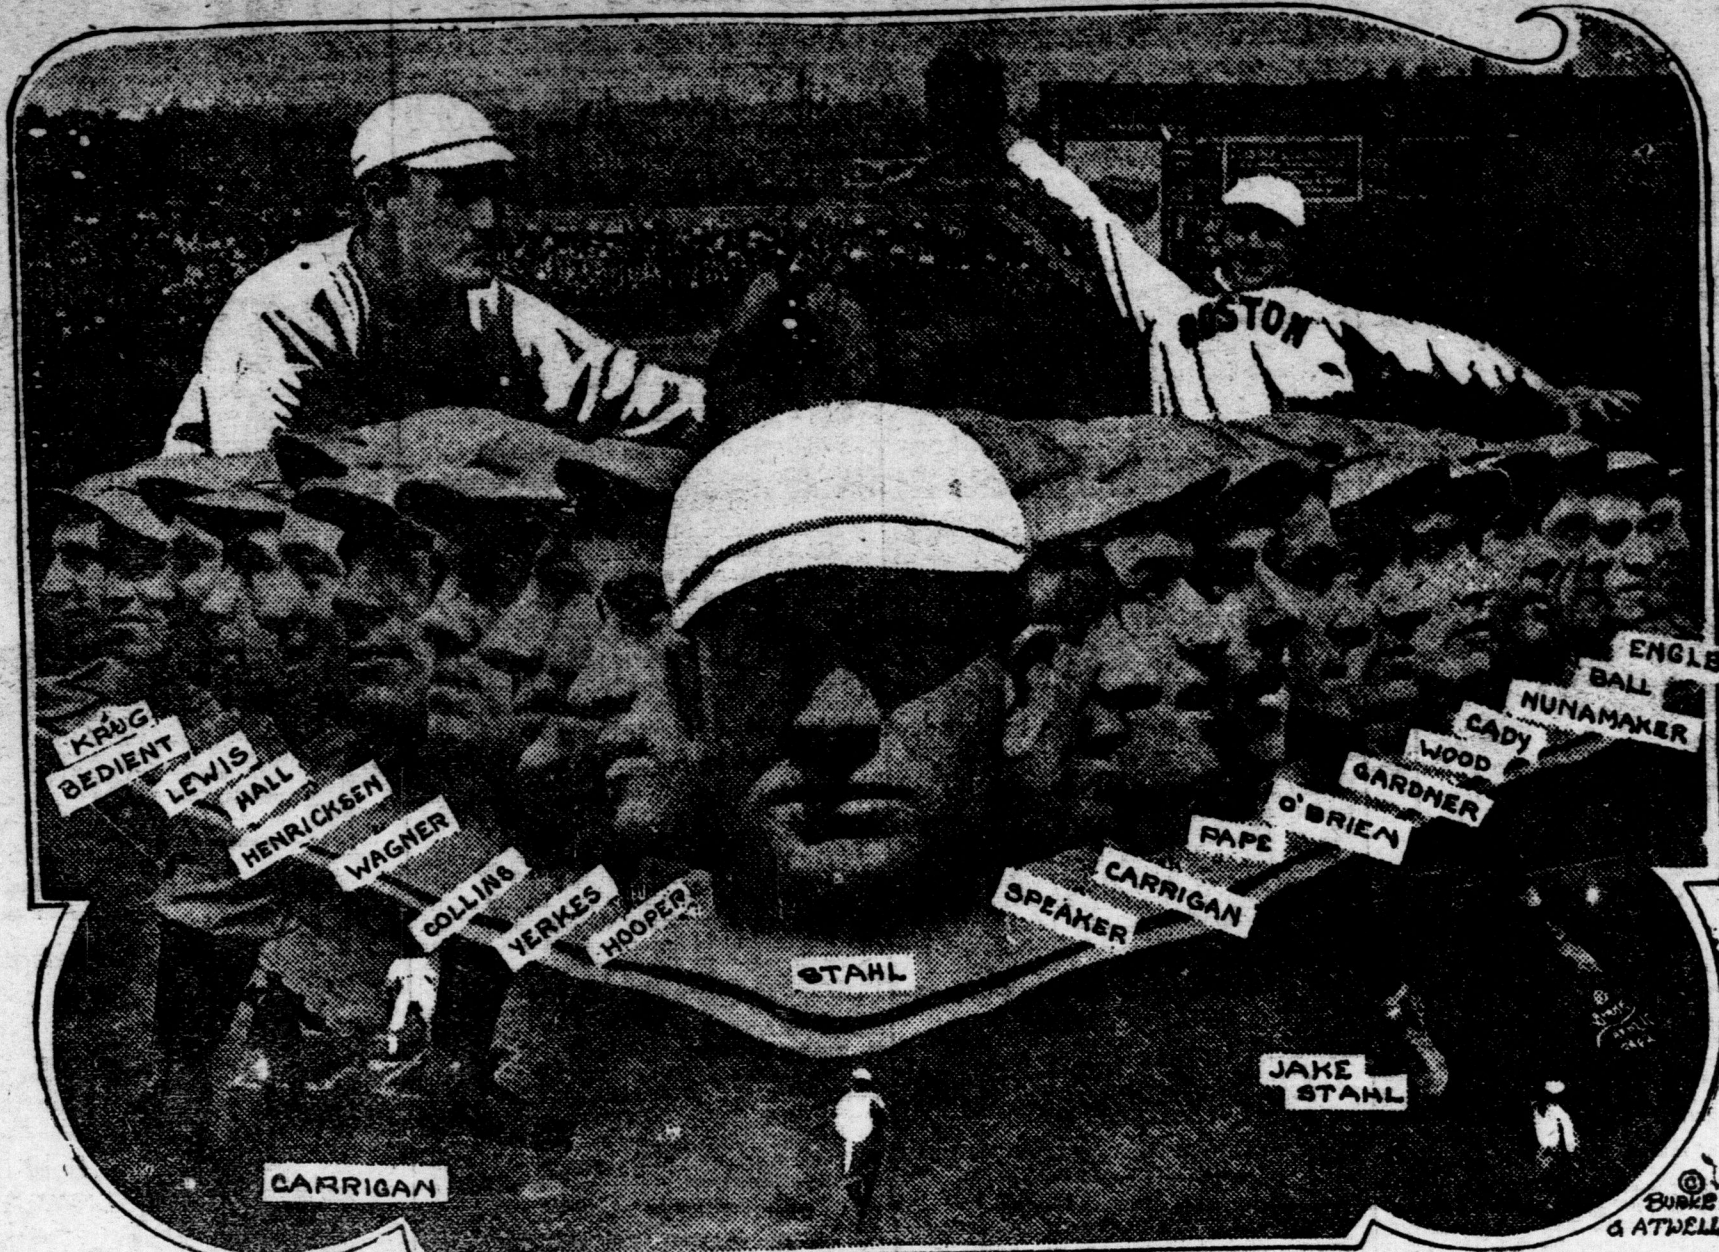

TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP GAMES START SEPT. 18

Play Will Begin Next Wednesday Afternoon.

The annual matches for the tennis championship of London, under the auspices of the London Rowing Club, will be played off at the grounds of the London Rowing Club beginning next Wednesday, Sept. 18. The events will be as follows: Men's open championship, singles; men's open championship, doubles; men's handicap singles; ladies' open championship, singles; mixed doubles. All entries must be in by Monday, Sept. 16, and may be made by telephone or in person to W. E. Saunders, 352 Clarence street. The preliminary round will be finished by Saturday, Sept. 21, and that the finals will be played on the afternoon of Saturday, Sept. 28.

Lily Woodford, that raced to a record of 2:14 as a pacer, changed her mind and left less than a month ago and now has a trotting record of 2:15 in the third heat of a winning race. Cox now has won a little more than $40,000 during the season and is an easy leader among the drivers.

Boston Players Look Like Winners of American League Championship

LYON, OF TORONTO, IS CANADIAN CHAMP

Easily Defeated Hutchinson, of Montreal, in Finals for Canadian Golf Championship.

Montreal, Sept. 13.—George S. Lyon, of the Lambton Golf Club, of Toronto, easily defeated Hutchinson, of Royal Montreal, in the Canadian championship final here today.

Lyon's play was vastly superior to that of his opponent. The Lambton player won the match on the thirteenth green by annexing the hole in 4 to 5 and beating Hutchinson by 6 up and 5 to play.

Baden added much to his laurels by winning the Syracuse race the day he did. His new mark of 2:05 1/2 put him in line for the free-for-all for all divisions next year and with any improvement he will be about the best of the lot.

Washington and Cubs Will Meet in World's Series and Cubs Will Win Title Says Manager Chance

The Chicago Cubs and Washington will meet in the world's series, forecasts of seers to the contrary notwithstanding. If you doubt it, ask Frank Chance.

And when the Cubs have won the title, manager Chance will bid adieu to his baseball and his himself to his California orange grove to spend his declining years.

Chance does not admit for publication that he is through, but to friends he confesses the game has about seen the last of him.

The truth is that the clever handler of the great Chicago machine is on the verge of a nervous breakdown. The grind of ten years' pennant chasing has undermined his constitution, and as his bank account is as fat as a Standard Oil senator's, he has decided to retire.

But—he wants to win just one more world's championship first—and his admirers hope, that should the Cubs fail to overtake the Giants this fall, "Husk" will be back in harness, again next spring, for another walk with the goddess of chance.

Chance says the Cubs will win in no uncertain terms.

"The Cubs and Washington will meet in the world's series and we will win the title," he said, when asked what he thought of the outlook.

"How about the Giants and Boston?"

"The Giants are through. We have trimmed them in every series. We have the better team. The Giants have been held up by Marquard and Mathewson."

"I don't think Washington will win. It will be Boston's fall. Griffith has his team in the right place. He is close onto Boston's heels, winning consistently. Boston is apt to go to pieces, and the moment it does Washington will cop. Griffith has the greatest right-hander in the business in Walter Johnson, and he has a corps of able helpers to support the Idaho wonder. His team is young, fast and full of fight. Clark himself is one of the shrewdest men that ever wore a uniform. I expect to meet Washington in the world's series and to win the title."

"How about retiring?"

"I could retire without a regret when I win another world's championship, but it is too early to think of that just now, when the race is so hot."

men who are at work on this problem here and abroad. As for Dr. Odin himself, I am sure that he is not a famous French surgeon. He may be a pathologist, but I have not heard of him."

Dr. William Mecklenburg Polk, a member of the consulting staff of the Skin and Cancer Hospital, said that on many reports of this nature were being presented nowadays which proved to have no value he was inclined to discredit the worth of Dr. Odin's declaration.

"Many men are working all over the world to find out the real cause of cancer," he said. "They are following two lines of research, chemotherapy and serum. The latter appears to be the line which Dr. Odin says he followed. So far nothing conclusive has been accomplished by anybody. It is pure experimentation without positive results."

THE BIG SERIES AS FRANK CHANCE SEES IT.

"Rube" is through, and Mathewson cannot carry his team alone. That club has shot its bolt and the Cubs will win the pennant."

"Isn't Boston the best club in the American League?"

"No! I think Washington will win. It will be Boston's fall. Griffith has his team in the right place. He is close onto Boston's heels, winning consistently. Boston is apt to go to pieces, and the moment it does Washington will cop. Griffith has the greatest right-hander in the business in Walter Johnson, and he has a corps of able helpers to support the Idaho wonder. His team is young, fast and full of fight. Clark himself is one of the shrewdest men that ever wore a uniform. I expect to meet Washington in the world's series and to win the title."

"How about retiring?"

"I could retire without a regret when I win another world's championship, but it is too early to think of that just now, when the race is so hot."

men who are at work on this problem here and abroad. As for Dr. Odin himself, I am sure that he is not a famous French surgeon. He may be a pathologist, but I have not heard of him."

Dr. William Mecklenburg Polk, a member of the consulting staff of the Skin and Cancer Hospital, said that on many reports of this nature were being presented nowadays which proved to have no value he was inclined to discredit the worth of Dr. Odin's declaration.

"Many men are working all over the world to find out the real cause of cancer," he said. "They are following two lines of research, chemotherapy and serum. The latter appears to be the line which Dr. Odin says he followed. So far nothing conclusive has been accomplished by anybody. It is pure experimentation without positive results."

MUTINOUS MINERS SEIZE STEAMER

Strenuous Times for American Capitalists on the Isle of Spitzbergen.

IS "NO MAN'S LAND"

International Control of Arctic Coal Mines May Be Result of Disturbance.

Christiania, Sept. 13.—The enterprise of American capitalists from Boston, who two years ago started coal mining in the Arctic island of Spitzbergen, has brought about results important to the destinies of that little known country. Hitherto Spitzbergen has held the legal status of "No Man's Land." While it was supposed to have mineral resources, no one had been sufficiently bold to venture capital and human lives in an attempt to wrest them from the ice-bound rocks. Whaling ships touched at the island occasionally and it has been the base for Arctic explorers, but otherwise it had been of no use to civilization, hence it remained a geographical maverick, without nationality, laws or inhabiting the operations of the American Arctic Company proven a success—for, although in output of 50,000 tons a year does not seem large to American and European mining magnates, it discloses possibilities—than promoters from other countries began to descend upon the island. Claims have been located already by Russians, Belgians, English and Scandinavians.

This international operation, with its chances for disputes, and the experiences of the American company have brought about a new international conference will be held at Christiania before the end of the year, with the purpose of giving Spitz

HE COMES UP SMILING

A Comedy Novel

By CHARLES SHERMAN

"Better put to bed," said James. "Simplicity is always the best."

The stranger wrote the checks, signed them and turned to the two waiting him. "Bring me the suit," he said quietly, "and these are yours."

Mike shuffled off into the trees and James and the stranger waited in silence for his return. He came back presently and threw the suit at the stranger's feet. "You'll notice," said he, "that this nobby spring suit in our latest style is cheap at the price. Fancy, thing like that for only sixty dollars!"

"I see," said the stranger.

"Payable in advance," said James. The stranger handed them each a check and thoughtfully drew on the shabby clothes of the Watermelon. It had not been long since he had worn rags of a necessity, and he hitched them up with the skill bred of familiarity. He thrust the pen and book into a pocket he had first made sure was useless. Then he turned to the two and his eyes gleamed.

"How much for the car?" he asked.

"Mike raised his hands to Heaven. 'The car?' James, does he think we stole his car?"

A stockbroker, said James, "would suspect his own mother."

"If you want your car," said Mike, "go to the hotel."

"Bully," snapped the stranger. "Do you think I was weaned yesterday? Be quick and tell me your price."

"I'll have no more to say," said Mike proudly, not sure where the car was.

They started through the woods to the village, the stranger in the lead, and James following. At the edge of the village they paused instinctively, and without a word.

"Tell me where the car is and, your accomplices," said the stranger in the short sharp tones of one born to command, "and you two can go free. If you don't tell, I'll do my best to have you arrested and sent up for grand larceny. Understand?"

"Oh, yes," said Mike, understanding. When I was young I learned English, foolishly, as I haven't used it since."

"We don't know where your car is," declared James. "And we didn't steal your blooming outfit. What do you take us for, anyway?"

"Very well, then," snapped the stranger. "I see that you won't tell. Remember, I gave you your chance."

He turned and hurried down the village street. The two watched him as he stopped a pedestrian and apparently asked to be directed to the justice of the peace. Then they slipped away in the woods, and, simultaneously, turned north, falling into a gentle slope that took them far with the minimum of effort.

"I hope the kid isn't pinched," said James, after a while.

Mike sighed and shook his head. "Grand larceny," he murmured. "That's gratitude for you."

CHAPTER IX.
On the Road.

The general never went anywhere without a well-stocked library, guide books, fastidious books and maps. All were carried long and often, and with a child-like faith that Henrietta's sarcasm and the sign posts had not been able to shake. If the guide book read "White rock on left," the general stopped the car if the rock were not immediately seen. Henrietta refused to go further until it had been discovered. If the rock could not be located, the general ran back a little way or ahead, refused to be seen on the left, the general did not see what right anyone had to tentative endeavor. Henrietta's inability that the book was mistaken, doubtless unintentionally, but still mistaken, was simply waved as if it were a hill at such and such a place. There was a hill there, the book was still correct.

"There was something the matter with the landscape," said Bartlett.

Bartlett knew of this unfortunate tendency of those books and maps and papers. With every mile indicated and nicely tabulated, every turn and landmark mentioned, it would be almost impossible to get off the beaten route, and they must avoid telegraph stations and postoffices as much as possible. The success of the scheme lay in keeping Bachelor away from all towns and maps and papers in the city. They must, if possible, get lost, and with the multitudinous books and maps, they must not be able to. There, they must get lost of the books and maps.

When they had separated to prepare for the trip, Bartlett returned hastily to the garage. No one was in sight except a strange chauffeur lounging in the doorway. Bartlett collected all the papers from the general's car and hastened back an empty room near the one assigned to him, and when he emerged again his arms were burdened and he was smiling brightly.

"They waited for the Watermelon on the porch, intending to have an early supper."

Aunt Sally's Advice to Beauty-Seekers

C. M. P.—The neck should receive similar attention to that given the complexion, color and texture of skin will be the same. A yellow neck and a white face give a discordant effect. I advise using for both neck and complexion, the treatment recommended to "Monica."

F. M.—First, stop scowling, if you would get rid of the lines between the eyes. The best application for such lines, and all wrinkles, is a solution of powdered saffron, 1 ounce, dissolved in witch hazel, 1 pint. Bathe the face in this daily until entirely relieved.

Monica—You hardly need such a list of cosmetics as you mention. Ordinary mercerized wax will help you more than any or all of them. It will gradually absorb the withered, discolored complexion and you will soon have a new, youthful and healthy-looking skin. You needn't get more than an ounce of the wax, which will cost you little at any druggist's. Apply nightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings.—Woman's Realm.

success in your chosen profession is assured.

As an expression of our appreciation and as a memento of your residence in Ingersoll we ask you to accept this silver in the hope that in its use you will always be reminded of your Ingersoll friends, and with the parting wish that kind Providence may always shower his choicest blessings upon your family and yourself. We wish you Godspeed on your journey from our town.

ASK LEGISLATURE TO PASS PARK GRANTS

Commitment Will Be Forced to Postpone Trimming of Trees.

The refusal of City Solicitor Meredith to allow the council to pass a bylaw setting aside $15,000 in debentures for parks purposes, will prevent the parks commission carrying out its program of tree-trimming. Although $13,500 was set aside for parks purposes a large portion of this was used in building the road at Springbank, and doing other work which it was intended to charge to the debenture account. Owing to the ruling of Mr. Meredith these expenditures must be met out of current revenue. All the money available will be used, and no more can be set aside for tree-trimming. The road at Springbank will not be completed this year.

Now that the debentures have been held up no action will be taken by the parks commission until the meeting of the Legislature next winter. A bylaw setting aside the sum of $15,000 for the purposes designated will be included in the city of London bill. The commissioners are of the opinion that no difficulty will be encountered in getting the Government to allow the necessary money to be set aside.

LEAMINGTON FACTORY COMPLETELY GUTTED

Bad Fire Threatened to Wipe Out the Business Section.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Leamington, Sept. 13.—A fire which destroyed the Ludam-Almsie Sash and Door Factory early today threatened, for a time, to wipe out the whole business section.

Flames were discovered issuing from the engine room of the Ludam-Almsie Sash and Door Factory shortly after 3:45. The entire plant, stock and building within the walls a mass of cinders, ashes and wrecked machinery. The factory has been a busy place all summer with work and was filled with building orders. The activity in building operations in Leamington this year. Contract work will be held up on between fifty and sixty houses in different stages of construction until the factory can be rebuilt. Every available carpenter has been working full force here for months (Hunt, John H. Leamy, Chas. C. Rice, Martin Carey and L. A. Hastings, of Port Huron, and Henry Harris and Angus Campbell, Detroit).

The Pere Marquette buildings, Erie Basket Company, Russell Cement Works, MacPine tobacco factory and many fine residences are in the immediate vicinity and could not have been saved with a high wind blowing. The fire was confined to the factory plant and stock inside the factory. Practically no damage was done outside the walls. The buildings were valued at $20,000. Insurance will reach about $10,000. The companies involved are The Home Insurance, London, Liverpool and North British and Mercantile, and the Royal.

WILL RETIRE

A. H. Clarke, of Essex, to Drop Out of Politics Entirely.

Windsor, Sept. 13.—A. H. Clarke, K. C. M. P., who for several years has represented the riding of Essex in the Dominion Parliament, and was regarded as one of the strongest Liberals in the House, will retire from politics at the end of his present term.

Mr. Clarke removed to Calgary with his family several months ago, and became identified with a prominent legal firm in the western city. In a letter received today by Windsor friend Mr. Clarke stated his intention to retire and devote himself entirely to his practice.

BRADSHAW WARRANT FOUND

Issued by Man Who Passed Death Penalty on Charles I.

Cape Town, Saturday, Sept. 14.—A warrant issued in 1650 by John Bradshaw, president of the court which passed the death penalty on King Charles I. has been found hidden behind an old painting in the South African Public Library. The librarian was removing the picture from its frame, when the old parchment dropped out. It had been placed between the boarding and the back of the picture.

It is a warrant to Sir John Wollastone to pay to one Thorogood the sum of £108 6s 8d, a certain supplies to the parliamentary party in Scotland. Thorogood's receipt is indorsed on the back of the warrant, which is signed by Bradshaw in his capacity as president of the council of state by the authority of parliament.

MOBILIZE SWEDISH ARMY

Government Wishes to See How New System Would Work in War.

Stockholm, Sept. 13.—An experiment in mobilizing the Swedish army is about to be made on a large scale by the Government in order to see how the new system introduced in 1901 will work in time of war. The recent reports of the forward movement of Russian troops toward the frontier lends much interest to the tests.

No one has any idea which section of the country will be mobilized, and the public is becoming very impatient, for in the mobilization district it means that, practically every man over 21 and under 40 years of age will be called upon to bear arms during the manoeuvres.

THE EMPRESS JOSEPHINE was one of the most remarkable women of France, as well as one of the most beautiful women. The chroniclers may and do differ regarding her character, but all loudly praise the glowing and tropical beauty of this wonderful woman. It is recorded that Josephine's exquisite complexion was the result of treating her skin daily with a mixture of Almonds and Roses. For long the formula was kept secret, but now the lotion may be bought at any drug store, under the name of Seely's Almonrose.

PETITION TO HAVE BIG DRAIN CLOSED

Sarnia People Claim It Is a Menace to the Public Health.

SARNIA BRANCH OFFICE, 209 Front Street, Office hours, 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., 9:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Sarnia, Sept. 14.—A petition is being circulated to have the provincial board of health close the Confederation street drain at the south end of the town. The matter has been brought before the council on two or three previous occasions, and nothing has been done about it.

Now the ratepayers have decided to appeal to the provincial board of health, as the ditch is considered a menace to the health of the neighborhood.

Would Cost $16,000.

Should the work of tiling the drain be done by the province, it will likely cost the town about $16,000.

One of the members of the Sarnia Council, in conversation with The Advertiser today, stated that Dr. McCullough is more than determined that the waterworks be removed to Point Edward, and if the people vote the proposition down, and the council then neglects to act on its own initiative, the town will be fined $100 for each day it procrastinates in the matter.

The doctor further said that if it is necessary the province will have the work done. It is understood that two or three of the aldermen are in favor of removing the plant to Point Edward without submitting the proposition to the people to be voted on.

G. T. R. MEN EXPECT TO BE TAKEN BACK

Will Be Given a Chance to Give Their Side of Story.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Sarnia, Sept. 14.—The nine Grand Trunk conductors recently suspended from their runs between Port Huron and Chicago and Detroit and Chicago, expect to appear before President Chamberlain of the G. T. R. at Montreal within a few days, time and state their side of the affair.

The employees who were relieved from duty are Conductors Fred Thompson, George B. Outwater, M. K. Welch, John H. Leamy, Chas. C. Rice, Martin Carey and L. A. Hastings, of Port Huron, and Henry Harris and Angus Campbell, Detroit.

AFTER THE SCORCHERS

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Sarnia, Sept. 14.—The police are prosecuting a vigorous campaign against bicycle riders who use the sidewalks. Several were fined yesterday for this offence and four more drew $2 fines today.

BRITISH DEATH DUTIES

Why the Hon. Irene Lawley Cannot Live in Her Father's House.

London, Sept. 13.—The Hon. Irene Lawley, who inherited the estates of her father, the late Lord Wenlock, has addressed a letter, accompanied by her framed photograph, to each of the tenants on the Esrick Park estate, near York. In the letter she says: "I am writing you this note to let you know of myself, which I hope you will like, and I trust it may serve to remind you of me during those years in which I am most unfortunately prevented from living at Esrick owing to the heavy death duties which have to be paid out of the estate which I have inherited from my father."

"I cannot tell you how sorry I am that this should be the case, nor how much I desire to live among you, and to be associated in all the work of my estate; but I have no choice but to let Esrick Park and live somewhere else, unless the standard of efficiency at which the property has been kept in recent years has to be considerably lowered. So you see that my absence

WILD TIMES AT DULUTH

Duluth, Minn., Sept. 13.—Business organizations tonight appealed to Governor Eberhart for troops to help to quiet the riotous outbreaks that today compelled the street car company to suspend service. Five arrests were made, but the police could do little with the crowd that surged around each car sent into the downtown streets. Stone-throwers were lost in the mass, and there were not enough officers to drive back the attackers. Mob violence flung itself up the main street and through the city today, coming from the west end, where for most of the week an ungoverned mass of men has dared the police, and wrecked the cars. Racing and swearing through the business section, the mob stopped long enough to uproot and destroy a starting station, then pursued the employees but failed to catch them, and went on to meet a cross-current at Lake avenue, where mob hands joined the west enders just as a car came into sight. The conductor and motorman each received an awful thrashing, one being pitched through a window. Then the crowd dissolved.

FAMOUS JAP GENERAL
SUICIDES AS TRIBUTE

General Nogi, Who Captured Port Arthur, and Wife Take Life as Funeral Procession of Mikado Leaves Tokio for Last Resting Place.

Tokyo, Sept. 13.—General Count Maresuke Nogi, supreme military councillor of the empire, and his wife, the Countess Nogi, committed suicide tonight, in accordance with the ancient Japanese custom, as their final tribute to their departed emperor and friend, Mutsuhito.

The taking off by their own hands of the famous general and his wife was as dramatic as it was sad. The general cut his throat with a short sword, and the countess committed harikari.

PREPARED FOR DEATH.

Following the Samurai custom, the couple had carefully prepared their plans for killing themselves, and timed them so that they would be coincident with the departure forever from Tokio of the dead emperor.

General Nogi and the countess had attended the funeral services of Mutsuhito at the palace here today, and it was expected that they would proceed to Aoyama tonight with the cortege. Instead, at the conclusion of the ceremony, they withdrew to their modest home in Akasaka, a suburb of Tokio, and there began their final preparations for death.

WROTE TO NEW MONARCH.

First, the general wrote a letter to his new emperor, Yoshihito, then he draped in mourning a portrait of the late emperor, and afterwards he and his wife dressed themselves in full Japanese robes and drank a farewell cup of sake from cups which had been presented to the general by Mutsuhito. Darkness had fallen and General Nogi and the countess sat and awaited the signal they had agreed upon to announce their leave-taking. This was the booming of a single gun in the palace grounds at Tokio, which was to let the people know that the body of the emperor was starting for its last resting place.

A DRAMATIC MOMENT.

As the boom of the signal gun sounded, General Nogi arose and grasping tightly in his hand a short sword, plunged it into his throat, while the countess stabbed herself through the stomach. A student who resided in the Nogi home heard the sound of the blades and rushed into the room. Lying on the floor he saw the hero of Port Arthur and his wife. Both still were breathing, but their spasmodic gasps showed plainly that their lives were fast ebbing. The student went for aid, but when he returned both the general and the countess had passed away.

The tragedy created a profound sensation and expressions of sorrow were heard on every hand tonight. Especially grief-stricken was Prince Arthur of Connaught, who was to have gone with Gen. Nogi tomorrow to the former capital of the Shoguns, Kamakura.

Those who knew Gen. Nogi well declared that his calmness in killing himself tonight was the kind of calmness he always had displayed, no matter what crisis faced him.

Captured Port Arthur.

Nogi's principal claim to fame was his capture of Port Arthur, perhaps the world's strongest fortress, after a siege lasting for half a year. It was to Nogi that Stoesel surrendered, as soon as he had scored this triumph he rushed north with an army of a hundred thousand men, and passing through Chinese territory, in defiance of laws of neutrality, outflanked the right wing of the Russian army, which was engaged under Kuropatkin and against General Kuroki, in the battle of Mukden, the greatest land conflict of modern history. His sudden onslaught on the Russians, who had been constantly engaged in battle for five days, decided the struggle, and the result was the precipitate defeat of Kuropatkin's army, the capture of 60,000 of his men, the destruction of vast supplies, and the end of the war.

It is written that after the capture of Ta-Lien-Wan in the war between China and Japan, General Nogi, then commander of a brigade, stood apart from the other officers, who were directing the reconstruction of walls broken by the Japanese fire, and when they looked toward him they found that he was in tears. Nogi turned to them and called for a "Banzai" for

STRYCHNINE KILLED GIRL
IN HAMILTON MYSTERY

Provincial Analyst Found Deadly Poison in Stomach of Rose Ziepe, But No Trace in the Candy She Ate.

Hamilton, Sept. 13.—"We find that the deceased Rose Ziepe came to her death by being poisoned by strychnine. From the evidence we cannot say who was responsible for her death." The above was the verdict returned by Coroner Rennie's jury inquiring into the death of Rose Ziepe at the Hamilton City Hospital on Sunday evening, Aug. 11. The long-looked-for report of the provincial analyst was read, showing that strychnine was found in the dead girl's stomach.

Analyst's Report.

The chief witness this evening was Dr. Rogers, assistant to Prof. Ellis, Government analyst, who told of the analysis of the chocolates which the detective secured from S. W. Shotter's store, and of the chocolates that remained in the bag from which Rose Ziepe ate two candies immediately before her death. In each case stating that no poison was found in them. An analysis of the stomach, however, he said, showed the presence of strychnine to the amount of one grain, and the fluid which was pumped from the

TRYING TO GET IN ON THE BRUCE TRADE

Hamilton Board of Trade Is Trying to Oust London Merchants.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Blyth, Sept. 13.—The Hamilton Board of Trade ran an excursion up this way on the C. P. R. today for the purpose of meeting the businessmen along the route. The board had a band along.

The train was scheduled to arrive here at 4:15, but on account of the engine breaking down between Listowel and Linwood they had to wire to Goderich for another engine, and this caused another delay, so that they did not arrive here until 6:45—too late for the reception which had been prepared.

All that could be done was to shake hands with a few of them and listen to some selections by the band, when they had to pull out, as the Goderich people had a banquet arranged.

The board will try to arrange in the near future for an excursion from this direction to Hamilton. It is only lately that a connection to Hamilton on this branch of the C. P. R. has been arranged, and the Hamilton businessmen see the advisability of getting in close touch with the businessmen of this district.

Were Successful.

Messrs. R. Summers and P. Gardiner, who represented Blyth, Presbyterians, to get their sanction to the removal of Rev. Mr. Turner, of Norval, to Blyth, met with success, and he is to be inducted as pastor of the congregation on Wednesday, Sept. 25.

A great many from here attended the London fair. Messrs. James and Baxter McArthur are away on a trip to Niagara Falls, Buffalo and New York.

Miss Allie Engh is having a month's vacation in the Thousand Islands. She is accompanied by Mrs. John Hartley, formerly of Clinton.

Mr. James Cutt, who received word to go to Chicago to close a real estate deal, left on Monday and returned yesterday.

BEES SWOOP DOWN ON CIDER FACTORY

[Special to The Advertiser.] Zurich, Sept. 14.—Two hives of working bees made a raid on a cider factory here a couple of days ago, and for a time the bees had complete control of the works.

The bees, it seems, were attracted by the aroma of the cider in process of manufacture, and made a descent upon it in full force.

Several swarming machines were introduced to subdue them, but not until the engineer turned the smoke of the chimney upon them did they show any weakness in their attack.

In their attack many of the busy little creatures fell into the vats and were drowned. Those that escaped destruction returned to the hives to again seek their favorite blossom in the clover field.

RICH BEAN HARVEST
IN ZURICH DISTRICT

Farmers Expect Best Crop They Ever Had and Corn Is Splendid.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Zurich, Sept. 14.—The bean crop promises to be one of the best in this district for years. It is influenced by the high prices of last season, have gone into bean culture quite extensively, and if the weather is favorable a rich harvest awaits them.

Beans sold in this town last March for $2.10 per bushel, and taken from the farmers by dealers. Advance agents in many instances go into the country to buy the crop before it has been harvested.

Corn is Good. Corn also promises well, and under favorable circumstances will be a profitable crop.

Onions, now being harvested, will be over the average crop, and the quality is said to be good.

Fall wheat, now being harvested, and the quality and quantity are very satisfactory.

Celery of the white, crispy kind is raised in abundance here. It is a colored individual was caught operating in a corn patch recently. When shaken up a little 39 cents he was arrested.

Mr. Regis N. Denomie, of Drysdale, Jeff Township, and Miss Mary Jane Hay, of Chicago, were married.

St. Peter's Church, Drysdale, on Tuesday, Rev. Father Stroeder officiated.

Mr. George Denomie, son of the groom, was best man, and Miss Edith Denomie, niece of the bride, was bridesmaid.

The deep-water fishing season will begin this fall with a larger outfit than usual, a deal having been made between Mr. Sreenan, of St. Joseph, and Mr. Cyrus Greig, of Grand Bend.

Larger ground will be worked in the hope of getting trout and whitefish.

Portable evaporators are now constructed for farmers. They are made of galvanized sheet iron, with galvanizing wire supports. They occupy a space of about five feet, have a small furnace for wood, and are inexpensive.

Farmers Around Varna Are Well Pleased With the Harvest.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Varna, Sept. 13.—The harvest in this district has been gathered in. Those who patiently waited for fine weather were not disappointed, and the grain is saved in excellent shape. Threshing is now in full swing.

Grain is turning out well, but those who rushed it in a wet condition have experienced some difficulty in saving it.

As there is a large acreage of beans sown in this district, the farmers are anxious for a continuous run of fine weather to ripen the beans properly and give them an opportunity of harvesting them in favorable conditions. The prospects are at present favorable for a bumper crop.

Mr. and Mrs. McDonald and their two daughters, Beth and Helen, have been visiting in the west. They returned to their home in Detroit today.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hernwell have returned to their home here after spending the summer in the west.

The following were visitors at the London Fair: Messrs. J. E. Sparrow, L. Beatty, A. Ings, Mrs. A. Ings, John Beatty and Mrs. Edith Beatty, of Detroit, are home assisting his father on the farm.

Mrs. James Ester had the misfortune to fall from a ladder, and as a result is suffering from a broken rib.

Miss Elliott, of Goderich, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Alex. Mitchell.

RABB—SAUNDERS

Pretty Palmerston Girl Becomes the Wife of Young Toronto Man.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Palmerston, Sept. 13.—A very quiet wedding took place at the home of the bride, Mrs. R. Babb, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. Babb, at noon on Wednesday, when their youngest daughter, Nellie Rose, was married to Mr. J. Wesley Saunders, Toronto, Rev. R. Walter Wright, of Paisley, officiating. To the strains of the Wedding March from "Lohengrin," the bride, who was unattended, entered with her father. She was dressed in cream serge, trimmed with satin, and carried a shower bouquet of roses, lilies of the valley and ferns. The house was profusely decorated with white asters, sweet peas and carnations. The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a pendant of pearls, and a ring. The bride's trousseau was a wedding march, a silver mesh bag. The happy couple motored to catch the train en route to Niagara, Albany, and New York city. The bride's trousseau was of navy blue, with a cream blouse, and large white hat trimmed with osprey.

LOCAL OPTION FIGHT
AROUSSES INTEREST

More Than One Hundred Appeals To Be Heard in Brussels.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Brussels, Sept. 13.—With the probabilities of a local option fight being on in Brussels, both parties are on the alert in watching the voters' list. There are well on to 100 appeals entered. Court will be held before Judge Doyle on Sept. 25.

Harvest is about over, and the threshing machines are busy. Quite an acreage of fall wheat will be sown. Colin McArthur is back from a trip to the old country.

On account of serious illness, W. H. McCracken has resigned his position as financier of the A. O. U. W., and has been succeeded by R. A. Pryne.

Silver Anniversary. On Friday next the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church will celebrate the silver anniversary. The speakers will be Miss Wellwood, who is a returned missionary from China; Mrs. W. H. Leech, of Goderich; and Rev. D. Wren, M.A., of Ethel. Miss B. Whitfield will sing, and Mrs. R. Strachan will contribute a reading. Mrs. A. J. Lowry is the president. Tea will be served in the school-room after the afternoon session.

Brussels Women's Institute will meet Thursday afternoon of next week. Walton Branch will be the guests, and will supply the program.

A car of fine horses was shipped to Yorkton by Robert Lowe recently. He went West to dispose of the horses.

Druggist Robert Work and Miss Mary McArthur will be married at the bride's home here next Tuesday. The groom comes from Toronto, although his parental home is in this locality. Millinery openings are slated for next week in Brussels.

Critically Ill. Peter Watson suffered a stroke of paralysis at his home recently, and is in a serious condition. He had one year ago.

Brussels buttermakers are not easily beaten. Mrs. Wm. Armstrong, one of the good ones, secured fourth prize at the Toronto Fair in a large competition for table butter. She was also an exhibitor at the Western Fair at London.

Brussels evaporator opened today, and will push the work if the supply of apples is forthcoming.

Owing to the little finger not healing properly, Councillor Albert Dames had another piece of it amputated. His left hand was injured some months ago by the explosion of a dynamite trap, and his thumb and two fingers were blown off. He has suffered a good deal from the injuries.

At the meeting of the local branch of the W. T. U. next Wednesday, the Rev. Father Stroeder officiated.

The "Franchise to Women" will be given by Mrs. Alfred Lowry.

DIED IN THE WEST

Remains of Joseph Rolley Were Interred at Paisley.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Paisley, Sept. 13.—The remains of Mr. Joseph Rolley, who died so suddenly in the West, arrived here today, accompanied by Mrs. Rolley and Mr. David McIntyre, of Regina.

The funeral took place this afternoon from his late residence, Rev. Mr. Wright, of the Methodist Church, of which church the deceased was a member, and for a number of years a member of the quarterly board, officiated.

Andrew Devine, aged 83, living in the north end of the town, fell out of a wagon today, fracturing his hip. Mrs. Fred Brown, of Owen Sound, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Maxwell, of Paisley.

Miss E. Ballachey, of Brantford, is a guest at the home of her brother, Mr. S. Ballachey.

Mr. James Hyde is here on a two-weeks' visit from Toronto.

Dr. and Mrs. Dryden, after a couple of weeks' visit with friends and relatives here, left today for their home in Hibbing.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Simons are away on a driving trip, visiting Brantford, Niagara Falls and Toronto.

Rev. Mr. Delhi spent the week in London.

A very interesting lacrosse match was played here yesterday between Port Elgin and Paisley, resulting in a victory for the home team by a score of 12 to 4.

At the regular meeting of Knox Church W. F. M. S. on Thursday, the president, Miss S. McCallum, was presented with a membership certificate by the members of the auxiliary.

Mr. Archibald Cameron, of New Zealand, is visiting at the home of his mother, Mrs. Nell Cameron, Queen's Road, north.

The weather for the last two weeks has been ideal for the farmers in this district. The grain is well along, and the continuous rains, oats through, were in some parts slightly damaged, but on the whole farmers generally are quite satisfied with the season's crops.

DELMAE—COLDING

Pretty September Wedding Was Held in Forest Methodist Church.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Forest, Sept. 13.—The Forest Methodist Church was the scene of a happy wedding Wednesday afternoon, when Miss Rachel Codling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Codling, of Jura, became the bride of J. Wesley Delmae, of Plympton. Rev. A. J. Thomas, pastor, officiated. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Hair, of Forest. The happy couple left on the 6:20 express on their honeymoon trip.

McKenzie Wright, of Toronto, visited his cousin, W. J. Wright, B. A., yesterday.

W. J. Wright, B. A., of the high school staff, has been appointed a member of the library board in place of Mrs. F. W. Shaw, resigned.

Miss Lettie Bailey has accepted the position in the postoffice recently vacated by Miss May Procter.

Miss Rita Kennedy has returned after visiting in Detroit and Belle River.

David Williams, editor of the Collinswood Bulletin, with his aunt and cousin, Mrs. Thomas Williams and Leslie Williams, of Monroe, visited Mrs. Williams' son, A. Williams, of the high school staff recently.

Rev. H. T. Crossley, who is conducting special services in Theford, will open a series of services here toward the end of October.

Wm. Skidmore, of Rodney, moved to Forest this week to take a position in the basket factory.

BURIAL BEING ARRANGED
WHEN THE "DEAD" WOKE UP

Winnipeg Man Pronounced Dead By Physicians Is Saved From Awful Fate By Series of Accidents and Is Now Walking the Streets.

Winnipeg, Sept. 13.—Pronounced dead by a qualified physician, laid out in his house while authority was being sought from the coroner to bury him, without inquest, resuscitated by another physician after a police inspection had suspected a spark of life, and today walking about the streets of Winnipeg is the strange experience of S. Musik, of Redwood avenue, here. Had it not been for a series of accidents Musik would have been buried alive, probably to awake out of his comatose condition only to be suffocated.

Musik was found to all appearance dead in his bed, and after an examination a physician pronounced life extinct. The coroner, however, was not quite satisfied with the story that reached him, and, possibly suspecting foul play, sent for Cor. MacDonald with a constable to get evidence. While watching by the body the officer thought he detected a slight movement of the blankets. On this being repeated Dr. Berovitch was summoned and made an examination. All the usual tests showed entire absence of reflex action of muscles and breathing. Suspecting the man might be awaking from cranial pressure, causing suspended breathing, the physician drew off some blood serum from the spinal canal, with the result that reflex action returned, and with some care the man was soon on his feet.

DENIES CRUELTY TO HER LITTLE STEPSON

Wm. Bugg and Wife, of Blanshard, on Trial Before Judge Barron.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Stratford, Sept. 13.—The whole of today's session was taken up with the trial of Wm. Bugg and his wife, of Blanshard, in connection with the alleged cruelty to little Jimmie Bugg, aged 5. The evidence was heard before Judge Barron, and late in the evening the case was laid over until Tuesday to allow the defence to present an important witness at present in Orillia. The charge is that of failing to provide the necessities of life as legally required of parents or guardians of a child. Mrs. Bugg contradicted the evidence of several previous witnesses to the effect that she had whipped the child and had refused to nourish him, declaring that she had done all she could in care of the boy.

The evidence of the nurses in charge of the little fellow since his rescue testified that he had taken food readily and had gained seven pounds in a few weeks. The other evidence was similar to that given at the preliminary hearing. The trial today created unusual interest, and the outcome is eagerly awaited.

KICK WAS FATAL

Robert Thompson, of Holyrood, Injured While Unhitching Horse.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Lucknow, Sept. 13.—Robert Thompson, of Holyrood, who was kicked in the abdomen on Wednesday afternoon by one of his horses, died today as a result of his injuries. Deceased was unhitching the team, when the accident happened. It is supposed that the horse was bothered by flies, as it was an unusually quiet beast of work that her brother, Robert Semoville, passed away at his residence in Saulte Ste. Marie, on Tuesday. Deceased had been paralysed for some time, so his death was not unexpected.

A large number of Lucknow people attended the Western Fair.

Last night Miss Wellwood gave a most interesting address as president of the Lucknow Methodist Church. Miss Wellwood is home on furlough, having spent a number of years in China.

Problems of the Fair Sex Solved by Cynthia Grey

Dear Miss Grey—I would like to know if it is proper for a young lady to slight the fellow she has been keeping company with at a farewell party at her home? Evidently, another boy came to the party without a girl, she spent the entire evening with him. When I spoke to her about it, she said if I went out in society more I would see that she had acted right. The girl is 18 and I am 19.

ANXIOUS. A—Go "out in society more" as she suggested, I am quite sure if she shows of your attentions to other girls, in apparent forgetting of her, that she will appreciate your constancy.

Stolen Horses Were Located on Farms

Clever Work May Result in Clearing Up Series of Mysterious Thefts.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Berlin, Sept. 13.—Four horses stolen in Waterloo County in 1910 have been recovered and one arrest has been made as a result of a vigorous two days' investigation in the vicinity of Tavistock, New Hamburg and Stratford, made by Chief O'Neill and Dr. Henchoffer, the president of the Waterloo County Farmers' Protective Association.

On Thursday morning the authorities started out in an automobile with a meagre clue and this evening they returned home, having located the four stolen animals. Irvin Shoemaker's horse, stolen two years ago, was located near Tavistock.

Transportation of Exhibits From the Grounds Is Carried Out in Easy Fashion.

When the Western Fair closed its gates to the public Friday night it brought to a close the greatest fair ever held by the association.

The attendance for the last day was close to 20,000, nearly treble the number present on the same day the previous year. The directors were more than delighted with the showing, it being much better than any had anticipated.

During the day the throngs packed the grounds and the grandstand. Everything was left in position, and visitors had every opportunity of seeing things at their best.

The attractions were presented in their entirety, nothing being omitted that would tend to make the fair a real success.

Shortly after 4 o'clock the exhibitors began moving their stuff. From that hour until early this morning a constant stream of vehicles was employed moving the perishable stuff. The freight departments of the railways kept their staff at work all night. The remainder was left until today, and is being taken away at the present time.

There was no confusion and little excitement. The removal of the goods was carried out in a most orderly manner.

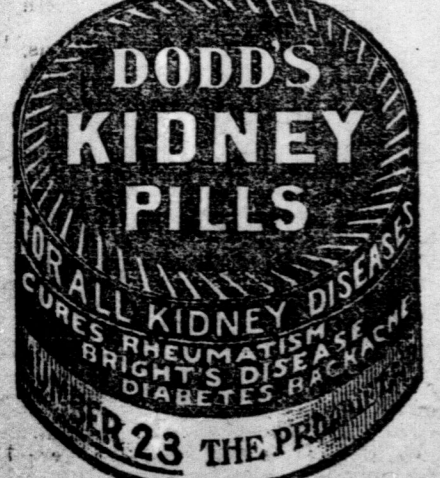

Live Stock Moves Out.
The larger animals were the first to go, and they were handled with rapidity. The poultry caused considerable trouble, but the removal was effected with the loss of but one bird, a golden pheasant, which slipped out of the building without any person noting him.

Rewards have been offered for the bird's return to the fair grounds, but the crowd was late in arriving at the grounds, more than half waiting until nearly lunch time. When they did come they spent the evening on the ground.

The attractions before the grandstand were most attractive. The First Hussars' Band filled in owing to the fact that the removal of the Barn Band returned to England today. They gave an excellent program of music, one thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The races were particularly interesting. Progress Bars, one of Uri Pierce's fast pacers, took sick during Thursday night and was unable to compete on Friday. The mare had won two heats and looked to be a winner. However, Harkness' good trotter, Brown Astellion, won the race after a strenuous battle with Otto Bars.

Daisy-at-Law Wins.
Harry Raison's good mare, Daisy-at-Law, was a winner in the 2:24 pace. This mare demonstrated that she possesses the speed and the courage, and will be heard from later.

TORTURED FROM BABYHOOD

"Fruit-a-lives" Cures Constipation

MISS E. A. GOODALL.

Edmonton, Alta., Nov. 20, 1911.
"I have been a sufferer since babyhood from that terrible complaint, Constipation. I have been treated by physicians, and have taken every medicine I heard of, but without the slightest benefit. I finally concluded that there was no remedy in the world that could cure Constipation.
"About this time, I heard about 'Fruit-a-lives' and decided to try them. The effect was marvellous.
"The first box gave me great relief, and after I had used a few boxes, I found that I was entirely well.
"Fruit-a-lives is the only medicine that ever did me any good and I want to say to all who suffer as I did—'Try this fruit medicine and you will find—as I did—a perfect cure.'
"MISS E. A. GOODALL."

"Fruit-a-lives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit and the only one that will positively and completely cure you of Constipation.

other principles a medicine. Dr. Charles E. Jarvis, of this city, also gave a paper on "Compulsory Vaccination," and his statement that the compulsory part should be avoided when at all possible was agreed to by the majority of those present. The meeting was concluded about 4:30, as a number of the delegates were compelled to return to their homes.

The officers for the coming year are the same as last year, all being re-elected. They are: President, Dr. L. H. Evans, Toronto; vice-president, Dr. Charles E. Jarvis, London; secretary, treasurer, Dr. Edward K. Richardson, Toronto.

MORGAN LAUNCHES ANOTHER BIG COMPANY

New Railroad Enterprise For Chicago, Involving Expenditure of $200,000,000.

[Canadian Press.]
Chicago, Sept. 14.—According to a morning paper, a railroad enterprise involving an expenditure of $200,000,000 was launched yesterday by the interests of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., and fourteen railroads entering Chicago. The plan embraces a complete solution of the freight handling problem in Chicago in that half of the bond issue will be set aside for passenger and freight terminals. The papers for the project are said to have been signed by all concerned. The first issue of $200,000,000 bonds is said to be made at once.

A great passenger and freight terminal will be erected on the site bounded by the Chicago and State streets, within which bounds the Dearborn street station and the yards and tracks of the Chicago and North Western and the Belt Line.

The plan is also said to involve the purchase of entire railroads, notably the Chicago and Western Indiana and the Belt Line.

HELD FOR FRAUD

Man and Wife Alleged to Have Jumped Board Bills.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Berlin, Sept. 14.—The police have received information from Chief Marx, of Port Huron, that Robert Connelly and wife, who are alleged to have swindled people in Berlin and Waterloo, had been arrested. A constable has left for Port Huron to bring the pair to Berlin, where the man will face a charge of jumping a hotel board bill and the woman one of securing money on false pretences. Local people were victimized by a stranger who was collecting for "charitable cause," and then disappeared. It is believed that this is the pair that is wanted in Niagara Falls, N. Y., Brantford and Galt on similar charges.

ST. MARYS PIONEER
Richeson Faulkner Was in Carpenter Business for Many Years.
[Special to The Advertiser.]
St. Marys, Sept. 14.—Richeson Faulkner, aged 55, one of the pioneers of the district, and for years a carpenter is dead at his home here. Besides his wife he leaves one son in British Columbia. The funeral was held this afternoon to St. Marys Cemetery under the auspices of the Orange Lodge.
Chairman Spearin, of the market, fire and police committee of the town council, and Chief Moyes and Capt. C. W. Coupland, of St. Marys, fire department, returned yesterday from attending the Provincial Fire Chiefs' Convention at Woodstock.

Mrs. T. W. Allen, who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Jesse Crossen, Queen street east, and other friends, returned home to Cleveland today.

LONDON AND DISTRICT

—Mr. and Mrs. James Gammack, of Port Huron, are on a visit to the city, the guests of Mrs. Webster, of Bruce street. Mr. Gammack is an old London boy, having worked for late Henry Davis, jeweler of this city, for many years. He has now retired from business.

Funeral of Miss Smith.
A number of friends gathered at the home of the Misses Moore, 187 Wootley road, and gave Miss A. Smith a handkerchief and kitchen shawl. After a hearty luncheon was served, the guests departed at an early hour, all having spent a very pleasant evening.
Funeral of Miss Hungerford.
The funeral of Miss Jane Crossley Hungerford, who died in Midland on Wednesday, was held from the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr. Geo. B. Sippi, 372 Matland street, this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock to Woodland Cemetery. The services at 2 o'clock were of a private nature, and were conducted by Rev. Canon Tucker, of St. Paul's Cathedral.
The Wendling Lectures.
A critic of national reputation writes of the Wendling lectures, which are to be given in the Auditorium: "It is no exaggeration to say that the effectiveness and power of the Wendling eloquence with which he leads his audience through the latest revelations of science, concerning heat, light, electricity, and many other forces of nature, and through the field of art, music, religion, and later to an invisible power behind them all, are as satisfying and inspiring as anything heard in a lifetime from either the platform or the pulpit."

Asylum Sports Next Wednesday.
The annual field day at the London Hospital for the Insane will be held on Wednesday. A fine program has been prepared, and the occasion promises to be one of great interest. In addition to the ordinary events, an exhibition of wire-walking will be given by Robert Treneman. The Misses Charlton will do some fancy dancing. Mr. J. C. Hazard is manager. J. Richardson, starter, and Dr. John H. Stead, secretary for the affair; patrons, Hon. A. Beck, M. L. A. Major Beattie, M. P., Sir George C. Gibbons, Mayor Graham; Judges, Geo. W. Neely, S. Frank Glass, Ed. Weld, H. Fowler, T. H. Smallman, G. B. Sippi, Thos. Gillen, T. W. McFarland, A. E. Miller, Capt. Thomas Robson, Col. Gartshore, Jeffery Hale, H. F. Skey, Rev. John Hosie, committee of management, Drs. Robinson, Ross, Stead, Morrison, Messrs. J. C. Hazard, H. Smith, M. Walker, G. Armes, H. Jackson, James Noble, J. Stewart, Wm. Talbot, Sam Roberts, John Richards, R. B. Heighway, T. McLaughlin, J. Beatty, Thomas—Hutchinson.

On Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 11, at 4 o'clock, at the home of her father, Mr. James Hutchinson, at Marlboro, Ont., Miss Edith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hutchinson, was united in marriage to Mr. Roy, son of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Adams, of 494 Adelaide street, London, Ont., by the Rev. Limbert, of Oakwood, Ont. The bride entered the room, which was beautifully decorated with flowers for the occasion, leaning in the arm of her father and wearing a gown of embroidered marquisette. After the marriage ceremony, the wedding guests partook of a dainty luncheon, prepared by the bride's mother, and shortly afterwards the happy couple left on the evening train for Toronto, New York and other points, and upon their return, will take up their residence in this city. The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Jessie B. Cooper, of Barrie, while the groom was ably assisted by Mr. Frank Hutchinson, brother of the bride. The bride's travelling attire was a tailored suit of navy blue serge, and a large white hat. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome brooch, set with pearls, and to the groomsmen a gold tie pin.

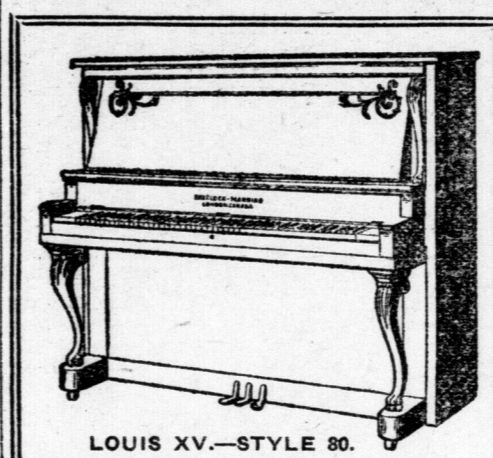

THE GREAT DIVIDE PLEASES AT GRAND
Mr. Shaw and Miss Phillips Give Fine Interpretation of Leading Roles.
In "The Great Divide," William Vaughn Moody's dramatic interpretation of western life in the rough, he has written a play that gives ample scope for emotional work, and is really thrilling in the scenes at the Grand last night by a fair-sized audience. Mr. Albert Phillips and Miss Lella Shaw in the leading roles of Stephen Ghent and Ruth Jordan, were well received.
It is the love story of these two after they have become man and wife under unusual circumstances that forms the theme of the play. The rugged, primitive emotions of the rough Arizonian, stimulated by the daily companionship of a noble woman, make of the story a play of intense interest. In the last act he wins the love of his wife, the climax of a most fascinating drama is reached. The scene of reconciliation between the man and his wife is, perhaps, rather tedious at times, but both handled their lines well. Miss Shaw, as Ruth Jordan, proved very prepossessing and shows considerable talent as an emotional actress. Miss Lella Stewart, although her lines in the first act were sometimes rather indistinct, was most pleasing in the part of Polly Jordan, and lent a touch of brightness to the otherwise serious play. The remaining characters were all fairly well sustained. Elliott J. Simms, as Phillip Jordan, the contented and arrogant brother of Ruth, was all that could be desired.
"The Great Divide" will again be presented at the Grand Opera House this afternoon and tonight.

NEVER RECOVERED.

MADAM! IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT TAKE DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS"
Waste-Clogged Bowels, Torpid Liver and Decaying Food in Stomach Cause the Sick Headache, Gas, Backache, Sallowiness, Biliousness and Indigestion.

All women get bilious, headachy and constipated simply because they don't exercise enough. They don't eat coarse food, or enough fruit and green vegetables. Those are nature's ways of keeping the liver and thirty feet of bowels active; but very few women employ them. The next best way is delightful, fruity, Syrup of Figs. It is simply a matter of keeping your stomach, liver and bowels clean and regular. Then you will always be well—always look and feel your best. But get the genuine—the old reliable. Ask your druggist for "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna." Refuse with contempt the so-called Fig Syrups sometimes substituted to fool you. The true, genuine, bears the name, California Fig Syrup Company. Look for this on the label.

TURKS DEFEATED.
Cettinje, Montenegro, Sept. 14.—A hundred Turks were killed and fifty taken prisoners in a fight with the Malissori tribesmen in the Hoti district last Wednesday. The Albanians suffered a loss of 20 men killed. Fighting continued at different points in the same district on Thursday.

WHY AMERICAN PEOPLE FLOCK TO OLD LONDON

Its Calm Atmosphere and Its Historical Memories—Shillings for Dollars.

Paris is, of course, the proverbial "American's paradise," but I very much doubt if the average American feels as much at home in the Boulevard des Capucines or in the Rue de la Paix as he does in the Strand or in Regent street, writes an American in the London Daily News. I exclude, of course, the multi-millionaires, who are more at home among the Paquins and the Worths than anywhere else, and would prefer a week at their Paris millinery's to a month at any other spot on the globe.

To Paris goes the American in search of gaiety, novelty, of a pleasurable excitement that is unique and which no other city in the world can afford. To London he comes with quite another feeling—one that is akin to affection. First of all there is the tie of language that binds him more closely to his fellowmen in England, and then while he may not be outspoken in regard to his sentiments towards England and the English, there is a glow in his heart. If he is an Anglo-Saxon by origin, the realization that something of Old England belongs to him and that something of him belongs to the Old Country. This sentiment is not shared by the French, however its attractions may appeal to him.

When, in the old days, before so many landmarks disappeared, he wandered about the scene made so familiar to us by the immortal Dickens he felt he had some claim to them. When he visits the "Cheshire Cheese" and frequents other spots immortalized as the haunts of the great of past days he feels he has more right to enjoy the sentiments they inspire than any other foreigner to English shores.

In every sense of the word he feels a brotherly attachment, whereas his attachment to Paris can be but cousinly at the best. I have heard hundreds of my compatriots say, "Dear old London—don't you just love it?"

Just so—we do. We love all its characteristics, too. The fog-begrimed walls in its dingiest quarters, the well-known deal of the muffled man's bell along the quiet streets of the outlying districts.

The New Yorker or the man from Chicago finds relief in the comparative calm in which the great city conducts its business. The Boston man finds in London many resemblances to his own beloved city, the most English town of America.

London appeals to our women because it is more mature, more seasoned than their own cities.

In spring and summer in England we revel in the freshness of the verdure, the fields of daisies, the sweet perfume of the may, the long, soft perfume of the birds, the long, soft perfume of the birds, the long, soft perfume of the birds.

We love London for its old-world mellowness, for its solid foundations of centuries, for its hallowed traditions which, after all, are the inheritance of every Anglo-Saxon American, who must perforce recognize the history of England as that of his own race.

He may stand in wonderment before the tomb of Napoleon at Les Invalides; but his feelings can never approach those that hold him spellbound in Westminster Abbey. He may marvel at what Versailles, but he can never appeal to him as forcibly as does the grandeur of Windsor Castle.

Americans may be moved when visiting historic sites, recalling the French Revolution and the Commune, but can they ever across the spirits as does the old Tower of London, with its gory reminiscences and its dreared water gate?

The American roams through old English villages and towns, with their picturesque cottages, historic buildings, and romantic halls and manors, recalling at every step a chapter from some well-known masterpiece of English literature, from a verse from one of the poets, and feels he has a part in it all.

In London, no matter how democratic may be his principles, he sees the pageants of royalty from a very different point of view to that from which he witnesses similar scenes on the continent, because, devoted as he may be to republicanism, he cannot forget that his ancestors once owed allegiance to the occupants of St. James' Palace.

I have sat beside a group of Americans during a royal progress through London, and have heard this: "Doesn't it make you thrill? Don't you feel one with this wonderful, loyal crowd?"

On the continent the expressions of such a group at such a time would be merely of satisfied curiosity. All Our Delights.

The English country appeals to us because it is mature. The beauty of its fields, the intense cultivation, the ivy-covered walls, the stateliness of the old family manor, the well-made roads with natural borders of blossoming, perfumed hedges, the old Norman church towers with their sweet-toned bells, are all a delight, and so we rejoice in the "Garden of England."

During the American's first winter he is particularly struck by the abundance of evergreen foliage and the soft green of the grass, which do so much to brighten the long winter months.

Then at night there is the decorum of London's pleasure world that lends so much to the pleasure of a dinner at the restaurant, or of the play. There he finds an attention to detail flattering to every individual which is not so closely studied in our great cities.

And the question of price. It is difficult for you to imagine the delight of a New Yorker when he jumps into a taxicab and knows he will only pay a shilling or half a crown—think of the dollars at home—when he takes his party to dinner at the most luxurious of West End resorts and finds he needs but half the money he would require in New York.

Shillings for Dollars.

And the shops. Dear me—when first I returned to New York after passing some years in London, I felt no inclination to buy—it was dollars again instead of shillings. There is to the average American a wild delight in shopping in London. Think of the marvels one takes home for a shilling or half a crown—think of the dress materials that fairly make the American woman thrill with enthusiasm at prices never dreamed of in New York.

What an attraction, too, the prices of the London tailors!

There are Americans residing in London today in comparative ease and comfort, enjoying the luxuries the city affords at moderate prices, who would be but very sadly off in New York, where rents and servants are double the money, and five-cent pieces slip through the fingers more quickly than pennies do in London.

The fact is, we are at home in England, where we need scratch the surface but very little to find human nature much as we find it in our country, but less strenuous, calmer, better satisfied with its lot and with the world at large, and not everlastingly striving for the unattainable.

In London it is possible for us to rest. H. T. S.

Here Are the Facts About Lloyd George's Great Insurance Plan for Working People, Which British Stand-Patters Are Trying to Discredit.

[By William G. Shepherd.]

London, Sept. 14.—Amid torrents of ridicule, with the physicians of London fighting free medical service, with employers protesting and with the aristocrats insisting that their charities will care for the poor and that insurance laws are foolish, Lloyd George has marched on steadily with his law for insuring the working people of England against illness and mishap.

For the next four months you'll probably see in the American newspapers here and there how Lloyd months ahead of him because, with the working people just now it is a case of all going out and nothing coming in.

The payment of benefits will not begin until Jan. 13, 1913. Eleven million working people in England are paying eight cents per week, if they are men, or six cents if they are women, toward the insurance fund. Thoughtlessly, many of them complain because none of them has so far benefited by it.

The benefits are: Seven dollars and a half at the birth of every child. Two dollars and a half per week for men during twenty-six weeks of illness. One dollar and eighty-five cents for women during twenty-six weeks of illness.

One dollar and twenty-five cents a week for both men and women when they are ill longer than twenty-six weeks, and for the rest of their lives if they are invalided.

Free doctoring and free medicine for life. Free special treatment for consumption. Here's the way John Hobbins, of London, bricklayer, for instance, does his part of the insurance business.

First he goes to the postoffice nearest his home and gets an insurance book. It is something like a trading stamp book, in appearance, with spaces for stamps. It is against the law for any employer to hire him unless he presents this book.

"Got a job for me?" asks Mr. Hobbins. "Yes," answers the contractor—that is, if it is Mr. Hobbins' lucky day. "Where's your book?"

"Mr. Hobbins hands his book to his new boss and goes to work. The new boss places in one of the spaces in the book a stamp costing 14 cents, which he has bought at the postoffice. For this stamp he has paid out six cents of his own money and eight cents which he will deduct from the wages of Mr. Hobbins at the end of the week.

"Mr. Hobbins is a thrifty individual, with forethought, he joins a benefit society which has been approved by the Government. The doctor for this society looks him over, and if he finds that he is in good physical condition, he admits him to the society without cost. If he isn't thoughtful and doesn't join a society, he remains under the postoffice insurance.

As a member of the society he can draw all of the benefits mentioned above, including the birth insurance, when he is taken ill, he sends his book to the postoffice and is entitled to 13 cents for every 14-cent stamp in the book. For each one of these stamps he has paid 8 cents, his employer has paid 6 cents, and the government has paid 4 cents. He is also entitled to free medicine and free attendance by a physician, though he must be contented with what he receives for his stamps, as no weekly payments are made to him.

And here one great evil appears that even the brains of Lloyd George has not been able to overcome. Suppose John Hobbins has been refused admission to an approved benefit society on account of his poor state of health. Then John, the man who needed help more than his healthy brothers, must remain under the postoffice insurance and will receive less benefit than they do, even though he is forced to pay as much as they do, weekly, for his insurance.

There is no choice for any person who receives less than fifteen dollars a week as to whether or not he shall take advantage of the insurance—it is compulsory.

Mrs. Jones, if she has a hired girl, has to tick stamps once a week. So does the lawyer for his office boy, so does the meat man and the grocer. Even the men who carry the sandwich signs on the streets must have their cards.

Just now the working people of England are counting a tide of $20,000,000 worth into the insurance fund. Four months from now, when the payment of benefits begins, the laborers will have paid twelve millions into the fund, and the Government will have put in six millions, making an insurance fund of twenty-seven million dollars.

When the benefits begin, the beloved and long-continued charities of England's aristocracy will only be in the way and knowny muzzing up the scenery.

For one thing, the poor have been decently, for one million mothers in England will be given the maternity benefit, and will receive free treatment by physicians.

SUN YAT SEN PLANS FOR A NEW CHINA

He Says Another Revolution Must Be Wrought—A Policy of Land Reform to Secure Uneared Increment—Thinks China Should Avoid Example of Rich Western Nations.

Sun Yat Sen, the first president of China, has some notable things to say to the Chinese with regard to the reform of China's land laws, which the republic must undertake.

"The republic is established in China, and though I am laying down the office of provisional president, this does not mean that I have ceased to work for the cause. After I relinquish my temporary office, still greater matters will demand my attention.

"The subject is much discussed in the world today, but many Chinese are ignorant of what is involved in such a question. They suppose that the object of the regeneration of China is only that we may become a great and powerful nation, and assume equality with the great powers of the west; but such is not the end we have in view.

"At present there are no wealthier countries than Britain and America, and there is no more enlightened country than France. Britain represents a constitutional monarchy; America and France are essentially republics; yet in all these countries the gap between the poor and the wealthy is too great. Therefore it happens that in these countries, also, thoughts of revolution rankle in the minds of many. For if the revolution of society be not effected, the people cannot enjoy their due share of happiness. For capitalists only is reserved the possibility of a peaceful felicity, while those who labor suffer bitterness and distress. Under such conditions there cannot be mutual rest. It may appear to many that revolution against a race, or revolution against a government, are comparatively easy. But the revolution of society is a matter of extreme difficulty, and only people of high attainments can accomplish the desired change.

"Why Not Wait and See? "Some say, 'We have so far proved successful in the Chinese revolution, why not be content to wait and see? Why seek to accomplish what Britain and America, with their wealth and knowledge, have not yet undertaken?' This would be a mistaken policy. In Britain and America civilization is advanced and industry flourishes, hence the difficulty of accomplishing a revolution of society. In China we have not yet reached this stage, therefore such a revolution is easy for us. In Britain and America it is difficult to dislodge the securely entrenched capitalists and their vested interests. In China neither the capitalists nor their vested interests have as yet appeared; hence our revolution of society will be comparatively easy. It is difficult to dislodge the securely entrenched capitalists and their vested interests. In China neither the capitalists nor their vested interests have as yet appeared; hence our revolution of society will be comparatively easy.

established. It will be necessary to change the laws and deeds relating to land. This is a natural corollary of the revolution. Formerly, people owning land paid taxes according to the acreage, distinguishing only between best, medium and common land. In future, taxes will be levied according to the value, not the acreage, of the land. Land in Nanking differs in value from land in the Bund (harbor frontage), in Shanghai, and if you assess it after the old method of three degrees only, there must be palpable injustice. The valuable land is mostly in busy, commercial centres, and being possessed exclusively by the wealthy men to tax it heavily would be no oppression.

"The common land is occupied chiefly by our petty commercial people, for which only a nominal tax can with justice be levied. Industry is now about to be developed in China, commerce will make a rapid advance, and within 50 years there will be many commercial centres equally prosperous as Shanghai. Let us take time by the forelock, making certain that the unearned increment of wealth shall belong to the people, and not to private capitalists or landowners, who might surreptitiously obtain possession of the resources of the soil."

CURIOUS CLARENCE FOUND OUT WHAT WAS AT THE OTHER END OF THE ROPE.

A Sermon On Future Punishment

(By the Rev. T. Manning, Pastor Dundas Centre Methodist Church, London.)

Monday's Advertiser contained a brief report of a sermon on "Future Punishment," preached on the previous Sunday evening, by Rev. Thomas Manning, of the Dundas Centre Methodist Church. As it was impossible in so short a report to convey the setting and atmosphere of so long and closely-reasoned a sermon, it is reproduced in full as follows:

"And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out; it is better for thee to enter into the Kingdom of God with one eye, than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire, where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched."—Mark ix, 47, 48.

The International Bible Students' Association informed the world the other day that there is no hell. Some Christians believe this. Some persons assert that up-to-date ministers of the Gospel don't believe in hell, and do not preach it. I shall present the subject as it appears to me.

There is in the world some knowledge on a great many things. Man has been studying ever since he was created. He must have learned something. He studied astronomy, and knows something. He studied medicine, and knows something. He studied the soul, and knows something. Astronomy made many mistakes, but was on the right line. Medicine made many mistakes, but was on the right line. Psychology made many mistakes, but was on the right line. I know nothing more unreasonable than the belief that man knows something about every science except the one, and this is the one that he has studied as much, perhaps, as all others together. It is fair to say that if man knows anything about anything, he knows something about the soul, its nature and its destiny.

When, therefore, man had brought his intellectual and moral powers to their utmost state of possible perfection, when every faculty of the mind was matured, in art, in logic, in history, what did he conclude was the nature and destiny of the soul? If all knowledge is growth, if all sciences, however crude some of them may be, advance towards the truth, to what conclusions are we conducted by the cultured and powerful minds of the most philosophical and literary age this world has ever known? Listen to Plato: "Seeing, then, that the immortal is indestructible, must not the soul, if she is immortal, be also indestructible? And certainly. Then, when death attacks a man, the mortal portion of him may be supposed to die, but the immortal portion retreats at the approach of death, and is preserved safe and sound. True. Then, Oebes, beyond question the soul is immortal and imperishable, and our souls will truly exist in another world."

"When the soul has communion with divine virtue and becomes divine, she is carried into another and a better place, which is also divine and perfect in holiness; and when she has communion with evil, then she also changes the place of her life."

"For that is the Justice of the Gods who inhabit heaven."

"O youth, or young man, who fancy that you are neglected by the Gods, know that if you become worse you shall go to the worse souls, or if better to the better, and in every case the result will be just what you will deserve. If you are just, you will suffer at the hands of like. This is divine justice, which neither you nor any other unfortunate will ever glory in escaping."

THE TRUE CAUSE OF RHEUMATISM

DUE TO ACID IN THE BLOOD—CAN ONLY BE CURED THROUGH THE BLOOD.

Not many years ago even doctors thought that rheumatism was only a local pain caused by exposure to cold or wet. Now they know that the trouble is caused by the blood becoming tainted with uric acid. This condition of the blood causes the muscles to contract, stiffens the joints and causes the nerves to die. If no promptly treated the stiffness spreads and the pain grows worse until you are a helpless cripple, tortured day and night. If the disease touches the heart it means sudden death. You cannot cure rheumatism with liniments, plasters or hot cloths, as so many try to do. You must go right to the root of the trouble in the blood. The scientific way to cure rheumatism is to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which make new, rich blood that goes right to the root of the trouble. They sweep out the poisonous acid, loosen the aching joints and muscles and bring ease and freedom where before had been pain and misery.

Miss Beulah Sheppy Morrish, Ont., says: "Following an attack of measles I took inflammatory rheumatism. My joints became swollen and the pain was almost unendurable. I doctored with the best doctors but the pain was only relieved while I was taking their medicine, and soon returned. For six months I continued to suffer in this way. Then I tried electric pads, but they failed to do me any good. Finally a friend persuaded me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I had not been taking them long before I found relief. I continued using the Pills for a time and soon found myself in perfect health and feeling like a new person. I never lose an opportunity to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as I cannot say enough in favor of them."

death, if he was mistaken here. You think to hold Christian doctrine together and take this out. You cannot. One, however, is not required to believe anything that shocks the moral sense of humanity. Whittier is right when he says:

"Nothing can be good in him That evil is in me."

Any description of the future state that is unjust is not to be believed. John Wesley said that if high Calvinism is true, God is worse than the devil. If the hell that has often been described in words and in pictures be true, then there is no good God. The North American Indians used to tear off the nails from the fingers and toes of their victims, drive their victims with burning brands through blazing fires, throw their lacerated bodies in the burning coals, gouge out their eyes, disembowel them, eat their flesh and drink their blood. But this is tame sport in comparison to the revivings which God has been said to afford the devils in hell with the damned souls of men. Nebuchadnezzar's seven-times heated furnace, or the molten cylinders of a rolling mill is a playhouse in comparison to the hell sometimes portrayed.

It is not only our duty to disbelieve in such a hell, but it is our duty to repudiate it, and to protest against it with the utmost abhorrence. Now, consider where it is we learn our highest ideals and examples of high justice, and great mercy, and tenderness and pity. Where did we learn to attribute these qualities to the Creator? We learned it from Jesus. And can one believe, then, that he ever taught that God is stripped, not of his common humanity only, but of his own great compassion and love?

Is it hard for us to believe in judgment? It was not hard for Jesus. With Jesus it was most normal and right.

Do you think you are wise and therefore cannot believe it? He was wiser far. Do you think you are humane and pitiful, and therefore cannot believe it? He was more pitiful far. It is not, then, your wisdom nor your love, it is not your greatness, but your littleness, that makes it hard for you to believe it.

Tell me, what have you devised to do finally with a bad man? What would you do with the prodigal son unless he would come back home to his father? Now that his substance is all spent in riotous living, that he is hired to a citizen of the far country, who has sent him into the fields to feed swine, that he would fall full belly with the husks that swine do eat, and no man gives unto him. What will you do with him? What did he say of himself? He said, "I perish with hunger." And perish he should if he had not turned home. What will become of the lost sheep if it is not found and brought back from the wilderness? It will perish. The kingdom of heaven is like a man that cast his net into the sea and gathered of every kind, which when it was full he drew to shore and sat down and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away. What will you do with bad fishes? What will you do with the tares that grow in the wheat? What will you do with bad men? What will you do with liars, thieves, adulterers, murderers? The Valley of Hinnom was the incinerator of Jerusalem, where there was always dead flesh for the worms to live on, and always refuse to be consumed, so that the worm never died and the fire never was quenched. And bad men are the corruption and refuse of the world, and the hell of Jesus is in the moral and spiritual realm what Gehenna was to Jerusalem in the material realm. And comparing spiritual things to natural things, the most perfect destruction of all refuse is the highest civilization and not the lowest. For what is a man advantaged if he gain the whole world and lose himself, or be cast away. For the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels, and then shall he reward every man according to his works.

Finally and briefly, if this doctrine be true it will meet with response in the human conscience. And it does. While Paul reasoned of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come, Felix trembled. And so do I tremble, and so do you. Further, it was to give us eternal life Jesus came and lived and died, and I am not afraid.

"Lord, I believe thy precious blood. Which at the mercy seat of God forever doth for sinners plead. For me, even for my sins was shed."

Lastly, a wise man will lay these things to heart.

Doctors as Civil Servants
Live Question in England

From Public Opinion, London, Eng.

As a result of a meeting of medical men held in Liverpool, it has been decided to form a state medical service association, having for its object the advocacy of a state medical service on the following basis:

(a) The whole profession to be organized on the lines of other state services now in existence.

(b) Entry to the profession to be by one state examination.

(c) Each member of the service to be paid an adequate salary, increasing gradually according to length of service and position in the service, and to be entitled to a pension after a specified number of years, or in the case of a permanent disability.

(d) Members of the public, as far as practicable, to have free choice of doctor, but no doctor to be called upon to have charge of more than a specified number of patients.

(e) One of the primary objects of the state service to be to unite preventive and curative medicine.

(f) All hospitals to be nationalized and placed under the management of the state, and to be open to all patients, at the request of the patient in conjunction with the patient's own doctor.

(g) The services of the state doctors to be open to every man, woman and child—rich or poor.

(h) The state medical service to be administered by a board of health under a minister of public health, with cabinet rank, assisted by expert medical advisers.

The movement was started before the Insurance Act was passed, and is quite independent of the present impasse. Its policy is in no way opposed to the present position, either of Government or medical profession, as it takes quite independent lines.

It is intended that the work of the association shall form a branch of sociological science, and membership is to be open to all prominent sociologists, whether lay or medical.

How To Raise Funds. The Hon. Rollo Russell, writing to the Times, says:

"If we are to have anything like a national medical service, under the Insurance Act or otherwise, it is worth a great deal to make that service willing and efficient. A national health service should demand as much consideration as the army and navy; it should be as well adapted to the conquest of disease as they are for the conquest of human aggression. Its remuneration should be higher, for the preliminary training is more expensive and scientific. But the gross cost of the service, if hygiene and prophylaxis. An addition of £5,000,000 to the first calculated cost of insurance would not be considered excessive for all the medical services, and the medical preventive forces are at least as important for the mere strength of the empire."

"The amount spent in the United Kingdom on unnecessary and harmful liquors, and the loss by disease, poverty, accidents and inefficiency resulting from habits of self-indulgence amount to over £200,000,000 a year. A levy upon these luxuries of 1½ per cent. beyond the 6 shillings per head from the insurance funds would apparently be sufficient to provide an adequate medical service for the insured and to found a system for the promotion of national welfare."

"If the idea were ever realized," says the Times, "it would, of course, embrace the present insurance scheme, which would be merged, so far as medical benefit is concerned, in the general system. In fact, we should have a sort of universal insurance. The doctors would be paid out of public moneys, furnished by taxation, and in return the ratepayer would enjoy the services of a doctor whenever he wanted one."

The Times, however, is against such a scheme, arguing that it affords no scope for individuality, and no room for pioneers. Private medical work, it says, is not routine work, like that of public health.

THE FARM LABOR PROBLEM.

[Catholic Record.]

If an acre of land and a cottage were provided where the farm laborer could live a decent human life in the midst of his own family, the conditions would attract many where present conditions repel them. Each such family would in time provide the help needed both by the farmer and the farmer's wife. The laborer and his family would enjoy the privileges of country life, and the growing sons and daughters would find in the immediate neighborhood suitable work and remuneration together with the blessings of home life.

Whether or not the farmers themselves should provide such facilities for home life for the farm help; or, as in Ireland, the department of agriculture should assist, the question of farm help will never be settled until, like other laborers, the farm laborer has an opportunity to live the normal human life, to provide for a family by his work; in other words, until he receives a living wage.

With the conditions changed as indicated, the money cost of farm help might decrease.

Champlain and the Iroquois
[Rev. T. B. Gregory.]

Champlain's battle with the Iroquois, which took place three hundred and three years ago—July 29, 1609—while a very trifling affair within itself, led to results that were to prove to be of world-wide importance.

As Champlain, with his two white companions and Huron allies, was stealing silently along the west shore of Lake George, near the point now known as Ticonderoga, there were seen by the starlight coming over the waters a fleet of Indian canoes. Each side recognized the other, and the defiant war whoops made up the silence.

It was 10 o'clock, too late for a battle that night, and the parties began to prepare for the fight which they knew would come with the morning's light. Landing at once, the Iroquois began building a barricade, while the invaders cursed them all through the night from their canoes.

Early the next morning Champlain landed and was ready for the attack. It was the first time that the Iroquois had ever seen a white man, and they stood half palsied with terror at sight of the supposedly supernatural disposition of the two Frenchmen on either flank. Champlain stepped out in front of his Indian braves and fired his arquebus, which he had loaded with an extra heavy charge. Two Iroquois chiefs fell dead at once, the Iroquois began building a barricade, while the invaders cursed them all through the night from their canoes.

That was all; a very trifling affair indeed. But the consequences of that insignificant brush in the woods on the shore of Lake George were tremendous. That night was the beginning of the deadly hostility between the French and the strongest Indian power on the North American continent. In the words of the historian, "a few shots from an arquebus on that July morning had secured for Frenchmen the most dangerous enemy and for Dutchmen and Englishmen the most helpful friend that the mysterious American wilderness could afford."

It is possible, if not probable, that but for that fight near Ticonderoga the United States, and indeed, all North America, would be French rather than English. Had Champlain met the French with the pine of peace instead of that fatal arquebus he would have secured their good will and alliance for the days to come, and there is no thing which might have happened during the struggle between France and England for supremacy on this continent if, in addition to the French, the English had had to contend against the powerful Six Nations.

Neither Luther nor Napoleon, nor Abraham Lincoln were anything less than biological surprises. Beethoven, Mozart, and Wagner could no more have been predicted than Shakespeare or Michael Angelo. The surprises of sainthood were no less remarkable than those of genius. St. Francis d'Assisi, Catherine of Siena, and Florence Nightingale had no ancestry for their character and their work.

"In our time, less than ever before in the world's history, is there any definite relation between social efficiency and physical fitness. Some of the most efficient individuals have been born with bad bodies, and have been doomed to poor health. When Emmanuel Kant went to study philosophy in the German University, it is said that he was advised not to attempt the task because of his weak chest. He replied he would ignore his chest, and became the great teacher of the modern intellect. Herbert Spencer was so delicate as a child that he was not given a regular education, but no Englishman has a more marked influence upon his generation. Charles Kingsley was the prophet of muscular Christianity, but Robertson, of Brighton, was the greater preacher. There was a boy born in the Midlands so small and frail that even an English nurse did not think it worth while to keep him alive, but the little chap lived, grew to see an apple fall, and became Sir Isaac Newton. They could not comply with adopting the Greek plan of throwing away unpromising infants."

Problem Would Vanish.
"The most valuable work that should be undertaken by those interested in eugenics is to apply the sense of social solidarity, to the proper care of those children who are born into the world under the terms of the law, but who are not yet born, who are well born, with a wider knowledge of hygiene, a better distribution of wealth and leisure, and a higher sense of personal responsibility on the part of the parents, the problem of heredity, from a physical point of view, would probably vanish."

Dr. Chappin, of the children's department of the Graduate Hospital in New York, investigated 600 cases of children admitted to this institution. They were a sorry lot, gathered together from the slums of New York, and suffering from maimed, deformed and depleted bodies. But when their history was carefully traced out, it was found that only 21 out of the 600 were badly born. The period of infancy among the poor is not only characterized by a terrible death rate, but foul air, improper food, and worse cooking. Sickness and accident rob those who survive of that measure of strength and beauty which is their due."

CAREFUL NOW.
[Howe's Transcript.]
The young wife had given her husband a dance. "You've improved wonderfully, Jack," she said as they sat down. "Don't you remember how you used to, 'bear my dress'?"
"Yes," he replied. "I wasn't buying them then."

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES GARGET IN COWS.

Saves one ton in seven

Figure up your annual coal bill, divide it by seven, and you have the amount the Hecla Furnace will save you every year. The steel-ribbed fire-pot does it. Adding steel ribs to the fire-pot increases its radiating surface three times more than is possible by any other method. The steel-ribbed fire-pot heats the air quicker. It sends the heat through the registers instead of up the chimney. Examine the Hecla. Compare it with other Furnaces. You will find every feature that makes for convenience and ease of operation. But the Hecla is the only one that has the Steel-ribbed Fire-pot—the fire-pot which saves thousands of users one ton of coal in seven.

Section of fire-pot showing ribs of steel plate which save 1 ton in 7.

HECLA FURNACE

No Gas or Dust

Burns wood as well as coal.

And this furnace cannot possibly leak gas or dust. The joints, usually bolted or cemented, are fused in the Hecla in a perfectly tight joint. Time and service cannot loosen the Fused Joint. The fusing welds the Hecla Radiator into one piece.

Our Booklet "Comfort & Health" should be in the hands of everyone who has a heating problem to solve. It will be sent free of charge.

WHO MAKE THE BEST PARENTS?

One of the liveliest papers read at the Eugenic Congress at London, England, was that by Prof. G. Smith, of Minnesota University.

"The great problem of the world," he said, "is not how to bring better babies into the world, but how to take care of such as come. The tragedy of the world, in fact, is spoiled babies."

"Personally, he would sooner have as a father a robust burglar than a consumptive bishop. Society on the whole suffers more from the vices of the rich than from the vices of the poor. Their problem was how to legislate against this. Social efficiency and physical fitness were by no means synonymous terms. While the world owes to its invalids, it would form an interesting treatise. Some abnormality of the flesh almost appeared a pre-requisite of intellect. Nature tries to repair all the damage done in various directions. The great thing to which they should direct their attention was to look after the babies that are born."

Talent Not Inherited.
"It is idle to say that the children of persons of talent are more likely to show ability than children from the average home. Parents of talent are able to give exceptional advantages to their children, and ought to show the greater number of successes. But there is not the slightest evidence that talent of any particular form is ever inherited."

Neither Luther nor Napoleon, nor Abraham Lincoln were anything less than biological surprises. Beethoven, Mozart, and Wagner could no more have been predicted than Shakespeare or Michael Angelo. The surprises of sainthood were no less remarkable than those of genius. St. Francis d'Assisi, Catherine of Siena, and Florence Nightingale had no ancestry for their character and their work."

Herbert Spencer was so delicate as a child that he was not given a regular education, but no Englishman has a more marked influence upon his generation. Charles Kingsley was the prophet of muscular Christianity, but Robertson, of Brighton, was the greater preacher. There was a boy born in the Midlands so small and frail that even an English nurse did not think it worth while to keep him alive, but the little chap lived, grew to see an apple fall, and became Sir Isaac Newton. They could not comply with adopting the Greek plan of throwing away unpromising infants."

Problem Would Vanish.
"The most valuable work that should be undertaken by those interested in eugenics is to apply the sense of social solidarity, to the proper care of those children who are born into the world under the terms of the law, but who are not yet born, who are well born, with a wider knowledge of hygiene, a better distribution of wealth and leisure, and a higher sense of personal responsibility on the part of the parents, the problem of heredity, from a physical point of view, would probably vanish."

Dr. Chappin, of the children's department of the Graduate Hospital in New York, investigated 600 cases of children admitted to this institution. They were a sorry lot, gathered together from the slums of New York, and suffering from maimed, deformed and depleted bodies. But when their history was carefully traced out, it was found that only 21 out of the 600 were badly born. The period of infancy among the poor is not only characterized by a terrible death rate, but foul air, improper food, and worse cooking. Sickness and accident rob those who survive of that measure of strength and beauty which is their due."

CAREFUL NOW.
[Howe's Transcript.]
The young wife had given her husband a dance. "You've improved wonderfully, Jack," she said as they sat down. "Don't you remember how you used to, 'bear my dress'?"
"Yes," he replied. "I wasn't buying them then."

Then take a small Brighton, such as Weston-super-Mare. It is estimated that about 210,000 trippers visit Weston each year, and that the £135,000 "period" holiday makers. Supposing the trippers spend 3s each, you get £21,000; and supposing the period visitors spend 2s each, you get £51,000. Here are some other estimates received from the places concerned of the number of summer visitors. It is not possible to give figures as only estimates, and may prove to be very generous. In fact the fig-city of Mutual Assurance provides, in addition, for a periodical dinner to entertain the members of the festive board as they will afterwards meet at the dissecting table. Jeremy Bentham left his body for public uses; and it is seen to this day in the museum of University College, "placed in a quiet-of-the-way corner and the subject of the most respectful, the most unobtrusiveness of the students." As a dead man he was a bit of a white elephant. Dr. Southwood Smith, to whose credit he fell in the first instance, stuffed him and handed him over to the college, dressed to see company and seated in a chair with his favorite walking-stick in his hand.

Caution and Gallantry.
A Vienna millionaire, who had a horror of darkness, left funds for a perpetual lamp in his tomb. A wealthy American, John A. Washington left a bequest of his money

Franklin, Nathaniel Greene, Stephen Hopkins and many others that might be mentioned were Quakers.

The first schools south of New England were established by Quakers, and the general civilizing work done by them was immense.

As humanitarians they take second place to none. Against slavery, war and the exploitation of humanity, against intemperance, brutality and the vices of a maladministration in government, they have from the very beginning of their existence arrayed themselves in solid phalanx.

There are probably 50,000 Quakers in the great republic, and if the rest of the people made as little trouble on the social scale as so finely on the moral, they should have a little for others, policemen and preachers.

HELD EIGHT HOURS OVER PRECIPICE

Brother's Amazing Feat Saves
His Sister—May Lose Reason.

An exciting adventure, in which great devotion was shown, befell a party of three mountain climbers near Grenoble, France, the other day, when a brother held his sister on the edge of a precipice for eight hours until help arrived.

M. Van Goethen, a Belgian engineer, aged 35, and his sister, aged 22, accompanied by a friend, M. Sombardier, climbed the well-known mountain, Sauroise, in the Bellfontaine range.

On the way down, instead of returning the usual way, they took a path over the other side, passing over the dome-like glacier.

alled for help, but their cries were not heard.

At length M. Sombardier went to search for Revel, the nearest village, some three hours' walk distant, while M. Van Goethen set his teeth and clung desperately to his sister. It was then 2 p.m.

Eight hours later M. Sombardier returned with a rescue party and found his friend still holding his sister up.

As soon as she was brought back into safety he fainted. Mile. Van Goethen's face was as white as death, and he had to be taken to Revel the next morning on a stretcher. It is feared that she will succumb to an injury which she sustained during the terrible slide down the glacier. Her brother's condition is also alarming and may end in mental derangement.

HOW TO RESCUE A DROWNING PERSON

Some Simple Rules That May
Save Lives of Drowning
People and Rescuers.

Many thousands of people at the sea are being irresistibly attracted to enjoy the pleasures of bathing there-in, some, alas! sadly ignorant of the art of swimming.

A few hints to those who can swim and who will find themselves bathing with or near indifferent swimmers and non-swimmers will be of opportunity, and may prove of service.

Some of the methods suggested may be put into practice by those who have not had a training in the orthodox methods of life-saving. For instance, if a feeble swimmer finds that he cannot touch the bottom, he may lose his nerve, his breathing is thereby disturbed; and he becomes a subject for assistance; this may be given by getting beside and a little behind him, putting the right thumb in his left armpit, or vice versa, and pushing him gently along, at the same time giving him an encouraging word to persevere.

If, however, he should be exhausted, the best plan will be to get behind him, seize his arms near the elbow, and tow him to safety, using the back stroke.

Towing the Unconscious.

If a person is quite unconscious in the water, his head should be supported between the hands above the surface, the back stroke being the feet of the person supported have a tendency to hang down, especially if they are clothed and have boots on.

Another method of carrying an unconscious person of particular use to those who can swim well upon the side, is to put the upper arm across the chest of the drowning person, with the hand in the opposite armpit, and holding him closely to your own body, to swim with the lower arm and the legs in the usual manner. In this way a subject can be carried at quite a good pace.

When Helping a Struggling Swimmer.
Conscious persons, especially if struggling, should be approached from behind. If clothed, get a good grip of their sleeves at the elbow, but if they are in bathing dress, the thumbs round, their body getting the thumbs round, up on to their shoulders, and bring their arms up square. This will effectively prevent their seizing you. Should you be seized by the wrists in either case swim by the back-stroke. Whilst attempting to assist a person in distress, straighten your arms at once, and "back away" with your feet, so as to prevent them catching hold of you with their legs; then carry the hands forcibly, first downward, and then round in quarter circles, to the surface, and they will be forced to release you as your action will twist their thumbs open.

If seized round the neck or body, kick your legs backward and upward, place the palm of your hand on their chin, and your fingers over their mouth, catching their nose between your first and second fingers, push and hold their head back under water; if this is not sufficient to make them release you, bring your knee up and place it against their body and push them forcibly away from you.

Frequent reference has been made to the back stroke, which may be briefly described. The principal propelling force is derived from a kick outward, using the front or top of the foot and the front of the shin; the feet are wide apart, and should be brought smartly together, the insides of the feet giving further propulsion. Each foot thus works in a series of "V" shapes. The bending of the legs backward should be a gentle movement, and their extension and closing forceful.

The limbs should not be moved up and down from the hip joint, and a tendency for the hips to drop so as to make the swimmer assume a sitting position must be overcome. Ladies and girls as a rule swim better in this style than do boys and men.

Practicing Life-Saving.

No practical life-saving can be taught by the use of a dummy. When held by another person, or being held by another person in the water, the balance of both is affected, and the efforts necessary to regain the balance tend to make both better "watermen." Dummies, of course, are useful when practicing, but the methods of releasing one's self, are soon regarded as being "all in the game."

defeat—to life or to death. It is all because human personality still tells, and so it will be to the end of time.

The Count de Bylandt.

AND thus it is that when you find yourself at a dinner table next to some of the most interesting man or woman, especially to one who has been at the centre of affairs, the simplest words they say produce a more profound and more enduring impression upon you than a whole library. This is what happened to me on that particular evening when I found myself next to Count de Bylandt. I have always been an ardent student of the whole Napoleon legend, and immediately recollecting that Louis Napoleon, the brother of the great emperor, and the husband of Eugenie, seemed one everlasting vortex of opulent and dazzling entertainment, and that when a great French exposition came, Louis Napoleon could boast like the great emperor, that his actors played before a nature and fortune for the throne, never did a country seem to reach a higher plane of prosperity, happiness, and tranquility than under his rule. I remember still the awe with which I heard a journalist of distinction declare that he had once met Louis Napoleon, and how he spoke as the man of men who had proved his divine natural right to reign.

"Did you ever see Louis Napoleon?" I asked my ambassador, meaning, of course, the Louis Napoleon of our times, who was Emperor of the French.

"Yes," said the ambassador, "once, and then in his coffin."

It was a blow right between the eyes, for by a curious coincidence I saw Louis Napoleon at once, and then it was in his coffin. Never can I forget that strange day when I started from Charing Cross Station, and a crowd so vast as to compel one to fight one's way through it to the railway carriages, when London poured forth in multitudes to see down to Camden House, Chislehurst, and have a glimpse of Louis Napoleon as he lay in state in his coffin. I did not know any of the people who were in the train; I was young and obscure and shy, and had made few acquaintances, and I was going there not even as a representative of any newspaper, but as my lonely and unemployed self, just to get in touch with one of the great dramas of my time.

IT IS difficult to get this generation to realize what a part Louis Napoleon played in the world of the sixties and early seventies. The extraordinary vicissitudes of his career, winding up even disaster, the imperial crown of France, were sufficient to make him out as one of the instances of the everlasting melodrama of real life. He was what you like, an adventurer, highwayman, perjurer, tyrant, but he was the hero of a great romance. The crown may have come to the head of a Dick Turpin, but Dick Turpin is always the darling of mankind, and so we looked upon Napoleon. But you have to add to all this, that for nearly twenty years he occupied a position in some respects, almost as commanding as that of his mighty uncle. He was the foremost figure of Europe. On his slightest word seemed to depend the gigantic issues of peace or war, whether the map of Europe should be cut up into this new shape or that, whether this year should end in tranquility or in world-shaking convulsion.

Silent, enigmatic, with the face of a sphinx he haunted and obsessed the imagination of all Europe. Sometimes he seemed to be the friend and sometimes the enemy of every country in Europe. Italy looked to him for her liberation; Prussia (there was no Germany in those days), wondered whether he would crush her while she was still weak, or allow her to grow strong; Austria trembled before him; Russia was subdued by him, and even we ourselves were now and then in panics. Martello towers on various coasts, English and Irish, are the still surviving monuments. And then on top of all this, add that Paris was made by Louis Napoleon, the most beautiful and also the most fascinating capital in Europe; that the Emperor's court, with the matchless beauty of Eugenie, seemed one everlasting vortex of opulent and dazzling entertainment, and that when a great French exposition came, Louis Napoleon could boast like the great emperor, that his actors played before a nature and fortune for the throne, never did a country seem to reach a higher plane of prosperity, happiness, and tranquility than under his rule. I remember still the awe with which I heard a journalist of distinction declare that he had once met Louis Napoleon, and how he spoke as the man of men who had proved his divine natural right to reign.

Shattering the Illusion.

NEVER mind that, at the same time, or rather toward the end of the reign, authors and journalists began to thunder against Louis Napoleon, that Victor Hugo remained on his rocky home at Guernsey rather than bow the knee to the tyrant, that Republican politicians still spoke with a shudder of the pool of blood in which the empire had taken its rise at the coup d'état of December 1851; these were voices whose tiny protests were drowned in the universal chorus of applause from the united voice of Europe. Louis Napoleon was the great and romantic, the daring and the successful adventurer, who had proved the power of his strong arm to govern a country. The debacle came in 1870, as everybody knows, but a few people realize, it was like the sudden fall of some mighty pillar that had lifted its daring head to the stars and seemed everlasting, and indestructible. (Of all the great illusions of my time, no illusion was shattered amid so much and such universal amazement and surprise.

In His Coffin.

SUCH, then, was my inner feeling when I went down to Chislehurst to see the man dead who had so haunted my imagination and the imagination of my contemporaries when living. Like the rest of the crowd, I was not given much time to gaze on the historic figure. Around and about the house I saw dark and somewhat stern faces of men, and some of them, I was told, were the old and venerable spirits that had aided Louis Napoleon to capture by assault and then to retain his crown. I had a curious impression as I looked on what the hold in which pirates who had boarded a great ship; conquered and killed when necessary, its crew, and then took possession of the ship and all the wealth it contained. It was really seen through the mighty glasses of my recollections of the pirate stories that beguile youthful imaginations. And then I formed one of the endless procession that passed through the chamber in which the body lay. The whole thing was arranged with that combination of beauty and simplicity which is characteristic of all French art—literary, artistic and spectacular—art—candles stood burning before the bier, nuns in their black and white habits knelt beside, tall guardsmen stood, and in the midst of it all, dressed in uniform, lay the dead emperor, astonishingly like what I expected, with the great beaked nose, the light eyebrows, the waxed moustache and narrow slit of hair below the chin which came to be known as the "imperial" in my youth, and which so many people affected, the expression of the face with the closed eyes one of unspeakable tranquility, and

NOW GOOD DIGESTION WAIT ON APPETITE AND HEALTH ON BOTH

When there is imperfect digestion and faulty assimilation of food, health and its attendant feeling of well being are absent. A very large majority of the ills with which man is afflicted are traceable to bad digestion or poor assimilation of food and the nearer we get to perfect digestion and the complete absorption of the nutritive part of our food the nearer we are to full health.

The question how best to assist the working of the alimentary system has long been a problem of science and recent experiments made at the Dublin School of Physiology have thrown valuable light on the subject. Professor Thompson's crucial tests proved that when Bovril is added to ordinary diet the body absorbs extra nourishment to the extent of from ten to twenty times the amount of Bovril taken. C-12 what struck me most, a tiny, beautiful white handkerchief, in the crossed hands.

"My Uncle His Father."

YOU will see what a great store of memories the Count de Bylandt raised in my mind, at once tumultuous with these thoughts, when he told me that he also had seen the Emperor on the same day and in the same circumstances. As I was recalling the whole solemn scene, I found myself asking another and a daring question. "Who was his father?" asked I. Another and even more stunning blow between the eyes came in the answer: "My uncle."

I heard the story before, in the radical journals, especially in the Lanterne, the terrible paper in which Henry Rochefort mined and sapped and finally helped to pull down the empire and the emperor, but I had paid little heed to it. Already I had learned to discount the portraits of political opponents that figured in political oratory and political journalism, but here, said quietly at a dinner table, and by a man in evident good faith and without any bias, here was confirmation of the awful story which I had never believed. And then the ambassador proceeded to say that he had never been convinced of this until he had seen Napoleon, and then the likeness between father and son was un-

Dr. Roy C. Andrews, curator of the American Museum of Natural History, has lately returned from an expedition to Japan and Korea. In the latter country he traversed unexplored territory, one of the features of which was a great forest of larches and birches, through which the party travelled for three weeks.

Spain is to follow the example of other continental countries and become the owner of its railways. As Spanish railways have been notorious for delays and poor management, travellers will hope that the change promises improvement in service.
