RUSSIANS TAKE UP OFFENSIVE ON LONG FRONT BELOW PRIPET

Begin Advance Against Austrians Over 250 Miles.

TAKE 13,000 PRISONERS

Army of Archduke Joseph Ferdinand Under Fire.

WILL HELP THE ITALIANS

Report From Vienna Indicates Alarm Over the Situation.

LONDON, June 5.—What is believed to be the long contemplated Russian offensive against the Germans and Austrians commenced Sunday on a front extending from the Pripiet marshes south to the Rumanian frontier, a distance of 250 miles.

The official Petrograd announcement of operations says 13,000 prisoners have been taken.

The front is held by Austrians and Hungarians, part of it by the army commanded by Archduke Joseph Ferdinand, which, the Austrian statement says, was under fire.

The offensive comes at a time when it is likely to prove of great aid to the Italians who are hard pressed by the Austrians.

The Russian announcement says: "The German artillery has bombarded the Ikskul bridgehead. In the Dvinsk region north of the Poniwesch railway the enemy following guns and fire, attempted an offensive, but was repulsed."

Began Sunday Morning.

"Sunday morning an engagement began on the front from the Pripiet to the Rumanian frontier, supported by artillery. Our troops obtained successes in many important sectors, and took 13,000 prisoners and a number of guns and machine guns. In the development of the engagement our artillery destroyed successive enemy shelter works, enabling our infantry to capture enemy positions. In the course of the fighting our brave commanders, Col. Lourie, was killed, and Col. Vontsigier was seriously wounded."

Vienna Alarmed.

"Sunday, June 5.—Via Berlin.—The Russians began heavy artillery actions over a large part of the front this morning, the war office announced today. There are signs of impending infantry attacks. The announcement follows:

"The enemy's artillery this morning entered into action on the whole Russian front, but did no damage to the Austro-Hungarian forces. Everywhere there were signs of impending infantry attacks."

With undiminished violence, the Germans continued their attacks last night along the Verdun front east of the Meuse. The war office report of this afternoon says these assaults were unsuccessful.

Belgrave Minister Is Side-Tracked for Anglican—Not Military Church.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

KINGSTOWN, June 5.—Compared with the discussions which took place this afternoon in the London Methodist Conference on the question of discrimination against Methodists in the appointment of chaplains, the reference to the subject on Thursday last was a preliminary matter, a slight skirmish preceding a big engagement.

The program was progressing towards an uneventful conclusion for the afternoon when the explosion came in the form of a memorial emanating from Strathroy district to the effect that while Dr. Long of the army and navy board of the church, had stated that according to enlistment figures the appointment of Methodist chaplains for the Dominion was in proportion to the number of Methodists who had enlisted, the London Conference was conscious of some allotment had not provided in No. 1 Military District, which is practically co-existent with the London Conference.

While exact enlistment figures are not available, the Methodist population is 154,475; the Presbyterian 140,321; and the Anglican 84,537.

The Memorial.

"We cannot believe," said the memorial, "that patriotism and willingness to sacrifice is less strong among the Methodists than others. The number of Methodists who have made application to be appointed chaplains is 18 ministers and probationers. Five have been recommended to the military authorities by the army and navy board. Not one has received an appointment to a battalion within Military Division No. 1. There appears to be unfair discrimination in appointment."

In view of this, a protest was proposed and an appeal to the authorities of church and state, to be forwarded to the army and navy board, Col. Shannon, district commanding officer, and Major-General Sir Sam Hughes.

Seconding the adoption of the motion Rev. Dr. Dougall of London, stated that the one chaplain belonging to London Conference, Rev. Prof. Graham of (Continued on Page Three.)

Captain Hugh Niven of the Famous Pats Is Among Wounded

Distinguished London Officer in Casualty List From Battle of Hooge.

Capt. Hugh Niven of this city is reported among the wounded on last night's casualty lists. This is the second time the famous officer of the Princess Pats has been hurt. About a year ago he was struck in the arm by a shot, but escaped serious injury. Capt. Niven has been repeatedly mentioned in dispatches for the courage and resourcefulness with which he has led his men in action. In addition the leading military writers in their accounts of what the Canadians have accomplished in Flanders have invariably featured his work. Some of the fiercest fights recounted are those in which Capt. Niven and his men took a leading part.

Frederick Palmer, the famous war correspondent, who lectured in London in the winter, made special mention of Capt. Niven's work, and in his war books and stories of the battles the London officer is mentioned often.

The accounts of the fights he has been in show that Capt. Niven has had numerous escapes. He is now one of the few survivors of the

CANADIANS COMPELLED TO GIVE GROUND BEFORE TERRIFIC BOMBARDMENT

Unable to Hold Positions Recaptured From the Germans at Ypres—Enemy Holds Mile of Front, Within a Depth of 350 Yards—Canadian Losses Heavy.

[Canadian Press Cable.]

LONDON, June 6.—3:26 a.m.—The Times' correspondent at British headquarters, describing the situation at Ypres, explains that the Canadian forces were unable to retain their ground recaptured from the Germans last Saturday owing to the intensity of the German artillery fire. The correspondent concludes his dispatch by saying: "You must be prepared to hear that the Canadian losses have been very heavy."

"As soon as they had re-occupied the trenches and killed or driven off the enemy," the correspondent says, "the Canadians found themselves again under the same terrific artillery fire as had preceded the first enemy assault on Friday. Everywhere the trenches themselves were either demolished by gunfire or heaped with dead. To hold the positions now was impossible, for the mere reason that no one there could live."

Germans Retain a Mile.

"The Germans are now in possession of a mile of front to a depth in places of three hundred and fifty yards back from the original Canadian front line."

"It is considered by competent judges that the character of the bombardment here during the last two or three days represents the high-water mark thus far attained on the western front. It has certainly been, and continues to be, of the most terrific severity. It has been so marked as to almost create a new phase in the war. The scale on which guns and ammunition were used is almost incredible judged by any standard of experience."

No Finer Gallantry.

"Whatever the outcome of the present fighting may be you must be prepared to hear that the Canadian losses have been very heavy. As compensation for their losses the Canadians have the satisfaction of knowing that no troops could have shown finer gallantry than theirs. Their spirit is splendid."

CLOSE POOLROOMS, REGISTER ALL MEN TO HELP RECRUITING

Officers Frame Suggestions for Militia Department.

NIAGARA, June 5.—Lieutenant-colonels from all overseas battalions in this district, Brig.-Gen. Logie and the headquarters staff and Lieut.-Col. C. S. McInnis, headquarters, Ottawa, today discussed plans for recruiting. The prevailing opinion was that national registration, which meant that men who ought not to enlist would be singled from those who should offer their services, was the proper means by which Canada's voluntary contribution to the allied armies would reach the maximum.

Major Williams, chief recruiting officer of the district, left for Ottawa, with the suggestions made by the different commanders. The principal suggestions are: The suppression of poolrooms in the province; co-operation of industrial organizations with the military department; requiring out passport; suppression of news detrimental to recruiting; and the issuance of special buttons to those exempt from military service by reason of other work for the Empire.

MUCH SHELLING. SAYS WAR OFFICE.

LONDON, June 6.—12:04 a.m.—The British official communication issued early this morning says:

"There is no material change at Zillebeke. The night (Sunday) passed quietly, but today (Monday) there has been a good deal of shelling by both sides. The enemy made a small night attack in this locality, but was easily repulsed. On the other parts of the line several minor enterprises were carried out by both sides. The enemy made a raid near Belleuse after a heavy bombardment. Some few casualties were caused to our troops before the enemy retired, leaving his dead."

"A second hostile raid was attempted after a mine explosion northeast of Arras, but it was unsuccessful. The enemy was driven back and we occupied the crater. Our infantry entered German trenches in five different places between Chuichy and Fauquissart. Two of our parties were particularly successful in causing loss to the hostile garrison, killing 40 of the enemy."

"Mine warfare continues actively in the sector from Hulluch to Givenchy. Five mines have been sprung by us as one by the enemy during the past hours."

71ST BATTALION IS RUSHING TO FRONT, BUT AS DRAFT UNITS

Number of Wives of Woodstock Men on Way to Old Land for Good-Byes.

[Special to The Advertiser.] WOODSTOCK, June 5.—That the 71st Battalion will soon be in France was the word received by cable here today by Mrs. Martin from her husband at Bramshott Camp, England.

The message stated that the 71st had been broken up and that drafts were being sent to France to reinforce the 18th. Mrs. Martin stated that she expected to go across about July 1.

The cable read: "Come over as soon as you can. Battalion broken up and will go to front early in July."

A number of the wives of members of the 71st left last week, and Mrs. Martin and others will leave this Thursday. While other battalions have been broken up in England it was expected that Col. Sutherland would be allowed to take his battalion intact to the front. However, today's cable seems to make it definite that the battalion is to be separated.

AUSTRIANS FAIL IN EFFORT TO CARRY ITALIAN POSITION; REPULSED WITH HEAVY LOSS

ROME, June 5, via London.—5:06 p.m.—Austrian attacks in the Lagarina valley, where a vigorous attempt was made to carry the important Italian position at Con Zugna, were repulsed with heavy losses. The Austrians were driven back while endeavoring to advance in the Posina sector, the report states.

An Italian retirement under an attack by superior forces in Cengio zone is admitted.

The text of the statement is as follows: "In the Dalgone valley, on June 3, enemy detachments attacked by surprise our advanced positions in the region of Mager Staloletto, but on the arrival of reinforcements we counter-attacked and put the enemy to flight. "In the Ledro valley there was intense but ineffective artillery activity by the enemy."

Austrian Ruse Fails.—"In the Lagarina valley, after the customary bombardment with the heaviest of projectiles, the Austrians yesterday attempted a diversion against the section of the front between Monte Gioia and Terno while making a real attack upon our Con Zugna position, but was repulsed with heavy losses."

"In the Posina sector there has been an artillery duel and skirmishes between small detachments."

Along the front between Posina and the Astico, the enemy's vigorous artillery preparation, repeated his violent efforts in the direction of Monte Alba and Col. Posina. A desperate struggle ensued, and the enemy infantry, decimated by our fire, fell back in disorder.

Obliged to Retire.—"In the Cengio zone, on Saturday night, the enemy, attacking with decidedly superior forces, compelled our troops to evacuate their position and retire on the line of the Camaglia valley where they have been reinforced. We retain possession of the western slopes of Monte Cengio as far as Schiri. Two violent enemy attacks on the same night against these positions broke down."

"On the remainder of the front, as far as the Brenite, there has been an artillery duel."

"On the Isorno front, our detachments, by daring raids, secured good booty in the form of prisoners and weapons."

MOTHERS' CLUBS ARE DOING GREAT WORK FOR CITY CHILDREN

Splendid Reports Received at the Annual Meeting.

MRS. HUGHES PRESIDENT

Every school in the city was represented at the annual meeting of the Union of Mothers' Clubs of London, held in the Ryerson School last evening, when reports for all the mothers' clubs were received and officers for the Union of Mothers' Clubs elected for the coming year.

The officers elected for the coming year were: President, Mrs. (Dr.) F. W. Hughes (re-elected); vice-president, Mrs. Stanley (re-elected); secretary, Mrs. Tait (This is Mrs. Tait's third consecutive term as secretary); press reporter, Mrs. Gemmell.

The reports received from the clubs of the different schools showed that each is doing excellent work in branches of the Red Cross work. The increase in membership reported by the majority of the clubs indicates that the women of London are taking a greater interest in the work of the clubs in solving problems which every mother must face in raising her children. A feature of the past year was the number of addresses delivered to the clubs by many well-known local speakers on subjects connected with the raising and educating of children.

Are Very Active.—The reports of the secretaries of the schools aroused much favorable comment from the audience. Empress Avenue School's club showed that it had a membership of 112, and had been very active during the past year. Victoria School collected $108 during the past season, with which it aided the Red Cross and other organizations.

Wortley Road, for a small school, did well, with 81 members. Chesley Avenue presented an excellent report, showing that the work done by the club was of a high order.

Lorne Avenue, with its 35 members, collected $63.61 during the year, which it put to good use. Rectory Street has 24 members, who are working hard for the Red Cross. In presenting the Rectory Street report, the secretary of that school spoke with regard to the accident to Ed Arnett, the janitor.

Princess Avenue has a membership of 59. Since Street, with its 29 members, has also had a busy year. The Mothers' Club of this school sent each of the boys of the school who was at the front a box containing luxuries for Christmas dinner.

The paid membership of Alexandra School is only 28, but the average attendance at the meetings is between 50 and 60, and so this school had been able to accomplish much more work than would appear possible at first glance. For a club which has been organized only a few months, the Boyle Memorial Mothers' Club is doing good work, and has at present 50 members. Ealing is another new club which has prospered greatly since its formation. Ealing has now 45 members. Talbot Street, St. George's and Aberdeen also showed that they had spent a busy and profitable year.

The Annual Report.—The annual report of the Union of Mothers' Clubs was then presented by the secretary, Mrs. Tait, which showed that financially the club was strong, and that the membership of over 500 women. Requests were received from Mrs. A. T. Edwards for assistance for the Red Cross Hospital in presenting supplies for the Western University Hospital, and Mrs. Tanner of the Y. W. C. A. for furnishings for a tent, which the Y. W. C. A. will place in the camp for the use of women-friends of the soldiers who are visiting the camp.

Mrs. Palmer, president of the Ealing Club, proposed that the Union should send flowers to Mr. Arnett, janitor of the Rectory Street School, who was injured on Sunday, which was carried. The prizes offered to Aberdeen, Alexandra, Chesley Avenue, Princess

Holland Will Not Provide Meat For the Teutons

LONDON, June 5.—The Dutch ministry of agriculture has decided to prohibit the export of meat and cattle, says a Dutch dispatch to Reuters from The Hague.

Avenue, Pottersburg, Rectory Street, Simcoe, St. George's, Talbot, Tecumseh, Wortley Road, and Victoria School for Training and Domestic Science, were turned over to representatives from these schools, to be presented to the winners. The meeting last evening was well attended, and great interest was evinced in the working of each of the clubs by all those who were present. During the coming year it is expected that the total membership of all the clubs will be greatly increased.

CHATHAM BELIEVES SUPPOSED SUICIDE IS NOT WITH DEAD

Young Lady Says She Saw Cadyre in Detroit.

[Special to The Advertiser.] CHATHAM, June 5.—Friends of James Cadyre of Colbourne street, this city, who, according to a report from Windsor, was thought to have committed suicide by jumping in the Detroit River, are inclined to the theory that the Chatham man is still alive.

A young girl, who resides in Colbourne street, visited in Detroit yesterday and states that she is certain she saw Mr. and Mrs. Cadyre in Detroit during the afternoon.

It appears that Cadyre's wife left for Detroit Saturday morning to attend the funeral of her brother-in-law on Wednesday, Detroit, and that she left word for her husband that she would either telegraph or telephone immediately upon her arrival. Not receiving any word by Saturday night Mr. Cadyre is said to have become uneasy and left at once for Detroit.

Cadyre was with the 70th Battalion for about three months, receiving his discharge on account of sickness in the family. He is forty-two years of age and has nine children.

CRAIG'S DISMISSAL INTERESTS COUNTY

[Special to The Advertiser.] GUELPH, June 5.—An echo of the dismissal of the commanding officer of the Wellington Battalion, Lieut.-Col. Craig, was heard when the Wellington County Council opened its June session here this morning.

Reeve Dale of Harristown was the man who opened the attack. He pointed out that, according to the press, the commanding officer had been dismissed because of charges made against him by the recruiting league, with which many of the members of the county council were connected.

"I was surprised to see that the recruiting league made the charges," said Reeve Dale. "I think the council of the county is entitled to know what these charges are, and who it is that has made them. If no explanation is offered, I think a motion should be brought in stating that we are entitled to know why the president, vice-president and other members are not conversant with the charges on which Col. Craig was dismissed."

At this point, ex-Warden Graef, vice-president of the league, rose and stated that the first intimation that he had of the colonel's dismissal was when he had seen it in the public press. No meeting of the league had been held, he claimed, where any charges against Col. Craig had been brought up and discussed.

"Why didn't you refute it?" inquired Reeve Dale.

"We hadn't time to refute it," shot back the ex-warden.

County Clerk Beattie, an officer of the recruiting league, made the announcement here that county members of these take charge of the work in St. Andrew's Hall one day a week, and directs the labors of the many women who come and toil making comforts for the wounded.

At this to be fashioned into garments in less than three weeks. When one ponders on this the magnitude of the work one becomes grateful.

Five Auxiliaries.—There are five Red Cross auxiliaries in London at present, the north, east, south and west, and the central. Each of these take charge of the work in St. Andrew's Hall one day a week, and directs the labors of the many women who come and toil making comforts for the wounded.

At this to be fashioned into garments in less than three weeks. When one ponders on this the magnitude of the work one becomes grateful.

NEED MORE WOMEN TO MAKE SUPPLIES FOR "U" HOSPITAL

Immense Quantity of Sewing Has To Be Done.

RED CROSS VERY BUSY

St. Andrew's Hall Thronged With Women Working for Soldiers.

To equip a hospital with the greater part of the linen required for beds, dressing, operating room use, and for a thousand and one other purposes, hot water bottles, covers, handkerchiefs, towels, etc., within a month is no light order, and is one which many a department store would turn down. But with the announcement that the Western University Hospital had been accepted, the local Red Cross Society immediately offered to supply the necessary linen equipment, and its offer was gratefully accepted by the authorities, who recognized the difficulty of outfitting a hospital at short notice.

When the Red Cross workers agreed to equip the hospital, they depended on the women of London for support in making the garments required and aiding in the work. For were they the women of the patriots of the London women. Ever since the war commenced the women of the city have been making supplies for the Red Cross.

More Are Needed.—The local Red Cross Society has contracted to supply 200 boxes of supplies each month, and above this number they agreed to outfit the University Hospital with 500 cases in one month. To accomplish this necessitated many extra hands at work, and to secure these workers Lady Beck issued a call a few weeks ago to all women of London who could come to St. Andrew's Hall and aid in the work. This appeal brought many who had not attended meetings, but many more are required.

There are some people who are of the opinion that the Red Cross workers and the women of this district are really not doing as much as one would at first think. Others believe that the Red Cross is overworked now and that the supplies will not be of as high a grade as required. Both these amounts of work on hand. Both these ideas may be banished at once.

The Red Cross is undoubtedly one of the best organized of all women's associations in Canada. Its organization is perfect to the last detail. No point is too small to be overlooked and none too large to have each detail minutely looked after. The officers of the Red Cross agreed to supply the supplies for the University Hospital because they were certain that they could rely upon the organization not to fail them at a critical time.

Huge Supplies.—The university hospital requires more than 13,000 articles, which will be packed into 500 boxes. All these articles will be made and packed in less than three weeks from date, and the majority of the articles will be made at one of the Red Cross meeting places, although some of the knitted garments are being allowed to be made at home. Remember that this is outside of the regular monthly shipment of 200 boxes.

The total cost of these supplies is being borne by the Red Cross organization in London. The linen supplies amount to a total cost of $2,000, with this must be added $2,000 for a special motor ambulance, which the society is giving to the hospital and which will meet them on their arrival in England.

When the amount of material used is considered the order goes larger: 24,000 pounds of gauze, 2,000 of absorbent cotton, 2,000 yards of factory cotton, 600 yards of duck for bagging, and yesterday 2,000 dozen spoons of thread were ordered.

Cynthia Grey's Mail-Box

[Correspondents are requested to make their inquiries as brief as possible, and to write on one side of the paper only. It is impossible to give replies within a stated time, as all letters have to be answered in turn. No letter can be answered privately.]

STAIN ON IVORY.

Dear Miss Grey—Kindly advise me through your column how to remove a stain on Parisian Ivory, caused by the spilling of a bottle of perfume and oil. E. M.

Ans.—It is too bad your ivory had such a misfortune; afraid I have no suggestions to make for removing the stain. Has anyone else taken out such a mark satisfactorily? Sorry I can't help, E. M.

A Fragrant Token.

The other day the morning mail brought me a box of fragrant lilies of the valley, and some sunny-faced girls from "A Grandmother." Please accept my warmest thanks for them and the kindly thought which prompted their sending. A bit wilted? Yes but they speedily revived in water.

Wants Song "Daddy."

Dear Miss Grey—Just noticed in the paper where "Stranger Within Your Gates" wanted my address, so am sending it along, also a stamped addressed envelope for the song called "Daddy" if you have it. I would like the words if you have them to spare. BLACK BEAUTY.

Ans.—Haven't the words on hand just now. Can anyone supply them? Your address has been forwarded. Re your inquiry: One at least. Wonder if you know each other?

Laurie Recommends.

Dear Miss Grey—Here I come both-ering you and all "the page" readers again. So you don't like the beauty contest idea. Well, I don't blame you at all. I guess nobody else did, either—at least, nobody but you had anything to say about it. Now, Miss Grey, for a confession: I'm not a girl, as you took me to be. I'm a boy, but not one of "Would-be Pollyanna's" mischievous ones. That reminds me, I'd like to correspond with "Would-be Pollyanna," if that is, if she would consent. I'll promise her I won't do as her brother did. I see where my aunt also wrote to your page, giving the recipe for dandelion wine. Believe me, folks, it's awful good! I'd advise you to try it. I know, and speak from experience. LAURIE.

Cookies Won't Keep.

Dear Miss Grey—Will you let me make a visit to your Mail-Box? Mamma made some of Mrs. Home-bird's cookies, and after she put them in the oven they raised and then fell. Is it because she didn't put enough flour in them? Papa said to tell you there was something wrong with the recipe because they wouldn't keep. I should like to join the circus troupe. I can dance, whistle or sing. Which one do they need the worst?

A BLACKBIRD.

Ans.—Perhaps your mother's oven was not quite hot enough, or it may be she thought the more flour was needed. But I don't believe the cookies were entirely spoiled! Your papa evidently gets hungry between meals, and when he's hungry he's cranky. In all your queries, a pretty muslin in light or dainty color on light ground would seem more suitable for church wear. But it depends a bit on the custom of your neighborhood. You write very well indeed.

Advices New Stone.

Dear Miss Grey—May I suggest to "Kentucky Nell" to get hubby to order the groceries for a month, and serve his master accordingly. The result may open his eyes.

But, sure, it is paying the longest price to buy one's pie and cake, pickles, canned fruit, etc.

I'd get another stove, new or not so new, on trial, until proven satisfactory. And have the pleasure of doing my own cooking! You're even "bored" and ultimately pay the price of the stove in the saving effort. It would not take so very long, either. MRS. MAC.

Wants the Song.

Dear Miss Grey—I saw where one of the readers offered the song, "A Mother's Lullaby for Her Son." I am enclosing self-addressed and stamped envelope for it, as I would very much like to get it; also "The Spanish Cavalier." SHI ANN.

Ans.—Who offered this song?

Hope to receive it for "Shy Ann." Using your hints elsewhere, "S. A."

Doing Their Bit.

Dear Miss Grey—After reading "Hepzibah's" letter I couldn't keep my pen still. If she'd come out in the country we would work as hard as her laziness of, taking the place of some of the boys in uniform. She certainly doesn't know much about the farm, or she wouldn't ask for such a discussion. Our village, with only one church and store, has sent fifteen, some already in France; several weren't able to pass the doctors. The farmers' boys are being put for putting up with the help they are glad to get—old men and school-boys.

Sunshine in the Trenches.

Dear Miss Grey—I have just finished reading your page, so decided to call on you again. Here's hoping all is well with Mail-Box and circle of readers. I have taken the liberty of writing a few cheery words to "Aunt Nanny," having secured her address through your valuable columns. I do hope that the authorities at Ottawa deal with her case in the right manner, and that the "Pier Keepers" don't until they go. Our chief thought out here is for the welfare of those at home, and "Aunt Nanny" should not be allowed to make sacrifices in vain. I trust that I have not intruded when writing to her. Both her and the tone of her letters, remind me of a certain mother at home who has two sons in the field.

I daresay that "Deserted" has sent out the "S. O. S." signal ear has been and is anxiously awaiting reinforcements in the form of a private sec-tary. He sure will have a few on his trail at the picnic, Miss Grey. I think I would prefer to be out here than in the trenches. On that day, as I fear that my nerves would fail me during the ordeal.

We are enjoying plenty of sunshine in "Hepzibah's" these days, which is something new in Flanders. By the way, our cook tried one of your pudding recipes, and almost won a medal. When I asked him for a taste he had dropped it, he became quite angry, and threatened to feed me shrapnel next time.

I will write and tell you all about it when next time comes. Will close now, with best wishes to all. Bon soir!

COAL BOX.

Ans.—Welcome indeed, friend from the trenches. May we not have your address? I'm sure some of our patriotic girls would delight to send you a few "dresses." Or, if you are well provided for by your friends, is there some other chap in your company to whom a pair of socks or package of "tea" would be like a gift from home?—some homesick chap without home-folks?

May you have puddings every day, continuous sunshine in "Madville," and time to write us again, quite soon!

Answers to Bly.

"Bly"—I, Taffetas, in black and many colors, will be very popular for the summer. If you wish, I will send you a few more, but it is just a superstition, I think.

A very good form is, "Miss Blank, let me introduce Mr. Jones."

You must maintain a certain reserve without which no girl is respected by her men friends. Give him an understanding that you cannot go out with him if he persists in his foolish ways.

I have a copy of "Hello, Central," send address and a stamp for it. Yes, black hats still retain their vogue.

Bathe the face in buttermilk for the sunburn, adding a little lemon juice if you wish.

Dull eyes indicate eye strain or something wrong with digestive organs.

What is good for you have? Child, I do not know. Wonder if our readers can advise?

Let Him Buy.

Dear Miss Grey—In reply to "Kentucky Nell's" letter, would say I think she does as well as the most of us, and if she would let him do the buying and seeing to things for her, she would do a lot better. I should like to see the result.

Re "Aunt Nannie's" quilt, we agree with you and "Maggie." I should like to see the quilt, and what is it made of? I don't know if I can help you, but I will try to find out for you.

Now, there's another subject I do want to bring up and it's a grand one for a debate. Doesn't it make your heart ache to go out in the evening and see the way the girls and young women of this city are acting on the streets, simply to attract some soldier? I have been ashamed more than once, of course, I know the majority of soldiers are honorable men, but there's a danger point! Isn't there some way of sounding a warning, Girls, don't do it! Now, let's have a discussion on this topic. I don't know if I'm bringing down the "deluge," but I had to "explode" some time. Sincerely,

BUSINESS GIRL.

Ans.—Your letter will be read with interest by many of our business girls, and others. Am also glad that you touched on the subject of your closing remarks. It is only too sadly true that some of our girls need "dancer" signs constantly before them.

PROJECT NOT DROPPED

Women of City Still Working on Female Police Officer Idea.

Although the committee formed from the members of the various women's associations in the city which was to lay the proposal that London should have a woman policeman before the police commission, did not appear when the commission met a few days ago, the matter has not been allowed to drop, and will probably be laid before the commission at another meeting.

The idea originated with the board of trustees of the Y. W. C. A., who laid it before other women's clubs, who gave the project their approval. A committee from all the clubs has the idea in hand, and will continue to work on it.

SAVE YOUR HAIR AND BEAUTIFY IT WITH "DANDERINE"

Spend 25 Cents! Dandruff Disappears and Hair Stops Coming Out.

Try This! Hair Gets Beautiful, Wavy and Thick in Few Moments.

If you care for heavy hair, that glimmers with beauty and is radiant with life, has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine. Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff, no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

BOXING AND WRESTLING AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Last night's program at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, although shorter than usual, provided plenty of excitement for the fans who were present. Lewis and Halliday opened the program by wrestling ten minutes to a draw. Both of these youngsters, who weighed in at 115 pounds, put up a lively tussle, but neither was able to get a fall.

The second event was a four-round boxing bout between Clayton Whitling and Cyclone Mitchell. Both of these boys proved clever, and put up a good exhibition, Whitling having slightly the better of the tussle.

In the second wrestling match, which was for 125-pounds, Paddy Doyle threw Lucas in 6 minutes and 45 seconds. Both boys were on the card for the ten minutes without either securing a fall.

The final bout of the evening was a four-round tussle between Valmyr and Algrove, two 135-pounds. These boys went after each other hard, going the four rounds to a draw.

Between soldiers and the man had to go on military duty and were unable to show up.

STRATFORD, June 5.—Lance Corporal Albert Henry Jones of the "Fighting 18th," who has been awarded the military cross for gallantry at the front, is widely known in the city, where he resided for some years. He was born in England, but came with the family to Canada, settling in Stratford, where he was employed as a machinist in the Grand Trunk shops before enlistment.

He was wounded at St. Etel, the news from the militia department coming less than an hour before the death of his mother in March.

Among the casualties on the field of practice is one case of concussion of the brain, while another player is laid up with a broken leg, to say nothing of numerous minor abrasions.

Smith, Son & Clarke's new pearl-grey motor ambulance, the first to be seen and used in London, and one of the latest designs in Canada, called forth much favorable comment on its first trips around the city. It has been in use since Saturday, and six cabs have already been handed.

TO AID BELGIANS.—Mrs. H. A. Boomer has received $10 from A. E. McCann of Dorchester, for the stricken Belgians. Nearly enough has come in now for Mrs. Boomer to forward another $50 and she is hoping the necessary donations will come in shortly.

CHECKS WILL BE LATE.—On account of the meeting of the county council this week, the Middlesex branch of the National Patriotic Association will not be able to have its checks made out by the end of the month as usual. They will be ready early next week.

CONVENTION POSTPONED.
The hardware convention, scheduled to be held here during the week ending June 12th, has been called off.
At a meeting of the executive held in Toronto the other day, a poll of the only manufacturers interested was taken, and many were in favor of calling it off, owing to conditions.
Many of the manufacturers are busily engaged in making munitions, and others could not spare time to make an exhibit.

WILL HOLD TEST.
A test of the fire-fighting and water-pressure apparatus will be held at 7 o'clock this morning on the Market Square.

The folks at home are longing for a bit of Peter's Ice Cream. Don't disappoint them.

SHOP TOMORROW MORNING

In order to give our clerks a rest during the warm summer months, we have decided to close our store Wednesday afternoon during June, July and August. You can help us make this holiday pleasant for the clerks by shopping Wednesday morning. You can also assure better attention to your wants and easier shopping during the morning hours, when business is not so strenuous.

HERE AND THERE ABOUT THE CAMPS

Lieut.-Col. S. G. Delamere of the 110th has been granted leave from the 8th to 12th of June, inclusively.

Lieut. J. N. Mowbray of the 185th has been granted leave from June 10 to 13.

Pte. T. C. Thompson has been discharged from the 135th Battalion as being under age.

"DON'T TOUCH ME."
About four hundred of the men of the 135th are walking about these days with a "Don't Touch Me" look in their eyes. Lieut.-Col. Berdan, medical officer of the unit, gave the boys their first typhoid inoculation on Friday, and their arms are still a bit sore. Their forty-eight hours' off duty ended this morning.

SOME COOKS IN A S. C.
Who would not be in the Army Service Corps? To see the beautiful big cooks of the 135th in the gas ovens, the pies, custards, the army duff, is enough to give many a man the war fever. The corps claims to have the two best cooks in camp and winning by the meal they put up there is good reason for making such a claim. The mess-house and kitchen are spotless. There is a covered cupboard in the kitchen for all eatables. No wonder the corps recruited fifty men in three days recently.

REGULAR AUTO SHIFTERS.
The men of the 135th Battalion will soon be able to class themselves as expert automobile shifters. At least ten times a day automobiles, either officers' cars or delivery trucks, get off the beaten path and become bogged. Then the men come to the rescue. It provides a pleasant diversion for the boys.

MILITARY TRANSFERS.
Pte. H. Ashby of the 110th Battalion has been transferred to the 142nd. Pte. W. Rose of the 135th has been added to the strength of No. 10 (Western University) Stationary Hospital.

WOMEN VOLUNTEERS.
The ladies of the Y. M. C. A. Auxiliary are busy behind the counter at the Y. M. C. A. canteen. They have arranged to supply volunteers to work in the Y. M. C. A. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays. For the balance of the week the Y. C. U. volunteers will assist. This arrangement will last all summer.

ATTACHED TO 91ST.
Lieut. Cecil Ernest French, McGill content of the C. O. T. C., has been provisionally appointed to the 91st (Elgin) Battalion.

NEW FORESTRY BATTALION.
Camp orders of Monday note that authority has been granted for the formation of the 238th Overseas Forestry Battalion, to be raised in Ontario and the western provinces. Major W. R. Smyth, M. P., is named as officer commanding.

The record made by Canadian lumbermen in the old country in hewing down the forests of old England led to the formation of this second unit of the same character.

Some recruits from the lumbering districts of Western Ontario are expected to be taken on the 238th.

RIFLES FOR 168TH.
Four hundred rifles have been supplied to the 168th Battalion. The arms have not been issued to the men as yet, as it is hoped that a sufficient number will be on hand to arm the whole battalion by the end of a few days. The rifles are the old pattern Mark III. Ross.

NEW A. S. C. STABLES.
The engineers are putting up a building to be used as stables for the A. S. C. horses at Carling Heights. It will be located on the ground now used as a lumber yard. The officers' horses will be kept at Queen's Park this year, as was the case last summer.

CHANGES IN 142ND.
Changes in the 142nd Battalion that have been approved provisionally:

Lieut. John Bruce Thompson, machine gun officer, to be transferred to A Company.

Lieut. Neville Peter Pope, supernumerary, to be absorbed into the establishment and appointed machine gun officer.

Lieut. Thomas Reginald Grieve, supernumerary, to be absorbed.

Lieut. Miss Adam Taylor, 36th Regiment, to be lieutenant provisionally, with effect from May 8.

Lieut. Eric Maunsell-Farncombe, 7th Regiment, to be lieutenant provisionally, with effect from May 1.

FAIR ADVERTISING.
Secretary A. M. Hunt, of the Western Fair Association Monday mailed a full display of prize lists, maps, etc., announcing London's popular exhibition, the Western Fair, which will be held September 8 to 16. G. T. R. TEAMSTERS ON STRIKE FOR HIGHER PAY

Sixteen teamsters employed by the Shelden Forwarding Company, local Grand Trunk cartage agents, went on strike Monday for higher wages. The men demand a minimum wage of $56 per month, and have presented a petition to the company to this effect. The Shelden Company has been paying $52 per month since June 1.

Today the freight delivery of the Grand Trunk is almost at a standstill owing to the lack of men to drive the lorries. The demands of the men have been forwarded to the head offices of the Shelden Company in Montreal, and no developments will occur until a reply is received.

Partial preparations have been completed for the route march of all soldiers in camp on Wednesday. The men will concentrate at some point not yet decided on and will march downtown. Following the main streets, the parade will continue to Queen's Park, where the men will take seats in the grandstand. An exhibition will be put on for their special benefit by the men of the School of Bayonet Fighting and Physical Drill. The public will not be admitted to this. At the conclusion of the exhibition, the units will return to their various camps by the closest routes.

It is hoped to have all units in camp in line, including infantry battalions, A. S. C. Engineers, A. M. C., etc. Almost ten thousand men will take part. In the evening it is hoped to put on an exhibition of bayonet fighting and physical drill at Queen's Park, to which the public will be invited.

True Tales From the Trenches

"HE DID HIS BIT"

[BY W. J. BARTLETT.]
Pte. W. J. Bartlett of the 18th Battalion, the author of this story, a member of The Advertiser editorial staff. His letters from the front, and from England, have appeared from time to time in this paper.

What a simple phrase, but oh, how deep is its meaning! He did his bit for King and country, and then passed away.

What tales of great human struggles this bloody war are wrapped up in this simple sentence. What pain and suffering these brave heroes suffered ere they passed to the great beyond.

Go where you will in France and Flanders, you will come across cemeteries, and on the wooden crosses you will often find the simple epitaph: "He Did His Bit," and as I have gazed on the little mounds of earth in a vision, I have seen them fighting in grim battles, fighting for their very existence, for their King and country. Often I have muttered if only the people at home knew the full significance of the saying "He did his bit."

Many of the lads who have fallen have performed great deeds of gallantry, but their names have never been mentioned in dispatches, simply because their heroic acts were not witnessed by the "higher ups." Every battalion, English and colonial, has had such heroes in their ranks, and their memories will live forever in the minds of their comrades who are spared to pull through this grim war.

The 18th Canadian Battalion has had many brave comrades fall on the battlefield, and though their gallant deeds have never been blazoned in the papers, they were never picked out for a D. C. M. or a V. C., their comrades who fought side by side with them, amidst crashing shells and weird, whistling bullets, will always speak with pride of their daring acts.

One of those 18th heroes who fell in action, who did his bit, was Pte. H. Drinkwater of Galt, Ont., and a braver man never donned the King's uniform.

But I said "man." In reality he was only a boy, not long out of his teens. He was a Canadian to the fingertips, keen and alert all the time, and full of optimism.

No, he did not have the appearance of a soldier. His features belonged to the feminine type, and his smile must have been born with him.

Young Drinkwater did not seem to know what fear was. No matter how dangerous a task he was given on the battlefield, he was always ready, and looked on the humorous side of things, even when the hellish shells burst near him and the shrapnel played on his helmet.

But it was at the battle of St. Eloi, where Drinkwater distinguished himself most, when the terrific struggle for the crater was in

Jellicoe Says All Lost When Hampshire Sank; Waves Capsized Boats

Lord Kitchener and Staff En Route to Archangel When Torpedoed or "Mined" Off Orkneys.

[Canadian Press.]

London, June 6.—Admiral Jellicoe, commander of the British Grand Fleet, has reported to the Admiralty that the British cruiser Hampshire, with Earl Kitchener and his staff aboard, has been lost off the West Orkneys.

London, June 6.—Four boats were seen to leave the Hampshire, but a heavy sea was running. Only a capsized boat and some bodies have been found. Earl Kitchener was on his way to Russia. Admiral Jellicoe reports there is very little hope that there were any survivors. The names of the members of Earl Kitchener's staff have not yet been learned. Sir Wm. Robertson, chief of the Imperial Staff, is in London.

London, June 6.—1:45 p.m.—Admiral Jellicoe's reports to the Admiralty follows:
"I have to report with deep regret that His Majesty's ship Hampshire, Captain Herbert J. Savill, R. N., with Lord Kitchener and his staff on board, was sunk last night at about 8 p.m., to the west of the Orkneys, either by a mine or a torpedo.

HEAVY SEAS RUNNING.

"Four boats were seen by observers on shore to leave the ship. The wind was north northwest, and heavy seas were running. Patrol vessels and destroyers at once proceeded to the spot, and a party was sent along the coast to search, but only some bodies and a capsized boat have been found up to the present. As the whole shore has been searched from the seaward, I greatly fear that there is little hope of there being any survivors.

"No report has yet been received from the search party on shore.
"H.M.S. Hampshire was on her way to Russia."

HAMPSHIRE'S CREW 655; WAS USED AS SCOUT BOAT

London, June 6.—The Hampshire, lost with Kitchener and his staff off the Orkneys, was one of the Devonshire class of six cruisers. She was built in 1903, and normally carried 655 men. She displaced 10,850 tons, was 450 feet long, 63½ feet beam, and drew 25½ feet. She was armed with four 7.5-inch, six 6-inch, two 12-pounders and twenty 3-pounders, and two torpedo tubes. She cost $4,250,000.

The Hampshire has been in use as a scout boat, and for carrying officials on various missions, having ample accommodations for the latter purpose.

180 OFFICERS IN CASUALTY LIST ALREADY; MORE COMING

Canadian Warned to Prepare for Heavy Loss Among All Ranks.

NUMBERS NOT KNOWN

But Will Approximate Those Incurred in Battle of St. Julien.

RELIEF NOW REPORTED

Ground So Swampy That Defence Trenches Were Impossible to Make.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Ottawa, June 6.—Canadian casualties continue to come by cable from the heroic fight which commenced on June 1 in Sanctuary Wood, and still rages. A heavy supplementary list of losses reached Ottawa this morning, and the military authorities state that this by no means ends the story of killed, wounded and missing. It is feared that losses may finally approach the number which the Canadians suffered in the St. Julien fight a year ago.
Returns this morning brought casualties among officers to a hundred and eighty. News of this character has been feared for some time. In fact, ever since the Canadians three months ago were assigned to hold the tip of the Ypres salient, which is looked upon as the most hazardous point upon the British line. Projecting into the German line, the trenches Canadians have held for three months are exposed to enemy gun fire from three angles. The country is so swampy that defence trenches and safe underground shelters are made impossible by water. In place of trenches, parapets must be substituted, and these form poorer protection, but better targets. There have been substantial daily casualties since the Canadians took over this piece of the line. The fighting qualities Canadians have shown earned them this place of honor, but of peril.

Ferocious Fight.

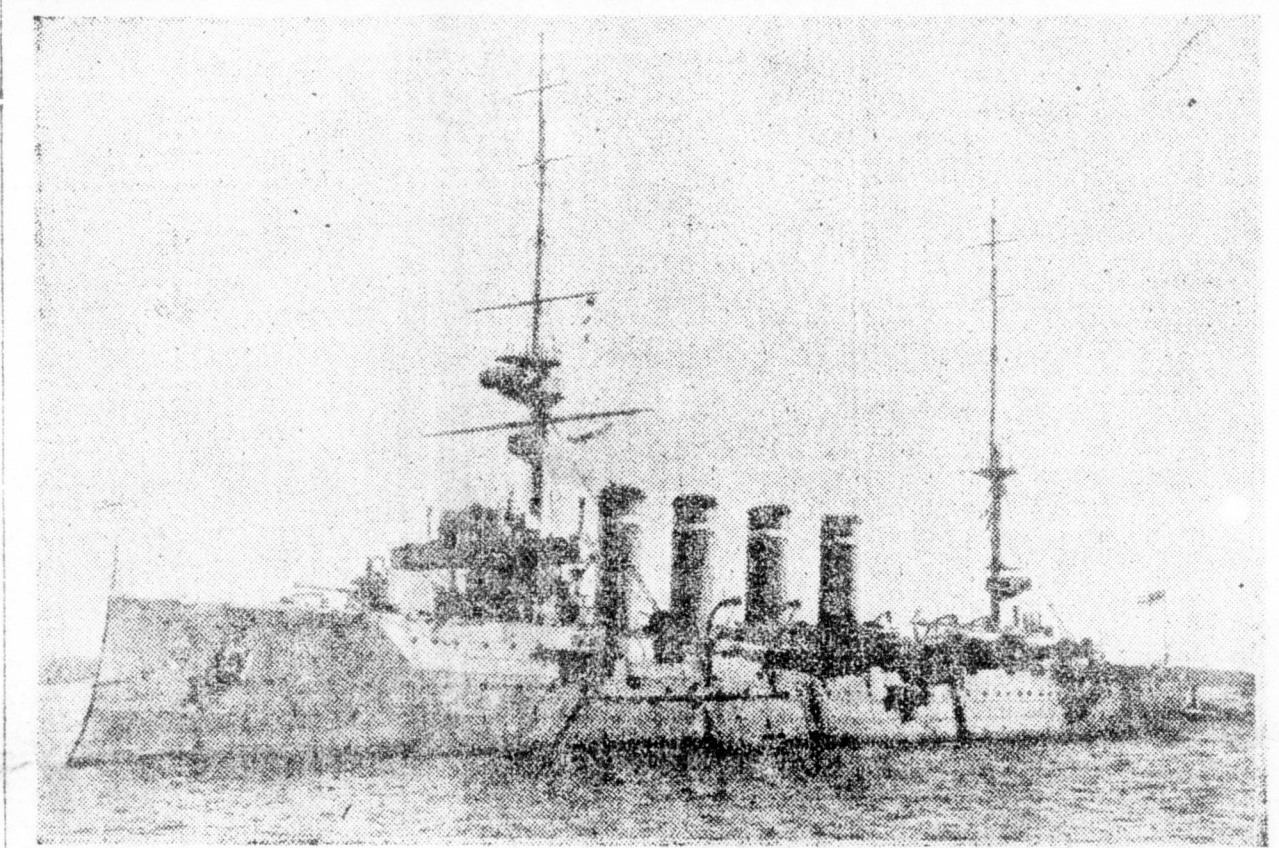

Reports reaching the Canadian capital indicate that the fight was of the most ferocious character, as it was limited to a mile of front on which a terrible harvest of casualties was piled up by gun blast in two days, in fact, in two hours.
The belief grows here that the pressure of two generals in this front trench may have precipitated the drive for which the Germans obviously had made careful preparation. It is not customary for generals to take stations at the very front. When high officers on either side do go up, news of their presence there, in some mysterious way, generally gets to the other side, and is shouted back across No Man's Land.

Gen. Mercer and Gen. Williams had been in the advance trenches observing for some hours before the storm of German gunfire burst on the trench, and curtaining the rear made retirement impossible.

News indicates that Gen. Williams was wounded, and this, taken with the fact that the Germans report the capture of only one general, has created (Continued on Page 3, Column 7.)

"CRUISER FLEET ALIVE AND HAS A BIG KICK IN HER"

Admiral Beatty Says Command Drew Enemy Into the Jaws of the Fleet—Only Regrets for "Pals Who Died Gloriously."

London, June 6.—3:28 p.m.—Rear-Admiral Sir Hedworth Meux, who was elected to the seat in the House of Commons left vacant by Admiral Lord Charles Beresford when the latter was created a baron, and who has become a spokesman for the navy, read at a public meeting today the following letter from Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty, who commanded the battle cruiser squadron in the North Sea fight:

"We drew the enemy into the jaws of our fleet. I have no regrets, except for the gallant lives lost, for the pals that have gone and who died gloriously. It would have warmed your heart to have seen how the gallant Hood brought his squadron into action. Would to God he had been more successful in the general result.
"We will be ready for them next time. Please God it will come soon. The battle cruiser fleet is alive and has a very big kick in her."

ROBERTSON IS LOGICAL HEAD FOR WAR OFFICE; WAR COUNCIL GATHERS

[Canadian Press.]

London, June 6.—2:10 p.m.—When the news of the sinking of the cruiser Hampshire with Earl Kitchener and his staff on board was received in London a meeting of the British war council was immediately called. Sir William Robertson, chief of the Imperial Staff, who probably will become head of the war office; Sir Edward Grey, secretary for foreign affairs; Reginald McKenna, chancellor of the exchequer, and David Lloyd George, minister of munitions, were present at the council.

Bore Heavy Load.

It has been recognized that there was placed on the war secretary's shoulders a load it was impossible for one man to bear. In the early part of the war he was responsible not only for the organization of armies, but for the enormous work of equipping them and supplying them with munitions. Since David Lloyd George took charge of the munitions department, Earl Kitchener has been able to devote himself more largely to the work of military organization.

Great Britain's allies had great confidence in Earl Kitchener's judgment. His visits to France and Italy were supposed to have had important results in co-ordinating the work of the Allies. The fact that he had left London for Russia is regarded as an indication that he was on a similar mission to that country. The (Continued on Page 11, Col. 2.)

BERLIN PUTS LOSS OF DESTROYERS AT FIVE IN NORTH SEA

Insists Main British Fleet Was Engaged.

SECRECIES MAINTAINED

Much Information to Hand But Is Kept From Public by Authorities.

[Canadian Press.]

Berlin, Friday, June 3.—By Wireless to the Associated Press via Saville.—(Delayed in Transmission).—Detailed reports of the naval battle in the North Sea show that the entire German battle fleet, except the light forces assigned to the Baltic, was engaged with the main force of the British fleet. The number of German destroyers lost is given as five. The admiralty naturally has much more information available, but keeps it impounded.

Vice-Admiral Hipper, in command of the cruiser squadron, was the German commander in the Dogger Bank engagement.

No further information has been given out in regard to the extent of the damages sustained by the German units. It is admitted frankly that they are by no means light, and the loss of personnel from the British fleet also is conceded.

DONALDSON VISITED OTTAWA LAST FALL

[Canadian Press.]

Ottawa, June 6.—Sir Frederick Donaldson, one of Earl Kitchener's party, was munitions advisor to Lloyd George. He visited Canada last fall on the invitation of D. A. Thomas (Baron Rhoades) to study the possibility of manufacturing heavy ordnance in this country. He was formerly chief superintendent of ordnance at Woolwich arsenal.

Warship Hampshire Sent Down by Mine or Torpedo, With Head of British Armies and Sir Hay Donaldson, Hugh James O'Bierne, O. A. Fitzgerald, Kitchener's Private Secretary, and General Ellershaw.

(Special Cable to The Advertiser.)

London, June 6.—It is stated at the war office that it was Lord Kitchener's personal staff that perished with him on the Hampshire, and that no other officer of high standing was lost.

DONALDSON, O'BIERNE AND ELLERSHAW LOST

London, June 6.—3:20 p.m.—Accompanying Earl Kitchener as his staff, were Hugh James O'Bierne, former councillor of the British embassy at Petrograd and former minister at Sofia; O. A. Fitzgerald, Earl Kitchener's private military secretary; Brigadier-General Ellershaw and Sir Frederick Donaldson.

On board the Hampshire with the British war secretary were also a number of minor army officers.

Sir Hay Frederick Donaldson, among those who accompanied Lord Kitchener on the Hampshire, was technical adviser to David Lloyd George, minister of munitions. He was prominent in the engineering world, being a past president of the Institute of Mechanical Engineers and a member of the Iron and Steel Institute, and of various engineering societies. Before the war he was chief mechanical engineer of ordnance factories from 1899 to 1903, and chief superintendent after that date. He was born in 1866.

HUGH JAMES O'BIERNE.

Hugh James O'Bierne, in addition to other posts he held during a long career in the diplomatic service, was second secretary to the British embassy in Washington from 1895 to 1898. He was a native of Ireland, born in County Leitrim in 1866.

GENERAL ELLERSHAW.

Brigadier-General Arthur Ellershaw, who was born in 1869 and entered the army in 1888, won honors in fighting on the Indian frontier in 1897-98. He was severely wounded in the Boer war. In the present war he had gained the Distinguished Service Order.

LIEUT.-COL. FITZGERALD.

Lieut.-Col. Oswald Arthur Fitzgerald, who had been personal military secretary to Lord Kitchener since August, 1914, had been closely associated with the late field marshal in army service for many years.

NAVAL OFFICERS BELIEVE HAMPSHIRE STRUCK MINE

London, June 6.—4:05 p.m.—Naval officers express the opinion that the cruiser Hampshire must have struck a mine, as it would have to be an exceedingly lucky shot for a torpedo to get a ship with her speed and under the conditions of the sea, which was very rough.

The Hampshire, while an old boat and not fit for fleet action, was fast enough for patrol and blockade work. She carried a crew of between 400 and 500 men.

"EMPIRE LOSES GREAT MAN, GREAT PUBLIC SERVANT"

[Canadian Press.]

London, June 6.—Premier Asquith was to have attended the luncheon today of the imperial council of commerce and was expected to deliver an important speech there, but he was absent because of the news of the loss of the Hampshire with Earl Kitchener and members of his staff. Baron Desborough, who presided at the luncheon, in announcing that the usual toasts would be omitted, said:

"I am sure that all will agree that in Lord Kitchener the whole Empire has lost a great man and leader and a great public servant."

Sir Charles Cheers Wakefield, lord mayor of London, said:

"We have lost a unique personality. Lord Kitchener is not dead in the deepest sense. He is an inspiration to us to continue and to steel our hearts and with greatest courage and determination to fight the battle to the finish in the cause of righteousness and freedom."

NEW YORK HEARS OKUMA MURDERED

New York, June 6.—A report from Shanghai that Premier Okuma of Japan had been assassinated was circulated today by a local news ticker.

Count Okuma was the most popular premier Japan ever had. He was 78 years old.

VISIT STRATHROY TODAY

Great Deal of Important Business at the Present Session.

A large number of important matters are coming up for consideration at the June session of the county council which opened Monday afternoon.

Letter of Appreciation.

A number of communications relating to county affairs of a small nature were read, and the auditors accounts referred to the finance committee, which will convene later. A letter of appreciation from the 125th (Middlesex) Battalion was read, expressing their appreciation of the grant of $1,700, and giving in detail the manner in which the money was expended. An account from the Queen Alexandra Sanatorium for six patients maintained during the year was referred to the finance committee. A tax notice was received from the city of London for garbage collection at the county house.

Two motions were passed, one that W. G. Robinson, principal of Melbourne continuation school, be appointed a member of the board of examiners of the high school district to which his county centre is attached. The other one granted a free peddler's license to Walter Stokoes of this county, as he is incapacitated and unable to earn his living by any other means.

Wants Information. A number of questions were received from the members. One inquired if any action was being taken in the case of the Columbia Oil Company of Columbus, Ohio. He stated that it did business in Middlesex without paying a tax. Other companies which had plants here were forced to do this. Locally the company was right by a recent act, but several other counties, by taking the matter to law, succeeded in getting as much as $300 for the provision of selling oil here. It was shown that a motion to that effect had been brought up before but no further action was taken.

A great deal of work lies before the board of road directors. A letter was read from the minister of public works advising that work on the roads be curtailed as much as possible till the close of the war. Labor was scarce now, he stated, and offers of employment for a large number of men hindered recruiting. When the war ended thousands of men would be seeking employment, and it would be well if the county could supply them.

Had Constipation for Many Years, But Was Entirely Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The most common ailment and the greatest cause of disease and suffering today is constipation. Artificial food and sedentary indoor life combine to induce torpid, sluggish action of the liver, kidneys and bowels. As a result poisonous waste matters remain in the system and give rise to pains and aches and afford a starting point for serious disease.

Infectious and contagious diseases are little known to persons whose liver, kidneys and bowels are kept in faithful activity, for there are no suitable conditions for disease germs to thrive in. Even common colds usually take their start when they find the system in a constipated, poisoned condition.

Captain Hugh Niven
of the Famous Pats
Is Among WoundedDistinguished London Officer in Casualty List From Battle of Hooge.

Capt. Hugh Niven of this city is reported among the wounded on last night's casualty lists. This is the second time the famous officer of the Princess Pals has been hurt. About a year ago he was struck in the arm by a shot, but escaped serious injury.

Capt. Niven has been repeatedly mentioned in dispatches for the courage and resourcefulness with which he has led his men in action. In addition the leading military writers in their accounts of what the Canadians have accomplished in Flanders have invariably featured his work. Some of the fiercest fights recounted are those in which Capt. Niven and his men took a leading part.

Frederick Palmer, the famous war correspondent, who lectured in London in the winter, made special mention of Capt. Niven's work in his war books and stories of the battles the London officer is mentioned often.

The accounts of the fights he has been in show that Capt. Niven has had numerous remarkable escapes. He is now one of the few survivors of the floor he placed in the dining-room and a new ventilation system installed. This has not yet been done, and the members will again consider the matter tomorrow. The chairman of the various committees will meet Wednesday at 10 o'clock.

The council will meet again at 8 o'clock tonight when the question of how the patriotic fund will be raised will be finally decided. The report of the county clerk on the patriotic situation will be received. It is expected that a number of grants which were turned down will be reconsidered.

Patriotic Funds.

The council meeting closed at 4 o'clock and a discussion was then held for an hour and a half as to whether the money for patriotic purposes would be raised by a direct tax on the people or whether they would be financed by the issue of debentures. Every one of the thirty members stated his opinion, and although many differed there was no friction or questioning of the statements. It is expected that the matter will be decided quickly at the next session. The arguments in favor of the debentures were, that this had been a bad year, and many of the farmers could not afford to pay a direct tax, that it was the duty of children of the next generation to bear part of the cost of war, that it would seriously affect the poorer classes.

It was also pointed out that many soldiers were taxpayers and they would like the extra time in which to pay. The arguments for the other side were, that the money had at first been raised by public subscription, but the tax system had later been adopted as more satisfactory. This money was therefore meant to be the contribution of this generation and not the next.

The officers elected for the coming year were: President, Mrs. (Dr.) F. W. Hughes (re-elected); vice-president, Mrs. Stanley (re-elected); secretary, Mrs. Tutt (this is Mrs. Tutt's third consecutive term as secretary); press reporter, Mrs. Gennell.

The reports received from the clubs of the different schools showed that each is doing excellent work in branches of the Red Cross work. The increase in membership reported by the majority of the clubs indicates that the women of London are taking a greater interest in the work of the clubs in solving problems which every mother must face in raising her children. A feature of the past year was the number of addresses delivered to the clubs by many well-known local speakers on subjects connected with the raising and educating of children.

Are Very Active.

The reports of the secretaries of the schools aroused much favorable comment among the audience. Emma Avenue School's club showed that it had a membership of 112, and had been very active during the past year. Victoria School collected $108 during the past season, with which it aided the Red Cross and other organizations.

Wortley Road, for a small school, did well, with 81 members. Chesley Avenue School is only 28, but the average attendance at the meeting is between 50 and 60, and so this school had been able to accomplish much more work than would appear possible at first glance.

For a club which has been organized only a few months, the Boyle Memorial Mothers' Club is doing good work, and has at present 50 members. Ealing is another club which has prospered greatly since its formation. Ealing has now 65 members. Talbot Street, St. George's and Aberdeen also showed that they had spent a busy and profitable year.

The Annual Report.

The annual report of the Union of Mothers' Clubs was then presented by the secretary, Mrs. Tutt, which showed that financially the club was strong and possessed a membership of over 500 women. Requests were received from Mrs. A. T. Edwards for assistance in the Red Cross Society in preparing supplies for the Western United States Hospital, and Mrs. Tanner of the Y. W. C. A. for furnishings for a tent, which the Y. W. C. A. will place in the camp for the use of women-soldiers.

Mrs. Palmer, president of the Ealing Club, proposed that the union should send flowers to Mr. Arnett, janitor of the Rectory School, who was injured on Sunday, which was carried.

The prizes offered to Aberdeen, Alexandra, Chesley Avenue, Princess Victoria, St. George's, Talbot, Tecumseh, Wortley Road, and Victoria School for Manual Training and Domestic Science, were turned over to representatives from these schools to be presented to the winners. The meeting last evening was well attended, and great interest was evinced in the working of each of the clubs by the women who were present.

During the coming year it is expected that the total membership of all the clubs will be greatly increased.

The work of the secretary at one stage of the war for the use of women-soldiers and considerable questioning, but there has been a strong reaction in the public mind in the last few months, and Earl Kitchener's popularity and prestige appeared to have been restored fully.

ever since I can remember, and for four years had pains at the left side of the back. If I walked across the kitchen floor I would have no pain at rest. That, I think, was terrible for a woman of twenty years. The condition of my blood was shown by pimples breaking out on my face. I suffered from so much indigestion and stiffness in the back, I am sure my system was full of poison. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have entirely cured me, and I feel better than I have felt for many years."

As a cure for constipation Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills stand alone, for by their action on the liver they awaken the activity of the intestine, cause a good flow of bile, and hence remove the cause of indigestion, for bile is nature's cathartic. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

DAYLIGHT BYLAW
PASSES COUNCIL;
STARTS SATURDAYLondon Falls in Line With Popular Idea.

BIG DEBENTURE ISSUE

Over $300,000 To Be Raised for Various Works Now Under Way.

The daylight-saving bylaw was passed by the city council last night, and it will become operative at midnight on Saturday. The council voted by a large majority for the bylaw.

When it came up for its second reading, Controller Rose moved that it be passed. There were several seconds. Controller Gammage was the first speaker, and declared that it would be better if a general law were passed, covering the Dominion or the province.

Rev. J. H. Boyd, on behalf of the Men's Federation, objected to the bylaw, declaring that it would give the hotels another hour in which to sell liquor. This he did not think was to the advantage of the citizens. Kingston hotelmen had voluntarily agreed to observe the hours of the bylaw, and he saw no reason why the hotelmen here would not do the same.

Favors the Bylaw.

P. G. Jewell, on behalf of the Rotary Club, explained that the Rotary Club, the board of education and the trades and labor council were in favor. Other cities were trying it out, and had found it to work satisfactorily.

The action of the council authorities in case it passed was of some concern, and it was pointed out that they would meet the wishes of the city in this matter and would not increase the hours for drinking.

Was Turned Down.

Ald. Asplund wanted to telephone for the aldermen. He pointed out that there was a great demand on the time of the aldermen, and the city should provide a car for the fire chief, who was crowded and the like. He thought there should be a concerted movement to get better conditions.

Ald. Asplund had some comments on the comparative statement of expenditures issued by the Edmonton committee, as published in The Advertiser.

It looks as if we were living much closer to Paradise than to Hades, as some newspapers try to show us," he commented.

The report was sent to No. 1 committee to look into.

Controller Gammage announced that the board of control would meet the street railway on Wednesday afternoon to discuss street railway matters. There was nothing done at this meeting.

Will Buy Auto.

The council decided to purchase a McLaughlin car for the city engineer, and a Ford car for his staff. The purchase of a car for the fire chief was laid over until the next meeting.

Ald. Burdick wanted some information relative to the bylaw governing the size of trees on the streets. The council asked the police to enforce the bylaw was sent to No. 3 committee, in order that he might secure the needed information.

Searchlights on automobiles will be prohibited on paved streets. City Solicitor Meredith being instructed to prepare the necessary bylaw.

Bylaws have been introduced for the following amounts were passed: $2,000 for the 142nd Battalion, $6,500 for garbage stables, $35,000 for the utilities commission, $25,000 for London and Port Stanley, and $170,000 for storm sewers.

A bylaw to borrow $300,000 for current expenses was also passed.

BERLIN WANTS MEASURE TO BE DOMINION-WIDE.

[Special to The Advertiser.] BERLIN, Ont., June 5.—Upon the motion of Ald. Gallagher and Master, the resolution of the city council, requesting the Dominion Government to pass a daylight-saving bill for the whole of Canada, to take effect June 15, received the council's hearty endorsement tonight.

GALT COUNCIL SPLITS
ON DAYLIGHT ISSUE.

GALT, June 5.—The city fathers divided tonight in a vote on the daylight-saving scheme, and Mayor Edwards, while in favor of the idea, did not want to be arbitrary and force the proposition upon the people, so he cast his vote against it.

The agitation was started by the Merchants' Association, which endorsed the scheme, and the board of trade followed up. The mayor then circulated petitions through the factories and other places of employment. In most cases these petitions were signed in favor.

The action of the council tonight was, therefore, somewhat of a surprise.

STRATFORD COMMITTEE ON DAYLIGHT QUESTION.

[Special to The Advertiser.] STRATFORD, June 5.—Daylight saving came before the city council tonight.

BE READY FOR HEAVY LOSSES, VETERANS WARN

Canadian Officers' Casualty
List of Frightful Significance.

MOST SEVERE OF THE WAR
Engagement More Severe
Than Any Other With Canadians.

MAY BE TOLL OF 10,000

Saving of Ypres Means Much to Allied Line—Sacrifice
Not in Vain.

[By Donald Campbell, a survivor of St. Julien, now on the staff of The Advertiser.]

The present fighting in which the Canadians are engaged is at once more severe and more satisfactory than the great battle of Ypres a year ago. This is the opinion of the local men who fought at St. Julien and Ypres.

Judging by the officers' casualty list the Canadian public must be prepared for frightful losses among the rank and file. They may well amount to 10,000 men, killed and wounded.

She'll For Shell Now.

The Germans are undoubtedly using an immensely greater number of guns of all calibres than last year, but on the other hand we are now able to give them as good as we get. Last year for days our boys lay under a grinding fire from hundreds of great German guns and listened to the occasional salvo from heavy batteries in their rear. Now the ears of the struggling men will be soothed with the constant roar of British guns belching steel into the German hordes.

A year ago the Canadians were alone, a few thousand against three hundred thousand in England. Today there are 60,000 of their fellow-countrymen standing shoulder to shoulder with them in the fight and an extra hundred thousand in the rear.
They will fight with greater courage.

The Land Near Hoone.

Ypres is evidently once more the objective of the German attack. The country immediately about the old
Flemish town is rolling in character.
To the south, below Hoone, the ridges dip out into a level, uninteresting plain. There is not a hill, scarce a knoll, that might be fortified. An occasional small wood, a line of trees and cypress are all that are to be seen.
It is claimed the hardest part of the line to hold. If the Germans got through there they would be in the rear of Ypres and would control the withdrawal of all troops in the Ypres salient, giving that town to the Germans. "That will never happen," say the veterans.

BLINDS DRAWN AT WAR OFFICE; CROWDS MOURN GREAT CHIEF

Was Cruiser Escorted? First Question To Be Asked by Throngs in Whitehall—"K. of K." Had Done
His Great Work.

[Special Cable to The Advertiser.]
London, Eng., June 6.—Public consternation and amazement today followed the announcement that Lord Kitchener and his staff were sent to their deaths by a mine or torpedo, which blew up the cruiser Hampshire off the Orkney Islands. Crowds gathered in Whitehall, about the war office, seeking further details, following the formal announcement of the loss of "K. of K." The flag on the war office was at half-mast and the blinds of the office were drawn.

The crowd received no information and the air of officials indicated that they had no hope that Kitchener had escaped.

Surprise was expressed that the cruiser bearing the minister of war could have been destroyed either by a torpedo or mine. It is probable that the question whether the cruiser had an escort of torpedo-boats, and whether she was provided with any protection against submarines, will be put directly to the Government.

Many comments were heard in the crowd about the war office. Many remarked that it "was lucky it did not happen before conscription became effective." They referred to the great power of the Kitchener name in stimulating voluntary recruiting.

City Struck Dumb By News of Loss of Britain's War Leader

A man was walking casually past The Advertiser on the opposite side of the street to the bulletins. He was reading as he walked. Suddenly his legs stopped as though he had struck a rope. He had seen the bulletin announcing the loss of Kitchener and his staff.

"My God!" was all that he said. Then he passed along slowly.

Another man rushed into the office of The Advertiser.
"You're crazy," he said.
"That cannot be possible."

He was told that it was official news, and he burst into tears.

An old soldier who was down town also came into the office. He was not affected visibly, but he rushed to the camp as soon as he could.

The city was struck dumb.
That great man of steel nerve and all abiding faith in his Empire was gone. The loss of thousands is heard as ordinary news these days. The loss of Kitchener transcended every other thought—even those of the Canadian boys who are now cold in death after the great Ypres defence.

Kitchener through criticism and adversity remained the British Empire's great war figure. He has been regarded as the linch-pin of the nation's fighting organization. His death does not mean that British hopes have passed with his death. No one man can long affect the issue. The call of the hour will bring forth the man.

The man regarded as the great master of the situation has died at his post. He has long ago applied his usefulness to the work of organization for which he was eminently fitted, and in a sense his task is done. The whole Empire has leaned upon him since the start of the war, perhaps too much.

No everyone must help to shoulder the burden which he has been forced to lay down.

WILL NOT YIELD TO COMPANY, DECLARES MAYOR STEVENSON

City to Stand for Street Railway Rights.

IS IT PLAYING FOR TIME?
This Is Claimed To Be Reason for Attitude of Franchise Holders.

The board of control will meet on Wednesday afternoon to discuss street railway matters. So far the company has not been asked to send representatives, although it is probable that they will be close at hand.

From what can be gathered, the company is playing for time, and figures that the aldermen will not dare to stop Sunday cars. It relies on public sentiment to stop the council from taking such action, it is claimed.

As a result, the company is standing pat on its proposition. It will extend the Hamilton road line, will double-track Dundas street east, and will paving work is necessary provided the city council will fix the population of London at 49,000 for street railway purposes.

This the council will not do, and the whole situation has resolved itself into a test of strength.

"We will not yield," declared Mayor Stevenson. "We know what we want and we are not going to allow the company to give us the worst of it. Our proposition is reasonable. We are willing to add the number to our population that the extension warrants under the bylaw, 2,000 population for every mile of track. Further than this we will do nothing."

EARL KITCHENER WAS HERO OF MANY CAMPAIGNS

IN MIDST OF FRIENDS AT HOME KITCHENER WAS A WILLING AND GOOD TALKER

Interesting Sketch of Him by T. P. O'Connor Sheds New Light.

WORSHIPPED IN EGYPT

Accessible to All and Friend of Natives, Who Consulted Him Freely.

Many years ago, when Kitchener was the subject of a debate in the House of Commons, he was observed by T. P. O'Connor, who wrote then:

"I noticed that he smiled several times during the debate. Somehow or other the grim face never looked to me grimmer than when this smile passed across it. The large, strong mouth, heavy, covered with the typical military and brush-like mustache; the strong, square jaw; the tremendously heavy brow; the strange, glittering eyes; and even the red-tinted complexion—the complexion that told so many tales of hard rides for many hundreds of miles under blazing Egyptian suns, through wild and trackless Egyptian sands; all the features of a strong, fierce, dominant nature were really brought out into greater relief by that strange smile. The smile, as it passed over the forehead, seemed to bring out into even greater prominence the bulging forehead—a forehead that has what looks like cushions of flesh or bone just above the eyes. The smile gave an additional glitter to the eyes; it seemed to impart a more deadly curl to the heavy and moustachioed mouth. Through it all the face seemed strangely familiar to me. I could not make out why, but in the end it all at once struck me; it was the typical face of the Irish Resident Magistrate."

With a Sense of Humor. Reviewing this early impression in Collier's, "Tay Pay" believes it was harsher than the subject deserved. He has met Kitchener many times since then, has followed his career, and has talked with men who knew him as a soldier and as a friend. While he has all the grimmest that other biographers have noticed, there is another side of his character, and those who suppose him to be simply a machine, without human emotions, are far from the truth. We learn from Mr. O'Connor that Kitchener has a very lively sense of humor, which is certainly something the public had never suspected, but without this, his biographer says, he would have found his career and his life impossible. He loves a joke at a friend's expense, but has never been known to say anything that would leave a sting. Nobody ever heard him harshly criticize a man in his absence. When he cannot speak well of a man he is silent, and this, though in private he loves to talk, in the intimacy of his own room at night, and with only a friend or two present, he can talk the whole evening through, and nobody thinks of interrupting the stream of his interesting reminiscence and shrewd comment.

Easy To See Kitchener. Mr. O'Connor says that when Kitchener was in Egypt he was accessible to anyone who wanted to see him. Lord Cromer, his great predecessor, was not; but Kitchener, from the fact that so much of his life had been spent in the desert, and that he knew not only the Arabic language, but the Arabic character, probably knew better how to handle the natives than even Cromer. Says O'Connor: "Lord Kitchener is the cad under the tree. The mayor or the citizens of the little Arab village can come to him, and the old soldier, and even the fellow, alone, and they will find Lord Kitchener ready to listen and to talk to them in their own tongue, to enter with gusto into the pettiest details of their daily lives, and ready also to apply the remedy to such grievances or to supply such wants as commend themselves to his judgement."

There is a story to the effect that on one occasion an old peasant came from the depths of the land to Cairo to see the great Kitchener, and urge him to recover an old white mule that was missing. It is said that the whole machinery of government was held up while Kitchener found and returned the mule.

An Improving Landlord. Lord Kitchener owes some of his great ability to his father, a retired army officer, with a small fortune, who bought an estate in Kerry, and by shrewd management and attention to detail improved it so that the land, acres and the decaying buildings became the pride of the countryside. This has been Kitchener's lot, to take something that was run down, and in need of repairs and make it efficient and a payer of dividends. He is no lavish spender, either of men or of money. He will use all the men who are needed, but no more. In his famous Egyptian campaign he did not spend all the money that was voted him, for he made hard work take the place of money to a great extent, and as he works himself so he demands that his subordinates shall work also. It is said that he never thinks of asking a subordinate if he has done a job that was given to him; he takes it for granted, knowing

How Kitchener Works.

This is one of the reasons, in the opinion of Mr. O'Connor, why he can accomplish such a tremendous amount of work without being tired or worried. "He sits down at a desk in the war office for about ten hours a day; isn't ringing at bells and shouting down pipes; he does it all so quietly that it seems mere pastime, and the effect of this perfect tranquility produces an extraordinary result on those who work with him. They also do their work easily, tranquilly and without feeling it." He does his work not so much as a soldier, but rather as a businessman. As a military organizer he is probably without his equal today, and we do not recall any hero of the past who was his superior. It is to be remembered that Kitchener is much more than a soldier. He is an engineer, an accountant, with a wonderful mind for figures, and a noted mathematician. As Mr. O'Connor says in concluding his tribute to the man who at this moment is the most important man in the British Empire: "It is fortunate for our nation that the great effort on which so much of our safety and repose depends in this solemn hour of struggle should have at its head a man who comes to it with the stamp of absolute fitness from the divine and unerring hand of nature."

GEN. GORDON REALIZED KITCHENER'S QUALITIES

General Gordon's diary, kept during the tragic times in Egypt and the Sudan, reveals the high opinion that great man had of the young officer, Major Kitchener, who was then climbing the ladder to fame.

General Gordon writes: "The man whom I have always placed my hopes upon, Major Kitchener, R. E., who is one of the few very superior British officers with a cool and good head and a hard constitution combined with untiring energy—has now pushed up to Dongola and has proved that the Mudd is dependable. The latter has given him a letter received from you asking about reinforcement."

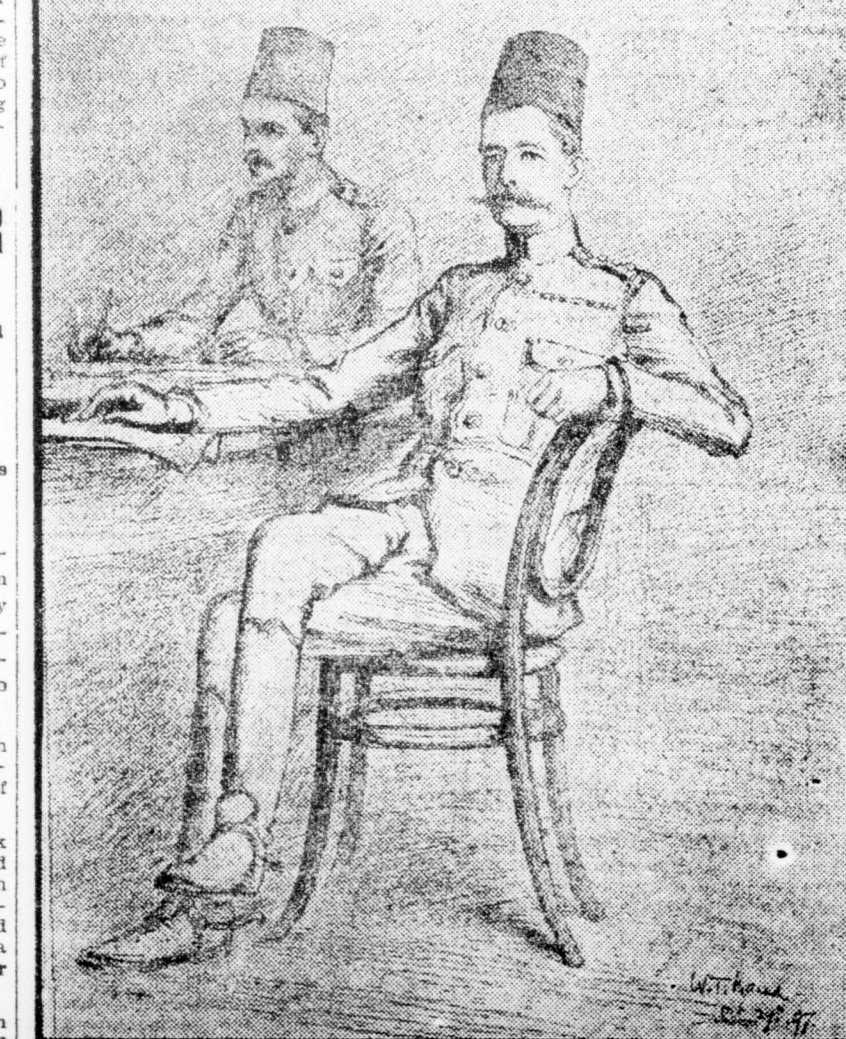

UNLOADED IN HURRY

Farmer's Horse Unceremoniously Dumps Driver and Cans Into Street.

"There's no fool like an old fool," seems to apply with especial force to horses, and one of these, which is old enough to vote, caused an accident today at the corner of Talbot and Bathurst streets, when it became startled by some sight or noise with which it has been familiar for years.

'K's' ARMY WAS THE GREATEST OF KIND IN ALL WAR HISTORY

Since War Began Had Organized Fighting Force of Five Millions.

IN VARIOUS BRANCHES Was Given Supreme Direction of Empire's Armies.

GOING TO ARCHANGEL

Hampshire Probably Headed For the White Sea When Sunk.

[Canadian Press.]

London, June 6.—Earl Kitchener was appointed secretary of state for war on August 8, 1914, a few days after Great Britain's declaration of war on Germany. He was regarded as England's greatest soldier, and the decision of the Government to entrust him with supreme direction of the war was received with unanimous approval. As the war progressed, and Great Britain's deficiencies in certain directions, particularly in regard to shortage of artillery ammunition, became apparent, Earl Kitchener was subjected to severe criticism, led by Lord Northcliffe. The secretary was charged with responsibility for failure to foresee the extraordinary demand for heavy shells, and as a result the ministry of munitions was formed, with David Lloyd George at its head.

Robertson as Aide. Earl Kitchener's responsibilities were further increased by the appointment of Gen. Sir William Robertson as chief of the imperial staff in December of last year. It was reported at this time that friction had arisen between Earl Kitchener and Field Marshal French, then in command of the British forces in France. Shortly after the appointment of Gen. Robertson, Field Marshal French relinquished his command.

Created Huge Army. Notwithstanding the friction directed against Earl Kitchener, his great accomplishments during the war are recognized universally. Foremost of his achievements is the building up of England's untrained manhood of a huge army. At the beginning of the war Great Britain had only a few hundred thousand trained men. Today more than 5,000,000 men are enrolled for the various branches of the service.

There have been no recent reports of Earl Kitchener's movements. He was last mentioned in the cable despatches of Friday, when he went to Westminster Palace to be questioned by members of the House of Commons, who were not satisfied with the conduct of the war. No intimation was given that he intended to leave England.

Headed for White Sea

The Orkney Islands, off which the Hampshire went down, are off the north coast of Scotland. The ship was on her way into the Atlantic, and was around the northern end of the Scandinavian peninsula into the White Sea.

Earl Kitchener probably intended to embark at Archangel.

High Standard Set For Army By Kitchener

Message to Expeditionary Forces a Powerful Exhortation.

Following is the message sent by Earl Kitchener to the men of the expeditionary force before their departure for France:

"You are ordered abroad as a soldier of the King to help our French comrades against the invasion of a common enemy. You have to perform a task which will need your courage, your energy, your patience. Remember that the honor of the British army depends on your individual conduct."

"It will be your duty not only to set an example of discipline and perfect steadiness under fire, but also to maintain the most friendly relations with those whom you are helping in this struggle. The operations in which you are engaged will, for the most part, take place in a friendly country, and you can do your own country no better service than by showing yourself in France and Belgium in the true character of a British soldier."

"Be invariably courteous, considerate, and kind. Never do anything likely to injure or destroy property, and always look upon looting as a disgraceful act. You are sure to meet with a welcome and be trusted; your conduct must justify that welcome and that trust."

"Your duty cannot be done unless your health is sound. So keep constantly on your guard against any excesses. In the new experience you may find temptations both in wine and women. You must entirely resist both temptations, and while treating all women with perfect courtesy, you should avoid any intimacy. It is the intention to start work at an early date, so as to have the structure completed by the time snow falls."

"Fear God."

"Honor the King."

KITCHENER, Field Marshal.

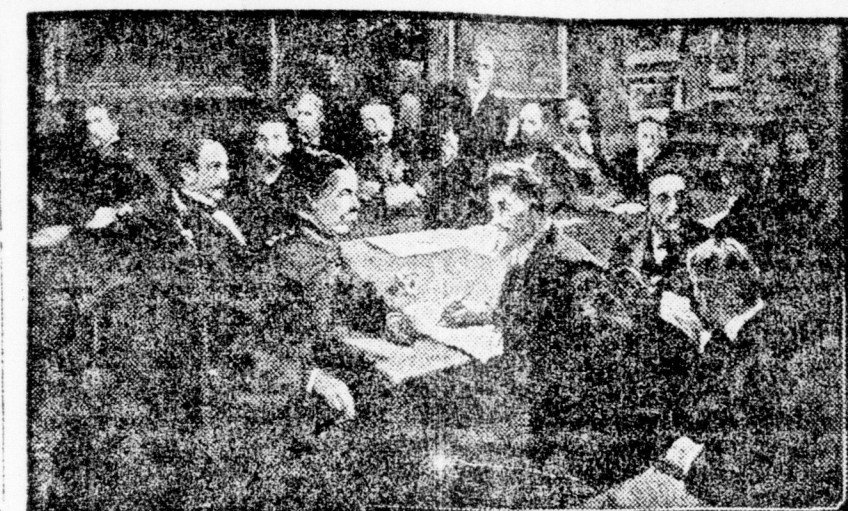

APPOINTMENT TODAY

Vacancy On School Board Being Filled This Afternoon.

The board of education will meet this afternoon to appoint a successor to the late Dr. W. T. Tisdall. From present indications, John S. Barnard will be selected, although Finlay Marshall will have some supporters.

Ray Lawson will probably be selected as a representative on the industrial committee to succeed F. E. Leonard, who has resigned.

LOSS GREAT MISFORTUNE, SAYS CAMP COMMANDANT

"Serious News," Declares Col. Shannon, When Informed by Advertiser of British War Lord's Reported Death—Hundreds of Veterans Here Served Under the Great Military Chieftain.

First news of the loss of the British war lord was given to the Carling Heights camp by The Advertiser. When Col. L. W. Shannon, D. O. C., was informed by an Advertiser reporter of the report, he expressed the sentiments of the military men of No. 1 district, when he declared that it was a serious piece of information.

"It is indeed serious news," said the colonel. "His loss naturally means a great misfortune. There can be no denying the fact."

Scattered among the various overseas battalions at Carling Heights and adjacent mobilization camps are some hundreds of veterans who have served under the great "K. of K." in South Africa and Egypt. In the city, too, in civilian life are scores of men who have been proud to say they soldiered under the man who won his title at Khartoum and who has been an idol in the eyes of British soldiers for many, many years.

Stories of Kitchener's unswerving insistence that officers as well as men adhere to the very letter of the law of discipline, have been told and retold by those who knew and served under him. Bugle-Sergeant Smethurst, who left with the 34th Battalion, was at one time an orderly to the great "K. of K." Last summer he recalled some reminiscences of his experiences with the war lord to an Advertiser reporter.

"I can remember when Kitchener packed off a whole officers' mess at Pretoria," said Smethurst. "He walked into their mess and found them drinking and gambling instead of being with their men. There was nothing to it then. Those officers all went home."

"Kitchener demanded that every member of his staff be on the job all the time, and every time. There was no gold lace parades for them. Some officers tried to get on his staff for the honor that was in it, but they didn't stay long. They went or else they buckled down to work."

BELIEVED IN WORK.

"Kitchener was a real soldier. He was no dress parade artist. He believed in real work, and when he started he was determined to finish. War to him was a business. It was no play-thing." So declared Lieut.-Col. Bart Robson, O. C. of the 15th.

He said that there was, in his opinion, but as it has been given out by the British war office I fear that any grounds that he has not been lost are groundless," continued the colonel.

DUMBFOUNDED AT NEWS.

Bishop Fallon was simply dumbfounded when the news reached him that Earl Kitchener was dead. His lordship thought it hardly creditable. But when he was assured that it was so, he sent forth a message of courage and hope.

"It is a great blow, but we must pull ourselves together to meet this or any other loss," he declared. "This is not the time for sentiment, but the hour for action. We must get together and fight. And fight we will."

Bishop Williams referred to Earl Kitchener's great work, particularly in organizing and equipping 5,000,000 fighting men. Had the blow come twenty months or more ago, it would have been a calamity, in his mind. His work was done. His losses overwhelming, but not irreparable.

Calls Him Sheet Anchor.

"Earl Kitchener stood in the breach when we needed him most," declared his lordship. "He was our sheet anchor. He saw with a clear vision what the war meant, and he went about his work masterfully, splendidly. We of the British Empire will never forget his great work. He has trained great men, and in his place will come others, inspired by him, and devoted to a great and glorious cause."

Others spoke along the same line. The outbreak of the European war, for a time he was vice-consul at Ezerum, but soon returned to Cyprus and made a survey of the island.

The plans for the new hydro shop are being prepared, and will be ready for submission to the utilities commission this week. It is the intention to start work at an early date, so as to have the structure completed by the time snow falls.

K. OF K.'S BIRTHPLACE

He was in full charge of the operation against the British successor to the Mahdi, for the recovery of the lost provinces, which were under Mahdist rule from 1882 to 1898. The army he led was defeated in September 1898, and ended in 1898 with the overthrow of the Khedive.

Receives a Peerage. He was received in England with the greatest enthusiasm, and was rewarded with a peerage. In 1899, he was appointed governor-general of the Egyptian Sudan, with large discretionary powers. In 1899, he was made chief of the staff to Lord Roberts in South Africa, succeeding Long Occupied Only With Organization for War.

Mason Says Death Will Not Cause Anything Like Breakdown.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

New York, June 6.—J. W. T. Mason, chief war critic of the United Press, says: The death of Lord Kitchener will have a depressing effect upon the United Kingdom because of his services early in the war, but it will not cause anything of a breakdown in management of Great Britain's part in the allied campaign.

During the past year Lord Kitchener's responsibilities have been gradually curtailed, until at the time of his death he had little control over the strategy of the war, and was engaged almost exclusively in matters of organization. The British Empire owes a large debt of gratitude to Lord Kitchener for the manner in which he stimulated recruiting during the first months of the war.

"EFFICIENCY" WAS EARL'S WATCHWORD FOR ALL TRAINING

Sergt.-Major Green Tells of War Lord in India.

FOUR DAYS TRYING TEST

Battalions Had But One Meal a Day While Undergoing It.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Sergt.-Major Greene, of the bayonet school instructors staff at the army, served under Kitchener in India, where he was from 1904 to 1906. He remembers the great leader well, and tells many incidents of his thoroughness.

"He was a marvelous organizer, his greatest talents lying in that direction," said Sergt.-Major Greene. "His work in this war is an evidence, but his entire history shows that. In India he organized that nation, and his wonderful loyalty in this crisis is due largely to his brilliant gifts as an organizer."

Kitchener's Battalion Test. "I was commander-in-chief when I was in India, and we came in contact with him frequently. To show how strict he was for discipline and training, I will tell about Kitchener's test, a competition for a cup donated by him. All the battalions would compete. The test extended over four days and would have to march between 25 and 30 miles a day, have rifle practice in the field, our scores being kept, and perform gymnastics and bayonet work at the end of the day. We were allowed one meal a day, that's all, and sometimes it was mighty hot. As I said, the test extended over four days, and you may well believe that it was hard work. At the end of the period our scores were made up and the number in the hospitals counted. The battalion making the best showing won the cup. It was strenuous work, to say the least of it, but it showed the spirit of the men. Efficiency was his watchword."

The boys used to occur a year or more ago, it would have been absolutely "astrous."

Not Pleasant To Look At.

"Earl Kitchener was not a pleasant man to look at, some distance away. He was a sour looking man, but when he spoke to you his face changed. He was ready to talk business at any minute, and would be kindly and interested. I never saw him smile, and I don't know that any person else did. The British nation has suffered a great loss in his death. It is a mighty good thing that the organization of the army was so far advanced as it is. His loss is a great loss, and it is a pity that it should have been absolutely "astrous."

THORNDALE, June 5.—Miss McKenzie of the local high school, took charge of the services on the Thorndale circuit on Sunday, in the absence of Rev. W. H. Hiles, B.A., who is attending conference.

Story of "K's" Brilliant Career

even the war office had no pronounced liking for him, but on all sides there was profound respect for his military efficiency and for all he had done to extend the domains of the British Empire.

BACK FROM EGYPT.

By mere luck Kitchener happened to be in England on one of the comparatively rare visits that he had paid to London during his long career abroad, when the European war broke out. He had just come home from service as British agent in Egypt, had accepted an earldom from King George, and was being talked of as viceroy of India. Within a few hours after England's declaration of war, Kitchener was appointed secretary of state for war, and immediately took full charge at the war office, where he worked day and night to overcome the handicap which the Central Powers had over England in the matter of fighting strength.

PREDICTED GRIM WAR.

He grimly told the British people they had a bigger war on their hands than they realized, and one that might last longer than they expected, but it was to be faced with entire confidence. Without his crowning achievements as the great organizer of the British campaign in the European war, Kitchener had already won wide and lasting fame by his many campaigns in Egypt, South Africa and in India.

BORN IN IRELAND.

He was born June 24, 1850, in County Kerry, Ireland, a fact that gave rise to a general belief that he was of Irish blood, but his parents were of French and English descent. His father was a soldier, but of no very high rank. He had managed to climb to the lieutenant-colonelcy of a dragoon regiment, when he retired to the estate in Ireland, where Horatio Herbert Kitchener, the to-be-distinguished son, was born.

HIS MILITARY TRAINING.

Young Kitchener received his fundamental military education at Woolwich, where he displayed only ordinary brilliancy, with the exception of his liking for mathematics.

The fight at Omdurman, September 2, 1898, just across the Nile from Khartoum, was the greatest battle of Kitchener's time in Egypt. Osman Digna faced him with 50,000 Mahdists, while he had but 20,000 men. When the battle was over, 11,000 of the Mahdists had been killed outright, 16,000 wounded, and 4,000 taken prisoners, while the English and Egyptian loss altogether was under 500 men.

WORSHIPPED AS HERO.

With the capture of Khartoum, capital of the Sudan, which meant the re-establishment of British possession of these upper reaches of the Nile, Kitchener became the object of hero-worship in England.

For his triumphs in the Sudan he was raised to the peerage as Earl Kitchener of Khartoum and received the thanks of Parliament and $150,000.

Earl Kitchener was born in Ballylongford, Ireland, in 1851. He entered the army in 1871, and in 1874 joined the service of West Palestine.

He returned to England in 1875, and was engaged for two years in preparing the Palestine Exploration Fund's map. He returned to the Holy Land in 1877, and surveyed Galilee. In 1878, he was sent to Cyprus to organize the courts. For a time he was vice-consul at Ezerum, but soon returned to Cyprus and made a survey of the island.

His Entry to Egypt. In 1882, he volunteered for service in the Egyptian army under Sir Evelyn Wood, and became one of the majors of cavalry. Kitchener served in the Nile expedition of 1884-85, and was decorated for his distinguished services. Later he was made brigadier or commander-in-chief of the Egyptian army.

He was in full charge of the operation against the British successor to the Mahdi, for the recovery of the lost provinces, which were under Mahdist rule from 1882 to 1898. The army he led was defeated in September 1898, and ended in 1898 with the overthrow of the Khedive.

Receives a Peerage. He was received in England with the greatest enthusiasm, and was rewarded with a peerage. In 1899, he was appointed governor-general of the Egyptian Sudan, with large discretionary powers. In 1899, he was made chief of the staff to Lord Roberts in South Africa, succeeding Gundorrough House, Tralee, Ireland.

Immediately after the peace, General Kitchener went to India, as commander-in-chief of the British forces there, and in this position which he held for seven years, he carried out not only far-reaching administrative reform, but a complete reorganization and strategic redistribution of the British and native forces. On leaving India in 1905, he was promoted field marshal and appointed commander-in-chief and high commissioner in the Mediterranean, and later on took a tour of inspection of the forces of the entire Empire, drawing up a scheme of defence of the overseas dominions.

In Egypt Once More. He then returned to Egypt, the scene of his first triumph, in the capacity of British agent and consul-general in Cairo—virtually a governor-generalship of Egypt—and led in the economical development of the country, building new roads and irrigation projects on a large scale.

During all the years the British people had looked on Kitchener's silent but effective work, they had never been able to fathom his personality. A Cockney non-commissioned officer, who had seen much service under him, summed up the general opinion when he said of Kitchener: "E's no talker. Not 'im. 'E's all steel and lace."

His face was that of a man who neither asked for sympathy nor wanted it.

He had steady, blue-grey, passionless eyes, and a heavy mustache covered a mouth that shut close and firm like a wolf trap. He believed with all his might in the gospel of work. He had an illimitable self-confidence. For bungling and faint-heartedness he was incapable of feeling sympathy or showing mercy; an officer who failed him once got no second chance. He had a grim, laconic humor. "What is your taste in hairpins?" for instance, is said to have been the query with which he annihilated a dandified officer.

He was indifferent to popularity, particularly among women, and thought fated all over the world in social circles, he never married.

P. A. Bonnot's Rheumatism Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

And With It Went All Those Symptoms Which Mark the Earlier Stages of Kidney Trouble.

Grand Clairiere, Man., June 5.—(Special.)—"All persons who suffer from rheumatism should use Dodd's Kidney Pills." This is the statement volunteered by Mr. P. A. Bonnot, a well-known resident of this place. Asked to give the reasons why Mr. Bonnot said:

"I suffered for three years from rheumatism. I consulted a doctor without getting any results. Four boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills fixed me up."

That rheumatism is caused by sick kidneys failing to strain the uric acid out of the blood was again shown in Mr. Bonnot's case. His earlier symptoms were: heart flutterings, broken and unrefreshing sleep, flitting appetite, a tired, nervous feeling, a heaviness after meals, neuralgia and backache.

When he cured his kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills the rheumatism and all the other symptoms of kidney trouble disappeared.

THE FIRST OF JUNE.

IT WAS the first of June when the British fleet chased the Germans into port. "Let us bang those dogs of theirs," said Sir Richard Grenville, and Admiral Beatty felt and acted the same way with the sea dogs of Hunland.

It was the first of June, 1794, when Lord Howe defeated the French fleet off the French coast near Brest and chased its remnants into harbor. Howe was described by Nelson as "the first and greatest sea officer the world had produced." The first of June will continue to be a red letter day in our naval calendar.

"STRAFFING" CANADIANS.

ONCE again Canadian troops are in the thick of severe fighting; in fact, the present battle between Isonne and the Ipres-Metz railway is entirely between them and the Huns. They alone are holding the line, and frustrating the foe's efforts to break through.

There seems to be a considered policy among the German military commanders of making life as unpleasantly hot as possible for Canadians who have enlisted on freedom's side. No sooner does a battalion get to the front than it is hammered by artillery and attacked by infantry. There is venom in every shot fired on the bearers of the maple leaf. Other battalions reach the front, are relieved, and go back again, without experiencing half the "straffing" which falls to the lot of Canada's troops.

This is not without reason. It will never be forgotten in Berlin that when Canada was the goal, and over two hundred thousand Huns were massed ready for the triumphal march to that much-desired port, a handful of Canadians attacked and stopped them, and actually, by magnificent bravery, not unaided with bluff, saved France and Britain from a solar-plexus blow.

These time conditions are more equal. For every shell hurled into the Canadian lines, at least one is returned, and bluff is no longer required—the actual force to stop the Huns is present and ready. Forced to fall back some 700 yards, the Canadians swept back, and with bomb and bayonet routed out and killed those who were beginning to imagine they had gained a success.

"Cool and skillful," their behavior is called. To their native dash and gallantry experience has added knowledge and caution, and made veterans of them all.

Although only a comparatively few thousand Canadians have been engaged thus far in the actual fighting, they have earned honorable mention time and again. They have, so far as reports show, done more than their share of the fighting, and received their full need of glory. It is remarkable that any small body of troops could be such an important factor in the struggle of millions as the boys from the Dominion have been. They have earned a name for valor and strategy which has made them the prime objects of German hatred.

REJECTED OFFICERS.

WHY DO so many senior officers relinquish their posts when their regiments are sent to the front? Of course it is natural that when a battalion is broken up into reinforcements for other battalions the place of the senior officer is abolished automatically. But if it is a question of competence or the lack of it on the part of the senior officer the matter has another aspect.

The Mail and Empire has said recently that the explanation for the breaking up of battalions is not because of the primary need of reinforcements, but that "the officers were not able to pass the rigid tests that the British military authorities called upon them to undergo, and so have been given camp appointments, their men being sent to the front in charge of strange but more competent British officers. There are," adds the Mail, "hundreds of Canadian officers kicking their heels around camps in England months after their men have been under fire."

No one can direct adverse criticism at the rejected officers themselves. They offered their lives without knowing what the final disposal would be. If the militia department had faith in them they were warranted in accepting command, and if they were not capable of leading a regiment the department should not have permitted them to cross the ocean. It is humiliating to any commanding officer to lose his battalion, but there can be no disgrace attaching to his removal. But there should be some regard for the fitness of officers to command battalions, and when that is said a field of difficult speculation is opened.

Canada has not been a country to breed many commanding officers. Even those who have been interested in the militia do not reach the standard required by this war, and most of them are free to confess that they have much to learn before being capable of taking hold. The militia commanders have been exhausted and most of their officers, as well. So that the next thing the department had to do was to find civilians who would offer themselves as commanding officers and endeavor to make soldiers out of them. At the same time the manipulation of officers not holding senior rank might have brought forward good material for commands, and it is a question if the best use has been made of the officering talent. The ability of a businessman to finance or to manage does not qualify him to lead 1,000 men, in fact, he may be wholly incapable of handling a military unit. Intensive training is required by men in every rank to be fit for service in this war, and how a commanding officer without previous experience or with only amateurish experience, can qualify himself to lead a regiment is difficult to understand. Can he be expected to do himself or his battalion justice? If the time he arrives in England? If hundreds of senior officers are kicking their heels around the old country it is about time that a survey of the experienced officers available was made.

A STUDY OF HONESTY.

THERE can be little honesty in neutral quarters as to which admiralty is to be believed. German writers talk of English lies, but while official Britain has nothing on her conscience in that respect, official Germany ought to have.

It was a shameful thing on the part of the German Government to trumpet the lie of a Belgian intrigue against Germany before the war, and perhaps more shameful and more disgusting was the similar attempt to defend the atrocities in Belgium during the war by the publication of a volume of perjuries charging up these acts to Belgian provocation. This was the infamous White Book issued by the German foreign office in July, 1915, and withdrawn last December because publicly shown up and discredited by Duhr's "The Spirit of Lying in the War of Nations."

Duhr is a German Jesuit who investigated the official German "proofs," disproved every case investigated, annihilated the supposed value of the White Book, and put the German Government to shame. The great marvel is how the Hun machine ever slipped sufficiently to let the "Spirit of Lying" get published, and in the German language, at that. Once, however, it got out and was read, the foreign office had to back down and confess its lies.

It was the same with a telegram sent by the Kaiser himself to President Wilson in September, 1914, in regard to the Belgian campaign. Its statements also were quickly disproved. Let neutrals guess which admiralty is likely to tell the truth.

THE MAIL'S VIEW.

THAT certain "powerful influences" are determined to stand by Sir Sam Hughes, just as he is prepared to stand by Col. Wesley Allison, is the charge made by the Conservative Montreal Mail. The Mail is one of the few Government papers which cannot adjust its conscience to the revelations before the Meredith-Duff commission, evidently believing that the investigation has proven the very thing it set out to prove—that Col. Allison profited in a large way by reason of his connection with Sir Sam Hughes.

The Mail has the following conclusions to make known:

Col. J. W. Allison was praised by Sir Sam Hughes in Parliament, before the latter went to Great Britain, as a pure patriot.

The Meredith-Duff Commission proceedings put a different complexion on Col. Allison's operations. They gave denial to Hughes' boasts. Col. Allison took commissions right and left, and he was shown up in a light that utterly belied Gen. Hughes' estimate of his purely patriotic interest. He took his pound of flesh; and he took the wind out of his ministerial friend's boasts.

It having been established that Allison took commissions, Sir Sam Hughes was forced to abandon his jabs of knowledge of that fact. But he did not denounce the taking of toll; he defended it. When he learned that Allison, whom he boasted would be entitled to his "expenses," held both hands in the commission bag, he was still for Allison—for him to such an extent that his eulogy was refused consideration by the judges. Sir Sam kept step with Col. Allison as the revelations were brought out; he was progressive in his praises, and concurrent in his justification as the truth was revealed.

It looks very much as if Sir Sam Hughes had made up his mind to stand by Allison, just as it looks as if the "powerful influences" were bound to stand by Hughes. The Allison-Hughes alliance seems to grow stronger as the evidence against Allison, in a profiteering sense, increases in scope.

When all the thin eulogy of Allison, voiced by Sir Sam, is dismissed, the question left is: Could not any Government official, possessed of average common sense, have done everything Col. Allison has done without one cent's charge to the shell committee?

No word of evidence has indicated that Allison was possessed of special knowledge as regards shells or fuses. He was simply Sir Sam Hughes' friend, and would have had no connection with Canada's war purchases had it not been for his friendship with the minister of militia.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The "rat" came out into the North Sea, but was glad to get back to its hole.

The flagship Lion is still afloat, and ready for more; typical of the British lion, and had more for Germany.

Oh, yes, the Allies trust the Greeks at Saloniki; but they remember Mark Twain's advice to "trust everyone, but cut the cards."

A rainbow appeared Saturday evening. It must have been a reflection of the king's birthday honors conferred on the weatherman.

When Admiral Charles Boreasford

calls the British naval action a brilliant success, and offers no criticism, the rest of the nation may rest well content.

The British naval men must get accustomed to fighting with their backs to the sun. The Germans will only be lured out when assured of this condition.

Canada's beknighted aristocracy continues to grow. However the optimist will believe that there will always be Mr. Gladstone or a Mr. Lloyd George to look after the country's welfare.

Most annoying! In spite of Germany's declaration of a great victory over the whole British fleet, neutral America insists on treating the affair as a defeat for the Huns. Can't it take the German word?

Dr. Waite is to be divorced before he goes to the chair. Mrs. Waite does not want him to be executed while still her legal husband; but surely that is little, compared with the fact that he was a murderer while her husband.

Among the terribly distressing results of the war is the threatened shortage of canary birds. None are being exported from Germany, and American demand for British birds is greater than the supply. The Huns are probably dining luxuriously on theirs, one to a family.

The German chancellor is quoted as saying that the new international boundaries must be where the trenches are. The Allies will O. K. that in a few months. General Smuts has to finish his job in Africa first and there are one or two matters to be attended to in Europe.

The Toronto News explains that if James J. Hill had stayed in Canada he might have become a baronet. Instead of that he merely became a great man. He will never know what he missed. There is a lesson in it for the Canadian boys of today. If they stay at home and vote right they may become baronets, sir knights or honorary colonels.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Another Suggestion for Berlin.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: Re changing the name Berlin.

It would appear as though the members of the Berlin council and committee appointed to act in conjunction with them, had passed over certain names suggested and more suitable to the city than the ones selected for the ratification vote on. In the list of names suggested and which appeared from time to time in the different papers I think the council and committee could have made a much better selection.

I could mention dozens of names that were offered, which, I presume, would have been more popular with the rank and file of the citizens of Berlin, but as only one name is required I will endorse the party who suggested the name "Spandina City."

The name does not seem to appear on the postoffice directory of Canada, and it has a real Canadian-American, or will I say, North American ring to it, and, as I understand, is of Indian origin, meaning beautiful. Surely one could not pass such a name by without comment.

As my name does not appear as a competitor in the contest, or am I knowingly associated with any of them, I can write from an unbiased standpoint, and I hope my letter may be helpful to the committee of "99."

In arriving at a decision in the re-naming of their beautiful city.

Thanking you, I beg to remain,

Yours very truly,

AMERICAN LIFE'S NEEDS.

(Chicago Tribune.)

America's life needs at once more discipline and more beauty. It needs at once a taste of harder service and a taste for more delicate things. It needs sounder bodies, stouter courage, and more manly devotion. It needs a full life until it is harder physically and more appreciative esthetically.

It needs a keener sense of its muscles, its course, and its soul. It needs to get rid of its big abdomen and its low brow. It needs to stop thinking that a limousine and a liking for "Silver Threads Among the Gold" are high spots in success and culture.

It needs to know that a strong people can have good taste. It needs to know that good taste and good courage go together more frequently than low brows and high devotion. Our little brown brother, the Jap, has an exquisite sense of everything beautiful that has been revealed in his experience and a very commendable taste for everything dangerous that can be offered him in the course of duty. He will carry flowers on the battlefield, and carry them into the enemy's territory.

TAKING NO CHANCES.

[Life.]

Jones and his wife were seated at the dining-room table perusing the evening papers, when the doorbell rang. Jones arose to answer it when the wife said:

"Let me hide those umbrellas before you let them in."

"Why, do you think it is somebody who will steal them?" asked Jones.

"No," replied his wife, "but it might be someone who will recognize them."

THE BROKEN SOLDIER.

[Westminster Gazette.]

The broken soldier edges and whistles day to dark.

He's but the remnant of a man, maimed and half blind;

But the soul they could not harm goes singing like the lark in the mead.

Like the incarnate joy that given not be confined.

The lady at the Hall has given him a light task;

He works in the gardens as busy as a bee;

One hand is but a stump, and his face a pitted thing;

Yet the gay soul goes singing like a bird set free.

Whistling and singing like a linnet on a wing.

The others stop to listen, leaning on the spade;

Whole men and comely, they fret at a piteous thing.

The soul of him's singing like a thrush in the glade.

Hither and thither hopping, like Robin on the grass,

The soul in the broken man is beautiful and brave;

And while he weeds the pansies and the bright hours pass

The bird caught in the cage whistles its joyous slave.

WAIT A MINUTE!

—By J. H. F.

The German victory (?) at sea is like a lot more of them—they should be discounted greatly.

Some uplift persons have discovered that the poor eat too much. That's one awful crime. Probably a lot of them breathe too much.

"What's so rare as a day in June," hummed a poet. This chap could never have been wandering around Ontario along about June 3 or 4, or the other days.

The farmer these days should be equipped with a diving suit, and a torpedo tube to shoot the grain into the land.

Cartanza wants the American troops to withdraw, leading us to the belief that Gen. Pershing is close to Villa.

Dr. Waite says he does not want any sympathy. A regular snub to a lot of New York women.

MUSICAL CRITICISM.

[From the Louisville Courier-Journal.]

A Chicago critic says the diva reached a note about two and a half feet higher than high C, gripped it with both beautiful hands and chimed it three times. That's the printed word of forcing the sporting editor to write about trifling matters because the regular music critic is taking a summer vacation.

The German naval victory was so decisive that the Kaiser's admirals will make no effort to repeat it for many a long day.

Sir Sam Hughes has refused to discuss the dismissal of the colonel of a battalion. This is worth mentioning as it is the first time that Sam has refused to talk.

To J. H. F., Editor "Wait a Minute!"

Column. Dear Sir,—They say that "music hath power (charms) to stir (soothe), etc., etc." Well, if music hath that power, then why not "Bill's" poetry? At any rate, see what it's "got me doing," and I'm only "one of 'em"—everybody's doing it now. It strikes me that "Bill" is about the richest feature I've seen in a paragraph column for some time. But, as I said before, see what he's inspired me to "pull."

The muse running wild, I sat down to the "game."

To try and think how a man thinks. When endeavoring to follow Bill's thinking route at times.

When he oils up his thinker to think out his rhymes.

With their intricate, classical kinks.

I saw then a long, lowish auto pass by—

And I thought of a small daschund dawd.

Then of German invasions—of horseless marines,

U. S. submarines and Hun submarines.

Of Armour plate-ham a la haug.

A bulleseye! I'd struck it—the futurist style!

Sans all continuity of theme,

Save that ends of lines rhyme—or, if no, nearly so—

It's an up-to-date literature, Bill, let 'er go.

She's a hit—she's almost a scream!

Very truly, ONE OF 'EM.

Nor have we heard that the crown prince has booked passage to New York, to convey his personal thanks to Judge Cohan, and other Germans.

A lady wrote a story saying how she lost 50 pounds and did not have to call in the undertaker. After discovering what she had to put up with to slough the load, we decided to nourish and cherish our fat to the rest of our days, be they few or many. Sob stuff.

There is one thing about the weather. Great Britain need never want good sailors, if the rain keeps up a few days longer. There are about 10,000 men in khaki here who will be in a position to qualify soon.

Poet Bill has a tribute to pay to Britain's gallant sailors. He is determined never to be a slave, and tells how it is done.

WHY ARE WE WORRIED OVER THIS?

We read of the battle on the waves with Britain and Germany. Some thinking we will yet be slaves. But no, it is not to be.

For many years have come and gone And many yet to go No better seamen has the sun shone

Are we downhearted, say no!

For old England has the guns And also got the ships Soon she will have the Huns Like a woman gathers chips.

For when she gets those big guns sighted And her battleships alighted She will stay there till everything is through

Some may sink and still we think But it is all for me and you.

For in wartime there are resources And these boats alter their courses And take another way about Britain, you bet, will do it and put the enemy to route.

Here we read about the brave Sailors who filled a watery grave In these horrors of the war But it's for victory who can save When they are far from shore.

Their names will always be in mind In the books of a new history For some of our children in it will find And some day read to you and me.

For there has been since the earth was made Battle across land and sea Many a hero his dear life has laid Everyday we read fighting for victory.

For Canada has the men behind the guns And Britain the ships on the sea Pretty soon will be the end of the Hun Is all that now appears to me.

MR. TAYLOR EXPLAINS

By Louise Oliver.

The jewelry department of the big store is just inside one of the main entrances. This kingdom was subdivided into special realms and over each principally reigned a princess in black dress, white collar and cuffs. Never was royalty more becomingly adorned, for Max Blumming, floor manager, knew what he was doing when he picked the prettiest girls in the store for this point of vantage, and beauty always looks well in plain dress.

May Marshall, a tall blonde, had charge of the jet goods. Here also did Mr. Blumming show judgment and the silver plates was presided over by two pretty little brunettes, who made the plates and baking dishes appear all the more massive and shining beside the dark, piquant beauty. Then—and here the manager had undeniably shown his ability as an artist—there was the counter for displaying jewels, from twenty-five cent bead strings to two-carat, first-water diamonds, and right behind the counter, and in the trays of rhinestones stood Mary Webster, as wholesome, sweet and fresh as a May morning.

Mary was well, she was just Mary. You looked at her and loved her, and her eyes were, like the country skies she'd left, gray or blue, according to her mood, and her skin seemed the cosmetics of the drug department beyond. And you wanted her to try her, the var-colored jewels to see how they would look on her. One invariably thought of pearls—not that her beauty needed softening, but there was something in her skin to the soft, rich lustre of the deep sea gems.

"Good morning, Miss Webster!" Somehow he had learned her name, although she had not told him. She nodded brightly, however, as she set a hatpin holder over a freshly-dusted spot and passed the cloth briskly over the top of the glass case.

The man passed up the aisle and disappeared. Evidently he had something to do with the store, but he was not a salesman, for his hours were different from the others. Mary, still smiling, was suddenly unpleasantly aware that Mr. Blumming was at the end of the aisle and that he was watching her. She flushed and hastily turned her head.

"It seems to me," she said indignantly, "that I can't breathe any more without that man seeing it. He's always looking at me." She shivered involuntarily. "One thing sure, if he stays around here talking like he did yesterday and inviting me to dinner, I am going to ask to be changed upstairs. Very good-looking that young man was and he has nice eyes and teeth. Sort of makes you think he's always having a little joke of his own."

She smiled at the memory, but was suddenly serious in contrast with the floor manager just across the counter. His own smile faded as quickly as her's when he noticed the quick change of her expression, but as quickly reappeared.

"Good morning, Miss Mary. Did your mirror tell you how pretty you look today? There's a little curl resting over so lightly on your cheek that I would like to kiss it." He beamed familiarly over the counter and fixed his eyes immovably on her face.

Mary kept busily at her dusting. "And that's a man not a mile away! I would like to hit and I would if my bread and butter didn't depend on it," said Mary under her breath. Aloud, "Where shall I put these new brooches, Mr. Blumming?" Would you suggest a background of blue velvet in the case?"

But he mistook the flush of annoyance for one of pleasure, and, disregarding her words, went on: "Blushing is a lost art, Miss Mary. It's very becoming to you. By the way, aren't you sorry you turned down my invitation last night? But there's always another day and I'm not the kind of fellow who takes offense easily. How about tonight?"

"I—I've another engagement." He regarded her steadily. "I don't believe you. How another soul in his shoes could have so much of a heart, I don't know. You haven't another engagement?" His insolence was maddening. "Have-n't I?" she flashed. "You know nothing about me. I used to be engaged to be married for all you know, Mr. Blumming."

She didn't know why she said it, but the need of a protector, hypothetical though it might be, was imperative, and it came out before she could think.

Mr. Blumming was silent an instant and his smile disappeared. Then he laughed easily, "I don't believe it." But he didn't let Mary in on his momentary peace. At the intersection of two aisles Mary had a glimpse of the young man with the nice eyes, the one who seemed to enjoy a little of her own. He looked her way, their eyes met, and—Mr. Blumming was forgotten.

That night, after thinking things over, Mary decided to do something. The manager was right. She knew hardly any one in the big city and certainly no one well enough to go to for advice. So there was no one to rely upon but her own. She looked her way, their eyes met, and—Mr. Blumming was forgotten.

"I must do something to convince that man that I—there is somebody who cares for me. And it can't do any harm. I can put it back at closing time every night."

So the next morning, while arranging her wares, Mary took from its place in the tray a solitary diamond of carat weight and slipped it onto the third finger of her left hand.

At first, she stood gazing at its changing color rapturously. Then, suddenly thoughtful, she started to draw it off. What was it she doing? It wasn't the sentiment of wearing what wasn't hers that troubled her, but the false significance of the thing. Was it right to make the world believe she was engaged when she wasn't?

"Good morning, Miss Webster!" Mary hastened covered her hand and returned the greeting. It was the man with the nice eyes. This time he stopped, but hesitated as though the close proximity of going to say out of his head. Mary hastily turned the stone in the ring under her thumb.

"Is there anything I can show you?" she smiled.

"Well, I guess I can see for myself the way it's spread out," he grinned. "But you can show me anything you like. What's the latest thing in cream jewelry?"

"Opposite counter," laughed Mary. "That won't do then. Let's see! I'll look at a pin for my grandmother. Something like this, I suppose."

"Wait a minute. I've changed my mind. Show me those necklaces."

"Once in a while time to choose. Finally the young man decided upon one, paid for it, got his change and put the package into his pocket. Then he went on his way humming a merry little tune.

Mr. Blumming drew near. Mary hastily turned the stone into view. "Well, Miss Mary, good-morning, and ever going, eh? Well, there's always a ring coming. That's my motto!"

Cynthia Grey's Mail-Box

[Correspondents are requested to make their inquiries as brief as possible, and to write on one side of the paper only. It is impossible to give replies within a stated time, as all letters have to be answered in turn. No letter can be answered privately.]

STAIN ON IVORY.

Dear Miss Grey—Kindly advise me through your column how to remove a stain on Parian ivory, caused by the spilling of a bottle of perfume, and oblige.
E. M.

Ans.—It is too bad your ivory had such a misfortune; afraid I have no suggestions to make for removing the stain. Has anyone else taken out a mark satisfactorily? Sorry I can't help, E. M.

A Fragrant Token.

The other day the morning mail brought me a box of fragrant lilies of the valley, and some sunny-faced panicles from "A Grandma." Please accept my warmest thanks for them and the kindly thought which prompted their sending. A bit wilted? Yes but they speedily revived in water.

Wants Song "Daddy."

Dear Miss Grey—Just noticed in the paper where "Stranger" with your latest's want, my address, so am sending it along, also a stamped addressed envelope for the song called "Daddy." If you have it, I would like the words if you have them to spare. The words if you have them to spare. The words if you have them to spare.

BLACK BEAUTY.

Ans.—Haven't the words on hand just now. Can anyone supply them? Your inquiry: One at least. Wonder if you know each other?

Laura Recommends.

Dear Miss Grey—Here I come bothering you and all "the page" readers again. So you didn't like the last story. Well, I don't blame you at all. I guess nobody else did, either—at least, nobody but you had anything to say about it. Now, Miss Grey, for a confession: I'm not a girl, as you took me to be. I'm a boy, but not one of "Would-be Pollyanna's" mischievous ones. That reminds me, I'd like to correspond with "Would-be Pollyanna," if that is, if she would consent. I'll promise her I won't do as her brother did. I see where my aunt also wrote to you, giving the recipe for dandelion wine. Believe me, folks, it's awful good! I'd advise you to try it. I know, and speak from experience.

LAURIE.

Ans.—Speak up, "Would-be Pollyanna," and let us know how you regard "Laura's" offer. Could you blame me, "Laura," for turning down the beauty contest idea? What trouble I'd have after making the award!

Cookies Won't Keep.

Dear Miss Grey—Will you let me make a visit to your "Mail-Box"? I made some of "Mrs. Home-bird's" cookies, and after she put them in the oven they raised and then fell. It is because she didn't put enough flour in them? Papa said to you there was something wrong with them because they wouldn't keep. I should like to join the circus troupe. I could dance, whistle or sing. Which one do they need the worst?

A BLACKBIRD.

Ans.—Perhaps your mother's oven was not quite hot enough, or it may be as she thinks, that more flour was needed. But I don't believe the cookies were entirely spoiled. Your papa is entirely right. Your papa is entirely right. Your papa is entirely right.

A KITCHEN TOWEL BASKET.

One of the serviceable things a woman can give another is a kitchen towel basket. It is even a suitable gift to give a bride who intends going housekeeping. Buy a high, narrow basket and tie a handsome white sash on it. If you wish you may fill the basket with all kinds of hand-hemmed kitchen towels.

PEACE (not peace), there!

Now, another subject I do want to bring up and it's a grand one for a debate. Doesn't it make your heart ache to go out in the evening and see the way the girls and young women of this city are acting on the streets, simply to attract some soldier? I have been ashamed more than once. Of course, I know the majority of soldiers are honorable men, but there's a danger point! Isn't there some way of sounding a warning. Girls, don't do it! Now, let's have a discussion on this topic. I don't know if I'll sign on the "doodle," but I had to "explode" some time. Sincerely,

BUSINESS GIRL.

Ans.—Your letter will be read with interest by many of our business girls, and others. Am also glad that you touched on the subject of your closing remarks. It is only too sadly true that some of our girls need "danger" signs constantly before them.

Vanko, the Mount Brydges horse, is not entered in the $10,000 Hoster Columbus stakes at Columbus in September, but is in two $3,000 stakes, and one $5,000 event. The classes are all faster, so it looks as if this bird is considered among the best by Tommy Murphy.

Allen B. Frank Entrick's pacer, in the $5,000 stake at the Columbus meet, and also in a $3,000 stake. Walter Cox has this chap in hand, and he seems to be going right.

Joe Patchen II., Rod Mackenzie's big boy, will tackle the half-milers at Saginaw this month.

Among the Western Ontario horses entered in the Saginaw and Port Huron meets are Onward Allerton, a Toronto horse; Petrona, one of Miss Wilks' string; Wood Points, Indian Hill, Monarch Lady, Sunday Morning, all trotters; Eagle Bars, a Strathroy wiggler; Freddie Mack, Candebebe; Miss Primus, Toronto; Patchen Wilkes II., W. What Sort of a Fellow
Is Tyrus Raymond Cobb?

Billy Evans, the Veteran Umpire, Tells of His Experiences
With the Georgia Peach—Has Most Effective
Slide of Any Player in Game.

[BY BILLY EVANS.]

"Tyrus Cobb is the greatest ballplayer in the history of the game." That is the great tribute paid the Detroit star by the younger Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox. "In the fifteen years that I have been actively identified with the game I have seen some great players; but, without hesitation, I can say that I have never seen a better all-around player than Cobb."

"What kind of a fellow is Cobb?" That is a question that is asked me hundreds of times each season. A good many fans, because of his swaggar style, get the impression that Cobb just hates himself. That is entirely erroneous. Cobb carries himself just the same on the ball field today as he did eleven years ago, when he broke into the American League. His present style is his natural style. Any player who is a success, who is the big star that Cobb is, naturally must make a good many enemies. It would be impossible for it to be otherwise. There is just enough of the ego in Cobb's make-up to make him careless of what some people think of him. He just goes merrily on his way, doing things that make all people marvel at his ability, both friends and enemies.

When Cobb first broke into the American League, but little credit was given him for his remarkable feats. The best that Tyrus got for three or four years was, "The lucky stiff." Now, his bitterest rivals regard him as a wonder.

No player in the game has a more effective slide than Cobb. A great many players use what, in baseball terms, is known as the fall-away, in sliding into a base, the player, by throwing his body in the direction of either the infield or outfield, tries to make it impossible for the fielder with the ball to have any part of the body other than the foot to touch.

Cobb has perfected the fall-away to the highest degree. Most runners slow up slightly as they prepare to slide, and, of course, tends to lessen the effectiveness of the slide. Cobb is one of the very few players who hit the dirt while traveling at top speed.

And the way he can hook his foot into the bag, swing around on it as a pivot, avoid the touch, and still keep from oversteering is remarkable. Every now and then Cobb does oversteer, because he has figured a bit too finely; but this is the exception.

A great many people labor under the impression that Cobb is a pugacious fellow, because of the various mix-ups he has taken part in. Cobb is a quick-tempered Southerner, but far from pugnacious. Because of his work success, Cobb is a source of concern to American fandom. When he is on the road, his good plays are applauded, but even greater applause greets the home pitcher if he strikes out Cobb.

The bleachers take great pleasure in testing Cobb to the limit with their chatter, much of which is often not complimentary. It is only natural that there are times when it is impossible for him to restrain himself and not resent the rally of the fans.

There is one pleasing thing about Cobb in this connection: He is game, and he has a heart of oak. He has proved this many a time. Just to show you how hard it is to conquer Cobb, I will repeat a story I have heard a number of Detroit players relate.

Cobb and a certain member of the team got into an argument, which resulted in fistfights, with Tyrus getting the wrong end of the decision after a hard battle. Tyrus was not convinced that his opponent was physically his superior. After a short time Tyrus renewed hostilities, and again the decision went against him. It was evident to every one but Tyrus that his opponent was too strong for him. Tyrus insisted on a third meeting, and once again he was defeated. In each case the result was the same. The day following the third meeting, Tyrus shook hands with his three-time conqueror, and remarked:

"Well, old boy, you have it on me. In the future all you and I are going to do is argue."

Cobb and the player in question became the greatest of friends.

When Tyrus Wanted To Fight Me. In this connection, I recall another incident in which I was directly concerned. Things had been breaking badly between me and Cobb, and, as a result, close decision was going against him. It became my painful duty to call him out for interference one day, as the truce was going on, and the player, Cobb, in asserting that I was right, Tyrus expressed the belief that the entire staff was wrong—that a real fight would win the entire staff, and that he believed he could turn the trick himself. In turn, I informed Tyrus that he might as well start on me. He said he would immediately at the close of the game.

In the innings that followed, his fellow players proved to him that under the rules, I had rendered the only decision possible. He cooled down, and, at the close of the game he demonstrated to me that he was a real fellow. Here is the conversation that passed between us:

"Well, Bill, I was wrong. I see it now. I lost my head. I want to apologize; but if an apology does not satisfy, I am here to fight."

There was no battle. I had no desire to engage in one.

SUGAR CHIMNEY 156 FEET TALL.
CHATHAM, June 5.—The building of the new sugar factory is being rushed forward with all speed, and now gives some little idea of what the mammoth plant will look like when completed. Some of the heaviest machinery has been placed in position before the brick work is commenced. The huge chimney is almost completed, and now towers to a height of 156 feet. Seven more feet will complete it.

COUNTY COUNCIL MEETS.
SARNIA, June 5.—The Lambton County Council opened at the court house in this city this afternoon, for its June session, a full attendance of the councillors being present.

No business of an important nature came before the body today, and only the reading of the minutes and routine business engaged the body before adjournment. The work of the session will start tomorrow in earnest. The council will have no patriotic work to look after at this session. There will be a discussion on good roads.

STEAMER'S HEAVY TOW.
SARNIA, June 5.—An unusual sight on the river this morning was a lumber steamer towing a disabled steamer and three "tows" down the river. The steamer did not seem to have any trouble in handling the four boats behind, and was making good time.

PREPARE FOR EASTERN STARS.
SARNIA, June 5.—Preparations are being made to welcome the delegates from all parts of the province, who will attend the sessions of the Order of the Eastern Star, which opens in the auditorium of the city hall tomorrow afternoon at 8 o'clock. The ladies have completed their plans, and it is expected that the session, which is the second annual one, will be a great success. The delegates will be entertained in a royal fashion during their stay in the city.

BIG LAKE EXCURSIONS.
SARNIA, June 5.—The steamer Noronic will leave June 12 on her first trip of the season. The boat goes from Sarnia to Detroit, where she will take on board the Society of Automobile Engineers. The trip of this society will be through the Georgian Bay, touching at Mackinac Island, Killarney and Sault Ste. Marie, then to return to Detroit on Friday, June 16. The regular trips of the boat, up the lake, will start on Saturday, June 17.

SARNIA, June 5.—Four alleged deserters from the 10th Battalion, who were rounded up by the police of Sarnia, on authority of that battalion, were taken to London camp this morning by a guard of men who had been sent to this city on that purpose.

The court was "absent without leave," according to what can be learned, and had returned to Sarnia after a pass had been refused them.

HAIR DOES LITTLE HARM.
SARNIA, June 5.—Sarnia and district has had so much wet weather lately that the gardens and truck gardeners are beginning to get uneasy about their crops, the water in many places lying several inches deep on the land, while the drains are working to full capacity.

Nearly every day for the past month or two there has been a rain, and everything in the county is soaked to the last degree.

Farmers report that some of the crops are in a bad condition, while others are yet making a strong fight. It is hoped that the weather will change before long.

The short but heavy downpour of hail last night did some damage to crops, but so far nothing of real serious nature has been reported.

BRANTFORD TAG DAY HAS GOOD RETURN

BRANTFORD, June 5.—Although the ladies who had charge of the tag day for the Brantford General Hospital were unable to give the amount realized, $1,900 had been relieved to night and a lot of returns are yet to come in. The county returns are still to come in. Paris tag day had to be postponed till tomorrow on account of unpropitious weather.

It Was in This Region and North of It the Canadians Battled Two Days With the Germans

ZILLEBEKE IS ABOUT A MILE NORTH OF HILL 60 AND HOOGE ABOUT THREE-QUARTERS OF A MILE NORTH OF ZILLEBEKE.

CANADIANS COMPELLED TO GIVE GROUND BEFORE TERRIFIC BOMBARDMENT

Unable to Hold Positions Recaptured From the Germans at Ypres—Enemy Holds Mile of Front, With a Depth of 350 Yards—Canadian Losses Heavy.

[Canadian Press Cable.] LONDON, June 6.—3:26 a.m.—The Times' correspondent at British headquarters, describing the situation at Ypres, explains that the Canadian forces were unable to retain their ground recaptured from the Germans last Saturday owing to the intensity of the German artillery fire. The correspondent concludes his dispatch by saying: "You must be prepared to hear that the Canadian losses have been very heavy."

"As soon as they had re-occupied the trenches and killed or driven off the enemy," the correspondent says, "the Canadians found themselves again under the same terrific artillery fire as had preceded the first enemy assault on Friday. Everywhere the trenches themselves were either demolished by gunfire or heaped with dead. To hold the positions was impossible, for the mere reason that no one there could live."

Germans Retain a Mile.

"The Germans are now in possession of a mile of front to a depth in places of three hundred and fifty yards back from the original Canadian front line."

"It is considered by competent judges that the character of the bombardment here during the last two or three days represents the high-water mark thus far attained on the western front. It has certainly been, and continues to be, of the most terrific severity. It has been so marked as to almost create a new phase in the war. The scale on which guns and ammunition were used is almost incredible judged by any standard of experience."

No Finer Gallantry.

MEN FIGHTING STRENUOUSLY TO RETAIN GROUND HELD

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, June 4.—Via London, June 5.—11:10 p.m.—The British and Germans are fighting hard in the region of Ypres, where last Saturday the British in hand-to-hand encounters, and with the aid of bombs, recaptured most of the trenches the Germans had previously taken from them in the sector from the Ypres-Comines Canal to Hooze Point.

In face of the repeated attacks, the British have been unable to retain the bulk of the recaptured ground, but are still fighting strenuously to keep what they have and to recapture what they have lost.

MUCH SHELLING, SAYS WAR OFFICE.

LONDON, June 6.—12:04 a.m.—The British official communication issued early this morning says: "There is no material change at Zillebeke. The night (Sunday) passed quietly, but today (Monday) there has been a good deal of shelling by both sides. The enemy made a small night attack in this locality, but was easily repulsed. On the other parts of the line several minor enterprises were carried out by both sides. The enemy made a raid near Hooze Point, but a heavy bombardment, some few casualties taken from them in the sector from the Ypres-Comines Canal to Hooze Point, and the enemy retired, leaving his dead."

"A second hostile raid was attempted after a mine explosion northeast of Arras, but it was unsuccessful. The British were driven back and we occupied the crater. Our infantry entered German trenches in five different places between Cambrin and Pœuilly. Two of our parties were particularly successful in causing loss to the hostile garrison, killing 40 of the enemy."

"Mine warfare continues actively in the sector from Hulluch to Givenchy. Five mines have been sprung by us and one by the enemy during the past 24 hours."

HAD WEAK HEART HAD TO STAY IN BED

Many women are kept in a state of fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to their household, social or business duties, on account of the unnatural action of the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief. They do this by their calming, strengthening and invigorating action on the heart, causing it to beat regularly and naturally, and in addition to this they tone up the whole nervous system.

Mrs. J. Day, 234 John street south, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I was so run-down with a weak heart that I could not even sweep the floor, nor could I sleep at night. I was so awfully sick sometimes I had to stay in bed all day as I was so weak. I used three and a half boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am a cured woman today, and as strong as anyone could be, and am doing my own housework, even my own washing."

"I doctored for over two years, but got no help until I used your pills."

71ST BATTALION IS RUSHING TO FRONT, BUT AS DRAFT UNITS

Number of Wives of Woodstock Men on Way to Old Land for Good-Byes.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
WOODSTOCK, June 5.—That the 71st Battalion will soon be in France was the word received by cable here today by Mrs. Martin from her husband at Bramshott Camp, England.

The message stated that the 71st had been broken up and that drafts were being sent to the front. Mrs. Martin stated that she expected to go across about July 1.

The cable read: "Come over as soon as you can. I will be waiting for you and will go to front early in July."

A number of the wives of members of the 71st left last week, and Mrs. Martin and others will leave this Thursday. While other battalions have been broken up in England it was expected that Col. Sutherland would be allowed to take his bat. into France.

However, today's cable seems to make it definite that the battalion is to be separated.

The folks at home are longing for a brick of Peters' Ice Cream. Don't disappoint them.

NEED MORE WOMEN TO MAKE SUPPLIES FOR "U" HOSPITAL

Immense Quantity of Sewing Has To Be Done.

RED CROSS VERY BUSY

St. Andrew's Hall Thronged With Women Working for Soldiers.

To equip a hospital with the greater part of the linen required for beds, dressing, operating room use, and for a thousand and one other purposes, hot water bottle covers, handkerchiefs, towels, etc., within a month is no light order, and is one which many a department store would turn down. But with the announcement that the Western University Hospital has been accepted, the local Red Cross Society immediately offered to supply the necessary linen equipment, and its offer was gratefully accepted by the authorities, who recognized the difficulty of outfitting a hospital at short notice.

When the Red Cross workers agreed to equip the hospital, they depended on the women of London for support in making the garments required and aiding in the work. Nor were they wrong in trusting to the patriotism of the London women. Ever since the war commenced the women of the city have been making supplies for the Red Cross.

More Are Needed.
The local Red Cross Society has contracted to supply 200 boxes of supplies each month, and above this number they agreed to outfit the University Unit with 500 cases in one month. To accomplish this necessitated many extra hands at work, and to secure these workers Lady Beck issued an appeal a few weeks ago to all women of London who could come to St. Andrew's Hall and aid in the work. This appeal brought many who had not attended meetings, but many more are required.

There are some people who are of the opinion that the Red Cross workers and the women of the district are really not doing as much as one would at first think. Others believe that the Red Cross is overworked now and that the supplies will not be as high a grade as required, owing to the amount of work on hand. Both these ideas may be banished at once.

The case of the Red Cross is undoubtedly one of the best organized of all women's associations in Canada. Its organization is perfect to the last detail. No the Red Cross is small to be overlooked and none too large to have each department minutely looked after. The officers of the Red Cross are to supply the supplies for the University Hospital and it is certain that they could rely upon their organization not to fail them at a critical time.

Huge Supplies.
The university hospital requires more than 150,000 articles, which will be packed into 500 boxes. All these articles will be made and packed in less than two weeks from date, and the majority of the articles will be made at one of the Red Cross meeting places, although some of the knitted garments are being allowed to be made at home. Remember that this is outside of the regular monthly shipment of 200 boxes.

The cost of these supplies is being borne by the Red Cross organization in London. The linen supplies amount to a total cost of $12,000; with this must be added $2,000 for a special motor ambulance, which the society is giving to the hospital and which will meet them on their arrival in England.

When the amount of material used is considered the order goes larger. 24,000 yards of gauze, 2,000 of absorbent cotton, 2,000 yards of factory cotton, 400 yards of duck for bagging, and yesterday 2,000 dozen spoons of linen were used. All this to be fashioned into garments in less than three weeks. When one ponders on this the magnitude of the work only becomes greater.

Five Auxiliaries.
There are five Red Cross auxiliaries in London at present, the north, east, south and west, and the central. Each of these takes charge of the work in St. Andrew's Hall one day a week, and directs the labor of the many women who come and toil making comforts for the wounded. Affiliated with these are more than 300 small-town bodies, which send in supplies to the main branch in London from the centres about this city.

Under the direction of Lady Beck, Mrs. Summerville and Mrs. E. C. Bowker the work is proceeding rapidly, and about 10,000 articles for the hospital have been made and placed in boxes, ready for shipment, and a sheet containing their numbers and contents is given to Capt. Mel. Brock, quartermaster of the hospital, so that when Capt. Brock requires a certain type of bandage he will only have to look up his list and note the number of the box containing them. One hundred of the boxes contain goods which have been sterilized and are fit for use.

A Long List.
A complete list of the supplies made or being made for the hospital is 75 pneumonia jackets, 500 bed pan covers, 500 hot water bottle covers, 500 fomentation wringers, 100 pairs laparotomy stockings, 1,000 abdominal binders, 500 triangular bandages, 500 scutlets, 500 "T" bandages, 5,000 gauze bandages, 4,000 factory cotton bandages, 2,400 pillow slips, 9,000 large pads, 25,000 medium pads, 8,000 small pads, 15,000 compressors, 50,000 apophones, 3,000 cheesecloth handkerchiefs, 5,000 kits, 1,000 helpless shirts, 500 pyjamas, 200 bed jackets, 25 dressing gowns, 200 convalescent suits, 500 grey flannel shirts, 1,000 pairs socks, 100 pairs hospital socks, 400 pairs bed socks, 100 knecaps, 600 mattress covers, 2,400 sheets, 1,000 bath towels, 2,000 bath towels, 500 bath towels, 1,000 washcloths, 1,000 surgeons' coats, 150 nurses' sleeves, 150 nurses' aprons, 200 operation caps, 100 operating gowns, 200 aprons, 1,000 towels, 1,000 other jackets, 1,000 personal kit bags, 500 kit bags.

After reading this list and considering the amount of work to be done so that all these articles may be packed and ready for shipment in less than three weeks, the full amount of work that the Red Cross of the University Hospital are doing for the women of London should be anxious to aid in the work of making supplies which, when the hospital is on service, will last only about two weeks.

TO AVOID CONFUSION

Rotary Club Will Place Cards Under All Public Clocks.

W. A. Martin of the Rotary Club announced last evening after the council passed the daylight saving bylaw that the club will at once get out cards to be given free to all who want them. The cards will state "This is no light time. Railway time is one hour slower."

These cards will be placed under all public clocks so that people who come in from outside and find the clocks an hour ahead of their watches will not get confused regarding train time.

The cards will be ready for distribution on Thursday and all wishing them can obtain them at the G. T. R. city ticket office from Mr. R. E. Rose.

DISCRIMINATION BY THE MILITARY HITS METHODISTS

London Conference in Uproar Over Chaplains.

MEMORIALIZE SHANNON

Ottawa Said To Have Apointed Twelve Over O. C.'s Head.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
KINGSTOWN, June 5.—Compared with the discussions which took place this afternoon in the London Methodist Conference on the question of discrimination against Methodists in the appointment of chaplains, the reference to the subject on Thursday last was a preliminary canter, a slight skirmish preceding a big engagement.

The program was progressing towards an uneventful conclusion for the afternoon when the explosion came in the form of a memorial presented from Stratford district to the effect that while Dr. Long of the army and navy board of the church, had stated that according to enlistment figures available, the appointment of Methodist chaplains for the Dominion was in proportion to the number of Methodists who had enlisted, the London Conference had prevailed upon Sir John Hughes, who had been appointed by the Dominion to be practically co-existent with the London Conference.

While exact enlistment figures are not available, the London Conference population is 176,475; the Presbyterian 149,321; and the Anglican 54,537.

"We cannot believe," said the memorial, "that patriotism and willingness to sacrifice is less strong among the Methodists than others. The number of Methodists who have made application to be appointed chaplains is 18 ministers and probationers. Five have been recommended to the military authorities by the army and navy board. Not one has received an appointment to a battalion within Military Division No. 1. There appears to be unfair discrimination in appointment."

In view of this, a protest was proposed and an appeal to the authorities of church and state, to be forwarded to the army and navy board, Col. Shannon, district commanding officer, and Major-General Sir John Hughes.

Seconding the adoption of the memorial, Rev. Dr. Dougal of London, stated that the one chaplain belonging to London Conference.

Don Conference, Rev. Prof. Graham of Montreal, had received an appointment outside this military division. The Methodist chaplain of the 12th, belonged to a United States conference.

Dr. Dougal believed the protest would bring results and in support of his view, cited the case of the substitution of Capt. W. C. Kidd for the chaplain of the 12th, "London's Own," following a protest from the ministerial alliance.

Charges Discrimination.
In a moment, Rev. Frederick G. Robinson, Watford, who had been accumulating evidence for just such an occasion, was called upon to present his charges of discrimination against Methodist private as well as chaplains. He declared, "On the attestation papers there was no room for a Methodist, but a section marked 'Wesleyan' and thousands were put down as Anglicans," he said.

"In addition to the appointment of chaplains for overseas battalions, you have been taken out of this and other divisions to go as chaplains to old country corps. Seven were taken not long ago, all Anglicans, and two more just recently in the No. 1 division. I wrote Col. Shannon about it and he said the order had come direct from Ottawa. I have his letter in my pocket now. I myself was recommended by the late Col. Kelly of the 14th. I had three years' military training in the army and navy board. But the member of Parliament intervened. He nominated his own minister and he said no one else would be appointed."

Ottawa interference.
"In December the order came that no chaplain should be appointed unless recommended by the colonel of the unit or until the unit was completed. Immediately twelve were appointed directly from Ottawa over the heads of the colonels and the officer commanding the first division.

"I wrote to Generals Hughes and Hodgins about it and the reply I got was, 'If you are a Methodist, we will let you know.' With reference to the camp chaplains, men are returning home and Anglicans being appointed to take their places."

The case of Rev. Henry B. Parnaby of Belgrave, was quite different. He had been appointed by Major-General Hughes as chaplain of the 161st Battalion, and it was his trouble to be removed from the post. He had received orders from the commanding officers through a subordinate, to report at once for duty. He learned that the officers were going to "get him" because he was a General Sir Sam Hughes' appointment.

Missed Two Days' Pay.
The first pay-day, he received no pay. The second, the pay-master refused it. He wrote Col. Shannon and waited some days for an answer. Then he telegraphed and an answer came: "You are an officer attached to the 161st on pay from your appointment. Amicable relations with the officers seemed impossible. Mr. Parnaby resigned. The paymaster had asked him, 'Why do you want to resign?' and he replied, 'I am not a military chaplain' and the chaplain pro tem had replied: 'Our men are enlisting.'"

In addition to the opposition of the army, the late delay of the army and navy board, before sending a factor in leading him to a decision to resign.

Rev. Robert Hicks of Windsor, took the stand that there are a relative proportion of Anglican and Methodist chaplains, calling attention to the thousands of Englishmen in this country who have enlisted, and the fact that 70 or 80 per cent of the first contingent was British born.

Bruce Unit Cited.
A Bruce delegate opposed his view. "In the 16th Bruce Battalion," he said, "there are 50 more Presbyterians than Methodists and 200 more Methodists than Anglicans." Another delegate cited the case of the 2nd where 25 had enlisted 25 young men were Methodists, four Anglicans and six Presbyterians.

"If I had a boy enlisted," said still another, "I'd want a Methodist chaplain."

On suggestion of C. J. Beal of London, who advanced the view that the question should be referred to the proper authorities, Rev. C. J. Moorhouse moved that a committee of three should be appointed to prepare a resolution and data for presentation to the army and navy board and military authorities.

Increase in Membership.
The statistical report presented by Rev. Gerard Hicks of Belmont, stated that 4,666 have been received into the church membership of London conference in the past year, while 4,223 have been removed. The total membership is 55,241, an increase of 242 over last year. The total connexional funds, including missionary, etc., amounted to $148,252; for circuit purposes, $155,609, and for ministerial support, $184,332, a total of $688,193.

Rev. Harold Williams, Camiache, presented the Sunday School report, announcing that the schools of the conference have an enrollment of 51,280 pupils and 5,587 teachers, a total of 56,867. Most schools use uniform lessons; some supplementary, and 40 use graded lessons. An increase has been made of $1,214 in contributions to missions.

Jubilee of Veterans.
In striking contrast to the service on Sunday morning when ten or twelve young men were ordained by the conference to the work of the ministry, was an equally impressive ceremony on Monday afternoon, when the jubilee was marked with special ceremony of five veterans who look back upon 50 years of active service to the church.

Of these, three were present in person, Rev. George Jackson, Walkerville, a former conference president, and formerly pastor in London of the Colborne Street and later of the Centennial Church; Rev. John Mahan, Talbotville, who, up to the present has been actively engaged in a pastorate, and Rev. Charles Barltrop, Toronto.

A letter was read by Secretary Wren from Rev. A. L. Russell, British Columbia, and Rev. S. Anderson, Lambeth, conveyed the greeting of Rev. John S. Fisher, Lambeth.

This evening was the social service and evangelism anniversary, when addresses were given by Rev. J. H. Haddenwood, J. A. Rankin and Snyder.

New Assessment Plan.
The report of the London Conference financial committee was the chief feature of the morning session, when an amendment to submit to financial district meetings the plan regarding salaries and circuits, to increase the assessment fund, instead of setting the question in conference, provoked lively discussion. The motion was finally carried to accept the report as presented, with the ultimate object of attaining the payment of every minister and probationer of the disciplinary minimum salary.

The following plan of assessment, ministers and circuits was adopted: Ministers receiving over the minimum, 1 per cent; circuits paying $500 and under $5, circuits paying from $500 to $600, under 1 per cent; circuits paying from $600 to $700, under 1.2 per cent; circuits paying from $700 to $800, under 1.4 per cent; with every added $100 of salary paid, an added assessment of .2 per cent will be made until a circuit paying a minimum salary of $1,000 will be $2,001 and up will be taxed 4 per cent.

Plea for Jack Miner.
A resolution warmly supported by conference was presented by Rev. Dr. Flanders, and seconded by Geo. Proctor of Sarnia, to the effect that in view of the fact that the conference had personally indicated the work of Jack Miner in his efforts to conserve our wild fowl and bird life, and become convinced of its inestimable value to the continent, the youth of the day, and citizens generally, that the conference put on record its expression of appreciation, and further, respectfully, but with urgency, to the president and secretary of the conference, and mover and seconder of the resolution.

Ayerst Speaks.
J. A. Ayerst, of the Ontario license board of commissioners, and a member of the London Conference, spoke briefly on the difficulties encountered in enforcing temperance legislation, including in his remarks a warning for continued vigilance, even under prohibition regulations.

"Both political parties are united," he declared, "in the determination to have the law maintained and assisted. You can give definite assistance, but when you send in information be sure it is definite."

Mr. Stauffer's Address.
"Twenty years ago," says Chicago schoolboy was asked who was the leader of the army and navy board, and he replied: "Our men are enlisting.""

On suggestion of C. J. Beal of London, who advanced the view that the question should be referred to the proper authorities, Rev. C. J. Moorhouse moved that a committee of three should be appointed to prepare a resolution and data for presentation to the army and navy board and military authorities.
