A. H. St. Germain Made Experiment In Toronto In the 'Seventies.

When Architect E. J. Lennox cunningly incorporated in the carved console supporting the eaves of the Toronto City Hall building the letters spelling out his own name, for an everlasting memorial to himself, he was only following an old-established local precedent, says 'The Toronto Star' weekly. The one fact caused, some years ago, was but the taxpayers' remonstrance against any possible idea on the architect's part that he owned this flourishing burg and its costly municipal buildings in fee simple. Indignation died away before it came to a pass where the architect was peremptorily ordered to chisel out the offending architectural memorial in stone. In the earlier days of the city it was a general practice for an individual when he erected a building or a terrace of houses, duly to set up in a conspicuous position a tablet recording the owners' name and very often the date of construction. It was a harmless sort of self-glorifying whim that offended no one, because every builder did it.

There is a most interesting example of the custom which users of the Belt Line will have probably noticed on the north side of Bloor street, a short distance westerly from Yonge. There stands the long brick row built in the late sixties by Alfred H. St. Germain and known to the neighborhood as the St. Germain terrace, from the stone inscription in the centre of the row. It is prominent enough to be easily discernible, even at night time from across the street. It reads: "The A. H. St. Germain Buildings, Erected 1867." The fact is that A. H. St. Germain erected both of the strikingly similar rows. He built well. As any of the occupants, either on Bloor or Victoria streets, will tell you, there is not a tremble or a shake to any floor in the houses.

But Alfred H. St. Germain has another—a totally different but what should be an outstanding—claim on Toronto's memory. It is that he was the discoverer, upstanding and comfortable as the day completed, practically half a century back. Toronto was indebted to him for being the first to publish a one-cent daily newspaper.

He was born in Canada, A. H. St. Germain was born at Kingston, Ont., in 1827. He was the son of Hyacinthe Le More St. Germain. The latter was a lineal descendant of Rudolph St. Germain, who was a companion of Jacques Cartier in the discovery and exploration of the Canadas. All of Mr. St. Germain's early life was spent under the shadow of the guns of old Fort Frontenac. Before leaving there, in 1849, having embraced journalism, he was one of the proprietors of the Kingston Herald, one of the oldest papers in the colony. The California gold fever, which was raging at the time, attracted him from the editorial chair; but, after tempting fortune on the Pacific coast for a period, he returned to Canada in the 'seventies, and taking up his residence in Toronto, commenced the publication of the Toronto Evening Journal—the first one-cent daily. A. H. St. Germain's connection with the newspaper publishing business came to an end in 1882, when he retired to a Yonge street farm of 185 acres—then three and a half miles from the city limits—where he resolutely lived out the balance of his busy, useful, allotted span. At his death the property, as St. Germain Park, passed into the hands of the subdivider.

Robbed Canadians. So many soldiers are in Ireland in the present time that hotels, restaurants and boarding houses can practically command any price they like for the requirements of the boys in khaki, says London The-Bits.

Readers will doubtless remember the scandals which arose when the Canadians first came to England, and who were shamefully fleeced as a reward for their patriotic services by unscrupulous people who took advantage of the colonials' ignorance of money values here to charge them all sorts of prices for food and drink.

A few grocers, tobacconists, and fruiterers, to their shame be it said, have made Canadian treasurers pay 50 per cent over market prices for their purchases. It was not long, however, before the Canadians learnt the correct prices, and the real value of our money, and it is some satisfaction to know that in a number of cases shopkeepers who have since endeavored to fleece them have had their tricks promptly exposed by the men they tried to victimize.

A Double Postoffice. Beebe Plain, Que., has what is said to be the only double postoffice in the world. The office is half in Canada and half in the States, with Beebe, Que., on one side and Brome, Vermont, on the other. An iron post in the middle of the front porch marks the international boundary line. Aside from its location the building is of interest on account of the material from which it is built, which is granite, native to the locality, and on account of its age, which is about a century. The two prosperous communities which it serves, and which are practically one village, have a population of about 1,000, and are said to own more automobiles than any other village of this size in Canada.

Relief Expedition For MacMillan. A relief expedition for Donald B. MacMillan and his group of explorers who set out two years ago to discover Crocker Island, in the frozen north, and who have not been heard from since last August, when they were at Etah, will be sent out in July. It was explained that the party are still for the safety of the party, but that the relief expedition, which will be fitted out at a cost of $25,000, will be sent in a precaution, because the season winter in the Arctic generally has the most trying effects on explorers.

THE SUBMARINE.

An Explanation That Somehow Didn't Seem to Sink In.

"George, dear, what is a submarine?"

"A submarine, my dear—why, a submarine is a boat that goes under the water. It dives down and stays under."

"But they don't. They have air tanks and all sorts of things for their comfort. And when they run out of supplies they come to the surface and get what they require."

"Isn't that funny? And how do they hurt the battleships? Do they come up under them suddenly and push them out of the water?"

"No, they shoot torpedoes at them."

"How interesting. And so dangerous too! My Cousin Mary's little boy threw a torpedo at Uncle George, and it stuck in his ear, and Uncle George cut him out of his will. It must fess up the sailors dreadfully, and I can't blame him either. What's the matter, George?"

"I'm sure I heard the phone bell."

"He goes and doesn't come back—Cleveland Plain Dealer."

"Why, of course. I suppose they can hold them a long time with practice."

"But they don't. They have air tanks and all sorts of things for their comfort. And when they run out of supplies they come to the surface and get what they require."

As far as the troops of the Czar are concerned in Galicia, there can only be the one opinion previously expressed in these notes, that they are in a very bad and menacing state.

The Pastime Bowling Club is putting on a game to assist the East Ward workers on Saturday.

PUBLIC BUILDING.

A committee meeting is taking place at the city hall this afternoon for the purpose of making arrangements for the formal opening of Brantford's new public building on Thursday, June 17th.

BUILDING PERMITS

Among the building permits issued today were the following: Walter P. Hemmons, a brick cottage on Esther street at a cost of $1000; and Thomas Spencer, Charlotte St., a frame shed, at $25.

MILITARY INFORMATION

SIGHT ACCIDENTS.

Two accidents have recently occurred in the premises of the Watson Woolen Mill. Supt. Burgess yesterday had a finger taken off his right hand while attending to a loom in the department. The injury was immediately treated. Mr. Burgess is progressing well to-day. During last week Harry Harding broke a thumb in the performance of his duties. Dr. Palmer was called and medically treated the broken member.

ONE, AND A SCOT.

At the Armouries last night, one man paraded for medical survey and retired in good order, not accepted. He was a strapping Scot, but his teeth were not the kind demanded by the Government for those who would seek to demolish the Huns. So alas, he had to be disappointed in his endeavor. The United Kingdom has now done her share, if an Irishman should be rejected tonight, one Englishman being rejected the night previously.

VICTORIAN NURSES.

The regular meeting of the Victorian Order of Nurses was held on Wednesday morning in the Public Library. Miss Hall, assistant inspector, had been in Brantford during May, and her report on the Brantford nurses' work was expressed by the one word "excellent." Their books showed that this was a very busy district. Arrangements are being made by the president and members of the Victorian Order in conjunction with the executive of the Social Service League to provide a "Childs Welfare" Nurse during July, August and September, whose special work will be the care of the babies and instructing the mothers in food preparation. The baby is always an object of interest and now more than ever a national asset, and it is earnestly hoped that the mother will co-operate with the nurse, that infant mortality may be lessened. The Victorian Order also reported the birth of six boy babies and eleven girls last month. The following is the Brantford nurses' report for May. Number of new cases: Total cases during the month 75; cases of more than one visit 40; average daily hours on duty, 8-2. Average Sunday hours, 2-1. Night cases: Operations 5; confinements, 18; number of visits during the month 383; number of paying patients 27. Non-paying 11; Metropolitan, 5.

E. B. Crompton & Co. LIMITED The House of Quality and Good Value E. B. Crompton & Co. LIMITED

IMPORTANT!

The House of Quality Good Value

What's in a Name?

Shakespeare said—"A rose by any other name would smell as sweet"—and that may have a mere grain of truth in it—but would another name than "Rose" suggest just the same devy beauty, the same exquisite fragrance—the same wealth of color? Well, hardly, we think.

For years now the Crompton Store has been known as "The House of Quality and Good Value"—and the people have learned to look on it as such—and TO TRUST IT.

The name has not been merely a platitude—a jingle to rhyme off. No; it has become, in the eyes of a discriminating community—a realism—a truism—backed up by solid facts.

Years of thought and effort, put forth by a lot of competent people—and we include therein our most superior staff—(as instance their work and success, immediately evidenced after our recent fire—as a testimony as to what they can do)—all this backed up by consummate skill, judgment and taste, in making our selections season after season, and adapting them to the wants of a large, intelligent and critical constituency—as well as the faculty of suggestion, and the ability possessed by them satisfactorily to diagnose individual needs—of being able to please—which thousands of our customers know to be the case—ALL THESE THINGS COUNT, and count largely as a part of the assets of E. B. CROMPTON & CO., Limited.

This hasn't been gained in a day. It takes time to bring about a condition of things like this—no attempted meteor-like rush will quite accomplish it—no appropriation of the idea involved, and used as a catch cry—without "the actual making good" in the same way, and the same degree, will count for much. There must be a clear ring to the coin.

What we have done in Brantford now, for over a quarter of a century—the citizens of Brantford and Brant County know.

What we are intending to do—with your help—for the near future—to-day's City Journals will tell you.

BOARD OF EDUCATION TOUCHED ON MANY URGENT MATTERS

Industrial Classes For the Foreigners Came Up, Swimming Instruction For the Girls and Important Question of Teachers' Salaries.

The Board of Education met last evening in the Council Chambers of the City Hall. With the exception of several parts of the reports read, none of the business transacted was of great importance. All of the board were present which consisted of Chairman Coulbeck, Dr. Ballache, Dr. Gamble, and Messrs. Cutcliffe, Armstrong, Lane, Lahey, Bentham, Andrews and Coles.

Before the session was opened, Mr. Andrews suggested that the meeting should be opened by singing "God Save the King," and three hearty cheers and a tiger. This proposal was immediately complied with.

EVANGELICAL UNION.

A deputation from the Evangelical Union was present, concerning the education of local foreigners. Mr. F. Cockshutt was the first speaker. He explained the object of the work of the union, saying that it was three-fold in character, teaching the English language, religion, and advising them as citizens of the country. Foreigners of all races in the city had been instructed along these lines once a week for several years, under the direction of Principal Joyce of the Central school and several other public school teachers. Mr. Cockshutt felt that the Board of Education should shoulder the expense and not a few individuals. In the first place it was necessary that these foreigners should be taught English, and secondly, it is the part of the city, and not a few individuals to bear the expense of this education. Mr. Cockshutt explained that the teachers would be satisfied with the present rate they are receiving and that Devon Hall could still be used for the purpose. It was also suggested that the foreigners be included in the industrial classes at the Collegiate Institute. There were representatives of about ten races taking part in these classes, of which, perhaps, the Russian, Italian, Poles, Austrians and Hungarians were the most predominant. All of them were very anxious to acquire a speaking and writing knowledge of English. Under these circumstances classes should be held two nights a week during the winter.

Mr. C. Cook was the next speaker. He endorsed all that Mr. Cockshutt had said. A great improvement in the work had been noticed of late. Quite a bit had been paid by individuals towards the upkeep of these classes and it should not be so. The best way would be for the board to give the Evangelical Society a grant of about $500 a year. It has been done in such cities as Winnipeg and Toronto and found very successful.

Rev. Mr. Kelly, in speaking next, hoped that a plan could be found whereby the union could find a way to continue this excellent work. The Armenians of the city had been given three lessons each week for the last two winter seasons at the Congregational church and religious training on Sunday afternoons.

Rev. Mr. Bowyer also spoke a few words, in support of the plan.

Chairman Coulbeck promised the deputation that the board would give the matter its earnest consideration. The minutes at the last meeting were then read by Secretary A. N. Bunnell and adopted.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Principal Gamble wrote thanking the board for their kind consideration.

Miss Ethel S. Baker tendered her resignation as Public school teacher in the city.

Mr. Goodwin of the Y. M. C. A., wrote concerning the swimming classes for Public School Girls. These classes were granted on condition that the classes should not be of over fifteen girls and that at least three of the mothers of the girls should be sent at each class. The last condition was that each girl should be supplied with a suitable bathing costume.

INSPECTOR'S REPORT.

The inspector's report was as follows:

It was moved by Mr. Andrews that the report of the Inspector should be adopted; that the communication from C. E. Gamble be filed; that the communication from the Y. M. C. A. be referred to the special committee considering the matter; and that the resignation of Miss Baker be referred to the committee on school management. Carried.

The management committee reported as follows:

1. That the resignation of Miss E. S. Baker be accepted.
2. That the letter of the Y. M. C.

Taylor and Bodley as per letter herewith, your committee recommend that the amount be paid.

Mr. Bentham that the report of the Finance committee be adopted. Carried.

The report of the Technical advisory committee was read by Mr. Coles. It was moved by Mr. Coles that the report be adopted. Carried.

Concerning the revising and consideration of the by-laws of the board, it was decided that a special meeting be held during the holidays.

The question of educating the foreigners in the industrial classes at the Collegiate, was referred to the management committee, to be brought up at the next meeting.

Inspector Kilmer stated that he had received a letter from the Department of Education stating that the board was not obliged to take up the education of foreigners, as they were above school age. It was merely a matter for the decision of the local board.

The meeting was adjourned at 9.30.

for organization of German workshops.

"Two hundred thousand shells were concentrated in a single hour on the heads of the gallant Russians. Had we been in a position to apply the same process to the Germans on our front the Germans would have been turned out of France, and driven half way across the devastated plain of Flanders. They would have been well out of the country they had tortured and tormented with dastardly cruelty. More than that, we should have actually penetrated Germany."

"For the moment we have more than plenty of men for the equipment available. More men will come to the call, but we want the workshops to equip them with weapons. The State now needs the help of all and I am perfectly certain that British engineers can do what the French engineers have already done."

THE EXAMPLE OF FRANCE.

"France private firms have given the State assistance in the electrical hour which is beyond computation. The last French victories were largely attributable to the private workshops of France. I am here to ask you to help us to equip our army with the best of the world's production. The German lines in front of our gallant troops, and I know you will do it."

The Minister said that he was not there to brandish his powers under the Defence of the Realm Act, but he was very great, and the committees appointed would find these powers very helpful in enabling them to organize quickly and get rid of unnecessary difficulties without loss of time. Compulsion was not meant for the majority, but there were a few who lagged behind, and it was useful to have something with which to jog them along.

"To what extent and in what direction the moral duty of each citizen to give his best to the State should be converted into a legal duty was a question, not of principle, but of time as an emergency arose during the period of the war. The question, said the Minister, sprang up with great rapidity and should be dealt with with decision and promptitude, and above all, with courage. The Government which alone knew the facts, must be trusted."

DON'T SNIPE FROM BEHIND.

"I don't mind gullotting Ministers," said Mr. Lloyd George—"generals, if necessary. But until they reach the scaffold they ought to be obeyed, and above all, do not undermine them by sniping them from behind."

Speaking of conscription, he said: "To introduce compulsion as an important element in organizing the nation's resources of skilled industry and trade does not necessarily mean conscription in the ordinary sense of the term. Conscription means the raising by compulsory methods of armies to fight Great Britain's battles abroad. If the necessity arise, I am certain that no man of any party would protest."

"We won our liberties in this land by more than one occasion by compulsory service. France saved the liberty she won in the Revolution by compulsory service. The great republic to the west won its independence and saved its national existence by compulsory service. And today, the greatest democratic countries in Europe to-day, France and Italy, are defending their national existence and liberties by means of compulsory service."

"It has been the greatest weapon in the hands of the democracy many times for the winning and preservation of freedom. All the same, it would be a great mistake to resort to it until it was absolutely necessary."

YOUNG MEN RESPONDING.

The young men, continued the Minister, had not refused to respond in sufficient numbers to the appeal made to their patriotism, they were still coming in far ahead of the equipment for them, and he had no doubt that they would keep well ahead of the equipment.

"I say to those who wish to dismiss conscription for the time being as a means of levying armies for fighting abroad, that they ought not thereby to assume that compulsion is unnecessary in enabling us to mobilize the industrial strength of the country," he continued. "We were the worst organized nation in the world for this war, which showed that we had nothing to do with precipitating it. It is a war of munitions and the government has decided that compulsory powers are essential to utilize the resources of the country to the best advantage. The work of the country must come first, because, unless it does, there will be no country worth fighting for."

"The employers are now subject to complete state control for industrial purposes, and if we are to make the best of our resources for the shortening of war, the same principles must extend to the whole field of industrial organization, which must be one reservation—that state control of labor must be for the benefit of the state, and not for the purpose of increasing the profits of any individual or private organization; it must increase the mobility of labor, and have a greater subordination of labor to the direction and control of the State."

NEED COMPULSION AT HOME.

After referring to what had been done in France and Italy, Mr. Lloyd George said it might be dangerous to depend upon the continuance of present conditions.

"We have enlisted men," he said, "who would have rendered better service at home. We needed compulsion not to send men to the front, but to prevent them from going to the front. We have been endeavoring to conduct a war against the most formidable antagonists that have ever attacked human freedom with the ordinary untried weapons of peace. You may as well send our men to face shrapnel and howitzers, armed with picks and shovels as merely to go through the war with the industrial organization, equipped and armed with the ordinary shifts and experiments of peace."

In closing his appeal to the employers and men, the Minister said: "Stand by your country, now that it has risked its honor, its life, in the most chivalrous cause for which any nation ever went into battle."

The meeting passed a resolution pledging to support in every possible way the efforts made by the Minister of Munitions to increase the output of war materials.

CROWN PRINCE'S HEAD-QUARTERS BOMBED BY AN ALLIED AIR FLEET

Twenty-Nine Airmen Dropped 178 Bombs On His Headquarters and Threw Showers of Arrows All Round.

Paris, June 4.—A squadron of 29 French aeroplanes flew over the German lines between 4 and 5 o'clock this morning, and raised the headquarters of the German Crown Prince. The airmen dropped 178 bombs in all, many of which reached their marks. Showers of arrows were also scattered through the air. The raiders were met by a furious fire during their flight, but none of the aeroplanes were damaged.

The war office statement which announced the raid does not mention the identity of the Crown Prince's headquarters. They were last spoken of, however, at a point north-east of Ypres. Nothing is said about damage to the headquarters.

Fighting continues in the district around the "labyrinth," south-east of Ypres, and some gains have been recorded. Since May 31st the French have made 800 prisoners in this locality. The gains here have been made out of daily occurrence, and it is generally felt that important gains will soon be announced regarding the outcome of the battle.

German aviators, flying over Lunenburg, Department of Meurthe-and-Moselle, dropped great quantities of bombs, printed in French, reproducing the assertions of Dr. von Bethmann-Lowig, the German Chancellor, in the Reichstag recently that war news from French sources was incorrect.

An eye-witness, describing the operations north of Arras says that the French military authorities as the greatest battle of the war in the western theatre of operations since the battle of the Marne.

The battle is still raging, although its first stages have been definitely settled in favor of the French, who are continuing their progress with less and less opposition. So far, the

WHY R.N.W.M.P. WAS FORMED.

Government Wishes to Resist Inroads of Traders From U. S.

Mr. Gen. S. E. Steele, in his recently issued Reminiscences, outlines the reasons for the formation of the Northwest Mounted Police as being not only fear of Indian uprisings, but more because of the inroads of American fur traders from the Western States, who were debauching the Canadian Indians with whiskey. In fact, the first "march" of the N.W.M.P. in 1874-5, a march that extended from Fort Garry to the Rockies, was designed to clean up by raids the paisaned camps of these traders.

"Between Buffalo Lake and the Hand Hills vast numbers of buffalo covered the country. When a white man went out for a supply of fresh meat he usually killed enough to provision a whole settlement or a reservation of soldiers. The most successful of the half-breed hunters were Abraham Salois, who killed 600 buffalo in one year. In one run, thirty-seven fell to his rifle."

Gen. Steele, as head of a barracks in the N.W.M.P., had the jurisdiction of a magistrate, and dealings with the Indians, in alloting them land reserves, paying pensions, and giving them messages from the Queen Mother, Queen Victoria, had their outside side. For instance, in signing treaties with the Indians, official garments were presented to them.

The uniform of the chiefs was a scarlet frock coat braided with gold lace, and a top hat of felt with a gold band. The head men were given blue frock coats with gold lace, with hats similar to the chiefs. The medals were very large, with the Queen's head and suitable inscription thereon.

The following is interesting as the origin of Moose Jaw:

"We were at Moose Jaw Creek, or as they called it, Moose Jaw Bone, the Cree name being 'The place where the white man mended the cart with the moose jawbone.' The reason was that the Earl of Mulgrave, then an officer in the Guards, who was on a buffalo hunting trip, splined the broken felloe of one of his carts with a moose jawbone."

In 1882, on a trip east, Gen. Steele passed through Winnipeg during the land boom of that year. In "Winnipeg, lots were selling at, for that time, fabulous prices, and any quarter-section in Manitoba, if subdivided into town lots would realize a handsome fortune for the owner. People were ready to buy anything. The hotels did a roaring trade, and the bars made profits of hundreds of dollars a day."

Gen. Steele headed a party of N.W.M.P. and scouts in pursuit of the Indians who perpetrated the Frog Lake massacre. His story of the Riel Rebellion of 1885, of the Klondyke rush and of his adventures in Africa are interesting documents.

WAR STORIES

The following letter has been received from Sergt. Ernest Sheppard, of Head Quarters Section, First Canadian Division Signal Co., B. E. F. Mr. Sheppard is well known in Brantford having lived in and around this city for some time. He later went west and joined the first contingent at Calgary:

"I received both letters and parcel alright. Many thanks for the parcel. After leaving the neighborhood of Ypres, where we had a pretty warm time, being shelled out of two billets, we moved back to Dieppe, where we stayed two weeks. Leaving that town about 5.15 p.m., we had an all night march to our next billet, where we arrived about 4.15 a.m. This morning we had another move nearer the trenches. How long we are to stop here, Heaven only knows. We are standing by now, expecting an order to move. At the present time our division is a reserve division. That is to say we will be rushed to which ever point we are needed; needless to say at any hour, whether midnight or not. The Allies at this point of the line are doing well, pushing the Germans back and have captured many prisoners. A bunch of them passed here this afternoon, but unfortunately I was lying down and did not see them. I do not know whether you read about one of the sergeants of a Canadian kiltie regiment being crucified. The Germans pinned him to a barn door with bayonets. However, some of the boys soon got their own back. As they were bringing in nearly 400 prisoners they saw this sergeant and bayoneted all but eight of the Hunns. What do you think of the Lusitania Affair? If I had my way not one German should be made a prisoner after that affair. This evening I heard of another outrage by the Hunns, and for which they paid in full. Two of the Scots Greys were murdered, and the pals rounding up about a thousand Hunns, just brought in seventy. The rest I guess have now a plot of ground all to themselves, kilt on when we shall again don civilian clothes, for we are all fed up with the war. The Royal Canadian Dragoons, Lord Strathcona's Horse and King Edward's Horse are now out here as infantry. The Canadian Engineers have just passed by on their way to the trenches." The letter was dated May 17.

FINE LIST OF GAMES FOR TOMORROW IN SOCCER CIRCLES

Three rousing games of football will take place in the Brantford city league within the confines of the city to-morrow when the teams will battle for points to settle the final destiny of the Expositor trophy.

The games will be as follows: Heathers vs. Paris at Holmedale. S. A. vs. Tutela at Agricultural. The Sons of England have the big job on hand, for they are at home to the Scots, who have an enviable record this season. The Sons are confident of their ability to break the sequence of victories, and intend to put up a mighty stiff opposition. The game will be decidedly interesting as both teams are on top notch at the moment. Thistles modestly hope they can add another game of points to their tota, and the Sons rejoice that they may, at another date.

S. A. have as visitors the champions Tutela, and they are hoping to about a revival of the first of their prowess brilliance to overcome the powers of Eagle Place. In view of the standing of both teams, the outcome will be decisive to a degree.

Some old rivals and hardy fighters, Heathers and Holmedale, will meet in receipt of the latter, and in accordance with the traditions of the well fought, closely contested game will be played. Tigers, although they are confident of adding to their line-up of the various clubs are confident.

Scots Interested In 48th.

Under the caption "Highland Military News," the Obar Times of March 20th publishes the following: "The people of Islay have a particular interest in the 48th Canadian Highlanders, since its popular commander, Col. J. A. Currie, M.P., claims a close ancestral connection with the 'green, grassy isle.' This gallant regiment was organized in 1891, when Col. Currie, as a thorough going Gaelic Highlander, proved a tower of strength in the then somewhat difficult task of procuring from the Government the extra grant required to equip the corps. Since those days Highland sentiment has extended much further west than Toronto.

"In a letter to Mr. Neil Macinnion, a native of Colonsay, and a former color-sergeant, now in Wales, Col. Currie states that when the war broke out there were 900 men on the strength and they all wanted to go to the front. Further recruiting was easy, and leaving a large contingent at home, over 1,000 rank and file and officers were brought to this country.

"The fine physique of the regiment may be judged from the fact that no fewer than 800 men measure five feet eight inches in height. In 1913 the 48th carried off the King's Prize for shooting at Bisley and had four men in the twenty four Canada.

"The service uniform and equipment of the first battalion cost $35,000 and this was provided voluntarily, without drawing from the Canadian Government.

Plant To Treat Molybdenite.
A plant for treating molybdenite ores has been established at Sydney, C.B.C., and a first shipment of 100 tons of metal is to be sent to England soon.

The principal supplies of molybdenum have heretofore come from German sources and the cutting off of these supplies has caused considerable embarrassment in England. The metal is used in the manufacture of special steels, having the quality of increasing greatly the tensile strength of steel when added to it.

The mining of molybdenite is becoming an important industry. Molybdenite is used for a variety of purposes, but its principal value is in the manufacture of shafts, guns, and boilers.

Plant To Treat Molybdenite.

Returned to the Dominion Labor Department show that up to the first of the year 3,495 men belonging to local trade union throughout Canada had enlisted for war service, and, in addition, 417 British army reservists, making a total of 3,915 Canadian trade unionists. The building trades were first with 1,249 men; railway brotherhoods next with 497; Toronto headed the list with 579; Winnipeg 492; Montreal 289; Vancouver 222.

Cost of Living Rises.

The cost of living in Canada continues to rise. The Labor Department index number of wholesale prices rose nearly two points during March as compared with February. The index number in March was eight points higher than in March, 1914.

Kansas City has ordered all the stalls and stands of the city market to be screened.

A Straight Talk to Brantford Men

No class of men have ever given such sane, intelligent recognition to the importance of proper attire as Brantford men. Good taste linked with quality is the keynote of the policy of the Tip Top Tailors. Our reputation is built on the very best of service to our customers at all times.

Here are the Rigid Rules Under Which We Make Our Clothes:

- 1—QUALITY must characterize every piece of woollen bought for our stores. No seconds, job lots, no defective fabrics can be purchased to be unloaded on our patrons.
- 2—STYLE AND FIT must be essential to all clothes that leave this shop. Perfect fit and nothing out-of-date in style that will reflect credit on the wearer in any company.
- 3—STOCK—We try to maintain the widest variety, so that our patrons may have a good selection in almost every line of material.
- 4—PRICE—Our price is fixed at the lowest consistent with our net cost, and our net cost is not any ordinary wholesale price, but a cost obtained by purchasing our materials in large quantities direct from the mills and running our organization on a most economical basis, consistent with efficiency.
- 5—MONEY WILL BE REFUNDED without question or argument if the clothes we make are not perfectly satisfactory. We prefer that you return them.

Although we have been in the tailoring business but a few years, our business has grown from one store to six by strict adherence to the above rules.

If you want the best clothes value in Canada, wear one of our $14 suits, made to measure. Save $5 to $10.

HOUSEHOLD LINENS.

Some Valuable Hints Given About the Way to Launder Handsome Linens. The centerpiece shown here is one piece of a set which includes a buffet runner, twelve plate doilies and twelve tumbler doilies. Mexican drawn work is again coming into favor, which combined with hand embroidery makes very handsome and durable sets for dining room or bed chamber. But after the house is replenished with new linen next comes the problem of having that linen properly laundered. When linen does not remain white, but gets grayish, you may know that it has not been properly rinsed. Linen should be washed with a good mild soap. A soap that is too strong is likely to affect the gum that holds the fibers of flax and so to weaken them. But it is imperative that all the soap should be rinsed out of the linen. If it is not grayness is sure to result. Linen may be rinsed in the ironing process quite as quickly as in the tub. Every one likes to see napkins and cloths beautifully smooth and folded with exactness and precision, edges all in a line and folds carefully creased. But it is this same careful creasing that strains the fibers of the linen and makes it liable to give way or when ever any pull comes to it. While linen has to be carefully folded, it is not necessary that this folding or creasing should be done with great pressure, as is sometimes the case. It is the pressure that cracks the threads.

The same thing results when linen is run through a wringer that is geared too tight. However careless you may be in the ironing, the ironing board should be set so that the ironing is done with a pressure that is just enough to get through her work the more quickly, but this tight gearing is fatal to linens. The woman who will remember these suggestions and have her table linens washed in conformity with them will be reasonably sure of getting the full value for any money she has invested in linens.

Eau de Cologne is splendid in remedying a defect from which many suffer—a too shiny, greasy skin. If your face gets shiny you can never look better, for you require a tissue of powder to take the shine away. But if you wash your face in the mornings in cold water to which a teaspoonful of eau de cologne has been added you will find this tendency to shininess disappear. With some people the regular use of oatmeal for softening the water effects a cure, but the eau de cologne recipe is not such a bother, for you require as tissue the oatmeal put in tiny muslin bags and allow it to soak in the water some little time before you use it.

Economical Lye. Take wood ashes and pour boiling water on them. Let boil for a few minutes and settle. Strain and bottle. Good for boiling clothes.

YOUR OWN DAY.

Have a little heart to heart talk with yourself every morning and say: "It does not matter what comes or goes today, what happens of what does not happen, there is one thing of which I am sure and that is, I am going to get the most possible out of the day. I am not going to allow anything to rob me of my happiness or of my right to live this day from beginning to end and not merely to exist."

"I do not care what comes, I shall not allow any annoyance, any happening, any circumstance which may cross my path today to rob me of my peace of mind. I will not be unhappy today, no matter what occurs. I am going to enjoy the day to its full, live the day completely. This day shall be a complete day in my life. I shall not allow the enemies of my happiness to mar it. No misfortune in the past, nothing which has happened to me in days gone by, which has been disagreeable or inefficient, shall be a guest in my spirit's sacred inclosure today. Only happy thoughts, joy thoughts, only the friends of my peace, comfort, happiness and success shall find entertainment in my soul this day. None of my enemies shall gain admittance to scrawl their hideous autographs on 'the walls of my mind. There shall be no admittance' today except to the friends of my best moods. I will tear down the black, sable pictures and upon pictures of joy and gladness, of things which will encourage, cheer and increase my power. Everything which over handicapped my life, which has made me uncomfortable and unhappy, shall be expelled, at least for this day. So that when night comes I can say 'I have lived today!'"

Toronto will raise another company of engineers for the firing line.

OTTAWA TWICE

First Baseman Bierbauer Tripped
on Second Base and Broke His Ankle.

Ottawa, Ont., June 4.—St. Thomas captured two games from the Ottawas yesterday. Shaughnessy's team was crippled through the absence of Carleton, Dolan, and Lage, and though they fought hard, they were outplayed both times. St. Thomas took the morning fixture by 7 to 3 and that in the afternoon by 5 to 3. In the forenoon Kopp had three hits in four times up, stole a base and scored three runs. In the afternoon, with Hughley at first base, he poked out a home run and settled the outcome for the Ottawas. He was nearly a whole team in himself, as he ended Ottawa's rally in the ninth by a fine catch off Pettie's bat. Both Peterson and Kopp pitched poorly in the pinches. Louis Bierbauer tripped over second base in the sixth inning of the second game and broke his left ankle. It is thought he was rushed to St. Luke's Hospital in an automobile, but doctors will not be able until to-morrow to determine the extent of his injuries.

Only 4 Hits Were Regis-

The Brants lost the first of the series with the Hams at Hamilton yesterday, when Harris tripled, scoring Doherty ahead of him in the third inning. The feature of the game was the few hits that were made off both pitchers. Hamilton connected but three times, which was enough to down white Doherty had the Brants eating out of his hand during the entire game, except the third inning, when the locals scored their only run of the game on the hit they were able to get, and that went to Dunlop. Donohue, let out by Cristall, was on the mound for the Brants and did excellent work. The locals got the only two double plays of the game, Donohue, Dunlop and Ivers doing the trick twice. Rube Deneau was again seen in the role of pinch hitter in the ninth frame, in the place of Foran, but he failed to come across with the necessary bingle, and the Hams had won. The game was clean, fast and altogether a good exhibition of baseball. The score: Hamilton..... 2

Boston, June 4.—Rube Marquard, of the Giants registered a ten to three victory over the Braves in the final game of the series here yesterday. Death by Torture Result of Gas War

Neutral Correspondent Describes Fearful Cruelty of Germans' New Mode of Warfare.

Herbert Corey is a war correspondent of the Associated Newspapers. For months he has been with the German army and his letters have been frankly pro-German. He is one of the correspondents who accepted the German denials of Belgian and other atrocities. Now he is facing the facts and manfully admits that he was deceived. His description here of German tortures that rival the horrors of the ancient Inquisition is one of the strongest articles out of the war zone.

Bailliet, France, June 4.—Not half the story of trench gas has been told. What do you think of an instrument of death that not merely kills, but tortures?

This is a statement—a tabulated, calm, matter of fact statement—of what the Germans' latest instrument for killing is able to accomplish. Twenty per cent of those affected—one man in five—is killed by the trench gas. Thirty per cent of those affected will be killed—be affected permanently by it.

Those affected suffer the tortures of hell. They flame with fever. Their lungs fill with water, so that they drown, except that the drowning is not mercifully quick.

Those who die cough—and cough—until a kind of death comes. They may not be down. Their faces turn a horrible gray-brown in color. They sit in their beds and are conscious while fire runs through their veins—and cough. And so they die.

I am writing this story as a neutral and an impartial correspondent. I believe I may claim that title with right. During my stay in Germany a field of the many admirable qualities of the German nation—of their unty courage—and magnificent courage—with genuine enthusiasm. I have not one word to retract or modify of what I have written. But I wish to add a further tribute to German qualities.

There is something in the German spirit which leads the nation to applaud the murders of the Lusitania. There is something in the German spirit which permits them to kill men by torture—if thereby they may win.

EFFECTS OF THE GAS
Through the invitation of the French Government, I was one of the first party of correspondents to make a personal investigation of the effects of trench gas. I was frankly sceptical. In Germany the charge that boiling oil had been pumped upon opponents had been angrily resented. I had believed that denial. Conceding that trench gas had been used, I refused to believe that it was of a character that would inflict great suffering. I am now convinced. I have watched men dying.

Our party visited the hospital at Zuydcoote, where French and Belgians had been brought from the front, fifteen kilometres distance. This was one of the first hospitals to receive men suffering from trench gas. A distinguished Paris pathologist, Professor Katherly, told us of the effects of the gas. His testimony was added to that of the physicians and surgeons of the hospital. We saw the men who suffered. At the hospital at Malo-les-Bains we saw and talked to other physicians and soldiers.

We were accorded the usual privilege of visiting the British clearing station at Bailliet. The word "neutral" is to be emphasized. The British have fought against correspondents as vigorously as they have fought against the Germans. It took such a thing as the trench gas to break down their horror of the printed word. There we talked to Colonel Sir Wilmoth Herringham, consulting physician of this great hospital base, and a man whose word will be received with respect even in Germany. At the three hospitals, covering the three armies, the figures given us coincide in effect. They were as follows:

Ten per cent of the men—one man in ten—died in the trenches. What this means may be appreciated when you know that a 15 per cent casualty list—including deaths and all wounds—has been regarded as sufficient in previous wars for the ordering of a retreat.

A wandering percentage of from 6 to 10 per cent of the men affected died after making their escape from the trenches. The percentage depends largely upon the staying qualities of the men and on the gas used. It appears that there are at least two sorts of gas used by the Germans. No doubt this instrument is still in the experimental stage. One is sent out from cauldrons, or some such instrumentality. The other is discharged in bombs.

VICTIMS SUFFER FOR LIFE
The physicians believe that 30 per cent of the men who lived through it will be permanently affected by it. Their lungs and bronchial passages have been cut to pieces by it. It is too early as yet to more than guess at the after effects of the gas. What is even more horrible—for death and permanent injury are the result of every instrument used in war is the suffering inflicted.

These men died—or lived—in agony that no inquisitor ever exceeded upon his victim. The upper respiratory organs were cut to pieces by the gas. They died after days of coughing—days and nights in which sleep was impossible—in which they coughed until their lungs were flooded by the water produced by the irritation, so that they drowned—slowly. I am passing no judgment upon the ethical questions involved in this use of gas. The world will do that. I am merely trying to tell the story.

It is important to say too that statistics are as yet unreliable. Some of the trenches gained by the Germans through the use of this gas are still in their hands. It is impossible to discover how many died in those trenches. Because of the system of shifting men on from hospital to hospital, in order to get them away from the front—in order that room may be made at the clearing stations for freshly wounded men—the estimate of the percentage of men who died in the hospitals is as yet mere guess work. The figures I have given are a composite.

"They do not lose courage," is the statement of the authorities of the British hospital at Bailliet. "The men who came here were of the finest type we have seen."

"We'll stick it out if we can," they said. "But they coughed continually. The whole warful coughed. When they first came in their faces were a reddish purple in color—highly congested. Their eyes streamed with a yellowish secretion. The expectoration was profuse. They could not lie down. They could not sleep. By and by their color turned to a grayish-black. Then they died."

That description of their sufferings may answer for the men in all the hospitals. In some instances acute pneumonia developed after a few days. In other cases the men seemed but slightly affected at the outset. Later on the acid seemed to wear away the lung tissue. In the hospital at Zuydcoote there was a Moor—just a boy, with a pleasant, kindly, infinitely sad face. He could not talk a word of French, or of any other language except the Cabin dialect. He was patient and uncomplaining.

"We sent him back to the trenches once," said the doctor. "They thought he was cured. But after a day in the trenches the cough came on, and he was returned to the hospital. Now they fear he may die. His symptoms are those of other sufferers. His nose bleeds, and he has a high fever and constant headache. Always that tearing cough."

"It is as though they were suffering from quick consumption," said one man. "The gas seems to have first been used on April 22. All along the line the story was the same. The men saw the clouds of gas issuing from various points in the German trenches, as though it was being pumped from machines, or was boiling out of cauldrons. More likely it was under the pressure of several atmospheres in strong receptacles. When the order came it was only necessary to release it.

"It was greenish yellow, with a cast of red in it," all said of the trench gas. This is to be distinguished from the shell gas, of which more later.

"It rolled towards us in a cloud borne by the wind. In some places it rose to a height of twenty-five feet. As it rose it became more yellowish. It did not attain a great height for the first 100 or 200 yards."

The importance of this is that the opposing trenches are not more than 100 yards apart in many places along this line.

"It flowed heavily, like a thick liquid," was one man's description. "It ran over the trench embankments and into the trench just as a table cloth slides over the edge of a table. The trench became untenable at once."

The first thing noticed by the men was a tendency to cough. Their eyes watered. Soon they could not stand it and ran away. Those who stooped over to pick up their bags or guns were lost," was the universal testimony. "They died right there."

Some of the French and Belgians charged through the cloud and attacked the Germans. Not many. The survivor of one such charge said: "One wasn't much good after he had fought his way through the gas. He couldn't fight." For the most part the men staggered out, helping their comrades as best they could. The range of the gas depended upon wind conditions. In one case it knocked out artillery men who had been firing at the German trenches at a range of 2,600 yards. Being artillerymen they knew the range to the yard.

ABOUT 6,000 VICTIMS.
The Englishmen affected numbered something less than 2,500. About 3,500 French were "gassed." No precise statement has yet been made of the number of Belgians. Laboratory experiments upon the affected men show that the gas used—the trench gas—is probably a compound of chlorine and bromine. The men recognize the bromine fumes. "But it was not so reddish," they said. "The gas stayed on the ground." Then they were offered the fumes of chlorine. "That's what we got," they said with precision. It is thought that other acids were blended with these two principles.

The shell gas has been discharged in bombs fired from the German field pieces. It is of a greyish black color, and while differing slightly from the trench gas, has practically the same effect. Here and there along the lines the difference in color and odor are noted by the men, which makes it seem likely that the Germans are still experimenting. Autopsies show that tubercular individuals, or men who have recovered from tuberculosis, are more dangerously affected. Because of the impairment of their breathing apparatus, they are unable to throw off the gas as rapidly as perfectly sound men. The treatment has been a very simple one—plenty of milk, calming potions for the cough, and the men who are able are made to walk, to quicken the natural processes of elimination.

That careful preparations had been made by the Germans is shown by the pieces of apparatus captured. One was an oxygen helmet, such as is used by rescuers in mines. Obviously this was worn by the men who handled the apparatus. The rank and file wore face masks, which had been wet in a solution of hydrosulphite of soda—the "hypo" of the amateur photographer—and the chemical, the nature of which has not yet been discovered. Then there is a third variety of mask, which exactly resembles a pig's snout. It is fitted on over the nose and mouth and held in place by tapes. In the round, bestial snout are eight holes, through which air is admitted to be filtered by passage through a wet sponge. On the side is a valve which closes when the wearer inhales and opens to let out the exhaled air.

"Imagine the Germans wearing these pig snouts and their spiked helmets and charging through the dense fumes of acid," said one member of our party. "They must have made you think of wild boars dashing through a forest."

That bait was offered half a dozen soldiers, but not one of them would rise to it. They are painfully literal minded, these fighting men. Each replied in the same terms: "No. We thought they were wearing handkerchiefs over their faces."

Let me add another word of testimony as to the literal-mindedness of these men. Col. Sir Wilmoth Herringham had just finished a description of the scene in one of the trenches which the British held—in which the dead men, poisoned by gas, were lying in heaps. Someone suggested that the Germans may have killed some of these men.

"We know absolutely," said Colonel Herringham, with a cold definite precision, "that the Germans do sometimes finish off the wounded men they find in the trenches."

"Did that happen in this case?" "We do not know," said Col. Herringham. "We have not yet captured the trenches."

BLACK BEDROOM

Relieved by Gray, It Is the Fad in England.

NEW IDEA IN MOURNING.

This Notion Calls For the Ebony Hued Boudoir, Which, However, May Not Be Too Sombre, but Lightened by Silver Accessories.

The war has been on long enough for European people to become somewhat hardened to its horrors and its sorrows, and fashionable persons are even developing fads in mourning. One of these fads, writes a London woman, is the black bedroom.

An eccentric old dowager in Kent lost two of her relatives in the battle of the Marne, a third went down in the naval encounter in South American waters, and her favorite nephew, a young officer, died after having been wounded in the fiercest of the fighting before Ypres. Her ladyship is given to light colors and Parisian creations, and after the many deaths in her family she still went about her charities almost as though nothing had happened. One of the heroes' mothers remonstrated with her.

"You might at least put a band upon your sleeve," she said. "You were always fond of Reggie."

Mourning in Her Sleep.

"My dear," the old lady answered, shaking her mauve bonnet. "I mourn while I sleep. Come and see my bedroom."

She had effected a complete and startling change in her sleeping chamber. The floor had been recarpeted in dead black velvet, and the furniture had been replaced by ebony pieces. What upholstery there was had been done in silver gray. The walls had been covered with silver gray paper, topped by a frieze of black, a conventional pattern with gray shadings. The only ornaments left in the room were of silver; all pictures had been removed and photos of her soldiers in black frames substituted; there was an abundance of black velvet pillows on the divan and floor pillows of black.

The bed itself was the most striking piece. It was of ebony with silver trimmings. The whole looked like a magnificent bier, and the woman who could sleep in it must indeed be a courageous character. The coverlet was of black and white, and in the center the dowager's coat of arms done in thick silver. She sleeps in a black silk nightgown, and her sheets and pillow cases are black silk, her blankets black with silver striped borders and her quilts black satin.

Those who see the bedroom gasp at first; later they may take up the fad.

"What do you think of it?" the old lady asks grimly of those who are permitted to enter it. "It serves to remind me more forcibly that I shall soon join my own where battles are no more. Do you think this is less mourning than the black rags I might put upon my back?"

Certainly more. And in the opinion of some such mourning goes deeper. Black bedrooms are growing in favor, particularly in London, though with modifications. Few are brave enough to try the bed with the mirror above it.

The black bedroom in England is not entirely a new idea. At least ten years ago a rich old woman in Sussex had a black and mauve bed and a full length mirror raised on the four posts of the bed, not because she was in mourning, but because she chose to be eccentric.

Excellent Nut Bread.

Two cupfuls of white flour (sifted), two cupfuls of graham or entire wheat flour (sifted if one chooses), one-half cupful of New Orleans molasses, a little salt, two cupfuls of milk or water, one cupful of walnut meats (cut up fine), one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in milk, about two tablespoonfuls melted butter. Let raise twenty minutes. Bake about one hour in moderate oven.

Ribbon Bows.

Bows of ribbon are effective used on some of the new wide skirted frocks of satin and silk. One that is pretty has little square bows of satin reaching from throat to hem. They are distinctly in keeping with the wide skirt.

GRANARY OF EMPIRE.

Canada's Claim Is Proving to Be No Empty Boast.

The present conflict in Europe has demonstrated beyond the possibility of doubt that the maintenance of Britain's superiority at sea, and the expansion of the wheat areas in British Dominions, have been linked together as basic factors in the consideration of plans for Imperial offence and defence.

The lawmakers in London, as a matter of policy, have allowed nothing to interfere with the building up of an all-powerful navy, and they have steadfastly ignored the protests of Englishmen who have contended that in the event of an important European struggle involving Great Britain, "the hunger of London would dictate terms of peace." But the Admiralty were convinced that the sea power would keep all the routes open for foodstuffs. The lands in the British Isles which might have been devoted to the growth of more wheat were left as before, and the investors of Britain by placing their funds in the bonds of railways in Canada, in South Africa, in Australia, and in New Zealand, where vast stretches of fertile country remained to be opened up, encouraged the production of a steady supply of foodstuffs which might be called upon in case of emergency. The under-water craft of Germany have failed to throttle the shipping of Great Britain. Her ships come and go almost as they please. And the resources of wheat lands, in themselves many times the area of the British Isles are available for the need of the people of Britain.

In facilitating the expansion of the various railway companies in the Dominion during the last thirty years, the successive Governments, federal and provincial, have enabled Canada to take up the burden of a greater production in this year of the Empire's peril, Canada is measuring up to her advertised destiny as the "Granary of the Empire," or, more emphatic still, "Bread Basket of the World." The prophecies of leaders of thought for three decades are on the verge of fulfilment. The large exportable surplus of the wheat fields in Canada will go to feed a fair proportion of the dependent millions of England, and probably, the war-harassed Belgians as well. The railway lines which have been constructed east and west and north and south throughout the country have made her present position possible. Without these essential traffic arteries the Dominion would have been merely a helpless spectator while the greatest war in history rumbled through to a conclusion. Canada's most important contribution to the cause of Empire, is in wheat and flour and bread.

The bulk of the supplies of Canadian wheat for export are drawn each year from the wheat fields of the prairie provinces. The total supply may be computed by a study of the carryings of the railways. During the crop year 1913-14, the Canadian Northern alone handled from the territory served by its western lines, 47,295,000 bushels. Estimating the increase this year at 20 per cent, the C.N.R. should haul out approximately 56,750,000 bushels of wheat from the provinces lying between the Great Lakes and the Rocky Mountains. That quantity of wheat, converted successively into flour, and into standard loaves of bread, would feed Greater London, with its estimated population of 7,252,963, for more than four and a half years.

According to the millers, a barrel of flour, 196 pounds, is made from 4 1/2 bushels of wheat, and according to the bakers, 187 standard loaves of 24 ounces each, are made from one barrel of flour. The anticipated carryings on the Canadian Northern this season, then, represent 12,611,111 bushels and 2,358,277,757 loaves of bread. If this were divided in London each individual in the Imperial city would receive 325 loaves.

Doing Good Shooting.

A letter from Col. John A. Currie, M.P., received in Ottawa recently, contains some thrilling references to the terrific fighting along the western front. He wrote on April 6, when the Canadians were resting a few miles back from the firing lines.

While they were in the trenches, says Col. Currie, the fighting was incessant, shells by day and rifle fire at night. The fight at Neuve Chapelle was very hot. The Canadians were not in the thick of it, "but the rifle and artillery fire sounded like Niagara." The Canadian artillery were doing good shooting, and he adds that the Canadian troops would soon trust their own artillery to shoot over their heads as the British batteries.

Even back from the trenches, as they went to sleep at night, they could hear the patter of German bullets against the walls of the building. At the time of writing Col. Currie was the only Canadian M.P. in the trenches.

Ferocious Fish.

Drawing a 24-inch pike from above the dam here recently Miss Irene Plesky was so elated with her catch that she seized the finny monster with her hands and pressed it caressingly to her bosom, but the fish, which weighed 3 lbs. 4 ozs., didn't appreciate such kindness, as it nipped her in the hand, and put her temporarily out of commission. It, however, was despatched before it could escape again to the deep.—Bruce Times.

Couldn't Put Up the Bluff.

"Congratulations. I'm going to be married."

"I can't do it conscientiously, old pal. I'm married myself."

The MASQUERADER

By Katherine Cecil Thurston, Author of "The Circle," Etc. Copyright, 1904, by Harper & Brothers

He walked forward rapidly and without encountering a check. Then suddenly the spell was broken. From the slowly moving, brilliantly dressed throng of people some one called him by his name, and, turning, he saw Lillian Astrupp.

She was stepping from the door of a jeweler's, and as he turned she paused, holding out her hand. "The very person I would have wished to see!" she exclaimed. "Where have you been these hundred years? I've heard of nobody but you since you've turned politician and ceased to be a mere member of parliament." She laughed softly. The laugh suited the light spring air, and she herself suited the pleasant, superficial scene.

He took her hand and held it, while his eyes traveled from her delicate face to her pale cloth gown, from her soft furs to the bunch of roses fastened in her muff. The sight of her was a curious relief. Her cool, slim fingers were so casual, yet so clinging; her voice and her presence were so redolent of easy, aristocratic things.

"How well you look!" he said involuntarily. "Again she laughed. 'That's my prerogative,' she responded lightly. 'But I was serious in being glad to see you. Sarcastic people are always so intuitive. I'm looking for some one with intuition.'"

Chilcote glanced up. "Extravagant again?" he said dryly.

She smiled at him sweetly. "Jack!" she murmured, with slow reproach. Chilcote laughed quickly. "I understand. You've changed your minister of finance. I'm wanted in some other direction."

This time her reproach was expressed by a glance. "You are always wanted," she said.

The words seemed to rouse him again to the slanting self distrust that the sight of her had lifted.

"It's—it's delightful to meet you like this," he began, "and I wish the meeting wasn't momentary. But I'm—I'm gathered pressed for time. You must let me come round one afternoon—or evening, when you're alone." He fumbled for a moment with the collar of his coat and glanced furtively upward toward Oxford street.

But again Lillian smiled, this time to herself. If she understood anything on earth, it was Chilcote and his moods.

"If one may be careless of anything, Jack," she said lightly, "surely it's of time! I can imagine being pressed for anything else in the world. If it's an appointment you're worrying about, a motor goes ever so much faster than a cab." She looked at him tentatively, her head slightly on one side, her muff raised till the pines and some of the soft fur touched her cheek.

She looked very charming and very persuasive as Chilcote glanced back. Again she seemed to represent a respite—something graceful and subtle in a world of oppressive obligations. His eyes strayed from her figure to the smart motor car drawn up beside the curb.

She saw the glance. "Ever so much quicker," she insinuated. And, smiling again, she stepped forward from the door of the shop. After a second's indecision Chilcote followed her.

The waiting car had three seats, one in front for the chauffeur, two vis-a-vis at the back, offering pleasant possibilities of a tete-a-tete.

"The park—and drive slowly," Lillian ordered as she stepped inside, motioning Chilcote to the seat opposite. They moved up Bond street smoothly and rapidly. Lillian was absorbed in the passing traffic until the Marble arch was reached; then, as they glided through the big gates, she looked across at her companion. He had turned up the collar of his coat, though the wind was scarcely perceptible, and buried himself in it to the ears.

"It is extraordinary?" she exclaimed suddenly, as her eyes rested on his face. It was seldom that she felt drawn to exclamation. He was usually too indolent to show surprise. But now the feeling was called forth before she was aware.

Chilcote looked up. "What's extraordinary?" he said absently.

She leaned forward for an instant and touched his hand.

"Don't" she said teasingly. "Did I rub your fur the wrong way?" Then, seeing his expression, she tactfully changed her tone. "I'll explain. It was the same thing that struck me the night of Blanche's party—when you looked at me over Leonard Kaine's head. You remember?" She glanced away from him across the park to where the grass was already showing greener.

Chilcote felt ill at ease. Again he put his hand to his coat collar.

"Oh, yes," he said hastily; "yes." He wished now that he had questioned Loder more closely on the proceedings of that party. It seemed to him on looking back that Loder had mentioned nothing on the day of their last exchange but the political complications that absorbed his mind.

"I couldn't explain then," Lillian went on. "I couldn't explain before a crowd of people that it wasn't your dark head showing over Leonard's red one that surprised me, but the most wonderful, the most extraordinary likeness"—She paused.

The car was moving slower. There was a delight in the easy motion through the fresh, early air. But Chilcote's uneasiness had been aroused. He no longer felt soothed. "What likeness?" he asked sharply. "Oh, a likeness I have noticed before," she said. "A likeness that always seemed strange, but that suddenly became incredible at Blanche's party."

He moved quickly. "Likenesses are an illusion," he said, "a mere imagination of the brain!" His manner was short; his annoyance seemingly out of all proportion to the cause. Lillian looked at him afresh in slightly interested surprise.

"Yet not so very long ago, yourself"—she began. "Nonsense!" he broke in. "I've always denied likenesses. Such things don't really exist. Likeness seeing is purely an individual matter—a preconception." He spoke fast. He was uneasy under the cool scrutiny of her green eyes. And with a sharp attempt at self control and reassurance he altered his voice. "After all, we're being very stupid!" he exclaimed. "We're worrying over something that doesn't exist."

Lillian was still lazily interested. To her own belief she had seen Chilcote last on the night of her sister's reception. Then she had been too preoccupied to notice either his manner or his health, though superficially it had lingered in her mind that he had seemed unusually reliant, unusually well on that night. A remembrance of the impression came to her now as she studied his face, upon which imperceptibly and yet relentlessly his vice was setting its mark, in the dull restlessness of eye, the unhealthy sallowness of skin.

Some shred of her thought, some suggestion of the comparison running through her mind, must have shown in her face, for Chilcote altered his position with a touch of meanness. His

"What likeness?" he asked sharply, glanced away across the long sweep of tan covered drive stretching between the trees. Then he glanced furtively back.

"By the way," he said quickly, "you wanted me for something?" The memory of her earlier suggestion came as a sudden boon.

She fixed her muff again and smelled her roses thoughtfully. "Oh, it was nothing, really," she said. "You sarcastic people give very shrewd suggestions sometimes, and I've been rather wanting a suggestion on an—on an adventure that I've had." She looked down at her flowers with a charmingly tentative air.

But Chilcote's restlessness had increased. Looking up she suddenly caught the expression, and her own face changed.

"My dear Jack," she said softly, "what a bore I am! Let's forget tedious things and enjoy ourselves." She leaned toward him carelessly with an air of concern and reproach.

A FINE COMPLEXION

MAY BE HAD THROUGH THE RICH, RED BLOOD DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS ACTUALLY MAKE.

A girl's complexion is something more than a matter to concern her vanity. It is an indication of the state of her health. Pallor in a growing girl means a thinning of the blood. Parents' complexions and should see to it that these danger signs are corrected. When a girl in her teens becomes pale and sallow, if she shows an inclination to tire easily, is listless and inattentive to her work or studies, she needs Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, a tonic which directly and specifically corrects the condition from which she is suffering. A chemical analysis of the blood of such a girl would show it to be deficient in just the elements that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can supply, and which restore brightness to the eye and color to the cheeks. Miss Delina Arsenault, Urbainville, P.E.I., is one of the thousands of anemic girls restored to health by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says: "I was attacked with anaemia, and I had to consult a doctor, and was under his care for several months, but without getting better. I was growing thinner every day, had dark circles around the eyes. I could hardly sleep at night, but tossed restlessly and got up in the morning with black anticipation of the day's miseries before me. I was always bothered with headaches and pains in the back and limbs. My appetite was poor and I frequently vomited what I did eat. My friends feared that I would not recover. I had often seen Dr. Williams' Pink Pills advertised and finally decided to try them. I used altogether nine boxes and they made me as well as ever I was in my life. All the pains and aches disappeared; my appetite returned. I could sleep soundly at night, and the color returned to my cheeks. I also gained seventeen pounds in weight. I am now always well, and for this happy condition I have to thank Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get these Pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.
