HE stillty of Periodical Literature, in the influence it exerts upon a community by the diffusion of useful knowledge, is too obvious to be disputed. While publications of this character furnish to the man of study and research to the manufacture of the an agreeable employment in the moments of re-laxation, they contribute to the improvement of laxation, they contribute to the improvement of these classes of society who have neither the leisure nor the capacity to master profound and learned treatises. Of all subjects claiming the attention of rational and immortal man, Reigious is confessedly the most important; and yet any other has been so completely over, or neglected. The want of a Reigious in this Province has been long felt, and dishment of one much desired. in any way connected with it. The experiment of a useful and general education is satisfied to a fair trial,—should it, not be productive of so much benefit to the community as its advocates anticipates, it will at least be giving the people the same opportunities which the rich and more described. me opportunities whom the residences, in ate portion of the community possess, in g received education. The most excellent fortunate portion of the commusity possess, in having received education. The most excellent faculties may be given by the Caratron to the poor as well as the rich. Without education these faculties are comparatively useless. It is like allowing the best and most fertile land to remain waste, that if cultivated properly, would produce abundantly of what was useful for man. I would here ask, who are they that are qualified to give an opinion on the advantages of education? It can only be those who have been educated; no other can form a correct opinion of the matter. Oh what reasonable principle, then, can the man who prides himself on his own education, and who looks with contempt on all those who are unaducated, object to the universal instruction of man? I must confees that I do believe those who would make the objection, would do so in order that they might have the greater chance of advantage.

in any country as to afferd me the means of showing its practical efficacy. Until the conclusion of a General Treaty of Peace between the exceed European Nations in 1815, the education of the working classes in the British Isles, was very much neglected: Even up to this day, it is not so effectually provided for as it might, and perhaps eaght to be, to produce all the good it would be capable of producing. Previous to the year 1816, very fittle was done to promote the education of the pear, consequently it cannot be expected that education has had much influence yet, in diminishing crime and increasing industry and good conduct.

It will require time to bring to perfection a system of education that will be emitable, and it so only practical experience that will anable Legislatures and others in authority to understand perfectly, the quality and amount of education that about he had meant of education that about he administrate in set or altogether by public funds. It is only when a system of general and useful instruction has been in full operation for some vers, that its nility will become fully manifestes.

MONTREAL, MONDAY, JAN. 23, 1837.

The news from Upper Canada is extreme v meagre.

The Brockville, Newcastle, and Niagare Bank Bills, have, we understand, passed the Legislative Council.

We copied the other day some remarks of Governor EVERETT, of Massachusetts. In his late State Message he says, "the wealth of Massachusetts always has been, and a ways will be, the mind of her children; to good schools are a treasure, a thousand-find more precious than all the gold and silver at Mexico and Peru."

He thus concludes his Message :-

" Such is the condition of public affers, as to as it is my duty to submit it to the Legislam. It is shibits to our contemplation a degree of public prosperity, is not perfect, at least rarely equalled. It is the picture hastly sketched, o a part of the public establishments of a c ith, happy within itself, in all of self government, and strength of a po-confederacy, happy in the cherished mer worthy ancestors, in a singular approach to equality of fortune in the great body of the per ple; and in the great elemental libertia. speech and the press; happy in the administra-tion of equal justice, in numberless institutes for education, charity, and moral and rehrom culture; and in the constant presence and has seh and the press; happy in the admin ty exercise of that spirit of christian benerolans which, after exhausting all the common office. of social duty, has carried hope to the conver cell, taught the blind to see, the deaf to he and restored the light of reason to the beside ed mind.
These are the blessings which the govern ment of Massachusetts, by an action felt only a its benefits, secures to the people. They con stitute a heritage, which we are bound by the most sacred ob igation to transmit to our posts rity; and a debt of gratitude to Heaven, which can never be duly paid."

Lines. TED BY A VISIT TO THE SHAKER SETTLE-MENT, NEAR ALBANY. Mysterious worshippers! re ye indeed the things ye seem to be, f earth-yet of its iron influence free-From all that stire Our being's pulse, and gives to fleeting life

Are the gay visions some Those day dreams of the mind, by fate there flung,

Have we forgut your youth When expectation soured on pinions high, And hope shone cut, in boyhood's cloudles laim all in- When all look'd fair to fanov's ardent eve And pleasure were an air of screery ?

> Has wither'd your find hopes, that ye thus stand, A group of sisters 'mong this monking band? Ye crestures bright! Has sorrow scored your brows with demon hand, Or o'er your hopes pass'd treachery's burning brand Ye would have grac'd right we'l.

Col. Almonte acted as his interpreter. He is about five feet eight inches in height—as dark as the generality of the Mexican race. He has nothing remarkable in his appearance—but very accomplished and polite in his manners. He speaks good English, and appears to be a scholar.

EFFECTS OF SCOLDING CHILDRES.—The philospher Locke, in his "Thoughts concerning Education," endeavours to dissuade those who have the care of children, from scolding them, especially in anger. It less-ens, says he, the authority of the parents and the respect of children; for they distinguish easily betwist passion and reason; and as they cannot but have a reverence for what comes from the latter, so they quickly grow into a contempt of the former; or, if it causes a present terror, yet it soon wears off, and natural inclination will easily learn to slight such scarrerows, which make a noise, but are not animated by reason.

Few of the errors of young children are regarded by this philosopher as really vicious; and it is only when they are vicious that they are to be restrained with so much pains .-Even when they really do amiss vol a mere look or nod ought to correct them.
Or, if words are sometimes to be used in the management of the child, they ought, says he, to be grave, kind, and sober, representing the ill or unbecoming most the fills. the ill, or unbecomingness of the faults, rather than a hasty rating of the child for it, which makes him not sufficiently distinguish whether your dislike be not more directed to him than his fault. him than his fault. Passionate chiding usually carries rough and ill language with it, which has this further ill effect, that it teaches and justifies it in children; and the names that their parents or preceptors give them, they will not be ashamed or backward to be-ened, like the words of the Jewish law, to the very deor-posts of some of our houses. Not that they would do much good, where the habit of scolding forever is already fix. ed; but the disease is so dangerous, and a remedy is so much needed, that almost any expedient is worth proposing.

I am not ignorant that hundreds, during the last one hundred and fifty years, have tried to evade the force of Mr. L's reasoning, not by showing him to be in error, but simply by ridicule. Locke, they say, was not a father; and "old bachelors' children are always well governed." Now, we find many of the truths which Mr. Locke teaches, and this among the rest, so stamped on the very of the truths which Mr. Locke teaches, and this among the rest, so stamped on the very face of society, and so standing out in broad and plain characters, that it is impossible—borrowing the language of scripture—for him who runs, not to read.

Who has not observed that those parents who frown and scold much, are among the most unsuccessful in the art of governing their families? I believe it would be difficult to find an exception to this rule; or at least to find a sinule family in which there is much

What is Law Like?—Law is like a contra-dance; people are ied up and down in it still, they are fairly thed out. It is like a book of, curgery; there are a great many terrible cases in it. It is like physic, too; they that take the least of it are the best off. It's like a homely gantiemen; 'very well to follow;' and like a sociding wife, very bad when it follows us. Law is like a new fashion; people are bewitched to get into it; and like bad weather, most people are glad to get out of it. ere glad to get out of it,

There is so much of truth in these sayings of Mr. Locke, that I wish they could be fastened, like the words of the Jewish law, to the very door-posts of some of our houses.

The Lapse of Years.

The Lapse of Years.

Come to my native village—for 'tis sweet,
Howe'er' an adigit in the world's proud love,
To turn and trace the simplest elements
Of Hope and loy. See, there the invortes brook
That sped the wrate-wheel, and gaily here
Thy tiny heat—and there the broader pool
Whose ley surface lar'd thes forth, to share
Exching spect, when winter touch'd thy check
With living crimson. 'Of you hillock mark'd
Thy hosp's finitactic round, for still thy fort
Was flegiont in the proc, and thy clear voice
Rang like a bugic, when the shout peal'd high.
—Thou caust not think so many years have fled
Since these good days.

See'st that you characted band.

Hast'ning to peleot? Not one of these had touched Life's threshold when the manly arm was strong.

To cruch the dangers in its pilgrim path,
Stretch furth thine arm and touch them, if thou need'st,
Like sceptic Thomas, such proof to solve
Thy doubt. Beheld that blooming creature, full.

Of the sweet grace of perfect symmathood;
Didst thou not take her offtimes in thine atms.

When scarce a few scant moons had o're her roll'd?

Perchance, then may at remember how the nurse.

Would statish her from thee, for thise autocuth hand of Still'd not to yield her hand its full support. Would match her from thee, for thise amough hum. Still'd not to yield her head its full support. And thy rough whickered check did frighten her.—See'st thou thy playmates? There are heary me And matrons bowing 'neath their for of care, And some who highest bade the kite aspire. Have lowest rank to rest. Thou cannt nor feel What a stern robber Time has been to thee; And yet, mathinks, the officious eye might trice Some allvery this amid thine own bright hair.—How aliculy the autum's falling leaves. Come drifting through the air. The snow-fake ster Scarce with a lighter fort. So fleet our years, And while we dream their greenness still survives, Amid the remnant of their withered pride; Our steps make sullen echo.

Yet the sheaf Looks not with envy towards its tassel'd germ Nor the ripe peach bemons its fallen flower; Why then should man his venish'd morn regret! The day of duty is the day of joy, Of highest joy, such as the heave ns do bless, So keep perpetual summer in thy soul,
And take the spirit's smile along with thee,
Even to thy winding sheet.

You lowly roof— Thou knowed it well, and yet it seems more low Than it was wont to seem—for thou hast been.

A denized of loffer though and halls, Meet for the feet of princes. Ask thou not For father or for mother—they who made That humble home so beautiful to thee; But go thy way, and show to some young heart The same deep love—the same unchanging zea Of pure example, pointing to the skies That nuctur'd thee. So shall thou pay the debt To Nature's best affections, and to God.

Antiquity affords such illustratous instances of conjugal affection, as would almost put modern humanity to the blush if she had not some few examples to support her.

Tiberius Gracchus had caught two screents in his chamber, and as was the usual custom, he consulted the soothsayers on the Omen.

The answer made him was, if he slew the male first, he should die hefore his wife—if he question "whether she had any prejudice the consulted the soothsayers on the Omeo. The answer made him was, if he slew the male first, he should die before his wife—the slew the first, he should die before him. He designedly slew the male, and died according to the predictions. So remethable an action might very well occasion this question—whether Cornelis, his wife, was more happy in attaining such a husband—or unappy in losing him? However that may be his conduct was an instance of moral and romanic love; and if all our lesines were now across we may like Gracehus, there might personal the source of moral and romanic love; and if all our lesines were now were men like Gracehus, there might personal three ones.
