"LITTLE FELLER"
Little Feller do you know,
That your daddy loves you so,
That if harm would come to you,
He'd give you two eyes o' blue,
If I heard your steps no more,
Makin' music on the floor,
Guess I'd want 'em take me, too,
Light along my boy, with you.

That's th' way your daddy fells,
Nothin' like it'er ever happens,
To his heart an' makes it ache,
When he thinks some one might take
You, my lad, up there-away,
Hear his time in alters day:
An' I'll think that to be me,
They've jes' gotter to take me.

Little Feller, come here now,
Tell your daddy what you've heard,
That they give to you, my boy,
Secrets of jes' makin' joy.
Hear his words an' listen close,
Say, you're gettin' quite a lad;
Spects some day you'll be like paw,
Now skip away an' kiss your paw.

He's his puppy's boy, you bet!
Never been a young'un yet,
That could beat that little cuss—
Land o' Lawdy! What a fuss—
Play in how an' prance around,
Rollin', kickin' on the ground—
Say, young feller, seems to me
That you're gettin' rolicky:
Guess him better if you had,
But a little less like dad.

Sez he wants a bukin' hoos,
An' a cow outfit an' a dog,
Don't know what I'm goin' to do,
But that boy keeps a-tryin' to
Th' I'll swear, I'll have to say
That they young'un on the ground
He's makin' pappy stand around.
'Cause he's all I ever had,
An' exactly like his dad.

Little Feller's gone, I know,
Yet it seems to me as tho'
I can hear him callin' me,
For his daddy to come here,
For he says th' house he's built
That of mammy's crazy quilt.
Little Feller's gone, I know,
Yet it seems to me as tho'
I feel his kisses yet,
Hear his voice an' listen close,
How he plays his fiddle,
See th' him playin' I did agin,

Little Feller's gone, I know,
All the while he's been in my
Th' sometimes I think an' smile,
He's a-visitin' for awhile,
An' he goes away an' leave me
An' to tell th' truth, I do
Wish that I might see 'em say,
Little Feller's gone, I know,
Where he might go or try to go,
Me an' mammy-hater broke pair—
An' find Little Feller there.

A HERO.

The book slipped to the floor and Honoria felt back in her chair with a gentle yawn.
"That woman was a hero," she said aloud. "The kind I'd like to be. Never wanted to be anything else as much as to be a hero. Dear, dear, that's what I used to be under the trees and dream about, while other girls dreamed about lovers. To do something splendid and brave—think of that! Heigho!"

"She crossed the room and surveyed her small, trim figure in the mirror, with a queer defiance in her face. 'Oh, it's you again, is it?' she cried, looking at herself, always young, always tall and fine and heroic. You'd make a pretty hero, wouldn't you? You'd make me think of you out five feet tall in their shoes? and had round baby faces, and small dimples? Hmp! hmp!"

"She turned away and paced restlessly up and down the bright little room. The gentle purring of the sleeping children stole out to her faintly through the half-open door. Once, when she failed to hear it, she stopped in her walk to listen anxiously. Heavy feet stamped by, now and then, in the corridor, but the step she was waiting for did not come.

"He's late again," she said aloud, in the fashion of a lonely woman. "He was late yesterday and day before, and day before that—world with-ought end." A kind of bitterness distorted her sweet face. Home! What kind of a parody on the word was think of it? Her room in a great noisy hotel? Was there the slightest resemblance of a home about it-night and were bright with gaslight-to-night and pretty with the bits of womanly touches her wifely? Had not the horror of hotel rooms then against heavy colds. An hour's work there in the corner. Nell's starchy doll on the couch, the tiny One's red dress and caps everywhere—bless them, how they helped!

Honoria Keller had been married eight years and she had never had a home. From one hotel or boarding house to another she had drifted restlessly. The children had been born in hotels—that was Honoria's greatest grief. It seemed like doing the children a great wrong. When Harry laughed at her the hard-looked and withered. It was all Harry's doing, anyway. When they had money enough, he said, in his easy way, they would have a home. Time enough.

children took a cheaper room in one of the attics, and she went resolutely to work to earn the money to pay the bill. That work was terribly taxing to her slender strength did not matter, she called her carelessness her strength. And little by little she saved the money. Afterwards she wondered, now she only worked.

"You don't look it," she said to the woman, shabby little figure before her. "You don't look it, you're always winking at me, and I suppose this was the best you could do."

That was the night Harry came back. He was terribly thin and "Dear," he said, after the long explanation was over, "how could you think I would desert you like that?"

"I didn't," she answered simply. "And I didn't!" he said, as if he had heard it a dozen times. "There was no time to write a longer note than this night when the head made up his mind at last to send back each business in such a hurry. And then," he shuddered—then the smashes on the things—the careless that is—nothingness."

"Oh, when I came out of it," he persisted, "I couldn't remember. I only remember that I was there. Only to-day, dear," she cried joyfully. "But Harry, to-day is now and no-morrow's." "How are you going to do to-morrow?" "Yes, wait let me say it! To-morrow I'll be going somewhere—home, Honoria."

A BAD OUTLOOK FOR AUSTRALIA

Never in the history of living man was the agricultural and pastoral outlook in the eastern half of Australia so gloomy as at present. For seven years the central portions of Australia, together with the greater portion of the lands lying to the east of the Great Australian Range, have been afflicted with this terrible drought.

At the present time the cattle and sheep are in a state of extreme distress. The crops are almost entirely dead, and the stock is suffering from lack of food. The drought is so severe that the country is now a vast expanse of sand and desert.

Cure for Forgetfulness.

A successful business man said that there were two things which he learned when he was eighteen, and which ever afterwards were of great use to him, namely: "Never to lose anything, and never to forget anything." The story of this lesson is printed in the Country Gentleman.

An old lawyer sent the young man with an important paper, giving him definite instructions what to do with it. "You must not lose it," said the lawyer, frowning.

"But I say you must not lose it," said the young man, "but suppose I should happen to do so?"

"I shall make no provision for such an occurrence. You must not lose it." This was a new train of thought in the young man's mind, and he found that it was determined to do a thing he had never done before.

A CANADIAN TEACHER IN SOUTH AFRICA

Distance has not caused Miss Ellis to forget her friends in Nova Scotia, and a long journey has not made her a stranger. She writes from a school in Cape Town.

"The camp pitched on the valley about a mile from the town. The country around, with the exception of a few hills on the south, is generally flat. The Burgers live to the west and south of two long streets running in those directions. The greater number of the refugees live in bell-shaped tents arranged in very regular rows.

"Some of the people who have the means or are delicate have houses of sun-dried bricks with iron roofs. North of the long street are the tennis court, a general store, the athletic grounds and Educational Compound. The teaching staff we have two English girls, two Colonial girls, two Canadians, a Boer girl, and a Scotch Head-master.

"There were four primary classes vacant when we arrived. Two of these were assigned to me and I taught each half time for three weeks until the mid-winter vacation. After holidays, the children left in camp during the winter and try to find their way with whom I do some kindergarten work and try to teach the children. Many of them learn very readily, are particularly clever with words of hymns and action songs. My hours are very short. In the morning I teach from 9 till 10.30 and in the afternoon from 12 till 1.30. I have a few hours as an assistant, so do not feel over-worked. The classes vary very much in size, but in leaving in large numbers and we have only about two hundred in attendance just now and have to rearrange the classes almost every week."

Miss Ellis goes on to speak of the courtesy with which the teachers are treated by the Boers, and says that the mothers take a great interest in the progress of their children, and are much impressed with what they see and hear.

"The Dutch people are very fond of singing the praises of God and one hour of their hymns almost every evening, and from morning until long after dark on Sunday. I went to a very interesting service last night, and was led by the Dutch pastor and an English layman. A hymn was announced in the English hymn book, and the English choir sang in that language and the others in their own. The English choir gave an address which was interpreted by the Dutchman."

Miss Ellis referred to the probability of the camp soon breaking up when the teachers will be sent inland to assist in the work of the Boer. Her next letter will describe the breaking up of the camp and the transport service.

NOVA SCOTIA APPLE CRO.

(Halifax Herald.)
Thomas E. Dennis, of William Dennis & Sons, London, is in the city on his annual visit to Nova Scotia and other parts of the continent, familiarizing himself with the real conditions of the fruit crop. Mr. Dennis has just returned from a trip through the Annapolis valley, accompanied by his Halifax agent, Mr. Bligh. Speaking to the Herald Mr. Dennis said that weather is at all times a great factor in the fruit crop. The truth of this fact is amply borne out by the present disappointing prospects. And I am given to understand that this state of affairs is mainly attributable to the weather. I am told that the trees in blossom never looked better, and that the buds were full and ready for the season's work. But the cold, wet weather which subsequently set in has done much to prevent the crop from reaching its normal abundance.

Good orchards are few and far between. There are, of course, exceptions, but it is curious to note that a good yielding orchard can occasionally be found in a country where other orchards are so generally unproductive.

There are one or two exceptional orchards where the apples are clean and free from worm; but for the most part Greenhouses and Kings are ill-advised in their selection. In comparing trees one would be inclined to the opinion that the weather expert is not necessarily more correct in his estimate of the quality of the fruit.

It might perhaps be noted that the scarcity of apples in Nova Scotia does not necessarily mean higher prices in England, because, whereas, last year we were more or less dependent on this country, owing to the short crops in Upper Canada and the United States, such is not now the case.

Both Ontario and the United States show signs of a heavier yield than in previous years, and it is probable that shipments to England will all probably be heavy.

Completely Paged out.

The world is full of sickly, dependent, tired, overworked people, all hoping to be well some day. The surest road to health is along the road of taking Perforce after meals. Perforce is a great stimulant and causes one to eat plenty of wholesome food without fear of dyspepsia. This results in the rapid formation of an abundance of red, vitalizing blood, which will restore the nervous system, increase the vigor, and nourish and feed every organ of the body. Perforce is an ideal restorative and invigorant. It is a tonic if unqualified merit that anyone can use with benefit. Price 50c per box, or Well, now, but has been at druggists, or N. C. THE ST. JAMES PING PONG TOURNAMENT.

If the success of the above, last Thursday evening in the Ruggles Block, is any criterion, then the liquidation of the debt on St. James' Church is assured.

The play was of a high order, the result of much practice on the part of the competitors, and each much to be proud of, whilst to the winners—Miss Frizelle and Mr. J. Leavitt—much credit is due.

A short musical programme was also rendered during the evening. As usual, delighted the audience with her piano-forte solos, and much regret was expressed.
