Canadian Press Despatch

PARIS, Nov. 30.—The French ministry of foreign affairs today made public a Yellow Book bearing on the causes of the present war.

The French report has 216 pages and comprises no fewer than 160 documents. It is devoted primarily to a recital of the negotiations which followed the delivery of the Austrian note to Serbia, July 23, 1914, and which preceded the declaration of war by Germany on Russia (Aug. 1, 1914) and on France (Aug. 3, 1914).

It was first in the spring of 1913 that we noted this colossal and expensive military effort which alone can explain the desire to impose the German superiority and hegemony upon the powers of the triple entente.

RUSSIAN ARMY HAS SPREAD TO BORDERS OF ROUMANIA

Whole of Crown Land of Bukovina Is Occupied and Enormous Quantities of Supplies Captured

Direct Copyrighted Cable to The Toronto World

ROME, Nov. 30.—A despatch to The Messagero from Bucharest says that the Russians have occupied the whole of the crown land of Bukovina, capturing enormous quantities of ammunition, arms and provisions.

After the capture of Czernowitz, following the siege and bombardment of the capital of the Austrian crown land, the Russian army spread over the entire area, clear to the borders of Roumania.

The Austrian Catholic population of Bukovina has fled across the border into Hungary. The frontier is said to be entirely unguarded by the Austrians and to be open for an advance of the Russians.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The pressure upon the allied front between Dixmude and Ypres, which steadily increased during the last four months, has apparently relaxed.

Despatches from northern France say that the bombardments by the Germans in that region have slackened, and that it is believed that many of the heavy guns have been removed to positions which they have had time to prepare in the fact that in a number of cases the Indian troops with the allies have advanced and found the front rank trenches of the Germans unoccupied and nearly filled with water.

COPENHAGEN, via London, Nov. 30.—The German fleet is becoming more active in the Baltic. Scandinavian and Russian despatches indicate preparations for striking a blow at Russian ports, even entering the Gulf of Finland and possibly bombarding Petrograd.

It is reported here from several sources that there is great concentration of the fleet and German transport steamers along the Baltic coast and a withdrawal of warships from Kiel to strengthen the Baltic squadron operating northwards on the Gulf of Bothnia. (Exclusion by censor here).

Six Hundred Prisoners Were Taken in Fighting Near Lodz

Special Direct Copyrighted Cable to The Toronto World

ROME, Nov. 30.—The fall of Cracow may be expected at any time, according to advices received here from Petrograd. Since Saturday the Russians have been shelling the outer fortifications and the fire of their howitzers has reached the citadel of the city. One suburb is already burning, and the entire city has been devastated.

A correspondent of the Russian Army Messengers reports successful fighting on the Prussian frontier. The Germans are being so closely pursued by the Russian cavalry that they have been unable to take up positions previously prepared. Petrograd hears that ten miles of German trenches between Glogow and Sobota were captured yesterday, and that 400 prisoners were taken. Glogow is 16 miles northeast of Lodz, and Sobota is 12 miles north of Glogow. It is semi-officially announced that the Germans have received reinforcements of two infantry divisions and one cavalry division.

Conflicting Reports

From Poland the reports as to the situation between the German and the Russian armies are conflicting. Berlin and Petrograd, however, agree that the final issue has not yet been reached. Petrograd reports that the Germans are energetically resisting the Russian advance in the vicinity of Strykow, and the situation is said to be favorable for the Russians.

The Berlin claim is that the Russian offensive movement has been effectively checked, but the final outcome is yet to be disclosed.

Pressing is Tightening

The violent battle in Poland is still raging in the region of Strykow and Lodz, says a despatch to The Martin from its Petrograd correspondent.

The Russian pressure is steadily tightening about the three German army corps which were enveloped between Strykow and Braxynin, and fresh forces have been despatched to the front to meet the German reinforcements, which are advancing from the vicinity of Lensawa.

The Germans have hastily sent a force of 20,000 men to strengthen the garrison at Breslau, in evident anticipation of a Russian success at Cracow.

It is now definitely known here that at least two army corps have been recalled from Belgium and France to the eastern arena of war.

The Austrian army west of Cracow and Frysgrek has been dismembered.

Announcement of Departure for British Army Headquarters a Surprise to England

Canadian Press Despatch

LONDON, Nov. 30.—England was today surprised at the announcement that King George had left last night on a visit to the headquarters of the British forces in France, where he is certain of an enthusiastic reception from the soldiers.

The King was accompanied by his private secretary, Baron Stamfordham, and his equerry, Major Wigram, and the other members of his suite.

The party left Buckingham Palace last night and proceeded across the Channel by the night train.

Canadians Miss the Milk in Their Tea — Very Little Illness.

Special Correspondence Toronto World. SALISBURY, Eng., Nov. 12.—I have just returned from a week's trip to London, Glasgow and Edinburgh, and undoubtedly the note being sounded the most of all is "fight."

In Glasgow I saw one day several thousand men doing the same thing and again in Edinburgh. The second thing that impressed me most was the feeling of the English populace to us Canadians with "Canada" in bronze upon our shoulders.

I witnessed the procession to the opening of parliament on Wednesday last, when the Prince of Wales in khaki was to be seen in charge of his platoon of Grenadier Guards.

While visiting in Scotland I was in conversation with many who had been on the firing line and at the seat of war. One, a naval officer, had the day before been on the great admirals (cannot mention the name) when the wireless operator intercepted a message from a British submarine.

Another story that interested me was told by a young chap in Scotland of about 21 or 22, who is a signaler with the Camerons or Scottish rifles as they are called.

The dog mania formed one of the main topics of discussion at the meeting. Rev. Dr. Irwin reported that two letters had been received from H. TUESDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 1.

How It Works

The man who goes to borrow money from a bank in a country where there is no big central bank or government bank of redoubt, is up against this situation. The banker may say to him quite truthfully:

You are perfectly good and your paper is gilt-edged, and in ordinary times we would jump at it. But just now, when we have a vault full of money, we are afraid to loan a dollar on any security. Our depositors may demand their money and they must be paid in cash. We cannot give a depositor your note—he will demand money.

But were there a national bank of issue and redoubt the banker would not have to talk in this way to the customer who is good and whose paper is self-liquidating. If he were short of money he could go to the bank of redoubt and get a loan. Thus obliging the customer although making little profit himself, but as a matter of fact he would probably have the money on hand. He would not have to hoard great cash reserves for remote contingencies. If he were carrying on the right kind of banking business he would always be able, in case of a run, to take the prime commercial paper he had discounted and get money upon it.

The cashier of a national bank in the United States must now say to a customer: "Your paper is not gilt-edged and I cannot redound it." He can no longer be more polite and say: "Your note is perfectly good but we have not the money." In short there seems to be no reason why any business man in the United States whose paper is good should be denied accommodation, or made to wait for it. If his paper is slow or of doubtful value that is another matter; his local bank may or may not see fit to accommodate him.

The trouble today in Canada is that the banker having no bank of redoubt cannot mustered prime commercial paper also they have abundance of money on hand. True they might go to the government and get the paper redounded, but that would involve their using national currency. Surely our business men should interest themselves in the financial question. The West Toronto Ratepayers' Association, after considerable discussion, have embodied their views in a resolution calling for a national bank of redoubt and a national currency, which they have forwarded to the Toronto Board of Trade and the members of the finance minister and the members of parliament for this part of the country. A pronouncement by the board of trade of the banner city of the banner province of Canada would carry great weight; no doubt it should be preceded by public meetings in which not only members of the board but citizens generally would be called upon for their views and experiences.

It is a great opportunity which comes to the Toronto Board of Trade, and we are sure it will not be shirked even though it is accompanied by a great responsibility.

Keeping the Gold at Home

To combat the agitation in favor of prohibiting the export of gold ore from Canada. The Monetary Times argues that to make such prohibition effective we must also forbid the export of refined gold, including coin. That would mean suspension of specie payments, not only within the country as we have it now, but as regards all international dealings and obligations. Just now nearly every country in the world is on a paper money basis, and if they are ever to get back to a gold basis, it must be thru a drastic contraction of the currency, which will result in gold going to a remarkable premium.

Canadians recall that gold measured in paper was worth $2.50 for a time during the American civil war. The man with $37,000 in gold purchased United States bonds of the par value of $100,000 against which he could issue $20,000 of national bank notes guaranteed by the government. The bonds were before long redeemed in gold at par, and in many cases he got back his first investment three times over. Hence today gold is eagerly sought and is almost unobtainable. If by any accident the ordinary citizen came into possession of $1000 in gold, he would bury it in the ground or in a safety deposit vault; he certainly would not at this time be foolish enough to put it in a bank or trade it off for Dominion notes.

Should not a country be as canny as an individual in a matter of this kind? Of course, if everyone buried his gold and refused to produce it, some other medium of exchange would have to be established. But we have not yet arrived at that point, and gold is still valued and necessary for external commerce. Every nation is grabbing and hoarding all the gold it can get, and hence the suggestion that Canada should not allow her gold ore to be exported.

Hon. Mr. White, at the last session of parliament, argued that gold could be purchased with gold. If that be true, the Canadian miner would be loth to sell his output for paper money—either national currency or bank notes—which he could not exchange for coin. To forbid him to export would be to discourage production. The Monetary Times is of the opinion that were Canada at war and hemmed in by foes like Germany, she would be quite justified in prohibiting the export of gold and many other commodities. The country, it is claimed, is being drained of her resources just as much by the export of wheat as by the export of gold. We can, however, beyond question, replace the wheat, but we might find it difficult to replace the gold.

Whether gold will long continue to be the measure of value the world over is more than doubtful, but just now it behooves us to keep all we can of it. Without attempting to decide the particular point in the controversy, we have no hesitation in saying that all raw materials should be finished as far as possible by Canadian labor in Canada, whether it be gold, silver, nickel, grain, live stock or pulpwood. Only by so doing can we properly develop and round out the national policy.

The War and the Empire

Last week was marked by comparative quiet along the battle line from the Swiss frontier to the North Sea. Operations consisted almost entirely of tit-for-tat artillery duels, resulting, at least to the allies, in few casualties. So slight have the men become in the construction and protection of entrenchments that these have become practically bomb-proof, and continued industry has removed much of the discomfort with which their occupation was at first attended. The allied lines are now deemed impregnable, and this can be readily believed quite apart from the fact that the arrival of large naval guns will place the combatants on equal terms in that arm.

Generals Joffre and French are no doubt now viewing the situation with equanimity and will await further attack, assured that the personal ascendancy established by their troops carries with it the assurance of victory.

The enemy cannot rest content with the existing situation in France and Belgium. His advance along the coast has been effectually stayed for the present and every day adds to the magnitude of the task set him to secure a naval base on the Straits of Dover. That he will not be satisfied without making another attempt to break the line is probably from the important movements of heavy guns and troops reported by the air scouts, and this anticipation gains credibility from the rush of reinforcements from Britain and the renewed activity of the British fleet on the Belgian coast. Indications have also been given that the enemy is planning naval operations, but whatever these may prove to be, he will find the British troops ready to counter his attack.

German experts, including the now world-famous Bernhardi, seriously underrated the military possibilities of the British Empire. Writing in the current issue of United Empire, Mr. Ellis M. Cook quotes him as assuring the students of military tactics that "at most 150,000 men can be reckoned on for an expeditionary force," and that to despatch even this number to the continent would deplete the forces which might at any moment be needed to strengthen the garrisons overseas. Moreover, he dismissed the "militia" of the self-governing colonies with the remark that they (the colonies) "can be completely ignored, so far as concerns any European theatre of war."

Bernhardi posed as a great authority, but evidently his conception of the British Empire and of its resources in military strength was not based on knowledge. The empire was unprepared for war, but it is already a factor in this great struggle that cannot be ignored and will prove decisive.

German Militarism

In this war of armies, based on universal military service, the old dictum that Providence is always on the side of the heaviest battalions, has received its death blow. Universal military service, valuable as it may be for purposes of defence, has proved unequal to the task laid upon it of overwhelming the "contemptible little British army." It pleases the Germans to describe that army as composed of "mercenary" soldiers, but a point where human nature comes a point where human nature collapses under the strain, not of decisive defeat, but of failure to achieve an end taught to be certain of accomplishment. The German soldier has measured himself against men he believed to be inferior, and has been disillusioned. Now he is beginning to doubt whether the whole fabric of his empire has been built on a base of sand.

At Osgoode Hall yesterday, the appeal of James & Francis and Ellis & Co. against the judgment of Mr. Justice Latchford, granting the Campbell Milling Company $12,500, was dismissed. The defendants, Ellis & Co., were architects for the rebuilding of a building at a cost of $100,000, and they employed James & Francis to carry out the work. The building, however, did not fit the design, and the plaintiffs sought damages. The architects were held liable for the cost of the work.

The Arlington Hotel has its appeal against the decision of Mr. Justice Latchford, awarding Mrs. J. Macdonell damages for the loss of a trunk. The trunk was lost by the hotel, and the plaintiff sought damages. The court awarded damages to the plaintiff.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company's appeal against the decision of Mr. Justice Latchford, awarding the mother of George M. Duffield $2500 on a policy was taken out in 1901, and shortly after Duffield disappeared and for seven years nothing had been heard of him. The judge held that the policy was in force, and awarded the money to the mother.

The appeal of the City of Port Arthur against the judgment awarding T. La Fortune $500 damages, was dismissed. A son of the plaintiff, a lad of six, was killed by a street car owned and operated by the corporation, and it was claimed that the accident was due to the city's negligence.

Mr. Justice Kelly awarded John Pemberton $500 damages and any medical expenses and costs against the Hamilton Bridge Company, for personal injuries. The action of William Scott, suing the Hydro-Electric Commission of Hamilton for damages for personal injuries, was dismissed.

The action of Charles S. Bloch, suing Philip Meyer for damages for personal injuries, was dismissed with costs. On March 11, 1914, Bloch engaged Meyer to drive a motor car to Shaw Lake. The driver was a lad aged 14. On the journey they had an accident.

derated that the Canadian cars have not sufficient power for the heavy work before them, and as a result the engines may be strengthened somewhat.

Not to Front for Months. As I cabled today, it is practically certain that the contingent will not leave England until January, unless further training is done in France, which is rather improbable. Camp orders outlined 13 weeks of training, which includes five weeks already elapsed. Each week is assigned to different work—such as route marches, squad, company and battalion drill and general manoeuvring. Of course, work goes on at the targets daily. Since coming to England the drilling of Valencier has been almost disregarded. The rudiments of soldiering are still being taught and this system is as much for the benefit of the officers as the men. An officer who is a veteran soldier, said the other day: "If the officers were ready we would be at the front now." This may have been stretching it a little, but it is generally thought that many Canadian officers need considerably more knowledge of military tactics before the contingent is prepared to go into the field. The new platoon system was a shock, because no Canadian officer had any training in this respect, but it has come to the minds of all that it is greatly superior to the old way.

Only Hospital at Front. Except for No. 3 General Hospital, under command of Lt.-Col. Shillington of Ottawa, which is stationed at Boulogne, France, no Canadian hospital is at the front. According to some Canadian papers seen here, there appears to be an impression that a few of the 22,000 have already gone to France. This is not true. All these troops are in training on the Plains. Probably by the time this letter is published the Princess Patricia's will have left England, as part of a brigade of British regiments. The "Pats" have already been separated from the division and will not do but to go into the front. On account of previous experience of both officers and men, this regiment is looked upon as better equipped for fighting than the rest of the Canadians. Such permanent units as the R. C. H. A. and Royal Canadian Dragoons may also leave the camp any day for Southampton. But unless present plans are cancelled the contingent will not move until after the new year, greatly to the chagrin of all.

Hospital in London. No. 1 Hospital, under Major Drummond, is stationed in London. At present 10 officers and over 100 men have taken over Mount Vernon Hospital in London. This building was formerly used for consumptive patients, but, like many more throughout the kingdom, is being renovated for the purpose of caring for wounded soldiers. Whether it will be used for receiving Canadians, is not known. The one at Boulogne will likely be a clearing hospital, and patients seriously wounded may be sent over to Mount Vernon or other hospital which will likely be established in the near future. It is possible that the Canadian Red Cross Society will create a hospital at some point in southern England. At present the society, under Lt.-Col. Hodgetts, formerly chief medical health officer for Ontario, has an office in London and is making preparations.

What the Hamilton Press Say of the Big Four Final

Hamilton Rowing Club Ready for Hard Battle

McEvenue and Park Officials Tomorrow

HAMILTON, Nov. 30.—The Hamilton Rowing Club seniors, champions of the O.R.F.U., had a nice little work-out on Saturday afternoon, when the Rowing Club Intermediates, winners of the Liverpool provincial series made them sweat freely to run up the score of 22-10. It was an exhibition game, in which the faithful Hamilton boys who will represent Hamilton in the semi-final on Wednesday, were given the opportunity to get a line on the boys who will represent an outside chance to win the title.

The hopes of the club are pinned on Craig, who will feature in the game. He has been hard at work and back in form. The local club is given all kinds of things are expected. The Intermediates have a heavy line, but when Craig got going he simply plowed them as of old. It was a treat to see him perform for 35 yards for a touchdown, and right up to the hilt, but he was not on an interference play.

McKelvey, McNelly and Stowe started on the back division, and Smith and Finlayson also worked out a while. They are being coached by the late Mr. J. H. Stowe, who was a member of the club for many years.

GUELPH WINTER FAIR WILL OPEN SATURDAY. No German Seeds Will Be Shown—Prospects Brightest. Special to The Toronto World.

The seeds which will be tested next week will be very highly by the experts.

THE HAMILTON PAPERS DISAGREE AS TO HOW ARGOS DEFEATED TIGERS

Herald Says Best Team Won, While Times Blames Officials—Aftermath of Saturday's Great Game of Rugby

Herald: Argos were the better team. Hamilton's sole hope is the Rowing Club. They are not being seriously considered, but the Argos will probably remember the surprise they were handed in the shape of defeat in 1913 by the Argos. The game and gray were just as rank outsiders then as the scullers are today.

Umpire Percy Roberts certainly did not give the Tigers the benefit of any decisions, but the outcome would not have been different if he had reversed them. Tigers were outplayed.

Tiger injuries were many. Tom Wren, Billy Mallett, Johnny McKelvey, George Ireland and Harry Glasgow were forced to retire. "Glasy" was unfortunate enough to lose two teeth. One of them was knocked when he stopped big Alex. McFarlane.

Frank Knight, the husky Argos outside wing, is the best line man in the Canadian game. He is not far behind. The pair can't be beat.

Argos' interference was so smooth that Eddie Phillips, the interference student, was completely baffled.

Up to half-time it was anybody's game. O'Connor's drop kick, which sent the Argos into the lead, proved the turning point, however. From then on the Argos had the better of the argument. A forward pass, which the officials kindly overlooked, paved the way for the field goal.

There were four "breaks" in the saw-tooth battle for the Big Four title, and Argos got all four. Two were forward passes of the rankiest kind, and the other two were fumbles by McKelvey and Mallett, which Frank Knight took advantage of. The "breaks" had a lot to do with the final reckoning.

Chances of a city championship game between Tigers and Rowing Club are very slight. The Bengals are a much-criticized lot after their grueling tussle with the Argos, and the majority of them absolutely refuse to don their togs again. Few of them escaped injury of some sort, and it is practically decided that they will not play the scullers.

Speculator: What open work was shown by the Argos backs. The Tigers had little chance to combine for any effective running game. Knight and Mallett had them nailed with their punts, and McKelvey and Mallett did not get going until the last quarter, but when he did his speed and scuffling were a revelation and not only the Tiger backs butfused, but they were bottled up. The result was some great runs for big gains by Everett, Smith, Glad Murphy and Jack O'Connor. This trio never played better. Football. Smith tore off several thirty and forty-yard dashes, always thru the open field. Never did he try to skirt an end, but he was his dash up thru the centre of the play, and on four or five occasions he was only pulled down after reaching the line. Smith was given a severe flogging by the Tiger wings, but he never stood up very well under punishment and he got enough on Saturday to last him for some time. Toward the end of the game he was in, and for that reason was not asked to do very much. Another Argos star was Murphy, the big center, who was in every play. When Tigers had the ball he played a short back field making four half-backs to handle Mallett's punts, a most effective plan. When the line and at all times he was the most conspicuous player on the field. He had great assistance from Jack O'Connor, who of great strength to his team. When he took up the task of kicking at goal for the Argos he was as good as a shot. He made his two attempts for goals from the field very perfect. Both were long chances. The first was very long, and the second was perfect. It was the angle was greater, but it was a perfect shot. The Argos backs all play to their support was grand and in the line in which the Tiger backs performed. If a Toronto half-back fumbled a team-mate was there to back him up. If a Hamilton back lost the ball he had to scramble for it as the Argos were in the Hamilton back field, and this certainly did not work to the best interests of the team.

Speculator: Tigers gave way on Saturday and played with Percy Roberts as umpire.
