Amateur Night at Princess Thursday evening has always been regarded as amateur night at the Princess Theatre, and tonight's show promises to run far ahead of any ever before attempted. So far about 12 entries have been received, and several more are expected today. All last week's prize winners will appear in new and different acts from their last appearance. Four excellent motion pictures being presented today for the last time, including:
The Lady Who Adores Moustaches is a comedy film depicting the ingenious way in which her lover, he of the big moustache, smuggled himself into her household against her father's orders.
The Sack of Coal—A mischievous boy escaping from his prank, hides in a bag of coal; he makes things hot for the coalman, who attempts to carry the bag to a customer.
The African Legend is a beautiful hand-colored drama of the fabled Africa.
"Capacity" All the Time at Nickel
The crowd continues at the Nickel and the good shows are still on tap.
Last night's attendance was in keeping with the first of the week—bumper all the time. Nothing inspires the management to its utmost efforts in providing good clean up-to-date entertainment like such conditions as these, and everybody knows that singers are at their best when the audiences are large and enthusiastic. The best feature of the picture part of the Nickel's new show is The Day in a Public Nursery.
The Rhineland views were greatly enjoyed as an additional feature, and today a second series on the same subject will be shown—a wrap with the Hollax Nickel. The song items for today and tomorrow are the great American hobby, I'm Afraid to Come Home in the Dark, by James Maxwell, and the child song, Smarty, by Miss Davis. Orchestral novelties.

C. P. R. AND C. N. R. MECHANICAL EMPLOYES PREPARING TO CALL GENERAL STRIKE

Railway Officials Say,
However, That Time
is Inopportune for the Workmen
Dispute is Over Recognition of Unions and Their Wage Schedules—Traffic is Very Dull—The Matter May be Considered Under Lemieux
act

MONTREAL, April 22.—Apparently the employees of the mechanical departments of the Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern Railways are getting into shape to call a general strike all over both systems in case a settlement of the present dispute over recognition of the unions and their schedules is not reached by peaceable means. If this is decided upon the C. P. R. officials state that they will not be greatly worried.
J. H. Vaughan, assistant to the vice-president, who has charge of the mechanical department, stated today that the men could not pick a more unfortunate time for themselves for a strike, since business was exceptionally dull.
Many of the men were, he stated, being kept on merely because the company did not like to lay off its old employees and wanted to keep its staffs together awaiting better times. But they could easily afford to have their shops partially shut down for a time without inconvenience, since they had many more engines than the traffic demanded. At the same time there were thousands of mechanics all over the country looking for jobs, so that it would not be hard to replace strikers.
In the meantime, he said, the C. P. R. employees should be content with their official compliance of what the men were doing, but prepared to back up its move in notifying the western unions that on May 1st it would cease to deal with them or to recognize their wage schedules. The men here are all joining the new federation under the lead of officers from Winnipeg, and as soon as the Montreal unions are all in line the organizers will go East to get the unions of the whole of both systems ready to present a united front in case of hostilities. Before a rupture comes, however, an appeal will be made for a board of arbitration under the Lemieux act, which will delay any possibility of a strike until well on in June.

A RAZORLESS PEOPLE
The only known race of hairy human beings reside on the island of Yezo, adjoining Japan. They are about 10,000 in number and are known to the Japanese as the "Moose" or the "hairy people." They have the entire body covered with a profuse and remarkable growth of hair. The only exception being that the faces of the women are bare, but usually stained with a kind of juice so as to resemble the beards of the males.

BURGLARS ENTER GOLDBROOK HOUSE

The residence of James Wilkes, Gold-brook, was burglarized some time Tuesday night and about $50 in cash stolen besides a revolver and some articles of minor importance.
Wilkes is employed at the Portland rolling mills in the city and goes to his home every evening after work.
It is supposed the break occurred about twelve o'clock, as members of the family were awake a good deal after that hour. The intruder forced open the dining room window and entered. Their work was executed very quietly and not a sound was heard except the rattle in which $50 was kept and the money extracted, also a revolver.
The locality where the house is situated is a quiet one. There are no immediate neighbors. No suspicious characters had been noticed and there is no clue to the perpetrators of the deed.
The matter was reported to the police,
but no effort is being made to locate the guilty party.

The New Bill at Opera House

On the Bridge at Midnight, a sensational play, was offered by the Her-dard-Hall Stock Company, at the Opera House last night. The play was a piece of work which will prove more of a financial success than the Girl and the Gambler. Miss Hazel Cameron appeared as Reddy, a revivish, and scored a hit. She sang a song very nicely.
Mr. Wall showed the worth as a leading man. He appeared as a German and was one of the hits of the evening.
Mr. Whelan, an Italian, was very clever. The other parts were in capable hands. Mr. Oratio responded to four encores with his specialty, and received hearty applause. The scenery used in the 3rd act was an excellent effect. On the Bridge at Midnight night will delight lovers of sensational plays tonight. Tomorrow night the company will play The Die at Dawn.

AN ELEPHANT EXPERT.

This is a story of an elephant sale in India. A large herd of the animals was placed on exhibition and a number of prospective purchasers were critically examining the ponderous beasts.
The dealer noticed one man who seemed particularly impressed with a certain elephant, and also noted that the elephant under examination was one which had been doctored especially for the sale. The dealer went to the man and called him aside.
"I see that you know a great deal about elephants," he said. "Of course you noticed that the animal you examined had been doctored. Don't give me away and if I sell the brute I'll give you ten per cent. of the sale price."
The man nodded his head. Some hours later the dealer went to the man and handed him a considerable sum of money.
"I sold that elephant," he explained.
"By the way, how did you come to know so much about elephants?"
"I don't know anything about them," replied the man. "In fact that was the first time I ever saw an elephant.
When you called me I was trying to

Tea grown at high altitudes on the mountain slopes of Ceylon, where the growth is slower and cultivation more careful than in the warm, humid climate of the valleys, are used in "Sa-lada" Tea. High-grown tea, like "Sa-lada," is not only of a finer quality, but contains more of the essential oil in the leaf than valley-grown tea. This is easily proved by comparing a drawing of "Salada" Tea with any other.

THE FOIBLES AND FANCIES OF MUSICIANS

When listening to the wonderful strains of Beethoven's immortal symphonies and sonatas it is difficult to imagine that they could come from the pen of such an eccentric man.

Though Haydn ranks next to Beethoven on the list of eccentric musicians, still the peculiarities were very unlike. Beethoven lived in the midst of disorder and confusion; while Haydn asserted that he could not compose a line unless everything in his study was in its exact place, even every ornament must be where it belongs.

SPAT ON THE HOST IN POPE'S PRESENCE

Entire Catholic Rome Incensed by an Act of Sacrilege

ROME, April 22.—The entire Catholic population of Rome is incensed at an act of sacrilege that was committed yesterday in the Pope's chapel during the celebration of the Easter Mass by the Pope.

They now realize the enormity of their act, for which they regret the Pope hopes they will receive God's grace and that they will become Catholics, the only way in which they can atone for their offense.

EDUCATING THE ORIENTALS.

Experiment of Segregation is Working Well in Vancouver.

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 22.—The experiment of segregating the older Orientals in a special class-room for elementary instruction in the public schools is proving a success in Vancouver.

The average daily attendance of the Asiatic room is forty. All the pupils are Chinese males, with the exception of half a dozen who hail from Japan.

Their ages vary from sixteen to twenty-two years. Four Hindus enrolled at the time of the organization of the class have ceased to attend because they were unable to make headway owing to their lack of knowledge of the English language.

There are three forms, the primary and the first and second reader being taught. Mr. A. B. Barnes, the teacher, finds that from a psychological standpoint the subjects grow more engrossing in interest every day.

Chinese boys, many of them not even possessing knowledge of the words they utter, display patience, pertinacity and even heroism in their enthusiastic desire to acquire an English education.

The Orientals, on account of their advanced age and the general unsuitability of having them occupy the same classrooms as young white children, were permitted to order to the same classes as those attended by white children of corresponding age.

The children of the rival races do not harmonize or fraternize. The white boy is physically better endowed than Sam Tsung and does not disguise his feeling of superiority.

In mental equipment, the Oriental meets the Caucasian on a more even plane.

In the Oriental room three-quarters of the school hours are devoted to language work. Drawing, object lessons, writing and mathematics, including mental arithmetic, are also taught.

It is an interesting experience to study the Oriental scholar at close range. His interest in the work is apparent. None of that distraction so frequently witnessed in a school room of white pupils is evident.

The Oriental has no time to loaf or to tickle the ear of the lad in front of him when the teacher's back is turned. He is too temperately in earnest. From morning till night, he is absorbing knowledge with eye and ear.

He pointed out, as their name implied, everything hinged on their observance. A pleasing musical programme was given before and after the lecture.

ST. GEORGE, ST. PATRICK AND ST. ANDREW.

The national characteristics of the three principal divisions of the British people could in no way be more strikingly typified than in the choice made by these races of their patron saints. Many histories which have through history been regarded as predominant in the English, Irish and Scotch are the same qualities which have influenced the lives of those men chosen as patrons. Today Englishmen the world over honor the anniversary of the birth and death of St. George. Many histories have been written of the valiant deeds of this personage of the early Christian era, but in spite of all that has been put forward historians are inclined to discredit detailed accounts of his life. Beyond the fact that he was a native of Lydda, a military tribune under Diocletian, and was put to death for his efforts on behalf of Christians in A. D. 303, little is recorded. It is not, however, wholly because of his life on earth that England has adopted him as her patron saint. St. George stands for the church militant, the ideal of those who exert their strength that good may come. He is credited with having assisted the Crusaders against the Saracens in the siege of Antioch in 1098, after the manner of the gods who fought around Troy or perhaps more in the way St. Andrew helped the Scots. St. George stands in romance as the slayer of the Dragon of evil, the hero who delivered the church from the powers of darkness. Honor, liberty and courage are typified in St. George, but these are linked together by a broad-minded Christianity which realizes that other men may be of other minds, and that while differences may exist in the application of truth the important point is that men shall live up to their own highest ideals.

On March 17th the sons of Ireland worthily honor the memory of St. Patrick. Their saint spent his life in teaching and preaching, in living among and suffering with his adopted people in observing their customs in so far as these were worthy of observance, and in directing them to better ways where he found opportunity. The rigid adherence to the faith, unvarying generosity, hospitality and honest virtues of the people were accentuated by the teachings of St. Patrick, and his memory is today inseparably linked with the history of the Irish race. The stern, rugged Scots might naturally have been expected to select as their patron one whose very name would appeal to their dispositions. Andrew, the manly one, represents to them the faith which endures, and the strength of purpose and the unyielding determination to carry forward to the goal. With their accustomed caution the Scotch have chosen as their saint one whose life record is not open to doubt. The Irish have, as well as a clear history of St. Patrick, but the English suffer because of the fact that there lived at about the same time two men by the name of George. These are often confounded. One of them, not the saint, is described as a racial, an aristocratic army contractor who by fraud was made an archbishop and who was put to death by those whom he had wronged.

THE PRE-ELECTION SILENCE. As the time for the presidential election in the United States approaches there is a very noticeable slackening of efforts toward the enforcement of various stringent laws made during Roosevelt's tenure of office. Despite the somewhat cynical criticism of Mr. Bryan, who wants to know why the more offensive combines are not being rigidly prosecuted, the government is exhibiting a carelessness very different from the course outlined by the president at various times during the past few years. The popular explanation is of course in the fact that nothing will now be done which could create more enemies to the Republican party. Roosevelt in a number of messages to Congress laid down his instructions in such strong terms that the country expected to see half the leading financiers and merchants in jail inside of a very few weeks. He ordered the officers of his departments to institute actions against many corporations, and if all his commands had been carried out it would have been found necessary to treble the number of politically-appointed judges in order that the cases might be speedily tried. But of late there has been a silence. The trusts, those "grants with their feet on the necks of the people" are still doing business in the same old way. The banks and trust companies have not taken to the woods, nor has the Standard Oil been declared dissolved. The collapse of the Roosevelt scare is a live topic of discussion in political circles. The people, however, look upon it as a natural pre-election development and are not worried. During the term of office of any government when there is no immediate prospect of defeat, the electors give their attention to all movements in the way of reform. They think it is their duty to support the government in every attempt to right what may be regarded as injurious to the general welfare, but with an election in sight, all minds turn to party action. Pure food laws, anti-trust prosecutions and gambling bills are forgotten. The sole aim and object is to retain for the party as many votes as can possibly be held, to do nothing which can embitter even a small section of the electorate. Thus it is seen that in spite of all denunciations hurled against them, the non-eyed men of the United States are the real rulers of the country. Their methods may be assailed in the bitterest manner, but eventually their favor is sought even by those who in non-election years most strenuously oppose them.

ST. JOHN.

Where the winds blow free and the wild waves roar, And a river runs down to the sea, Is a city I love whose rock-bound shore Is ever most fair to me. So sturdy and bold in the morning light, And she watches the wild waves play, Where the sea-gulls gleam in their wheeling flight, O'er the wastes of Fundy's Bay.

And the beautiful river that runs to the sea, Sings the sweetest of joyous songs, Bringing tokens of love for the queen to see, Which only to her belongs. And clear is the song it sings at her gate, 'Neath the giants of ocean keep, 'Neath the crested hills where she sits in state, By the shores of the rolling deep, And her wand'ring sons in far away lands, Turn their eyes to the northern verge, For their hearts are drawn to the rock-bound shore.

Where the breakers of Fundy surge, No other home shall her loyal sons find so fair to gaze upon, As this mother of men and of sturdy ones, The Flower of the North—St. John. J. L.

"Is he a well-informed man?" was inquired during an allegro moment. She smiled slightly. "I should say so," she rejoined. "His wife tells him everything."

"De faith cure," said Uncle Eben, "may be good for some ailments, but I hates to see a man standin' 'round' tryin' to mend his fences 'n' l'f de mortgage wid 'em."

"Jack told Maud her teeth were like stars."

"That's a singular expression. He probably meant to say 'pearls'."

"No, I've a suspicion of what he really meant, though Maud didn't see it. He meant they were like stars because they come out at night."

"They're a most affectionate couple. Do you know they've been married twelve years, and she still greets him at the door with a kiss?"

"That's not affection. That's her way of finding out what he has been drinking."

ACTIVE SEASON FOR SASKATOON

An Extensive Programme of Construction Work

Grand Trunk Pacific, Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern are All Making Good Progress

SASKATOON, April 22.—There is no mistaking the spring activity in this city. It is visible on all sides, and it dispels the gloom which has been cast upon the man who is watching for it. The same man may be conversant with the recent history of Saskatoon and he is likely to wonder if this growth and development will ease off for a year or two. His case is not a unique one. It is likely to be an easing off this season. Some elaborate schemes may fall down through lack of nourishment, and the visionary enterprises may remain in a state of bubble. But the solid progress on which the permanency of the community depends is not based entirely on the big features. The settler from the United States who brings in his family, his bunch of horses and cattle, and his carload of general effects is not a conspicuous arrival here, and his departure in the direction of Langigan or Asquith or Dundurn, new towns tributary to Saskatoon, is scarcely an event. It is when his case is multiplied a thousand times that the effect is felt. The big increase of the building which the factor which promises renewed vigor and constant growth in the business life of the country and these farmers who are now swarming in furnish the guarantee that the particular district of which this city is the centre will continue its industrial and commercial progress for an indefinite period.

HOUSING THE PEOPLE

The other branches of the activity which is now shown here are as notable for their number and variety as for their magnitude. While the building programme for the present season may not include a large number of banks, office buildings, hotels, and large structures of the character in which "go heavy" on the residence or dwelling, the small store, and building in which a small amount of capital is invested. This class of construction work has been making strides during the last few years, but even at that it has scarcely received all the attention which it deserved. The big things in the building line come in for much consideration. There is now a prospect that the operations on a small or moderate scale will have a better opportunity of securing a place in the programme.

BIG CONSTRUCTION PROGRAMME

It is not to be supposed, however, that the work of building up this city during 1934 will be confined to the lighter work. The railway companies have been pushing forward the work of laying their lines to and from Saskatoon, and they intend to continue with more energy than ever before. The buildings to be provided for the Dominion and Provincial Governments for the use of their various officials in the city mean a substantial addition to the business structures. In connection with the plan of municipal improvement great activity is likely to be shown in the form of sale of a bond issue amounting to $400,000 has enabled the City Council to make up its mind definitely with regard to the need for following up the policy of improvement which was inaugurated about three years ago. Waterworks, sewers, electric light, streets and sidewalks are prominent items on the list which require attention, and it may be taken for granted that by the end of the present season the extent of public utilities will have answered at least the urgent needs of the community. The municipal authorities have some difficulty in keeping the citizens supplied with these services, but there is a good deal of perseverance and industry in the civic works department. It will catch up some day, and in the meantime no one is worrying.

RAILWAY BUILDING

The building of railways is the outstanding feature of the exploitation which is now proceeding. No more certain guarantee of the future of a city can be given than that it is furnished by the three great transportation systems of the world. Canadian Northern holds first place for the time being, so far as the actual operation of trains is concerned. It has the old Qu'Appelle, Long Lake & Saskatchewan line, which runs through Saskatoon from north to south. A quick transfer arrangement also confers the benefit of direct connection with the through route, and the city is practically on the main line. Next in importance, from the standpoint of present location, is the Canadian Pacific. This road, which has been largely responsible for the building up of the place through its long operation of the Q. L. & S., has brought in from the east its extension of the Kirkella branch, to which the Yorkton branch, formerly known as the Manitoba & Northwestern, is being joined. After passing through Saskatoon, this important branch, which is generally called the secondary main line, proceeds westward on its way to Wetaskiwin and Edmonton. It has already been constructed in that direction as far as Asquith, a distance of about twenty-five miles, and trains between that point and the city are running regularly. The company has made Saskatoon the divisional headquarters for the handling of its traffic, and has erected extensive terminal buildings, including a fine passenger station. The connection from the east waits on the completion of the railway bridge across the Saskatchewan River in the northeastern portion of the city. It is expected that this structure will be completed during the present summer, and that the company will be in a position to share in handling the enormous east-bound traffic which arises from the great production of grain in the district.

THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC

The relation of Saskatoon to the Grand Trunk Pacific is fairly well known, but it may not be amiss to repeat that the new transcontinental

PRAIRIE FIRES RAGING THROUGH THE WEST

WINNIPEG, Man., April 22.—Reports from various parts of the west, chiefly from the newer districts of Saskatchewan, indicate that losses by prairie fires are at the heaviest in recent years. Farmers are praying for rain as practically no rain has fallen this spring, while snow went away several weeks earlier than usual. As a result, the prairie soil is dry as tinder, while the high winds sweeping over have driven the flames at a terrific speed, whenever they have started. Only one death is reported. The loss of property and stock is very considerable. A report from Carlyle says that a prairie fire is raging in Moose Mountain district.

THE CIVILIZATION OF
THE BLACK REPUBLIC

(By One Who Knows Them.)

When I landed at Port-au-Prince, on the first of several visits to Hayti and Santo Domingo, I was met on the wharf by a most imposing personage in a gold-laced coat, and a sword-belt. He was only a customs officer, but he looked like the commander-in-chief at least. Alas! his coat was ragged and torn beneath the gold-laced, his enormous black feet were innocent of boots, and he was pathetically eager for a tip.

He was typical of the thrashed square of the Black Republic—that mockery of civilization where African savagery and fetishism are venerated over by a little French Polish and plenty of gold lace.

"Hippolyte—Liberty—Progress—Education," says a triumphant arch in Port-au-Prince. Near by there is a Vaudou temple, in which I have seen the white cult surrounded by a half-naked priestesses amid the yells of frenzied worshippers. President Hippolyte himself was a "papouli," or priest of the Vaudoux cult. Not a single President of Hayti, save Gouffard, has tried to break the power of Vaudoux, with its cannibalistic associations. And Gouffard was rewarded by the murder of his daughter and his own exile.

For generations past the Haytian presidents have "waded through blood—shed to a throne" and ruled by the sword. Christophe, who made himself "Emperor," and created an aristocracy of negro dukes and marquises, was a monster of incredible depravity. He murdered men not singly, but literally by thousands. Nissage-Saget was found of clearing the streets of Port-auare recognized sanctuaries for the Haytian politician who happens to be the under-dog in one of those anarchical struggles which are the ordinary incidents of Haytian politics. Usually no effort is made to obtain his surrender; his enemies try to bribe the consular servants to poison him instead.

AN UNPLEASANT ADDITION.

One of the Consuls at Port-au-Prince told me that this enforced hospitality to refugees is a most unpleasant addition to the sufficient trials of residence in that detestable, pestilential city. "Imagine having your house overrun by thirty or forty negroes with the filthiest habits and the most insatiable craving for good wines and cigars," he said. "And when you are bound to be civil to them, for the refugee of today may be the President of tomorrow."

The sanctity of the foreign legations was tested most remarkably at the fall of Simon Sam, who was President before Alexis. He got to the French Legation in the nick of time. The mob howled around the house for three days, believing rightly or wrongly that he had looted the Treasury and got the money with him. Yet they dared not profane the legation, and the French charge d'affaires asserted him to a French steamer in peace.

It is impossible to extirpate the dislike and even hatred entertained for the whites in Hayti; it is nearly so marked in Santo Domingo, where foreign investment has been to some extent encouraged. Every good Frenchman is always ready to "save 'art a brick" at le blanc. In more than one Haytian town little children have spat at me and called me filthy names in their barbarous French patois, simply because my face was white. A commandant at Jeremie once showed a safe-conduct from President Alexis, calmly remarked:

"So I cannot shoot you, white man. I hoped I could. I would have treated you as an spy. We look to Alexis to kill the whites, but he must be growing old and weak-minded."

BITTER HATRED.

Alexis and most of his principal supporters were hand-in-glove with the "papouli" and the "mamouli" (priests and priestesses of the Vaudoux serpent worship) when I was in Hayti. Alexis openly attended meetings of the cult at Port-au-Prince, where the white cock and the white goat were sacrificed to the sound of the beating of the dreaded black goatskin drum. General Antonio Firmin, Alexis's great rival, is, on the other hand, a devotee of good education and considerable culture. He was formerly Haytian Ambassador in Paris and made several notable contributions to French literature. Undoubtedly he would be a much better president than Alexis, but he is not nearly so popular among the negroes. He is the champion of the mulattoes. The bitter hatred between Alexis and Firmin is the real driving force behind the bewildering mass of revolutions and counter revolutions in Hayti.

The handful of whites who run businesses or plantations in the Black Republic have suffered terribly in recent years, for Alexis has encouraged their plunder and maltreatment. But they have hung on to their investments in the hope that the United States will assume control over the country, as it did a few years ago over the finances of Santo Domingo. President Alexis has threatened this in no uncertain language several times.

Many Americans have feared for years that Germany is seeking a Caribbean coaling station. It was commonly believed that the using of "the stick" in Santo Domingo was hastened by the news that the German gunboat Panther was taking soundings and surveys in Samana Bay, a fine place for a naval port.

Wagner too, was not exempt from peculiar fancies. His mind seemed to run in the groove, and during his lifetime he had his grave constructed. It was in his garden house in some place he would often go and look at it, that he might not forget its existence. But the worst of it was that he constantly insisted that his friends should remember it too, and when he was entertaining them at dinner he would suddenly break off the conversation and begin declaiming on eternity and the grave.

"My friends," he would say, "in the midst of life we are in death. Death is a lot that we all must face, even so great as our misfortune, and I must die. I should like very much to show you my grave, if you will allow me."

And starting from the dinner table he would lead the way, followed by his guests to the corner of the garden where his grave was. And he would state his computations further disquisitions on eternity.

INSPIRATION FROM ELEMENTS.

Meyscher gathered his thoughts amid the rumble of thunder, the flash of lightning and downpour of rain. In order more fully to expose himself to the stimulating effects of the elements, he had constructed for himself at the top of his house a room whose sides were entirely of glass, and where he would hasten at the approach of a storm and amid his fury would have a rush of musical thoughts.

There is a story about him to the effect that once when entertaining friends at dinner, he heard a distant rumble of thunder just as the soup course was served, and to the astonishment of his guests he hastened from the room to his musical chamber, and left them to take care of themselves for the rest of the evening.

The Italian composer Donizetti courted inspiration by a means which proved so injurious that it caused the premature decay of his faculties. He was accustomed to shut himself in a room with a quantity of music paper, pens and ink and there, or four pots or strong coffee. He would then begin to write and drink and when his supply of coffee was exhausted he would order more and continue to drink it as long as he wrote.

He asserted that the coffee was necessary for his inspiration. The result of his pernicious habit was a yellow parchment-like complexion, with lips almost jet black and a nervous system which soon caused his breakdown and death.

A LAZY COMPOSER.

Rossini was perhaps the laziest of all musicians whose names are famous. He would rarely rise until midday and often when he woke and the weather was dull, or the music did not inspire him to write, he would roll over again, and after directions to his servant to be called the following day, would sleep blissfully for another twenty-four hours.

He did most of his writing in bed, and before retiring for the night he would place music paper and a pencil near his bedside, so that he would not have to move in order to have the means at hand for writing down the musical thoughts which came.

It is told of him that after writing part of a beautiful duet for an opera he was too lazy to get up and get it and thereby disturb the nicely arranged bedclothes; so he sat to work and wrote another melody; as he could not remember how the first went. Thus in the opera "Il Turco in Italia" there are two duets for one situation and singers can choose the one which pleases them best.

That was probably the vainest of great composers, and also one of the most capricious. It was only when in the mood that he would play, and if pressed to do so against his will he would often become almost insulting.

It is told of him that after being entertained at dinner he was asked by his hostess to perform on the piano and on

THE HOBBY OF ENGINE DRIVING.

The Khedive of Egypt has a private railway from his palace at Ras-el-Tin in Alexandria to his country place at Montazah, and it constitutes one of his favorite hobbies. It is, of course, only a short line, ten miles, but it is long enough to give him the constant delight of driving the engine himself, which he generally does. He is a very keen engineer, as was shown by the interest he took in the great Nile dam at Assuan, but he is particularly interested in locomotives. During his last visit to France he rode on the cab with the driver of the express from Calais to Amiens, and took a hand at the levers.

The Marchioness of Tweeddale drove the first locomotive that crossed the Forth Bridge, Edinburgh, Scotland.

A PRIVATE RAILWAY

The Marquess of Downshire has a private railway at Hillsborough, England, and keeps a sort of "pet" engine which cost his lordship $5,000. The train contains a splendid saloon carriage for his guests, for he himself is generally on the engine, and a goods van, in which some of his guests prefer to ride. He almost invariably drives his engine with his own hands, and his engine with its forty miles an hour. There is no speed limit on a private railway line and no police train.

Earl Fitzwilliam is another practical engineer who delights in the locomotive engine. He learned the art of driving when he was quite young by going whenever he could with the drivers of the coal trains on his own estates.

It is well known that one of the young King of Spain's chief diversions before his marriage was to ride on the footplate of the Royal train with the driver and take lessons in engine-driving. He has become quite expert and fearless, and he has frequently driven his mother and sisters.

TRAVELLING IN LUXURY.

Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria is another Royal engine-driver. His quite recently drove the express from Abbeville to Paris, under the superintendence of the regular driver.

One of the favorite methods with American millionaires of dispensing hospitality is to give train parties when a number of invited guests travel together in luxury for weeks just when and where they will. This method of entertainment was "invented" some year ago by Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, who took her guests in a private train from New York to Chicago. They often ride on the cab and take turns at assisting the engineer. One of the most magnificent of these moving guest-houses belongs to Dr. Seward Webb and his wife. It is composed of their own private car—fitted up at a cost of over $100,000—three buffet, smoking-car and baggage-car. There is also a well-stocked library, and, of course, telephone connections throughout. The doctor often takes a turn on the engine. All the Vanderbilt train this way, and so does Mr. George Gould.

FAILED TO RELIEVE.

On the mighty deep. The surface of the sea rose and fell with sickening monotony. The great ocean liner rolled and pitched. The young bride covered her pallid countenance with her hands. "Harry," she faltered, "do you still love me?"

"My darling, more than ever!" vowed her compassionate spouse.

An eloquent silence.

The surface of the sea rose and fell with sickening monotony. The great ocean liner rolled and pitched. "Harry," she gasped, turning aside her pale and ghastly face—"Harry, I thought that would make me feel better, but it doesn't!"—London Answers.

DIVERS DISEASES.

"What?" inquired the Sunday school teacher of her youthful pupils—"what are divers diseases?"

Dashful or ignorant, the scholars clung tenaciously to the doctrine that little boys should be seen and not heard.

"Come," pursued the teacher, "can't any of you tell me?"

Then Johnnie's arm shot up. "Well?" asked the teacher.

"Please, miss," answered Johnnie, "water on the brain."

Saving the Ticket

By CARL WILLIAMS.

(Copyright, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.)

"I suppose that all this seems very tiresome to you," said pretty Nelly Briggs as she slipped into a chair beside Carol.

Carol smiled and nodded an absent-minded assent. She was beginning to hate the faces she was playing. All health had gone back to Broadway, and her old associates in the Little town had taken it for granted that because her few dresses were well tailored and her feminine knickknacks were better than those sold at the Boston Store, she had prospered mightily.

She had not told them that the dresses were last year's styles purchased at the bargain counter after the finite sacrifice, and that the knickknacks which seemed so precious in Broadway were the odds and ends of remnant sales.

She was beginning to hate herself for the act. At first it had been very pleasant to receive the homage of her associates; to read the nice things that were said about her in the Broadway "Bulletin," and to speak grandly of "in town," but now she found that it had set her upon a pedestal apart from the rest and she was minded to step down and mingle with the crowd.

Only two days remained of her vacation, and this dance had been arranged in her honor, marking the termination of a round of festivities. As the guest of honor Carol shared her dances impartially with all applicants, dividing a dance between three or four of the boys, but Nelly's remark had dampened her pleasure in her belle-ship.

It was not at all like the parties in the city. The town hall was no more than a clearing in the woods. Here, it was clean and bright, and the constant calls of the waiter jarred the sensibilities and reminded the merrymaker that patronage of the bar was considered indispensable.

A piano and cornet constituted the orchestra, and they were playing last year's selections. Carol smiled as she contemplated their playing with the fifteen-piece bands at the summer parks near town, but the atmosphere was altogether different, and with a sigh she realized that in a few days she would be going back to the tawdry glitter of the city, where she was only one of the lookers-on at the real events, and where her own field was restricted to the people in her boarding-house, and a few congenial girls in the church club to which she belonged and the half dozen men in the city where she spent her days bent over a typewriter.

Seth Morey came up to claim the first half of the next waltz, and as she placed her hand in his he said, as Nelly Briggs had done before him: "I suppose it all seems foolish to you," he said, "I guess you're used to men in dress suits and all that."

Carol thought of the men who danced with her here on the back of their heads, and only smiled in reply. "I'm thinking of coming to the city next fall," continued Seth. "I guess I need a little polishing up."

"You're better off where you are," said Carol warmly. "If you'll take my advice, you'll stay here."

"Of course you can't be as clever as you get ahead as fast," he said. "There's Tommy Madigan. I think he has the second chance at this dance."

Carol knew as well as Seth that Tommy was not next in turn, but she accepted the exchange and went along about the hall with him, while Seth sat in a corner, glowering over the crowd of dancers, and fiercely assured himself that he was foolish to imagine that a girl like Carol would care for a country fellow like himself, after she had met so many smart men in the city.

Humbly he admitted the truth of her suggestion that he could not make progress in town, and he succeeded in becoming thoroughly miserable.

He was glad when the two-piece orchestra struck up "Home, Sweet Home," and the girls hurried to the dressing room for their wraps. He waited at the door for Carol. "May I walk home with you?" he asked as she came from the dressing room in her smart coat and furs.

"If you won't be cross again," assented Carol, slipping her arm through his. "You know very well," she added as they descended the stairs, "that Tommy Madigan was not next on my list, and yet you got angry because I tried you to stay here home instead of trying your luck in town."

"I know I was foolish," he assented. "It's the way of the world. You always were clever and could get ahead."

"I have, that's what makes me so miserable," she confessed. "In town I don't get to the good balls you read about, unless it's to stand outside in the street and catch a glimpse of the rich people as they go in. My pals are in halls smaller than this town hall, and they're bored. When I go to theatre it's to cling to the top gallery to hang over the rail and see only a part of the stage."

"And you'd rather stay here, in Broadway?" he asked. "You'd rather live in this sleepy old town than in the city, with all the lights and life?"

Carol looked at her. Her April rain that afternoon had left the air cool and sweet. The scent of moist earth of growing things filled the air with fragrance, and the moon touched with kindly light the little huddled figures gleaming white against the soft, new green of the budding trees.

Then she thought of the city, with its pale moon streets, the trenches smelling of gas pipes and sewers of the reeking pavements and the harsh glare of the electric lights.

She contrasted the quiet of the night with the hurrying, jostling throng of humanity, men and women who were wended who thought only of themselves, and had no time for others.

"You don't know the city," she said, with a little sob in her voice. "It's a vampire, merciless and menacing. It takes your life and never gives you a chance for fresh victims."

"Then why go back?" asked Seth. "I haven't spoken before because I thought you never would be content with Broadway again, but if you want to stay, dear, can't you stay—as my angel on the back of their heads, and only smile in reply."

"I have the return half of my ticket," she objected. "I can't waste that. I'll get one, he suggested, "and we'll go together—on our honeymoon."

"It'll like to go back to the city—for a honeymoon," said Carol shyly. "The mine is a shame—to waste the ticket."

"We'll save it," cried Seth jubilantly. "I'm grateful to the city, since it sent you back home—to me."

She smiled at him. "I'm glad to see you get ahead as fast," he said. "There's Tommy Madigan. I think he has the second chance at this dance."

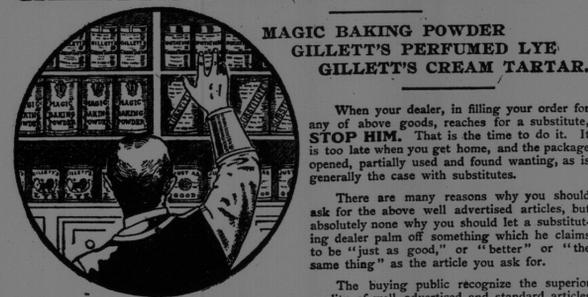

Carol knew as well as Seth that Tommy was not next in turn, but she accepted the exchange and went along about the hall with him, while Seth sat in a corner, glowering over the crowd of dancers, and fiercely assured himself that he was foolish to imagine that a girl like Carol would care for a country fellow like himself, after she had met so many smart men in the city.

Humbly he admitted the truth of her suggestion that he could not make progress in town, and he succeeded in becoming thoroughly miserable.

He was glad when the two-piece orchestra struck up "Home, Sweet Home," and the girls hurried to the dressing room for their wraps. He waited at the door for Carol. "May I walk home with you?" he asked as she came from the dressing room in her smart coat and furs.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 22.—R. H. Vautelet, civil engineer, Montreal, gave evidence before public accounts committee this morning as to the work done for the public works department in connection with the dam at St. Andrew's Rapids, near Winnipeg.

He first made a study of the rapids in 1901, but did not enter upon the work until 1906, other matters of importance having intervened. At the end of April, 1906, he started for Europe to visit and investigate works at dams similar to that which he required at St. Andrew's Rapids.

There is some talk of many railroad employes going on strike. It may be a false alarm. There is nothing false about the striking of the alarm clocks sold by Walter H. Irving, the Jeweler, 45 King street. All the goods in his store are of the best quality and at the most reasonable prices.

Summerside harbor is still filled with ice but it is in such a condition that a change of wind will carry it all out. Navigation between that port and Point du Chene may be opened any day. Charlottetown and Pictou harbors are practically clear. The steamer Northumberland has already crossed from Pictou.

Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Wm. Miller and wife, of 88 Chesley St., in the loss of their only child, Arthur, who died last evening, after a lingering illness. He was of a quiet disposition yet a general favourite, and was an active and earnest member of the young mens class of St. Luke's Sunday School. He was employed for some years in the Massey Harrier Co. office, but most recently with Frost and Wood Co. His funeral will take place Saturday.

School Inspector Carter visited St. Andrews schools last week and at the close of his visit had a conference with the trustees and teachers, when matters of general interest were discussed. A change in the system of grading was brought up by the inspector. He also urged that an attempt should be made to increase the salaries of the teachers. There were few places where the salaries of the teachers were so low as they were here.—Season

General Committee Ceases all Efforts to Get New Legislation—Very Little St. John Business to be Heard at Fredericton.

St. John will not bother the provincial legislature very much during the coming session. Only three or four matters dealt with by the bills and by-laws committees will be brought up and these are not of a nature such as will provoke discussion or create opposition. Three bills have already been advertised. One of these is for confirmation of the recent issue of five per cent. debentures, and will be purely formal proceeding. Another bill is to authorize the city of St. John to increase the salary of the police clerk from $1200 to an amount not exceeding $1600. The third bill is that advocated by Ald. Kelly which provides that during certain months of the year certain streets are to be set apart for coasting.

The bills and by-laws committees have for several years been engaged in an attempt to modernize and consolidate the civic by-laws. A number of meetings have been held during the past year and the by-laws relating to several departments have been gone over. More meetings will have to take place and Ald. Baxter, the chairman, hopes to be able to prepare in time for the legislature a short bill confirming the codified by-laws.

The legislative session so far as St. John is concerned, will be chiefly notable for what will not be done. For the past year the general committee of the council has been struggling with the assessment bill, but it has finally decided to drop this for the present. Very little progress was made and there was doubt as to the wisdom of even those sections which had been passed. There will consequently be no amendments in the present act nor any attempt to introduce even in an amended form the bill submitted two years ago by the commission.

SUBURBAN SERVICES ON THE I.C.R. AND C.P.R.

No Important Changes on the Former Road—The C.P.R. Trains Will be Much the Same as Last Years.

Suburban services on the C. P. R. and I. C. R. are the chief subjects of the hundreds of people who go out of town for the summer. The I. C. R. has continued its suburban service all through the winter and the only change now known which will be made on the first of June will be the substitution of a suburban train for the freight which now leaves at 1.10 p. m.

On the C. P. R. special trains will be run on May 24th. A partial suburban service will come into operation on June 1st. According to the trains outward and inward will be as follows:

Arrivals.
7.50 a. m.—Suburban.
8.55 a. m.—Fredericton express.
11.35 a. m.—Boston express.
12 m.—Montreal express.
1.10 p. m.—Boston express.

Departures.
7 a. m.—Boston express.
8.05 p. m.—Fredericton express.
6.05 p. m.—Montreal express.
6.20 p. m.—Boston express making suburban stop.

On June 15th the full summer service will come into effect. It has been decided that the request of suburbanites for a daily train outward at 1.10 p. m. and inward at 3.20 p. m. to replace the 8.25 a. m. outward and 12.10 p. m. inward will not be granted, as it is felt that the latter train is needed. There will, however, be a 1.10 p. m. train outward twice a week during the whole season after June 15th.

The Boston and Montreal expresses will arrive at about the same time as last year but a change is being made in the departures of the evening express trains. The express for Boston will not go out until 6.50 p. m. It arrives here at 8.15 from Point du Chene, and passengers will have opportunity to get supper before leaving as this train does not carry a diner. The Boston will not make any suburban stops, nor any branch connections.

The Montreal express which arrived from Halifax at 5.25 p. m. will leave at 5.20 p. m. making no stops. But between these will be the 6.10 p. m. suburban with a clear road. The full service will be as follows from June 15th:—

Arrivals.
7.50 a. m.—Suburban.
8.55 a. m.—Fredericton express.
10.40 a. m.—Boston express.
11.20 a. m.—Montreal express.
12.10 p. m.—Suburban.
2.20 p. m.—Suburban on Wednesdays and Saturdays only
10 p. m.—Suburban.

Departures.
6.45 a. m.—Boston express.
9.25 a. m.—Suburban.
1.10 p. m.—Suburban on Wednesdays and Saturdays only
8.05 p. m.—Fredericton express.
8.50 p. m.—Montreal express making no stops.
6.10 p. m.—Suburban.
6.50 p. m.—Boston express making no stops.
10.30 p. m.—Suburban.
