Niagara's Age

According to Mr. Spencer of the Canadian Geological Survey, the great spectacle of Niagara Falls, as we see it to-day, has been about 39,000 years in the making. Mr. Spencer, in common with other geologists who have studied Niagara, believes that originally the cataract fell into Lake Ontario over three steps, or platforms, the first being 35 feet high, and the third being at or near the edge of the lake proper, instead of seven miles back up the river as at present. It took the stream 35,000 years to hollow out the first three miles of the gorge, but only 4,000 years for the other four miles. The difference of time in these two stages of the erosion, and of the cataract's recession of seven miles in all, is explained on the theory of a sudden and enormous increase of the volume of water, caused by seismic disturbance, or earthquake.

Formerly the Niagara River served a outlet to Lake Erie only. After the upheaval, the waters of Lake Huron, Michigan, and Superior, which previously had debouched directly into Lake Ontario, were diverted by way of Lake Erie into the Niagara River, swelling that stream to six times its former volume. Mr. Spencer's figures, of course, can be taken only approximately, as even contemporary authorities are at variance as to how the falls of Niagara have receded during the last fifteen years—some estimates making it 1.28 metres per annum, others 1.52. Moreover, while the United States Geological Survey declares that the rate of recession of the Falls has increased during the last fifteen years, the corresponding Canadian official reports show that the rate has decreased some 66 centimetres per annum.

Ottawa, August 10.—The northwest rebellion is recalled by a work which has just been completed by the Mounted Police. The scattered remains of eight men, who were killed by the Crees in April 1885, near Frog Lake, have been gathered up and placed in a plot at Frog Lake, the graves being marked with crosses and the plot being inclosed by a fence. C. Gouin, his assistant, Willis Croft, bookkeeper for Post; W. C. Gilchrist, cook; Gowan Locke, contractor, who was making up a mill for the Indian Department at Frog Lake, on April 2nd, and Constable Cowan were all killed. Owing to their superstition no Indians would help with the work of gathering up the bodies, which were in graves scattered over a half mile of the country where the men fell.

Mr. Coulter expressed the opinion that in Canada, at any rate, there would be no very long delay before the Government set to work on a concrete plan. What form it would take he could not, or would not, say publicly. One misconception as to Australia he admitted had been removed from his mind; it was the idea that the Labor party there are less loyal, or less enthusiastically loyal, to the old country than the other sections of the community.

Dr. Coulter was greatly impressed with the "level-headedness" and intelligence of the leaders as a whole. They will probably have State ownership rather than a subsidised service, although they have not so far definitely expressed themselves upon the point.

Arrangements have been completed by which the staunch steamer H. F. Eaton will carry an excursion from St. George to Calais on Tuesday Sept. 7th. The boat will touch St. Andrews, Robinson, Red Beach and Eastport, remaining about two hours in the latter city. The band has been engaged to accompany the excursion, and have arranged a fine program, in which some of their choicest selections will be heard. Don't miss this opportunity to enjoy the finest sail on the continent. Tickets, adults, $1.00 children 50 cts. Refreshments will be served on the boat. The excursion will be landed in St. George at 6 o'clock. The affair is under the auspices of St. Mark's church.

Work for the All-Red Scheme

Mr. Coulter, Deputy Postmaster-General of Canada, was interviewed in London, on his way home after a somewhat prolonged tour in connection with "All Red Route" to Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

It is an open secret that he went to Australia for the purpose of discussing with leading statesmen and business people the proposed new plan of an Imperial road.

"I think the scheme is quite feasible," he remarked to a press representative in London, "and my belief is based upon good foundation. Commercial men among the Australians are in favor of it, so are the representatives with whom I discussed it."

"It has been said that Australia has little of nothing to gain. But that is an erroneous view."

She stands to gain enormously by a quicker route from the tourist traffic alone. Men with whom I travelled, who are in business in America, were staggered when they found they had to wait six weeks for their mails by one route, and for six weeks by another, my business went stand it," they told me and some of them went straight back.

"And the tourist traffic is no unimportant item. I am told that American visitors are worth twenty millions a year to Europe, and most of the turn-overs carry a large proportion of profit than the ordinary commercial investment. The people in America have done the European tour until they are tired of it. But they dare not leave business for an Australian tour until the mails are greatly accelerated."

"To men of that kind the reduction of time occupied in travelling to New Zealand, say, from thirty-eight to twenty-seven days would mean an enormous gain, and whatever it cost, within reason would almost certainly produce a very large profit indeed. I don't suppose we could organize a twenty-seven days service at first but with that as an ideal we might easily do something almost at once."

"As to methods and plans, I am not at liberty to speak, as I have to report to my government. But I have heard it freely argued in Australia that it would be better to buy out the vested interests than to compete with them."

"Australia and Canada are both countries destined to become rich. And commercial men and capitalists generally in the States are looking towards them with business notions in their heads. And if they find a good cable service, with cheap rates which would enormously increase the business they would bring their custom to the companies concerned. And the 'speeding up' of the rail and steamboat service would have a similar effect."

Just now, when the nasturtiums are in bloom in all their glory of scarlet, gold and purple, it may be of interest to the admirers of the flower to know that a French physician, Dr. Zalacka, has "discovered" a very useful medicinal use. It contains an essential oil or active principle, of a sulphurous character which acts as a stimulant to the general nutrition, and is quite rich in both iron and iodine. It has one peculiar property which promises to make its fortune in the therapeutic line, and that is that it revives the red blood corpuscles. Consequently, Dr. Zalacka has shown that it is the antidote par excellence for nicotine poisoning, as nicotine has a propensity for injuring if not destroying these corpuscles. It is further asserted that if a person who is addicted to the use of the weed, habits himself to the chewing of the leaves, stalks, or flowers of the nasturtium, he contracts a fixed antipathy for tobacco in any form.

The Western Harvest

Although there seems to be no doubt that the Western wheat harvest will be so large as to tax the facilities of the railway companies to move the grain, there appears to have been a tendency in certain quarters to exaggerate the extent of the yield and the number of the men who will be required to harvest it. Mr. J. Bruce Walker, the Commissioner of Immigration at Winnipeg, a gentleman who knows the West well, deprecates as damaging and unwarranted the stories that the wheat yield of the West will be from twenty-five to thirty per cent greater than that of last year, and that thirty-five thousand men will be required to harvest it. The Commissioner declares that, while there can be no doubt that the harvest will be a good one, there has been much foolish and harmful exaggeration about it. So far as he can ascertain, the wheat yield may show an increase of from two to two and a half bushels per acre in excess of last year. That is a moderate increase having regard alike to the increased acreage under wheat in some parts of the West, and a light crop in others; but it is a reasonable calculation, and will be realized under reasonable conditions.

The estimate of an increased yield of wheat ranging from twenty-five to thirty per cent over last year, Mr. Walker characterizes as absurd and misleading, and what is worse still, is eminently calculated to cause a serious loss to the farmers of Western Canada, while leading the way for a slump in prices. Of the twenty thousand people carried by the harvest excursion from the East to the West last year, two thousand were women and children, and the effect of presence of the additional eighteen thousand able-bodied men on the prairies, was to hasten the harvest so that these men found themselves out of employment much sooner than they expected. Mr. Walker says there is no justification whatever for the estimated need of thirty-five thousand harvest hands from the East this year, and he declares it is ruinous to the farmers to spread such reports because enhanced demands will be made upon them, and if the harvesters themselves should be misled into going in great unneeded numbers, they will suffer disappointment and privation, which will operate prejudicially against the harvest movement in future years, when help will be even more urgently needed than it is today. —Halifax Chronicle.

American Settlers are Rushing to Canada

Ottawa, Aug. 18.—Immigration to Canada is again on the increase and the growth in arrivals from the United States is especially heavy. It was 60,000 last year, and promises to exceed 75,000 this year.

During June 20,868 persons entered Canada or 5,235 more than during the previous June, an increase of thirty-three per cent.

During the first three months of the fiscal year, ended June 74,156 persons entered Canada, as immigrants, an increase of 5,163 or seven per cent. From Great Britain and the continent, arrivals numbered 41,212, a decrease of 7,543, or fifteen per cent. During the same time, immigrants from the United States numbered 32,924, an increase of 12,517 or sixty-one per cent.

During June alone, 11,561 immigrants came in at ocean ports an increase of 909 while during June immigrants from the United States totalled 9,208, an increase of 4,324 or 89 per cent.

Say Peary has Discovered Pole

Washington, Aug. 16.—Those sharps who make a speciality of Arctic exploration are inclined to believe that Commander Peary has at last discovered the North Pole. They have no positive information on which to base this belief, for no word has been received from him since he disappeared into the frozen waters of the far north.

The indications in general, borne out by reports from the far north, are that the present has been an extremely favorable season for Peary's purpose; wherefore the special ground for the belief that he may have won his goal.

Peary sailed from New York just a year ago, prepared to remain in the far north three years, if necessary, but before he left he told President Roosevelt who had given the expedition his blessing and half a cargo of horsehoes and four leaf clovers, that he really expected to set in the Pole in the summer of 1909.

Siege is being laid to both poles this year by experienced explorers. The impression prevails that the South Pole is likely to be found before the north, because of the marvelous success of Shackleton expedition have been coming to the National Geographic Society and have aroused the greatest interest along with the belief that the Southern Pole is really more accessible than the northern because there is not so much open water to be crossed.

Jean Charcot is now in the Antarctic region with an excellently equipped expedition, and Lieutenant Shackleton is expected to go south next season.

If both poles are discovered this year it surely would be a remarkable record for 1909.

Artemus Hatt, L'Evang, may lose one of his toes as the result of the accidental discharge of a rifle. He was holding the rifle, with the muzzle on his foot, when it went off, the bullet passing clean through the foot badly shattering the bone of one toe. The affair happened Monday evening, and he was at once brought to town and Dr. Taylor summoned.

Black-Eyed Susan

Into the midst of the late summer carnival
Jasmy trippeth a gay village belle;
Susan her name is; wide-spread her fame is;
Jack-in-the-pulpit was ne'er known as well!

Mingling raising her bright yellow petticoats,
Courtiering coyly, she greets each old friend,
Languishing glances lure on to dances
She will be queen of the ball ere it end.

Vain found her envious neighbors their sneer;
Frills of Queen Anne's lace and many hued bows;
Proud Meadow Lily must yield, willy-nilly,
Piqued by her rivals indifferent pose.

Lily says, bridding: "She's only a Daisy
Or-eyed besides—of most humble degree!"
Yet I have read it—Homer hath said it!
Jove's royal consort had eyes such as she!

Luck to thee, peasant-born peer of court diamonds!
Long may we own thy imperious sway
Honest thy heart is! Magic thine art is,
Setting Dame August to dream she is May!

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

CLEAR THE FILTERS!

Your Health Depends On It.

In its course around the body the blood is continually gathering up waste matter—worn out tissue and ocean impurities.

Then it flows through the kidneys, which should filter out all this poisonous material and empty it into the bladder.

But sometimes the kidneys get sluggish and clog up with waste matter, and fail to do their work properly.

Then the trouble begins. Instead of leaving the kidneys pure and life-giving, the blood comes out still loaded with "Fire Acid," which it carries to every part of the body.

Settling in joints and tissues, this "Fire Acid" very soon causes Rheumatism, with its untold suffering.

The natural, sensible course then is to clear the filters—the kidneys—with the "Father Morrison's No. 2." One tablet three times a day, followed by a glass of cold water, will bring relief in a very short time.

Joints will limber up, the blood will be purified, and the Rheumatism cured. See at your druggist's, or from Father Morrison's Medicine Co., Chatham, N.S.

HULDAH'S EXPERIMENTS

"Sister Cely advises a poodle, but poodles are dull things. Pretty—but not responsive. A little girl would be sweet, children are so grateful for things.

What fun it will be to play with her! When she gets noisy, Jeannette can see to her. She must have a rose-colored frock, and big eyes. Miss Rogers is good to these orphans, but they look subdued, they aren't petted."

"What care a child is!" she meditated. "Really a poodle is much better. Let her have such pretty eyes—she'll be a dream in blue."

The "dream" was not in blue when Miss Valance called for her at the orphanage, but in an old green frock. The bright eyes looked pensive as her benefactress led Huldah to the carriage.

"Have a happy visit," said Miss Rogers cheerfully to the child, "and write me a little letter." Huldah began to smile as she stepped into the carriage. "Won't it be fun!" she said. Miss Valance sighed contentedly as they drove away.

"This nice horse," said Huldah, "what English!" thought her patroness. "She must talk better." Then she ordered Berroughs to drive to Verner's for the child's new dress and decent clothes.

The big store seemed like fairyland to Huldah; she approved of the new navy blue frock and coat that was bought, and the hat gray with butter-cups. But when she saw the blue figured muslin with lace she cried joyfully: "Ain't it just elegant?" And when the blue and white striped silk dress was bought she threw up her arms and said smilingly: "Gee whar, that's grand, a real circus rig; buy me a dog, too."

"Hush, get right up," ordered Miss Valance sharply. After a few words of admonition, the rest of the shopping went off quietly. The child gazed and twined about, and strayed off a little—but was subdued.

As they drove home, Miss Valance observed, "Huldah isn't a pretty name. What would you like to be called?"

"Huldah is nice—but Enta'll do." "Horraes! No. Let's see—Constance, Hortense—"

"Too long," said the child tersely. "Ruth, that's pretty and easy."

The child was absorbed in trying how far she could flick without falling off the seat, and did not object to the new title. Suddenly she kicked too far and the robe fell out of the carriage, and with an outcry she was about to spring out after it when Miss Valance caught her by the skirt.

Miss Valance was glad to get home. She raced through the picture-books, and tossed the French doll about, until Jeannette was summoned to dress her in the navy-blue frock. Miss Valance left her a few minutes in the reception room while she went to see one of the maids. When she returned there sat Ruth with a forlorn ragged doll in her arms.

"Put that dirty thing down," exclaimed Miss Valance, "where did you get it?"

"It's Enta,—see's my doll," she kissed her fondly.

"Ugh! Take her right up to your room," said her patroness, "and keep her there."

Then the child was initiated into the elegancies of the home. She was permitted to touch the soft portiers and stuffed furniture; but when she ran and jumped into the pink brocade armchair she was reproved. Then she slid on the polished floors and was corrected.

"Your things are too fussed up to have any fun with," said Huldah with a pout.

She looked demurely at pictures a few moments; suddenly Miss Valance heard a queer noise and saw her sliding down the banisters. More admonition, then to her benefactress's relief the dinner gong rang.

"Where's the fire?" sang out the child. She was shown the gong, but not allowed to strike it.

She was very quiet at dinner, but she took so much of every dish Katie passed her that Miss Valance had the maid help her to dessert. Her napkin kept slipping to the floor,—she was used to a bid,—and she broke her eggshell teacup.

"They break if you look at 'em," she said scornfully. "Jane an' I could play ball with them we had at the mission."

When her finger bowl was set down she began to drink out of it.

"Ruth!" exclaimed her hostess, scandalized, "that's to dip our finger tips in, like this."

"Where's the soap?" asked she. Katy smiled, but she gave an outcry later, for Huldah pushed back her chair so suddenly that she threw Katy down, who was standing behind her. She was very quiet after dinner perhaps because she had eaten like a little bear cub, and Jeannette took her up to her room at 7 o'clock. Then Miss Valance leaned back comfortably to read, but her thoughts would dwell on that child: Ruth must be sent to school—or she would pull the place down. Ruth saw Huldah.

When she began school she had numerous aches and coughs that prevented her from going, and it was several weeks before Miss Valance understood her maneuvers. Ruth missed her mission friends, she said. "The school children are no fun, stuck up,—they just walk round, they haven't seen corn-cob dolls, eaten gibbaltars, nor nothin'."

Before Miss Valance was aware of it the child had several street waifs in the back yard to play with. After that she took Ruth out driving often. They went to see Miss Tenney, who was not partial to children, but who had to be called on.

"What happy drives you have," said Miss Tenney, trying to smile on the child.

"I was more fun drivin' Bowser in the soap tub at the mission," said Ruth. "Things her is too fussy. Miss Tenney raised her eyebrows disapprovingly, and began to chat with her older visitor. Ruth played with the table figur.

Suddenly a stout, plainly dressed woman entered. Miss Tenney blushed and said, "This is my aunt, Miss Barnes." The country aunt smiled broadly, and in a few moments took a seat near the child. She told Ruth about her country home, the cows and a little lamb, while the child chattered happily about the mission and asked questions.

"I want to be on a farm," she said. "It's so pretty fassin' round like this. Ain't this a fancy dress—can't have any fun in it—was chasin' a cat and fell in a poodle and they mad to put this braid on; Jeannette found it cheap."

Miss Barnes laughed. Miss Valance stood up hastily, and took her charge away.

Vacation came, and Miss Valance found Ruth more caty than before. Those bright eyes were seen to be an index to her character. She was cutting pictures from her expensive picture books, playing in the coal bin, or climbing like a squirrel. Even Jeannette was irritated; her curling tongs were missing and her best hat had been sadly misused.

"A poodle would be better," thought Miss Valance firmly. "I'll take her back to the orphanage. I'm worn out. No, I shan't have a poodle even,—not yet. I'll take a trip to the mountains for my nerves."

So the child, because she was more care than a poodle, became once more Huldah and was taken back to Miss Rogers. She was happy to see her playfellows again. But how shabby the place looked!

"What ugly clothes Miss Rogers has!" thought Huldah. "The floors are so chippy. It's fun to play with the girls and Bowser—but not to help work, and they don't have vacat.o.a. No jam for breakfast, no dresses, no pretty dresses, nor nothin'. It's dreary."

The old plays were dull; she dared not disobey rules or she was punished. Then meek-eyed Jane, who had been so good to Huldah, was big enough to take a place; and Jane told Huldah when she was larger she would have to get a place too.

"Be like Jeannette?" asked the child.

"No—harder than that," said Jane mournfully, "you'll have to scrub pans, split the wood and such things."

"Shan't," said Huldah firmly, "that's scrubby ways."

So Huldah stole out of the orphanage one late afternoon; she carried her old valise, and walked very fast.

"Berroughs and Jeannette don't grub so," she thought ahead. "I won't neither. I can get an easier job to do. Poor Jane ought to have got off too, but she ain't that style. I'll ask Miss Barnes what to do. Sposen she should take me back to the mission? I can try it—she seems nice. Petersville ain't but eight miles, and I've a dollar yet."

So asking her way and pushing on, she found the trolley car and went to Miss Barnes.

"Land sakes!" exclaimed that good woman when she saw her, "step right in an' have a bit o' gingerbread an' a cup o' hot milk. You perseverin' little creature! We'll see about jobs later."

"You won't take me back to the mission?" asked the child with frightened eyes.

"No, indeed, no; be easy about that. You ain't no mission child."

So Huldah threw down her valise and her cares. After supper she was shown the little lamb, and then went upstairs to a plain, clean little room, with funny worsted things in it.

New American Tariff.

Whether the zeal of the American Protectionists statesman may not prove to have overshoot the mark, as many prudent Americans evidently fear, remains to be seen. Powerful countries already committed to Protection are not likely to quail before this manifestation of the hold which the principle they themselves have adopted has on the American people, or those who represent them in Congress. Moreover, they may comfort themselves as the Cologne Gazette does, by treating this portentous maximum tariff as "bluff." In this country the belief of the great body of convinced Tariff Reformers in the need for the early application of their principle to the political and financial problems of the United Kingdom will be greatly strengthened; and it is probable that their growing numbers will receive an accession of strength from the ranks of the Free Traders, who had entertained hopes of a very different sort of "revision" of the American tariff from that which has been carried out. ### Gas Distended His Stomach

Caused Palpitation, and Prevented Sleep. When Health Was Gone, Cure Followed Use of "Nerviline"

"My last wish will be," writes Harry P. Pollard, a well-known boot and shoe traveller of Hartford, that everyone with a bad stomach may learn as I did, before its too late, that Nerviline is the one remedy to cure. Why, I was in mighty bad shape, my digestion was all wrong, and every night I would awaken with a start and TESTIMONIAL find my heart jumping like a threshing machine. This was caused by gas on my stomach pressing against my heart. When I started to use Nerviline I got better mighty fast. It is certainly a grand remedy for the travelling man, keeps your stomach in order, cures cramps, prevents lamboago or rheumatism, breaks up chest colds and sore throat--in fact there hasn't been an ache or pain inside or outside for the past two years that I haven't cured with Nerviline. Do you wonder I recommend it?"
For general household use Nerviline has no equal; it will cure the aches and ailments of the entire family--refuse anything but Nerviline, 25 cts. per bottle, five for one dollar all dealers or the Catarhoxone Co., Kingston, Ont.

The Gold Madness

Samuel A. Bonfield, known through Alaska as a "square" gambler, a millionaire and president of two banks has gone insane--and all because of the glare of gold. Bonfield gambled, but gambled "square" and prospered. But the glare of gold was eating into his very soul and, with close to half a million saved up, the gambling king went into the banking business. In his bank he handled the gold dust from the mines near Fairbanks, pawed over and weighed tons of it. And one day, his gold talked to him and he walked out into the sunlight to escape the spell. He disappeared. After several days he was discovered insane in the Seattle police court.

Presence of Mind

Mr. Mildew (the undertaker)--Ah, it give me a awful turn, 'Eney, when I went in the barn an' saw poor Swilks hanging there. I turned and ran for the police like lightning!
Henry--But didn't you cut him down first?
Mr. M.--'Course I didn't.
Henry--Why not?
Mr. M.--'Cos he wasn't dead!

Love and Poverty

Young Love lived once in a humble shed Where roses breathing and woodbine wreathing Around the lattice their tendrils spread, As sweet and wild as the life he led. His garden flourished, for young Hope nourished The infant buds with his beams and showers. But lips, though blooming, must still be fed, For not even love can live on flowers. Alas! that poverty's evil eye Should e'er come hither such sweets to wither, The flowers laid down their heads to die; And Hope fell sick as the witch drew nigh. She came one morning ere Love had warning And raised the latch where the young god lay. "Oh, ho!" says Love, "is it you? good-bye." So he opened the window and flew away!

The footprints of Dyspepsia have been directly traced to the Stomach nerves. When these "inside nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress must surely result. For this, druggists everywhere are supplying a prescription known as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. First, these tiny inside Stomach, Heart, and Kidney nerves fail. Then gas belching, Heart palpitation, or falling Kidneys follow. Don't drug the Stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is the nerves, not the organs that are calling for help. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment, you will realize the gain. A test will tell. Sold by all dealers.

Cool Drinks Without Ice

This thirsty weather everyone is pining for cool, refreshing beverages; but ice is not always handy. However there is a way and a very simple way, by means of which we can dispense with ice very comfortably. It is borrowed from the East--the land of the harem and the hazzar. This is what we should do. Take an earthenware jar, or any other porous vessel, and fill it with water you wish to cool. This vessel will allow the water to soak through, and thus keep the outside continually moist. Place the jar outside in a hot wind or draught, and you will notice that in a short time the temperature of the water will be lowered twenty degrees or more. This is accounted for by the fact that the outside moisture of the jar is evaporating, absorbs a considerable amount of heat, which is carried away in the water vapour formed. You can cool mineral water in a similar way by wrapping the bottles in straw, which must be kept moist, and placing them in the way of a warm wind.

$100 Reward, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

GOOD SCHOLARS MAKE GOOD CITIZENS.

A wise man has said, "What we want in the man of tomorrow, we must put in the boy of today." No man who thinks and feels about the evils in our body politic can be indifferent to the schools of the country. Everyone from the humblest school on the far-off prairies to the university and college, is important. All should train for life. The teacher's mission is to save by prevention. He is the former and not the reformer. His work is greater than that of all others who try to rescue and reform. He deals with the growing plastic child. Out of the material helps the home to make character, to mould good men and women.

The end of all public education is good citizenship. No other safe grounds can be taken by the advocates of education at public expense. While education is not necessarily always successful in this direction, ignorance is antagonistic to good government. The man to be a good citizen, must know something of the structure of government, and his rights and duties. The boy soon steps from the school to citizenship. He has crossed that unseen line between the state of being minor and a man. On one side he is a man; on the other he is a voter. So few realize that each man is a unit—that he counts or should do so in every realm of our life. Called to vote he is apt to follow the crowd. Party not principle, often determine his vote. Prejudice, for or against candidates, not a deep sense of the fitness or unfitness of the man who seeks his suffrage.

For this, and many other reasons, teachers should take a more active interest in public affairs. He should become a potent factor in the making of the citizen. The organization of the school affords an unerring illustration of government. The family gives another. The parents often neglect to give any definite instruction about being a good citizen as a voter. The boy gets what little of such knowledge he has from the teacher and from his outside environments.

NATIONS IN UNREST

The unrest which has broken out in Sweden and which finds an outlet in an attempt to establish a general strike is surprising. Inhabiting a cold country, the Swedes are a steady-going people and aren't easily carried off their feet. Although the Latin countries frequently become victims of hysteria, Sweden isn't much given to indulging in internal disturbances.

But the spirit of unrest that has been operating over sea this year has been widespread. Spain has just undergone a revolutionary outbreak that menaced the stability of the Government and the steadiness of the throne. Happily things are now calmed down. A revolution in Turkey forced Abdul Hapid off his perch and he is now a prisoner of state at Saloniki. A somewhat similar rebellion in Persia a few weeks ago compelled the Shah to abdicate and to give way to a new hand at the administrative bellows. India is a seething cauldron of unrest, and the agitation which is now being pressed against British rule and which found a fanatical incident in the assassination of Sir Curzon Wylie by an Indian student at the Imperial Institute in London is raising some very awkward questions. For several months England has been in a state of mind and has been having nightmares over a possible military invasion by Germany. This nervous disturbance, however, involves no internal rebellion but is a national alarm over an imaginary declaration of war against the British Empire by a foreign foe. Seldom is a nation in greater fright. But the general spirit of unrest that prevails many countries on the sunrise side of the Atlantic offers a curious study of the psychology of nations. The fact that Sweden supplies a stage on which internal restlessness on a national scale is exploited is surprising, although such a condition would be the most natural thing in the world in some of the countries farther south.—Hartford Times.

BY THE WAY

School.

And the hand played!

Now for the friendly rivalry between the pupils, it will be gratifying to both parents and instructors.

So far as we have learned the location of the north pole is unchanged. No report from Perry.

The "Rocky road to Dublin" never would have been heard of, if the author had travelled up Shaws Hill but once.

"There's another, not a sister, In the happy days gone by Because the old folks didn't like me, She met me on the sly."

Woodmen say, they find no hornets' nests on trees this year. Hollow logs near the ground are used and this is, the hunters say, a sure indication of very little snow the coming winter.

Schools will soon open, and there is no question in the mind of any citizen of what must be done to get the full benefit of the outlay for this important branch of the town's affairs.

Keep the flies out of the houses. Most of the sickness that is serious at this time of the year is among families which are not particular in regard to flies. The fly haters are said to be fussy but they live longer and save doctor bills by being so fussy in that particular.

In order to keep his wife from collapsing under the effect of an excessive dose of morphine, G. G. Gallagher, of Des Moines, persuaded her to engage with him in a two-hour game of whist, thus saving her life. After the landrum had been taken from the woman's stomach they prescribed this method of keeping her from going to sleep. She has been very fond of whist, and was interested in the game. It was a game against death, and the husband played with beads of nervous perspiration standing on his forehead.

Capt. H. P. Nuse, of the Celtic, was regaling a little group of ladies with sea stories.

"One trip," he said, "there was a woman who bothered the officers and me to death about whales. A dozen times a day she besought us to have her called if a whale dove in sight."

"I said rather impatiently to her one afternoon:—

"But, madam why are you so anxious about this whale question?"

"Captain," she answered, "I want to see a whale blubber. It must be very impressive to see such an enormous creature cry."

It's a great help to be able to size up the men you come in contact with," said a business man to his son; "but it is more important still that you should first know yourself."

"For instance, a noisy lot tacked out of their club late one night and up the street. They stopped in front of an imposing residence. After considerable discussion, one of them advanced and pounded on the door. A woman struck her head out of a second-storey window and demanded, none too sweetly, "What do you want?"

"Is this the residence of Mr. Shmith?" inquired the man on the step with an elaborate bow.

"It is, what do you want?"

"Is it possible that I have the honor of speaking to Missus Shmith?"

"Yes." "What do you want?"

"Good." "Missus Shmith, will you hic—come down and pick out Mr. Shmith? The rest of us want to go home!"

The Forester's Return

I'm back on the job by the singing river, Far from the town with its money-mad, Back where the quacking aspens quiver— And I'm glad.

I'm back to the shack where the trail is winding

'Mid flowers of every scent and hue, And I felt when I gazed, the hot tears blinding—

Wond'ra't you?

I'm back to the creek of the good old saddle,

To the equine friends that never doubt; Back to the haunts—with canoe and paddle—

Of the trout.

There's work to do, and there's work in plenty,

And it's sleep in the open, if fate so wills,

But no man is more than one-and-twenty In the hills.

—Dever Republican.

The Diamond Packing Co., which has closed for a time has started up again, and has been shipping some goods, and business at the Columbian and Union is again on the move, after a short holiday. Fish continue in fair receipt, and are of good quality. Label Herald.

An exciting race took place at Lake Utopia on Saturday last. While the motor boat "Teaser" with a large party on board was speeding over the water, at head of the Lake, a flock of ducks were seen some distance away, the boat was headed for the birds and the race on, for probably half a mile there was little chance made in the relative position of contestants. The ducks were headed for shore and were apparently treading the water flapping their wings and splashing at a great rate. It was evident the young birds were unable to fly and the actions of the mother duck plainly dictated her anxiety for their safety. In getting a terrific pace she would lead the flock shoreward, then allowing the youngsters to come up with her she would head away in another direction, trying to draw the pursuers going for shore again when the family came after her, after a desperate struggle the birds reached the shore and seeing them safe the old bird took the water again and away she went at a twenty mile clip. One of the young birds excited by the near approach of the boat and not liking the rocky shore, took to the water again and gave the "Teaser" a chase of miles over the lake until exhausted by its rapid exertions it allowed the boat to overtake it, then when capture seemed certain and tender hearted girls were crying "don't hurt the little thing" away under water it went and succeeded in hiding itself from view on coming to the surface again.

The Baptist church Sunday school held their annual picnic at Mahar's beach Thursday. A large number of young people were on hand and enjoyed the day immensely. The sail up the river and canal was a feature much enjoyed by everyone. Thomas Kent's little steamer with a large scow in tow conveyed the party to the lake.

Ethelbert Wright, of Southern Wolf light, was in town Thursday. He brought his young son with him to receive medical attendance. In using a sharp axe the little fellow had the misfortune to cut the large toe, nearly severing it from the foot. Dr. Taylor dressed the injured foot and hopes to save the toe. The sale of the Campbell estate Saturday attracted quite a number of spectators. The bidding was not as keen as was expected, and the property went at a much lower figure than the wise one predicted. The homestead brought six hundred and seventy dollars, and the Mooreland property seven hundred and twenty five, Fred Baldwin being the purchaser in both cases. The Kelley lot went to John O'Brien at fifty dollars.

Frank W. Lord and Frank C. Miller, of Boston, who had an experience Sunday at Brown's Flats that they will remember. They had been out near Ball Mountain fishing and were on the return home when Mr. Miller saw a bear lying on the bank and grabbed it. Immediately it squealed and the mother put in an appearance. Seeing the cub in the hands of a man she immediately charged toward Miller. Mr. Lord rushed between Miller and the bear, and Neil Zacobin drew his hunting knife and charged the bear, killing it with one plunge into the heart. The cub escaped but Mr. Miller will have the bear skin as a trophy of his experience.

On Tuesday of last week steamer Aurora made her first trip to Velehpool, Campobello, which was alike appreciated by passengers and crew. Since the destruction of the old pier a year ago, there being no other suitable landing, both passengers and freight have been transported to and from shore in row-boats, which, especially during low water, was very slow and disagreeable. There is yet much work to be accomplished before its completion, and it is only at high or half tide that a landing can now be effected, but the people are rejoicing in this small improvement and looking forward with pleasure to the near future when it shall be perfected and continuous. --Sentinel.

It is satisfactory to learn that the railway companies are bringing pressure to bear on their firemen to make them improve their methods of stoking. Good stoking will pay for itself, and this is just as true of stationary engines as it is of locomotives—Toronto Globe.

We might be in Heaven part of every day if we wished at any rate.

Whether we like it or not life is one continuous competition examination.

All wars are unsuccessful. The only question is, Which of the combatants suffer most?

The darker the night, the brighter the stars. Clouds lighten the up the sky; the fog and smoke of cities darken the day, and make life gloomy to those who have not learnt to make it bright for themselves; but they make glorious sunsets for those who have eyes to see.

Reflections are as a rule more beautiful than the objects themselves; and the more are reflect the more beautiful the universe will appear. We cannot, indeed, I think, imagine any world more beautiful than our own. There is none so far as we can tell, under the more immediate touch of God; and none whence sublimer depths are open to adoration; none murmuring with the whisper of more thrilling affections, or ennobled as the theatre of more glorious duties. Right Hon. Lord Avebury.

August time, tells on the nerves. But that spiritless, no ambition feeling can be easily and quickly altered by taking what is known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Within 48 hours after beginning to use the Restorative, improvement will be noticed. Of course, full health will not immediately return. The gain, however, will surely follow. And best of all, you will realize and feel your strength and ambition as it is returning. Outside influences depress first the "inside nerves" then the stomach, Heart and Kidneys will usually fail. Strengthen these falling nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative and see how quickly health will be yours again. Sold by All Dealers.

Helpers of Others.

It is a high honor that is conferred upon us when God sends to us human hearts to be comforted or human souls to be helped. Yet every thoughtful person must tremble as he accepts the responsibility of such delicate and holy work. It is a serious moment when there is brought to a surgeon a case on the skilful treatment of which a life depends, or when a physician stands by a bedside to administer remedies at the crisis of a fever. But it is a far more serious moment when a human life is put into one's hands to be cured of its faults or comforted of its sorrows, or to have its hearts wounds healed. We need divine skill and wisdom, and delicacy, for such sacred work. Only Christ can teach us how to deal with human lives in their need and sorrow. He never breaks a bruised reed. Rev. J. R. Miller, D. D.

Sir John Kirk

Sir John Kirk, the veteran secretary of the Ragged School Union, was born at Kegworth in Leicestershire in 1847. His father was a tinsmith and brazier.

One day, while bathing in a canal, "Young John," as he was familiarly called, narrowly escaped drowning. He got out of his depth, and being unable to swim, sank twice. Just as he was disappearing for the third time, a friend, who had come on the scene, jumped into the water and grabbed hold of Kirk by the head, and succeeded in getting him ashore—a rescue for which thousands have had cause to be thankful. Sir John has had some amusing escapades brought into his notice in his time. One day, when visiting a Ragged School, he was informed that two boys were missing. It subsequently transpired that "just for a lark," as they put it, the two lads had climbed up the chimney from the fireplace.

An Ideal of Manhood; A Scientific Training

During what I think I may claim has been a tolerably busy and fairly successful career I have cherished many ambitions but only one ideal.

This ideal has not only dogged me at home but all through my travels in various parts of the world, in India as in Australia, in New Zealand as in South Africa as now it haunts me so continuously as to become almost an obsession; Compulsory up-to-date physical education in the schools. To the attainment of this ideal I have already given up a good many things.

To it I am ready if need be, to sacrifice the rest of my life.

I shall never rest until I have accomplished it.

PERMANENT BENEFIT.

Physical education, in the eyes of both teacher and pupil, should occupy a position of equal importance with intellectual training in every school, public or private throughout the kingdom. Indeed to some extent, the physical training is the more important of the two.

For one thing it is more permanent. Only a small part of the book knowledge with which children are crammed is permanently treasured in the mind.

The benefits of physical training on the other hand, are apparent throughout the lifetime.

Further a scientific physical training sharpens the intellect and develops valuable moral qualities.

A splendid physique is rarely accompanied by a vicious taint. It is the loafer, the weedy, the sluggard who is the bane of the school and the degenerate of after life.

Physical culture, however, if practised at all must be placed on a scientific basis and adapted to the requirements of different individuals.

Careless teaching is less than useless. It not only ruins the child's present chances of development; it endangers its future prospects of life.

PROPOSED SYSTEM.

A study of details will show that it is entirely practicable to give individual physical instruction in our public schools whatever be the number of children in attendance.

The system I proposed may be outlined thus:

(1) A standard of development based on age, height and weight for both sexes at different ages.

(2) Exercises founded on measurements of the individual child in connection with the medical examiners report on the child's state of health and the condition of the various organs.

(3) Exercises to be divided into many series one for each condition, and each series further to be divided in sections to comprise, say, any of six strengths.

The details of the system I have carefully prepared, though too long to set down here, are simplicity itself.

There would be no difficulty whatever in preparing the present teachers to give the physical education prescribed considering (1) the high standard of intelligence found today in the teaching profession, and (2) that teachers are already acquainted with other methods of physical exercise. Such training as was necessary would be carried out by the physical expert engaged by the local authorities to superintend the physical education of the district.

Now you know why I made my offer to the distinguished committee of the Church Lads Brigade. Now, too, you know what is my ideal.

To fulfil it I am prepared to place the knowledge and experience which I have acquired as a result of my life-long study at the disposal of the authorities, and to undertake to train a sufficient number of teachers to superintend the inauguration of such a scheme in the public schools throughout the country.

It is only a scientific grappling with the problem of secret degeneration and its replacement by a physical progression that will serve to keep Great Britain in the proud position she occupies today at the hands of the civilized world.

EUGEN SANDOW.

History of Famous Fort Ticonderoga; Ethan Allen and his Military Exploits

The principal event that gives Ticonderoga a place in what may be called purely United States history, is the capture of the old fort by Ethan Allen at the outbreak of the War of the Revolution. Inasmuch as it was at Ticonderoga that the recent Lake Champlain tercentenary celebration began—for it was near that spot that Champlain tercentenary celebration the Iroquois—it was only natural that the speeches of the day should deal pretty largely with the history of the place. There was some reference to the severe repulse inflicted there during the Seven Years' War by Montcalm upon Abercrombie; there was more about the exploit of Ethan Allen and his "Green Mountain Boys."

Perhaps no episode in the War of the Revolution has been so magnified and glorified and with less foundation as has been the capture of Fort Ticonderoga. It has been described as a great military feat and Allen has been ranked among the military geniuses and patriotic heroes of the war. The American cause had men of military skill and of high patriotism at its head and in its rank and file, but Ethan Allen was not one of them. The kind of military skill he possessed was shown a few months after the affair at Ticonderoga by his wild attempt to capture Montreal when he and most of his party were captured at one stroke. The kind of patriotism with which he was fired was shown a few years later when he intrigued to bring Vermont over to the British side, and so far as her people were concerned to betray the cause of Congress. This letter is a chapter in Allen's career that Vermont orators of the present day pass over very lightly.

FIRST CLASH OF ARMS

When the first clash of arms took place on April 19th, 1775, at Lexington, near Boston, there were two small British posts on the western shore of the upper portion of Lake Champlain. The lake and the Richelieu River afforded the only practicable military route between New England and Canada, and, as President Taft in one of his tercentenary celebration speeches said, if anyone asked why it was chosen he had only to consider the hardships and dangers encountered by Arnold's force on its way to Quebec by the short cut across Maine.

These two forts on the upper portion of Lake Champlain were Crown Point and Ticonderoga, the latter standing at the mouth of the little river which empties the waters of Lake George into Lake Champlain. They were held to be the keys to the lake, for a force could not advance down the lake for the purpose of attacking Canada without first capturing them.

GARRISON AT TICONDEROGA

The garrison at Fort Ticonderoga consisted of a subaltern, Captain de La Place one gunner, two sergeants and forty-four men; that at Crown Point was smaller still.

When Allen attacked the former place probably the officer in command had not heard of the affair at Lexington twenty days before; possibly a questionable rumor of the disturbance in and around Boston had travelled to this outpost in the wilderness. However that may be, it is certain that de La Place and his little garrison felt themselves quite secure, never for a moment looking upon the population of the district as hostile, but on the contrary, regarding them as neighbors and friends. One incident shows that the few soldiers at the fort after assisted the country folk in rafting timber on Lake George or in loading vessels on Lake Champlain, and it is related by the historian Stedman that on the day previous to the attack Allen, who had often been at the fort, went to "Captain de La Place, with whom he was well acquainted, and prevailed on him to lend him twenty of the garrison, for the pretended purpose of assisting him in transporting goods across the lake." And further, it is related, that Allen contrived to make the soldiers drunk. Some work was performed, for the men were given money with which they procured more liquor. Taking it back to the fort, where discipline seems to have been very lax, they shared it with their companions. The consequence was that the sleep that night of the little garrison was deep.

HE DECLARED INDEPENDENCE

Early that year Vermont had declared its independence of New York, which had claimed the eastern side of the lake. It was practically an independent State. Its hero, Allen, was possessed of an inordinate vanity, and his love of notoriety was extreme. Here was a chance to strike a blow that would give him prominence and perhaps fame. He claimed to have received instructions from the Colony of Connecticut to capture Ticonderoga, and on this he acted, for he was without any authority from Congress.

Assembling a force at Bennington, Vt. he set out for Ticonderoga, arriving on the night of May 9th at a point opposite the fort, having with him 230 men. The lake here is known as the "narrows," being but a few hundred yards in width. At the time of Burgoyne's advance two years later a bridge of boats connected the two shores. Allen experienced some difficulty in finding boats in which to ferry over his force, but finally enough were secured to carry them across in two parties.

It was now five o'clock in the morning and the garrison were still asleep.

At the wicket-gate the sentinel was told that a messenger desired admittance as he bore orders for the commandant. So careless was the garrison and so complete their feeling of security, that the sentinel at once opened the gate and in rushed Allen and his "Green Mountain Boys." The sentinel and the few men on guard were at once overpowered and Allen demanded to be led to the officer commanding. The latter was in bed, but the tramping of Allen's force as they followed at his heels awoke de La Place, who, jumping up, rushed out half-dressed and met Allen. The surrender of the fort was demanded, de La Place was overpowered, and the remainder of the garrison were made prisoners in their beds. Such was the military exploit which resulted in the capture of Fort Ticonderoga and made Ethan Allen a hero. Crown Point, with its little squad of soldiers could offer no resistance and so the two posts on upper Lake Champlain fell into the hands of the revolutionists.

IMPORTANCE OF THE EXPLOIT

Because the capture of the two forts was, as a military exploit, practically insignificant does not in the least detract from the importance of the occurrence. It placed in Allen's possession considerable quantity of arms and military stores, of which he and his party were in need. It gave the revolutionists command for a time of Lake Champlain, it committed Vermont to the revolutionary cause, and it did much to confirm the hopes and fire the courage of northern New England.

"Those who praise the success of the attempt," wrote Dr. Kingsford in his History of Canada "fail to place on record that the attack took place in profound peace, unprovoked by aggression, in a remote part of the country, where news travelled slowly. Even if some questionable report of the Lexington affair of the 19th of April had reached the Ticonderoga garrison, it is certain that no attack was apprehended, or indeed conceived possible; the act of hostility, therefore, was as much a moral as it was a military surprise."

Ethan Allen's subsequent madcap raid upon Montreal when he was taken prisoner, and his negotiations carried on a few years later by which he proposed to bring Vermont over to the British side, somewhat dull the lustre of the fame achieved by the bold trick he played upon the Ticonderoga garrison—but that is another story.

Man's Destiny.

The desert will be subdued, Man will there as elsewhere reign triumphant. My eyes will then have been long closed before that day arrives, but I exult in every tendency towards its consummation, being firmly convinced that "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, nor has it entered into the heart of man to conceive," how great will be the blessing of providence on a future race, whose hearts will unite with their words, and whose actions will prove that the will of God is done on earth as it is in heaven.—W. Friend.

Sardine herring have struck into the harbor in large quantities, and are being caught in the weirs while some of the Carleton fishermen are seeing for them. The shoals have appeared rather earlier in the season than usual, and owing to the warm weather the fish cannot be sent to the canneries, consequently the only market for them in the fertilizer works.

Many of the little fish are being taken from the weirs inside the breakwaters. From one of these yesterday it was said that about ten tons were taken. They were loaded on a scow and taken to Lower Cove slip, from where they were hauled to the fertilizer.

Following on the wake of these herrings are the silver hake and already many of these fish have been taken in the vicinity of harbor. The fishermen report the outlook for securing them encouraging.

CORRESPONDENCE

Mr. Editor---

There are some facts that I would like to call to the attention of these in town who argue that going out of incorporation will be a step backward. Since the first year of incorporation the taxes have increased, and the question is asked, where will this end? It would, be all right if we had the "goods" to show for this increase, but we have not one single substantial improvement that represents the increase. We still have the school house dirt with more added--we have the same streets but its no use to go into details. It is plain that this constant increase in taxes is getting to be serious. Cut out this sentimental gush "a step backward," and get down to good hard common sense. Unless the present industrial situation improves, or more industries are started, the citizens will not be able to carry the burden that is growing yearly. If the situation can be saved, by more business like methods, by all means apply the methods and bring relief to a condition that will eventually end in a crisis.
