DEVELOPMENT IN CENTRAL AFRICA.

It will be news to a good many people that the native chiefs of Uganda are now using typewriters upon which to make their regular reports to the British commissioner. A few years ago it was recorded as evidence of the rapidity with which civilization was progressing in Uganda that the chiefs were very generally able to read and write, and that illiteracy had become a discredit if not a disgrace. Now they not only glory in typewriters, but with the peace that has ensued since the establishment of the British protectorate, they have become so prosperous that they freely pay in flocks and herds, owing to their lack of currency, the taxes levied upon them for their benefit, and revel in the advantages of railroads, telegraphs, telephones and other facilities of modern civilization.

The statements made by Sir Harry Johnston as the result of his recent experiences among these people are both interesting and educative. He says among other things that the taxation levied upon them comes far below the amount of property they were formerly accustomed to lose or give when wholly at the mercy of the chiefs or of conquerors of the negro race, and that the natives are cheerful and well satisfied at their protection in consequence. He also says that there is a great chance for development of the country, for in the eastern part of Uganda protectorate there is a tract almost without parallel in tropical Africa, a region of, perhaps, twelve thousand square miles, approximately the size of Belgium, admirably well watered, with a fertile soil, a cool and perfectly healthy climate, covered with noble forests and to a very great extent uninhabited by any native race. This area lies at an altitude of from six thousand to ten thousand feet and is said to be as healthy for European settlers as British Columbia or even the United Kingdom.

All this is in pleasant contrast to the state of affairs in the Congo under Belgian administration. It appears that the King of the Belgians is sovereign of the Congo with but scanty limitations upon his authority, and that the career of the Congo Free State which began on a basis of philanthropy and free trade has resulted merely in the substitution of the state for individual slave owners, while the methods employed and the results to the slaves have been substantially unchanged, and the free trade has resolved itself into a state monopoly of about three-fourths of the business of the country. The exposure of these conditions by missionaries and travelers has resulted in practical admission of their truth by the Belgian authorities, but whether reforms will be accomplished seems doubtful. The native population is said to be about thirty millions, and in spite of efforts to encourage immigration the white population is only about two thousand.

The statistics for 1900 show exports of about $10,000,000, and imports exceeding $8,000,000, the increase being 25 per cent. over the figures for the preceding year, but by far the major part being with Belgium. The Congo Free State and Uganda, with the adjacent regions included under the British protectorate, extend across the African continent. The Uganda country includes the headquarters of the Nile, and consequently the domination of Egyptian prosperity. In the matter of trade this East African section bids fair to prove considerably more valuable than the Congo country to the westward, and it is greatly a matter of regret that not only to the people of Uganda themselves, but to the commercial world at large, that British means and influence are developing Uganda.

A RECORD THAT WRECKS.

When it comes to forgetting history in order to make an apparent basis for an attack upon the government, the St. John Tory organ seems to have a patent obliterative blotter, in consequence of which it is fortunate that its records are not confined to its own keeping. The people of Canada, however, do not forget the record of the Tory party during their long period of power at Ottawa, a record notable in the leaving undone of things they ought to have done, as well as in the doing of things they ought not to have done. For their glaring sins of omission as well as commission they could not plead excuse, and since the people have transferred their affairs to a new business management they have satisfaction occasionally in turning up the old Tory record for sake of comparison with the present.

One of the most notable pieces of satisfaction with the new administration of the Canadian estate is in connection with the establishment of a genuine winter port business upon Canadian soil. This was not a matter for which there had been no agitation during the Tory regime, but the Tories preferred to send the public money out of the country to building up their own ports. St. John, with equal facilities as to what it had when the Liberal party came into office, had been deliberately neglected. No mail steamers even called here, much less made their terminal at a provincial harbor. On the contrary the old government which our morning contemporary supported, spent millions of the people's dollars in aiding to build up Portland and other American ports by subsidizing lines of steamers which not only were not required to cater for Canadian freight, but were empowered to discriminate against it.

Nor was this all, for among our Tory government's sins of omission was palpably that of failing to exhibit to the imperial government the ability of Canada to supply materials required for army and navy needs. If the Tory government had been in power at Ottawa the past year or so, would there have been any Canadian hay or horses or any other products sold for export to South Africa? Certainly not, if the Tory record during the imperial government bought horses and many shipments of other things in the United States then, but evidently were aware that Canada could supply anything of the sort, or even had harbors with connecting rail facilities for shipping them. How could the imperial government even surmise Canadian facilities for entering into such business in winter when even the Canadian mail steamers loaded their cargoes in the United States?

In view of such a record as this following utterance by our morning contemporary takes upon it a peculiar tinge of greenness which savors of both jealousy at Liberal success and would-be ignorance of past conditions. "It is settled that the army horses from Canada will be shipped from St. John instead of a foreign port. The imperial government could have no reason, except ignorance or indifference for choosing Portland. This want of knowledge or interest may be excused in a government at London, since it was equally displayed at Ottawa, where there was greater reason to expect knowledge and concern."

A few years ago, when it was a case of "ignorance or indifference for choosing Portland" as the winter port of Canada, our contemporary was silent. During the Egyptian war and at other times when the imperial government might equally well have purchased supplies from Canada, there was "want of knowledge or interest in the government at London," but our contemporary was silent and the then government at Ottawa was without concern.

Will our contemporary kindly cut out and preserve for future reference the record of the fact sealed as it has been in the old volume of the indignity of Canada, but strong in the minds of those who today benefit by the winter port of St. John, that up to 1886 the government at Ottawa subsidized an American port instead of a Canadian port, that up to 1885 never a dollar was paid for a Canadian winter port service, and that in 1885 the subsidy of $80,000 to the Beaver line was only given to St. John on the threat of resignation of our two local members, Mr. J. D. Hazen and Mr. John Cheseby, if it were not so given.

A COSTLY PHILANTHROPY.

The more the proposed purchase of the McLeod wharf for $40,000 is considered, the greater appears the philanthropy of the city fathers. But unfortunately the aldermanic philanthropists are generous with the money of the taxpayers and such generosity is inclined to be resented by those who foot the bills. The history of the property in question is sufficient in itself to prove the unreasonableness of the present transaction. The McLeod wharf was formerly owned by George McLeod and the late Alexander Keith, Mr. Keith, in 1873, disposed of his interest in the wharf to Mr. McLeod, taking back as security a mortgage for $16,000 on the one half interest of the entire property. This means that in 1873 the entire wharf property and buildings were worth $22,000. Some $4,000 was paid on account of the principal of this mortgage in 1874, leaving $12,000 due. Nothing more was paid and finally as the interest was not being paid the heirs of Alexander Keith, as appears by the records of the Supreme Court in Equity, brought action on Oct. 3, 1886, for foreclosure of this mortgage. The foreclosure suit was settled or compromised by the payment of $8,000 in full of principal, interest and costs. This settlement was made a little less than four years ago. That means that less than four years ago, the half interest in the McLeod wharf was bought in by Mr. George McLeod for $8,000. If the half interest had been worth more than that amount it is fair to assume that the suit would have been continued and the property sold to settle the claim in full. In other words the persons primarily interested considered the entire property to be of no greater value than $16,000. It may have been the knowledge of these facts which prompted Mayor Robertson to the conclusion in 1897 that the wharf could be bought for $30,000 and justified his recommendation to the common council in the purchase at that figure. If Mr. George McLeod bought the mortgage interest in an entire half of the wharf for $8,000 in 1897 why should the city pay him $40,000 for the entire property now? The history of the property itself proves conclusively that it has deteriorated steadily in value since its purchase by Mr. McLeod in 1873 and justifies the conclusion that it is worth even less now than it was in 1897.

Yet in 1897, we are credibly informed, the McLeod wharf was actually offered to the city for not more than $25,000 and the mayor's recommendation leads one to the natural conclusion that it could have then been purchased for $20,000. The extent of the philanthropy of the aldermen who are now urging the purchase for $40,000 is therefore just $20,000. But $20,000 of philanthropy at the expense of the taxpayers is more than the board of aldermen will have the hardihood to justify.

THE COTTON MILLS OUTLOOK.

The city is to be congratulated upon the highly promising status that the new enterprise of the St. John cotton mills has now assumed. It is very gratifying to find that the city authorities have granted the necessary encouragement to the promoters of the new business, by exempting the mills from taxation for a period and agreeing to supply them with water. These assurances having been settled, the new ownership are losing no time in perfecting their plans, and the news article which we print today reviewing the situation in the country at large is full of interesting data which will go far to convince even the most sceptical that the industry is one in the future which they may have abundant faith.

The fact that St. John has local capital and enterprise sufficient to take hold of and develop such a business as this is a matter for considerable local pride and satisfaction. It is satisfactory to note that the gentlemen who have had the courage of their convictions to undertake this project bid fair to meet a decent reward for their labors and investment, and it is to be hoped that in the years to come the mills may continue to be conducted with as efficient business management as that which has brought their resumption now to such a pleasing threshold. The circumstances of existing conditions seem to be most favorable. With raw cotton at about eight cents in the market and no immediate prospect of its straying far from that figure, manufacturers have cause to be satisfied and operations can be conducted upon a solid basis for wholesome business.

REASSURE YOUR NEIGHBOR.

It is very evident from the number of letters received by The Telegraph in regard to the smallpox outbreak in this city that the public are keenly anxious to aid the Board of Health in doing everything possible to stamp out the disease. No good purpose can be served by repeated iterations of such statements, however, for we believe the Board of Health is now thoroughly cognizant of the fact that the city is looking to them to do their utmost, with the greatest expedition and promptness and care, to attain this end. If errors have been made, they are not likely now to be repeated. The progress of the disease has been exceedingly limited and the majority of the population have now been vaccinated. The occasion for alarm has therefore totally passed and it is now merely a question of a few weeks when, if the current precautions continue to be enforced, our city will be as free from the loathsome disease as it ever was. It is a matter of patience to wait and watch and guard against further contamination, but that is an easy matter. No stranger visiting St. John need fear to accidentally encounter contagion. It is not a thing that runs in the water or is carried on the breeze. Eternal vigilance is the price of safety. Our city authorities are aware of this fact and as they know it the city is safe.

THAT ROYAL TRAIN.

The repeated talk of our morning contemporary about the royal train having been built in Canada is amusing to anyone conversant with the facts, because it knows, or if it does not it ought to know, that the workmen who performed the task of constructing and finishing the cars were imported from the United States expressly for the purpose and when they had finished their contract they went home again, Canada having been little if any better for their labor except in retaining its result. For all practical purposes the cars might just as well have been built outside the dominion and no doubt they would have been if any American concerns could have constructed them within the necessary time. Yet the morning Tory organ has been trading upon this misrepresentation in order, as usual, to befog and deceive its readers. Who was it that so tersely made that remark about the telling of only half a truth being the worst kind of a lie?

ple Board for their operations as an independent concern. If this condition can be maintained it will redound materially to the city's credit and benefit. The cotton manufacturing business in Canada has grown to deservedly great proportions and the conducting of a factory here with an output of half a million dollars worth of goods per year, the whole under local ownership and management, will prove a very material element in the prosperous development of the city.

REASSURE YOUR NEIGHBOR.

It is very evident from the number of letters received by The Telegraph in regard to the smallpox outbreak in this city that the public are keenly anxious to aid the Board of Health in doing everything possible to stamp out the disease. No good purpose can be served by repeated iterations of such statements, however, for we believe the Board of Health is now thoroughly cognizant of the fact that the city is looking to them to do their utmost, with the greatest expedition and promptness and care, to attain this end. If errors have been made, they are not likely now to be repeated. The progress of the disease has been exceedingly limited and the majority of the population have now been vaccinated. The occasion for alarm has therefore totally passed and it is now merely a question of a few weeks when, if the current precautions continue to be enforced, our city will be as free from the loathsome disease as it ever was. It is a matter of patience to wait and watch and guard against further contamination, but that is an easy matter. No stranger visiting St. John need fear to accidentally encounter contagion. It is not a thing that runs in the water or is carried on the breeze. Eternal vigilance is the price of safety. Our city authorities are aware of this fact and as they know it the city is safe.

THAT ROYAL TRAIN.

The repeated talk of our morning contemporary about the royal train having been built in Canada is amusing to anyone conversant with the facts, because it knows, or if it does not it ought to know, that the workmen who performed the task of constructing and finishing the cars were imported from the United States expressly for the purpose and when they had finished their contract they went home again, Canada having been little if any better for their labor except in retaining its result. For all practical purposes the cars might just as well have been built outside the dominion and no doubt they would have been if any American concerns could have constructed them within the necessary time. Yet the morning Tory organ has been trading upon this misrepresentation in order, as usual, to befog and deceive its readers. Who was it that so tersely made that remark about the telling of only half a truth being the worst kind of a lie?

WILL ACCEPT CARNEGIE'S BOUNTY FOR PUBLIC LIBRARY

for it. To accept Mr. Carnegie's money would be selling the rights of the people for a dollar and a quarter per head, about the fee of a private vaccination. It was evident that the majority of the aldermen were in favor of accepting money from a man they never saw and the regretted a stain was about to be recorded against the city.

Ald. Baxter followed with a speech, not without eloquence though a failure, so far as the motive of convincing his associates was involved. He denounced Mr. Carnegie without mercy. He condemned the manner in which he accumulated his wealth, referring particularly to him in the relation of capital to labor and recalling the Homestead strike. Were we going to facilitate our independence of spirit by accepting money from this converted Pro Boer who is going about buying titles who could not obtain except for the money which he got, cutting his employees from $1.25 to 81 a day and having them shot down when they refused to submit? asked the smooth faced alderman. He pictured the principles of independence maintained by the men who founded the city and asked if these were going to be abandoned by selling out to a man of Mr. Carnegie's record, a man who was the enemy to ending the war between labor and capital. In accepting the money of the capitalist, St. John would be acting as his advertising agency and agreeing to perpetuate his memory for a money consideration.

In the course of his speech the alderman used arguments that St. John could provide a new building out of the sum it proposed to assess annually. About $100,000 would be required to provide a site for Mr. Carnegie's building, the interest being about $500 would make $5,500 to be assessed each year. His solution to provide a building without Mr. Carnegie's money was to assess for $5,500 a year, but set apart only $2,500 a year for maintenance, the balance to go for providing for the cost of a new building.

Another argument which Alderman Baxter used was the library should be placed in a general public building which would have to be built in St. John during the next ten years.

Others to the Rescue.

Ald. Millidge said that Ald. Baxter had committed an outrage insulting a man who was honored by all the English world, a man whose gift of two millions to advance education in Scotland could not be called princely because no prince could do the same thing. Why should not the man he favored who was distributing his wealth during his life and not waiting until death when it could be of no use to the owner. He was amazed to hear denunciation of such a man and was satisfied the people did not approve of it. Ald. White said the flood of eloquence

PET STOCK SHOW.

Promise of Success--Time of Receiving Entries Extended.

The monthly meeting of the New Brunswick Poultry, Kennel and Pet Stock Association was held Monday in the rooms, Market building, and was largely attended. The entries for the show, in all classes, during the past few days, have come in very rapidly and the show will be now an assured success. There will be probably 200 dogs on exhibition. At the request of some of the members who stated that some of their friends had come to enter the time for closing entries was extended until Saturday next. The opening of the exhibition is Wednesday, Nov. 20, and entries will be received by the secretary, Thomas McCullough, 42 Carlton street. The building of benches and other preparations at the St. Andrew's rink will begin tomorrow and it is expected that everything will be in readiness for the opening night of the best exhibition of its kind ever held in the city. The entries are open to all fanciers of dogs, fowls and pet stock of any kind. No pedigrees for the dogs are required.

The River Steamers.

The river steamers have already this season made more trips between Fredericton and St. John than they made in all the navigation season of 1900. WHY CROUP IS FATAL.

When croup attacks your child you must be ready for it. It comes as an accompaniment to an ordinary cough, or it may attack without warning. All children develop quickly, and when any kind of cough appears there should be something at hand to stop it with promptness. Many a child has choked to death with croup because the right remedy was not convenient. Every one should know that the right safeguard for a child's cough or any cough is Adson's Balm. Adson's Balm is a house, croup is always easily checked and relieved.

LOSS OF THE PARKER.

Rescue of St. John Crew Was Brilliant.

GROPING IN DARKNESS. Line Shot from Shore But the Crew Could Hardly Handle It, as Seas Washed Over Them While Deck-Load Floated About--To Safety in Breches Buoy.

The Boston Globe, in its report of the disaster to the St. John schooner John S. Parker, at Orleans, Mass., says the rescue of the crew by the life savers was a brilliant piece of work. The report reads:

The only possible chance to save the lives of the unfortunate on board was to reach the vessel with a line and take them off in the buoy. The vessel's sails and spars could be dinedly made out through the darkness.

Capt. Charles aimed the shot for her foremast, and soon had the satisfaction of knowing that the line had struck the vessel, as it did not come in. After waiting what seemed a long time, and receiving no signal from the craft, Captain Charles, fearing that those on board had not been able to make the line fast, shot another.

This one, too, reached the schooner, and a moment later those on board were pulling in the line which was to save them from death that was staring them in the face.

The apparatus was placed freely, and the life-savers got ready. The vessel, however, continued working to the southward, and was inshore so that the line kept slackening up, and the position of the apparatus had to be changed, making it very difficult to do satisfactory work.

It was impossible to tell what was being done on board in the darkness, but after a time it became possible to send off a big line with the breeches buoy attached.

Then, to the intense satisfaction of the life-savers, the report was given to pull the buoy ashore.

The sea was running so wildly with the hawser passing through a mile of sea, that it was impossible to pull the buoy in by hand. The station's big horse was harnessed to it, however, and a short time later the vessel was hauled on the beach, drenched to the skin, bareheaded and more dead than alive.

He was able to explain the difficulty they had in making the line fast; as the crew were in the fore rigging with the seas washing all over them most of the time, and the deck-load of lumber washing about, making it next to impossible to handle the line which shot off to sea.

He said the others left behind were in a terrible state of mind and danger for the breeches buoy to be sent back to them.

The vessel had now worked more to the southward, however, and the gear had to be planted in a new place, causing delay, but at length it was again made fast, and the life buoy was sent off again.

A second time it came ashore with its human freight, and another poor fellow was safe, his gear being taken to the shore. He seemed certain that knowing no bounds, he, too, urged the heroic life-savers, spurring them to their utmost effort to save the other unfortunate on board the doomed craft.

Daylight was breaking by this time, and the men on both beach and vessel could see what those on the other end of the line were doing. Another shift of the apparatus was made and then, the vessel having fetched up hard and tight, the other four men were hauled on board the doomed craft.

OUTLOOK BRIGHT.

Encouraging Conditions for Cotton Mills' Start.

SELECTING A MANAGER. This Done Full Force Will Be Employed and Large Industry Will Be Underway--Review of Situation Makes Hopeful Prospect.

The announcement that the preliminary arrangements for the resumption of cotton manufacturing in this city have been practically completed and that the mills will reopen in full blast at an early day, is now authoritatively confirmed.

As the new proprietors have selected a capable manager for the dozen or more applicants for the position and he can be got upon the ground to superintend the entire part of the business, a full force of operatives will be engaged and the cheerful whir of wheels will once more resound throughout the too long idle establishments.

Investigating the prospects for success in this industry, the Telegraph has compiled some facts which will prove interesting to the average reader as well as encouraging to the promoters.

This depression, it is found, however, is due to local causes apart from a worldwide condition that unfavorably affected the cotton business for a year or so and from which state the business generally is now recovering.

There was first of all a very high price for raw materials last year and the mills put up their prices accordingly. But the market for the goods was created. If the market in China had been in its usual condition the consumptive demand would not have been so small.

It is now generally recovering. The price reason for the low state of the market in Canada is to be found in the over capitalization of the Canadian Cotton Company. There are four companies in the country today.

The Dominion Cotton Mills Company, which is practically in the same way as the other companies, which gave no dividend until last year, and the Dominion Cotton Mills Company, which paid a dividend of 10 per cent.

During the first three or four years there was no money spent upon improvement of machinery, and there was a floating debt. When the new management took hold four years ago, one of their conditions was that a million and a half to two millions of dollars be expended on improvements of the plant.

WILL GO VIA ST. JOHN.

Hon. Mr. Blair Wires Good News--Steamer Monmouth Will Take Horses from Here.

Through the minister of railways and canal the shipment of horses which were to have been sent through Portland, Me., to South Africa, will go from this port.

It had been about settled that the horses would leave by steamer from the Maine port, and the first announcement that the shipment would be made from this port was received yesterday by William Thomson & Co. from Hon. A. G. Blair.

Messrs. Troop & Son have received word that the Elder-Dunster line steamer Monmouth will arrive here about Nov. 20th from Newport News to take on board the first cargo of horses.

The Smallpox Situation. So far the smallpox cases reported to the board of health number 42. No new smallpox cases were reported to the board of health Friday.

One of the inmates at the epidemic hospital is announced to be in a serious condition. The patient is a little girl named Shierwood, whose mother lives on River street, Indiantown. The child was a sufferer from hip disease when she was stricken with smallpox.

Saturday night and Sunday eight new cases of smallpox were reported. The death of one of the inmates of the epidemic hospital is also reported, the victim being Mrs. Boyea, whose infant, too, contracted the disease and is confined at the hospital.

The new cases are: Ethel McGuire, 19 years old, who resides with her relative, Frank Rafferty on the Marsh Road, about three miles from the city; William Edward, 70 years old, 10 Haymarket Square; his daughter-in-law, Mrs. H. E. Alward, 20 years old, same address; Harriet Deane, 65 years old, 45 Market Street; old Hamilton, 5 years; 45 Market Street; Edward, 70 years old, 10 Haymarket Square; his daughter-in-law, Mrs. H. Many Being Vaccinated. A canvass of the physicians who have been conducting the compulsory vaccination under the regulations of the board of health, shows that the people are complying well with the instructions of the board. The total free vaccinations during the five days of last week upon which the physicians were engaged is about 3,000, and there is yet a great deal of ground to cover. The reports from the physicians show that the sale of cotton goods, and for the first two or three months of this year business as a consequence was slack. Besides the loss of the market there was a general reaction from an unusually good business condition that had prevailed for two or three years.

Dr. Melvin's territory comprises Queen's ward south of and including the southern side of Princess street. He found that of the people in his district, who are considered fashionable, vaccinated by private physicians before the house to house visitation commenced. With two or three exceptions, Dr. Melvin says he received courteous treatment. He reported three families for disobedience.

Of 228 vaccinated in Stanley ward, Dr. Melvin's territory, 100 were vaccinated the treatment for the first time. In only two instances did he encounter opposition.

Dr. Melvin has made two reports against persons in his district, Duke's ward, who refused to comply with the law. One of the individuals was a Christian Scientist, so far Dr. Macaulay has vaccinated 162 persons. He met a surprisingly large number who had never been vaccinated.

Dr. Skinner, whose district is Sydney street, vaccinated over 200 people. Instead of meeting objection he found the people waiting and anxious to submit to the compulsory treatment. Of those he vaccinated there were very few of the adults who had not been operated upon earlier in life.

Vaccination kept the North End physicians fairly busy last week. From Tuesday noon to Saturday night, Dr. Jas. A. McIntyre, as public vaccinator in Lower ward, vaccinated 222 persons. Nearly all were favorable to it.

Dr. Gilchrist vaccinated those living on Adelaide street, Elm street and Main street from Scott's corner to Elm street. He treated 215, but encountered seven people who refused to receive the vaccine.

Dr. Roberts vaccinated 120. He met few who objected and these said they would be treated by their own physicians.

In the West End Dr. Day has vaccinated 205 in Guy's ward. The doctor found everybody willing and anxious to have the services. He could have vaccinated more, but the board of health was 60 points a day.

Dr. Wheeler, who officiates in Brooks ward, vaccinated 300 so far. He, too, found the people favorable to the treatment.

Dr. W. A. Christie and Dr. Lewin have between them vaccinated from 300 to 400 St. John's mill the former management years ago, the interest and expense account being too much for the earning capacity.

Dr. Broderick, of Coburg street, has during the five days, vaccinated 100 persons and says that the work is going along steadily.

Dr. Andrews, of Garden street, has during the five days, vaccinated 260. Dr. Andrews says he met with objection at several residences, but on the whole the citizens in his district have been anxiously looking for the doctor and thanks were expressed on frequent occasions. Dr. Andrews says that the great majority of persons that he has examined had never been vaccinated; one notable one was a man 70 years of age, who was vaccinated for the first time.

In addition to the numbers quoted all of the physicians have vaccinated many people in their private practices.

In many instances after the public vaccinators have visited houses the occupants have decided to undergo the treatment at their own expense by their physician. In such cases the board of health physicians think they should receive the usual fee from the board of health, the vaccinations being in consequence of their visits or representations.

It is felt on all hands that the outlook in Canada today for the cotton manufacturing of such goods as the country requires and for the maintenance of the manufacture as a dividend paying industry, is as good as it ever has been. The mills can make goods here suitable for local requirements better than they can be made anywhere else and there is no reason why the production should not be satisfactory. It is true that the cotton mills are closed up, but others are opening. The Bradford and Coaticook mills are shut down, but additional machinery has been put in former mills to move advanced machinery their output. The Dundas mill is not running at present, but it may resume, and the Colonial, Boscawen and Prizing Company, of Montreal, are having a new mill built at Grand Mere, near Three Rivers, which, however, it will take some time to complete.

It is believed that if desired the St. John's mills could advantageously run half their machinery for cloths for printing purposes and find a ready market to Canadian mills in that line at profitable prices, as those mills are now buying cloths in England for the purpose. There ought also be advantage in the manufacture of a special line of grey cotton cloth, which will take the active demand on account of coming scarcity.

As far as the local consumption of cotton is concerned it may be said that the proprietors of the St. John's mills have assurances of being able to place upwards of one hundred thousand dollars worth per year through local merchants. They have also had correspondence with merchants in other Canadian cities with a view to handling exclusively these mills' lines of manufacture, but it is probable that they will prefer to sell in the open market. They have received an offer from a New York house to take practically the total output of the mills for export and also to take $30,000 worth of stock in the enterprise, but such a proposition is not deemed at present most advisable for acceptance. It is known that the wish of the trade in Canada to keep the St. John's mills running on account of their output being opposed in a degree to the manufacture of the Canadian Colored Cotton Company--that is, with the St. John's mills in operation that company could not have things all its own way.

The consumption of cotton in the maritime provinces is about $1,250,000 per year, of which about a million a year comes from the upper Canadian mills. The Halifax mill is at present shipping its product to Montreal for preparation of the finer grades. The Moncton mill supplies the maritime provinces with grey cottons. The Windsor mill is principally occupied with heavy goods. The Gibson mill, which is leased to the Canadian Cotton Company to use the production of a certain number of looms until next year, is producing flannellets and print goods. The average production of the cotton mills is about equal to the amount of their capital. The Canadiana Company produces about $3,000,000 per year and sells about one-third in Quebec and the rest in other provinces. The St. John's mills will be capable of turning out about $600,000 worth per year. It is expected that considerable new machinery will be equipped, including new cards and a German rapping plant.

THE BAY OF FUNDY.

Announcement of Additional Improvements in Navigation Aids.

The marine department has made arrangements for changes in lights and buoys to be made along the coast of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia other than those mentioned last week. They will be learned of with much pleasure by captains and fishermen. It is proposed to change the Brier Island Light from a fixed light to a revolving or intermittent one. A new light is to be placed on Cherry Island, near Parsonquoddy Bay, A. St. John. They were sent by wire each night, and the publication of the figures was calculated to induce tourists to visit New Brunswick. The temperature reports now discontinued, will be supplied the Herald again next year.

The 32nd anniversary of Carmarthen street Methodist church was observed by special services Sunday, with Rev. G. M. Campbell preaching in the morning, a rally sermon in the afternoon and Rev. Mr. Teasdale delivering a discourse in the evening. In the morning the financial statement was submitted by Mr. Hutchings. It showed an indebtedness of $3,400 and on the parsonage $1,500. The value of the whole property was $10,000. The annual expenditures were $300, and the annual income $240. Last year $231.77 was raised by the church for different purposes. Mr. Hutchings explained that it was the wish of the trustees to renovate and improve the church and that they trusted such would be accomplished by the generous contributing of the congregation.

THE SMALLPOX AT HATFIELD'S POINT.

Dr. Somerville has been practicing for years at Hatfield's Point, and ought not even by implication be injured by thoughtless writers.

As Navigation Closing Draws Near. The Indian town water front is almost deserted and the majority of the river woodhousers have made the final trip of the season. Still there are the adventurous few who give out that they will be in active operation until ice forms. The Star Line steamers will keep running until the year gives evidence of freezing.

The Star Line company's farewell trip was made Nov. 13. Monday the Aberdeen, the Star boat which plies between Fredericton and Woodstock, came down to Indiantown, and will go into winter quarters at Marble Cove.

AROUND THE TOWN.

The habit which many ladies have of taking dogs into stores with them is one that is condemned in no unmeasured terms by proprietors of establishments who have suffered in that respect.

The following comes from the country, and tells about a man now dead, but who during life exhibited a tenderness of heart and a candour of speech, a frankness of opinion and a quality of hospitality that won for him from others certain likes and dislikes.

One day a good clergyman, in the prosecution of his holy labors came to the village and on the occasion of a service of the story, with every semblance of hearty prayer, invited him to sit at his board that evening and become aware of what he could do for the souls of his parish.

Compulsory vaccination is not by any means popular with the general public of St. John, and anathemas have been frequently heaped upon the board of health for insisting that all must undergo the process.

Some days ago, while walking down King street, I met a well-known lady of this city and a moment afterwards an equally well-known citizen.

Public school teachers have many opportunities to notice just how certain thoughts and impressions fit themselves around a child's mind and how unconsciously they come to regard certain public questions.

FUSILIERS' NEW COLORS.

Interesting Reference in London Publication to Presentation at St. John.

The London Army and Navy Illustrated of October 26 presents handsome illustrations of the King's colors and the regimental color recently presented to the 62nd St. John Fusiliers, accompanied by the following:

"Throughout the whole of the Duke of Cornwall and York's tour through Canada His Royal Highness has lost no opportunity of paying honor to the troops of the Dominion who have in South Africa shown themselves to be as good soldiers as any in the empire.

My Dear Friends—I have come to the conclusion that it is due to you, and to myself, to make you fully acquainted with the circumstances which prevented me from taking part in our church services yesterday.

I am most willing, my dear friends, to comply with any request of yours. But I must not shrink from my duty of speaking truth to you.

TO HIS CONGREGATION.

Rev. J. deSoyres' Circular Letter, Which is of Interest.

Rev. J. de Soyres has addressed the following circular letter to his congregation. It will be read with a good deal of interest by St. Mary's.

We went together to the board of health, and there learned that the rule was inflexible. Then we consulted those of our colleagues who were accessible; and neither the rector of Trinity, nor the rector of St. Jude's, the only men we could find in a position to intercede.

I have learned with some amazement that the fact of my having spent a day on my Sunday school, while awaiting a call to other patients, caused alarm to some members of our congregation, and led to the ordering of measures of purification which were not necessary.

I am reminded of the accounts often given me by the sisters of our congregation of the action of my grandfather, the Reverend George M. Armstrong, on his Sunday school, while awaiting a call to other patients.

It looks as if we had come to a weaker age—to an age of nerves, and morbid imagination, and unreasoning panic. Our physical condition is such that we are not able to face the problems of the new century, because they hold fast to the old faith, and practice the well tried virtues of their forefathers.
