The Happy Woman.

Her days are filled with homely tasks, Her heart with love's content ; . Whate'er she has, she enjoys, nor asks For what Heaven bath not sent.

She looks out toward the purple hills Through sivall-paned windows gray; sinne ripples o'er the sills, And the home-made carpet gay.

A soul serene, through clear, mild eyes, Her baby gazes forth; His silence seems than speech more wise. His smile a cherub's mirth,

A home-spun woof of noiseless deeds, Her life makes little show ; For words come hardly for her needs And ne'er like rivers flow. And ne'er of duty doth she prate,

Most needed, whether small or great,

But straightway does the deed

God forgive me, I pushed the little fellow a gentle fashion, When I finished, he said: It has taught you a lesson, Ella dear. And it was all that taught you a lesson, Ella dear. And that was all. It want to speak to you; and General and red and grey worsted skating cap, and the little red mittens, as if it was but yesterday. But I looked coldly at him, the door opened and shot, the little feet went slowly down stairs. I heard him go out; unfasten the gate. Looking out of the window, I saw the little fellow lift his feet went slowly down stairs. I heard him go out; unfasten the gate. Looking out of the window, I saw the little fellow lift his feet went slowly down stairs.
