Within a radius of twelve miles, taking Wallace as the centre, Methodism has produced sixteen ministers during the last quarter of a century. Ten of these are in full connexion, one of the number having superannuated at last Conference; two are mittee comprising the President, the Vice on probation, and two are pursuing their studies. Two others are in the American work, beyond the Border. We have had the curiosity to ascertain the average years of our Conference, as i stands to-day on the Minutes. It appears hat the ministers in full work, numbering 159, have served on an average ten and half years per man, or an aggregate of 1714 years. We are inclined to the opinion that this is considerably below the average of Ministerial service on this Continent $74,839.65 that the recent extraordinary increase of 14.443,12 Candidates has given us an uncommon ratio of average calculation. BOOTS AND SHOES.

WHITE, BLUE,

From the far-off fields of earthly toil, A goodly host, they come, And sounds of music are on the ear 'Tis the song of the harvest home. The weariness and the weeping, The darkness has all passed by, And a glorious Sun has arisen-The Sun of eternity.

We've seen those faces in days of yore, When the dust was on their brow. And the scalding tear upon their cheek; Let us look at the laborers now. We think of the life-long sorrow, And the wilderness days of care; We try to trace the tear-drops, But no scars of grief are there.

There's a mystery of soul-chastened joy, Lit up with sunlit bues, Like morning-flowers most beautiful When wet with midnight dews. There are depths of earnest meaning In each true and trustful gaze, Telling of wondrous lessons Learned in their pilgrim days.

One had climbed the rugged mountain side Twas a bleak and wintry day-The tempest had scattered his precio And he wept as he turned awr But a stranger band had watere That seed on a distant shore, And the laborers now are meeting Who never had met before.

And one, he had toiled 'mid burning sands When the scorching sun was high; He had grasped the plow with a fevered band And then laid him down to die; But another, and yet another, Had filled that deserted field, Nor vainly the seed they scattered, Where a brother's care had tilled.

Some with eager step went boldly forth, Broad-casting o'er the land; Some watered the scarcely budding blade With a tender, gentle hand. There's one, her young life was blighted By the withering touch of woe; Her days were sad and weary, And she never went forth to sow

But there rose from her lonely couch of pair The fervent, pleading prayer. She looks on many a radiant bower, And she reads the answers there. Yes, sowers and reapers are meeting, A rejoicing host they come; Will you join the echoing chorus? 'Tis the song of the harvest home. -Drifted Snow flakes.

In the conflict of feeling his good resolutions strong, for the helping hand of human kindness was teaching him to lay hold of the helping hand of God.

"Here, Harry," said Mr. S., who had been writing rapidly at his desk, "take this." And folding a note containing a warm and urgen nessage to a city missionary whom he well knew, he thrust it into Ransom's hand with careful directions for finding the necessary street and house.

" It it was possible to leave my office I would go with you," said he, but when you've been through Mr. L.'s hands come directly to me

It is needless to say that the missionary re ceived his visitor with the pordiality of a brother, and lost no time in attending to his wants. A good dinner was the first thing, then a visit to the bath-room, then clothes. Finding no coat in the gift wardrobe, the good man promptly pulled off his own, and put it on the back of the conjused stranger. Well dressed, and neatly trimmed in a neighbouring barber-shop, Harry Ransom looked quite himself again. He now returned to his old friend who received him "with acclamations.
