Workmen and Soldiers Call Anew For Peace

Peace Upon Basis of No Annexations or Indemnities Urged by All Russian Congress of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates—Urge Peace Conference

By Courier Leased Wire

Petrograd, June 27.—Resolutions deprecating the attempted demonstrations of Friday and Saturday in Petrograd on the part of the Maximalists have been adopted by the All-Russian Congress of Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates. The resolutions declare that such demonstrations are fatal to the objects of the revolution and that no such manifestations should be undertaken without the sanction of the workmen's and soldiers' delegates.

The resolutions reiterate the urgency of an appeal to the democracies of all nations to influence their governments to adopt peace formulas based on no annexations or indemnities and to contribute in every way possible to the convocation of an international congress of Socialists with a view to the restoration of the International Solidarity of Workers and the elaboration of definitive conditions of peace and of measures to permit of them being put into practice.

The attention of the democracies of all the belligerent powers is drawn by the resolution to the lack of energy shown in these protests against recent items of their government regarding their usurpatory war aims, which it is asserted place the Russian revolution in an extremely difficult position and hampers an internal union of workers.

With a view to a solution of these problems the congress in the resolutions urges the absolute necessity of sending immediately deputations to allied and neutral countries and inviting to Russia Socialist delegations from these countries. The congress protests against the difficulties which Imperialist governments have placed in the way of sending such delegations.

The resolutions say that the congress consider it indispensable that the provisional government for them will take every measure to accelerate the revision of treaties with allied governments with a view to categorical denunciation of any usurpation policy and putting into practice the Foreign policy outlined by the democracy. They call for the speedy overhauling and democratization of the personnel of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the diplomatic body.

REPRISALS TAKEN ON GERMAN ARMY ALONE

Massacring of Women and Children in Atonement For Teuton Raids Repulsive to British Nation; Allied Airmen Wreak Vengeance on Huns

By Courier Leased Wire

London, June 26, via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.—In the House of Lords today Lord Derby dealing with the question of reprisals for German air raids, emphasized the fact that our aircraft were daily bombing positions in the enemy's rear. He declared on the authority of the head of our air craft service in France, that he would be well within the mark if he said that for every bomb the German dropped behind our lines we dropped a hundred behind the German lines. All that bombing was done with military object, but the idea of an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, of massacring women and children was absolutely repulsive to the British Nation.

Lord Derby said the country would associate itself with the suggestion that we should not try to imitate the German brutality. He emphasized also that reprisals must have definite military objectives, such as the blowing up of bridges and munition works. The minister of war said the government had given the military authorities an absolutely free hand in the use of their aircraft in order to secure the best military results. Everything possible was being done at present to secure the defence of the country by the means of anti-aircraft. There was the closest possible co-operation with the army.

Dealing with the situation of giving warning of air raids Lord Derby stated that the naval and military authorities unanimously giving warning might do more harm than good.

Report of Investigating Commission Viewed in Various Lights, Kitchener, Asquith and Others Being Held Responsible; No One Now Associated With Force Is Blamed

By Courier Leased Wire

New York, June 27.—An Associated Press Cable from London this morning says: "The report of the Commission which has been investigating the Mesopotamia expedition is treated by the press today as a first class sensation. Editorials contain bitter reproaches of persons contained and de-manded their dismissal. 'Effete traditions, cheese-paring policy, and general dry rot and inefficiency' of the Indian command are condemned by the newspapers. The anti-Asquith Press largely blames the late government. One paper calls for former Premier Asquith's impeachment. On the other hand the Times says it is only fair to admit that his cabinet was led completely astray by military advisers. The Times thinks the culpability of J. Austen Chamberlain, Secretary for India almost wholly technical.

"The Times places a large share of the blame on the late Lord Kitchener's highly centralized control of the Indian army.

The paper says the report goes far to vindicate Lord Curzon's resignation as Viceroy of India twelve years ago, as the ground of disagreement with Kitchener's scheme. The general approval is voiced of the government's decision to publish the report and tell the country the truth.

A comparison is drawn of Germany's attempts to explain Messines, and other reverses on the western front. Amid a flood of recrimination room is found for satisfaction that nobody who is chiefly blamed is now associated with the Mesopotamian force, that the blunders have been retrieved and to that extent they are less tragic than the irrevocable collapse of the general expedition.

The Report. London, June 27.—The most scathing and outspoken official report of the investigation of any military operations since the war began, not even excluding the report on the ill-fated Dardanelles expedition, was made public in a blue book issued last night. This was the report of the commission which has been investigating the Mesopotamia expedition.

Put briefly, the report finds that the expedition was a justifiable military enterprise, but was undertaken "with insufficient force and inadequate preparation," and that its initial failure, with the loss of Kut, was due to lack of foresight, mistakes and miscalculations. The report frankly declares that the shortcomings revealed, reflect discredit upon the organizing aptitude of all concerned and apportion the chief responsibility on Gen. Nixon, the former commander of the British forces in Mesopotamia, and upon the Indian Government, under instructions from the home government. Many Censured. J. Austen Chamberlain, secretary for India, and Gen. Barrow, military secretary of the India office in London, and the war committee of the Cabinet itself also share the responsibility. With regard to the Government's military and naval advisers, the report says they approved the advance that the papers submitted suggested that their approval was reluctant. They appeared to have anticipated

Freedom of Conscience Proclaimed, Giving Equal Civil and Political Rights to All Regardless of Sect or Religion—Protection of Children

By Courier Leased Wire

Petrograd, June 27.—The Ministry of the Interior has submitted to the provisional government a bill establishing Freedom of Conscience, in which it is proclaimed that possession of civil and political rights no longer depends on religion. For a change of religion official permission will not be needed.

Up to nine years ago a child's religion is determined by its parents, if there is disagreement, the child takes its mother. Over nine years of age, the religion cannot be changed without the consent of the child itself. Eleven years, religion can be changed without the parents' or guardians' consent.

Another important reform policy for courts of administration for the protection of children against illegalities of officials of the Central government or of local self-governing bodies. Every county will have at least one court of administration, to which the Central government can appeal against illegal actions of self-governing bodies; self-governing bodies can appeal from illegalities of the central government, and private citizens can appeal against either.

The minister of public instruction has submitted a bill proclaiming complete freedom of teaching. Heretofore the ministry determined who could and who could not teach in private families. Henceforth families may choose their own teachers. In view of the lack of teachers and professors the minister of war has agreed not to call to the colors any more teachers and to discharge teachers now at the front who are not in the fighting units.

BULGARIA AND U.S. MAY BREAK SOON

Germany Seeking to Induce Her Ally to Sever Relations With U.S.

STRONG PRESSURE

By Courier Leased Wire.

Copenhagen, June 27.—Germany is bringing strong pressure on Bulgaria to induce that country to break off relations with the United States, according to information received here. The population is much against this being done.

The fear is expressed, however, that Premier Radislavoff may have been compelled to purchase concessions, for which he went to Berlin, by a sacrifice of American relations as part payment.

WHY WE ARE FIGHTING. Paris, June 27.—General Foch, the French commander-in-chief, has written a series of articles entitled "Why We Are Fighting," the first of which appears today in the army bulletin. The general tells in clear and simple terms the objects of the war and why a premature peace must not be concluded. He then goes on to show at some length why and how Germany brought on the war, tracing the events of the summer of 1914.

Germany and Holland.

London, June 27.—A despatch from Amsterdam says that several Dutch newspapers approve the agreement between the Dutch and German governments with regard to the seven Dutch merchantmen which were torpedoed off the English coast last February. Holland is to pay Germany a sum equal to the total amount paid for insurance on the merchantmen while Germany undertakes to replace the lost vessels by the cession of a number of German ships now in the Dutch East Indies.

The "Telegraaf," describes the agreement as a pleasant surprise and the last success for Dutch diplomacy since the beginning of the war. The Handelsblad admits that the entente has a right to oppose the agreement as during the war enemy ships may not be transferred to a neutral nation. If the allies, says the paper, wish to be unpleasant they will argue that the transfer of insurance money resembles a purchase. The Handelsblad, however, has reason to believe that the Entente powers will not oppose the agreement.

Question of Ukraine.

Petrograd, June 27.—The declaration of the Ukraine National Assembly claiming autonomy for Ukraine without separation from the rest of Russia, has been commended by the Ukrainian military congress. The Workmen and Soldiers' Deputies will send a delegation to Sweden, France and England to prepare for the concentration of an international conference on the basis of the program adopted by the executive.

HUNS FLEW "OUT OF THE SUN" TO KILL WOMEN AND BABIES IN RECENT RAID OVER ENGLAND

London Daily News Writer's Graphic Picture of Airplane Attack by Foe

CHILDREN MURDERED Advantage All With Invader—Airplanes Small Target for Gunners

Hugh Martin, London Daily News special correspondent, wrote from a South-East English town on Saturday following...

It would be easy to describe a score of tragic episodes or hair-breadth escapes; it is not so easy, under the conditions of the censorship to place what happened on Friday night in its proper perspective.

Military reticence has to be observed but at the same time the business of the special correspondent is to tell the truth. There will, therefore, be gaps in this story, which the reader can fill up as he chooses.

One of the first points to be made clear is that the enemy aviators in the present case knew what they were about. The raid was not a mere reckless baby-killing expedition of the type with which we are so well acquainted, but may fairly be presumed to have had a military objective of some importance, quite apart from the terrorization of the civilian population.

It was certainly not attained; it is doubtful if it ever could be attained by such means; but the Germans may be credited with having made a fairly good try, executed with skill, and, as the sequel showed, not unattended by considerable risk.

As you go through the town and talk to the people you hear of many a little incident that sticks in the memory. An old lady went into a shop leaving her two grand children outside; she rushed out on hearing an explosion, only to pick up the mutilated bodies from the pavement. Three bombs that fell in a well-to-do district all failed to explode; had they done so the result must have been appalling.

One fell in a field where a number of boys were playing cricket. All the boys escaped uninjured; but a girl in the garden of a girls' school two hundred yards away was killed where she stood.

Two horses bolted on hearing the explosions. Both were blown to pieces as they were galloping, and a man who was plucking trying to stop them was also killed. A tradesman shouted to his wife to get behind the big safe in the shop she did so, and he followed her. A moment later the shop was shattered, the safe and cash register hurled from one end of the premises to the other. Both the man and his wife were saved by the safe. Another remarkable escape was that of an old bedridden lady, her daughter and her grand child. The house collapsed, but all three crawled out of the ruins safe and well, although the daughter and her daughter-in-law were injured.

In another district a prominent citizen was killed in his own house by a bomb which fell in the back garden. A man asked a friend to have a glass of wine, and went into the house to get it. When he came out again the friend was lying dead in the road. One member of the town council was injured, though not severely, by a fragment of shell.

Only one fire broke out. It was extinguished without difficulty in a few minutes. So far as I can ascertain, none of the bombs was of the incendiary kind.

The enemy can choose weather and time, with a special view of visibility in relation both to those who look for and those who look at, aircraft. If the weather is suitable, and particularly if there should happen to be a high-lying stratum of mist, his aircraft can travel at such a height as to be almost invisible, and to remain practically invisible, until they dip for the purpose of observation and bomb-dropping. It must be remembered that an aircraft cannot rise to a height of 15,000 feet in time to meet them, and that the only opportunity for a counter attack must occur on the return journey.

So far as anti-aircraft batteries are concerned, their use for the destruction of aeroplanes travelling at a great height, of 30 miles or an hour or over must always remain doubtful, the mark being very different from that presented by a Zeppelin. They force enemy aircraft, however, to remain at such a distance from the earth as to destroy all chances of really accurate bombing, and can do a great deal to dictate the course which aircraft shall follow. There can be no question, that in the present instance our aerial defences, on this side though they were unable to prevent the destruction of His Majesty's ship, the area of the enemy's operations, was not so great as to be a serious menace to our safety.

It is also worth noting that nearly 20 per cent of the enemy forces were ultimately destroyed or captured, with no loss on our side. Such a percentage, if it occurred in a naval engagement, would be regarded as highly satisfactory.

Quebec, June 27.—Sir A. B. Bouthier, President of the Admiralty Court rendered to-day his decision in the case of the proprietor of the collier Hoehelga and the steamer Etolle. The Hoehelga propitiors claimed $20,000 from the proprietors of the Etolle, while the owners of the Etolle claimed that both claimants would pay half of the cost of the collision, the judge paying its own costs. Moreover, the judge remarked that the Etolle should depart from its habit of taking a short cut to reach the shore at the point where the collision occurred, and rely strictly on the laws governing navigation.

Further off, and had run for shelter to the shore, but the majority were standing about in righteous anger. The bomb fell in front of the greengrocer's. There was only one explosion, but thirty-two people—nearly all women and children—were killed on the spot. Nearly the whole staff at the greengrocer's lost their lives; one of the partners was killed by a falling beam, and his brother was injured. Several scores were more or less severely wounded and a number died in hospitals.

Between 25 and 30 shops were partially wrecked, and the contents of the windows strewn about the roadway.

Shops on both sides of the road appear to have been wrecked almost equally for a distance of fifty yards, nearly all, strangely enough, in one direction. The narrow street acted like the barrel of a gun, open at one end and closed at the other, but exactly why this should have been so it is hard to say.

Many of the townfolk declare that this and several other of the bombs must have been "aerial torpedoes" containing a very heavy charge of explosives, and the contention seems to be supported by the discovery at one point of a certain object which looks like part of a torpedo propeller, bearing the number "26" written on it in blue pencil.

One shopkeeper in the marketing street I have referred to, who suffered from a weak heart, fell dead on his own doorstep without being touched. A baby was killed as it lay in its perambulator. A girl shop assistant who was blown through a skylight and fell nearly 20 feet in the room below escaped with hardly a scratch.

WILSON EMPOWERED TO MAKE U.S. DRY

Washington, June 26.—The Administration food control bill passed by the House was re-written yesterday by a Senate committee and probably will be passed to-day by the Senate. The bill empowers the President to prohibit the manufacture of foodstuffs into liquor, the sub-committee adopted provisions which would prohibit manufacture, during the war, of all intoxicating beverages, and empower the President to commandeer existing supplies of distilled spirits, but would authorize the Executive in his discretion to permit the manufacture of distilled, fermented and vinous beverages and fix their alcoholic content.

As re-written the sub-committee draft will be considered to-day by the Agriculture Committee and probably will be reported at once for Senate discussion without material change. Senators Gore, Smith of Georgia, and other prominent in the bitter fight against the legislation have announced their support for the re-drafted measure.

The House prohibition bill, the sub-committee substitute, provides: "That from and after thirty days from the date of the approval of this act it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to use in the manufacture of any intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes any perishable or non-perishable foods or food materials."

"Whenever the President shall find it necessary to conserve the perishable products named he is empowered to permit the use of such products into the manufacture of vinous liquors."

"Whenever in the judgment of the President the public interests would be subserved thereby he is empowered to permit the limited use of the materials mentioned in the manufacture of any intoxicating liquor, and to prescribe the alcoholic content thereof."

Another section adopted would authorize the President to take over any or all distilleries, breweries and other plants producing such products upon payment of a reasonable and just price to distillers, for re-distillation into alcohol for war, medicinal or other non-beverage purposes.

THE SITUATION.

The Huns are making a desperate effort to save Lens, but the indications are that their strenuous exertions will meet with failure. Haig reports that the British have made a notable advance on the town from the East, enemy positions on a front of two miles and to a depth of one thousand yards having passed into their possession.

French troops have scored a notable success on the Aisne front, north west of Hurtlebise. They attained all their objectives and took many prisoners. The Berlin official report admits that "the enemy penetrated our lines at some places."

There have been slight disturbances in Athens, and that is the reason why French troops have been sent there. Taken altogether, however, the new order of things seems to be accepted calmly, and there is certainly much enthusiasm for Venizelos.

Speaking to the U. S. Senate yesterday, Ambassador Sador Baklanoff of the Russian mission said that "Russia rejects with indignation any idea of separate peace." He added that the people and the army were now rallying their forces around the banner of freedom, determined to help in a lasting peace on the basis of democratic principles.

It is announced that Great Britain will refuse to make reprisals on German centres because of the woman and baby killing air raids of the Huns. The view taken is that no matter what the provocation, John Bull cannot afford to descend to such a low level.

Post mortems are never very pleasant. The Royal Commission appointed to enquire into the Kut disaster has just reported, placing the main blame on Sir John Nixon, Commander in Mesopotamia, for his optimism in ordering Townshend to go ahead after said officer had reported that he had an insufficient force.

As expected, Food Controller Hanna is making the sparks fly in preparations for an efficient discharge of his new duties. Incomplete returns indicate that the Liberal Provincial Government in Saskatchewan has been retained by about the same majority. The new woman vote apparently followed party lines.

The Sheriff pretty nearly seized the Toronto City Hall because of the non-payment of an account. If the local Sheriff would only seize Brantford's civic pile this Great Family Journal would at once open a subscription list to place a monument to him in Victoria Park. It would be over subscribed into the bargain.

When Laurier proposed his referendum dodge, at the behest of Quebec, this self same, Clark did not hesitate to take the platform in criticism of his chief and it was generally expected when he spoke in the House that he would once more hit straight out from the shoulder.

He did. There was no mincing of words, or any veiled talk in the address which he delivered yesterday in the Commons. He said what was what in the good old British way and arraigned Sir Wilfrid Laurier in terms which were as cogent as they were justified.

Referring to Borden's offer of a coalition government he said: "The impartial historian of the future will record the offer as a magnificent one and I am afraid therefore, that the declination of the offer will be described as not quite in that moral category."

And with reference to those opposed to the immediate securing of men, he caustically remarked: "People who are opposing that policy are not thinking so much of winning the war as of winning elections."

There you have it is a nutshell. The rubbishy talk that Laurier is too sacred to be criticised is brushed aside by Clark (up until now one of his foremost supporters) and that gentleman very properly does not hesitate to call a spade a spade and to place humiliating responsibility where it properly belongs.

For the odium which Laurier and his anti-conscriptionist supporters have brought upon themselves they alone are to blame. Meanwhile the country has reason to give hearty thanks for the presence in Canadian public life of a man of the calibre of the member for Red Deer.

CRITICISM FULLY JUSTIFIED. The Expositor waxes wrathful because some Conservative papers have presumed to question the attitude of Sir Wilfrid Laurier with reference to the conscription issue and to intimate that his conduct savors more of truckling to Quebec than a desire for the best interests of the Empire.

Well, what else is it? Sir Wilfrid is not a Demi God, above criticism. In fact his course has often invited that.

When as a young lawyer he opposed Confederation, and wrote: "What have we, (Quebec) in common with the English colonies (Ontario, Nova Scotia, etc.) what interests, what relations bind us to them?"

When in later life he said he would have used his musket on the banks of the Saskatchewan, against the men seeking to put down the first Riel rebellion.

When he espoused commercial union with the States, hesitated about sending troops to South Africa, blocked by his majority in the Senate Canadian aid to the British navy, and so on.

His whole career has more than once invited legitimate comment, and why should he be absolved more than any one else? It has come from his own side also more than once.

Only a few months back when he sought to bring the bi-lingual issue into the Dominion House his western supporters, led by Hon. Mr. Oliver walked into the lobby against him and right now a whole lot more of them are openly opposing him with regard to his referendum delay when the Canadian boys in the trenches are in sore need of more help.

Under such circumstances, criticism is not only fully warranted; it would be false to a plain duty to withhold it. NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Dr. Clark is freely forgiven all of his free trade fad ideas. The Canadian boys continue to do good work at the front. They are not waiting for any referendum with regard to going ahead.

Anyone burying beer these days should make sure that it is not strong enough for a resurrection in the police court. As expected, Food Controller Hanna is making the sparks fly in preparations for an efficient discharge of his new duties.

WM. RUTHERFORD HIS POLICE CHIEF

Former Brantford Officer, Now of Ingersoll, Receives Paris Appointment

TOWN COUNCIL MEETS Home of Mr. W. S. Daniels Burglarized This Week

Paris, June 26.—From Our Own Correspondent.—Another old resident was laid to rest this afternoon in the person of Margaret Kess, relict of the late William Martin. The deceased was born in Kibitino, Ayrshire, Scotland, 34 years ago. She came to Canada with her husband in 1851, crossing in a sailing vessel, which took nearly three months to cross, and for the past 16 years has resided in town. The late Mrs. Martin was a faithful and devoted member of the Baptist Church and always took deep interest in the Master's work until advancing years prevented her going around. She had only been ill for the past two months and passed peacefully away early Sunday morning.

Three daughters and two sons are left to mourn the loss of a loving mother, Mrs. Langton, assisted by Rev. J. C. Nicholson and was largely attended by many sympathizing relatives and friends.

Last evening a pleasant time was spent at the "Y" when the members of the Kith and Kin Association, had the pleasure of hearing Mrs. Major Jordan, of Brantford, who has just returned from spending the winter at Bramshott and Witley Camps, give an address about her trip. The President, Mrs. F. Wickson, was in the chair and extended a hearty welcome to Mrs. Jordan, and assured her that the members appreciated her kindness in coming over to speak to the ladies. At the close ice cream and cake was served.

Last evening the monthly meeting of the council was held, Mayor Robinson presiding with all members present, and the following business was transacted: Building Inspector G. W. Wheeler wrote, on motion, of Messrs. Jas. McKay and E. Pitts, the matter was referred to a special committee to investigate and report.

A petition for a cement sidewalk on the west side of Charles Street, was referred to the streets and sidewalk committee. August 13th has been proclaimed Civic holiday, in pursuance to a request from the Great War Veterans' Association of Galt, who are having a big demonstration on that date.

A communication was read from Mr. L. Anguish, also from Boscworth and Churchill complaining of the bad condition of the road on West Broadway between Mechanic and William streets, and asking to have same put in proper condition. Referred to streets and sidewalk committee.

A communication was read from Bruce, Bruce and Counsel, solicitors for the Canadian National Advertising Company, offering $50 and remove boxes from the streets. On motion of Deputy Reeve Stewart and Ald. Blake, it was decided to accept the offer, it is understood that the company had failed.

Mayor Robinson stated that he had seen the Provincial Secretary in regard to having Dr. Leslie appointed a resident coroner, and he had promised to bring the matter before Premier Borden. The police committee reported as follows: Your committee had to report having carefully considered the applications received for the position of Chief Constable, and now recom-

It is understood that delegates will be sent to interview the Government in regard to having the harbor of Port Dover deepened, so that the J. Daniel, West Broadway, heard some one moving about in one of the rear rooms. Upon investigating, she met a man in the hall-way, who respectfully asked her "if this was the house he had to bring an automobile to." Upon her reply, "No," little jaunt. There are several yet to receive summonses. The Lake Erie & Northern ticket office was broken into the other evening, and some more stamps stolen. Fortunately, the money had been removed. The same night the G. T. R. depot ticket office was also forced and pretty well ransacked. The baggage room was also entered, and a club bag ripped open in the search for valuables. They may have secured articles of value, but no articles were missed. Mrs. Whitley of Woodstock, is spending a few days in town, Mrs. Chas. McCausland is visiting in Toronto. Mrs. H. Inkster and Master James and Don have returned home after spending a few days in Hamilton.

BRITAIN VETOS AIR REPRISALS

London, June 26.—No intention of yielding to the widespread demands for reprisals on German towns for the German air raids on England was shown in a debate on the subject today in the House of Lords. The question having been raised by Lord Strathclyde, Baron Stedham, former chairman of the Air Board, deprecated the policy of reprisals. He said he felt sure that in future years the British would be thankful they had not lowered themselves to the level of the Germans. Furthermore, it was not generally realized that bombing reprisals of a military nature were systematic daily occurrences behind the German lines. He invited the government to let the country something about these operations.

DR. CLARK, LIBERAL MEMBER FOR RED DEER MANITOBA, HITS RIGHT OUT FROM THE SHOULDER

Says That Conscription Should Take Place at Once and Declares That the Policy of Laurier is For Election Purposes Only—Offer of Borden For Coalition Cabinet Was a "Magnificent One"

Ottawa, June 27.—There was vigorous applause in the Dominion House yesterday when Dr. Michael Clark, Liberal Member for Red Deer, rose to speak. "I do not think there is any doubt about where I stand," was his opening remark. "I will support the Government measure, with a clear conscience, believing it is in the best interest of the country, of the Empire, of the world, and of the cause of civilization for which we are fighting." (Applause.)

Better in Patriotism The Red Deer member did not take much stock in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's charge that Sir Robert Borden had gone back on pledges not to bring in conscription. If the Prime Minister had changed his stand, it simply showed that he was greater in his patriotism than in his prophecy. England, the very home of freedom and individualism, had been turned into a bureaucracy and the war was being better prosecuted as a result.

"We must distinguish between conscription in peace and conscription in war," he said. "Conscription in peace is part and parcel of a military state. Conscription in war is the expedient of a country in dire extremity which must take all steps necessary to put forth its last effort. I take it the distinction is perfectly clear. If we were not in favor of conscription before the war, we were not militarists, but now being at war it becomes the part of common sense to adapt ourselves to the circumstances."

"Who can plead that it is fair, that it is even decent, that one family, one district, one province, should be sheltered in comfort and prosperity behind a flag for which other people, other provinces, are giving their life-blood." (Applause.)

Sir Wilfrid Laurier had argued that the proper place for Canadians in the fight was on the soil of Canada, and in the quarters where that sentiment was repeated they were saying that this was England's war. If it was England's war, was England fighting her war on English soil? She was fighting the war wherever the turban of the Turk or the helmet of the Teuton was seen.

Fighting in France "But she is fighting most of all in France," he said. "It is there she is pouring in her blood in small rivulets, and my friends will forgive me when I say that if there is one consideration that should have made French blood course more rapidly, it is the consideration that Englishmen, by millions, are on the soil where the language of France is spoken."

"Talk about sending the right recruiting agents to Quebec! What was the recruiting agent that led the sons of the Empire to jump to the colors in every portion of the world? I tell you, sir, in one word, it was Belgium. That was the recruiting agent. I wonder if those who hesitate about what they should do, on this bill, reflect that, at the present moment in France, as the Teuton is compelled to retire, he has taken with him every French recruit of 14 years of age to work for him and God knows what else. These are the recruiting agents that appeal to the white Dominions of the Empire. And I add, not uncharitably, I hope, that I do not wish to listen to these, neither would he listen to one raised from the dead."

"Do I need to impress upon this House that the events at the front at this moment demand the passage of this bill?" demanded Dr. Clark. Had they not just read on the bulletins the story of 150 dead in the very heart of the Empire, and 450 wounded from air raids; 600 casualties, mostly women and children. And even at the present moment Canadian cargoes of supplies for Great Britain were being sent to the bottom by the thousands of tons. "That is how close the war is to us at this moment," he declared.

Huns Resort to Diplomacy The Huns, following the tradition of that old blackguard, Frederick the Great, whose he could never understand how God had allowed to die in his bed, now that they were meeting defeat, were turning to diplomacy. They were using Socialism, which they hated, to try and turn it against Russia.

"And," he declared, "if now we take our hands from the plow, we shall face the greatest danger the world has ever faced. But from all I have seen of Canadians, I do not think they will take any part in that business." (Cheers.)

An inconclusive peace, he declared, would be the result of present relaxation of our efforts. That would mean the restoration of the Romanoffs in Russia, Constantine in Greece and the strengthening of the stranglehold of the Hohenzollerns and Hapsburgs on Germany and Austria.

"And for ourselves," he said, "it would mean that as surely as the next generation of men comes up this would have to be all done over again by our children and grandchildren. "Permit me a personal touch. I have a little toddling grandchild out on my farm to-day. His father was stricken by a gunshot in the neck two weeks ago. I say to you on my soul and conscience, gentlemen, I support this bill because it is part of the necessary machinery which will save that little fellow and thousands like him from having to go through what his father and his uncles are going through to-day." (Prolonged cheering.)

A Weak Argument Dr. Clark said that he had been surprised that so astute a politician as Hon. Dr. Pugsley should have used such an argument which seemed to him the very weakest that could be addressed to the Canadian nation, as that now that America was in the war Canada probably the decisive factor. Dr. Clark said he was proud that the United States was in the war, side by side with Great Britain, carrying on the tradition of freedom which they had begun with the war for independence and had carried with their tremendous conflict to free the slaves. Now they had decided to become a part of the British Empire, the greatest war for liberty. But that was only half of the spectacle.

"The full picture is the old mother who lost her oldest colony by an act of folly reunited once more to her in heart and spirit and soul and purpose. This is the picture of the two great Empires marching together to save the world's civilization." (Cheers.)

"Is such a moment as that," he asked, "the time that I, as a Canadian am to be told that we should go more easily? The majority of Canadians, Sir, are not built that way." (Cheers.)

"A man cannot ever deterred a well-set up man from doing his duty. Why should Canada be glad to quit the breach when British and Americans were marching side by side? "Canada should be where she has been from the very beginning, at the front in the trenches, and not Dr. Clark, amidst prolonged applause, "that is where she will be. The glories of this little people were not exhausted at Vimy Ridge, nor at Courcrales, where they won immortal fame. Their glories are to be extended, but not by taking advantage from the fact that the United States have come into the war, to go more easily." (Applause.)

Labor and Conscription. Neither did he believe in calling labor with a big "L." It was a man for what he was and what he was capable of. In any event there were only 65,000 men enrolled in the ranks of organized labor in Canada and many of these favored the bill because thousands of labor men were at the front and practically every man at the front demanded conscription.

But to the extent that this view of the opposition of organized labor prevailed, it was utterly inadvisable, because if Germany won the war it would be bad for everybody, but for none more than organized labor, because then they would get conscription with a vengeance every day of the year. Trades unionists, Dr. Clark said, were pretty strong conscriptionists themselves. In their meetings and denunciations those who opposed them as blacklegs.

"I don't want to use that term to any Canadian, but the national blacklegs, if there are any, are not in France and Flanders. They must be somewhere else. "If organized labor thought conscription a good thing, they would get their own organizations, he argued, surely it was only logical that they should support conscription for the salvation of the nation. Dr. Clark, however, thought that organized labor only opposed conscription if it was to be a conscription of man power without further efforts to bring about an organization and mobilization of the moral, material and man power of Canada, which was needed.

Strength of the Measure. The strength of the measure was that it would put Canada on all fours with Great Britain, the United States and every other belligerent nation. The Government's weakness was that while it proposed to mobilize man power it had been backward in regard to proper taxation of taxation, and in this connection he again urged a stiff income tax.

"We cannot fight this war on the principle of United Liability. We are in it for the last man and the last dollar, and we must get the dollars. Dr. Clark referred to the magnificent manner in which the wealthy classes in England were taxing themselves until they bore such burdens as no people in the world had ever borne before, with a patriotism only second to that shown by the men in the trenches in action. The measure proposed such measures as this and would sweep every vestige of patronage out of the military service that would make the passage of the bill much easier. He strongly approved the appointment of the Food and Fuel Controllers and advocated once again free food and fuel. Dr. Clark said that in the naval debate of 1910 there had been talk of a referendum and again this referendum would come from Quebec. At that time Sir Wilfrid Laurier had not seemed to care a great deal for it. He seemed to be a very recent convert to this principle of referendum. Dr. Clark said he greatly regretted that Sir Wilfrid, towards the close of a really great career, had taken a position which would disappoint many who for years had fought with him in victory and defeat. Sir Wilfrid Laurier said "win the war," but so did everybody. There had been a proposition of a referendum in the Opposition in 1910, but in rejecting this, Dr. Clark said he greatly regretted that Sir Wilfrid, towards the close of a really great career, had taken a position which would disappoint many who for years had fought with him in victory and defeat. #### COUNT THE STARS.

(By H. C. Hamilton) A baseball club without at least one star pitcher would be an absolute joke as a champion of one of the two major leagues. Ranging back over history discloses the fact. Every one of the many clubs which have risen to heights and retrograded is featured by at least one hurler of star proportions. Since the American league came into being this fact has been more pronounced.

Inspect the record of the Chicago White Sox of 1906, one of the most remarkable world's championship feats in the game's history. Ed Walsh was just about the entire exhibition in those days, with the able assistance of Dr. White.

The obstreperous Braves present an identical case with forgotten Bill James the mainstay of their endeavors. Connie Mack has his Jack Coombs, his Eddie Plank and his Chief Bender. Charlie Horng adds fire to the Giant attack and defense. Ty Cobb is the main part of the Detroit mechanism. George Sisler draws pay for being about two-thirds of the Browns. Roger Hornsby is about the speediest thing the Cardinals know here. Larry Doyle has made the Cubs almost entirely over. The loss of Johnny Evers as a regular has had a bad effect this year on the Braves. Jake Daubert mainly controls the destinies of the Dodgers. Walter Johnson a team and then some in Washington. Grover Alexander performs the same feat in Philadelphia, as does Wally Schang. Wally Pipp is the big affair in the Yankees' lives. Grob and Hal Chase are splitting the difference in Cincinnati. Jack Barry is indispensable to Boston, and Tris Speaker is a bit more than a circus attraction for the Indians.

Of course the way we carry on one would think there was no war on, as we are playing ball every evening. If you have any ointment, ship a carload over here. I haven't received a box for some time now. Joe and Harrison are both well and the rest of our aggregation. Ed. Groat said that he will have to quit writing to you, because I came over to France where he is. Hal, Hal, well wife, there is no news of any importance so I will close, with love and kindest regards, I remain as ever,

Help Canada Maintain Her Financial Freedom!

Do Your Share towards Financing the War with Canadian Savings Rather than with Outside Capital.

THE problem of meeting the enormous cost of this war is twofold. Not only must Canada get the money—most of it, of course, as loans—but she must get as much of it as possible here in Canada.

We can carry the war-debt if the bulk of the interest goes to Canadians, and so is used again in the country's development. But it will be a serious matter for us if a large proportion of the interest has to be sent outside the Dominion.

For the sake of our own and our children's future this drain on our resources must be avoided! Canada's financial freedom can and must be maintained! An average saving of 15 cents a day, invested by each man, woman and child in War Savings Certificates, would enable us to carry the whole cost of the war. To approach this average, hard work, thrift, self-denial and sacrifice are required of every citizen.

For each $21.50 you lend the Government now, you will receive $25.00 in three years—or you can get your money back at any time. Certificates are issued in denominations of $25, $50 and $100, and may be purchased at any Bank or Money Order Post Office.

EMPTY HOUSES IN HOLLAND SCARCE

Task of Home Hunting in the Netherlands no Envyable Quest

Amsterdam, Netherlands, June 27.—Associated Press—The house-hunter in Holland in the days of the great world-war of 1917 is assuredly an object for pity. The scarcity of houses for rent at Amsterdam, the Hague and other centers has greatly increased because of war's interference with the house-building industry and of the influx of foreign population into the Netherlands. At the Hague, for instance, of Belgians alone there are thousands who have temporarily settled. The lack is particularly felt in respect of apartments—the Dutch "upper house" or "lower house" ranging between $200 and $300 in rent.

So keen was the hunt after houses in Amsterdam recently that high rewards were offered for addresses of houses to let. Races have been taken place, and bribing has been practiced to find homes. If in the morning a house was to let, in the afternoon it was let. In the brief meantime thirty or forty prospective tenants had rung the bell and asked to see it.

The result is that landlords have become more and more particular, and their demands have multiplied. A special law was passed by Parliament to prevent the undue inflation of rents, so that the natural effect of the demand has been artificially prevented. Certain classes of houses are unobtainable save by purchase, and the purchase prices have arisen enormously, certain houses changing hands rapidly at an ever-mounting price.

INVITATION TO NORWAY

American Red Cross Workers May Recuperate From War Duties

Christiania, Norway, June 27.—(Correspondence)—The Norwegian Red Cross has extended to the United States an invitation to send to Norway for a "rest cure" any of its nurses and Red Cross workers who may become ill or worn out in the course of their work in Northern France.

In Norway, any such American convalescents will be the guests of the Norwegian Red Cross, and will be sent to the most suitable Norwegian health resort for a period of six weeks or more at its expense.

Similar invitations were long ago extended to the European belligerents, although Germany and Russia are the only ones who have sent nurses here in response. Germany has thus far sent 500 nurses to Norway, while 65 Russian nurses are now here for a month's vacation.

A visit from even a small American Red Cross unit would be regarded as a great event in Norway, which regards itself as a little closer to the United States than any other Scandinavian country. There are more Norwegians in the United States than there are in Norway, and that therefore one country is as much their "home land" as the other.

SIDELIGHTS OF THE STAGE AND SCREEN

THE FALL OF BAPAUME

The capture of the official war film "The Fall of Bapaume," to be seen at the Rex the last of this week, is undoubtedly the many close-up views given of the tanks actually in action. Ever since the day the world was surprised by a cabled story of their first appearance on the battlefields of France, great interest has followed their activities, and every word telling of the way in which they have rolled their way across shell-torn fields, over German trenches, and right up to the gun pits of the fleeing Huns, has been read with the most eager interest. The published photographs have been no less eagerly scanned, and the first moving picture of the tanks, when they came here a month or two ago, drew many to see the war pictures who would not otherwise have gone.

These pictures were interesting enough, as giving a first glimpse at the bulky steel-clad monsters as they really were, but the pictures that are now here give an altogether different idea of the tanks and their work. The pictures at the Rex Theatre show the tanks, not as Hottel machines, posing to have their pictures taken or as quietly moving along smooth country roads towards the front, but ponderous, slow-moving, never stopping war machines, ever trundling onward over every obstacle that opposes, and spitting out shot and shell with venomous persistency as they roll forward. The obstacles these lumbering machines surmount are almost beyond belief. Where the earth has been shell-tossed and torn into the semblance of a suddenly frozen turbulent sea, we see the tank roll and dip on its way like a living thing. At one point where a mound of earth rises sharply, the blunt snout of the great steel beetle is seen to gradually push up against the sky-line. Up and up it goes until it seems as though the great monster were standing on hind legs. With a crash that is almost heard, it falls prone, on the downward side of the crest, and in a steep shell-hole from which nothing short of a steam crane would seem able to budge it. There is a pause—a little pause—as though the men were gathering breath for a mighty effort,—in a moment on it moves up the opposite side of the shell crater as surely as though it were going over a hill. You wonder if it would really be for a moment you were anxious,—then, like everyone else in the theatre, you join in a hearty round of applause for this fire-breathing monster that, in a dignified and very effective way indeed, is helping to win the war for humanity.

VIVIAN MARTIN SHOCKED.

On returning to her dressing room at Moroso studios late one evening for a forgotten article, Vivian Martin received a shock which made her heart go pitter-patter. As she switched on the non-too-brilliant electric light in her room, she beheld the form of a man stretched upon her little couch face downward. With a cry of fright the Moroso-Paramount star rushed to Dan, the night watchman, who came running, armed to the teeth, clutching a six-shooter in one hand and a club that would have made Roosevelt's famous big stick cry out in jealousy. Dan cautiously peered into the room and began a stealthy approach to the figure, each step being accompanied by a suppressed "ee-ee-ee" from Miss Martin who followed the big watchman. With a flying leap that bespoke of a foot-ball trainer, Dan was on top of the intruder, prepared to give the battle of his young life. To his great surprise, the offender showed no resistance, and little wonder—it was night but a cleverly prepared dummy which had been carelessly (?) thrown upon Miss Martin's couch! Curtin.

NOT INCOGNITO.

Viola Dana, Metro star, who has just returned from the South where scenes for "Lady Barnacle" were filmed, tells an interesting story of how an accident at Charleston, S.C., resulted in a street reception. The company travelled from Jacksonville to Charleston by steamer, and were obliged to wait in the South Carolina city several hours for a train. The temptation to take a sight-seeing trip around this historic place could not be resisted by Miss Dana and she booted one of those well-known "sea going" hacks, driven by an old dandy and drawn by a horse long past the age of usefulness. With Director Collins she started on her tour of the city. The hack, however, hardly had the slow-moving hack progressed a city block when one of the rear wheels of the antiquated vehicle came off. Of course a curious crowd gathered and soon some one recognized the little Metro star. The usual buzzing was inevitable and within a minute every one in the crowd was aware that Viola Dana was with them. A little girl with a broad Southern dialect advanced and asked Miss Dana whether she was the "leading lady" in "The Gates of Eden," a Metro release, which had been shown in the city recently. Miss Dana admitted that she was and there was nothing to do but meet all the natives.

DEARHOIT NOT DOMESTIC.

Ashton Dearholt, who plays Dan Nye, the villain of the piece in "The Innocence of Lizette," was compelled to carry the baby in the first rehearsal of the piece. Mary Miles Minter, in the character of Innocent Lizette, handed the infant to Dearholt and told him to kiss it—a bit of action cut out later by order of Director James Kirkwood, for various reasons—the principal one of which was that Dearholt had as much notion about holding a baby as an orang outang has of using a pocket handkerchief. When Ashton held the unfortunate youngster suspended by its waist-band, about as one takes a kitten by the scruff of its neck, Mary shrieked and ran in, ruining fifty feet of film, while Kirkwood bawled the actor out for being such a blankety-blanked ass that he didn't know a kid from a ball of rug.

VOLUNTEER WORK.

London, June 27.—(Associated Press)—The National Service Department which has undertaken to place everybody in a position to help win the war has organized volunteer work for the summer vacation season. Throughout the war thousands of people—the boys of the public schools, for instance, have given up their holidays to some kind of war work, but central guidance has been wanting except in the case of agriculture. Committees are being set up all over the country, and a varied list of important side activities of the war in want of helpers is being made, so that when volunteers are appealed for they can be drafted at once to vacation tasks, such as the collection of waste-paper, which is wanted for shell-making, wool gathering in the hedges (wool from sheep), and a score more ways of satisfying the conscience of men and women who are doing nothing for the war.

HOW BOBBY WON OUT

Bobby had always lived in the country, and when his mother moved into the city Bobby had a hard time to become accustomed to the ways of the city children. The boys in his school couldn't see why a boy liked to tend a garden patch on Saturday, instead of playing tag or marbles as they did. Bobby didn't have time to play. He went straight home from school and worked in his garden until dark, then he wiped dishes and helped his mother every way he could. "There's no use talking, Bob's a sis," said one boy, and the others agreed with him, and from that time the name clung to Bobby, and he had no more.

The teacher loved Bobby very much, for Bobby was extremely bright and quick at his studies and although the other children remained to help her straighten out her day's work. This made the other children jealous and they began to slight him every chance they had. "The boys don't seem to like me, Mother," said Bobby one evening after he had been left out of all their games. "If they know you as Mother does, they'd love you dearly. But don't you care, dear," replied his mother. Bobby did care and he made up his mind that he would prove worthy of their companionship if he ever had the chance. One day as Bobby started home from school he saw a crowd of boys under the big elm tree that stood in the school yard. They were talking excitedly and looking up at the top of the tree. "The poor thing was up there this morning and I saw it at noon flapping its wings against the branches," said one. Bobby drew near and finally joined the group. "I'd go up after it, but I'd fall and break my neck," said another. Bobby looked up. On the top-most branch of the elm tree a poor little robin was trying its best to get loose. Its foot had become entangled in a string and it was held fast to a twig. "Why don't some of you climb up and untangle the string?" asked the teacher as she joined the crowd. The boys hung their heads. Not one was brave enough to climb that tree, for the robin was caught to a branch that swayed back and forth in the wind. "Give me a boost, fellows, and I'll get him," said Bobby coolly. The boys helped him to the lower limb, then stood back and watched as Bobby climbed higher and higher. "Some nerve!" said one boy. "He's not afraid!" exclaimed another as they watched Bobby climb

CHANNEL TUNNEL AGAIN MOOTED

London, June 27.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—Departure of a train from London to Paris every five or ten minutes, travel between the two capitals by rail to occupy less than six hours, was the possibility held out by Sir Francis Fox in an address recently delivered before the Royal Geographical Society. Sir Francis was describing the conditions under which it was proposed to build and operate a tunnel under the English channel to connect England and France. Looking into the future, he declared that the trains operated through the tunnel could be used to traverse France, Belgium, Holland, Spain, Italy, Germany, Austria, Hungary and Turkey as far as Constantinople. It was by no means improbable, said Sir Francis, that within comparatively a few years, travellers from London would be able to reach distant places like India and China through the medium of the channel tunnel.

The tunnel would consist of two tubes, eighteen feet in diameter. In the channel above the sea bed the maximum depth of water would be from 160 feet to 180 feet. It would be necessary, he said, to leave undisturbed such a cover of chalk over the roof of the tunnel as would guard against any possible hostile contingency. That protection had been fixed at a minimum of 100 feet. The tunnel would be operated, pumped and ventilated by electricity supplied from a power station in Kent ten miles inland. The tunnel would have a dip in the level of the rails, forming a water lock, by which it could, in case of emergency, be filled with water from roof to floor for one mile. This would be under control of Dover Castle and the entrance and exits would be under gunfire of the Dover forts.

CHAPTER XXI.
It is easy to see a mistake after it has been committed. Jimmie had recognized this with the first chill touch of the handcuffs. He had merely dropped out his clothes the night before, not troubling to remove or inspect anything. The least he should have done was to have placed the address Peggy had given him in safety.
He raved helplessly. Weir Menzies sat on the end of the bed and waited imperturbably. Jimmie did not pick and choose his words.
"Bad language won't help," said Menzies, once again the stern moralist. "Make up your mind quick; I can't wait here all day."
Hallett suppressed the vitriolic report that rose to his lips. He was in no position to justify violent language. "Say, this is a joke, isn't it?"
he asked.
"I don't joke," retorted the inspecteur grimly.
"Look here," said Jimmie with inspiration. "You own that you're doing an illegal thing. Now I'll tell you what I'll do. Unfasten these things and run away for five minutes and when you come back you can search all you want to. There'll be ten thousand dollars in it for you, too." Ten thousand dollars, he reflected was a small price to pay for the preservation of the secret he held.
Menzies's ruddy face had taken on a deeper tinge of crimson. "You're wanting to bribe me," he said thickly.
"That's a nasty word," said Jimmie. "Illegal searches are not your duty—and how can it be bribery if all I ask you to do is to keep with in the limits of your right? Come, I'm a fairly rich man, and I'll make it fifteen thousand."
A brazen fist was shaken within an inch or two of his eyes. Menzies had for the moment let himself go and was shaken with anger.
"You dirty reptile!" he blazed,
and then suddenly checked himself.
"The C. I. D. aren't that kind of crafters," he went on more mildly.
"If you'd been in London longer,
you'd have known that. It isn't fair,
Mr. Hallett," he shook his head re-provingly. "It isn't fair."
Jimmie observed him with some astonishment. He did not know the scale of pay of English detectives, but he imagined that fifteen thousand dollars—three thousand pounds in English money—would have removed most scruples.
"Doesn't get in a tear about it," he said. "For a man who plays the game like this—he glanced at the handcuffs—"I don't see what you've got to complain of if you get insulted. You're not a police officer now, remember. You're a common or garden burglar."
Menzies had resumed his placid equanimity. It was difficult to reconcile the placid with which he was now enveloped to the resentment that had shaken him a moment before.
"I suppose I am," he remarked.
"That is, if you won't give me the permission I asked for a while ago."
"I'll see you burn first," retorted
Jimmie.
"Then I must go on with it," said Menzies, and quietly began to possess himself of the scattered articles of attire that littered the floor.
He went through the pockets methodically, laying the articles in an orderly heap on a chair one by one as he examined them. Jimmie saw him pause over a scrap of paper on which Peggy had scribbled her address.
"Does your friend—the lady who isn't Mrs. Ling—live at Shadwell?"

SIDE TALKS
THEIR OIL - CLOTHES

Is there a place left where one can wear out one's old clothes?
There was a time—and not so many years ago—when one wore the summer vacation, or working in the garden. Now, there are special outfits for gardening, and as for the summer vacation or the camping trip, well—here's a word about companions on a recent camping trip.
On a Fishing and Camping Trip
In the first place they had sport used to put aside for such expeditions.
Then, instead of the old waistcoats that were saved for such occasions, or the inexpensive middieblues that later on they carried, they had the daintiest of smocks.
One woman had a silk sweater (a dark tone bought specially for camping, she already had a rose colored one for dress-up), and she had the latest in white sport sweaters.
The Original Sport Hat
For hats, they had of course, the ubiquitous sport hat. Did any article of dress ever develop from such small beginnings to such lengths of costliness as the sport hat? Do you properly skilled photographer would be able to bring out the underlying words. All automatic, Mr. Hallett;

we were just bound to find her."
"I suppose you were," said Hallett absently, enveloping himself in a big dressing-gown.
The chief inspector picked the revolver from a heap of belongings he had abstracted from the young man's pockets and weighed it carefully in his hand while he scrutinized the young man from under his half-shut eyelids. "I may have been doing you both an injustice," he confessed,
"I'll own I can't make out why she wanted you at Shadwell and how it came about that the note got altered by some one—apparently without her knowledge."
"Does your friend Jimmie indifferently begin to appreciate the point which was being led up to."
"Now," went on Menzies mildly,
"I know you've your own notions as to which side of the fence you'd prefer to be, but it's certain you've got some inside knowledge. You're wise enough to know what will most likely be happening in a few hours. You don't give me the right end of the stick? No one need ever know it came from you and I'll do my best to keep things pleasant. I only want to get at the truth. Nothing can stop that, but you can make it easier for me if you like. Of course, I don't believe she's the sort of girl who'd be in it had."

An involuntary laugh broke from Jimmie, though he was feeling very far from merriest.
"Trying a new trick," he said.
"Why, I thought you'd loaded the lady up with all the crimes in the calendar. Still, I'm glad to see some glimmerings of common sense and I'll reward you. She's perfectly innocent of anything; rather the other way about. Now if you go running yourself into trouble don't say I didn't warn you. Because if you do involve her I'll get the biggest lawyer that money can buy to raise trouble for your benefit."
"Ah!" Menzies caught his breath.
"So you fixed the thing last night.
She's told you the whole story, or you couldn't be so concise. Do you know what the penalty is for an accessory
after the fact in a case of murder?"
Watching acutely, he caught the slightest change of countenance in the young man. It was gone in an instant. "I've half a mind to take you on that charge and let you try that lawyer for yourself," he pursued.
"And make yourself the laughing stock of the country by catching the other fellow. Why, you haven't a shred of evidence that could justify it, and you forget I'm an American citizen. You wouldn't hear the eagle scream! Oh, no!"

"You're quite sure about that being no evidence of a quite sure?"
Jimmie felt an uneasy thrill run down his spine. "I could justify your arrest a whole lot if I wanted to. This,
for example, would almost do by itself." He held up the revolver. "I was carrying an automatic yesterday. Now it's a revolver—and a revolver, moreover, with the initials J.
E. G.-S. engraved on it—the revolver that used to belong to Mr. Grey-Stratton." He swung it carelessly to and fro by the muzzle.
Jimmie started. "You don't say!"
he exclaimed. "Why, I got it—" He paused.
"You got it from Ling," filled in the detective. "Quite so." He broke it apart and squinted through it.
"There's three chambers been recently fired." He looked up inquiringly.
"Go on."

(c) "Belgian Orphan Fund."
(d) "Belgian National Relief Fund for

LADIES' SHIRT WAIST.
By Anabel Worthington.
"An ever present help in time of need"— surely every woman will agree that this applies to a smartly tailored shirt waist.
No. 8297 would be worthy of notice for its clever collar, if for no other reason. It is as wide as the shoulders in the back, and gradually slopes in until it reaches the revers in front, where the ends form pointed tabs which slip through slots. The revers are cut in one with the front of the waist. Bound buttonholes and large buttons make an effective fastening. The sleeves may be either short or long, the former having a plain finish and the latter a turn-back cuff to match the collar. Lined, madras or crepe de Chine can be used to dress this waist, with the trimming in striped material.
The waist pattern, No. 8297, is cut in sizes 38 to 44 inch bust measure. As on the figure, the 38 inch size requires 8 3/4

THRIFT EXHIBIT!
Practice of Economy is Essential to National Welfare

The Ontario Government has decided to have a Thrift Exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition. Practical lessons in waste prevention and domestic and industrial economy would be of tremendous value all over the country in promoting war savings. Such saving is essential in the public interest. The National Service Board of Canada has launched a great campaign to awaken the people to the necessity for careful consideration before indulging in expenditures. Millions are wasted in luxuries and in unessentials which should be devoted to war work.

Every man and woman, in the Dominion should join with the Government in promoting economy in all branches of public and private life. There is waste and extravagance in the commercial, industrial, agricultural and domestic fields. Such expenditures and such carelessness are directly opposed to the interests of the Dominion who are fighting the battles of the Empire in France. Save your money as a slight return for what those soldiers are doing for you and invest in War Savings Certificates.

POINTS TO CONSIDER
WHEN PURCHASING A
RAILWAY TICKET
A Canadian Pacific Railway ticket does not represent merely a means of transportation between given points. In addition, it provides the traveller with every comfort and convenience developed by modern railway science. "Safety First," with up-to-date equipment, unexcelled dining service, palatial sleeping cars, in a word everything that a railway can provide for the comfortable transportation of its passengers, including courtesy.

Vacation Death Roll

During every holiday season the newspapers record a startling number of accidental deaths among pleasure seekers.
Supposing you should lose your life while on your vacation this year, what will happen to your family? Do you realize that you've a duty towards them that doesn't end with your death?
Perhaps your wife hasn't been trained to be a breadwinner. But your failure to protect her until she dies
—all the children are educated and self-supporting—may force your widow into the business grind in spite of her incapacity.
It's not a pleasant prospect, is it? But isn't it a possible contingency? To offset it you need an Imperial policy to perpetuate your income after you're gone.
Write for literature and terms today. Tomorrow may be too late.

GERMANS FORCED TO REPAIR RUINS

Devastation of the Hun in France Mended by Teuton Prisoners

Behind the British Lines in France, June 27.—(Correspondence)—Hundreds of miles of the smooth white macadam roads of Northern France will remain for many years after the war as a real memorial to the devastated towns which the Germans left in ruins after their retreat this spring.

All over Northern France, the roads are being widened and resurfaced with stone and rubble taken from the wrecked houses of Peronne, Albert, Arras, and countless other ruined towns and villages. As fast as the British soldiers clear away the debris of the towns, it is piled into lorries and distributed in heaps along the main roads. There German prisoners toil the day long pounding it to level patches which the great steam rollers, many of them bearing familiar names, grind quickly into smooth macadam for the business of transport.

The brick and stone of these old buildings makes a good road material as could be obtained anywhere and the work of the German dynamiter has been so thorough that much of it is crushed fine enough to need no further preparation.

The roads of Northern France were always excellent, but they were never better than to-day. The only complaint travellers had against them in the days was that the paved strip in the center was too narrow. That complaint cannot be made after the British highway plans have been completed, for all the main highways will be macadamized to a width permitting three broad-gauge lorries to run abreast, and even the byways will have a paved surface wide enough to allow traffic to pass easily at any point.

Excessive dustiness is the only fault of the roads to-day, for war economies will not permit the use of precious oil on roadways.

There is little need anywhere in this district for straightening roads or altering routes, because the roads of Northern France mostly run straight as an arrow's flight. Most of the great highways were laid out in Napoleon's time by military surveyors, and their strategic value and importance has always been kept primarily in mind by the French government.

SISLER TOLD TO START SOMETHING

Fielder Jones Wants Michigan Star to Take Initiative on Field

SECOND ONLY TO COBB
And Shows Promise of Becoming as Brilliant a Star

George Sisler will have no one to blame but himself if he doesn't go out and play the game of the map. He is free to go the limit. Manager Fielder Jones, who has been accused of trying to do the thinking for his whole team, had a heart-to-heart talk with Sisler the other day, and spoke to the Michigan star something like this:

"You are the best player in baseball outside of Ty Cobb. At your age and with your ability you ought to be as good a player in time as Cobb, or even better, if that's possible. But you won't unless you get out and do things like Cobb does—initiate plays. I'd like to see you start something; once in a while, at least."

"You're all wrong," answered Jones. "I want you to be just as fresh as they make them, if you call it that."

"Here are your standing orders. Play your own game. Hit when you please, run as far as you like, steal when you think the time is ripe, make the other players after you or ahead of you. Do just what Ty Cobb does on his team—be the whole thing."

Jones believes these instructions, if carried out, will make Sisler a greater player. He thinks he has been too diffident. He wants to see him pull some of the stuff that Ty pulls and believes he can get away with just as much of it.

Jones is always preaching Cobb to his players, but it is more than any considerable number could go out and do Cobb stuff. He really believes Sisler can, though. At least he wants him to try.

George has noted particularly since his return to the American league that the runners can't get away on old days and hit as often after his Browns to study the pitchers.

"Study their feet, their legs, their arms and their heads when they are pitching—get the ball's hippos to what they mean to do, for every pitcher has his peculiarities. That's what we used to do. I remember how we used to study Cy Young. We discovered that with a man on first base he'd always look over to the base twice, then jerk his head to the left before pitching. We knew he'd pitch after that second look, and jerk of the head, and away we'd go on him for second, and even Lou Criger couldn't throw us out."

"One day one of our coaches at first spilled the beans when he cried to the base-runner: 'He's peered over twice—go!'"

"Patsy Tobeau, playing first, heard it, figured it out, and after that we didn't steal so many bases on Young and Criger."

A CHANCE FOR THOSE GOING WEST

Home-seekers' Excursions to Western Canada at low fares, via Canadian Pacific each Tuesday until October 30th, inclusive. Particulars from any Canadian Pacific agent or W. B. Howard, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

Proposal for the establishment of a steel shipbuilding plant in Nova Scotia by the Dominion Bridge Co. and the Beardmore interests, acting together, is now under consideration by the Provincial Shipbuilding Commission.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, who was at the commencement of 1917, as residence duties under the Dominion Land Act, since continued to be a British subject of an alien, or a resident in the Dominion of Canada, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Application must appear in person at Dominion Lands Agency Sub-Agency District Office. Entry by proxy may be made on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of land in each of three years.

In certain districts a homesteader may secure an adjoining quarter-section as pre-emption. Price $300 per acre. Duties—Reside six months on each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate 30 acres extra. May obtain pre-emption patent as soon as homestead patent on certain conditions.

A settler after obtaining homestead patent, if he cannot secure a pre-emption, may take a purchase homestead in certain districts. Price $300 per acre. Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 60 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Holders of entries may count time of employment as farm labourers in Canada during 1917, as residence duties under certain conditions.

When Dominion Lands are advertised for entry, returned soldiers who have served overseas and have been honorably discharged, receive priority in applying for entry at local Agency Office (not Sub-Agency). Discharge papers must be presented to Agent.

WOMEN READY FOR STANDARD DRESS

New Dignity Imparted by War to Uniforms of Every Variety

London, June 27.—(Correspondence)—There has never been a time when women were more willing to accept standard dress uniforms than they are at present.

That is the most marked effect of the war upon women's dress. All uniforms have acquired dignity in women's eyes. The household does not object to the cap and apron badge of servitude, the worker in the bank dons an overall cheerfully, women in khaki, the Red Cross volunteer aid workers are proud of their uniforms.

An expert French designer, discussing these changes, says: "There's always will be the women who want frilleries, the women who try to insist upon something quite different from the style of the moment, but nowadays their number is greatly diminished. The uniform idea has arrived. It may mean the total extinction of dress-making as a creative art, but there will be developments on other lines."

"There has never been a great war which has not influenced fashion in a picturesque or even gruesome fashion, and this world war has done its share.
