Love in a Flour Mill,
OR,
The Romance of Two Loyal Hearts!

CHAPTER IV.
Presently he reached the top of the rise, and his foot trod on the heather of the moor, which stretched before him, a wide, unbroken expanse. He glanced round him for a moment, fully sensible of the exquisite beauty of the scene which lay below him, then he took his bearings and walked on in the direction of the little market-town at which he intended to catch a train.

He had got a mile or two across the moor when suddenly a breath of cold air swept across the night, and, as he buttoned his loose overcoat, he looked up at the sky questioning, for he knew what that sudden chill portended; and in a very few minutes that which it had foretold came creeping up to him; it was one of the mists for which the moors are famous—those mists which seem to rise in a moment, which envelop the wild plains in a vapour dense and impenetrable, blotting out the whole world and rendering the man who is unlucky enough to be caught in them a lost and helpless being.

Ronald ought to have stopped and waited in the hope that the mist would not last long; but he had no time to lose, and he went on, though more slowly. The mist grew thicker, he began to feel more than doubtful of his way, and at last he was forced to pull up. He seated himself on one of the mossy excrescences which rose from the face of the moor, filled his pipe, and took out his matchbox; it was empty.

This was a bad business, and with a shrug of the shoulders he pulled up the collar of his coat and consoled himself as best he could with the unit pipe. He could not see his watch, and he did not know how long he had been sitting there before the mist began to lift slightly; he was too impatient to wait for it to clear completely, and he sprang up and walked on.

It was a dangerous and foolish thing to do, but Ronald Desborough was just the man to do it; he knew that any moment he might find himself in a bog and he lost in it for ever; but the knowledge of his peril did not deter him; he trusted to his luck, as usual, and his luck did not betray him; for presently the mist cleared away, almost as swiftly as it had come, and he could see where he was going.

He could also see that he was off the path, if path it could be called, and that he was on a part of the moor which was strange to him; in fact, like many others who had essayed to cross that wilderness, he was completely lost. However, there was nothing for it but to walk on in the hope of coming upon one of the turf-cutters' huts or shepherds' cots. Every now and then fleecy remnants of the mist floated up from the valley; and suddenly through one of them he saw something huge and weird between him and the skylight; it was a dark mass which revolved steadily and slowly.

He stared at it for a moment, puzzled and astonished; then he laughed, for he saw that it was a windmill.

There was something fantastic, grotesque in the revolution of the vast sails which impressed Ronald and riveted his gaze upon them as he made his way towards them; there was a touch of the mystical, the tragic, in their silent movement; it seemed to him that they were like the arms of some mute monster, waving threateningly in the intense silence of the moonlit night.

"I suppose the miller must be awake, as he is grinding," he said to himself. "Anyway, I can get a match and find out where I am."

He came upon a narrow, deeply rutted road which led to the mill from the valley beneath; and he went to the door and knocked. There was a light in the window above the door; but no answer came to his knocking, and he tried the door and found it locked.

He hammered on it again and shouted; but still there was no response; and, choosing a good-sized stone from the roadway, he flung it at the window. There was a crash of shattered glass, a voice rose from within, and presently the door was unbarred violently, thrown open, and

Ronald, who always preferred sitting to standing, stepped in and seated himself on a flour-bin. The impression of the girl's beauty, which, in its way, was as weird as the mill, had not worn off; and he was wondering who she was, and whether she was alone in that extraordinary wild and dreary spot.

It was not only her beauty which had set his curiosity agog and awakened a strange interest—this part of Devonshire is rich in pretty girls; you cannot take a mile's walk without seeing them; they are famous wherever the English tongue wags—but there was something about this girl of the mill which differentiated her from the ordinary rustic beauty. For instance, the Devonshire lass of the peasant class is usually somewhat meek, and always shy, in the presence of strangers, especially of the masculine gender; but this girl was a strange figure appeared on the threshold.

At the first moment of seeing it Ronald thought it was a man's, for it had a sack on its shoulders, and wore a large soft hat on its head; it held a shining flour scoop in its hand. But, as his eyes travelled downwards, he saw that the lower part of the figure was clad in a short blue skirt; and, as he stared in amazement, a voice, a girl's clear, musical voice, said impatiently and resentfully:

"Well, who is it? And what do you want?"

CHAPTER V.
Ronald recovered from his surprise sufficiently to raise his hat.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "I'm awfully sorry to disturb you; but I've lost my way. I was crossing the moor, a mist came on, and—Will you be so good as to tell me where I am?"

The girl swept her disengaged hand across her face and wiped it free from the powder which flecked cheek and eyelashes and the rough tresses of the dark, almost black hair which fell in disorder on her low brow. She stepped across the threshold, and Ronald gazed at her with still greater surprise; for he looked on a face of singular beauty. It was one of an almost perfect oval, with cleanly cut features, with lips glowing redly above the flour-beladen sack; with eyes of a dark grey, as brilliant as the stars that shone above him; with dark, soft hair framing the upper part of the face, and only half screening the small, shell-like ears.

Though Ronald did not know it—for he knew nothing of pictures or of books, only of cricket-bats, fencing-bois, boxing-gloves, tennis-rackets, guns, and horses—he looked like one of Merril's girls just stepped from the doorway which might have served as frame.

The dark-grey, brilliant eyes met his somewhat startled ones, without a trace of fear or shyness; indeed, her dark brows came together with a frown as if she resented his appearance and his manner of announcing it.

"You threw a stone and broke my window," she said ironically, in a deep, but sweet, contralto.

"I did," admitted Ronald. "I'm sorry. But I knocked first, ever so many times, and I could not make you hear. You must let me pay for the window, and accept my apologies. Where am I?"

"This is the Moor Mill," she said, not sullenly, but with resentment still in her tone.

"Thanks," he said; "but that doesn't help me much. I want to get to Shelford."

"Shelford?" she repeated, almost as if she had never heard of the place. "It's over there somewhere." She waved the shining scoop vaguely in the direction from which he had come. "You are out of your way."

"That's evident," said Ronald, in his cheerful, devil-may-care fashion. "Well, I must try and find it. I say, would you be so kind as to give me a match—a box, if you can spare it?"

"I'll see," she said. She turned, and was about to close the door and, probably, bolt it; but, in the act of doing so, she paused and looked with unconcealed keenness at his handsome face; something in it must have reassured her, for she left the door open, and disappeared in the interior of the mill.

Ronald, who always preferred sitting to standing, stepped in and seated himself on a flour-bin. The impression of the girl's beauty, which, in its way, was as weird as the mill, had not worn off; and he was wondering who she was, and whether she was alone in that extraordinary wild and dreary spot.

It was not only her beauty which had set his curiosity agog and awakened a strange interest—this part of Devonshire is rich in pretty girls; you cannot take a mile's walk without seeing them; they are famous wherever the English tongue wags—but there was something about this girl of the mill which differentiated her from the ordinary rustic beauty. For instance, the Devonshire lass of the peasant class is usually somewhat meek, and always shy, in the presence of strangers, especially of the masculine gender; but this girl was certainly not meek, and was as certainly not shy. She had confronted him with the courage and self-possession of a man, with the fearlessness and self-reliance which are supposed to be the characteristics of the male only.

Then, again, her face and her manner did not belong to the type represented by the class in which he might, quite reasonably, have placed her; there was a note of something higher.

Not only in her voice, but in the direct, fearless gaze of her wonderful eyes.

She came back presently and held out a box of matches.

She had cast aside her sack, and Ronald saw that her figure possessed a grace which matched her face. He did not know that she had never worn stays, and therefore was not aware that the beautiful curves and contours of her lissom figure were indebted to her freedom from that feminine article of attire. Like most men of his kind, Ronald was an ardent, though perhaps unconscious, admirer of female loveliness; and as he lit his pipe his eye rested on her, respectfully enough, but with keen appreciation.

"Thank you," he said. "I suppose I may smoke; though I suppose I ought not, in a mill?"

"You won't do any harm," she said, in her deep, sweet contralto.

She stood with her left hand resting on her hip, her right still holding the shining scoop. Ronald did not know it, but at that moment she was exactly like one of those little Roman statues one sees in the British museum, dated somewhere B.C. 500. But her attitude, eloquent of natural grace, did strike him; and he drew at his pipe and looked at her with a half-conscious sense of pleasure. He wondered if she were as curious about him as he was about her; but, if she were, she displayed no sign of being so. It seemed to him that she was only patiently desirous of his departure.

He was, characteristically, quite happy and at his ease. He had forgotten all about the train at Shelford, was simply enjoying his pipe, his novel surroundings, and, more than all, the presence, the proximity, of this beautiful young creature. He would have been quite content to sit on the corn-bin for the remainder of the night, gazing at her; he was made so.

"I'm fearfully thirsty," he said presently. "Will you give me a drink of water?"

She made no reply; but she left him, and presently returned with a jar and a glass.

"There's some beer," she said. "It's better than water; and you look tired."

"Do I?" he said. "I don't feel so; but it is a long time since I've had a drink—or anything to eat, for that matter—and I won't say no." He drank the ale almost at a draught. "That's good!" he said. The beer warmed him; he had been rather chilled coming through the mist. "May I beg another glass? Ah, yes, it's very good!"

The generous ale, brewed by a neighbouring farmer, and innocent of any deleterious compound, ran through his veins and set his heart jumping. His eyes, as they dwelt on her, grew bright and cheerful.

"Are you all alone here?" he asked.

"Yes," she said fearlessly and unhesitatingly. "My father's gone down to the village. He is late to-night; perhaps the mist kept him."

"And you are working the mill?" he asked.

She nodded. "Yes; there has been no wind for the last two days; it sprang up to-night, and I set her going."

"You are—young to have so much responsibility," he said. "I mean, something might go wrong."

"What could go wrong?" she asked, with a mild contempt for his ignorance. "It's easy enough. You've only to watch the hoppers, and any one can do that. I've done it all my life."

"Really!" he said, gazing at her.

She met his eyes fearlessly, openly. "I didn't know there was a mill here," he said; "at least, not a mill in working. Has it been working long?"

She shrugged her shoulders slightly, in a fashion that struck Ronald as somewhat foreign, un-English.

"It has been working ever since I can remember," she said indifferently. "My father came here when I was a child, quite a child, and it has been working ever since. Do you live near here?"

"No," replied Ronald, truthfully enough; "I live in London. I'm going there now, if I can get there."

She leant against the woodwork of the narrow passage, and eyed him thoughtfully.

"Perhaps you are hungry?" she said. "I didn't think to ask you. Will you have some bread and butter? There's nothing else."

"Rather!" responded Ronald promptly. "I'm simply starving; but I didn't know it until this moment."

Old age is usually afflicted with rheumatism. Very few past fifty escape its tortures.

Many it bends and deforms. Upon the countenances of others it marks the effects of its awful suffering. Nerviline will cure rheumatism. It takes the pain out of throbbing muscles and swollen joints. It untwists gnarled knuckles. It does this quickly and surely.

Nerviline is not used internally. You won't stay in pain with Nerviline—no one ever does. Just try it—you will be amazed at its magical power over pain, a power it gets from the extracts and juices of certain rare herbs and roots it contains. Gas and Hospitality.

The sound of motor wheels heralding the arrival of unexpected guests has no terrors for the housewife whose menage is run on up-to-date lines. While the visitors are removing the traces of travel, with the hot water which a gas water-heater keeps always "on tap," a match to the gas fire makes the dining room a place of warmth and pleasantness for their reception; and the children love to "help mother" by toasting the crumpets before the clear and smokeless glow.

The gas cooker (or the modern gas trivet by the drawing room's gas fire) boils a kettle of water in no time, and within a quarter of an hour after their arrival the guests are enjoying a cosy chat over the cup that cheers. Should they be persuaded to stay, the invaluable cooker makes it possible, even at such short notice, for the experienced housewife, after a raid upon her emergency store cupboard, to set before them a dainty dinner of which no hostess need be ashamed. Gas means ever-ready hospitality.

Casualty List.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir:—I beg to enclose for your information, and for such publicity as you may desire to give to the same, two lists containing particulars respecting casualties in the 1st Newfoundland Regiment. These particulars have been received by mail and in most instances deal with cases which have been previously reported by telegraph. Those marked "not previously reported" are of sufficiently serious nature to render the reporting of same by cable as necessary. It is probable that reports from the Record Office by mail containing particulars similar to those now sent you will be received from time to time, and these will be passed to the press for such action as may be considered necessary. Copies of these reports by mail the next of kin will of course be immediately notified from this Department but it is not the intention that such information shall be posted up in the ordinary way.
Yours faithfully,
J. R. BENNETT,
Colonial Secretary.

He Couldn't Be Wrong.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

We heard a man say an unusually mean thing about his wife the other day. "How could he say that?" we wondered after he had gone.

"How could he help it?" said the Authorman.

"Help it?" we echoed indignantly. "Why, it was a horrid thing to say. Why shouldn't he help it?"

"He couldn't," persisted the Authorman, "that is, not if he stuck to the main article of his creed."

"What is that?"

"Puts Him in A Hard Place."

"That he can never be wrong. He was in a hard place: he had been practically proved wrong, the only way he could justify himself was to put the blame on his wife. It was a yellow thing to do, but he had to do it. Poor man, I'm rather sorry for him on the whole!"

"Sorry for him!" sniffed the Authorman's wife. "I shouldn't think you'd be, after the way he spoke. I think it rather reflects on you."

The Authorman shrugged his shoulders helplessly. Is there any more utter helplessness than that one feels with a person who is constitutionally incapable of getting one's point of view.

Personally I like the Authorman's analysis of the case, don't you?

After all, could anyone be in a more difficult position than the man who cannot be wrong?

The Simplest Way Out of a Mistake.

The very best of us make mistakes now and then. Other people discover these mistakes and bring them home to us. To admit that one has been wrong is the simplest way out. No one can continue to blame you for a fault when you frankly acknowledge it and avow your intention of overcoming it.

But the man who cannot be wrong cannot thus abandon an untenable position. He must continue to hold it no matter what the odds against him. And to do this he is often forced to abandon fair means and take to foul.

He has to say mean things and show a yellow streak. He has to lie and avail himself of the weapon of unmerited sarcasm and unjustified ridicule.

It Must Be Terrible To Have To Use Such Weapons.

Why shouldn't anyone who couldn't bear to touch such weapons with his finger tips pity the man whose character forces him to employ them?

Besides, there is another penalty for never being wrong.

If you are never willing to blame yourself for anything, you must consider yourself blameless. If you consider yourself blameless, that means that you feel you are perfect. If you think you are perfect, you see no need for growth and development and you will permit yourself to stand still.

And as the most real happiness and satisfaction of life is in growth, in climbing up and on "to new Kingdoms of Heaven," why shouldn't we pity the man to whom this part of life is closed.

Why, indeed?

The Sinking of the "Ancona."

Naples, Nov. 12, via Paris, Nov. 13.—Survivors of the Ancona, interrogated by the authorities of Tunis, testified, according to telegrams received here to-day from Tunis, that a submarine during the night chased the boats containing the passengers and captured some of them.

Paris, Nov. 13.—Passengers aboard the Italian liner Ancona were compelled to seek safety in the boats while the steamer was subjected to a cannonade from an Austrian submarine, according to a graphic story of the sea tragedy told by Dr. Cecile L. Greil, of New York, to the Havas correspondent at Ferryville.

The American woman escaped only through her ability as a gymnast. She tried vainly to find a place in two boats, but there was no room for her. She saved herself by dropping from the deck into a launch which already was in the sea. Her maid was killed in their cabin by a gunshot.

Dr. Greil's story indicates that the torpedo which sent the Ancona to the bottom was not fired until the steamer had been riddled by shots from the guns of the submarine.

"I was in the dining-room of the first-class passengers," Dr. Greil said, "chatting with some of the voyagers when we heard the report of a cannon. There was great excitement on deck and men were running here and there. I asked the ship's doctor what was happening, and he replied that he did not know. Then I went on deck myself.

Shell Killed Maid.
"I saw through a slight fog a submarine about a hundred yards distant. It was equipped with two cannon, forward and aft, which were being fired rapidly. I went down to my cabin to get my papers and there found my maid who pleaded with me to save her.

"A cannon shot interrupted our conversation. A shell entered the vessel through the port-hole and killed my maid. I took my valise and small handbag containing valuables, after putting on my hat and coat, and went up to the deck with a lifebelt.

"Boats were being lowered, all completely filled. I sought to get into one of them and was told there was no room. I went to another and received the same response. I then crossed the deck and saw a launch afloat. This contained the chief engineer, Carlo Lemberi, two doctors, and other first class passengers, some of the women and members of the crew.

"I asked Lemberi to be allowed to get in.

"Come on," he said, at the same time grasping the side of the steamer to prevent the small boat from moving off.

"I gauged well the height which separated me from the boat, and being well trained in gymnastics, I did not hesitate to let myself fall into the launch, landing at the place designated.

"During all this time the submarine had not ceased bombarding the Ancona, not paying the slightest attention to the women, children and men trying to get away. At this moment the submarine was very close to us. The fog lifted and we could clearly distinguish the Austrian flag, which was new.

The Ancona resisted the cannonade well. Many of the shots entered above the waterline, and the holes caused by others were too small to admit much water, as the sea was very calm. To finish the work the submarine discharged a torpedo, and the vessel began to sink.

"Some hours afterwards we encountered a heavily-laden boat, which was leaking. We took aboard five women and four children in order to lighten it. Lemberi then took it in tow, not permitting more passengers to crowd into our boat.

"Lemberi did his best to reassure the unfortunates under his charge, most of whom were in tears, telling them all would be well if they heeded his advice.

"His energetic attitude prevented a panic and finally brought about order. I did all I could to encourage the women and children, who continued their cries of grief.

"When the sun disappeared we saw a black spot in the horizon, and all the survivors became gradually excited. It wasn't another submarine, however, but the steamer Pluton, which had seen our signals and rescued us about 7 o'clock in the evening. Later it headed for Bizerta, after having circled the vicinity of the spot where the Ancona was torpedoed and rescued other survivors who were in boats."

Serbs, Undaunted by Defeats

WILL FIGHT TO THE LAST MAN.

Heavy Guns Blast Mountains to Bits—Left Ruins of Belgrade Covered With Bodies of Their Foes.

(By George Renwick.)
Monastir (by Courier to Saloniki, Nov. 7, thence by Cable to The London Daily Chronicle).—I have just returned here after an exciting and highly interesting visit to that part of Serbia north of the wedge of the Bulgarian invasion.

Owing to the complete interruption of the usual routes of communication it has been necessary, in order to dispatch this message, to come here by the only route with the south which remained open. That route, leading through Nish, Prishtina, Prisrend, Eastern Albania, Dibra, and Ochrida, involved the use of all methods of travel, from an automobile to a native bullock cart, and the journey included four days' hard riding on horseback through mud and across the mountains and torrents of the widest part of Eastern Albania.

Through more than a fortnight of difficult and continuous travel the Serbian military and civil authorities at all times and places rendered me every service in their power, and without their ever-ready help, which I must gratefully acknowledge, I should still be a prisoner in besieged Serbia.

Looking backward across a fortnight of varied and memorable experiences, the main impression which remains fixed and living in my mind is the superb courage and endurance of the Serbian Army and Serbian people in the dark days of sombre trial which are there just now and the magnificent human qualities with which they face death, homelessness, wounds and hunger, and all the terrible tragedies of war which fortune now is dealing out to them with such a heavy hand.

Resolved to Fight to Last Man. I have seen much of this war in its various theatres, but nothing quite so magnificently inspiring as the behavior of the Serbian nation at this great crisis in its history. One must remember that here is a nation which has been at war practically for three years, and still its fortitude is something to marvel at; its heroism still lives undiminished, and its determination knows no abatement. Among the people of all classes there is not the faintest sign of weariness nor the least desire to say that sword and right arm can do no more. No, this struggle of theirs will go on, if need be, to the last yard of Serbian soil and to the last cartridge of the last Serbian patriot.

In the meantime in the South the forces of the Allies gather, and in the North every Serbian heart is stealed to hold on and endure till the relieving armies strike and strike home.

Belgrade Bombardment Appalling.

At Belgrade the bombardment commenced Oct. 5. From behind Zemlin batteries of 42 centimeter guns rained hell on the city, the huge shells throwing up debris to the height of the five-story houses. Every square yard of the city was systematically searched by machine gun fire. When crowds of refugees were streaming out of the city German airmen appeared and dropped bombs on them. But there was no panic.

Until that rain of death and terror attack after attack on the city itself was driven back, but at last the enemy gained a footing.

Then the most formidable part of the Germans' task began. They had to win the capital street by street. It is no exaggeration to say they had to pay a price for every paving stone. Prisoners have told me it was appalling work. Every street corner seemed to be a citadel. On Oct. 8 the street fighting continued fiercely, and before the Germans were masters of Belgrade and the Danube the city was a ghastly mass of smoldering ruins, strewn in the grimest horror with a covering of dead.

Here is a little story which shows the heroic spirit of the Serbian people. Near Palaika I met a little comitadj of 15 years who in his street, Emperor Dusan Street, with five comrades and a supply of hand grenades, kept a German company at bay for two hours. He had three shrapnel wounds but was smiling and eager to fight again. His chief promoted him Corporal on the field of battle.

Once in possession of the city the Germans opened a terrible fire on the Serbian positions behind it. The lines of trenches were searched one by one with a fire of fendish accuracy. Facing Belgrade and Semendria the river bank we offered a long continuing line of flame, but the capture of the hills behind the two places named was also frightfully expensive business. Every one had to be covered with dead to be won, and, indeed, after twelve days of violent onslaught Mackensen had succeeded in obtaining a little more than a foothold on the southern side of the river.

Drina Fighting Equally Fierce.

On the Drina front he found his task equally heavy. Time after time the attacking forces were driven back with appalling losses. Captain Milanomanovich, who was wounded in that region, told me the Germans at times were staggered by the opposition they encountered. In the encounter in which he was wounded the Germans launched a force of 500 men across the river. Not a single man of that body returned alive.

After about ten days of severe fighting Mackensen concentrated his forces on positions beyond Belgrade and Semendria, his object evidently being to drive south from the former place to Kragevevac, important on account of its arsenal, while the Semendria army was to ascend the Morava Valley, the historic highway to Europe by which the Turks invaded Hungary in their progress to the gates of Vienna. This army was evidently intended to join hands with the Bulgarians and their united forces were to turn the Serbian right while the Belgrade army enveloped the Serbian left.

Hills Blown to Pieces.

Two heights nearer at hand, Etichalovac, on my right, and Verbovac, on my left, on both of whom the Serbians were in position, had been subjected to perhaps one of the most appalling deluges of shells of all sizes that the war has yet seen. An officer who had clung with his men to Verbovac till it was folly to stay longer, told me the hill and its neighborhood were simply blown out of existence in the end. From fair green hills they were altered to shapeless masses of iron shrapnel, on which nothing could live.

The hills in possession of the Germans, the retreat of the Shoumadia division and of those to the right and left became necessary, and on the afternoon of the 19th, I saw this movement carried out with a coolness and calmness which makes it one of the finest feats of war.

The men of the Morava, fighting on and for their own fair, beloved corner of the earth, were more than magnificent. A long line of victories has made them a superb fighting force, but in this steady, stubborn, cool retreat they rose superior to all their splendid battle traditions.

The Germans were throwing out forces to right and left. Their cavalry was advancing across the plain and artillery from the farther side of the river was searching the woods in front of the advancing forces. Tall columns of shell fumes sprang up in eerie fashion among trees like figures on a chess board. Various sections of the Shoumadia division moved their guns and thundered in reply. Slowly, slowly, yard after yard, the ground was yielded, one section after another supporting its neighbor into safety.

To say that the men of the Morava were as cool as on parade does not adequately describe their spirit. They were infinitely cooler. They were as gay as on a holiday. They knew they had done their duty and were doing it. They knew that as a result they had so hampered the Germans' advance that if its progress became no more rapid the German plan was foiled, and that at such a rate, Mackensen would take months to carry out his scheme, and in those months succor from the south would wreck him. How steadfastly that Serbian battle line moved south to its new position.

As I watched the Germans took Poscharevac, and a cloud of dust far on the left told of the blowing up by the Serbs of Lubejevo Bridge. "Now," said a Serbian Colonel to me when the time came to leave my position, "we shall see Serbian mud do something more for us."

HARVEST-HOME AT THE FARM AND THE TRENCHES.

The fields gleam gold in sunset rays. The farmer sits alone,
Lost in the light of other days
And summers that have flown;
A shade o'erclouds the harvest field
And dulls the season's joy;
Scarce reck he of the bounteous yield
Without his absent boy.

A fresh young voice sounds in his ear
A snatch of merry song—
And surely Rover there must hear
That whistle clear and strong!
But Rover, wistful by the gate,
Still listens for the call;
The well-known step the horses wait
And whinny in their stall.

The mother, in her household round,
Fulfills each tender care,
While off her lips, without a sound,
Repeat his name in prayer.
The children, bringing home the line
Forget their wanted play—
Wondering what means the "fighting line"
Where Ned has gone to stay.

Far, far away, on alien shores,
A lone young soldier lies,
Where screaming shells and cannon's roar
Drive slumber from his eyes.
The stars shine dull through murky air,
The deadly bombs dart by,
And burning homes, with lurid glare
Redden the eastern sky.

Yet 'mid the dull, resounding boom,
Mid clamor and alarm,
He sees the light of harvest-home
Enfold the distant farm;
He sees his father, in his place,
Guiding the faithful team;
He sees his mother's gladdened face
Raised from her endless seam.

He sees the orchard's fruitage fair,
He hears the apples fall;
He sees old Rover waiting there
To answer to his call.
How real it was, short months before
And now—how far it seems,
Like some bright tale of fairy lore
That fed his childish dreams.

Yet close is One, whose love unknown
Can bless him here as there
With light and peace—enough alone—
For all who seek a share.
This faith he knows his mother's joy,
His father's strength and stay;
Blest heirloom for the absent boy—
That light to guide his way.

His heart is set to stand or fall
For home and freedom dear,
And now he hears the distant call
That tells of "action" near,
The dawn draws nigh, the stars grow dim,
The bugle sounds "Advance!"
What next? Ah, who can tell for him
Who fights—somewhere in France?

The Tomato.

There is no doubt that the tomato is indigenous to America. Exactly where it originated is a mooted question. The name seems to be of Aztec origin, given by some as "tomati" and by others as "xitomate." The word still exists in names of Mexican towns, such as Tomatlan, Tomatepec, etc. Humboldt states that the plant was cultivated for its fruit by the Mexican natives long before the Spanish conquest, while Alphonse de Candolle, in his "Origin of Cultivated Plants," arrives at the conclusion that the plant and its culture for edible purposes originated in Peru, and thence spread to other sections of the Americas. At any rate, it had been known and cultivated extensively in these countries for centuries before the Columbian discovery, and there is little doubt that many of the plants seen and described by the European invaders as wild species were really cultivated varieties originated by the Indians by crossing of selected species. Botanically the common tomato belongs to the order Solanaceae and the genus Lycopersicum, the species which is usually cultivated for food purposes being named esculentum. The designation of the genus, derived from Lycos, a wolf, and persica, a peach, had its origin in the supposed ophrodissiacal qualities and in the real beauty of the fruit of the vegetable.—Bulletin of the Pan-American Union (Washington, U.S.A.).

ATTRACTIVE HANDS.

Attractive hands almost any woman may own if she is willing to give to those members a certain amount of time and thought. Time, because no hand will present the well groomed and cared for appearance that good form demands if treated only to a casual soap and water washing several times a day with an accompanying hasty use of a nail stick; and thought because more than mere time must be given to the subject if one is to make the very most of ones hands.

Cultivate the habit of whisking the orange stick about whenever its point has been used, to push back the cuticle about the edge of the nail with always be in evidence, and the nails will maintain their proper shape. Then you will have to spend a frantically half hour pushing back the hardened cuticle, and perhaps acquire a sore finger into the bargain, when you are suddenly invited at short notice to go somewhere.

Never clip the nails into shape unless you want them to become thick and coarse at the edges. Clipped nails also break off more readily, especially in cold weather. Every woman should have a pair of curved manicure scissors on her dresser but they should be put to use seldom, and then only for clipping a hang nail, or for cutting off the ends or sides of an overlong nail. The dainty shaping should be done carefully with the nail file and the nails may be pointed or rounded as the shape of the fingers and the general shape of the hand suggest. Very thin, tapering fingers look unpleasantly like talons when the nails are too long and too sharply pointed. Pointed nails also emphasize the thickness of naturally thick and stubby fingers.

All Well in India!

In view of the critical state of affairs disclosed in the Balkans the last few days, which culminates in the report from Athens of the fall of Monastir and the retreat of the Serbians, it is a matter of satisfaction that the news from Persia and India is of a more reassuring character. Grand Duke Nicholas seems to have the situation in Persia well in hand, and the Secretary of State for India has pricked the bubble about revolts and uprising in India on a disquieting scale. No doubt the wish is father to the thought, and no doubt German machination and money have done their worst in India, as they attempted to do in South Africa. The great body of Indian troops who have fought for the Empire are inspired by the same spirit as the Non-Com. Irish Catholic interned in Germany, who in answer to the efforts of the Kaiser told him that they would not form a German Irish brigade to fight against the British either in Ireland or Egypt. They asked to be treated as other British prisoners were treated and told him they could not forget they were both Irish Catholics and British soldiers.

If Monastir has fallen, as Athens reports, and as has been expected for some days, the attitude of the Greek Government to the Serbian soldiers who may be forced over the border into their territory cannot be long in doubt. The Greek Government returned an answer to the effect that Serbians, British and French would be treated alike. That answer is enigmatic. It might mean that the Greek Government would attempt to intern all of them. In that case the only action left to the Entente Allies would be to declare war on Greece. General Munro has been diverted from Gallipoli to Salonika and Lord Kitchener is somewhere in the Near East on the spot to make the best of a critical situation.

Souvenir of a German Shell.

Mr. Chas. R. Duder is well represented in this war, his only two sons, Stan and Frank, who are now, and have been almost since the outbreak of hostilities, on active service. Stan is a Lieutenant on board H. M. S. White by Abbey at the Dardanelles, and quite recently won distinction for his alertness in spying an enemy's torpedo boat, thereby saving the warship and crew from possible destruction. Frank Duder, who is with the Princess Patricia's Regiment on the western front, has been in the trenches for a considerable while now. Writing to his father a few days ago from France he paints a vivid picture of the titanic struggle going on there amid the roaring of cannon and bursting of shells. Up to the time of writing he had braved the attacks of the Huns and was feeling fine. Accompanying his letter was a ring which was made out of a piece of aluminium which was secured by Frank from a German shell. He then got it manufactured into the shape of a ring, which now occupies a prominent place on the hand of his father.

STRUCK MINES.

LONDON, To-day.
It is announced the American schooner Helen W. Martin, which struck a mine yesterday and was later reported at anchor, is being towed from Alderburgh, Suffolk, southward. The Greek steamer Athanas, which also struck a mine and was taken into Oazdoep in the Thames estuary and has been beached.

AUSTRIA'S CONTROL OF ROUMANIA.

PARIS, To-day.
M. Jonesou, former Roumanian Minister of Interior, has announced, says a despatch to the Temps from Bucharest, dated Wednesday last, that he would speak at Jassy on Sunday on the diplomatic origin of the treaty between Roumania and Austria-Hungary, which he said was due in part to Austria and almost of the same nature as that of Serbia in 1914. M. Jonesou asserted, without this alliance in effect, it is possible Austria would have attacked Roumania as she did Serbia last year. He said he proposed to tell his compatriots their duty and of the catastrophe which will result if Roumanians fail to do it. The Austro-Roumanian alliance dominated Roumania's policy, said M. Jonesou, except two years ago when Roumania sided with Serbia against Bulgaria and was upheld by Austria. This attempted emancipation surprised and frightened Vienna. It was one of the causes inciting Austria to the folly of 1914. The great mistake of Roumanian politicians had been the persistence of this alliance, when it has lost its reason for existence. After the conclusion of the Triple Entente it was evident that an equilibrium of forces had been re-established and the unnatural alliance became then a big mistake. It is to this fatal alliance that we owe the big number of difficulties of to-day. So many Roumanian officers thanks to it have studied Germany and Austria without any benefit to our army. Moreover, thanks to it, we have no artillery in the gallery for mountain artillery or fortifications in the Carpathians, and no gun and munitions factories. I do not want to disguise the unfavorable inactivity of my country. I propose only to reveal a small part of our history which explains the great work already accomplished since August, 1914. If Austria thirty years was able to force on us an alliance signifying not only renunciation of all future but servitude present, what would be our situation to-morrow with an Austria victorious, and in which the Magyars would be all powerful.

AMERICAN UTOPIANS.

NEW YORK, To-day.
The first formal steps in the campaign for the creation of a world supreme court for judicial settlement of all international disputes were taken at a luncheon given here to-day, which was attended by men of prominent public life from all sections of the country. The luncheon resulted in the formation of the World's Court League of America by the election of a Board of Governors, who will later elect officers and perfect the organization plans. Such court was discussed at Cleveland tonight. Dr. John Wesley Hill, president at to-day's meeting and explained it was not the object of the league to take any hand in bringing about peace in the present war or interfere in any way with the armament plans of the United States. The league proposed to organize a court, consisting of representatives of each country in the world, which will prevent any such outbreak as the present war in its future.

GERMAN LINES GROWING THIN.

PETROGRAD, To-day.
Russian military observers are finding frequent indications that the German lines on this front are growing increasingly thin. These are furnished by reports from the fighting lines, notably from the section north east of Riga. As an instance, it is stated that in capturing the passage between two marshes, the Russians found the sole defenders of the position to be two Germans with machine guns. The drilling of recruits with which the Russians expect to strengthen their own lines on the various fronts is proceeding rapidly on all sides. Drill masters report excellent progress being made in drill work because of the willing spirit of the new men and the admirable relations declared to exist between them and their officers.

GERMAN PAKES ABOUT INDIA.

LONDON, To-day.
The Indian Office to-day made a formal announcement that the German press statements, circulated in foreign countries, regarding disorders in India are absolutely untrue. The announcement specifically denies the report that a revolt has broken out anywhere in India, or that Brahmins, Buddhists, Mohammedans have united to make difficulties for the detested English, as stated from German sources. Denial likewise is given to the assertion that the Government headed an uprising, or that grave disorders already have occurred in Bombay, Madras, Nagpur, Alahabad, Masapur, or that the rebels have interfered with the departure of British troops, causing British troops to retire subsequently and occupying their barracks arsenals. There is not a word of truth in these statements from beginning to end. The Secretary of State for India announces there is no such person as Rajah of Bhagalpur or Nawab of Bahawalpur referred to, he is a minor, 11 years of age.

PREFERENCE FOR THE WOUNDED.

PARIS, To-day.
The Chamber of Deputies to-day adopted a bill giving preference to government service to men mutilated or disabled in war. This preference extends to every branch of the civil service, not merely one half of the places, as had been ordered previously. Amendments measure were accepted giving preference among mutilated or disabled to those who were fathers to largest families. Another amendment voted unanimously was that places should be reserved also for disabled soldiers on monopolies subsidized by the State.

LONDON, To-day.
Kenneth C. Trieste, a former Princeton student, held in London as a German spy, has been released by the British authorities and will sail with his father for the United States to-morrow.

MORE AMERICAN PROTESTS.

WASHINGTON, To-day.
America's protest against placing nearly all articles of commerce on the contraband list of European belligerents, will go to Germany and Austria as well as Britain and her Allies. When Germany and Austria is forwarded to London, virtually identical notes will be despatched to the Teutonic Allies and France and Italy. So far as Germany and Austria are concerned, official regard for the forthcoming protest as more or less academic, from the fact that the commerce raiders and cruisers are no longer on the high seas and their seizures of contraband are limited to the work of submarines. In retaliation for the issuance of the British blockade orders in council, however, Germany has promulgated a list of contraband that includes practically all American products, consequently the State Department has decided a formal protest is necessary to record the assertion of its rights by the United States.

LONDON, To-day.
Lieut.-Col. Elder, Montreal, writes from the Canadian General Hospital (McGILL): "What impresses us more than anything else is the fine, uncomplaining, cheerful spirit of patients. FRENCH FIGHT FOR VELES.

ATHEENS, To-day.

ROOSEVELT'S AID.

TORONTO, To-day.
The American battalion, the 97th, expects Colonel Theodore Roosevelt former President of the United States, to visit Toronto Dec. 11, with a view to aiding the cause of the Allies. A. Minard, President of the American Club, stated to-day as to the report that Col. Roosevelt would offer his service to Canada for active service in the cause of the Allies, he was unable to speak.

EFFORTS TO INCLUDE CHINA.

WASHINGTON, To-day.
Efforts are being made by Britain, France and Russia to include China in the membership of the Entente now aligned against the Germanic powers. The disclosure of this fact directed attention of official Washington to-day to the complicated situation in the Far East, the seriousness of which had not hitherto been realized. It became known that in order to insure friendly relations between Japan and China, conversations had been exchanged and were proceeding with the Chinese coast, and that possibly internal revolution of China through the proposed change from a Republic to a Parliamentary Monarchy had caused some Japanese officials to believe munitions of war should be forbidden from entering.

AN IRISH DIVISION READY.

NEW YORK, To-day.
A cable to the Herald from London this morning says the Daily Chronicle this morning announces that the 16th, all Irish division, commanded by General Sir Lawrence Parsons made up of Catholics, Nationalists, and Ulster Protestants have completed training and is ready to go to the front in the three brigades which form the division. The officers include the brother of John Redmond, the Irish Nationalist Leader, Capt. William, I. H. K. Redmond, M.P., and his nephew, Lieut. Wm. Raymond Redmond, I. D. Esmond, M.P., Capt. Stephen G. Winne, M.P., Capt. J. D. Esmond, M.P. and Lieut. T. M. Kettle, M.P. The Division was eager to enroll the services of Lieut. Robert Emmett but his untimely death prevented. John Redmond, who returned from the Western battle front and acting as a notified address a great recruiting meeting in London for Irish rifles who covered themselves with glory at Loos, says:

The completion of a new Irish division proves that the Kaiser made a flagrant miscalculation when he counted upon hostility of the Green Isle towards Britain. Ireland, Mr. Redmond adds, for the first time in history, is eager to do her full duty to the Empire, which no longer stands for oppression, but for independence of Belgium and Serbia and the nations of Europe, and for the free-

WINTER FIGHTING IN SERBIA.

ZURICH, To-day.
The advance of the Austro-German troops through Serbia are being hampered not only by desperate resistance of the Serbs, but by severe winter weather. According to a despatch from the front the invaders are struggling through deep snow in the mountains northeast of the San-Jak, where their hardships are increased by low temperatures. Serbian positions are taken only after bitter fighting. Some of the fiercest engagements are in heights more than 5,000 feet high, where the troops on both sides are encamped in deep snow. Difficulty is experienced also in maintaining communications and bringing up reinforcements.

RETREATING IN PERFECT ORDER.

LONDON, To-day.
A Router's despatch from Athens, filed yesterday, says: Arrivals from the front depict the situation as less sombre than has been represented. The Serbians are retreating in perfect order and has lost no prisoners. The guns captured by the Bulgarians are old pieces of little value, and a thousand pieces of artillery remain in possession of the Serbs, whose moral is still good. The ultimate issue depends upon the timely arrival of the Allied forces.

CLEARING THE SEA OF ENEMY UNDER-SEA CRAFT.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.
A News Agency despatch from Rome to-day says a submarine in the Mediterranean was reported here to-day, and the incident is believed to be the beginning of a vigorous campaign to clear the Mediterranean and Adriatic of enemy under-sea craft. Italy and France are said to have combined in the formation of a flotilla of fast, small vessels, which will patrol their own Austrian, Albanian, Greek and African coasts until the U boats have been exterminated.

BERLIN ANNOUNCEMENT.

BERLIN, Nov. 19.
The capture of 5,000 Serbians is announced at the War Office to-day.

FROM A REPUBLIC TO A MONARCHY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.
The change by China from a Republic to a Monarchy has been the subject of confidential exchanges between the Allied powers, during the last week, but it only became known here to-day, Japan, so far as is known, has not yet been consulted, the conversations thus far having been confined to the European Entente Allies and the Peking Government. If Japan knows the plans unofficially there is nothing here to indicate what her position will be, although Britain, France and Russia joined Japan in representations to China to postpone the establishment of the monarchy, because it was thought that a change during the present disturbed condition of affairs might provoke revolution and international complications. This latest step by the Allies is understood here to have been initiated because of the monarchical situation alone. It is considered essential by the Allies that such arrangements be made in the Far East as would permanently safeguard their interests. The impending change in China's form of Government has rendered the situation somewhat acute. The fear of revolution in China and the possibility of Japanese interference to preserve peace has been impressed upon the Japanese people, and to an extent has attracted wide attention among European diplomats. By joining the Entente Alliance, none of China's operations could affect the course of the war in Europe, but the move would effectively guarantee Japanese abstinence from interference in China. Japan's attitude is not clear as yet, but two possibilities are considered here as plausible. First, that Japan will join the movement on the theory that her paramount interests in China will not suffer any abridgement, through the future actions of the Allies; or, second, Japan will remain aloof from any agreement, regarding even the future entrance of China as an ally, to not altering the Far East wherever her interests are affected. The origin of the movement to enlist China on the side of the Allies is not yet known here, but there are indications that some Chinese diplomats are inclined very favorably toward it as assuring the integrity of China, and beyond the question of stabilizing the national government.

BRITISH GUNBOATS SUNK.

BERLIN, Nov. 19.
Two British gunboats have been sunk in the Mediterranean, off the Egyptian coast, by a German submarine. An official announcement to this effect was made by the Admiralty to-day. A British auxiliary cruiser also has been put out of action. The statement follows: A submarine on Nov. 6th in Sallim Harbor, destroyed by gunfire two Anglo-Egyptian gunboats, the Prince Abbas and Abdul Momen, each of which was armed with two guns. The same submarine silenced with its fire an armed British merchant steamer, and captured its gun. One of our submarines on Nov. 6th, on the North African coast, sank by torpedo the British auxiliary cruiser Para.

The naval record contains the names of two Egyptian gunboats, Abdel Monavim, and Abdas, which probably are the warships referred to in the German announcement. The Abdel Monavim is 598 tons, built in 1902, and the Abdas is 298 tons, built in 1901. According to the latest naval record they were armed with one 3-pound gun. The Gulf of Sallim is on the north coast of Africa, the boundary between Egypt and Tripoli.

effect was made by the Admiralty to-day. A British auxiliary cruiser also has been put out of action. The statement follows: A submarine on Nov. 6th in Sallim Harbor, destroyed by gunfire two Anglo-Egyptian gunboats, the Prince Abbas and Abdul Momen, each of which was armed with two guns. The same submarine silenced with its fire an armed British merchant steamer, and captured its gun. One of our submarines on Nov. 6th, on the North African coast, sank by torpedo the British auxiliary cruiser Para.

The naval record contains the names of two Egyptian gunboats, Abdel Monavim, and Abdas, which probably are the warships referred to in the German announcement. The Abdel Monavim is 598 tons, built in 1902, and the Abdas is 298 tons, built in 1901. According to the latest naval record they were armed with one 3-pound gun. The Gulf of Sallim is on the north coast of Africa, the boundary between Egypt and Tripoli.

ATTEMPT TO TAKE HER LIFE.
LONDON, Nov. 19.
"My lord I told you you were trying a woman for her life. I have taken enough poison to kill five people," was the dramatic exclamation made by the well known novelist, Miss Annesley Kenesley, as she threw upon the floor a bottle the contents of which she had just swallowed on hearing the court pronounce judgment against her. Miss Kenesley immediately collapsed and was carried unconscious to the emergency ward of the court house. Later she was removed to the hospital where the doctors believe she has a chance to recover. Miss Kenesley's suit was a claim for damages against a whole-

STILL MANUFACTURING.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.
The German Embassy delivered to the State Department to-day for its information, a compilation of reports of Belgian diplomatic agents at various capitals in Europe to their government, which were seized when the German troops entered Brussels. It is alleged by the German government that these reports show to what extent Belgian representatives were interested in European politics in general and in German politics in particular. It is also claimed they indicate Belgium's alignment with the Entente Powers. A portion of the compilation was recently published in the semi-official North German Gazette, and excerpts telegraphed this country by wireless.

What Are You Doing for that Eczema?

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."
"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylex and Zylex Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured. You can get Zylex at your druggists."

HAPPY ENDINGS.

The yarn with happy ending may quite old-fashioned be, but it is often lending much happiness to me. Too many authors bore us with tales that rend the heart, and then stand up before us and talk about their Art. I like the kind of story that leads aggressive chaps through perils dire and glory, and fifty kinds of scrapes. The hero and the maiden should meet all sorts of woe, and for a time be wadin' in snares set by the foe; that slimy foe, exulting, should triumph for a while, and then go catapulting out to the garbage pile. The villainous and sinful should get the hook, say I, while Virtue, glad and grateful, gets closer to the pie. It's useless, tiresome prosing, the yarn the author tells, unless we find it closing with sound of wedding bells. And while the hero's banking his hard-earned roll of kale, the villain should be clanking his fetters in a jail. When to the bookstore wending for something to peruse, look for the happy ending—pay nothing for the blues.

Smelting Plant.

At the request of the Civic Commission, Mr. W. A. Mackay attended last night's meeting of the Board and gave a full explanation of the smelting plant he proposes to erect on the Reid Nhd. Co's. land at the west of the dry dock. The plans submitted were approved, permission for the erection being given with the understanding that the proposed building will be only temporary. Mr. Mackay informed the Board that the work of erection would start as soon as possible, and that he would probably begin next week. He expects to run "full blast" during the winter and is quite optimistic as to the success of the undertaking.

W.M.S.

The St. John's district convention having concluded, a goodly number of delegates and visitors met yesterday afternoon for the purpose of finalizing matters preparatory to the organization of a Branch of the Society for the Newfoundland Conference. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Storey. Mrs. Hemmon gave the address of welcome, which was replied to by Mrs. Maddock, of Carbonear. Mrs. Maddock, organizer for Carbonear and Northern District and Mrs. Hunter, organizer for St. John's, presented very comprehensive reports of the work done in their districts. Notwithstanding the changed conditions, owing to the war, very encouraging results were reported. Much interest was centered in the first meeting of the Branch, and so the session on Thursday evening was well attended. Mrs. Smallwood had the honour of presiding.

The duties of the Secretary of Circles and Bands were outlined in a most interesting manner by Miss Gertrude Parsons. The work of the Society for the past twenty-five years was ably reviewed by Mrs. Fenwick. Much has been gained by the affiliation with Nova Scotia, and the experience thus gained will now be of inestimable value to those upon whom the responsibility of conducting the Branch business will devolve. The Constitution was read and explained, after which the election of officers took place, which resulted as follows: Honorary President—Mrs. (Dr.) Curtis. President—Mrs. E. G. Hunter. 1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. (Rev.) Matthews. 2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. (Dr.) Fenwick. 3rd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. (Rev.) Harris. Recording Secy.—Mrs. John Maddock. Corresponding Secy.—Mrs. Eugene Lindsay. Treasurer—Mrs. Joseph Peters. Secy. Circles & Bands—Miss Gertrude Parsons. Assistant Secy. Circles and Bands—Miss Kate Gooby. Supt. Christian Stewardship—Mrs. A. E. Parkins. Auditor—Mrs. Will G. Currie. District Organizers—St. John's, Mrs. (Rev.) Paine; Carbonear, Mrs. J. Maddock; Bonavista and Twillingate, Mrs. D. P. Omond; Assistant, Mrs. A. Harbour; Western, Mrs. (Rev.) Pincock; Secretary of Lieurance, Mrs. Will G. Currie.

The evening programme was as follows:—
Leader, the new President.
Prayer and Praise Service.
President's Address.
Solo Miss Elsie Herder.
Report, Mrs. John Maddock.
Reading, Miss Bradbury.
Messages of cheer and goodwill from the city Pastors and Dr. Fenwick.

A message of congratulation from Mrs. Ross (President of the Board of Managers).

Mrs. Hunter, the first President of the new Branch of the W.M.S. came in for a goodly, and well-merited share of congratulations, and thanks were extended to all who had aided in making the programme so successful. Newfoundland has given three missionaries to the W.M.S., Mrs. Annie Pinsent, Miss Gertrude Martin and Miss Ethel Hickman, of Grand Bank. The new Branch has chosen for its watchword, "Speak unto the Children of Israel that they go forward. Not by might, not by power but by My Spirit saith the Lord."

A Communion service was held during the afternoon and at the close a social hour was spent.

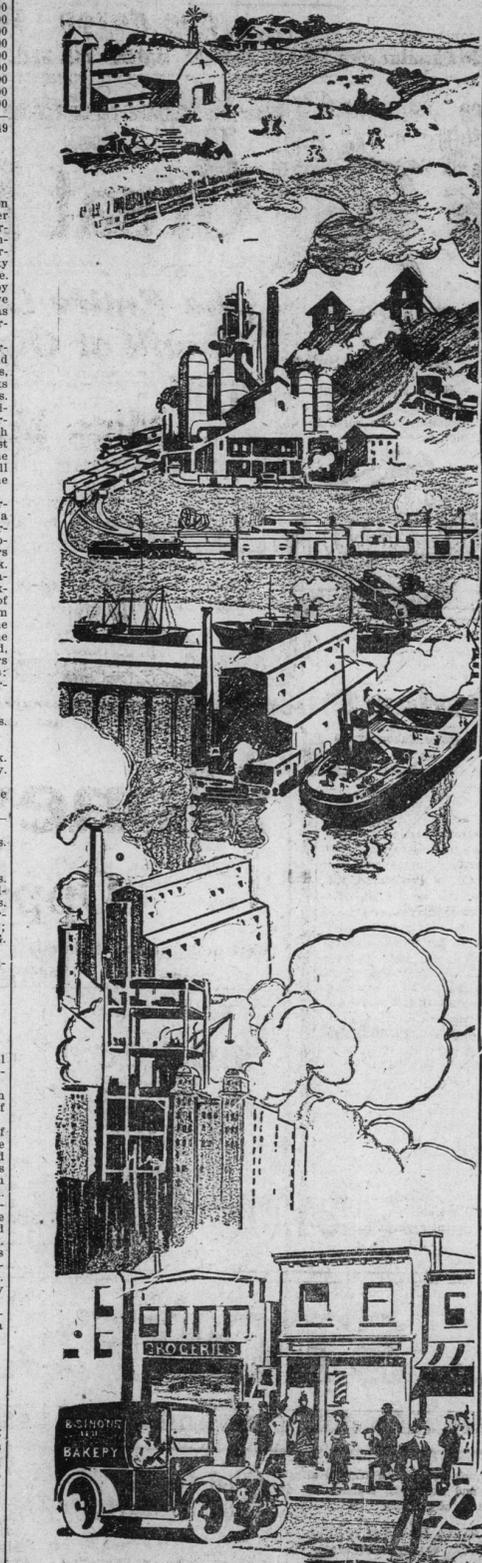

BRAGGING.

By GEORGE FITCH.
Author of "At Good Old Swash"
Bragging is the fine art of putting your best foot into the other fellow's ear at every opportunity. The world is full of braggards. They are our most ambitious class. A bragger never loafs on his job. While other men are resting at night, he will leave home and tramp two miles to find some other man who will stand quietly while the bragger tells him, with one finger hooked into his coat button, how a great many people had said to him that it was an awful thing to elect Wilson president, while really big men, like yours truly, with the prehensible finger, are allowed to languish unperished by fame.

The bragger can be readily distinguished by his long, crooked forefinger. It is his weapon. He hunts the unwary citizen and hooks onto him as Paul Jones hooked onto the British ships. When this is done, he begins to brag, and the only ways of escape are to cut off the finger or give up the coat.

Braggers brag about everything in the world, just as kickers are never at a loss for a subject. If a bragger is rich he brags about it. If he isn't, he brags about how soon he is going to be or how he once was, or because he doesn't join in the silly race for the dollar. Some braggards insist on hanging their own laurel wreaths on themselves, while others are more refined about it and merely repeat to you what some friend has said about them. Some men are so expert that Business is booming!

Toronto, Ont.

Merchants everywhere tell our 800 salesmen that business is booming.

Farmers have had a record crop, at big prices, with big demand at home and abroad.

Stocks of manufactured material are short, and labor is in great demand.

Exports largely exceed imports.

Factories are busy, a great many working overtime.

More freight cars are needed, and steamers are taxed to capacity.

Canada has, in proportion to population, greater exportable surplus of wheat this year than any other country in the world.

Millions of dollars are passing over the merchants' counters.

The people who spend this money want the best service.

They demand it in all kinds of stores, from the smallest to the largest.

They get it in stores which use our up-to-date Cash Registers, which quicken service, stop mistakes, satisfy customers, and increase profits.

Over a million merchants have proved our Cash Registers to be a business necessity.

Last month the N. C. R. in Canada had the largest sales of any month in the past seventeen.

they can brag half a day about their modesty, and get away with it in safety.

Braggers have done wonderful deeds ever since Baron Munchausen the dean of the profession, raised it to an art. Nations have been saved offhand in grocery stores, and bygone wars have been made ten times more horrible by the deeds of gallant braggards who have thoughtfully preserved themselves in time of strife behind a gum tree in order to annihilate the foe later on in a more healthy atmosphere.

The bragger is a happy man because he can always find someone to believe him. He lives in an atmosphere of glory and admiration, and as he supplies most of it himself, he never runs short. We need never worry about trying to praise a bragger, because whatever we say is a pale nothing to what he thinks.

Braggers make themselves very useful to quiet busy men by talking instead of competing with them, and if they can be trained to go away from an office whenever a heavy paper weight is thrown at them, they need never be a nuisance, provided you see them first.

Steamer to Call at Groais Islands Urgently Needed

Clement's schooner, Gardner, master, is now overdue here from the Groais Islands with the products of the season's voyage of fish on board, including a deck load of oil, and grave anxiety is felt for her safety and the lives of those on board. All told, passengers and crew, the schooner has 19 souls. The schooner left Groais Islands last Monday week and was last seen off Catalina on Monday last just at the beginning of the storm, but had not been heard of since. It is feared that she was caught in the storm and was driven to sea. Mr. W. M. Clapp, a member of St. Barbe District, and who is ever anxious in the welfare of his constituents, interested himself this morning and interviewed the Deputy Colonial Secretary and in turn the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. The Minister immediately communicated with Mr. Crosbie, of the Nfld. Produce Company, and arranged to have a steamer leave here this afternoon to go in search of the supposed missing craft. Frequently Mr. Clapp is represented to the Government as Deputy Colonial Secretary and in the property of J. O. Hawvermale; (3) 1 overcoat and 1 shirt, valued at $25, the property of Thomas Bailey, and (4) a leather grip, containing samples and papers, valued at $25, and belonging to Thomas Isaacs. The suspect has been remanded for eight days. Other arrests are expected to follow shortly.

Within the past fortnight the police authorities received complaints that articles of clothing were being missing from city residences. Detective Byrne and Tobin were detailed to hunt up evidence. Last night these two officers arrested a 25-year-old outdoor man as a suspect and who is charged with the following larcenies: (1) 1 overcoat and 1 pair of kid gloves, valued at $21, the property of T. V. Gibb; (2) 1 suit of clothes, 3 shirts, 1 neck tie and 1 pair of underclothes, valued at $35, the property of J. O. Hawvermale; (3) 1 overcoat and 1 shirt, valued at $25, the property of Thomas Bailey, and (4) a leather grip, containing samples and papers, valued at $25, and belonging to Thomas Isaacs. The suspect has been remanded for eight days. Other arrests are expected to follow shortly.

THE HOLLOWAY STUDIO, LIMITED, Corner Bates' Hill and Henry Street, St. John's, Newfoundland

At the City Hall.

The Chairman, Messrs. Ayre, McNamara, Bradshaw, Mullaly, Morris, McGrath, Anderson and Withers were present at last night's meeting of the City Commission.

At the request of the Board Dr. R. A. Brehm, Medical Health Officer, was present to reply to a criticism concerning an alleged breach of the quarantine regulations, and to discuss the present diphtheria outbreak. Regarding the quarantine regulations the Health Officer gave a written reply stating that no report of any breach had come under the notice of the Health Authorities. He said that there was a most capable inspector in charge in whom he had every confidence. In conclusion he requested the Board to give the name of the informant so that the matter could be fully dealt with. With reference to the diphtheria outbreak the Health Officer said that he could not assign any special cause. Most of the cases reported, he said, were probably due to the very inclement and changeable weather, and not to infection. The disease had shown itself amongst all classes, and was not confined to the poorer homes. It had not been prevalent in the city schools where infection would most likely be the cause. Only four cases had been traced to the schools, two of which were from one family in one school and two individual cases in two other schools. In the case of the schools the teachers had been asked to co-operate with the Board of Health, but this effort had not borne much fruit.

The Health Officer then referred to the various ways by which infection is carried, emphasizing the fact that infection is very rarely through a third person. He also gave in detail the system of quarantine regulations as conducted by the Board of Health, and replied to questions asked by members of the Commission. As a result of the interview, the Commission believed that if in the opinion of the public Health Officer and city doctors there was danger of an epidemic, some stringent action should be taken in the matter and that a publicity campaign should be organized forthwith.

The Colonial Secretary wrote suggesting that the Board consider the work of the naval station in the western district the same as the work being done by H. M. Ships and that their supply of coal be exempt from duty. The Board agreed to the proposal.

The Minister of Agriculture and Mines on behalf of J. W. Dewling, asked that the city pay half the cost of a boundary fence. The Engineer will report.

J. W. Dewling applied for water service to house on Plymouth Road. The Engineer will report as to the cost of the service.

A complaint from Margaret Dalton re a retaining wall at Junction of Springdale and Pleasant Streets was referred to the Engineer for report. Morrison and Hunt, for William Moores asked that their client be allowed to build on Warbury Street. The work of erection would take two years and their silent would not take up residence until water and sewerage were in the street. The matter was deferred.

An application from Mary J. Kitchen to make slight repairs to houses in Job Street and Pleasant Street was referred to the Engineer.

J. J. Nangle and William Condy were given permission to erect scaffolds for repairs.

Howlett and Armstrong's amended plans of proposed wood factory, King's Road, were approved.

Callahan and Glass were given permission to lay a new sidewalk, and an application for permission to make other repairs was referred to the Engineer.

C. J. Fox, Secretary-S. P. A., wrote that a Veterinary Surgeon had examined one of the Sanitary horses, and ordered that Inspector Bastow destroy the animal. He enclosed voucher for the Vet's fee $2.50.

The Solicitor's opinion will be asked as to the authority of the S. P. A. and in the meantime another vet. will be consulted.

With the adoption of the various reports and passing of pay rolls the meeting adjourned at 10.30 p.m.

AT THE CRESCENT.

The Crescent Picture Palace is showing a Broncho Billy feature today: "The Western Way" with G. M. Anderson. "The Strange Case of Princess Khan" is one of the best two reel features you've seen in a long while; the photography and stage settings are perfect. "The Beautiful Lady" is a fine domestic drama and "Rooney the Bride" is another funny comedy. "Where can I meet you tonight" is the title of the comic song that Mr. Delmar sings. On Monday, the Crescent presents a three reel Royal feature: "The White Mask." This is a great picture with all the Lubin stars.

ANOTHER SURPRISE NIGHT TO-NIGHT.

At Rossley's there is a grand programme. The comedy sketch of Carroll and Ellor, the female impersonations of Mr. Carroll, and another big surprise turn. Mr. Carroll is a great favorite with the children and he always makes a point to please them. So send them to see the matinee. The pictures are all specially selected to please; adventures, French industries and other interesting and instructive pictures, comedy clean and funny will be shown them. The contest was a Sprinkling Apparatus Installed by Standard Mfg. Co.

Demonstrated and Tested Yesterday Afternoon—New System Spoken Highly About.

The Standard Mfg. Co., Ltd., has just installed a fire extinguishing system or sprinkling apparatus. The establishment and employees are now exempted from the dangers of fire. It consists of upwards of a thousand iron pipes installed throughout the establishment, inside and out. The outside pipes, placed around the eaves of the building, are operated by the touching of a valve inside the main entrance to the factory immediately an outbreak of fire occurs. An alarm rings and instantly the water is sent forth from the pipes from the city main in sprinkling fashion but with a pressure of about 110 pounds. Meanwhile the gong continues ringing until the fire is under control. The pipes on the inside are of somewhat different construction and operation than the outside ones. They are so arranged that they operate automatically from the city main, though at similar pressure. At every eight feet exactly of these pipes there are small solder plugs and whenever a fire occurs and the temperature rises to 150 degrees only the solder plugs give way and water gushes from every section of the pipes in the Department where needed. The main idea of this branch of the system is that the fire is caught in its early stage and for this reason and because of the automatic operation, it is considered of greater advantage than the outside branch.

CHARMING PICTURES AT THE NICKEL.

Hundreds of citizens attended the Nickel Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening and were delighted with the performance. The whole show was a splendid one and proved to all that the Nickel shows nothing but the best. "Pawns of Mars" is a charming story and was played in style by the Vitagraph artists. The other subjects were also excellent. To-night the programme will be repeated. There is always a nice audience on Saturday nights. Patrons are now looking forward to "The Goddess" and the First Nidd. Regiment.

BRITISH THEATRE.

In keeping with the service now being shown at the British will be the four-reel drama entitled "Called Back," to be shown on Monday, the principal scenes being located in London, Venice and Petrograd. This is a picture story of a vital subject, original development and striking characterization. "Called Back" is one of those rare products calculated to interest thousands of intelligent people. The story deals in part with a Nihilist plot and is varied and interesting enough to fill any house. "The Photo-play without a Name" was enthusiastically received, but no one as yet has given it the correct name. It will be shown again to-night. Mrs. Ayre will be heard on Monday in "Kathleen Mavourneen."

Demonstration and Test.

The contractors, Messrs. Clark and Tukes, representing the General Fire Extinguisher Co., of Providence, R.I., who completed the work of installation the previous day, tested and demonstrated the new system yesterday afternoon in the presence of the Board of Directors, and Manager Duder, and the Underwriters of the Standard Company as well as many other prominent business people, including the Managers of other Manufacturing concerns in the city. The first test was outside. Immediately the valve, at the main entrance was pulled in, the water shower from the pipes formed a sort of "curtain" and saturated the buildings in a short time. It also prevented a fire reaching the Standard. In other words the system is a great protection for property owners in the immediate neighborhood. The inside or automatic system was then examined. In the basement of one of the departments a miniature fire was fed with kero oil and started. A minute and a half had just elapsed when the temperature reached 150 degrees and instantly the water rushed from the pipes and promptly quenched the blaze. If in the event of the city main water pressure refusing to act, the sprinkling apparatus will be supplied from the mammoth emergency tank or reservoir, which holds thirty thousand gallons of water. This tank was erected recently and is situated nearby and almost adjoining the factory. As evidence of the tremendously quick water supply from that source can empty itself in less than fifteen minutes. Apart from its effectiveness as a fire extinguisher, the new system is of great benefit from a business and financial standpoint, because as soon as the apparatus is installed the insurance on the company's property is reduced considerably.

THE THOUGHTS OF THEOBALD.

SUNDAY.

Isn't there something nice about looking forward to Sunday? Whether we celebrate it on Saturday or Sunday does not alter our feelings. The one day in the week that has been set apart by Divine revelation for man's benefit and which has been more than justified by the need felt by man, of one day's rest in seven. The story runs that the Lord rested on the seventh day—rested, however, from doing good. I am afraid that all our energies are not expended altogether in doing good all the week, but that by the way.

There are many who look forward to Sunday because on that day they need not rush to get up at six or seven in the morning but may stay in bed till nine or ten—have a leisurely breakfast and get ready for church without much haste, as the services are very conveniently set for eleven o'clock, a much milder demand on our time than the business world asks, when it gets us to work at six or seven or not later than nine o'clock in the morning.

Whatever use we may make of Sunday and whatever of religious works we do on that day, there is one habit that has clung to the day—a good habit, too—and that is the almost universal rule of getting a clean shave, putting on a clean shirt, and our best clothes. Clothes don't make the man, but there is no doubt of the mental and physical refreshment of a clean body, and the habit of our "Sunday-best" born of a respect for the Spiritual uses of the Sabbath, is a goodly usage, and the first falling away of the respect for the day will generally be noticed in a man's paying no attention to his clothes on Sunday.

A Canon of the C. E. told me some time ago that Church going was falling off, especially among what we call the "richer classes." I know, too, that there is a falling off among the classes. Why is it? One reason I think is to be found in the sermon. In these days men like to hear something about everyday affairs, and the relation of their "daily round" and "common task" to the great consummation of the Heavenly Kingdom. We read that the common people heard Him gladly. Was it not the interest in social affairs that crowded St. Thomas's Church three weeks ago when men climbed even to the belfry to hear the preacher?

The church, the prayers, the singing, ought to be the joy of Sunday. The atmosphere of a church ought to breathe the reverence and quiet in which the best thoughts are born. Then, again, we have come so to put all our good works together that we create into one day what we should distribute throughout the week. The result is that on Sunday some people are really overworked. An early service maybe, then morning service, Sunday School in the afternoon, and evening service after tea. It is an ever increasing wonder to me why religious instruction to the young is crowded into an hour and a half each week, while the secular education head the distributing centre of the thing and against this trade. It would have been a great pity if St. John's had voted "wet" and been obliged to obey the law passed by the outports though of course the outports would have had a perfect right to do so.

An object lesson of the city under Prohibition was afforded on Polling Day, when the city was noticeably quiet, orderly and decent.

May St. Barbe vote quickly with the message that the 655 votes have been obtained, and a sufficient surplus of votes to clinch the total be dispensed.

CANVASSING.

The committee who canvassed for Prohibition were different from the General Election men. The work was new to many of them and it required some courage to go from house to house distributing literature and bearing the elector to get his views on Prohibition. But the new men got used to it after a few nights and some, at least really enjoyed it, secure as they felt in a good cause.

Going about among all classes, all sorts and conditions of houses were visited, and one result that may come some day of this canvass, will be the formation among our young men of a Housing Committee with the express object of improving the conditions and the houses in which so many live, not in destitution, but in an advanced stage of poverty. That such a committee, working sanely and judiciously, could exert an influence in our city, I am sure. More and more each year it is evident that the Municipal Councillor of to-day must have an interest in these things.

I was out with some of the most energetic of the Committee one night and I must confess that I felt a little relieved when I could get no answer at the house I tried. The next one: "Daddy is away," said the little girl. A little further on I knocked at a door and after a while a voice called "Is that you, Jack?" Evidently Jack was not at home, and his dearer half did not want any visitors. At another house a nice young lady clasped her hands in glee as she said: "We haven't a man in the house except the baby and he is six months old!"

I was surprised to find so many houses occupied only by ladies. At one house the wife did not know if her husband would vote for Prohibition, and he answered but one little word: "No!" and the door was shut!!

However, that was the only refusal I came up against and there seemed to be general sympathy for the movement.

SUMPTUARY LAWS.

The proposed sumptuary laws will strike a hard blow to "personal liberty"—surely drastic law when it seeks to regulate the way a man should live. In our country, England has got at excessive profits and now cuts down luxurious living, plainly showing how men should act in this terrible time of war. It cannot help commenting on the actions of some of our local companies, which have sold their sealing and passenger steamers for purposes of war. Some paper has stated that these companies have made a rich thing out of these sales and I must seriously question the wisdom of so doing. Surely all that should have been asked would be the cost of the steamers. That they are sold to the Russians of To-day, England makes no difference as Russia's cause is our own.

Stomach Trouble Due to Acidity.

So Says Eminent Specialist.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, wind, and stomach-ache are in probably nine cases out of ten simply evidence that fermentation is taking place in the food contents of the stomach, causing the formation of gas and acids. Wind distends the stomach, and causes that full, oppressive feeling sometimes known as heartburn while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the fermentation of the food, and acid formation is not only unnatural, but may involve most serious consequences if not corrected. To stop or prevent fermentation of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid, and render it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisulphated magnesia, probably the best and most effective corrector of acid stomach known, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water immediately after eating, or whenever wind or acidity is felt. This stops the fermentation, and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments. Permeation, wind and acidity are dangerous and unnecessary. Stop or prevent them by the use of a proper antacid, such as bisulphated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist and thus enable the stomach to do its work properly without being hindered by poisonous gas and dangerous acids.—M. F. P.

Fads and Fashions.

Muffs are small. Boots are fur trimmed. Evening gowns are very low. Silk mantles are lined with broadcloth. Stocks with jabots continue to be worn. Neck scarfs are fringed on all edges. Hats have a decidedly mannish fashion. Beaver fur has grown into great popularity. Ribbon is well used on chic afternoon toilettes.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, Oct. 26th, 1915.
THE TRAGEDY OF NURSE CAVELL.

The murder of Nurse Cavell in Brussels came as a shock to everyone in this country. The feelings of rage and pity have been intensified by the publication of the official papers last Friday. These papers made clear the incredibly mean and pettifogging tricks to which the high German officials stooped to deceive the American and Spanish Ministers about the trial and its result. Every act of the tragedy, from the arrest of Miss Cavell and the false official promises to acquaint the Ministers with the progress of the trial until the execution, was not only brutal but unbelievably "low and mean." But every act of that noble woman shone all the brighter because of it. The thought that is in one's mind is the case of the German Vice Consul at Sunderland, who was tried for doing what was virtually what Miss Cavell did. He harbored German reservists, provided them with money, and helped to smuggle them out of England. He even bullied some into going. He received a careful trial, was found guilty and sentenced to death. He appealed to a higher court, and his case was considered again with due deliberation. He was acquitted on what was really a technical point, for there was no real doubt as to his knowledge of the proclamation of war. In other words, every doubtful point was strained in his favor because he was an enemy. In Brussels we have a woman whose life had been given to works of tenderness and pity assisting her own countrymen out of fearful danger. There was no need for hurry or hot blood in the trial. The court was miles behind the front. Yet

Piqua, Ohio.—"I would be very ungrateful if I failed to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the praise it deserves, for I have taken it at different times and it always relieved me when other medicines failed, and when I hear a woman complain I always recommend it. Last winter I was attacked with a severe case of organic weakness. I had backache, pains in my hips and over my kidneys, headache, dizziness, lassitude, had no energy, limbs ached and I was always tired. I was hardly able to do my housework. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on one other occasion, and it had helped me so I took it again and it built me up, until now I feel like a new woman. You have my hearty consent to use my name and testimonial in any way and I hope it will benefit suffering women."—Mrs. ORPHEA TURNER, 431 S. Wayne St., Piqua, Ohio.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

gallantly in Flanders have been without music of the kind supplied by good military bands, but this is to be remedied forthwith. The day of going into action with bands playing and colors flying has gone for ever, but many who know something of the psychology of Thomas Atkins have long felt that there is no valid reason why soldiers in rest camps should not have the benefit of the inspiring influence of good martial music. Even if no other good purpose were served it would take their thoughts away from the sterner work in which they engage and so help to combine rest of mind with physical rest and recuperation. When the scheme was mooted to that veteran soldier musician Captain J. Mackenzie Rogan, bandmaster of the Coldstream Guards, he declared that every one of his men would volunteer, while he would be delighted to go in charge of them and spend his military jubilee in helping to cheer the fighting men. The Grenadiers, under Captain Williams, will go first and will be followed by each of the other bands of the brigade of Guards in turn. Precise statements of military movements are not permitted, but there can be no harm in saying that next week will see the Grenadiers Band busily engaged in lightening campaigning labors.

WOMEN IN THE GERMAN TRENCHES.

A very painful aspect of the war has been brought to light once more by the successful advance against the German western front. Wounded men in hospital here tell me that it is not at all uncommon to find women among the German dead in entrenchments demolished by our artillery and that in entrenchments and dug-outs from which the enemy's last defenders are driven at the layonet's point are usually to be found articles of women's attire. It is the common talk of the army that the Germans have women in the trenches. Who are these women? Presumably they are Belgians. It is estimated in Belgian circles that many thousands of women have disappeared from the towns in German hands, and one figure brought home and publicly stated by a recent Parliamentary visitor to the Western front put the number at thirty thousand. Evidence has accumulated of the wholesale kidnaping of women by the German armies, and there is too much reason to know that German "chivalry" is deeply stained with this as with other crimes. It is in no wise surprising that this should be so. Crimes against women were the habitual practice of the Teutonic soldiery of the early Middle Ages, and the Germanisation of other peoples by force in war is one of the doctrines of political strategy defended by the political philosophers of modern Germany. The brutal strain has persisted for many centuries, and the statistics of crimes against women and of illegitimacy are appallingly high in Germany.

HOARDING GOLD.

Compulsion has been advocated lately for almost everything in some form or another, and bankers are now demanding that people in country districts should be obliged to yield up their gold in exchange for notes as has been done by practically everybody in towns. Visits paid to rural areas have shown from time to time that a good deal of gold is still in circulation in small places, though not so much in market towns where banks are the centers of business. A revelation, however, is made by a banking expert who has been lately looking up his agricultural property, and who says that he received his rents, sometimes in considerable accumulated amounts, almost entirely in gold. We found that Treasury notes were largely a matter of hearsay and had no part in local currency.

Instant Relief From Eczema

You can stop that awful itch from eczema and other skin troubles in two seconds. Seems too good to be true—but it is true, and we vouch for it. Just a few drops of the simple, cooling wash, the D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema, a new remedy that is attracting widespread attention and the itch stops instantly. The first bottle will prove it. Eczema, Bad Leg, Ring-worm, Salt Rheum, Barber's Itch, Psoriasis, Open Sores and Itching Rash and other skin troubles are caused by myriads of germs at work in the skin. Unless these germs are promptly destroyed they rapidly multiply, gnawing their way deep into the sensitive tissue. This is what causes that awful itch, and what seemed a mere rash may grow worse and develop into a loathsome and torturing skin disease with its years and years of misery. Don't take any chances! Destroy the germs at the beginning of the trouble with that soothing and cleansing wash, the D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema. If you have skin trouble of any kind, get a bottle of D. D. D. Prescription to-day. Sold Everywhere.

Girls! Draw A Moist Cloth Through Hair Double Its Beauty

Try this! Hair gets thick, glossy, wavy and beautiful at once.

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—That's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in a few minutes you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff, cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

Farmhouse safes and cottage stockings still hold their own against the banks in remote places in many parts of the country where money passes through few hands. This gold of course ought to be in the Bank of England, and the £1 ($5) note an accepted unit as it is and long has been in Scotland. The remedy proposed is that official inquiry should be made in areas where it is necessary and people compelled under penalty to disclose their holdings of gold and to exchange them for notes. It is said that the result would show a considerable increase in the national gold reserves.

THE NEUTRALISATION OF CENTRAL AFRICA.

Sir Edward Grey has stated that last November he informed the United States Ambassador that the proposal to neutralise Central Africa was not practicable. This was the first official statement that such a proposal had been considered. J. A. C. Graaff, a member of the South African Cabinet, is at present in London. In reply to a question on the subject today, he said that he was surprised to read Sir Edward Grey's statement as the matter had never, to the best of his knowledge, come before the Union Government last year and he, therefore, knew nothing about it. He expressed the view that any question affecting black and white in Central Africa was of first moment to South Africa.

THE RECRUIT'S HEART.

Since the outbreak of the war a large number of healthy young men have been rejected as recruits because of some manifestation of the heart which the medical examiner took to be abnormal and a sign of weakness. Many soldiers have also been invalided out of the army because of these manifestations. At the request of the War Office Sir James Mackenzie, lecturer on cardiac research at the London Hospital, has drawn up a memorandum upon this subject to serve as a guide to medical examiners of recruits, and as this memorandum may not come before all the examiners the Director-General of the Royal Army Medical Corps has asked Sir James Mackenzie to draw the attention of the profession to it. As to the significance of abnormal signs in the recruit's heart the memorandum points out that the healthy heart in the young can exhibit various peculiarities which are perfectly physiological in origin and indicative neither of disease nor of impairment. Before examining the heart the doctor is instructed to find out the functional efficiency by ascertaining how it responds to effort. This is shown by finding out the amount of exertion the candidate has been accustomed to take in the past in his work or play, and if he can undergo severe bodily exertion without distress. Instructions are given as to the forms of irregularity that need to be considered, and it is shown that irregularities indicating serious mischief will be associated with such diminution of the functional efficiency that the candidate would not seek to recruit. As is well known, many candidates whose hearts are perfectly healthy suffer from palpitation or excited action of the heart during examination. If such a candidate be told to lie down and breathe slowly and deeply for a few minutes the heart's action becomes less violent and the rate slows during expiration. With a history of good functional efficiency the candidate may be considered suitable for enlistment.

Why We Live Longer.

"When Goodyear discovered the vulcanizing process of treating rubber he added immeasurably to the world's health. About fifty million pairs of rubber boots and shoes are made, sold and worn in the United States every year. When you reflect that the most fruitful cause of colds—and all the dangerous and fatal diseases that colds lead to—is a pair of wet feet, it is easy to see that this enormous use of rubber footwear must have a very marked influence on the general standard of health. When Goodyear discovered how to make rubbers, human longevity took a great bound forward."—Popular Science.

We Know Just How You Feel!

You need an engine for your boat and you are worried almost to death trying to decide which is the best one to buy. One fellow tells you to buy his machine because it is cheaper than others. Another firm advises you that they have been in the engine business longer than anyone else and therefore their machines are the best. Then along comes another chap with an engine which he claims is entirely new and better than anything else on the market.

NOW LISTEN.

DON'T buy an engine or any other piece of machinery because it is cheap; probably it has been made cheap.

DON'T experiment with new designs, let the other fellow do that.

DON'T depend too much on what any manufacturer says about his own product. Ask someone who has used it.

We would like to give you names of parties using FERRO Engines.

Write for catalogue with prices and terms, also ask for list of prominent men throughout Newfoundland who are using FERRO Engines. Ask them what they think about the FERRO.
