WHEN LOVE Came Too Late.

CHAPTER IV.
 A Woman-Hater.

Dinner was over at the Grange, and Miss Amelia and Olivia were in the drawing-room waiting for the appearance of the squire, who, for form's sake, lingered behind for a quarter of an hour in the dining-room to sip a glass of the famous Vanley port.

It was Miss Amelia's custom every evening during this quarter of an hour to enjoy a peaceful snooze in an armchair carefully placed by the footman out of the light of the lamps, from which she awoke on the appearance of her brother to declare with a start that really in another moment she should have been asleep.

Olivia was sitting as usual with a book in her hand; but this evening the volume remained open at the same page, and instead of reading she was thinking of her strange meeting with the "mysterious stranger" of The Dell.

It need scarcely be said that Olivia was not sentimentally. She was the last girl in the world to invest any one with a romantic halo or to "get up a sentiment" over any man; but try as she would she could not dispense the remembrance of the handsome face with its sad eyes, and the grave voice with its almost tragic tones, from her mind, and it was with a feeling of actual relief from her own too persistent dwelling upon him that she heard the door open, and, looking up, saw her father enter.

Miss Amelia heard it too, and jerked herself upright with the usual "Is that you, Edwin? Another moment," etc.

Olivia, looking at her father, saw that instead of the smile of amused incredulity with which he usually received Miss Amelia's assertion, his face wore an anxious and thoughtful expression, and as he came up to her to get his cup of coffee, she said in a low voice:

"Is anything the matter, papa?"

"Anything the matter?" he repeated, with a little start. "No. What should be the matter?"

"I don't know," said Olivia, "but I thought you looked father worried, dear."

"No, no," he said, with a forced kind of cheerfulness. "I am a little tired, I think, that is all. I am sorry Bertie did not stay to dinner."
 "So am I," said Olivia, promptly. "How well he looked! Dear Bertie!"
 The squire glanced at her.

"Or Mr. Bradstone," he said. "I thought he meant staying."

"Yes," said Olivia in a colder voice. "A good fellow, Bradstone!" said the squire, stirring his coffee. "I don't think Bertie did him justice this afternoon. If he knew him as well as I do—

 "But you do not know him very well, papa," said Olivia, gently.
 The squire frowned slightly.

"I don't know why you should say that, Olivia," he said. "I—you—have seen a great deal of him—"

"That is true," responded Olivia, dryly, "and all we have seen is to his credit. Don't let us discuss Mr. Bradstone, papa," she was saying almost pleadingly, when the butler entered, and, approaching the squire, said something in a low and guarded voice, and the squire's face changed.

But Olivia's ears were quick, and she caught the word "accident."
 "Oh, papa! what is it? Tell me, Fleming," Fleming, the butler, glanced from her to the squire. "Something has happened," she said, growing pale, but speaking calmly and composedly, for Olivia was not hysterical by any means. "What is it? Why do you not tell me, papa?"

"Don't be alarmed," said the squire, putting his hand upon her arm. "There has been an accident. Tell us again, Fleming; you need not be afraid of your mistress."

"It's Bessie Alford, Miss Olivia," began the butler.

"Ah!" breathed Olivia, with a little piteous catch in her voice. "Poor Bessie! the pony!"

"Yes, miss," said Fleming, gravely. "The pony—she was driving him home—has run away with her. I always told Alford that it wasn't safe for her to drive. He's run away and Bessie is hurt."

Olivia's face grew pale.

"Bessie hurt!" she murmured piteously.

"What's that? Who's killed?" exclaimed Aunt Amelia, springing to her feet like a jack-in-the-box. "Don't attempt to keep it from me. I will know who is killed! Oh, dear! I feel—I feel as if I were going to faint. Fleming, a glass of water. Oh, Edwin, I know something dreadful is going to happen!" she wound up with a groan and a wail.

Fleming stolidly got her a glass of water; no one else took any notice of her.

Olivia stood for a moment pale and thoughtful; then she moved to the door.

"I must go to her, papa," she said.

"Where is she, Fleming?"

"At the lodge, miss," he replied, gravely. "The pony fell down or was stopped not far from there—I have not got the rights of it quite, miss—and they carried Bessie home."

Olivia opened the door, and, disregarding her aunt's shriek of "Where are you going Olivia?" ran into the hall and caught up a shawl. The squire, without a word, put on his hat, and they went out together.

"Poor Bessie!" murmured Olivia, as they ran down the drive. "I warned her against the pony this afternoon."

They say lights moving behind the windows of the lodge, and in response to the squire's knock a boy opened the door.

"I will wait here; send for me if you want me," said the squire.

Olivia passed in, and ran noiselessly up the stairs, and pushed open the half-closed door of Bessie's room.

For a moment she saw only the pretty, innocent face lying white and pale upon the pillow; then as she entered she saw, in the flickering of the solitary candle, a tall figure bending over the bed.

It moved as she entered, and, turning, presented the face of Mr. Bradstone.

For a moment the two, girl and man, looked at each other, and she saw in that moment that the face was paler even than when she had seen it in the afternoon, and that there was a blood-red mark across the left temple. Alford stood by—stupefied and useless.

She drew near the bed, and went down on her knees beside the unconscious girl, and was about to murmur her name when she felt a hand upon her arm, and a voice said in low accents of command:

"Don't speak to her, please."
 Olivia looked into the grave, handsome face with a meekness utterly novel and strange to her.

"Can I—can I do anything?" she whispered. "Poor Bessie!"

"Yes," he said in the same low, calm tone. "Get me some cold water."
 She glided to the water-jug, and poured some out for him, and watched him in a frenzy of anxiety as he bathed the girl's white forehead.

But, great as was her anxiety and excitement, she noticed—and remembered long afterward—how gently and pityingly he did his work. He, the woman-hater!

"Is—she much hurt?" she whispered, after a time.

"No," he whispered, in reply. "She is stunned. Do not be alarmed. She will recover consciousness presently."

"Are you—are you a doctor?" asked Olivia, a few minutes later; and the question was caused by the calm, deliberate way in which he did what he best be done.

He smiled.

"No; but it is not the first accident I have seen. She will come to presently. I have sent to Wainford for the doctor. Do not be alarmed; there is no danger."

Almost as soon as he spoke, Bessie opened her eyes, and, after a wild glance or two, fixed them upon the pale, handsome face bending over her.

"Is—she hurt?" she faltered.

"Do you mean me?" said Mr. Bradstone. "No, I am not hurt in the least."

Bessie heaved a sigh, then she caught sight of the cut on his temple.

"What's that? You are hurt!" she exclaimed.

"That is nothing," he said, with a smile; "I think you had better not talk."

But Bessie did not agree with him, evidently.

"He saved my life—this gentleman, Miss Olivia!" she panted. "I was just falling under the wheel when he stopped Toby, and I saw him go down."

She shuddered. "Yes, Miss Olivia, he saved my life, he did!" and her large, innocent eyes fixed themselves on Mr. Bradstone, and filled with tears.

He smiled.

"You will be quite ashamed of talking such nonsense when you have recovered, Miss Bessie," he said. "Now drink this, will you, please?" and he held a flask of brandy to her lips.

She sipped it obediently, her brown eyes fixed upon his with the gratitude, the devotion which one sees in a dumb animal often enough, but in a human, alas! only too seldom. Then, with a sigh, she turned her face away, and closed her eyes.

Mr. Bradstone stood upright.

"She will be all right now," he said. "No bones are broken, thank Heaven! It was the shock as much as the blow on the forehead that stunned her."

There was a step on the stair, and the local doctor entered.

Mr. Bradstone drew him aside, and gave a short and succinct account of the accident.

"Yes, yes," murmured the doctor. "and you, sir? you seem to have been hurt!"

"Not in the least," said Mr. Bradstone, "not in the very least, thanks," and, with a bow to Olivia, he passed out of the room.

Obeying an impulse she could not resist, Olivia followed him, and, darting at the squire, who was standing outside the lodge door, said:

"He—this gentleman—saved Bessie's life!"

The squire started, as well he might and approached the tall figure.

"My daughter tells me, sir," he said, "that this poor girl owes her life to your courage and presence of mind. I hope you will allow me to express my sense of your bravery. My name is Vanley—"

For a moment Mr. Bradstone stood and regarded him with a frank smile; then his face changed suddenly.

"No thanks are due, sir; good-night," he said, gravely, almost sternly; and before another word could be said he raised his hat and passed them.

WOMAN GIVEN TWO DAYS

To Make Up Her Mind for Surgical Operation. She Refused; Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"One year ago I was very sick and I suffered with pains in my side and back until I nearly went crazy. I went to different doctors and they all said I had female trouble and would not get any relief until I would be operated on. I had suffered for four years before this time, but I kept getting worse the more medicine I took. Every month since I was a young girl I had suffered with cramps in my sides at periods and was never regular. I saw your advertisement in the newspaper and the picture of a woman who had been saved from an operation and this picture was impressed on my mind. The doctor had given me only two more days to make up my mind so I sent my husband to the drug store at once for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and believe me, I only took four doses before I felt a change and when I had finished the third bottle I was cured and never felt better. I grant you the privilege to publish my letter and am only too glad to let other women know of my cure."—Mrs. THOS. MCGONIGAL, 3432 Hartsville Street, Phila., Pa.

CHAPTER V.
 The Key to the Riddle.
 The squire looked after the retreating figure in astonishment, and then at Olivia. She was trembling slightly, and the red and white were chasing each other on her downcast face.

"What is the matter? Who was he? Why did he go off like that?" he said.

Olivia was silent for a moment.

"That is the gentleman who has bought The Dell, papa. Mr. Bradstone."

The squire started.

"It was he, was it? And he saved Bessie's life?"

"She says so, papa. He was hurt. Did you see the marks on his forehead?"

"No," said the squire. "I scarcely saw his face, and yet, from what I saw of it I should say, emphatically, that he was a gentleman."

"Oh, yes!" murmured Olivia, drawing her shawl round her.

"Most certainly a gentleman. It was a striking face. What nonsense was it that Sparrow was talking of a collier or something of that kind? He could not have seen the man."

"It was not Mr. Sparrow, but Mr. Bradstone, who suggested that Mr. Bradstone was a collier," she said in a low voice.

"Nonsense!" said the squire, almost impatiently. "That is not the face of a man in hiding from the consequences of some vulgar crime. There was not a trace of vice in it. Sad and melancholy it was, without doubt, but—"

"Why did he go off like that?"

Olivia was silent for a moment.

"You heard what Mr. Sparrow said, papa. He is a woman-hater."

"What, Sparrow?" exclaimed the squire, staring at her.

"No, no; this—this Mr. Bradstone."

"And he takes the trouble—and gets knocked about—in saving a girl's life. What rubbish!" he said. "That is a poor kind of woman-hater. Sparrow has got hold of some cock-and-bull story. I scarcely listened to him this afternoon, and don't remember what it was he said; but it is nonsense, utter nonsense. This man is a gentleman. I never saw a finer face."

He paused and knit his brows. "Now I recall it, I seem to think that I remember having seen it before."

Olivia drew nearer to him with an eager expression, in her beautiful eyes.

"Papa!"

"Yes," he said, "I have a vague kind of impression, but I can't fix it. Are you coming now?"

Olivia breathed a short sigh of disappointment.

"I thought you might have remembered she said, 'I will come in one moment, papa. I must just see Bessie again.'"

"All right, I am in no hurry," said the squire, and he sat down on the settle outside the door, and instantly, as it would seem, was absorbed by his own thoughts.

Here they are! Just what you've been looking for. Baseball and Romance combined, the most interesting stories ever written.

The author managed a league team a number of years ago and is thoroughly familiar with the doings of baseball players on and off the field. Father and son will find equal delight in reading these magnificent stories.

"Any Boy with Plenty of Grit," "Baseball at its Finest," and "The Girl in the Case"—these are the elements which compose the most successful juvenile fiction ever written. You don't have to be a fan to enjoy these books; all you need to be is really human and alive, with plenty of red blood.

NET RESULTS OF BRITISH OFFENSIVE.

PARIS, Aug. 2.—The net results of the British offensive on the River Somme from the 15th of July, is stated to-day. The whole of the German position between Oville, Montauban, and the greater part of the second German position in British hands. Seven villages were retaken and 12,000 officers and men captured. Military prisoners included 35 field guns, anti-aircraft gun, several howitzers, an enormous quantity of machine guns, trench cannon and mortars. 21 enemy aeroplanes were brought down beyond question. There were seen falling dead on the earth. The German losses in the Somme are estimated to be very serious. The Germans call numerous reserves, and brought to the Somme front the best period of their training, in which were reposing or in action. The average loss, corrected, is about one division.

LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The second anniversary of many's declaration of war. Russia finds the relative position of the belligerents very different from those of the first anniversary. Entente Allies are now pursuing successful offensive on all fronts. The Central Powers are everywhere on the defensive.

Emperor William celebrated his 60th birthday. The Kaiser's decision by the issue of proclamation to his army, navy and people breathed a spirit of confidence of ultimate victory for many.

Operations on the eastern front to surpass those of the dramatic interest. Military criticism great admiration for tactics, one important object of their opinion has been to the Austrians from the German lines on the Russian front. This now claimed, has been virtually accomplished by the Russians to a wedge into the Austro-German lines along the front of the Kovel-Vladimir Volynski. The view is that if the Russians have the completed the severance of the lines from the Austrians, the decisive result of the whole of the Russian General Brusiloff's attack will have been obtained. It is believed by military observers that out German support the Austrians will become demoralized and lapse. They say the Austrians between the Lipa, and Dneister are doomed. There has been confirmation of the reports received from Rome that Kovel and Vladimir Volynski have been evacuated, but is usually well informed on Russian news. A correspondent with the Russian forces has reported that the roads towards Kovel are black with the retreating enemy. Exactly General Brusiloff's next blow fall is not known. The Russian virtually within the same distance from both Kovel and Vladimir Volynski and also are pressing to Lemberg.

Since Sunday's combined advance on the Somme line by the British French, the situation there has comparatively quiet.

FURTHER PROGRESS.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—A late official bulletin says that their progress has been made by British troops to-day to the east of the river in the River Somme region.

FRENCH TAKE GERMAN POSITIONS.

Tuesday's Late Messages.

NET RESULTS OF BRITISH OFFENSIVE.

PARIS, Aug. 1. The net results of the British offensive on the River Somme from the 15th of July, is stated officially to-day. The whole of the first German position between Ovillers and Montauban, and the greater part of the second German position fell into British hands. Seven villages were retaken and 12,000 officers and men made prisoners. Military material captured included 35 field guns, naval gun, anti-aircraft gun, several large howitzers, an enormous quantity of machine guns, trench cannon and munitions. 21 enemy aeroplanes were brought down beyond question; a dozen were seen falling head downwards to the earth. The German losses in men, the statement says, must have been numerous reserves, and have brought to the Somme front within the period treated of, 12 divisions which were reposing or in other sections. The average loss, correctly estimated, is about one division daily.

LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, Aug. 1. The second anniversary of Germany's declaration of war against Russia finds the relative positions of the belligerents very different from those of the first anniversary. The Entente Allies are now pursuing a successful offensive on all fronts, and the Central Powers are virtually everywhere on the defensive.

Emperor William celebrated the occasion by the issue of proclamations to his army, navy and people, which breathed a spirit of continued confidence of ultimate victory for Germany.

Operations on the eastern front continue to surpass those of the west in dramatic interest. Military critics express great admiration for Russian tactics, one important object of which in their opinion has been to isolate the Austrians from the German armies on the Russian front. This it is now claimed, has been virtually accomplished by the Russians driving a wedge into the Austro-German position along the front from Kovel to Vladimir Volynski. The view here is that if the Russians have thus accomplished the severance of the Germans from the Austrians, the most decisive result of the whole of the Russian General Brusiloff's strategy will have been obtained, it being agreed by military observers that without German support the Austrian armies will become demoralized and collapse. They say the Austrians between the Lipa and Danester rivers are doomed. There has been no confirmation of the reports received from Rome that Kovel and Vladimir Volynski have been evacuated, but Rome is usually well informed on Russian news. A correspondent with the Russian forces has reported that the roads towards Kovel are black with the retreating enemy. Exactly where General Brusiloff's next blow will fall is not known. The Russians are virtually within the same distance from both Kovel and Vladimir Volynski and also are pressing towards Lemberg.

Since Sunday's combined advance on the Somme line by the British and French, the situation there has been comparatively quiet.

FURTHER PROGRESS.

LONDON, Aug. 1. A late official bulletin says that further progress has been made by British troops to-day to the east of Pozieres in the River Somme region.

PARIS, Aug. 1. North of the River Somme last night, French troops took powerfully fortified German positions between Hen Wood and Mouca farm. It was officially announced by the French War Department this morning.

TO PROLONG PARLIAMENT.

LONDON, Aug. 1. Premier Asquith announced in the Commons to-day that before Parliament adjourned for the summer recess, the Government would introduce a bill to prolong further the life of the present Parliament, and would at the same time announce the Government's proposals regarding registration and the creation of a new register.

TALK OF ASQUITH'S RESIGNATION. LONDON, Aug. 2. Some of the morning papers attach great importance to a remark by Mr. Asquith in the Commons yesterday. When replying to a query concerning certain routine matters at the autumn session of Parliament, he said, "I do not know who will be responsible for the conduct of the business at next session. I have not the faintest idea." This says the Daily Graphic may be a preliminary hint that he intends to retire. The Chronicle says things have not gone well with the Government in the House during the past fortnight, and in actual conditions some members are disposed to read a good deal into these words of the Premier. Hence a revival of reports of Cabinet reconstruction which rumor says will be accomplished in the autumn with Churchill and Carson again in ministerial offices.

ON THE WAY HOME.

QUEBEC, Aug. 1. A party of six officers, 50 N.C.O.'s and men from the Nfld. Overseas Force arrived in port by the C.P.R. steamer Cornubian from London, shortly after 7 this p.m. They left late to-night for Nfld. over the Inter-Colonial railway. The officers are all on leave, while the majority of the others of the party who are recovering from wounds, are due to receive their discharge as medically unfit for further service. The Cornubian carried 171 passengers.

Wednesday's Messages.

NO CHANGE IN THE SITUATION.

LONDON, Aug. 2. A British official issued this evening reads: There is no change in the situation, and the day was comparatively quiet, except for hostile artillery activity against Trones Wood. During the last twenty-four hours our artillery, in co-operation with a flying corps, destroyed seven gun emplacements and six ammunition dumps near Grande-Cour, also further emplacements on other parts of the front. A few hostile aeroplanes crossed our lines for a short distance, but were quickly driven back. One was brought down, another was damaged. The enemy appears anxious to avoid aerial combats.

AUSTRIANS SUFFER DEFEAT.

ROME, Aug. 2. The Austrians suffered a severe defeat in Monday's engagements in Astio Valley, the War Office announced to-day. Their attacks on the Italian lines at Monte Cimole were repulsed with extremely heavy losses for the attacking forces. An Italian aerial squadron dropped four tons of high explosives on the Whitehead torpedo and submarine works of West Fiume yesterday, seriously damaging the plant.

RUMOR OF NAVAL ENGAGEMENT.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2. A London cable to the Journal says that a Central News despatch from Amsterdam, states that heavy cannonading is reported at sea. It is believed in Holland that a naval engagement occurred, but no details have been received.

WILL BE EXECUTED TO-MORROW.

LONDON, Aug. 2. Lord Robert Cecil to-day authorized the Associated Press to state that Roger Casement would be executed to-morrow morning. There will be no reprieve.

VICTIMS OF CASEMENT.

LONDON, Aug. 2. Baron Newton, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, replying to a question in the Lords to-day, as to whether the Government had any information concerning the shooting of two Irish soldiers while prisoners of war in Germany, said that the American Embassy in Berlin had notified the Government on July 7th that Patrick Moran, of the Connaught Rangers, had been shot by a guard in the working camp, near Limburg, on May 28th. The Commandant of the camp told the American representative that Moran, while intoxicated, had attacked the guard who shot him dead in self-defence.

On July 10th the American Embassy informed the Government that another Irish prisoner, William Devlin, of the Munster Fusiliers, had been shot at Limburg working camp. When Ambassador Gerard visited the camp in connection with the death of Moran, the shooting of Devlin was concealed. An important note, according to our information, is that both soldiers refused to join with Roger Casement in his proposed expedition against Ireland.

THE DEUTSCHLAND ON THE MOVE.

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 2. Radio messages received here late to-day said that the German submarine Deutschland was off New Point Comfort, near the entrance to Mobyack Bay, fully 45 miles from Cape Henry. This would mean a four hours' run to Cape Henry, in the event of Capt. Koenig declining to make a dash to sea to-night.

ASQUITH IN THE COMMONS.

LONDON, Aug. 2. Premier Asquith, opening the discussion in the Commons on the resolution of the Paris Economic Conference, said that the British Government entered the Conference with two objects in view. The first was to convince the Central Powers that the Entente Allies, whatever their views of economic policy, were resolved to wage war in complete unity of determination, in economic as in military spheres. The second was to make preparation for the period following the declaration of peace. In view of the known attitude and will of the Germans, our eyes have been opened, said the Premier, as to the meaning and manifold ramifications of the German system of economic penetration and commercial and financial control of vital interests, and the use which, with advantage, this system could be put to in war time. Germany, our eyes have been opened, said the Premier, as to the meaning and manifold ramifications of the German system of economic penetration and commercial and financial control of vital interests, and the use which, with advantage, this system could be put to in war time. Germany, our eyes have been opened, said the Premier, as to the meaning and manifold ramifications of the German system of economic penetration and commercial and financial control of vital interests, and the use which, with advantage, this system could be put to in war time.

man and neutral ports, it would be necessary to make preparations for the coming peace. The resolutions of the Conference represented the general lines upon which these preparations would proceed.

Asquith repeated that it was an essential condition of peace that Belgium and Serbia be restored not only politically, nationally and diplomatically, but materially and economically to the positions in which they stood before the war. The devastation of France and Poland will be similarly treated.

Dealing briefly with the measures proposed for the course of the war, and during the period of construction, the Premier said it was the bounden duty of the Allies to take every step to secure for their own use, supplies produced by their own countries. As for permanent measures for mutual assistance and collaboration among the Allies, these would be left to each country. As far as Britain was concerned, continued the Premier, the onus for the future were very encouraging. Their industries should show extraordinary enterprise and resourcefulness. There was a greater disposition among manufacturers to use all the resources of the country to increase the output and improve organizations. Certain commercial changes, said Mr. Asquith, amounted to a revolution. The Board of Trade was engaged in a scheme to render the country independent of supplies from hostile belligerents, with respect to dyes, spelter, etc. The Government was in consultation with labor representatives with a view to the formation after the war of a policy of social and industrial matters, intended to secure a fairer distribution among all classes of the result of modern industry.

Reviewing the situation in general the Premier emphasized two points, first the determination of the Allies to obtain reparation for the devastated areas; second, that those relocations are not aimed at neutrals.

The attention of the Government, continued the Premier, has been called to the fact that some apprehension has arisen in neutral countries, more especially in the United States, in regard to these resolutions, that they might be directed against neutrals. This is not the case. These resolutions contemplated only necessary measures of self defence against an economic aggression, threatening the Allies' most vital interests. In carrying them into effect, every endeavor will be made to ensure neutrals against suffering.

There was no more hardened free trader than he, said the Premier, but none could be blind to the fact that this war, with its upheaval in social, political and industrial conditions, suggested new problems, and modifications in the solutions of all problems.

Sir Edward Carson expressed general approval of Premier Asquith's statement and said that questions of tariff reform and free trade were not concerned. If these resolutions were put into operation, the latter Unionist leader said, it would be as vital a victory for Britain as any that could be won on the field.

Sir John A. Simon warned the House against being hurried into approval of resolutions which might have consequences very different from those expected in the spirit of righteous indignation with a despicable foe. He warned the House to do nothing likely to shift the trade centre of the world from Britain, to say America.

Col. Winston Churchill said his opinion was that it was a good war measure, and that the Government's proposals deserved wholehearted and spontaneous approval.

The debate shifted into a discussion of the Free Trade Question. Andrew Bonar Law admitted that Britain had accumulated enormous wealth under free trade, but reminded his hearers that Britain's command of the sea did not depend on free trade. If they could imagine Britain placed in Germany's position, having all external trade severed, he would ask how long Britain would have been able to do what Germany had done in carrying on the war. From the viewpoint of military strength, he believed the effect of a tariff to be greatly exaggerated by both sides. It was really a question of organization, he said. The Conference resolutions really aimed at making the Allies independent of Germany with regard to vital industries, hitherto controlled by Germany.

THE DEUTSCHLAND.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2. The Navy Department to-night received a report from the destroyer Sterrett in Hampton Roads, which says the tug Thomas F. Timmons reported the Hun submarine had passed out of the Capes and passed the three mile limit at 8.30 to-night.

ANOTHER AIR RAID.

LONDON, Aug. 2. German airships have again flown over the eastern counties of England, dropping bombs. An official communication just issued says that number of ships crossed the coast of the eastern counties shortly after midnight. Their objective, has not yet been definitely ascertained, as the raid is still proceeding. Some bombs have been dropped in various places.

SITUATION UNCHANGED.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 2. A communication issued by the War Office this evening says the situation on all fronts is unchanged.

The Prime Minister's Speech.

The British Parliament is about to take its summer recess. No session has been more important than this last one and none has been held at a more vital time. The situation at home and abroad is reflected in the debate in the House of Commons yesterday, and in particular in Mr. Asquith's speech. The exhilarating effect of the wonderful effort which the nation has put forth in the field and of the successes which have attended it has been somewhat diminished and chilled by domestic dissensions and the lamentable failure of British statesmanship over the problem of Ireland.

We say "somewhat," for this failure may well be exaggerated. It is regrettable, for it seems to have been over technicalities and unessential issues; but it has not derogated in the least from the patriotism of the disputants and their unity in the face of the enemy. They know England and the English very little who say that it has. Yet it may have deplorable results. The Coalition Government, never too strong, has met a rebuff which it may not survive. As Mr. Asquith's words to the House, "I do not know who will be responsible for the conduct of the business at next session," have almost the sound of a valedictory. There are more unlikely things than his resignation, and it would be ill to pretend that a successor could not be found. But the nation can ill afford to lose this great man now. For more than sentimental reasons he should not be allowed to depart from Britain at length emerges victorious, with her Allies, from the ordeal through which he has for so long entered her.

For two years Britain has been preparing for war while she has waged it. Now there can be no doubt about it—she is preparing for peace. Her statesmen are discussing openly and in detail post-bellum conditions and the measures that should be taken to adapt the nation to them; it is clear that they see victory and peace in sight. The Prime Minister has reiterated the fundamental conditions, unaltered since the beginning, on which peace must be built, the restoration of Belgium and Serbia and of the devastated portions of France and Poland. His own remarks and those of other ministers are beginning to put in a clearer light the other conditions towards the economic "war" that is accepted as inevitable when the military one is over. The incisive criticism in America and other neutral countries, and in Britain itself, of the spirit and some of the terms of the Paris resolutions has had a good effect. The matter is not now so great danger of resolving itself into a selfish battle between Free Trade and Protection. We are not likely to see an economic "reprisal" against Germany and the adoption against her of her own methods of penetration and the like, which in the end would only band neutral nations with her against us. England has learned much concerning trade and commerce from the war and from Germany; she has learned above all the value of organization, as Bonar Law puts it. We have every confidence in the future. Great Britain organizing and preparing her wealth and resources for the resumption of trade and the re-establishment of prosperity, and for the continuance in peace of the close and friendly relations with her allies and colonies that the war has brought about, is almost as inspiring a sight as Great Britain diverting them to the mighty purposes of this titanic combat.

Garden Party and Fancy Fair.

Next Wednesday afternoon, through the great kindness of His Excellency the Governor and Lady Davidson, a Garden Party and Fancy Fair will be held in the grounds of Government House in aid of the Church of England Orphanage. It is said that the many Patriotic Funds needing assistance are absorbing the attention of the Community to such an extent that other appeals cannot be considered. But Orphanages must be supported, and in the truest sense they constitute a patriotic cause of a most insalubrious nature. The heavy casualties which have recently darkened so many Newfoundland homes may well mean more fatherless children to tax the resources of the various Orphanages, and in any case, the number of children who require our care continues to increase from year to year. In order to counter-balance the drain of War upon the manhood of the nation, strenuous efforts to save the growing generation are necessary. For the greatest asset of any Country is its children, and training them to become good men and women is a noble work.

The Garden Party next Wednesday constitutes a much needed source of revenue, and is not primarily a social occasion, though it is hoped that all who attend will thoroughly enjoy it. It is intended to make it, or some similar entertainment, an annual function, and its promoters trust that the hearty support and co-operation of the public will not be lacking.

A. N. GOSSING, Hon. Sec. Ch. of Eng. Orphanage Aug. 3rd, 1916.

Survived 17 Wounds.

The following letter was written by Private Hubert J. Rendell, who was wounded in the battle of July 1st. It will be seen that the plucky young soldier actually reached the German trenches and after killing several of the enemy succeeded in escaping with his life:

London, England, July 12th, 1916.

Dear Father and Brothers and all— Just a few words in reply to your letter I received to-day which I was more than glad to get and hear that you are all fine. Well, I go out to bed to-day but my face and neck is still very bad. I am hoping, however, that it will be better soon. Tell Adam that I received his letter and that this letter is his reply for the present, but I shall write both him and James later. He is speaking to Leonard to-day. He is wounded in the shoulder, arm and leg; he is doing well. I tell you July the 1st was a hot day. It was particularly hot when I was speaking to Leonard. But we made the charge. There were only two of our platoon who reached the German trenches and I was one of them. I got in the German trench and received a shot in the face but I aimed at the man who did this and got him. Later I got several wounds in the neck and back but accounted for more Germans during this time. In this condition I endeavored to get back to our own trenches, the fellow who reached the German trenches with me being killed. I was alone. On my way back to our trench I started to look for Leonard. Rendell, but seeing a dead officer I started for him and after receiving two more wounds I got to where he was and took his bottle which contains some whisky; this I drank. Later I reached a shell hole where, after fixing up my wounds I fell asleep for my last time as I thought. I awoke at 7 a.m. to get back, a distance of about half a mile. I shot two Germans on my way back. The Germans shot our wounded through the night. You could see dead men in all directions. I guess you will get an account of our losses, although it may not appear in the Nid. papers for some time. I will give you my account, and that is, our killed and wounded are about eight hundred; you can take this from me. At roll call after I returned there were 65 who answered. An English regiment failed to take the first line of trenches. We were asked to go which we did and put the enemy to rout but we did not get the credit. No, don't fret about me as I am all right. With love to all. Good-bye. From HUBERT.

Requiem Mass at the R. C. Cathedral.

ELOQUENT AND TOUCHING ADDRESS BY THE ARCHBISHOP.

A crowded congregation, including His Excellency the Governor and Lady Davidson, Major Montgomerie and many of the volunteers, attended the Solemn Requiem High Mass celebrated at the R. C. Cathedral yesterday morning for the souls of the soldiers and sailors who have fallen in the terrible war since its commencement. His Lordship Bishop Power, assisted by Rev. Frs. Pippy and McGrath, as deacon and sub-deacon, respectively, and Very Rev. Fr. MacCarthy, Master of Ceremonies. His Grace Archbishop Roche was attended by Revs. Drs. Whelan and Kitchin and Very Rev. Fr. Renouf, and His Lordship Bishop March, of Hr. Grace, by Rt. Rev. Mons. St. John, Rt. Rev. Mons. McDermott, V.G. and Rev. Fr. McCarthy.

The collection taken up at the offertory for the Red Cross Fund amounted to $308.70. At the close Organist Fulton rendered the Dead March in Saub.

During the course of the Mass His Grace the Archbishop ascended the pulpit and delivered the following eloquent address relative to the great European struggle:—

And making a gathering, he sent twelve thousand drachms of silver to Jerusalem for sacrifices to be offered for the sins of the dead, thinking well and religiously concerning the resurrection. (For if he had not hoped that they that were slain should rise again, it would have seemed superfluous and vain to pray for the dead.) And because he considered that they who had fallen asleep with godliness had great grace laid up for them.

It is therefore a holy and wholesome thought to pray for the dead, that they may be loosed from sins. (II. Mach. XII, 43-46.)

My dearly beloved Brethren: These words of the Old Testament taken from the Book of Machabees form one of the scriptural foundations on which rests an important and distinctive point of Catholic doctrine, that doctrine which teaches us the efficacy and the value of prayers for the souls of our departed dead. The fate of the human soul, the noblest part of man's nature, when it has been set free from the trammels of the flesh, has always been a subject of interested speculation for the human mind. Even those who repudiate all idea of the supernatural, who doubt or deny the existence of a Supreme Being, who refuse to accept the doctrines of the resurrection and reward and punishment in the world to come, believe in some state of existence after death. Few there are so bold as to assert that man's spiritual nature is destined for no higher end than annihilation when the earthly body crumbles with the dust. Human science, unaided by the light of Revelation, has never been able to penetrate the mysteries that lie beyond the veil of death. But the Church of Christ, speaking with divine authority, illuminated with divine wisdom, has no doubt, no misgiving about a future existence beyond the veil of the tomb. She teaches and has taught that death, or the dissolution of body and spirit, is only transition, only the passing of man's immortal spirit to another world, where account must be rendered to a Supreme Being for the actions of this life. She lays down in Her doctrine of the Communion of Saints that a very real relationship exists between the living and the dead, that a very real, though mystic bond of union exists between those who are still struggling in the flesh, those who have passed to the Great Beyond and are being purged from their imperfections in Heaven, and those who have entered their speeding great reward. It is one of our most cherished beliefs, that to the faithful departed, to sanctify that remembrance by the living and the dead, that both the Elect and the Church militant assist by their prayers and suffrages those who have left the earth but are not yet worthy to be admitted to the vision of God.

This consoling belief, it is which gives meaning and significance and soul to the solemn requiem service at which we are assembled to-day. We are gathered here this morning for the discharge of a sad and sacred duty—a two-fold duty, one towards the living, the other towards the dead. We have assembled around the Altars of our Church to give reverent expression to our remembrance of our heroic dead, to sanctify that remembrance by the influence of religion, to hallow that remembrance with the hope and the solace that faith alone can afford. The Church recognizes her obligations alike towards those who have given their lives so generously in the country's cause, and towards those whose lives have been darkened and saddened by the death of their friends and loved ones. This two-fold obligation the Church discharges by following her departed dead into the next world with Her prayers and sacrifices, and by tendering from the depths of Her motherly heart Her sympathy and condolence with those

MARSHALL Brothers.

Oil and Water.

RUTH CAMERON.

Two things have been found which mix even less successfully than oil and water. A letter friend has found them. Here is the history of his discovery.

"I have a friend who has a daughter of eighteen. They have been accustomed to money and have lost it and I always feel very sorry for such people. It seems to me that it must be harder to bear poverty than for those who have never had anything and whose friends are in the same circumstance."

"I knew that Carrie sewed a great deal, and it occurred to me that I might give her some work. I had noticed that my curtains would not stand another tubbing, so I asked my friend if she would make me some new ones. I told her what my seamstress charged, and that I was a fussy person and wanted them measured carefully. Carrie was delighted and thanked me most sincerely. I sent her the material and the measurements. After several weeks I called her up on the telephone to ask when the curtains would be done. She spent the money before she did the work."

"She seemed surprised that I wanted them at once and said she could not start them yet, as she had bought such pretty materials at a bargain sale with the money that was to come from her sewing for me and now she was making dresses for her daughter. She added that she never could thank me enough. I crawled back to the wind out of my sails, though I rasped a little at the daughter's clothes being made with my money and my work being pushed aside. However, the thing was not worth fussing over, and I waited.

The Ruffles Made Her Cross-Eyed.

"When the curtains came home no two were the same length, the ruffles were cut so crooked that they made me cross-eyed, and the sewing was very poor. I did not want to quarrel with Carrie, but I did say, 'Oh, Carrie, why didn't you cut those ruffles straight? You know I am a regular old maid,' and she replied, 'Just hang them up and you'll never know the difference.' Fortunately I could afford to pay twice, and I took the curtains to my seamstress, who perhaps needed the money just as much as Carrie."

"Now when I want to do anything for a friend I shall send her a present, but I shall not try to give her work."

Oil and Water, Business And Friendship.

I suppose you have guessed that the two ingredients that mix less successfully than oil and water are business and friendship.

And yet it is not really fair to let that stand, for it is not always true. If each party added to the mixture a pinch of common sense and one of tact, the mixture would sometimes mix.

But common sense, alas, is a sad misnomer, and though I never yet knew anyone who did not think he or she possessed tact, I never knew more than a dozen people who really had it.

Letter From Corporal Edward Mansfield

To His Parents, New Gower St.
3rd London General Hospital,
Wandsworth, England,
July 7th, 1916.

Dear Mother and Father,—Just a few lines to let you know that I have arrived in hospital wounded but not badly. I got a bullet just below the eye and a sprained wrist out of the racket and I am glad to get off with it. There are only about eighty, or ninety of the Battalion left. It was the biggest battle that ever was fought yet, it was pure manslaughter. We were out in a village called Cally Maillet on the last of June when we got orders for the trenches that night. We were only six days out then for a rest when we had to walk eight miles, and we just got in two hours before dawn and at half-past seven in the morning the 8th Brigade of the 29th Division made a dash for the German trenches, the next to follow for the second line was the 8th, and then came us next for the third line of German trenches, that is the 88th Brigade, the Newfoundland Regiment first and the Worcester Regiment supporting us. I must say, mother, that our Regiment got an awful cutting up, the casualties must be about 800 killed and wounded; pretty nearly all in my platoon were killed with the exception of four or five and three wounds were all slight. When I got my wound I was section commander. I sat a bullet in the cheek, it dazed me for a time and when I came to I gazed ahead for the Germans, and as I was crossing the first line of German trenches it blew up which knocked me unconscious. I know I must have been there for about three quarters of an hour; when I realized where I was there was sight of us together, six killed, one severely wounded and I was only about up. I crawled back to my own trench where I was picked up by one of the stretcher-bearers and taken to the dressing station and had my wound dressed. I was sent on to

Have and had to go through another dressing station and the doctor pinned a ticket on my tunic and put me on board of a hospital ship for London and here I am not a bit downhearted. Don't worry about me, mother, in about two weeks time I will be fit for the front again to have another rap at the Germans. The only thing that I am very sorry about is for the poor boys that are killed. Mother they went like heroes for the enemy, but the Germans had machine guns in thousands and moved us down.

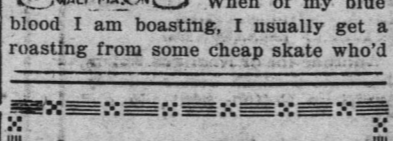

It is time to go to bed. Good bye for now.

From your loving son,
NED.

ANCESTRY.

Among my forbears there were princes, and conquerors, and kindred quinces. My pedigree is fine and stately; no wonder I admire it greatly; but no one shares my admiration, and none will stand my conversation.

When of my blue blood I am boasting, I usually get a roasting from some cheap skate who'd think it better if asked to name his father's father. "I started out in life obscurely, and I was educated poorly," remarks the skate, who's made his riches by dealing in machine-made ditches; "advantages, I hadn't any; I had to scrap for every penny. My parents couldn't read or figure, and all they left me was the vigor, which kept me always busy humping, while all the blue blood stuff was slumping. While you from princes were descending, I upward from the rut was wending, and O, patrician, let me tell you, that I can buy you up and sell you!" Whenever I would tell the story of how my fathers conquered glory, as rulers, statesmen, sages, fighters, I'm headed off by some cheap blighter.

Your Boys and Girls.

Summer is a splendid season for fostering a child's looks. Great Nature stands with her arms wide for the little ones, inviting healthful play in the open air, when muscles are hardened, tricky appetites improved and inches and pounds taken on. Plenty of opportunity is given the mother to build up the feeble little constitution, and if she has no chance to go to the country, one must do it in town.

With early morning and late afternoon airings in the park, breezy trolley rides and an occasional sail on an excursion boat when water is at hand, the child forced to stay in town all summer can still get through the hot spell with fair comfort. But the mother must be very careful about the food on the hotter days—be careful, indeed, all summer long—and the daily grooming of the little body must be thorough and regular.

The bath is the youngster's greatest safeguard against the miseries of a hot day, for the little moment of sensible care at once lowers the temperature of the body, soothes nerves and does a host of other good things and the hotter the day the more important is the afternoon sponge or tub bath.

A BREATHING SPELL ALL ROUND

LONDON, To-Day.

The armies in the three great centres of recent activity, the Somme region in France, Russia and Galicia, evidently have let up considerably in the violent fighting in which they have been engaged and are indulging in a breathing spell before further attacks and counter attacks. An official communication dealing with the operations in these theatres on Wednesday tell of no single important engagement or any notable changes. In an engagement 600 German were made prisoners and 10 machine guns were captured on the Russian front. Petrograd reports only artillery duels and infantry attacks by small detachments, while Berlin tells of Russian attacks on the Stokhod Turia fronts and local Russian offensives of the Stripsa River in Galicia, all of which were repulsed. The Russians are keeping up their advance against the Turks in the Caucasus region.

WATCHING THE DEUTSCHLAND

LONDON, To-Day.

Naval experts here are watching the reported progress of the German submarine merchantman Deutschland with considerable interest, but express little hope that she will not make the homeward voyage safely. An official of the British Admiralty, discussing the possibility of the undersea line not getting away safely, declared the British navy had no policy of announcement with regard to the operation against her, except its determination to arrest her if possible. He declined to suggest whether the Deutschland would be sunk if sighted by a British war vessel, but asserted the statement that Britain is determined not to recognize the boat as an ordinary merchantman.

ENGLAND RELEASES INTERNATIONAL SECURITIES.

LONDON, To-Day.

Without waiving the right to seize international securities as contraband, the Government has decided to release a number of such consignments and permit them to be forwarded to their destinations.

THE ZEPPELIN RAID.

LONDON, To-Day.

Another official communication issued early this morning says: "The raid appears to have been carried out by 5 or 7 airships. A considerable number of bombs are reported to have been dropped at various places of the eastern and southeastern counties, but no definite reports have been received. No military damage is yet reported; many anti-air craft guns were in action and at least one airship is reported hit. A Zeppelin was seen this morning travelling seaward and damaged, according to an Exchange Telegraph correspondent."

The German submarine merchantman Deutschland passed quietly on the Virginia Capes at 8.30 o'clock last night on the homeward voyage, apparently unobserved by the Allied warship patrol waiting outside the three mile limit. In Memoriam

MARY LEWIS.

On Friday morning last Mrs. Mary Lewis, widow of the late Philip Lewis, proprietor of the Beach Hotel, died at Holyrood. The deceased lady had reached the ripe old age of ninety years and enjoyed good health and the possession of all her faculties till six months ago, when she was stricken down with sickness and symptoms of the approaching end began to develop themselves. With the strong constitution she undoubtedly possessed she rallied from this attack, but about ten days ago she was seized with another which proved fatal. The last sacraments were administered by the Rev. Father Egan who frequently visited the dying patient. The late lamented Mrs. Lewis was an industrious, charitable and pious lady of the good old Irish stock and an ardent devotee of the Holy Mother. She was the proprietress of the popular Beach House where a flourishing and successful business was done and where travellers from Florida and St. Mary's Bays to the city put up to rest for the night and found cheering and comforting resting quarters. Through the railway brought changes in this mode of travelling still she continued to do a thriving business up to 1909 when she retired and handed over the business to her daughter Mrs. Thomas Moore. Her husband pre-deceased her eight years. She leaves one son, Capt. John Lewis, the successful banking master and famous fish killer and ex-M.H.A., and one daughter, Mrs. Thomas Moore to mourn the loss of a kind and loving mother. The funeral, which was in charge of Undertaker Dunphy, and which was largely attended, took place on Saturday morning from her late home to the Church of Holy Cross, where solemn High Mass and office were chanted for the eternal repose of her soul. Rev. Monsignor Vetch officiated as high priest and celebrant. Rev. John Kavanagh, Rev. K. M. Sheehan, sub-deacon, and Rev. W. P. Finn master of ceremonies. When the last prayers were recited and sung and the final benediction given the funeral procession reformed and continued its way to the central cemetery where the remains enclosed in a handsome casket were placed beside those of her late husband in the presence of her sobbing and sorrowing daughter, two granddaughters, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Capt. Lewis, and a large circle of sorrowing and sympathizing relatives and friends. To Capt. Lewis and Mrs. Moore and their families we tender our sincere sympathy in their hour of trouble and pray that Almighty God have mercy on the soul of their dearly beloved mother.

Wedding Bells.

A very quiet wedding took place at St. Mary's Church, Thursday evening, when Mr. E. Lilly and Miss Ida Bell Priddle were united in the bonds of matrimony. The bride was given away by her father, Joseph Priddle, and was attended by her sister, Miss Florence Priddle, and Miss Pike, while Mr. Gideon Elsworth acted as best man. After the marriage service the bride and groom dropped their residence, Allan Square, where a supper was partaken of. The bride received many useful presents. An enjoyable time was spent and best wishes for the bride and groom's success and long years of happiness were expressed in which the Telegram joins.

Run Down By Motor.

Boy in Critical Condition at Hospital.

At 10:30 o'clock this morning a serious motor accident occurred at the junction of Springdale and Water Streets, when a young lad named Murphy of Beaulieu Square, was accidentally run over by the car owned by the Hon. John Murphy. It happened that the boy who is only fourteen years of age, was running down Springdale Street and not seeing the approaching car he was about to cross Water St. when he was hit by the nearest front wheel as the car was proceeding east, and suddenly knocked to the pavement, and inflicting a serious gash on his right forehead. He was picked up in an unconscious condition by Mr. J. Davis, a teamster in the employ of Mr. Chas. Lester, and brought to the store of C. L. March & Co. where an unsuccessful attempt to secure the services of a doctor was made. The sufferer was then placed in the same motor and driven to Dr. Robert's surgery, Duckworth Street, where temporary splints were applied to the broken limb, after which he was removed to the hospital. The hospital authorities inform us that up to press hour his condition is critical.

Stephano Here Again.

The Red Cross Liner Stephano, Capt. Smith, arrived here at two o'clock this afternoon from New York and Halifax. Progress was delayed by fog during the run from the latter port. The ship brought a full general cargo and 120 passengers, mostly round-trippers. Immediately on arrival the ship was held up and all the passengers examined by the Customs authorities for the purpose of preventing from landing any of Big Bill's adherents.

Hr. Grace Notes.

Misses Mary Ward, Bertha McKay and Jessie Sheppard were passengers on the Port Saunders to Bell Island on Sunday, where they will spend a few weeks with friends.

Trappers did remarkably well on Saturday, particularly those who had their traps in deep water places. Mrs. Kenneth Mills (nee Miss Dora Bradbury) and her little daughter, Muriel arrived from Burlington, N. D. B. last week on a visit to her mother and other friends.

The schr. Arthur H. Wight arrived from St. John's yesterday and will take hence a load of codfish. The S. S. Bloodhound arrived here on Friday morning with a cargo of coal to the Harbour Grace Coal Co. The cargo is now being discharged, after which the steamer will again proceed to Sydney.

The schr. Studland, Capt. James Wells, arrived from St. John's on Saturday evening with a cargo of provisions for her owner, Mr. Simmons. In the list of missing in to-day's message we notice the names of at least two Harbour Grace boys, viz.: John Carson, son of the late Edward Carson, and George Pike, son of Mr. Nathaniel Pike, now of Grand Falls.

A young woman coming in from Bell Island on Saturday last had a purse stolen from her pocket by another female of an nearby settlement. When brought face to face with the thief she admitted and handed back the money less the amount she had paid for her ticket, Coko, very.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Pike, Mr. M. Sellers and a number of others from Bell Island arrived by the Port Saunders on Saturday and returned to the Island by the same boat on Sunday, leaving here at 7 p.m.

The Harbor Grace Boot and Shoe Factory is again humming by steam, consequently our citizens have the benefit of the whistle at the start and finish of the day's work, and also at the meal hours. We love to hear the sound of the whistles as it gives our town a busy air.

Schooner Ashore.

A Total Wreck.

Deputy Minister of Customs LeMessurier received a message this morning stating that the schooner Milley Lake, of 49 tons register, owned by Mr. P. G. Lake and in charge of Capt. J. Lake, laden with coal, went ashore at Old Perlican yesterday. The vessel and her 50 tons of coal are a total loss.

SALVING WRECKED STEAMER.—The revenue cruiser Fiona, Capt. English, which was on protection service at the scene of the wrecked steamer Matatus at Peter's River, St. Mary's Bay, returned to port this morning. The Matatus is still in the same position and the chances of refloating her are considered good. The work of salvaging her cargo of lumber commenced this morning.

To-Morrow's Intercession Service.

To-morrow being the second anniversary of the declaration of war by Great Britain, intercession service will be held at 10.30 a.m. at the C. of E. Cathedral. His Lordship the Bishop of Newfoundland will be the celebrant at the Holy Communion, assisted by the clergy of the Cathedral staff. The offering will be in aid of the Red Cross Cot Fund. In all other churches throughout the country, where it is possible, intercession service will be held.

Granted Lieut. With R.A.F.C.

We have it on good authority that Mr. Leonard Elens, who left here with the last draft of volunteers, has been granted a commission of Lieutenant with the Royal Army Flying Corps. He is the eldest son of T. J. Edgins, Esq., and a brother of Lieut. John, who is now in France with Ours.

Star Dance for Cot Fund.

The patriotic dance in aid of the Cot Fund given under the auspices of the Star of the Sea Society in the theatre at the Star Hall Tuesday night proved a great success. The music, which was excellent, was furnished by Messrs. Myron O'Grady, Bennett and Bailey. Refreshments were served by lady friends of the committee in a very pleasing manner, after which dancing was continued till the small hours of the morning. Messrs. P. Woods, J. Jackman and the other members of the committee are to be congratulated on the successful manner in which the affair was arranged. A handsome sum was realised and will be donated to the fund mentioned.

Better Cake and Biscuits

In all recipes calling for Baking Powder use Royal Baking Powder. You will get better and finer food and insure its healthfulness.

Housewives are sometimes led to use inferior baking powders because of apparent lower cost, but there is very little difference in practical use—about one cent for a whole cake or pan of biscuits—a mere trifle when you consider the vast difference in healthfulness in favor of food made with Royal Baking Powder.

Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar, derived from grapes—a natural food product, as contrasted with alum, derived from mineral sources, and used in the manufacture of some baking powders because it is cheaper.

CHURCH-GOING.

Church-going is an old-fashioned habit which would be more useful if it had the long, wiry roots of the alfalfa plant. The trouble with so much modern church-going is that it doesn't strike deep enough people out to the divine service on a rainy Sunday while the golf links and the ball game will drag them from home in the face of a cloud-burst.

Years ago one of the most popular ways of spending Sunday was to go to church and listen to a sermon with a mainspring longer than a Waterbury watch. Nobody stayed away from church on Sunday morning unless he was totally paralyzed or the church had been burned down the night before. In those days church-going was a duty which nobody could escape unless he had contracted diphtheria in both tonsils, and as a result the minister was not obliged to look into the faces of cold, empty pews and yawning profiles, as is often the case to-day.

There was a great deal of wholesome church-going in this country up to the time when the installment plan automobile rose above the surrounding scenery and began to consume gasoline, tires and storage batteries in rank profusion. There is something about an automobile which removes a man's mind from the church and everything else except the post of upkeep. After an active church-goer has owned an automobile for a few weeks and come in contact with its massive and ceaseless appetite, he will be in no frame of mind to go to church and greet the semi-annual missionary collection. He will be more inclined to retire to some quiet nook and finger his check stubs with a trembling hand.

Although every inducement is being held out to increase church-going, it is not necessary to reserve seats in advance. The church attendant is now offered filtered music by a determined solo quartette and the sermon has been boiled down until it is a mere skeleton of the old-time discourse with self-winding attachment. In the evening there are free motion pictures and a cornet solo, and yet people prefer to stay away and listen to the music of a grabbing clutch.

If people would do their joy-riding after the morning service they would be better prepared to meet the shifting scenes of life, especially when they shift into an open ditch at forty-five miles an hour.
