CHAPTER XX.
MILITARY TACTICS.

Notwithstanding his hurry, Edna could not be made to move fast down the long line of dead-and-gone Mores; their many-expressed faces had a charm for her, and it was with a growing feeling of interest and curiosity that she gazed at that portion of the gallery at which the modern portraits commenced.

"That is my grandfather," said Bertie, pointing to a white-haired aristocrat in ruffled shirt and wristbands—"and that is grandma. And now, here is Uncle Cyril, round this corner."

Edna shaded her eyes with her hand, and, with an indescribable flutter at the heart, looked upward. As she did so, she uttered a cry that was echoed by the child, and the two shrank back as if they had seen a ghost.

In an instant the organ ceased, and the rest of the company were at her side.

"What is it?" "What have you seen?" "What is the matter?" came the questions fast and thick, as Edna, catching Aunt Martha's arm, held tightly by it, and hid her face in her hands.

"What is it?" repeated Lord Mersey, anxiously. "What has frightened you, Miss Weston?"

Edna shuddered slightly, and raised her face; it was very pale, but she smiled as she lifted her small, white hand and pointed to the portrait of Mr. Cyril.

"Look!" she said.

Every head turned, every eye was fixed on the picture, and an exclamation burst from nearly every lip, saying Mr. Burdon's.

"Good God!" ejaculated Edward More, "some one has cut the face out!"

And so some one had. But who, and for what reason? None could tell, none could even guess—they could only gaze at the picture made ghostly by the mutilation, and then stare aghast at each other.

CHAPTER XXI.
RUMORS.

"ANOTHER cup of your delicious tea, dear Mrs. Weston. I can't think how you make it so nicely, so really invigorating—the duchess' receipt; yes, I know," ran on Mrs. Edward More, for it is scarcely necessary to say that it was that voluble lady who is speaking. "Her grace is the best tea-maker in England. And how is our dear Edna? What a triumph last night was for her!—enough to turn her head—was it not, Miss Bromley?" she asked, turning for confirmation to Grace Bromley, who stood by the window.

The scene was the drawing room of one of the best houses in Park Lane, the time was the height of the season, and the hour and occasion five o'clock. As may be inferred from Mrs. More's eulogium, Aunt Martha had brought her character for tea-making with her from the country, and, just as people liked to drop in at Rosedene about the hour of five, so they found it agreeable to go in London, and there was generally a small gathering in Aunt Martha's—or Edna's—drawing room in the afternoon.

It was the height of the season, and Edna had been in town some little time. The duchess' prophecy had been fulfilled, and the young heiress had not only made a sensation in her appearance, but had been crowned, and still reigned, the beauty and the toast of the year. If unbounded admiration and attention could have made a young girl happy, then Edna should have been the happiest of her sex. Last night the great Arleigh ball, that assemblage of hunt-ton toward which the select of the upper ten thousand regarded as the greatest gathering of the year, had been a scene of triumph for her; if there had been any doubt as to her position before, last night settled it forever, and it was rumored that before the season closed, Edna Weston would have her choice of two, if not more, coronets; one of them, it was loudly rumored, being that of the heir to Portfield.

"And how is our dear girl?" repeated Mrs. More. "Quite worn out and exhausted by last night's work, I suppose. I think she sat out only one dance, and then there was quite a feeling of disappointment."

Aunt Martha looks up rather anxiously.

"Yes, I know," she said, shaking her head; "Edna danced too much, I think. She is not strong. She would have danced through the whole of the program, if it had not been for Capt. Morton, who was kind and thoughtful enough to remark that she was doing too much."

"Edna not strong! You surprise me!" exclaimed Mrs. Edward. "I have always credited her with the constitution of a Swiss mountaineer, and I am sure," with a little sigh, "have felt inclined to envy her her robust strength. Ah, here is Lord Mersey!" she broke off, as the door opened, and Lord Mersey entered. "I've come for my cup of tea, Mrs. Weston. How do you do, Mrs. More? Who is that behind the curtain—Miss Bromley? Still alive, after last night's work?" he asked, as Grace came forward and gave him her hand. "Yes, I was there; I looked in after I left the house; but as there seemed to be no room for even one person, I returned."

"I don't see Miss Weston," he added, looking round the room as if he expected to see her hidden under a table or behind the curtains.

"Edna has not left her room yet," said Aunt Martha; "she is rather tired to-day."

Lord Mersey nodded once or twice, and, taking up his teacup, moved to the window. He looks straight out across the park, in his usual abstracted way, but there is something in the expression of his face that makes the heart of the girl near him beat with a sudden thrill of apprehension.

The season has been one of triumph for her also—a beauty like hers could not shine unnoticed or unappreciated, but she is still true to her heart's devotion; she still loves this abstracted philosopher, who, day by day, was more surely and nearly drawn toward Edna. All the world could see at whose feet the Portfield coronet would lie; Edna alone seemed unconscious of the impending proposal.

Lord Mersey sipped his tea, and played with his spoon, looking absently across the park. Presently the dark eyes fixed on his face so attentively saw his face flush with sudden annoyance, and, looking out, Grace was just in time to see Capt. Morton coming up the steps of the house; in another minute he was in the drawing room.

The captain was as serene and nonchalant, as handsome and fresh as ever, and as confident, although the weeks had stretched into months since he had declared to Edward More his intention of marrying the heiress, and Edna was still uncaught. He, too, as he came forward, noticed the expression on Lord Mersey's face and interpreted it as Grace Bromley had done, and as he glanced round the room covertly, and ascertained that Edna had not yet made her appearance, he breathed a sigh of relief and made a sudden resolve.

Between rivals, whether in ambition, wealth or love, there must always be a certain distrust and coolness, but anyone would have said that such uncomfortable prejudices were entirely on Lord Mersey's side, for the captain's manner to his lordship was the pink of courtesy and well-bred amiability. He came up now with his teacup, and stood chatting in the window addressing Grace and Lord Mersey alternately by turns, and succeeding, as he always did, in interesting them both; then with an air of sudden recollection, he said:

"By the way, I have succeeded in getting the list of these poems, Miss Bromley, if you care to see it," and talking a she went on he walked toward a small inner room which was partially divided from the larger by curtains.

Grace turned her dark eyes on him and met a glance which seemed too insignificant to be disregarded, and with all a woman's deference to the mysterious, followed him into the other room. He had taken a piece of paper from his pocket by the time she had reached his side, and as he held it toward her, bent over it with a careless air, and said, in a low voice:

"Can you come into the window seat, out of earshot? Do not start!" but Grace had started perceptibly, though she followed him obediently and seated herself in a low chair in the window furthest from the other room. The captain seated himself beside her, paper in hand, and pointing to it as if he were saying something concerning it, murmured in his sweetest voice: "Miss Bromley, am I not right when I say that there is no time for circumelection or for false delicacy? Can you look toward the other window and tell me there is time to be lost?"

A warm flush came over Grace's face, then it grew pale, and she cast down her eyes.

"What do you mean?" she asked, in a low voice. "Why do you speak to me like this?"

"What does Lord Mersey mean?" said the captain, smiling with the utmost serenity. "Don't you think he means to ask a certain young lady to become the future Countess of Portfield?"

Grace Bromley started, and clasped her hands tightly in her lap. "Yes, I see you agree with me," continued the captain, softly. "I think you will still agree with me when I say that the intention must be thwarted—for his own sake and for ours."

"His own—ours!" echoed Grace, almost inaudibly.

The captain stroked his mustache with an admirable assumption of easy nonchalance—no one looking on from the other room would have imagined that he was engaged in anything more important than the smallest of small talk.

"His—because the future Countess of Portfield should, like Caesar's wife, be beyond suspicion—do not misunderstand me"—the dark eyes were lifted to his—"should have no secret in her life—should be as free from any under-current as the virgin mountain rill. Ours—because—" He paused significantly. The dark eyes were lifted to his questioningly.

"You love her—you would marry her yourself?"

The captain inclined his head with a sudden lowering of his lids.

"Why do you not—why do you conceal it?"

"Because I am not a viscount with an earldom in the future. Because I am not certain of my ground as yet—because to tread on ice half frozen means destruction. So much for myself—for others—shall we say for you?"

"No—no!" breathed Grace, turning pale and shrinking.

"The captain smiled.

"I was right—you would do something to save an old friend like Lord Mersey from a great mistake. If I tell you, you can do something to save him."

Grace Bromley looked irresolute.

"How do you know that—that she would accept him?"

The captain smiled.

"Are you content to leave it to that thin chance?—so be it—"

"No—no—tell me!" she said, with a sudden determination. "I do not see my way—what can I do?"

German Government Helpless to Cope With the Present Crisis.

Martial Law in Madrid --- War's Death Lists Exceed Seven Millions---Big Reduction in British Army.

THE LIST OF DEAD.

WASHINGTON, March 1. Battle deaths during the war among all participants as far as available statistics show, were given to-day by General March, as 7,154,000. This represents only men killed in action or died of wounds. In the list prepared by the General Staff, Russia led with a total of 1,700,000, Germany with 1,600,000, and the United States last with 1,600,000. Approximate figures for other nations were: France 1,385,000, England 1,000,000, Italy 450,000, Turkey 400,000, Belgium 102,200, Rumania 100,000, Serbia and Montenegro 100,000, Austria-Hungary 450,000, Bulgaria, 100,000.

BRITISH ARMY BEING REDUCED.

LONDON, March 1. The British Army at home and abroad, exclusive of the force in India, now numbers 7,500,000 men and is being reduced to 552,000, according to a White Paper issued by the Government to-day. The Army on the Rhine, including troops in France and Belgium, will consist after demobilization, of 28,600 officers and 200,000 men.

SITUATION GRAVE IN GERMANY.

LONDON, Feb. 28. Several of this morning's newspapers feature articles on the International Demoralization of Germany and the dangerous growth of Bolshevism as a result of lack of food and the increase of unemployment and express editorially deep concern at the problem thus created for the Allies. Various reports concur in declaring that the situation is extremely urgent. A Reuter's report describes the position of Germany as more precarious than it was last November. Discontent is growing, the people are hungry and the Government is unable to improve material conditions. This report says: Far-sighted and well-informed men are pessimistic and apprehensive at the ominous signs which show a tendency toward anarchy.

MARTIAL LAW IN MADRID.

MADRID, Feb. 28. The Government has taken possession of all bakeries. Premier Romanones has issued a statement saying that protests against provision dealers has assumed such an aspect that it was necessary to take serious precautions, and that martial law had been declared so as to enable the Government to work better for a settlement of pending social questions.

MARTIAL LAW IN BAVARIA.

PARIS, Feb. 28. The Soldiers' and Workmen's Congress at Munich has declared martial law for all of Bavaria, according to a Munich despatch to the Matin.

CHANGED THEIR PLANS.

CAPE TOWN, March 1. The National Delegates who were to go to Paris to lay demands for a South African Republic before the Peace Conference and which accepted the offer of passage on the British cruiser Minerva when seamen on the regular liners refused to carry them, have now revised their decision. It is believed they were impressed by the outcry in the country districts against their travelling on a British warship.

ANOTHER REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENT.

LONDON, March 1. A further revolutionary movement in Germany is imminent, according to a report reaching London through Holland to-day. It is added that Chancellor Scheidemann has resigned.

ATTACKED BY MOB.

BERLIN, Feb. 28. General Maschke, commander of the troops guarding the National Assembly at Weimar, was attacked by a mob in Erfurt to-day and robbed of a portfolio containing important documents bearing on the plans of the Government for dealing with the strike situation in Central Germany. The General was attacked in front of the barracks in Erfurt and was beaten severely before he could be rescued. The shoulder straps were torn from his uniform by the men.

HEARD ZIONIST DELEGATION.

PARIS, Feb. 28. (By the A.P.)—Dr. Sokolow, head of the Zionist Delegation to the Peace Conference, said to-day, referring to the appearance of the delegation before the Council of ten gave attentive hearing to the Zionist case and that as far as he could judge, the prospects were good for favorable action.

SPARTACANS QUIT DUSSELDORF.

COPENHAGEN, March 1. Muenster Government troops entered Dusseldorf on Friday and occupied the railway stations and public buildings; Spartacan leaders escaped and the town is quiet.

COSSACKS AT SARATOV.

STOCKHOLM, March 1. General Krasnoff, the Cossacks leader, has occupied Saratov on the Volga River and Volak seventy miles to the northeast, according to reliable reports reaching here.

LONDON DESPATCH.

LONDON, Mar. 1. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Reuter's service learns that Yattullah Khan, son of the assassinated Ameer of Afghanistan, has acquiesced in the succession of Nesrullah. The whole of the country is quiet so far as is known at present. No trouble has resulted from the murder, the motive for which is unknown. It may be assumed that the new ruler will be duly recognized by the British Government.

The Times announces in connection with the Army Medical investigations of influenza that after prolonged research Major Graime Gibson, British, Capt. Connor, Australian and Major Townan of the Medical Corps, have completed the discovery of what are probably the causative germs of the Grippe Epidemic. Major Gibson contracted influenza and pneumonia during the investigation and died at Aberlervie. The germ belongs to the order of filter passers and is grown by the Neguchi method. Monkeys were infected with it and developed hemorrhages of the lungs predisposing the reception of pneumonia.

With regard to the fate of the German warships Reuter is officially informed, first, that their breaking up would take three years and would only fetch about $2,000,000; secondly, that any power taking over the ships would be faced with insuperable obstacles through spare parts; thirdly, the ships are now obsolete; fourthly, their use as merchantmen is impossible owing to the enormous coal consumption and the difficulties of adapting their interiors; fifthly, the sinking for breakwater purposes has been proved impracticable by Scape Flow experiments; sixthly, if the ships were divided some basis of division must be found and it has been suggested that they be split up accordingly to war losses or on the basis of the present Navy strength of the Powers.

PROTEST STRIKE THREATENED.

BASLE, Mar. 1. Spartacan Forces offered very feeble resistance to Government troops when the latter took Hambrone on Thursday and gave up two cannon, three thousand rifles and a quantity of munitions. At Essen the number of strikers is now estimated at 5100. If the strike continues there will be a strike by the Bourgeoisie as a protest against disorders.

MYSTERIOUS EXPLOSION.

FRANKLIN, Mass, March 1. The bodies of three unidentified men were found early to-day, a short distance from the scene of a mysterious explosion that damaged the Mill of the American Woolen Co., and fifty dwelling houses last night. The bodies were badly mutilated.

B.C. Wants Act Repealed

Moderation League Urges Referendum on Prohibition.

Starting within the course of a few days a petition calling for the repeal of the present Prohibition Act and the passing of a different act, amended in conformity with the ideas of the Moderation League, or as an alternative the submission to the people of a referendum on the whole prohibition question, will be circulated throughout the province. It is hoped by those interested that a sufficiently large number of signatures will be obtained before the end of March to enable the legislature to act upon the matter at the present session.

Aitken Tweedals and D. J. O'Neill, officials of the Moderation League, returned to the city from Victoria recently and are now working upon the matter of the circulation of the petition.

The first proposal made in the petition is the repeal of the provincial act now in force and the substitution of a different act. Mr. O'Neill is now drafting a proposed substitute act along the lines of the aims and objects of the league recently published in advertisement form. This will call for the sale of beer, wines and liquors under government control.

The petition will likely be ready for circulation to-day, though until the organization of the league has advanced a little further it will likely be held up.

Questioned on the legal aspect of the case, Mr. O'Neill said the petition would unquestionably force action on the prohibition question by the government.

"It can be taken as certain that a referendum will be submitted in British Columbia this year," he said. "This is the alternative I am practically certain the government will adopt. I look for the submission of the referendum late this year. We do not think it should be put to the people until all our soldiers are back, for they are entitled to register their opinions upon it."

The circulation of the petition will be in the hands of the branch communities of the league in all the principal centres of the province. Mr. Tweedale declared recently that no difficulty was anticipated in the matter of securing signatures. In fact, he declared, it should be possible to get the signatures of 80 per cent of the electorate of the province. "From the reports we get from people who want to come into the league, it would almost be safe to say that 90 per cent of the voters are in favor of a change," declared Mr. Tweedale.—Vancouver Daily Sun.

Lord Northcliffe quits journalism

London.—Lord Northcliffe has retired as chairman of his associated newspapers, which include the Daily Mail, the Evening News and the Weekly Dispatch, thus ending one of the greatest romances in the history of the world's newspapers.

Lord Northcliffe as Alfred Harmsworth, a young and penniless man, made three vows—to become a millionaire, to be the owner of the Times and to be made "a belted Earl." He attained all three of these early ambitions some time since; now owing to ill-health he has been ordered by his medical advisers to take a long rest, and it is probable he will remain in the south of France, where he has gone to recuperate.

He retired from the directorship of his papers many months ago, so that his absence now will not interfere with the great developments which are contemplated at Carmelite House, now that the war is practically ended. The new chairman of the company is Thomas Marlowe, for 20 years editor of the Daily Mail.—Printer and Publisher.

"Stafford's Phoradone" for all kinds of Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma and various Lung Troubles.—Feb 14, 1919

Household Notes.

Don't try to bake potatoes in the oven with some steaming dish. Save soft tissue paper for polishing lamp chimneys and mirrors. Carrots are improved by being served creamed with celery or peas. Ginger ice cream is made with thin cream sugar sherry syrup and ginger. Bread custard may be decorated with cherries and angelica and served cold. In most cases, it is best to use pastry flour in recipes not calling for yeast. Olive and celery makes a good sandwich-filling mixed with mayonnaise.

Boy Injured.

About 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon a young boy named Noseworthy working around the trains at the Railway Station was rather badly injured when his leg became caught in the couplings of two cars. He was hoisted the car at the time, carrying a pail of water, but is not known exactly how the accident occurred. Dr. Fraser was immediately called, and having examined the boy, he ordered the ambulance on the scene in which the injured lad was then conveyed to the General Hospital, where he was attended to-day by Dr. Tait. He is now doing finely, but it is not known just when he will be able to get out again. Young Noseworthy is a son of one of the carpenters in the car shed of the Reid Nfld. Co. His foot which was badly crushed, has been dressed and bandaged.

Seal Due To-Morrow.

Baine Johnston's S. S. Seal is due to-morrow. This morning she was 150 miles off this port, and with good steaming she will arrive some time to-morrow, provided, of course, the ice does not come right in and get her packed. In its present loose condition the Seal could butt her way through easily enough.

Personal Mention.

Messrs. Wm. Ashbourne of Toronto and Leo W. Medding of the S. S. War Seneca are registered at the Crosbie. Capt. S. R. Winsor of Wesleyville is in the city. Capt. W. Winsor of Wesleyville arrived in the city Saturday. Both captains are registered at the Crosbie and will prosecute the seal hunt in the S. S. Ranger and Thetis respectively. Mr. Geo. Tibbo of Grand Bank is a guest at the Crosbie. Mr. R. S. Daly arrived in the city yesterday on a visit from Heart's Content and is staying at the Crosbie.

Timely Mistakes.

It is surprising how many useful things come into general use on account of some slip or mistake. Blotting paper, for instance, was the result of a workman's spilling of a batch into which he had forgotten to put any sizing material. Nobel discovered dynamite by a slip, and the first bayonet was the result of a soldier's suggestion that as the powder was done, they should let their long knives into the barrels of their guns and charge. One of the funniest of accidental discoveries relates to bottled beer. In the reign of Queen Mary a certain Dean of St. Paul's and Master of Westminster School had to fly to the Continent for his life. He was angling by the silvery Thames at the time the warning reached him. Some years later he returned not only to England, but to the very spot for the same purpose, with rod and line. Growing thirsty, he remembered that he had left a bottle of beer in the hollow of a neighbouring tree when he had suddenly taken flight some years before. The bottle was there, but when he removed the cork it went off with such a bang as to make him think that it had been changed by the fairies to a gun.

Here and There.

ICE COMING IN.—The ice is now coming in again and is at present less than three miles off Cape Spear. It was lucky that a number of schooners got off Friday and Saturday, for the possibility of the port being closed once more is great.

LLEWELLYN CLUB.—At St. Thomas's Church last night, Rev. Dr. Jones announced that on Thursday night's meeting of the Llewellyn Club, a debate would take the place of the customary address. The subject of the debate will be: "Resolved that we abolish pew rents." The discussion promises to be interesting and lively.

ST. JOHN'S CHORAL SOCIETY.—Mozart's 12th Mass.—Grand performance, Methodist College Hall, March 12th. A full attendance is requested at rehearsal this evening at 8 o'clock, Presbyterian Hall.—mar.11

TONIGHT'S LECTURE.—To-night in the Synod Building the lectures on Church History will be continued. The lecturer, Rev. J. Brinton, will speak to-night on "Resistance to Church and King." The lecture will be illustrated by lantern slides, while Mr. H. Y. Mott will occupy the chair.

There will be a Special Meeting of the Shareholders of the N. I. W. A. Co-operative Stores at 8 o'clock Wednesday night, March 5th, at the N. I. W. A. Rooms, No. 1 Springdale Street. M. J. JAMES, Sec'y.—mar.11

SHIP RAN ASHORE.—A message received by the Deputy Minister of Customs states that the schooner W. T. White, fish laden from English Harbour, bound to Oporto, ran ashore at Hr. Breton inside the light-house. Subsequently she was floated off and beached the harbor, but is now leaning.

Occupation of Germany.

Two previous historic events afford basis for an estimate of the time that the Allied occupation of Germany may be expected to last. After the second fall of Napoleon, in 1815, the Allies stipulated that they should be allowed to occupy twenty French fortresses for five years. But in November, 1815, saluted the danger of a Bonapartist revival had passed, they withdrew their troops, just three years after peace had been signed. After the Franco-German War, portions of France remained in German occupation as a guarantee for the payment of the indemnity exacted by Germany. France met her obligations so speedily as to awaken in Germany the fear that she had not been asked to pay enough, and the German occupation came to an end with the evacuation of Verdun in September, 1873, two years and four months after a definite peace had been signed.

Six Miles High.

The recent claim put forward that the height of six miles achieved by two aviators is a record is likely to be questioned, especially by those who are familiar with the early history of aerial exploration. In September, 1862, a balloon ascent was made from Wolverhampton by Mr. Glaisher and Mr. Coxwell, whose special object was to see how great a height it was possible to attain. At a height of 29,000 feet, Mr. Glaisher found that his right arm had become powerless, and his left arm quickly followed suit. His head fell loosely on his shoulder, and suddenly he was seized with blindness. Mr. Coxwell saw that no time was to be lost if either of them was to get to earth alive, and as he too had both his arms useless, he seized the valve rope with his teeth, and allowed gas to escape gradually until the balloon descended in a quiet spot near Ludlow. The height attained in this journey, Mr. Glaisher calculated, was 37,000 feet.

The Perfect Batman.

The officer was cross and the Royal Air Force mess was amused. "What do you think that idiot of a batman of mine has done?" demanded the aggrieved one. "He has clamped my best tunic in the trouser-press! You should just see the thing!" "The only perfect batman I ever had," he went on, "was in France. He really was a knock-out. I shared him with another chap and we lived in clover, while other chaps had a dickens of a time. "The rummest thing he ever did was once in a 'push.' We'd been going it like one o'clock, and at last it came to this, that we were miles from everywhere and no grub! Imagine that. "Well, we called this priceless lad and asked him if he could get us anything. He said he could do us a brace of birds. We sat up at that and asked him where he'd got 'em. He just didn't answer, so we shut up. We weren't going to know anything, you be bound. "The birds were just fine. He could cook, that lad. We enjoyed them thoroughly and talked about them for days. Then there came a chit from Headquarters. Two valuable homing pigeons were missing and had we seen, did we know, and all the rest of it. Well, the other chap and I, we looked at one another, then we called the batman. "Where did those birds come from?" "Never mind that. Where did they come from?" "If you liked them, sir, you don't need to know where they come from," he said. So we showed him the chit. He read it and handed it back. "It means a court martial, you know, if it's found out," I said. "Yes, sir." "Well, look here. You needn't leave evidence about. What did you do with the basket?" "He looked at me. 'Couldn't cook 'em without makin' a fire, sir,' he said. "Now can you beat that? He was a genius, that lad, and he was a perfect batman."—London Daily Mail.

Why We Are Lop-Sided.

Everybody is lop-sided! It may come as a bit of a shock to a pretty girl to be told that her eyes are odd, that one eyebrow is higher than the other. Facts are stubborn things, however, and she can find consolation in that the rule is without exceptions. The sight of the two eyes in the same head varies, as everybody knows; but it will be news to many that the ears follow suit. Our auricular organs are unequal in their power of hearing, and they differ in size, contour, and elevation. This lop-sided rule applies to every limb as well as every feature. For instance, one of your legs is slightly shorter than the other. The two sides of the human body differ the one from the other in every particular, being governed by the two lobes of the brain.

Songs of the War.
Cruelty of the Hun Silenced the Singers.

The great war has given to the world many poems of striking beauty and power, poems which for their own sake, as well as for their associations, will long remain enshrined in the hearts of the liberty-loving people of the world; but of lyrics, in singable verse, there has been, as compared with other wars, a remarkable dearth. This is a fact widely recognized and as widely discussed. Various theories have been advanced to account for it, and among them none has seemed more reasonable than that which traces the cause to the methods which Germany introduced, almost from the beginning, into the conflict. In the ranks of "The First Hundred Thousand," British lads, taught to believe in and to practice fair fighting, went as gallantly as knights of old into the fray, marching to the lit of "Tipperary," only to find that they were confronted by an enemy acting more like savages than like civilized men. Canadian lads, coming later, blithely singing their native airs, made a similar discovery. They, too, had been educated to believe that chivalry on the part of a foe might be expected, even in the tumult and heat of battle. Like their brothers from the British Isles, they were doomed to disappointment and to a terrible surprise. The foe had resorted to the cruelest, foulest manner of warfare the world had ever known. Vimy Ridge, disillusioned them with regard to the character of the enemy. Poison gas changed their mood. While "buoyancy continued, from first to last, to characterize the temperament of the Canadian soldiers at the front, and while songs continued to go around, the character of the situation, in the war zone and in the homelands, was not as to inspire the composer or the singer. It was noticeable that while "Tipperary" took with the recruits it gradually faded into a lyric memory with the more seasoned of the troops. They had seen that which made them thoughtful and determined, where they had been lighthearted and careless. This war was different. "Keep the Home Fires Burning," a song of higher appeal, came nearer meeting the heart-need of the majority. The mood of the soldier found reflection in the attitude of the song writer and the singer. Many of the war songs failed less from lack of intrinsic merit than because of the indisposition of people not only touched personally, but horrified by the terrors which German militarism had given to war. One may search far through the literature of the period without finding anything, in prose or verse, which will give a better idea of the soldierly sentiment shocked into protest by German methods of fighting than that which, strange to say, may be obtained from the closing lines of one of the most impressive songs of the war, "In Flanders Fields," by the Canadian officer, Lt.-Col. John McCrae, who himself became a victim of a treacherous enemy. These lines were in the nature of a summons to the still hesitating, and ran:

By RUTH CAMERON

I overheard two young people in a trolley car talking about an engagement one of them wanted to break. Said the one who wanted to get the engagement. "I'll tell her I've got to work that night." Said the other girl. "Won't she think it's queer?" "No, no," said the other, "she doesn't know about that. It will be perfectly all right."

I couldn't help smiling, a bit wryly, that last phrase. She felt sure that he would pass muster, and therefore everything was "perfectly all right."

Do you know, I think that is an astonishingly easy state of mind to slip into, that of considering that a plausible lie is just as good as the truth. These girls wouldn't tell a lie that wasn't well put together, that wouldn't slip to pieces and hurt someone's feelings (and on the rebound hurt his own), but what they seem to be at is, with a perfectly good lie, a perfectly good lie.

I would know better to-day. Somehow I was reminded, by that conversation, of a little girl I once knew. She wanted to keep a couple of green apples she was playing with, during her nap. Like a fool, she put them on her nap, there were several bites out of each apple. "Oh, Elizabeth," I said reproachfully, "and you promised." "I didn't touch them," she assured me. "The pink and white and blue bits flew in the window while I was asleep and ate them up." After due persuasion, she finally confessed the truth. "But," she added, very much aggrieved, "I thought I'd think the pink and white and blue blackbirds flew in the window and ate them up."

In other words, she thought it a perfectly plausible lie, and she didn't see why it wasn't just as good as the truth.

The Foundation of Friendship.

By RUTH CAMERON.

I overheard two young people in a trolley car talking about an engagement of the one who wanted to get out of the engagement. "I'll tell her I've got to work that night."

Said the other girl, "Won't she think it queer?"

Said the other girl, "Won't she think it queer?"

He would pass muster so it was perfectly all right.

I couldn't help smiling, a bit wryly, at that last phrase. She felt sure that he would pass muster, and there everything was "perfectly all right."

Do you know, I think that is an astonishing easy state of mind to slip into, that of considering that a plausible lie is just as good as the truth. These girls wouldn't tell a lie that would put together, that would put pieces and hurt someone's feelings (and on the rebound hurt their own), but what, they seem by their attitude to ask, is wrong with a perfectly good lie?

I would know better to-day. Somehow I was reminded, by that conversation, of a little girl I once knew. She wanted to keep a basket of green apples she was playing with, during her nap. Like a fool, she hid them. When I came in to take her from her nap, there were several bites out of each apple.

"Oh, Elizabeth," I said reproachfully, "and you promised."

"I didn't touch them," she assured me. "The pink and white and blue blackbirds flew in the window while I was asleep and ate them up."

After due persuasion, she finally confessed the truth. "But," she added, "I was very much aggrieved. I thought I'd think the pink and white and blue blackbirds flew in the window and ate them up."

By a slight turn of a lever designed for the purpose, bacon may be cut as thick or as thin as required. Have your next bacon order machine cut, you wouldn't believe the difference it makes.

ple who are nearer five times five than five, think the same, one can hardly blame her.

Sometimes I am afraid truthfulness is by way of being an old-fashioned virtue. We have so much to say about the duties of fact and kindness and graciousness that we sometimes forget that the foundation of all true friendship and all right relations between human beings, is truth.

I have certain friends who tell me the truth—not ungraciously and ostentatiously—but whenever I ask them anything. And though there are times when I turn from them to the sort of friend who will give you approval or exculpation whenever you ask for it no matter how many lies they have to tell, I always turn back again. There is a sense of abiding peace in the possession of a friend who tells the truth. No one who wants true friends can afford to lie.

RELAX WHEN EATING.

It is the habit among men, and many business women, to discuss problems during luncheon. In fact they believe they are accomplishing two things at once. Indeed they are, indigestion and serious stomach trouble for the future.

Women outside the boundaries of a business life use the luncheon hour for a heated discussion about the servant problem or for a rehearsal of the unpleasant scene with the dressmaker. Students are often seen absentmindedly eating their luncheon with their books propped up before them.

When food is being consumed the stomach requires all the blood of the body to help digest it. If the brain is calling upon the supply to help out in the heated discussion or the studying the stomach is cheated and cannot do its work properly. After several episodes of this kind, the stomach rebels and indigestion is the result. The doctors declare that tea ruins the complexion and yet we constantly refer to the English women's beautiful skin. England is the tea drinking country of the whole world.

Upon arising a fresh cup of tea will sometimes set the whole day right to say nothing of driving away a sick headache or a grouchy feeling. Always be certain that the tea is freshly brewed and has not been standing very long.

If you are in a tremendous hurry to catch a train in the morning and find you have to eat your breakfast and find you have not much time, it would be

THE GAYER SIDE.

Put a little laughter into life. Break a little sunshine through the gray. Soften all the bitterness of strife. By mixing in a little bit of play. Know the birds and brooks, and know the trees. Know the hearts of little children. Learn to sing the happy melodies. God gave many talents unto you.

Drop the daily burden, now and then. Wander far from duty, if you choose. Take the time to know your fellow-men. Never mind the money you may lose. Laughter makes a sweeter sound than gold. Friendship is a richer gift than fame. Kindness keeps the heart from growing cold. Make the world be thankful that you came!

Travel down the byways, now and then; Leave the crowded thoroughfare and stray. Far from all the drosses of men. Stop and pick the blossoms on the way. Visit with your neighbours here and there. Spend some idle minutes with your dreams. Life is not a constant round of care. Gold is not as vital as it seems.

Put a little laughter into life. Break a little sunshine through the gray. Soften all the bitterness of strife. By mixing in a little bit of play. God made many joys for you to know— Hills and fields and trees and flowers and friends. Why, then, be a slave to care and woe? Learn to claim the pleasures that He sends.

Fatal Flotsam.

Several casks or drums of sulphuric acid were washed ashore lately from a wreck in the Bristol Channel. The men who found them had no notice of the dangerous nature of the liquid contained in the drums, and proceeded to get a rope around the first and drag it up the beach.

The drum, weakened by the battering it had received, burst, and the acid splashed out in every direction. Six of the men were horribly burnt.

The case calls to mind a similar accident which occurred rather more than a year ago on the Conemara coast. One morning a boy ran up into the village to say that a great keg had come ashore in the night. He thought it was a case of whisky. A number of men went down, saw the thing stranded in the shallow water, threw a rope over it and hauled it up.

Then they tried to open it. A fearful explosion occurred, tore a huge chasm in the beach, and killed seven of them outright. The supposed whisky cask was a German mine.

The search for flotsam and jetsam goes on all around our coasts, especially after winter storms. Some miscellaneous cargo went ashore in Start Bay, Devon. A quantity of candles were washed up and children were busy for days picking these up after every tide.

The beach is shingle, but very steep and dangerous. Two boys were caught by a wave and swept into the sea, and a young man who ran to the rescue was also swept away and drowned.

The Altitude Record.

Biplane Goes Up Over Five Miles.

Captain Andrew Lang, Australian, and Lieutenant A. W. Bloues, of McGill, Ont., have climbed in a biplane eight miles above the old terra firma. Their instruments showed an altitude of 30,500 feet, which is a new record. Not until after Bloues had collapsed and the engine had stopped for lack of petrol when the pumps stopped working, did Pilot Lang turn his plane earthward. Both men suffered severely from the exposure to 70 degrees of frost, Fahrenheit, despite the warm clothing they wore.

Lang and Bloues began preparation for the climb weeks ahead by abstaining from liquor and tobacco. Their clothing consisted of two pairs of silk socks, three pairs of stockings, thigh boots lined with lamb's wool, thick underclothing, three sweaters, a suit lined with fur, palacava, fur-lined cap, goggles lined with cotton-wool and electrically warmed gloves, with gauntlet and muffler.

Strapped to Lang's knee is the pad on which he recorded his observations.

Lang had to take off his goggles when oxygen froze on them and his left eye watered and froze. Bloues collapsed at 20,000 feet when the pipe which supplied him with oxygen broke, but Lang knew nothing of it.

At one stage of the flight the plane, a British machine of the type used to bomb Rhine towns, was blown 25 miles out over the sea.

Captain Lang is a nephew of the late Andrew Lang, author. It is his ambition to fly across the Atlantic and over Australia.

Child Welfare in the West.

Child Welfare is occupying a large share of attention in British Columbia and Alberta. Early in December there was held at Vancouver the first annual convention of the Child Welfare Association of British Columbia. The programme included discussions on educational reforms, juvenile delinquency, child mortality and diseases of children. Vocational training was urged in order that children might become helpful factors in the community. The schools of Vancouver were mentioned particularly on account of the special classes for the mentally backward children and the Association put itself on record as favouring institutions for the feeble-minded.

The Chief Diagnostician of the Juvenile Court of Seattle, Washington, addressed the Association on juvenile delinquency and its dependence on the status of home training. A low ebb of parental responsibility results in juvenile delinquency. It was recommended that mothers' pensions should be established because motherhood should be recognized as the highest service to the State.

In Alberta the study of Child Welfare is concerned with the preparation and serving of hot lunches to rural school children. The Department of Education for the province has issued a booklet containing a number of recipes and practical suggestions whereby the cold lunch will be wholly or practically abolished. It is estimated that more than three-fifths of the school children attending rural schools in Alberta are dependent on cold lunches and that these are eaten at irregular intervals and under conditions not beautiful. The plan of the Department of Education is that trustees and teachers shall make it possible to serve at least one hot dish each day at noon; well balanced cold lunches are also suggested to mothers.—From Canadian Public Information.

HEART FAILURE.

To-day I sought the grocer's store to buy an artichoke; my soul was sad, my head was sore, for I was nearly broke. Through four long years of stress and strife I've seen the prices rise; the cost of things has spoiled my life, and kept me wishing to buy a penknife or a pup. I always heard the merchant cry, "The prices have gone up." So I was full of unshed tears, and I was grim and cross; I wore crape tassels on my ears, I felt a total loss. I bought my artichoke and cried, "How much are yonder eggs?" A lot of hen fruit I'd desecrated, displayed in crates and kegs. The grocer glanced around my way, and seemed to wear a frown, and then methought I heard him say, "The price of eggs is down." I said, "My ears are on the blink, or else I am insane; I'll have to see the doc, I think—just make that spiel again!" The grocer looked with dreamy eyes upon the drowsy town, and said, between a brace of sighs, "The price of eggs is down." Oh, yes, I'm convalescent now; I got this broken head, and this big bruise upon my brow, when I fell over dead.

The Apotheosis of Labor.

"In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it was thou taken." This was the Divine injunction placed upon our first parent—Adam—so early following the creation. For disobeying the Almighty's command, the first man was condemned to eat bread in the sweat of his face, or in other words to labor with his hands for the means of his daily subsistence, and succeeding generations have sweated and toiled to the same end. Manual labor is therefore a Divine institution and the most honorable and ancient known to man. The aristocracy of labor is older than the aristocracy of either rank or wealth. It is the patriarch of them all. Labor from the earliest times, as has been shown, has been given the first rank. Without labor, there could be no production; without production the world would become a desolation of stagnation. Labor is the substructure of the Universe and the prime factor in the prosperity of nations and peoples. This was recognized from the very beginning, for the spirit of association has, in all ages, induced men to combine for the attainment of some common purpose, and the workers-with-their-hands, saw speedily the advantages, which association by numbers would give them in their callings. The result was the establishment of Guilds, which were voluntary associations of those people living near together who joined for the purpose, primarily, of paying contributions, worshipping together, feasting together periodically, helping each other in sickness or distress, but of some special object. Guilds have been numerous, especially in Europe, where their influence was very great, from a very early period. The ancient Guild was the forerunner of the modern union.

The Romans exercised the right of association not so very long after the foundation of the city, and Numa Pompilius, the second king, encouraged the formation of craft or labour guilds, the membership not being limited to laborers only, but including freedmen, slaves and persons of the humbler class were admitted. The Greeks in the 2nd and 3rd centuries, B.C. had similar associations, but for the most part these were benevolent and social, and partook of a more or less religious quality. In essence their principles were almost identical with those of the Roman craft guilds. Artisans guilds were common prior to the 6th century A.D. and there are records of a soapmakers' craft in Naples, about this time. But it was really not till the middle ages that trade guilds prospered and flourished all over Europe, each trade having its own separate guild, in much the same way as each labor organization of our own day has its own particular Union. As their principal objects the craft or trade guildmen provided for the maintenance of the customs of their craft; framed ordinances for its conduct including care against fraudulent workmanship, and took care that these ordinances were properly carried out, punishing any guild-brother who infringed them. But all these, evidently, owing to changed conditions gradually decayed and disappeared, but from them have sprung the modern Associations of Labor and Trade, which exert such a tremendous influence on modern conditions. The introduction of machinery into the industrial life, doubtless contributed in a great measure to the dying out of the guilds, which during their long term of existence had wrought great and lasting good, but on their death was born the great labor organizations which protect their craftsmen from exploitation by capitalists greedy for wealth.

After the fall it was ordained that man should eat bread in the sweat of his face, and this order was to the whole human race which was to come after. The Almighty made no distinctions and announced no privileges. He exalted labor above all other conditions of life. But men in the course of time, changed the scheme and ground down the workers with his hands, and kept him in subjection in a state of serfdom, as a prodigy only by which wealth could be obtained. For centuries men groaned under the lash of the taskmasters' whip, and suffered privations of all kinds and endured most horrible agonies in order that money might flow into the coffers of their masters. The time, however, came when labor realized its strength and importance, and found that by organization it could, not only ameliorate its own condition but place a check on the aggressions of capital. The real formation of unions, as we know them began in the first half of the 19th century. Small at the start, they gradually grew, as their purpose became more widely known, into the bodies which now control all the craftsmen, and industrial workers of the universe. Constitutionally formed, well officered and ably administered, they have after a gallant struggle come into their own, and their oneness of purpose, that of bettering the existing conditions and giving the employer a fuller measure of recognition by the means of their unparalleled growth, in strength and importance, universally.

At Government House.

On Saturday afternoon at Government House, a reception was held by His Excellency the Governor, at which M. Suzor, the French Consul, presented the Palme d'Or of the Croix Rouge Française, in recognition of their work during the war, for the French Red Cross, to the following ladies:—Mrs. Tasker Cooke, Mrs. C. McK. Harvey, Mrs. Norman Alderice, and Madame Suzor. The decoration was accompanied by the following diploma:—

His Excellency welcomed Mons. Suzor to Government House, and placed same at his disposal, which courtesy the Consul fittingly acknowledged. Capt. Campbell, Private Secretary to the Governor, presented the recipients of the awards to His Excellency who congratulated them upon receipt of same. Mons. Suzor announced that he had a decoration for Miss Armored Harris, daughter of His Excellency, which he hopes to present to her upon her return to Newfoundland. A meeting will be held Wednesday night, for the appointment of sub-committees.

Cochrane St. Church

Much interest was manifested in the services at Cochrane Street Methodist Centennial Church yesterday, as evidenced by the large attendances at both services. The sermons by the Rev. W. B. Bugden, on "Living a Christian Life," and by Rev. Dr. Bond, on "The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper," were especially thoughtful and helpful. At the close of the evening service the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered, the number of communicants being probably, with one exception, the largest in the history of this church. At the Sunday School session in the afternoon, the Superintendent, Mr. A. Peters, announced that the special offering of the young people of the Sunday School taken in aid of the Armenian Relief Fund, last Sunday afternoon, amounted to the splendid sum of two hundred and fifteen dollars. How are the other city Sunday Schools answering the call of the four hundred thousand children in Bible Lands?—Com.

American Officers Dance

The officers of the American tug Iroquois and the S. S. Guffy held a very enjoyable dance in the C. C. C. Hall, Saturday night, some fifty couples being present. During the evening supper was served by the waiters of the ships, and the C. C. C. Band was present to enhance the success of the occasion by its lively music.

The Land of Refuge.

On Thursday, March 2, 1848, Louis Philippe, the last King of France, and Queen Marie Amelie, his wife, after having remained in concealment for some days at Honfleur north coast of France, embarked on Havre, in the adjoining department of Seine-Inférieure, in the South-Western Company's steamer "Express," and landed next morning at Newhaven, Sussex. The next day they took up their residence at Claremont Park, in Surrey. On Monday, March 6th, they visited Queen Victoria at Buckingham Palace, but they afterwards remained in retirement, and assumed the titles of Count and Countess Neully. Their Louis Philippe died on August 26, 1850, at nearly seventy-seven years of age. This retirement from France was the result of a revolutionary tumult, in which, on Feb. 23 and 24, 1848, barricades were thrown up in the streets as fortifications, the palace of the Tuileries was ransacked; the prisons were opened; and frightful disorders were committed. Louis Philippe abdicated in favor of his infant grandson, the Comte de Paris, who, however, was not accepted, and therefore on February 24, the Royal family and the French capital, escaped from the French capital. His predecessor, dynasty, had felt forced to abdicate in August, 1830, and, like his successor of the House of Orleans, had retired to England on the 17th of that month, residing at Holyrood Palace, in Edinburgh, till 1832. After the French Revolution of 1848, Charles Louis Napoleon Buonaparte became, in 1852, Emperor of France, like his celebrated uncle before him, but he was deposed in 1870, and he also retired to England, where previously he had lived in peace and safety at Bath and other places; arriving at Dover on March 20 of that year, and resided at Chislehurst, in Kent, where he died on January 9, 1873.

New Riordon Financing.

same basis as Ottawa points. The new bond issue is secured by a general mortgage on all the pulp plants and by collateral security of the controlling interest in the Riondon Pulp and Paper Company, of Newfoundland, a subsidiary of the Riondon Company Limited. With this new issue of $4,000,000 of Bonds the Riondon Company will have a total of $6,285,000 of Bonds outstanding against fixed assets of $15,000,000 and net liquid assets of $2,250,000. Fixed assets are, therefore, two and one-half times, and net liquid assets over 37 per cent of total bonded debt, including the new issue. Net earnings of the Riondon Company for the past three years have been more than four times the amount of outstanding Bonds in the new issue. The Bonds are, therefore, very thoroughly secured. It is understood that the American syndicate associated with Royal Securities Corporation offered their allotment of the underwriting in the American market privately a week or so ago and sold their entire participation within two days—a fact significant of the growing interest of American investors in sound Canadian Investment issues. During the past two weeks a large portion of the part of the issue taken by Royal Securities Corporation has been underwritten by Canadian investors, and elsewhere in our columns the unsold portion of the balance is being offered for public subscription on very attractive terms. The Riondon issue is the largest piece of Canadian industrial financing carried out for some time and should prove popular to the Canadian public. Not inappropriately, it is an issue representative of the Canadian Pulp and Paper industry which during the war has made great strides as an exporting industry with good promise that the ground gained will be added to under peace conditions.

NOON. KING REVIEW GUARDS.

LONDON, March 1. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—An imposing military pageant was celebrated this afternoon in Hyde Park, when the King, mounted on horseback, with the Queen and Prince of Wales in their carriage, attended by Generals Robertson, Birdwood, Macdonough and the Maharajah of Bikaner, reviewed fourteen battalions of the "Young Guards," who are shortly proceeding to join the army of occupation on the Rhine. Bright sunshine attracted a huge crowd, numbering over one hundred thousand. The arrival of the Royal Party was greeted by the playing of the National Anthem by massed bands of the Brigade of Guards. The King inspected the serried lines and commended on the splendid appearance of the men. Afterwards four brigades advanced in review order and marched past his Majesty.

OFF THE MAP. PARIS, Mar. 2.

(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—An official communiqué from the territorial commission of the Peace Conference, the commission on Greek affairs, yesterday debated at length the situation to be created in Asia Minor. The general plan, adopted for the dissolution of the Ottoman Empire, is the total elimination of the Empire and the internationalization of Constantinople and the Straits. The creation of a Turkish state in the centre of Asia Minor and the liberation of all nationalities from the rule of the Porte. As regards the liberation of the strip of the coast between Avail and Cos, including Smyrna and Ephesus, shall be assigned to Greece as full owner or international mandatory.

A New Method. The newest method of getting over the Prohibition Act is that of purchasing and then tapping spirit compasses of their exhilarating contents. The great danger in the coming four months is that there won't be jobs enough to go around; that unemployment will come with attendant misery and social unrest at a time when anarchistic tendencies are contagious. Let us hope that this situation will not arise, but let us guard against it," stated Mr. Smyth at the recent U. S. Labor Reconstruction Conference. "The remedy of building public works is not available on a large scale until spring," he continued. "The farms will not call urgently for men till frost thaws out. Building can not for a season be resumed to any great extent. Chiefly must we look to our manufacturers to carry the burden. But they are hesitant. Taxes are not yet determined. ### The Congregational Pulpit.

At the Congregational Church on Sunday the Rev. D. Bright Ashford dealt with two great subjects; the "Problem of Innocent Suffering," and "The Real Cause of the War." An outline of the way in which the preacher dealt with these subjects has appeared in the other papers, but we are enabled to give a few quotations which have not appeared elsewhere. From the sermon on "Vicarious Sacrifice," we quote the following: "Sorrow and Suffering are part of the world's warp and woof. The Law of sacrifice runs through all Nature, History and Revelation as the scarlet thread through the cables used in the British Navy. You may not be able to understand it; you may ask why the world was not created differently? But there is the fact. And if you reflect a moment you will see that there could be no animal world without sin and consequent suffering. The first fact writ large across the universe is this; that this is at present an imperfect world; that the path of progress is by way of sacrifice; that sin entails suffering and can only be eradicated by sacrifice." The sermon at night on "The Real Cause of the War," revealed history. His diagnosis was that the disease of war was caused by Materialism and Atheism. He showed how that the extraordinary development of the Nineteenth Century was a loop sided development. There was great progress in manufactures, commerce, transport, education and wealth, but little or none on the ethical, social and spiritual side. Hand in glove with Materialism went Atheism. Darwin's theories of the Origin of Man and the "Survival of the Fittest" were carried to their logical conclusion by the German scientists, and exploited by the German war-lords. The preacher made the following apt quotations from German writers to show the truth of this statement. Bismarck wrote: "War is not a law of nature; it is only the struggle for existence, in a more general form." Bernhardi went further; said he, "WAR is a biological necessity; everywhere the law of the strongest prevails and the weak go under. The strong ambitious man will by no means allow himself to be guided by the idea of right." Klaus Wagner, another German writer, boasted, "The motto of Germany must be, 'Germany over everything in the world.' A great people must expand over foreign soil, and with sword in hand must drive out foreign peoples. Where the native populations does not die out, it can be made a subordinate caste or forced back into reservations."

In passionate tones the preacher denounced Animalism, Materialism and Atheism as the real cause of this war and of all wars, whether National class, or individual disputes, for they stand for the spirit which lives for self at the cost of others, exalts the satisfactions of the body above the claims of the soul, regards mercy as weakness and might as the only right, and looks on honesty, sincerity, truth, and freedom as mere customs to be broken at ones convenience. Surely this war, this beast born Materialism, this pentecost of calamity, this disease which has blighted and blasted our hopes and our homes, is a clarion call to recognize God and to give our life's allegiance to Jesus Christ."

Britain Makes Best Bells

Bell makers are looking forward to working overtime at making bells for some time to come, for the Hun on the Continent has melted down hundreds of church chimes to supply him with his much needed metal for ammunition.

The best bells are made by British bell makers who are so skilled that they can cast a chime of bells which require practically no alteration afterwards.

As these bells weigh anything from half a ton upwards, and special moulds have to be made for each bell, this is a more wonderful feat than it sounds.

The moulds for the bells are made of bricks and loam that have been thoroughly baked before the white hot molten metal is poured into them.

Bell metal, by the way, is made of four parts of copper to one of tin, and it was for the copper the bells contained that they were ruthlessly torn from their churches by the Germans.

In the early days most bells were made in the churchyard of the church in which they were going to be hung, in order to avoid the great difficulty of transport. Now, however, they are made in special bell foundries.

Some of the bells now chiming have only been hung with great difficulty on account of their huge weight. Big Ben, for example, weighs nearly fourteen tons, and Great Peter of York Minster eleven tons.

One of the mysteries that has puzzled bell makers for years, was how the great bell in the Bell Tower at Pekin was ever hung. It was cast in 1415, and weighs fifty-three and a half tons! It measures fifteen feet in height, is nine inches thick, and has a circumference of thirty-four feet at the rim.

To hang it nowadays would require the most up-to-date cranes, and how it was hung hundreds of years ago is a mystery which has never been solved.

In no other part of the world are bells hung as they are in England. On the Continent the bells themselves are stationary, and are struck by hand or machinery, but here the bell is swung to and fro till it is struck by the clapper.

Forgot to Bury Baby.

A mother's desire to decorate the grave of her child recently revealed one of the most unusual cases on record and resulted in warrants being sworn out by Mrs. Elizabeth Wendroth, charging Walter H. Streibig, undertaker, with false pretences and unlawfully removing the body. Mrs. Wendroth showed Prosecutor Morrissey a receipted bill made out by Streibig for burial of the child. The body was found at Streibig's undertaking establishment, Cincinnati, O., a few days ago.

Three weeks ago the mother went to decorate the grave and no records could be found at the cemetery of its burial. Streibig explained, the mother said, that he had held the body to wait until the cemetery had thawed so a grave could be dug.

"The coffin containing the baby's body was placed away last January," Streibig said. "It was forgotten and I did not know it had not been buried until the mother asked me last Sunday the number of the grave it had been placed in. The matter is simply an oversight. We embalmed the body so we could keep it until the weather permitted burial."

 A tiny bottle of Frezone costs but a few cents at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

The Worst Has Not Been Told.

Lieut. Beverley Robinson, R. A. F., who is now lecturing on his experience as a prisoner of war in Germany for two and a half years, states that since returning to Canada he has found disposition on the part of some to make light of the stories of cruelty practised by the Germans and of their treatment of Canadian soldiers. He declares that they are all true, and should not be made light of, and that there are worse stories than any that have been heard yet. It is important that the people of Canada should bear this in mind, for German propagandists and unpractical pacifists will again be at work to influence their attitude toward that country and to minimize the value of the hard-won victory for liberty. Mr. Robinson, who had experience of nine different prisons, is a son of the late Christopher Robinson, K.C., of Toronto, and a nephew of the late Hon. John Beverley Robinson, a former Lieutenant-governor of Ontario, and his statements with regard to German cruelties ought to counteract these pernicious efforts to weaken public sentiment.—Sydney Record.

Captain Robert Bartlett's aeroplane flight to the North Pole—a project financed by the Aero Club of America—has so excited the interest of famous explorers and aviators here and abroad, that a competitor has been drawn into the field by the person of Captain Salisbury, of the British Northern Exploration Company.

 The reports from Great Britain on the subject are meagre. Outside of the fact that Jones will fly from Spitzbergen there has been no other information divulged. No doubt secrecy being maintained, with the idea that he who is forewarned is forearmed.
 The British Northern Exploration Company will doubtless make use of the big Handley-Page type of machine for the flight. The first successful voyage from England to India was recently accomplished in one of these machines. Announcement of this fact was made officially by the Air Ministry on January 16.

THE BRITISH BASE.
 Just how great the cruising radius of this aeroplane may be is not known to any degree of certainty, but in any event it need not exceed fifteen hours for polar work. Spitzbergen is about 450 miles off the Norwegian coast, so, crediting one of these craft with a speed of from 90 to 100 miles an hour, it may readily be seen that a sizeable surplus of gasoline could

Anglo-American Aero- plane Run for North Pole

Bartlett Will Leave Etah and Jones, Spitzbergen.

Captain Robert Bartlett's aeroplane to the North Pole—a project financed by the Aero Club of America—has so excited the interest of Americans and aviators here and abroad, that a committee has been drawn into the field by the person of Captain Salisbury of the British Northern Expedition Company.

The United States represented by Captain Bartlett, and Great Britain by Jones, the air voyage to the Pole develops into a race of international interest, with a distinct sporting aspect and with special appeal to the national pride of the two respective countries.

Making the first descent from the air at this coveted point, appeared in the member certain of achievement by Captain Bartlett, thus assuring to the United States the double honor of discovery by sea and from the air.

It is likely that Great Britain has any machines of sufficient size to carry fuel and equipment for such a trip without making a stop. But this would not be necessary. There are less than two hundred miles of open water between Spitzbergen and the ice pack which surrounds the Pole. It would be a simple matter to establish fuel stations at intervals of the ice floes, and it would not be difficult to locate these points from the air.

THE AMERICAN BASE.

The flying distance to the Pole is approximately the same for both men, with a slight advantage in favor of Captain Bartlett. The American expedition will travel by boat to Etah on the western coast of Greenland, near Smith Sound. From there small scouting planes will be sent to Cape Columbia, the northernmost point of Grant Land, where a base will be established and a large supply of fuel stored.

The trip from Etah to Cape Columbia, via the air, is less than 350 miles. From Cape Columbia to the Pole is 490 miles.

After the base has been set up at Columbia, Captain Bartlett will make his flight in a large flying boat, which is now being constructed. Thus starting from Etah he will have about the same distance to travel as Jones, who will start from Spitzbergen.

Captain Bartlett will have the same advantages in setting up fuel stations on the ice pack, and because of his planning to take along smaller auxiliary planes for this purpose he will be able to expedite the work and reduce the wear and tear on the largest machine.

The project of the Aero Club of America, however, is no mere spectacular undertaking with no other end in view than the mere reaching of the Pole by the air route. After the Pole is reached the machine will not be turned back, but will keep straight on across the Arctic basin to Cape Chelyuskin on the Siberian coast, a total distance of about 1,400 miles from Cape Columbia. The Bartlett party will no doubt remain in the polar regions for several years carrying on scientific investigations.

BARTLETT'S PLANS.

Commenting on his plans, Captain Bartlett said:

"We want to map out that territory from the Arctic map which is marked 'unexplored.' We ought to take three years to make a thorough job of it and it can't be done in much less than two. There is a tremendous amount of territory in this region of which we know little except what we hear of from whalers and a great vast expanse of which we know nothing at all. With machines and money and men we can remain in this region and find out just what it is.

"We shall set up a base at Cape Columbia, then fly across the Pole to Cape Chelyuskin and later establish a third at Wrangel Island near the Behring Straits. With these three bases a triangle would be formed which would include most of the unexplored region. Then with our big flying boat and smaller scout planes and dog sledges we could thoroughly cover this whole section lying within the boundaries of the triangle."

OTHER DETAILS.

Further details are supplied by Alan R. Hawley, President of the Aero Club of America in the following statement:

"It is most amazing to find that for a period of the year in the Arctic regions the weather is not as cold as it is in New York during the months of October and November, and that the plan to fly across the top of the earth would be a comparatively easy thing to do.

"There are six weeks of fair weather in July and August when even in the Polar regions it is seldom lower than sixty degrees above zero. The plan is to have a ship go to Etah in June, when the ice is sufficiently broken up to permit the vessel to cross to Melville Bay. The ship would carry a large seaplane for the flight across the top of the earth and for exploration of the unexplored polar regions, as well as smaller planes for scouting flights.

"Immediately upon arriving at Etah, a base would be established and while waiting for the ice to break up further north to permit the ship to go as far north as Cape Columbia, the smaller planes would fly to Cape Columbia and establish a base there for the larger plane.

"For the six weeks after the middle of July, when the weather conditions are best for flying in the polar regions, the large plane as well as the smaller planes will be put into service and the important work of the expedition will be done.

"The United States and to science will surely be obtained from this expedition. There is no doubt whatever that this expedition can survey, explore and photograph the unexplored parts of the Arctic and establish the existence or non-existence of land or lands in that region. The upper air and the bottom of the ocean basin will be explored.

"The North Pole has been discovered of course by Admiral Peary, but the major part of the work remains to be done.

"Both Admiral Peary and Captain Bartlett want to do a great deal of scientific research in the polar basin, which covers one million square miles, and they will have a laboratory on board the flying boat where the flora and fauna from the ocean bottom will be kept until the machine returns to its base. Little or no data has been obtained from the polar basin. No meteorological surveys have been made."

PEARY'S IDEA.

The plan of reaching "Farthest North" by means of aeroplanes was conceived by Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, and ever since he has returned from his successful trip to the Pole he has been devoting a great deal of his time and thought to the subject. He proposed the plan over two years ago to the Aero Club of America, and his organization has fostered the idea and appointed a committee to investigate the scheme thoroughly. These men were: Rear Admiral Peary, Alan R. Hawley, Henry A. Wise Wood, Henry Woodhouse, Rear Admiral Bradley, A. Fiske, John Hays Hammond, Rear Admiral William N. Little, Professor Charles L. Poor, Colonel E. Lester Jones, U.S.A., Major Cushman A. Rice, U.S.A., and Augustus Post.

The project will be known as the Roosevelt memorial expedition, which the officers of the club explain is fitting that this tribute be paid the former President, as it was he who gave Rear Admiral Peary leave of absence to head the expedition which discovered the Pole. Colonel Roosevelt was also one of the first patrons of aeronautics. Any land that is discovered will be named "Roosevelt Land."

The cost of the expedition, which will be about $250,000, will be defrayed by the club, and this amount has already been subscribed by various members.

At the present writing no information can be had as to the type of machine, its size, horsepower, or the number of men who will accompany

Captain Bartlett. It is said, however, that a flying boat will be used instead of a land machine. It has been determined that this type will afford greater utility since during the months when flying conditions are favorable there is a great amount of open water and landing can be made with greater safety with the hydro-aeroplane design.—The American Weekly.

Market Notes.

Codfish.—There was much activity shown in buying, last week, by merchants making up cargoes for export, and prices ranged from $14 to $15 for No. 1 Shore. Labrador is quoted at $9.50 to $10.

Cod Oil.—About twenty-five hundred tons of Common are being held in St. John's, but no offers above $130 have been made by prospective purchasers. Refined sold at $2.25 per gallon, the demand at that figure being but slow.

Herring.—The local price of Scotch pack has gone down to $17 and few sales are being made. Splits now are being quoted at $7, with no considerable transfer of stocks reported.

Provisions.—Standard Flour, in small lots, is selling at $14.50, and in large parcels at $14.25. The retail price is $15. Ham Butt Pork has advanced $1.25 in the American market, consequently future importations will show that increase over present rates. Present quotations stand at—Spare Ribs, $48; Ham Butt, $48 to $48.50; Short Cut Clear, $50. War Poetry.

As we have before stated, the poetry inspired by the war has not been of the highest character generally, although of course there have been some splendid lines written between 1914 and 1919. In the beginning Kipling, as usual, published a vigorous lyric after Kipling manner, and the moving lines of "Flanders Fields" are true poetry. The writer in the "Quarterly Review" contends that war is not after all much of an inspiration to the poet: "For the new process of warfare is indisputably a vile, inhuman, devilish abomination, plunged in squalor and filth. It is approached through seas of mud and pursued amid vermin and uncleanness." Yet there are splendid things in war and these give the poet his chance. Mr. Thomas Hardy struck the right note of the proud consciousness of fighting in a worthy cause which all Englishmen felt when the war was entered upon:

"What of the faith and fire within us,
Men who march away
Ere the barn-cocks say
Night is growing gray,
To hazards whence no tears can win us?"

What of the faith and fire within us
Men who march away?"

Mr. John Massfield also touched a lofty note in speaking of those who died:

"They died (uncouthly most) in foreign lands
For some idea but dimly understood
Of an English city not built by hands,
Which love of England prompted
And made good."

Hopes for the success of the soldier in battle and of his return home naaturally form a large element in war poetry, and Mr. William Grenfell has thus sung:

"The kestrel hovering by day
And the little owls that call by night,
Bid him be swift and keen as they,
As keen of ear, as swift of sight."

The blackbird sings to him, "brother,
brother,
If this be the last song you shall sing,
Sing well for you may not sing another;
Brother, sing."

Present day war is a terribly mechanical thing and in some ways man is belittled by his machines, the soldier being a mechanician.

"These are our masters, the slim
Grim muzzles that lark in the pit;
That chafe for the rushing of wheels
And the teams plunging madly to bit."

Of course there are bound to be

"home thoughts" on the part of the soldiers abroad and one of the prettiest verses we have read for some time is expressive of this dreaming of home:

"Hungry for Spring I bent my head,
The perfume fanned my face,
And all my soul was dancing
In that little lovely place,
Dancing with a measured step from wrecked and shattered towns
Away—away upon the Downs."

And some of these soldier poets have drawn pictures terribly vivid of actual war. Mr. Robert Nichols tells of a dying soldier whose fighting fury surmounts everything, and fury terribly wounded he drags himself back to strike one blow more at the enemy:—

The parapet was reached.
He could not raise to it.
Three figures fell in one breath
Leaped up. Two figures fell in toppling death;
And Gates was lifted in. "Who's hit," said he,
"Timmons and Jones." "Why did they that for me?"
"I'm gone already!" Gently they laid him prone
And silently watched.

Even the affectionate and patient dog comes in for a poetic word.
An old war poet has written what might be called a horribly realistic war poem:—

"This bloody steel
Has killed a man.
I heard him squeal
As on I ran.
He watched me come
With wagging head,
I pressed it home
And he was dead.
Though clean and clear
I've wiped the steel,
I still can hear

That dying squeal." Among the immense number of poems written about the war there must perforce be some good ones; yet it must be confessed that none of the lyrics have ever touched the human heart like "Marching through Georgia," "John Brown's Body," the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," and a dozen more which might be named.—Ex.

Not Serious.

We should be concerned for the success of the Peace Conference at Paris if the negotiations did not develop rifts and differences. They are an indication that the statesmen engaged in the work have definite opinions, that they have formed plans. Naturally they do not hold the same opinions, they have not formed the same plans. It is the business of statesmanship to reach international agreements by well-considered conciliations.

Peace conferences always breed rows. Czar Alexander was continually threatening to withdraw from the Congress of Vienna. He scolded the Emperor of Austria about Metetrich, demanding that he be reprovved and curbed. Castlereagh was much objected to, and many titled personages were glad when he went home. Upon Hardenberg, Stein, and Von Humboldt many black looks were cast because of the truly Prussian pigheadedness of their desire for the annexation of the greater part of Saxony. Vials of wrath were continually poured upon the head of Talleyrand, who triumphed over them all. At one time during the progress of the Conference at Paris, in 1898, the Spanish Commissioners packed up declaring they would return at once to Madrid. The United States soothed their agitation by agreeing to pay Spain $20,000,000, given, not in payment for the Philippines, as some have supposed, but to oil the creaking machinery of the negotiations. Count Witte at Portsmouth, knowing that Japan could not long continue the war, that she must have peace, made threats of withdrawal from the Conference a part of his tactics, and thereby won many points for Russia, inasmuch that the final treaty was looked upon as a triumph for him and his Government.

The reported threat or hint that the Conference may be transferred to some neutral capital because of the attitude of certain French officials and the tone of the French press is not to be taken seriously. Premier Clemenceau's interview expressed agreement with the proposals of the United States and Great Britain rather than dissent. The brilliant writers of the French press may now and then ruffle the sensibilities of the members of the Conference, but that would be a poor reason for deserting from Paris. France has needs as well as views, she has suffered much by the war, she has been impoverished. She wants reparation. But it is probable that she will be able to secure a larger sum from Germany under Mr. Wilson's plan than under the possibly sterner measures she may now favor. If Germany is to pay, she must be permitted to earn money for the payment. For another thing, France does not want to be put to the cost of maintaining a large army for defense against a possibly re-established and still hostile Germany. Clemenceau gratefully takes note of

At St. Thomas's.

Large congregation attended St. Thomas's Church last night, when Dr. Jones preached on "Church Union." The preacher first of all the church as it was when started when it was noted for its simplicity of life, its simplicity of creed, and its simplicity of worship. Its life was simple, because Christ was its life, and its creed was simple, and was based in the belief of Jesus Christ as Son of God. Its worship was simple, and the "Breaking of Bread" was the common bond of all. He spoke of the contrast presented by the different beliefs which try the thoughts of people, and the sterility of worship. Wherein the first days of Christianity, earnestness was the keynote, often the worship consisted of simple communities, and in some instances worship is altogether lacking. To the preacher said, every intelligent man wanted Church Reunion. He pointed out, that there is to be, and must be differences of opinion, but not in essential things. As one reflected on the causes of the many divisions in the church, he would not help being ashamed, for every case, disunion had been caused by quarrelling over trivial matters. This was borne witness by the fact that the Eastern and Western churches separated because of the Bishops of Rome and Constantinople could not agree about such things as the keeping of Easter, the Nicene Creed, the exact wording of the Nicene Creed, etc. This trivial too was seen in the excommunication of the Church of England, Rome, and also in the separation of the Non-Conformists from the Church of England. To-day, declared the speaker, men saw the utter needlessness of quarrelling and separating in such trivial matters. They perceived that parochial church matters should give place to universal, and the present divisions were not conducive to the best possible success in missionary labors. (To use the preacher's words, "the different dogmas, by their different creeds, and by doing damn their souls.") But the crippling missionary efforts, disunion drove people away from the church. It drove away laborers, because they saw in it no help of religious wrongs. It drove away intelligent men, because when they believed so many different preachers, they were discouraged and stayed away. It drove away Socialistic preachers, because they derived no sympathy from the church in their efforts for the betterment of mankind. Thirdly, this disunion was the cause of the present everyday life. Sectarianism was predominant politics, home life, education and religion, and influenced all for ill. Dr. Jones asserted that it was impossible to adopt the suggestion that all should submit to the dogmas of one particular church, because reasons for such a course of action were not substantiated in the Bible. Only the Federation scheme as set forth, was equally impossible, for in a word, federation is a relinquishing in part, as in league of nations, but unity would result. The only way possible was Church Unity was by Organized unity, attained to by self-discipline. Church Reunion, he said, only come when each church is recognized as a contributor to the whole, for the welfare of the world. To summarize—Catholicity, spirit, catholicity of comprehension, and a return to the Primitive, Historic Episcopate are necessary.

CUSHION SOLE SHOES

Many a Man and Woman who has suffered with foot troubles, remembers with gratitude the day when we induced them to try our Cushion Soled Shoes.

Inside these foot comforters the foot rests upon a cork insole, over which is a covering of soft felt which is covered by a lining of kid skin.

This combination makes a splendid cushion for the foot and brings great relief to tender feet besides keeping the foot warm and dry.

CUSHION SOLED SHOES FOR MEN,
$5.50, $7.50 to $9.00.

FOR WOMEN,
$4.70 to $8.50.

While these Shoes are made with all the style and beauty of other Shoes, they are comfortable and delightful to the Man or Woman suffering from tired or tender feet.
