The Liberals of this country have always been anxious for development in the West. I have been in this House nearly fifteen years, and during that period most of the money that was expended in the West has gone through Parliament. I have yet to know of any Liberal who voted against the expenditure of one dollar of the millions that have been necessary for the development of the West. We have never refused anything for the development of that country. Besides what we did in the building of railways, we took our lives in our hands in 1911 and went down to an honourable defeat in a fight for freedom of trade for the people of the West. The policies and the principles of the Liberal party to-day are what they were then. The policy of the Liberal party to-day is honesty and integrity and proper administration of the country's affairs. In the conduct of the great chieftain, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who has been laid to his rest, during the years that he led the great Liberal party from 1911 down to the day of his death, what was there to show that he was for anything but for advocacy of the principles that he put forward during the many years that he was in power? Did he, as a leader, depart from those principles in any way? Not at all. He was a Canadian from Scatarie to Vancouver. He was not a sectional man, and we are not sectional men to-day. We are not for Ontario against Quebec or for the West against the East; we are Canadians, from one ocean to the other. If there is necessity for building railways in any province of the West and we have the means, we are here to do it; but we want to know what we are doing; we want to know where we are going to build them, what provinces they will be in, and whether they are going to meet the needs of the people. But the Government is putting on camouflage. We are told: You shall not know where the roads are to be built; it is not our policy to be honest with the people; it would not do for the people to know what is going on. Instead of standing up manfully in this House last Friday night and doing as he should have done when this information was asked for, the leader of the House talked about "dirty babies" and about everything else except the question that we were discussing. He tried to create a camouflage by saying to the people: I am for public ownership, but hon. gentlemen opposite are not. He seems to forget his own record, when, by his own will and by his own wrong-doings, perhaps, he became an administrator and had that little property in his hand, like Naboth he was absolutely and entirely for private ownership. My hon. friend is everything by turns, and nothing long; he is godly when godliness pays. It does not worry him very much to change from public ownership to private ownership and back again if that is necessary for him to steer the head of the ship into a safe harbour. I agree with him that the ship is water-logged, that the sails are torn, that the compass is out of order and that the craft is absolutely unseaworthy and should take no further cargo on board. I am not surprised, therefore, that the minister is shifting from one leg to another in order to avoid telling the people what the situation really is.

Why, it is provoking, at least to an old member of the House like myself, who has been voting consistently, whether in Opposition or supporting a Government, for everything that was necessary for the general development of this country from one shore to the other, that we are to be told by the leader of the House, because we questioned closely into the methods under which they are going to handle the railroads of this country: Why, you are opposed to public ownership altogether and we are going to raise that issue in the country and to censure you on your narrowness and lack of intelligence and vision in this great country. If there was vision, if there was intelligence, if this country has become the great country that it has, it was by the vision and energy and foresight and policy of development of the party to which I have the pride and honour to belong.

In 1896, the Conservative party handed us a country that was bankrupt at every turn of the road. We have developed that country in its every policy; we have bettered its railway policy, its financial policy, its immigration policy. We have built it up; we have driven the prairie rabbit and the buffalo out of the country, and we have substituted men, and government, and provinces in their place. If hon. gentlemen are out of their element now until they get back the prairie rabbit and the buffalo, we cannot help that, but we purpose, whenever we have the power and the right to do so, carrying forward that great policy of the Liberal party which we created when we took power in this country and which we carried forward to its very fullest in 1911, when there was no criticism from hon. gentlemen opposite except to leave well enough alone; that every phase of business in the development of this country was going on as well as could possibly be expected; that nothing further could possibly be required, and that we were not wise in trying to better conditions. Every condition for which we fought at that time and every condition which was strenuously opposed by hon. gentlemen opposite, have since been admitted by them to be all right. They admit now that our policy on the trade question, that "truck and trade with the Yankees," was a most excellent thing, and they could find no possible fault with it. They are taking it to their bosoms and their hearts now, and they are obliged to go down to the Yankees to get the money which they cannot get elsewhere.

The particular point with which I wanted to deal was about the revival of those charters. It has been continually pointed out that there is a necessity for those charters. If local charters of this kind, or whatever they are, were necessary for the building of roads in the West, I would say: Certainly, revive them. But we have the Government Railway Act, chapter 36 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, which gives every conceivable power to the Government of this country to build a railway anywhere in the whole land from ocean to ocean; we have chapter 37, which is the Railway Act, which gives further power to companies and Governments to build railways; and we have this Bill which we are putting through the Committee now, with sections 13, 23, and 26, all providing for the building of railways by the Government and under Government control, where the Government thinks proper, after Government engineers have laid them out and given us information. What is the matter with that? Why should we be dragging along with us those 46, or 48, or 50, old charters with bargains and encumbrances about them with which we should not be bothered at all? If whoever are going to take charge of this work are going to make a success of it, we must start them out with a clean sheet. If the old management is an encumbrance to them, let us cut out the old management. Mr. Hanna is, I believe, a very excellent man, but circumstances make men, and if it is necessary to have other men and to cut loose from Mackenzie and Mann influence, surely we can find in this country men who will take charge of the work and do it as well as anybody trained in the school of Mackenzie and Mann. It is a stigma upon our railroads with which we have been dealing for fifty years if we have not one man as experienced as those trained in the school of Mackenzie and Mann. The old saying is: If thine eye offend thee, pluck it out; if thy hand offend thee, cut it off; it is better for you to go to heaven with your hand off or your eye out than to go to hell with your eye in and your hand on. That is what I say about the influences and combinations and ramifications of Mackenzie and Mann;—cut them off. We are to-day, I am told on the best authority, buying coal from Mackenzie and Mann upon old contracts that were made ten years ago between the Canadian Northern and themselves. One branch of Mackenzie and Mann owns coal; another branch owns a railroad; and Mackenzie and Mann railroad was buying Mackenzie and Mann coal, and we have taken over the contract which they had with themselves. The Minister of Railways shakes his head wisely and says: It is not in the public interest that we should tell that we are getting coal from Mackenzie and Mann. Perhaps it is not. It is certainly not in the interest of Mackenzie and Mann to disclose those things. We should cut off those things and give the new combination of men that are going to take charge of the Government railways a clean sheet. So doing, we should not embarrass them, we should give them no reason for excuses. Otherwise, they will come back here in a year or two and say: This is a failure because you encumbered us with 44 lines of railway which we had to build, which we could not use; we were compelled under an old contract to buy ties at three prices and to buy from Mackenzie and Mann coal that was no good and to pay three prices for it and to haul it hundreds of miles further than we should. We do not want excuses of that kind. Give them a free hand; start them anew, and if they make a success, God be with them.

At 2 a.m. the vote was taken under Rule 17 (b).

Mr. CHAIRMAN: Shall section 29 carry?

Section agreed to.

Mr. McKENZIE: I move to add as section 31 of the Bill the section which is printed as section 31 in the reprinted copy.

Amendment negatived: yeas, 41; nays, 93.

[Mr. McKenzie.]

On the motion of Mr. Meighen the First Schedule was adopted.

Mr. MEIGHEN moved to add to the Bill as the Second Schedule the Second Schedule appearing on page 10 of the reprinted Bill.

Motion agreed to: yeas, 92; nays, 41

Bill as amended reported, amendments read the first and second time, and concurred in.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Reid, the House adjourned at 2.15 a.m., Tuesday.

Tuesday, April 29, 1919.

The House met at Three o'clock.

RAILWAY COMMITTEE.

On motion of Mr. Armstrong (Lambton) that the Select Standing Committee on Railways, Canals and Telegraph Lines have leave to sit while the House is in session in accordance with the recommendations contained in their fifth report:

Mr. SPEAKER: This motion can only be put by the unanimous leave of the House.

Mr. W. S. MIDDLEBRO (Grey): Mr. Speaker, before this motion is put I should like to point out that if the motion carries the Railway Committee, consisting of 124 members, will be excused from attendance during the sittings of this House. There are 230 members of the House, but by reason of vacancies and absence overseas, there are only about 220 available, and considering that the members of the Railway Committee are the most active members, their absence would mean the absence of about two-thirds of the members and it would be very difficult to maintain a quorum. The House was counted out the last time for want of a quorum because of a meeting of some 40 or 50 members being held upstairs.

Mr. SPEAKER: I pointed out that the motion could only be put by unanimous leave of the House, and as the hon. member has raised an objection it must stand.

Motion stands.

CONTROL OF AERONAUTICS.

Hon. A. K. MACLEAN (for the Minister of Naval Service) moved for leave to introduce Bill No. 80, to authorize the appointment of an Air Board for the control of aeronautics.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I might very briefly give to the House the chief features of this Bill on its first reading. It will be necessary owing to the development of aeronautics in Canada and in other countries that there be appointed a body to administer this service in this country. The Bill proposes the establishment of an Air Board to consist of not less than five and not more than seven members to be appointed by the Governor in Council. It is intended that the Chairman shall be a minister of the Crown and that the Department of Militia and the Department of Naval Service shall each be represented on the Board, by one member. The duties of the Air Board will be:

(a) To supervise all matters connected with aeronautics;

(b) to study the development of aeronautics in Canada and in other countries, and to undertake such technical research as may be requisite for the development of aeronautics; and to co-operate with other institutions in carrying out such research;

(c) to construct and maintain all Government aerodromes and air stations, including all plant, machinery and buildings necessary for their efficient equipment and upkeep;

(d) to control and manage all aircraft and equipment necessary for the conduct of any of His Majesty's services;

(e) to operate such services as the Governor in Council may approve;

(f) to prescribe aerial routes;

(g) to co-operate with other officers of His Majesty and to assist in the carrying out of any services under their jurisdiction which may require aerial work of any nature, and to collaborate with the officers employed in existing air services of His Majesty in such extension of their present work as the development of aeronautics may require;

(h) to take such action as may be necessary to secure by International Regulation or otherwise, the rights of His Majesty in respect of His Government in Canada in International Air Routes;

(i) to co-operate with the officers of the Departments of Militia and Defence and of the Naval Service on all questions relating to the air defence of Canada;

(j) to co-operate with the air staffs or authorities of other Governments or countries for any purposes pertaining to air services;

(k) to investigate, examine and report on all proposals for the institution of commercial air services within or partly within Canada, or the limits of the territorial waters of Canada;

(l) to consider, draft and prepare for approval by the Governor in Council such regulations as may be considered necessary for the control or operation of aeronautics in Canada or within the limits of the territorial waters of Canada; and,

(m) to perform such other duties as the Governor in Council may from time to time impose.

It is also intended to give to the board power subject to approval by the Governor in Council:

To regulate and control aerial navigation over Canada, and the territorial waters of Canada, and in particular, but not to restrict the generality of the foregoing terms of this section, it may with the approval aforesaid, make regulations with respect to—

(a) licensing pilots and other persons engaged in the navigation of aircraft and the suspension and revocation of such licenses;

(b) the registration, identification, inspection, certification and licensing of all aircraft;

(c) the licensing, inspection and regulation of all aerodromes and air-stations;

(d) the conditions under which aircraft may be used for carrying goods, mails and passengers, or for the operation of any commercial service whatsoever, and the licensing of any such services;

(e) the conditions under which goods, mails and passengers may be imported and exported in aircraft into or from Canada or within the limits of the territorial waters of Canada or may be transported over any part of such territory;

(f) the prohibition of navigation of aircraft over such areas as may be prescribed, either at all times or at such times or on such occasions only as may be specified in the regulations, and either absolutely or subject to such exceptions or conditions as may be so specified;

(g) the areas within which aircraft coming from any places outside of Canada are to land, and the conditions to be complied with by any such aircraft.

The purpose of the Bill as I have said is to control and regulate and to prescribe laws for the conduct of aeronautics in Canada. It is deemed advisable to constitute a board for the time being as the most practicable method of dealing with this new subject. Possibly after a year's trial of the proposed legislation it may be found that some other legislation may be considered necessary.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the first time.

AUDITOR GENERAL'S REPORT—VOUCHERS FOR OVERSEAS PAYMENTS.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. S. W. JACOBS: On Friday last in answer to a question by the hon. member for Chateauguay-Huntingdon (Mr. Robb) the Acting Prime Minister (Sir Thomas White) stated, with respect to vouchers for the item of $115,000,000, expenditure by the Overseas Ministry, that these vouchers are possibly in the possession of the Overseas Ministry. In view of the fact that many of these items may form the subject of discussion before the Public Accounts Committee, it is desirable that they should be in possession of the Auditor General in Ottawa and I would ask the Acting Prime Minister if it is the intention of the Government to see that they are transmitted from Argyll House to Ottawa.

Sir THOMAS WHITE (Acting Prime Minister): I made a statement on the subject yesterday which my hon. friend will find in to-day's Hansard.

NOVA SCOTIA FISHING FLEET.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. WILLIAM DUFF (Lunenburg): May I ask the Acting Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. A. K. Maclean) a question. In view of the fact that the Nova Scotia fishing fleet, comprising about 100 ships, have sailed for the North bay and the gulf of St. Lawrence and that the ice up there interferes with the fishing, sometimes causing serious damage to the vessels, is it the intention of the Department of Marine to send one of the protective fishery cruisers there to help these vessels in case of danger. I would also like to know if it is the intention to place the buoys in position at the entrances to the harbours of the Magdalene islands, and at other important harbour entrances of Nova Scotia from Canso to Halifax.

Hon. A. K. MACLEAN (For the Minister of Marine and Fisheries): I presume that the question of the hon. gentleman is directed to myself. I am not acting as Minister of Marine and Fisheries to-day. I do not think the matter has been called to the attention of the department, that is, that the fishing vessels of Nova Scotia are liable to accident by reason of ice conditions. I may safely say, however, that if such is the case the department will be very glad to despatch to these waters such ships as are suitable for the purpose of lending aid to the fishing vessels. I shall bring this matter to the attention of the officers of the department, and answer to-morrow, the question in reference to the placing of buoys.

MILITARY SERVICE ACT DEFAULTERS.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. CHARLES ARTHUR GAUVREAU (Temiscouata): As I do not see the Acting Minister of Justice (Mr. Meighen) in his seat I may direct my question to the Acting Prime Minister. It is now seeding time in Quebec and there are some young men, farmers' sons, who have been in jail for two, three, four and even five months, and I would like to know if the Acting Prime Minister will consult the Acting Minister of Justice with a view to having these men liberated in order that they may return to their farms for seeding purposes.

Sir THOMAS WHITE: I shall be glad to draw the attention of the Acting Minister of Justice to the hon. gentleman's question.

[Sir Thomas White.]

CORRECTION—MR. FOURNIER.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. C. A. FOURNIER (Bellechasse): In yesterday's Hansard I am reported as having said:

> I am in favour of public ownership but I want to say to hon. gentlemen who have sat here all through the discussion and some of whom, it seemed to me were almost dead, that before I undertake to support public ownership I want the few pennies in my pocket and my watch put in a place of safe keeping.

This is not strictly correct. Perhaps my insufficient knowledge of English and my bad pronunciation made the error possible. This is what I did say:

> I might be in favour of public ownership of railways if I could be convinced in a proper way but I wish to say to hon. gentlemen opposite, even to those who sat through the discussion as if they had been dead, that before I undertake to support public ownership and before I am forced to go into the room where Mackenzie and Mann are playing the game I want the few pennies in my pocket and my watch put in a place of safe keeping.

I would ask that the correction be made.

IMMIGRATION ACT AMENDMENT.

Hon. J. A. CALDER (Minister of Immigration and Colonization) moved the second reading of Bill No. 52, to amend the Immigration Act.

He said: Mr. Speaker, when this Bill had its first reading I explained to the House very briefly the effect and purpose of the amendments which it proposed to the existing law. As these amendments are submitted for the purpose of carrying out certain policies which the Government have agreed upon, I think I should ask the indulgence of the House while I discuss in a general way the immigration problem which confronts Canada. Since the outbreak of the war in 1914 our people have had ample time and opportunity to consider a great many of the problems with which we are confronted, and one of these problems in which our people are particularly interested is the problem of immigration. I think it will be generally conceded that in the past a great many mistakes have been made. Our people generally agree that in regard to the admission of people to this country for many years past there have been mistakes made and that care should be taken to prevent these in future.

We have a great many complicated problems on our hands to-day. We have many social, educational and industrial questions. These in a very large measure, to my mind, reflect the policy which has been pursued in this country for twenty or thirty years. If the Canada of to-morrow is to be what it should be, the first essential is that this House should very carefully consider and weigh what our policy is to be in the future.

Since I have become Minister of Immigration and Colonization a great many suggestions have reached me from people throughout the length and breadth of Canada; letters and petitions have poured in from many sources. All sorts of suggestions have been made. To my mind this indicates very clearly that our people are taking a deep interest in this matter and that they are anxious that this Parliament at this session should review the whole situation with the object of strengthening our immigration laws in order that we may avoid in the future the mistakes which have been made in the past.

The suggestions which have come to me may be roughly divided into two large classes. In the first place, there are those who hold that Canada should be reserved for Canadians—for Anglo-Saxons. They maintain that this is a British dominion, that it must remain British and that only those who are British should be permitted to knock at our doors and enter. There are many who hold that view. On the other hand, there are those who hold the view that we should maintain the open door, not as wide open as in the past, but that there should be certain clear-cut and definite restrictions. They say there should be restrictions applicable to all people as regards health, mentality, earning power, character, and matters of that kind. There are those who hold that, in so far as certain nationalities are concerned, they should be absolutely excluded. Then again, some contend that, as regards still other nationalities, they should be admitted to Canada only in limited numbers; in such numbers as the country is able to absorb and assimilate. In reference to these three suggestions, I am sure that there will be very divergent views in this House and differences of opinion as to the policy that should be pursued. I am sure that every hon. member recognizes that throughout the country very divergent views are held on these points. The problem is an exceedingly complicated and delicate one. It is not one easily solved; nor is it easy to satisfy the great majority of opinions on account of the very great diversity of thought that exists with respect to what should be done.

Just for a moment or two I would like to speak of the necessity for increased population in Canada. I am sure it must be self-evident to every one who understands our economic situation that our greatest need is population. I might cite only a few reasons—in the first place, we all know that as a result of the war we have piled up, to say the least, a very considerable national debt.

It means increased taxation, but as to our being able to take care of the burdens which have been placed upon us as the result of this war I have no doubt whatever. The other belligerent nations have similar debts, and our position in comparison with their position is favourable. Our debt is no larger in proportion, and when we consider our vast resources and the opportunities presented for their development, I have no hesitation at all in saying that we should be able to take care of that burden.

The question, however, arises as to how that burden can best be taken care of. We have been preaching economy, increased production, thrift, and all those things will help very materially. But notwithstanding all the talk about thrift, to what extent have our people been saving during the last two or three years in order that this situation might be met? So far as I can see there has been very little done in the way of saving, and it seems to me that if our war burden is to be taken care of it can best be done by an increase in our population and an increase in our production. Every additional person who comes to Canada will help to lift the burdens of those who are now here. During the course of the next few years an extra one or two million people will in a large measure make the situation very much easier in so far as taxation is concerned. Therefore I think it is essential that our efforts should be directed to a large extent during these coming years to attracting as many settlers as we possibly can.

During the last few days we have had a discussion on the railway situation. The burden the nation is carrying in that respect is a colossal one. There is no doubt that our transcontinental lines are over developed. We have more railways in a sense—I am speaking of transcontinental railways—than we actually need at the present time. I do not say that they should not have been built. Do not misunderstand me. I have faith in Canada and in the future of these lines, and the time will come in my opinion when every one of them will pay. But at the present time they are a burden on the country. We are called upon to pay out millions of dollars every year in excess of earnings, and that condition will continue for some years to come.

What is the solution? There is only one solution in my judgment—people and production. We must create traffic for these lines, and that traffic can only be created by filling up our vacant spaces, thus insuring increased production of all the various commodities which this country can produce. We have had some discussion in reference to branch lines. Branch lines are very essential throughout all sections of Canada, in my view, if we are to secure the increased production to which I have referred. In Western Canada production has been retarded enormously, simply because we have not sufficient branch lines. Undoubtedly, if our enormous railway obligations are to be properly taken care of there is only one way to do it, I repeat, and that is by increasing our population, which will be naturally followed by increased production.

There is another reason why we need population. In addition to the obligations which the Federal Government is carrying, our provinces and our cities are carrying very heavy obligations, more particularly our cities. In Western Canada, and I am sure the same is true of Eastern Canada, most of our urban communities have mortgaged their future; they have made civic improvements and carried on large undertakings ahead of their actual requirements, and they are feeling the burden of taxation. There again I think we can look for only one solution to that problem—unless the lands back of these cities are settled, which settlement will bring in its train increased production, these cities will have to continue to bear their present heavy burdens. So for that reason it is very essential that we should see that our rural population is increased just as rapidly as possible.

I might refer also briefly to the situation as it exists in respect to our manufacturing and industrial concerns. One of the main reasons why our industries are not established on as firm a basis as they should be is because we have a very sparse population, and consequently our home market is very restricted. If we had a greater population we would have larger markets for our products at home and abroad—

Mr. LEMIEUX: Hear, hear.

Mr. CALDER: —and these industries would be established on a sounder basis. In the case of our smaller industries their overhead charges are excessive and on account of the smallness of their output they cannot compete with larger industries. So the more people we bring to this country the larger home market we will create to say nothing of a more extensive foreign market all of which will tend to place our industries on a proper basis.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Are you speaking of the farming industry too?

Mr. CALDER: I am speaking of all industries. We all know that we have enormous national resources of all kinds the products of the field, the forest, the mine, and the sea. These have been developed to a certain extent, and I think it can be said generally that they are developed in proportion to our population. We have billions of dollars lying dormant in our natural resources, and if those resources are to be developed for the good of the nation, there is only one way to develop them: we must in the first place have the necessary capital, and in the second place we must have the necessary people. At present we are all busy in various directions, and these natural resources will never be developed as they should be until the necessary population is brought into the country. Our population at present is too sparse.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Has my hon. friend any idea of the approximate population of Canada at the present time?

Mr. CALDER: It must be somewhere in the neighbourhood of 8,000,000. I am sure that every one realizes the necessity that exists for a greater population so that it is not necessary to dwell on that aspect of the situation.

The question whether we have room for this population needs only to be asked to be answered. We have in Canada ample room for abundance of population. Probably no country in the world is situated as advantageously as we are. We could absorb millions of people; so that there is no reason why we should worry on that score. The main question which this House and the country should consider is not the necessity for immigration, not whether we have room for a greater population, but what class of people we are going to get, where they are to come from, what steps should be taken to see that they are properly absorbed into the life of the community, how we may pick and choose these people who are to become citizens of Canada, and how we can place them in the life of the nation with the greatest advantage to themselves as well as to Canada.

I think the House will agree that at the present time and for some time to come we should avoid at all cost the overcrowding of our cities, especially during the reconstruction period. Employment conditions are such as to make this absolutely necessary; we must do everything we can to avoid aggravating the situation that exists now, and that will likely exist for some months. I am inclined to think that ever since Confederation too much attention has been paid to city building in Canada. There are too many people in our cities. We have failed to recognize as a people that Canada is essentially an agricultural country, and the efforts of Governments in the past have not been sufficiently directed towards the placing of people on the land. As I have often said, we have paid too much attention to erecting tall chimneys and not enough attention to getting people at ploughing the land. I have always held the view that our cities will very largely take care of themselves if we look after our agricultural production. The tendency, east and west, has been to boom our cities and to build them up before meeting the requirements of our rural population. In my opinion, that should cease; the main efforts of the Federal Government, and of Provincial Governments for some years to come should be in the direction of developing the rural parts, not the urban centres, of Canada.

In the past, broadly speaking, Canada and the United States have followed the policy of the open door in the matter of immigration—and it has been a pretty wide open door. Probably there has been good reason for following that policy. America was looked upon as the land of hope and liberty, a land of freedom for the peoples of Europe and Asia—the overcrowded countries across the Atlantic. During the last century or two, millions of people have come to America from these countries. We now have on this continent somewhere in the neighbourhood of 125,000,000 Europeans. Their coming to this country has constituted the greatest migratory movement in all history. The door, I say, has been pretty wide open. All nationalities have been invited; millions have been spent in assisting these people to come to this continent. I doubt whether we should criticise severely the policy of the past; there may have been good reasons for it. But in Canada the time has come when we should consider very seriously whether or not that policy of the wide-open door should continue. The war has brought home to us certain lessons.

We have learned during the course of the last two or three years that the people of to-day have a trust for the people of to-morrow. We have learned that we must at all costs protect the citizenship of our country.

We cannot afford to take any chances as regards our citizenship, not only for the sake of those who are living to-day, but those who will follow. That must be borne in upon all of us as a result of conditions which have sprung up during the last two or three years. In other words, we cannot, as a people, afford, in adopting an immigration policy, to have it of such a nature that our citizenship will be swamped by elements coming in from outside which will destroy or at least tend to destroy it. The feeling that is running throughout the length and breadth of Canada to-day is that we have been too liberal in the past; that we have not safeguarded our own interests as we should; that we must be more careful in the future; that we must admit only those who can be readily assimilated—people who are prepared to become part of us and not merely to live amongst us. We must be careful to see that the ideals of those peoples who come to us from all parts of the world are such that they can become good Canadian citizens. That is the basis that must, it seems to me, underlie any immigration policy adopted by the Government or by Parliament at the present time.

I am not going to criticise what has taken place in the past. All Governments have, I think, been at fault; or rather, let me put it this way: our people themselves have been at fault. They have never stopped to consider what the effect of following a certain course of action might be. Little attention has been given to the problem, and as a consequence things have happened that would not have happened had people given more thought and study to this question. All the people of Canada are very largely to blame for the situation that exists.

I should like, just for a moment or two, to draw the attention of the House to one phase of the situation that is liable to escape notice, and that is this: What have we done to help those people that we invited to Canada—spending hundreds of thousands, yes, millions of dollars in bringing them here,—to become loyal, true Canadian citizens? There is only one answer: we have done practically nothing.

We invited those people here; we sent across the seas our agents who went into their communities and explained to them the possibilities of this country of ours; how they would be welcomed here, how well they could get along and all that sort of thing. And when we brought them here, and scattered them throughout Canada, we left them entirely alone. Our policy in that regard has been nothing short of a tragedy. We have done very little to familiarize them with our laws; we have no policy in our country to Canadianize them; we have simply let them drift, and, therefore, we should not blame them. Thousands of those people came to Canada with the very best of intentions, and we know that they left their homes across the sea because they looked upon this democratic country as one in which they could make their homes and become Canadian citizens. But what have we, as a people, done to familiarize them with our institutions, to improve their habits and customs, to increase their earning capacity, their productive power? We have done practically nothing.

Let me give a very simple illustration. There are in this House men who know whereof I speak. We have in Western Canada somewhere in the neighbourhood of fifty or sixty or seventy-five thousand people called Galicians, of whom hon. members have heard, and who are sometimes called Ruthenians or Ukrainians. They come mostly from Austria where we sent our agents and spent large sums of money in inviting them to come here. We brought them to Canada, carried them on our trains away out into the West and dumped them down on the prairies, giving them homesteads. Those people were absolutely unfamiliar with our laws, our customs, our mode of living, our methods of carrying on business. They did not know how to farm; they knew nothing about farm machinery; they knew nothing whatever about our municipal and school systems. What did the Government of Canada do to help those people? Again I say, practically nothing. I was in their settlements in the early days, and many of those people were exceedingly poor, most of them in the early stages living in mud houses. Some of them actually dug holes in the ground and lived in those holes until they got a little ahead and were able to put up mud houses. They struggled along without any assistance from any one; nobody went near them. Instead of being helped, protected, advised, and assisted, they were the prey of every shark in the community. They were simply allowed to drift. The wonder is that they ever got along at all, that they ever succeeded. It was only by hard work year after year that they eventually did succeed, but no credit for that is due to the people of Canada who invited them to come to this country to be Canadian citizens. That illustrates the policy that has been followed for the last 25 or 30 or 40 years, by all Governments in this country as regards those foreign-born people, and it is no wonder that we have trouble on our hands at the present time.

The proper policy that should have been pursued in the past and that must be pursued in the future if people of that class or of any class coming from foreign lands are to be assimilated, is that we must see to it that every possible assistance is given to them to become Canadian citizens and that steps are taken to make them familiar with our laws, customs, municipal, and school systems.

I do not wish to leave a false impression upon the House. During the course of the past few years our people have wakened up to the situation, and some work is being done. In Western Canada the whole situation has, in some respects, been changed during the last three or four years. The war in its very early stages brought home to our Governments, our municipalities, and our people in the West that they had a real problem on their hands and that they had to get down to business if that problem was going to be solved. As a consequence, steps have been taken, and measures are now in course of preparation that will go a long way towards Canadianizing the foreign-born people settled in Western Canada. When we go into Committee on the Bill, I shall, if the question is raised, be only too glad to give to the House some information that I am sure will be quite new to hon. members who are not familiar with the existing situation in the West.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Guysborough): Do I understand the minister to say that the Galicians have not made good citizens?

Mr. CALDER: I did not say that. When one considers the handicaps under which these people have laboured for a good many years, the material progress they have made in the way of production is amazing. Thousands of them have made good settlers, from the purely material standpoint, but from the standpoint of good citizenship the situation is very largely a failure.

I come now to the question: where shall we look for our immigration in future? What people are we to admit to our citizenship? That is not the easiest question in the world to decide. No nation lives absolutely to itself: all nations are more or less inter-dependent upon each other. The flow of trade and commerce and the relationships that exist between the various countries of the world are such that it is not an easy matter to close the door absolutely against any class, no matter how much we might wish to do so. Hon. members know that all nations are very jealous of their citizenship, and of the rights and privileges of their nationals wherever they may go. Moreover, all nations claim equality; they claim that no nation should be specially favoured over other nations, and that element naturally enters into any discussion of this problem. I had intended to bring this Bill down earlier, as I know the interest that is taken in it both in the House and in the country. There was a possibility, and there still is one, of the question of immigration being considered by the Peace Conference and of certain conclusions being reached by that Conference. I had intended not to bring down this measure until we knew definitely what the Peace Conference was going to do in connection with this matter. But from my reading lately I do not think there will be anything in the Peace Treaty regarding the question of immigration. Apparently, it is to be left to each nation to determine its own policy. Our people have been, shall I say impatient. They have been very anxious for the Government to get busy on this question, and with reason. I should like to remark, however, that there is just a possibility at the present time of our being swayed and perhaps swept off our feet by our feelings. I think we should endeavour to avoid that at all costs. We should approach this question in the broadest possible way, and whatever conclusions we may reach we should endeavour to see that they are sane conclusions. I think that is very important, because otherwise we might make mistakes that would have far-reaching effects. Let us bear that in mind throughout all our discussion, and let us try to make a law of such a nature that it will not give unnecessary offence to the people of any country in the world.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Would my hon. friend explain why there has been such a pronounced objection, at all events in the press, against the admission into Canada of the Hutterites?

Mr. CALDER: I shall come to that in a moment. I was going on to say that in framing our immigration policy the underlying principle should be briefly this: We should have the absolute right as 4 p.m. a nation to determine for ourselves what our future citizenship shall be, and while we lay that doctrine down for ourselves we should be prepared to concede it also for every other nation. We should know best what classes of people we need in this country and what classes we can best assimilate. We should know best what numbers of these people we can take care of. We should not be asked to throw our doors wide open to receive any number of any class of people who may desire to come to Canada. We cannot afford to do that. If we are to protect our citizenship we must be most careful not to attempt to absorb more of these people than we reasonably can. I would also go this far: We should not be tied down by any treaties or agreements that may exist of which we have had no knowledge or to which our consent has not been given. If there are any such treaties or agreements in existence, it seems to me we should endeavour to get them out of the way just as quickly as possible. For this is a domestic question affecting Canada, and we, and we alone, should determine the class of people that we are going to ask to become citizens of this country. I do not think anything should be allowed to stand in the way of our carrying out that policy.

Mr. LEMIEUX: But we are not bound by the treaties of Great Britain?

Mr. CALDER: Yes. I say that if any treaties or agreements of that nature—I know of none—stand in the way, we should endeavour to have these treaties or agreements removed in order that we may determine this question for ourselves. That doctrine was agreed to when we were dealing with the Hindoo question at the conference last year. The British Government and all the Dominions assented to the proposition that this was a domestic problem, which the self-governing Dominions should have the right to determine for themselves.

Mr. LEMIEUX: My hon. friend might go further. Some years ago we had Great Britain denounce certain treaties curtailing the rights of Canada.

Mr. CALDER: Bearing these things in mind, the Government has endeavoured to determine what shall be our immigration policy to meet the existing conditions in this country.

In the first place, as regards all nationalities and races the world over, including Great Britain and the Dominions, our existing law and this Bill provide for the exclusion of certain prohibited classes, which include persons suffering from some loathsome disease, or who are otherwise unhealthy, and those of weak mentality, or of bad character, and criminals and others of that kind. The existing law, and it has been extended by this Bill, provides for the creation of prohibited classes, and we think that so far as all nationalities are concerned these undesirable people should be excluded from Canada. I do not think that any objection can be raised to that. We purpose to extend those provisions and to establish the necessary administrative machinery to ensure that that law shall be effectively and efficiently carried out. This is going to cost some money. One of the reasons why in the past some have entered the country who should not have come in is simply because the necessary money was not expended to provide the machinery adequate to keep them out. If the law in this respect is going to be properly effective then this country must be prepared to expend money for the purpose. We must provide the necessary machinery and the necessary experts, and we must have a sufficient number of inspectors and other officers to see that the doors are properly closed against the prohibited classes. It is the intention to extend to five years, as is the case in the United States, the time during which undesirables who may get into the country, or who may prove to be undesirable after they have entered, may be deported. Heretofore the period has been only three years, but I am sure the House will agree that the extension is proper. We are going to adopt that five-year period here, not because they have it in the United States, but simply because we think it is necessary that there should be a longer period than three years in which to ascertain whether or not many of these people who get into the country are desirable.

A very large portion of the Bill is taken up with provisions for greater responsibilities so far as transportation companies are concerned. We are increasing the responsibilities which rest upon them and the penalties to which they will be liable.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Do you provide for adequate health inspection on the other side of the water?

[Mr. Calder.]

Mr. CALDER: That is a matter I should like very much to discuss in Committee. There are two sides to that problem.

Mr. LEMIEUX: My hon. friend will understand that when an immigrant is brought over the Atlantic to Canada if he is not acceptable to the health authorities on this side it is a hardship to send him back. It is better to prevent the evil than to have to cure it.

Mr. CALDER: As the law exists it is not very hard to send them back. There is no trouble in sending them back, because if a transportation company brings a person of that class to Canada, and we stop him at the border, or if he enters and it is discovered that he is undesirable, we throw upon the company the responsibility of taking him back. They are doing that every day.

Mr. LEMIEUX: But it is a hardship you can prevent.

Mr. CALDER: It is a hardship to the transportation company.

Mr. LEMIEUX: And to the emigrant—you separate him from his family.

Mr. CALDER: That is a question we may very well consider in Committee. The best method of dealing with that phase of our immigration problem is a question worthy of serious consideration.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I do not wish to infringe on the rules of the House, but the reason I call the minister's attention to that particular phase of the subject is that I once saw in Quebec a case of great hardship. I saw a family composed of several members, two of whom had to be deported because they could not be accepted by the health authorities, and it was a heart-breaking scene.

Mr. CALDER: We can go into the details of that in Committee. In addition to prohibiting the entry of undesirables, we must take steps and we have taken steps to protect ourselves against increased unemployment conditions in Canada. At all our ports of entry since the armistice we have been discouraging the entry of skilled and unskilled labour. We have been shutting them out on every pretext and righthly so. Some months ago an Order in Council was passed prohibiting the entry of skilled and unskilled labour from Asia to British Columbia. That Order in Council is still in force and it is proposed to keep it in force.

Mr. LEMIEUX: What about Japanese immigration?

Mr. CALDER: I will come to that presently. As far as that Order is concerned owing to labour conditions then existing in the country, I must confess that for some months it was not as rigidly lived up to as it should have been. The conditions, however, since the signing of the armistice have been quite aggravated on the Pacific coast and I recently gave very explicit instructions that in so far as the carrying out of that Order was concerned, it should be enforced to the limit. We know the aggravated unemployment conditions that exist at the present time and particularly on the Pacific slope. The Government propose to continue that Order in Council and to rigidly enforce it.

If the Bill now before the House is approved, measures will have to be taken to admit, at least for some time to come, only such people as can be readily assimilated. There is a great deal of complaint throughout Canada to the effect that we have admitted many races and nationalities that are not easily absorbed by our population. There are those who claim that, in so far as particular sections of our country are concerned, the population is of such a character that the problem is an exceedingly acute one. That is particularly true of the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta where the major portion of our foreign-born population lives. Those in authority there simply claim that this problem has become so great that they cannot cope with any more of these people at the present time. When we come to the discussion of one of the sections of the Bill the House must very carefully and seriously consider what shall be done in that respect. The Government believes that the time has arrived when we must put up the bars, or limit the number of people of certain classes that shall go to that part of Canada.

In the immediate future, and for some years to come, it seems to me that the efforts of the department will be directed chiefly towards securing experienced farmers who have the necessary capital to enable them to establish themselves in Canada. Our homesteading areas have very largely disappeared. We cannot go to the people of the world and hold out to them the invitation that we have in the past. Our free lands are largely gone. In the future, if we are to have people go on the land—I am speaking largely of Western Canada—it is very necessary that they should have some capital. We still have large areas in northern Quebec and Ontario and in the hinterland of the West available as homesteads, but these areas are far removed from railway facilities and it is going to be very difficult to get people to go in and settle upon them. On the other hand, we have some millions of acres of the finest land open and ready for the plough held by people who are not making use of it and if we are going to get people to go on these lands it is very essential that they shall have the necessary means to make a proper start. There is also room in this country for farm labour, both male and female. I think we should endeavour to get as large a number of that class, properly selected, as we can. Holding that view, we are reaching out to secure agriculturists from Great Britain.

Mr. LEMIEUX: What about the land grants that were given to the Canadian Northern railway for the purpose of building the branch lines of that system? Now that the railway system is the property of the Government, do I understand that these lands will become a part of the public domain and be available for immigrants?

Mr. CALDER: These lands, I understand, are still handled by the railway company. They are, it is true, the property of the people of Canada, but the railway company has its own lands department. They are handling these lands and seeking settlement for them. They are settling these lands just as was done by the railway company but they are doing it for the people of Canada.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Practically the Government?

Mr. CALDER: Practically the Government. The lands have not come back to the Government itself and they are not administered by any department of the Government but by the railway company.

Mr. VIEN: These lands have reverted to the Dominion of Canada?

Mr. CALDER: They have in a sense; they are the property of Canada.

Mr. VIEN: Should they not be under the administration of the Department of Immigration?

Mr. CALDER: That is a question of policy and it is one that might very well be considered and discussed. These lands are being held by the company itself for settlement purposes. Whatever moneys are derived from these lands that are sold will belong to the people of Canada. The question of whether the land shall be transferred to one of the departments and administered by it is one that might very well be discussed and considered.

I desire to point out as briefly as I can what the position is because I find there is a great deal of misunderstanding in the country regarding some features of our existing law. Many people have a very erroneous idea in regard to this and for the information of the House I would like to give some information along these lines.

When the armistice was signed an Order in Council was put through, under section 38 of the Act, prohibiting the entrance of all persons from enemy countries—Germany, Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey. That order is still in force and it is intended to keep it in force.

I have already pointed out that an Order in Council is in existence prohibiting the entry of skilled and unskilled labour from Asia; at least skilled and unskilled labour is not permitted to enter our British Columbia ports, which means that, in so far as this class is concerned, we are excluding it. I will come in a moment to the Japanese and Chinese. The prohibition that now exists enables us to shut out all nationals of all countries who do not come directly to Canada from the country of their origin. That is the existing law. I might explain that by means of an illustration—a man we will say, leaves Portugal, comes to the United States and then desires to enter Canada. We can stop him from doing so because he does not come direct to Canada from Portugal. Recently—and we intend to continue that system—we have been shutting out people of that class. All persons of enemy nationality residing in the United States, and who have not become United States citizens, are shut out under that order because they do not come direct to Canada from the country of their origin. Consequently, nationals of enemy countries have not been entering Canada during the war or since the armistice has been signed. It is intended to keep that Order in Council in operation.

At the present time the department is carrying on propaganda, or publicity work only in two countries—Great Britain and the United States. Some very exaggerated reports have appeared in the press in relation to the work which we propose to carry on in the United States during the present year. I have seen it repeated time and again that we proposed spending a million dollars on advertising in the United States. There is not a word of truth in it. We are not proposing to carry on our work there to any greater extent than has been done in the past.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Why not in Belgium?

Mr. CALDER: As far as the continent of Europe is concerned, we, early in the war withdrew our agents and closed our offices. The question has been asked: Why should we not re-open them now? The answer is very simple. We might go in there and carry on publicity work to educate those people as to the advantages and possibilities of Canada, but I think there is very little possibility of getting them to come to Canada for many months yet owing to shipping conditions. There are thousands upon thousands of British people who would like to emigrate to Canada if they had the opportunity, but conditions are such as to make that absolutely impossible. Until our soldiers and their wives and children are brought home we must utilize all available ships for the purpose of bringing them home. It is estimated that there are in the neighbourhod of 30,000 soldiers' dependents still in Great Britain; we have brought home about 15,000; so you can understand the problem that we have on our hands.

Mr. LEMIEUX: The answer given by my hon. friend is quite plausible, I am aware that shipping conditions would not at present permit of any exodus from continental Europe. But the reason I mention Belgium is that I gather from a report made by the agent for the province of Quebec that there is a possibility of a very strong tide of emigration from Belgium to America, and that many Belgians are ready to settle in this country if they are offered proper facilities; and, as my hon. friend is aware, they are a good farming class.

Mr. CALDER: Yes. I am quite sure in so far as the northern countries of Europe are concerned we will be able, if we so desire, when the proper time comes to secure many thousands of first-class settlers, but I think my hon. friend will agree with me that the time is not yet ripe. We will have to consider shortly what we will do in the way of carrying on publicity work in those countries, looking to the future rather than to the immediate present.

Mr. JACOBS: Will the hon. minister say why he has not extended his publicity work to Ireland? Is it because of the Sinn Fein movement there just now?

Mr. CALDER: No. I mentioned we were carrying on publicity work in—

Mr. JACOBS: Great Britain.

Mr. CALDER: Ireland is part of Great Britain. As a matter of fact we have two important offices in Ireland, one in Dublin and one in Belfast. I mentioned the fact that we have closed all our offices and withdrawn our agents from continental Europe. There is a desire on the part of a good many thousands of British soldiers to come to this country, and I think they will make very excellent citizens. The problem, however, of placing them upon the land will be somewhat difficult. Many of them will not have had previous training in farm work, and on account of the provision made for our own soldiers I am inclined to think that until we have succeeded in placing a larger number of our men on the land, we must go a little slow with the other problem.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Lord Grey some years ago had a plan for settling British sailors in British Columbia. I wonder if the department has acted upon that plan.

Mr. CALDER: I have not heard of it at all. The House is aware of the fact that some years ago an arrangement was made whereby a limited number of Japanese would be permitted to enter Canada. I have gone into the situation very carefully, and I can tell the House that the agreement has been lived up to by the Japanese Government to the letter. As a matter of fact, taking the figures for the last four or five years, there are in the neighbourhood of 400 or 500 fewer Japanese in Canada to-day than there were in 1914. Recently I have been in constant touch with the Japanese consul here, and he is very anxious to co-operate with the Government in every way possible in order to prevent the situation on the Pacific coast becoming any worse than it is. In fact, he has taken the matter up with his Government in order to insure that as few people as possible shall come from his country during our period of reconstruction.

In so far as the Chinese question is concerned, personally I am inclined to the view that a very great mistake was made in arranging for a head tax. It seems to me that by so arranging we have simply commercialized the business of bringing in Chinese immigrants, and I believe we would have fewer Chinese coming in if that head tax had never been imposed. As it is, individuals and companies have become interested in advancing this head tax to young Chinamen desirous of coming to this country, and, if my information is correct, these young men live in semi-slavery here until such time as that head tax is paid back probably twice over.

An hon. MEMBER: That is true.

Mr. CALDER: When we go into this matter it may be found advisable to abolish that head tax and do what has been done with the Japanese Government, endeavour to make some arrangement whereby the number of their nationals coming to Canada can be restricted. That can very well be considered when we get into Committee.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR (Guysborough): I notice the Bill excludes immigrants who believe in the overthrow of the Government of Canada. I do not know how far the country is ready to endorse that, but my purpose in rising is to ask the hon. minister: how is he going to ascertain what a man's political belief is?

Mr. CALDER: I think that question can be best considered when we come to the clause in the Bill.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Would the hon. minister—

Mr. SPEAKER: Order. I must remind hon. gentlemen that the great bulk of these questions ought to be submitted when the Bill is in Committee. The minister has the right to make his speech without interruption.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I just wanted to say that if the clause in question is directed against Irishmen, every Irishman is "agin the Government."

Mr. CALDER: The hon. member for Maisonneuve sometime ago referred to the question that has arisen recently in Western Canada with reference to the admission of a class of people known as Hutterites. The matter has interested a very large number of our people, not only as regards that sect but other peculiar sects, such as Mennonites and Doukobors, and the Government has given a good deal of attention to that problem. It appears to me that the policy to be laid down is this: We should be free to shut out any class of people that we do not think can be readily assimilated.

If there are any peculiar peoples the world round whose customs and beliefs, whose ideals and modes of life are dissimilar to ours and who are not likely to become Canadian citizens, we have the right to put up the bars and keep them out. Without discussing the matter further, I may tell the House and the people that the Government proposes to do that so far as these peculiar classes of people are concerned.

Mr. TWEEDIE: Since the signing of the Armistice, Western Canada has been agitated about the coming into Canada from the United States of Hutterites and Mennonites. What does the Government intend to do with regard to those who are now in the country, and will they take action immediately by Order in Council to prevent any more of these people from coming in?

Mr. CALDER: Briefly, the position is this: Unless we take action under the War Measures Act—which we might do—there is no power under the existing law, as I understand it, to exclude these people at this time. As soon as this Bill is approved by the House we propose to put through an Order in Council under section 13 which will provide for their exclusion. Those who are now in Canada have come in under existing law, and I do not think the hon. gentleman will advance the idea that under those conditions they should be deported. That is a matter upon which there may be differences of opinion, but personally I do not think that people who have come into the country under existing laws should be excluded simply because some new law is to be enforced against people of that class.

Mr. TWEEDIE: These people are coming in, and I think it is the duty of the Government, pending a settlement of this question, to take action under the War Measures Act with a view to preventing any more of them from coming in.

Mr. CALDER: That is a matter which will be taken into consideration, and a decision can be reached with reference to it.

I have covered the situation in a very general way, and I have suggested some of the proposals that the Government has in mind. I simply repeat, in closing, that for some years to come, it seems to me, our policy should be directed along two lines, first, towards increasing our agricultural population; second, towards providing, under the existing law and under the Bill now before the House, for the exclusion of certain classes of people who cannot readily be absorbed into our population at the present time. We must protect ourselves so far as the future is concerned. We have a very large problem on our hands now, and its difficulties should not be unduly increased. What the policy of this country will be two or three, four or five, or ten years from now, can be settled by the Parliament of those days. For the present, the Government believes that we should put up the bars to a very considerable extent. I am quite sure that when we get into Committee and hon. members who know the situation in Canada have opportunity of thoroughly discussing the matter, the view which I have presented will be the majority view of the House. I move the second reading of the Bill.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.

The House went into Committee on the Bill, Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

On Section 1—definitions:

Mr. CRONYN: While I thoroughly agree with the remarks the minister has made, it seems to me that the principle upon which our Immigration Act is based is wrong.

The CHAIRMAN: Order. I will have to ask the Committee to give its unanimous consent if the hon. member intends to discuss the principle of the Bill upon Clause 1. If the Committee are willing to give consent, I have no objection.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Go on.

Mr. CRONYN: I had thought that some hon. gentleman on the opposite side would speak on the second reading. When the motion was put I was not prompt enough to rise, and it was declared carried.

Mr. LEMIEUX: The minister made such a fair explanation of the Bill we thought the sooner we got into Committee the better.

Mr. CRONYN: I shall try not to delay the Committee. The system that this country and perhaps every other country has adopted is to start out by saying that the country is open to the world, that any one is welcome to its shores, and then immediately to raise bars excluding this nation or that nation. That method produces at once in the mind of the nation debarred a feeling of irritation; it has from time to time given rise to difficulties, and it may in future produce international complications. I prefer to see the positive method adopted. Let Canada state that she is prepared to admit the people of such and such races, nations, or countries; and when others desire to enter it will be their privilege to make application and have their claims for admission duly considered by this Parliament.

As the minister has said, the subject is of importance, Canada is in reality entering upon a new era, and is able, even by the proposed amendment, to remedy some of the defects of our former legislation. The minister so far as I can recall his remarks did not mention the clause to which he had special reference when he spoke of the powers of exclusion, but if section 13 was that to which he referred, it seems to me it would be wiser, instead of vesting the power of exclusion, as set out in that section, in the hands of the Governor in Council, to settle the question by the Bill itself. I hope at the appropriate time, to have the Committee consider an amendment to that end.

The point of view from which we consider this question is of importance and has already been stated by the minister. It is, unfortunately, a matter of almost tragic import—perhaps those words are too strong—that the arguments in favour of unrestricted immigration appeal with particular force at the present moment. As stated by the minister, our financial, transportation and industrial problems demand an immediate increase in population, but must we not in spite of these pressing needs, have regard to the future, to the end that the welfare of this country may not be imperilled in générations to come?

It may be interesting to consider for a moment or two the figures regarding immigration in the past. For a term of ten years prior to the war, there entered Canada over 2,500,000 immigrants, of whom about 1,000,000 came from Great Britain, 850,000 from the United States of America and 675,000 from other countries. While this total figures out at an average of 250,000 a year—enough considering our total population—as a matter of fact, the tide was a rapidly rising one. For instance, in 1905, the total in round figures was 146,000. That total rose five years later to 311,000. The next year, 1912, it was 354,000, and, in 1913, we reached the top of the wave with 402,000, although, in 1914, the number was nearly as great. Of the 675,000 coming under the classification "from other countries"—and in that list nearly fifty races are specified—the leaders are Austrians with 150,000, Italians with 100,000, and Russians with 80,000. It is significant that in the last year of the decade the leaders above quoted very largely increased their entries. Speaking from memory, in 1914, of Austrians, 28,000 entered the country, of Russians, including Finns, almost as many, and of Italians, over 24,000. It is, therefore, well to remember that the inflow of immigrants from Southeastern Europe is a rapidly increasing one.

The figures as regards immigration into the United States of America correspond to those just quoted. During the same period of time about 10,000,000 immigrants entered the United States. When we compare the relative population of the two countries, it will be admitted the effect on Canada of this onrush of new peoples must be far greater than the entrance of even four times the number into the United States. In the year 1914, the year the war started, eighty out of every one hundred immigrants into the United States came from European countries, and as many as sixty of those eighty were from three countries only, namely, Italy, Austria-Hungary and Russia. In 1914, Italy sent 295,000, Austria-Hungary, 286,000, and Russia, 262,000.

Mr. MORPHY: Has the hon. member the figures for Germany?

Mr. CRONYN: I doubt if I have the German figures available. German immigration fell off quite markedly in the last five years of that decade. The figures are in tabulated form in the report of the Commissioner General of Immigration. It would delay the Committee too long to add them up, but they are strikingly smaller than they were in prior years. Indeed, that feature is most noticeable when one looks into the question of immigration into the United States. There is plainly running through the history of this subject a distinction between the old immigration and the new immigration. Up to 1880, or 1882, the bulk of immigration into the United States came from Northwestern Europe. Speaking in a general way, about three-quarters of the immigrants from Europe up to that time came from Northwestern Europe and one-quarter from the Southeast. Since that date, and particularly for the last ten years prior to the war, the situation was completely reversed; three-quarters of the immigrants coming from Southeastern Europe and only one-quarter from the Northwest. This condition has brought about in many respects an unfortunate state of affairs in the United States, and it would be well for us, in considering this Bill and our own situation, to endeavour to profit from the experience of our neighbours.

If we are to continue our present policy of allowing European nations generally to enter Canada, we shall undoubtedly experience more and more the very result from which the United States has suffered, and for that reason I believe we should most carefully consider a strict limitation, at least for a period of years, of immigration from certain sections of Europe.

After all, the main reason for immigration nowadays is purely an economic one. The condition of the immigrant in his own home country and the hope held out to him of an improvement in that condition by coming to a new country is beyond everything else the main motive for his move. Provided times are good on this continent, immigration takes place from Europe without much regard to the conditions there, and it is a curious fact that the curves of imports and of immigration into the United States correspond with wonderful regularity. Then, too, the situation has been taken advantage of by many agencies, chief among which are the steamship companies and the labour agents, to stir up and exploit this movement. The result is that instead of attracting, as in the old days, the man of adventure and independence prepared to face the hardships of a new land, the way has been made to appear easy and the unfortunate immigrant has been deluded, with deplorable results in the end.

The minister has referred to what, to my mind, is one of the gravest results, and that is the overcrowding of our cities. The figures obtainable from the census department of the United States are striking in this respect. Their last census was taken in 1910, and shows that while forty-six per cent of the total population of that country was to be found in the cities, almost three-fourths of the foreign-born population was so located. New York being the port of entry for the greatest number of immigrants, naturally shows this concentration in a more striking degree than any other city. The Commissioner General of Immigration for the United States, in his report published in 1916, says of New York:

> At the taking of the last census it contained as much as one-seventh of all our foreign-born population, in contrast with only one-nineteenth of our total population. This one-seventh represented 1,945,000 foreign-born, of which more than one-half (52 per cent), came from Russia, Italy and Austria, the three combined having a total of more than one million. The amazing growth in the population of our cities has been predominately in the foreign-born element and their children, while the slight increase of the native-born population of native parents in cities is hardly observable.

The next striking feature of this enormous tide is its effect on the industries of the United States. The latest authority on the subject, F. J. Warne, quotes the following figures:

> More than four-fifths of our recent immigration, which is most largely from Italy, Russia and Austria-Hungary is going into the north Atlantic states. Of the total increase of more than three million in our foreign-born population in 1910 over 1900, approximately sixty per cent went into these north Atlantic industrial and manufacturing states. Thus the Slav, Hebrew, and Italian, is being drawn by the industrial development of the country into manufacturing and mining and is settling in the larger industrial centres. This flow of recent immigration into the industrial states is as striking as was that of the earlier immigration into the agricultural sections.

Another striking and unfortunate feature is that the bulk of this new immigration is composed of single men, and less and less as the years go by do the married immigrants attempt to bring in with them their wives and children. It is quite true that families which at first are left behind are brought across to join the immigrant if he prospers. Here again the figures of the United States are enlightening:

5 p.m.

> In 1914 as many as two-thirds—as many as 799,000—were males between the ages of 14 and 44, one-half of whom were unmarried. Even among those who were married, large numbers left their families at home and came only for temporary stay.

And that temporary stay is perhaps the next feature of the new immigration to be noted, because the 'birds of passage', as they are termed, have become in some ways an all-important part of the incoming and outgoing tide. Speaking from memory, in the ten years up to 1910 some 9,000,000 immigrants entered the United States; that is a million less than the number entering that country in the ten years prior to the war. During the same period 3,500,000 immigrants left the United States, and the statement is made that two-thirds of those who returned to their native country never revisit America. As the same writer puts it:

> They do not come with any intention of making this country their future home. This characteristic development of recent immigration alters completely the essential meaning to us of immigration as conceived in the past, although the word name of the economic phenomenon is the same. In consequence, immigration to-day requires a different avenue of approach if we are to understand its true significance to the American nation. This significance lies in the fact that a large volume of our immigration does not come here to be assimilated into our national life.

The report of the Commissioner General of Immigration on the next phase to be considered—the mentality of the immigrant—should be brought before the House. He says in his report for 1914:

> Medical science had demonstrated that many if not all, of these serious mental deficiencies are handed down from generation to generation, with steady increase in the strain; so that the importance of rejecting and expelling aliens of this class, even to the extent shown to have occurred, can hardly be overstated. The law on this subject should be even more strict; and the bureau urgently recommends that legislation supplementary to the excellent provisions of the existing law be enacted at an early date, so that the people of this country may be fully protected against the introduction here from abroad of additional strains of latent but none the less dangerous cerebral deficiencies, as well as against the introduction of such strains actually developed into acute stages. Why should our difficulties on this score, already sufficiently great, be increased by immigration?"

I take the liberty of reminding you that there are more insane in institutions in this country than there are students in colleges and universities. There are more insane in the country than there are enlisted men of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps; and in addition to these, each year, there is being added to this great army, an army practically equal to the army of the United States, approximately sixty thousand new cases every year. The cost of conducting these institutions in which this vast number of persons is cared for is so great that in several states it is exceeded only by the amount expended for education.

The effect on the standard of living by the injection of so vast a number of people is the last feature to which I shall refer. To examine into the question of immigration the United States Government some time ago appointed a commission which sat for four years and at an expenditure of $800,000 produced a report contained in forty volumes. On the standard of living the commission says:

> The measure of the rational, healthy development of the country is not the extent of its investment of capital, its output of products, or its exports and imports unless there is a corresponding economic opportunity afforded to the citizen dependent upon employment for his material, mental, and moral development.

The majority report states that evidence presented to it is a basis for the following findings:

> 1. The immigration policy of the United States has created a number of our most difficult and serious industrial problems and has been responsible in a considerable measure for the existing state of industrial unrest.
>
> 2. The enormous influx of immigrants during the past twenty-five years has already undermined the American standard of living for all workmen except those in the skilled trades, and has been the largest single factor in preventing the wage scale from rising as rapidly as food prices.
>
> 3. The great mass of non-English-speaking workers, who form about one-half of the labour force in the basal industries, has done much to prevent the development of better relations between employers and employees.

President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labour has presented this view quite clearly. He says:

> The American-born wage earners and the foreign wage earners who have been here long enough to aspire to American standards are subject to the ruinous competition of an unending stream of men freshly arriving fro foreign lands who are accustomed to so low a grade of living that they can underbid the wage earners established in this country and still save money.

And the various organizations of labour including the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of the Railroad Trainmen emphasize their views by resolutions which they have passed from time to time. The farmers also, as organized in the Farmers' National Congress, the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union, the National Grange, and like associations have stated that they are "unalterably opposed to the present foreign influx from southeastern Europe and western Asia, and to its proposed distribution and diversion to the South and West."

I have taken the liberty to put these facts on record as briefly as I could, so that when we come to the sections in question, there may be some basis in support of the limitations which I trust will be put in the Bill. Happily our experience has not been that of the United States, or at all events it has not been so acute, and we are now fortunately able, with proper thought, to safeguard our future—

Mr. FOSTER: You speak of three and a half million people coming to the United States and going back. Have you any idea of the length of time they remained, or the amount of money they took away when they returned for good?

Mr. CRONYN: I do not recall having seen any statement as to the length of time they remained. A computation was made by the commission of the amount of money which they sent away. It was in the hundreds of millions. I am speaking again from memory.

Mr. FIELDING: May I make a suggestion to my hon. friend? Assuming that all that he has proposed is wise—and with nearly everything that he has said I heartily agree—I think it would be very much better if he could give us a revised Immigration Act rather than the Bill that is presented. The amendments here are very numerous. Where there are a few amendments to a large Act it is desirable that we should have an amending Act, but where the amendments are very numerous it might be the wiser policy to give us a revised Act, instead of having numerous amendments striking out a few words here and putting in a few words there, and striking out a clause here and substituting a new clause somewhere else. If we have to have this measure and a general Act also there will be a danger of confusion, and the wayfaring man, though he be a member of Parliament, will have some difficulty in following the law, while the immigrants coming in will certainly never understand it. I think we might discuss the Bill in its present form in the light of the minister's speech, and he might instruct the proper officials to embody these amendments in a consolidated Act, so that before the matter is concluded here he might present a substitute Bill which would not require further discussion.

Mr. CALDER: I gave instructions to draft the Bill in such a way that the House would have the least possible difficulty in understanding it. A reading of it will show that there are very few sections in which, as suggested, a few words are struck out and others substituted. In the main, whole sections have been struck out and others substituted even where the changes are very slight, the object being that hon. members may clearly grasp their purport. I think the House will have very little difficulty in following the provisions of the Bill. On the other hand, I quite agree with the view expressed by hon. gentlemen that we should have a consolidation of the Act. The intending emigrants, of course, see very little of the law. They have very little opportunity of reading it. They do not obtain their information in that way; but for the use of our officials who have to carry out the administration of our law, I think a consolidation should be made in order that the provision might be very clearly apprehended by every one. I have no doubt that measures of this kind are usually consolidated by the department when an amending Bill goes through. I do not know what the practice is here, but I know that in our own legislature, when we amend a Bill we have an office consolidation of the law so that the consolidation will be available to every one interested. If the Committee wishes it I will give instructions that a consolidation shall be proceeded with at once so that members may have the advantage of having it before them. On the other hand, I think there will be very little difficulty in following the provisions of this Bill. If thought advisable I will have a number of copies of the existing Act brought to the House so that, if we find it necessary, we can refer to the provisions of the existing law.

Mr. FIELDING: I would not suggest that there should be any delay in regard to the consideration of the matter. I agree that we can discuss the Bill very intelligently with the minister's explanation of it before us. But I think that, before we dispose of the matter finally, for the information of the officials, and of the public generally, there should be a consolidation of the Act. A man who is asked to become a settler in Canada may say: I would like to have a copy of your Immigration law, and if you are able to send him a consolidated Act it is more convenient, not only to the intending immigrant, but to the officials of the department.

Mr. JACOBS: Mr. Chairman, I have a few observations to make on the general tenor of the Bill that should have been made earlier, and I am afraid I shall have to ask the Committee for the same indulgence they gave the hon. member (Mr. Cronyn). The substantive part of this Bill is contained in the three or four first sections; the remainder deals mostly with the way in which the Act is to be put in force and is more for the guidance of transportation and other companies than for the information of the immigrant. Therefore, it will only be with the first few sections that the House will have to deal.

I must congratulate the Minister of Immigration and Colonization (Mr. Calder) upon his excellent address. I have not much fault to find with anything he has said, nor with the Bill as a whole, with the exception of perhaps one or two sections, which ought to be amended radically or struck out completely. I will refer to them in a moment or two. The minister stated in his address that things have happened in the matter of immigration in this country which should not have happened if the previous Governments had been alive to the entire situation. I am sorry the minister did not see his way to tell us what the particular things were that had happened and which should not have happened. We know that under the Liberal Administration of this country, from 1896 to 1911, we had a vast immigration and that the foundation of the prosperity of Canada was the immigration which came in at that period. Whatever may be said about Sir Clifford Sifton, no one will deny that his policy of immigration was the right policy at the time. and that if we have had this large immigration into the country it was entirely due to his foresight.

I would judge that the test whether immigration would or would not be satisfactory to the country would be the reports from the various penitentiaries, insane asylums and houses of correction. By reading those reports we can judge whether immigration is or is not proper for the country. I have not the figures from these institutions before me, but I think I can state without fear of contradiction that the figures will show quite clearly that this country is relatively ahead of any other country on this continent in regard to the small number of people detained in these institutions. I think you will find that the population in the insane asylums is very much less than it is in the United States, in England or in other countries per capita. So it is with regard to the jails and penitentiaries. Speaking for my own particular race, I can point with pride to the Montreal jail, where you will not find a single person of the Jewish race at present incarcerated. The poor chaplain, who has been paid a small stipend of $300 or $400, fears he is going to lose his position unless something is done. So it is in regard to the St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary, where conditions are nearly as satisfactory. Of course, some of the people who are opposed to Jewish immigration take the ground that it is because these people are too clever to be caught, but I do not think there is very much in that. Our police forces and other departments are capable of looking after all classes.

The open door policy to which the minister referred incidentally is one which I think ought to commend itself to the people. Canada is not at present in a position to pick and choose. We must absorb into this country very large numbers of immigrants before we can begin to pay the interest on the debt which we have upon our shoulders at the present time. I have figured out that every man, woman and child will have to pay something like $50 per year in taxes to pay the interest on the debt which we have rolled up. It does not require an arithmetical problem to demonstrate the fact that if 7,000,000 people are required to pay $50 per head, 14,000,000 would pay just half that amount, and so on. So long as we can assure ourselves that the people brought into this country are law-abiding citizens, healthy, and able to take part in the work of developing the country, that is all we require. Whether they come from alien countries, or from other countries, amounts to little. It is of no significance to this country. The alien enemy of to-day will be the friendly alien of to-morrow and possibly the friendly alien of to-day may become the alien enemy of to-morrow. I doubt very much, from the point of view of international law, whether, when we have made a durable and lasting peace with the countries with which we have been at war, we can legally say to the peoples of those countries: You cannot come into this country because at some time in the past you were our enemies. I question that very much. It seems to me that so soon as peace has been signed we have no longer any quarrel with these people and we cannot, on the ground that they have been alien enemies in the past, refuse to allow them into this country or bar their entrance. The minister made the point that some people whom we had brought into this country—Galicians—were living in the same conditions in which they had been living in Galicia from time immemorial.

Mr. CALDER: I did not say that.

Mr. JACOBS: I understood the minister to state they were living in Canada in the same conditions as they had lived in in their own country.

Mr. CALDER: As a matter of fact, the Galicians or Ruthenians who are residing in Western Canada, and who settled there fifteen or twenty years ago, have made very substantial progress in so far as their habits and customs are concerned.

Mr. JACOBS: Did I understand the minister to say that it was at some time while they were here that those objectionable conditions prevailed?

Mr. CALDER: I stated that after their arrival in Canada they were left to struggle for themselves without any assistance or advice of any kind.

Mr. JACOBS: They made good subsequently?

Mr. CALDER: Yes, from the material standpoint, and I can also say that from the social standpoint they have made considerable progress.

Mr. JACOBS: I understood the minister to say that they lived in mud huts and in a way not consistent with civilized conditions.

Mr. CALDER: Originally.

Mr. JACOBS: If they are not doing so now it seems to me that is one of the very best reasons why we should take men who live in mud huts and make good citizens out of them. That is the white man's burden. Those Galicians have worked out their own salvation in this country and have certainly become an asset. They came from Austria, and if they had not come in their thousands from that country they would have been fighting our own soldiers during the war that has just been concluded. We have taken them out of Austria and made most of them fairly good citizens, and I have no doubt that many gave a good account of themselves on the field of battle when fighting for the Allies. It is part of our duty to assume some of the burden, which Kipling says the white man must shoulder, in regard to those who are less advanced than we are. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that the Government is making a serious mistake when it presumes to legislate to keep out people from different countries simply because their habits before they come here are not quite the same as ours. We ought to encourage them in every possible way, not only for their own sakes, but for the sake of ourselves, and in that connection I am reminded of a story told to me some years ago by Commissioner Coombes, of the Salvation Army. He instanced a case in London where a man the back of whose shirt was badly torn used to carry crippled people across the street in wintry weather. Commissioner Coombes congratulated this charitable individual, but received for reply, "That is no charity at all. While I carry them across the street they warm my back." That was the object, and both parties were benefited. I do not say that we have got down to those straits yet, Mr. Chairman, but I mention the incident for the purpose of illustrating that while we are doing the other man good we are at the same time benefiting ourselves.

It is part of our duty to teach these people our laws and customs in order that they may become good Canadian citizens. We may not be very successful with the parents, but through our public schools we can reach the children, and the second generation will develop into citizens as good as many of those who belong to the so-called better class. I have only to cite a case in the history of my own race. You will remember that when the Israelites left Egypt they escaped from slavery and they wandered for forty years in the wilderness. Not one of those who left Egypt was permitted to enter the Holy Land, but their children did, and the Bible tells us these made good. The same thing applies in the present day. You cannot expect to do very much with people who come to this country in the matter of changing from the old manners and customs of Europe, but with our magnificent public school system we can teach the second generation our Canadian social life, and they will develop into citizens as capable and efficient as the descendants of those who have lived here many generations.

Mr. CALDER: Will the hon. gentleman allow me to ask him a question, because it goes to the very heart of the situation? In Western Canada, more so than in any other part of the Dominion, the prevailing opinion is that the number of foreign born is so great in proportion to the balance of the population that it results in a difficult social and educational problem. Does the hon. gentleman advocate that we should keep our doors wide open in order that thousands upon thousands of these people shall have the privilege of going in there to intensify the problem of those Western Provinces? Or should we endeavour to keep a balance between these foreign born and our own people, in order that we may grapple with that problem as it exists from time to time? He can readily understand what might result if we were to follow his policy. We could probably arrange to carry on propaganda work in Europe which would bring hundreds of thousands of these people to Canada. Does the hon. gentleman think it advisable to do so under the circumstances I have mentioned?

Mr. JACOBS: If they are decent, respectable people, why not? Take the state of Wisconsin. I understand that practically the whole state is peopled by Scandinavians. Take the state of Louisiana, that originally was settled exclusively by the French. Why should foreigners coming here grow up in ignorance when we have such a splendid educational system? As the hon. minister pointed out, a few years ago these Galicians were living in mud huts; to-day they form a very important part of the community. In fact, they were considered so important that when the War-time Elections Act was passed a provision was inserted withdrawing their franchise rights.

With regard to the peasantry which you must expect will immigrate to this country, you cannot get any but the poorest class from Great Britain or any other part of Europe, for it is their poverty which causes them to emigrate. Who ever heard of a man of wealth leaving his home in Europe and coming out to Canada either to live in a large city or to go on the land? It is the poverty of the peasantry and other classes in Europe which promotes emigration, and you cannot expect to receive any other class of immigrants. They go to the West and have to scratch the earth for a living ;they have very little means and cannot engage in agriculture on a large scale like the American immigrants, they cannot buy tractors and other up-to-date agricultural implements; they must continue to live in a primitive style until such time as they are able to make enough out of the soil to improve their position. Therefore it seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that it is a short-sighted policy on the part of the Government to simply restrict immigrants because they happen to come from this or that country, or because they do not happen to have the means which immigrants from the United States possess.

I regret that the Government should have decided at the present juncture to introduce a Bill of this character, because it is bound to create considerable discussion among the people of this country. The returned soldier problem is upon us. The returned soldier who has failed to find a job will consider every immigrant as coming here for the purpose of taking away employment which should go to the soldier, and in that way we may accentuate a feeling against the newly arrived which would not exist were this Bill brought down a year or two hence. I do not believe there was any particular urgency for this Bill. We have in the Immigration Act many of the provisions which are incorporated in this Bill, and we could have got along with it very well, particularly as the regulations under the Orders in Council carefully see to it that only a good class of immigrant is permitted entrance.

I have had a good deal to do with the Immigration Department, and I must say that its work is being done most efficiently; all the officials, from the highest down, are interpreting the Act with intelligence. When a case of hardship is brought to the attention of the department, an appeal is had, and when the matter is finally disposed of the immigrant receives justice. That being the case, I cannot see why this Bill should be introduced, unless it be for the purpose of barring the alien enemy. I shall certainly oppose the section which introduces that provision into our law. It is undemocratic; it is wrong in principle; I have very grave doubts as to its legality under international law. For these and many other reasons I think the section should be left out.

Mr. CALDER: The provision under which we debar alien enemies from entering Canada is a regulation under the existing law. The purpose of this Bill is not to exclude the alien enemy.

Mr. JACOBS: But the alien enemy is excluded under the War Measures Act?

Mr. CALDER: No, I think it is Section 38 of the present law which provides that the Government, by Order in Council, may exclude any persons of any nationality, race, class or occupation.

Mr. JACOBS: It was right and proper that that should be so. But it is wrong to introduce into the substantive part of a new law a clause to provide that every person belonging to alien enemy countries shall not be permitted to enter Canada.

Mr. CALDER: There is no such provision in the Bill.

Mr. JACOBS: Paragraph (p) of Section 3 says:

> Enemy aliens or persons who have been alien enemies and who were interned in any part of His Majesty's Dominions or any allied country on or after the eleventh day of November, one thousand nine hundred and eighteen.

Mr. CALDER: That refers only to interned alien enemies.

Mr. JACOBS: What distinction does the minister make between a man who has been interned in any part of His Majesty's Dominions and a man who comes direct to Canada from Germany, Austria, or any other enemy country? I do not see that there is any distinction. A large number of persons who came from alien enemy countries reside in Canada. The Minister of the Interior (Mr. Meighen) in answer to a question I put to him the other day, said that 2,117 alien enemies only had been interned during the war. This shows that thousands of them were considered good and valued citizens and were in no way molested or interfered with.

Another clause to which I intend to take serious objection is that which provides for a literacy test. That clause does not appeal to me at all; it is wrong to debar a man from this country because he cannot read. If that rule had been applied in the United States in the time of Abraham Lincoln, Lincoln's own father and mother would have been debarred from entering the United States because they could not read. I do not know where the minister got his warrant for introducing a rule of this kind. We want all the immigration we can get. If a man is respectable, industrious and honest he should be permitted to come into this country; if he is unable to read, that is not his fault, but his misfortune. In the remote parts of England, Scotland and Ireland, the countries from which you expect to get your best class of immigration, I venture to think large numbers of the people of the older generation cannot read. We know the difficulties under which people labour in Europe. Many men have not had a chance to go to school and learn to read or write; they have been ground down by poverty and heavy work almost from the days when they could scarcely walk. Now, when they want to improve their position and come to a new land, they will find they cannot come here on account of this misfortune of being unable to read. The House should not concur in any legislation which makes a distinction as to entry in Canada between the man who can read and the man who cannot. You are not going to keep out Bolshevists by such a provision; the Bolshevists and people of that ilk are able to read and write. You are keeping out the poor man who, through no fault of his own, has been unable to secure even an elementary education. If people who cannot read and write are permitted to enter Canada, the minister will at least have the assurance that they will not commit forgery; so that one thing would be guarded against at all times.

On the whole, were it not for these two clauses I would be heartily in favour of this Bill, particularly as I know that the law will be administered with intelligence by the very capable department over which the minister presides. I trust that before the Bill is through the Committee stage the minister will see his way clear to strike out these objectionable passages and give satisfaction to all elements of the community.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: The greatness of a country must be measured by the standard of its people; a nation's greatest asset is the people of whom it is composed. In view of the immigration restrictions which are being imposed by the United States, it is important that legislation of the nature of this Bill should be brought down by the Canadian Government. Otherwise, Canada would be the Mecca for the outcasts of Europe to whom access to the United States is refused. But to my surprise the hon. gentleman (Mr. Jacobs) has made a plea for the alien enemy, for the people with whom we are at war—because peace has not yet been declared.

[Mr. Jacobs.]

Mr. JACOBS: May I correct the hon. gentleman? I said: the people with whom we "were" at war.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: That is exactly what I said. We are still at war with those people, and yet the hon. member makes a plea here to-day that we should grant them concessions and that we should forget the things they have done, and forget the principles to defend which some of our men are still overseas waiting for peace to be declared before they can return to Canada. The ink was not dry on the signatures to the armistice before we heard the leaders of the Liberal party in Canada apologizing for the things that had been done by alien enemies during this war and referring to the Germans as one of the noblest races in the world. We heard from the Atlantic to the Pacific about the so called iniquitous Dominion Franchise Act which disfranchised people of alien birth in this country during the war. But to-day I think the limit has been reached when an hon. member makes the plea in this House for alien enemies; that we should not exercise any precautions with regard to ourselves as against those people coming into Canada under our immigration laws. To my mind the matter is so serious that a statement of that kind should be considered an unpardonable offence. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Jacobs) may smile, but the brave men who have been offering their lives for the cause for which we have been contending during the last five years will not smile at the statement I make. Since the signing of the armistice we have been told by some people that we should forgive and start over again. There is, I admit, much to be forgiven, and personally I have not yet reached the stage when I am prepared either to forget or to forgive the horrible offences that have been committed.

Mr. JACOBS: I am a better Christian than the hon. member.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I am not boasting as to that, but I do not think the hon. member's attitude is very much evidence as to his Christianity.

I should like to say a word or two with regard to the exclusion under present conditions in Canada, of skilled and unskilled labour of a desirable class. It has been pointed out that Canada needs population; that we have great undeveloped resources in this country, and that our hands are practically tied, because we have not the people to develop those resources. Some people anticipate a very unsettled condition of affairs in the labour market, because those hundreds of thousands of returned soldiers will again have to take their place in civil life.

The Government have made a reasonable provision, although perhaps not as liberal as it might be, to take care of those men at least for a short time after their return, and I have not the slightest doubt but that, in a short time, there will be in Canada a great demand for labour both skilled and unskilled. I cannot conceive of a country, with the resources which Canada has, being in any other condition than short of labour, and I want to issue a warning to the Government that many of those measures that are on foot with the object of restricting desirable immigration, are not in the public interest. Some labour unions have been taking the stand that legislation of this kind should be enacted. The minister has pointed out the necessity for getting men on the land in order to develop our agricultural resources, and I quite agree with him in that regard; but how are you going to meet the demands of the country in that respect unless you permit desirable immigrants to enter. Because, by reason of the labour organizations fixing the hours of labour and regulating the scale of wages, if a man can get a greater remuneration for his services at some other occupation than farming, he is going to engage in that occupation instead of working the land? That is the very thing that is taking place throughout Canada at the present time, and has been for many years, that is the chief reason why, notwithstanding all the great natural resources we have at our disposal, the cost of living is bound to remain very high in this country. The policy of the labour unions as regards hours of labour is, in my opinion, a very short-sighted one. I may seem somewhat reckless in making such a statement, but I am quite sincere in making it and I do not believe they will gain the end they have in view by organizing along those lines.

Agriculture in this country is suffering to such an extent that it is simply deplorable that something is not being done to stem the ravages and depredations that are being made upon our resources as a result of bad farming. The result of bad farming is evidenced on every hand throughout the country, and as the years go by, it is becoming much worse, and, unless there is a material change in labour conditions I see no prospect of its becoming better. It will be found that a feeling has been engendered against the people of the rural districts by the people in the towns and cities; indeed, that feeling exists right here in Ottawa. The citizens are calling meetings and passing resolutions with a view, they claim, to bringing down the cost of living, by bringing into competition with the legitimate business of the agriculturists of this country something that will meet their selfish purposes, but they lose sight of the fact that agriculture is going to suffer to a great extent if they succeed in carrying out the views they express. This may be getting away from the Bill somewhat, but what I have in mind and what I wish to emphasize is this: that the Government must be very careful in not excluding from this country desirable, industrious immigrants, even although they have not one dollar in their possession.

The hon. member (Mr. Jacobs) criticised the minister because, although he said that mistakes had been made in the past, he did not point out where those mistakes had been made, but simply condemned them in a general way. He also eulogized Sir Clifford Sifton and what the Liberal party had done in peopling the plains of the West. The Minister of Immigration (Mr. Calder) has lived in Western Canada for many years, and I have no doubt that he, being of an observant nature, has followed the question of immigration in the West as a careful student would.

It is not very many years since we witnessed in the Parliament of Canada an effort to find out who it was that was bringing out to Canada from the alien enemy nations of central Europe hundreds of thousands of people under bonus. It was claimed that it was done by a certain corporation but you coud not find out by hook or by crook who constituted the notorious North Atlantic Trading Company. That company located these people on large blocks of land in Western Canada, and instead of these people being assimilated, the people of British birth who did not wish to live close to them moved further away, and the boundaries of those alien settlements were extended. But that is a thing of the past, and I should not have referred to it had it not been mentioned by the hon. member (Mr. Jacobs). I believe it was not good policy to permit thousands of people of foreign birth to congregate in settlements in Western Canada and maintain there the language and traditions of the country from which they came. If we want Canada to become a great country within the Empire, we must both feel and act as if we were a part of the British Empire, and the people who come here should be made to observe British laws and institutions. But that is not being done in many places in Western Canada to-day.

Just imagine hon. gentlemen opposite, with peace not yet declared, saying that we should not debar these people of alien enemy countries, many of whom are now interned in Canada.

Mr. JACOBS: Those interned are here already.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: But they will go out just as soon as it is possible for us to get them out, and I hope they will be kept out for the rest of their lives. We have had that menace to contend with, and we have not received much sympathy from hon. gentlemen opposite in dealing with questions of this kind during the last few years. But our boys from overseas will soon be home and they will see to it that never again in his counry shall such a condition of affairs exist as has been the case in this Parliament during the past few years.

Progress reported.

SELECT STANDING COMMITTEE ON RAILWAYS.

Mr. J. E. ARMSTRONG (East Lambton): With the permission of the House I should like to withdraw the motion I made this afternoon asking that the Select Standing Committee on Railways, Canals and Telegraph Lines be granted leave to sit while the House is in session.

Motion withdrawn.

Mr. J. E. ARMSTRONG: I now beg to move:

That the Select Standing Committee on Railways, Canals and Telegraph Lines have leave to sit during the sitting of this House to-night.

There are several delegations from the Western Provinces who are anxious to be heard before the Committee and as it would be impossible for us to hear them for some days to come, I trust the House will agree to the Committee sitting to-night in order to accommodate these gentlemen.

Motion agreed to.

At six o'clock the House took recess.

After Recess.

The House resumed at eight o'clock.

SUPPLY.

The House in Committee of Supply, Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

Militia and Defence—Allowances—Active Militia, $50,000.

[Mr. Sutherland.]

Major-General MEWBURN: In preparing these Estimates it was very difficult to determine just how far to go in getting back from war to a peace basis. These Main Estimates were prepared on the same lines as last year, as we did not then expect the armistice. In the Supplementary Estimates, therefore, there will have to be included some amounts in addition to those now before the Committee. The question of what is to become of the active militia in the future is a matter that will have to be given very serious consideration, probably at a later session. In the Supplementary Estimates there will be a larger amount in connection with certain grants, in one or two items which I will explain later on. In the Estimates now before the Committee there is a total reduction of $26,130 as compared with the previous year, the expenditures having been cut down to the lowest minimum possible. Some amounts that have been previously charged to war expenditure will now have to come out of the Estimates by vote. It is proposed to recruit the permanent corps as a temporary measure up to 5,000, which is the number laid down in the Militia Act. It is considered essential that that force should be built up, at least, to the number mentioned.

Mr. McKENZIE: What does this $50,000 cover?

Major-General MEWBURN: That $50,000 covers allowances for general purposes for all militia units throughout the Dominion. During the war that amount was required to keep the active militia units in some semblance of an organization. It was distributed among all the various units in Canada for the care of arms and for matters pertaining to the active militia regiments including all branches of the service. The pre-war vote in connection with that was something over $100,000. During 1917-18 it was $70,000 and last year $50,000. I do not think it is possible to manage with an amount less than that. In the Supplementary Estimates there will have to be a vote if it is considered necessary to train the militia or any part of it this year. Whether that is advisable or not I am not prepared to say, but we have to make provision.

Mr. POWER: To whom is this money usually paid?

Major-General MEWBURN: It goes to the officers commanding the militia units, to the credit of the units, for command pay, care of arms, drill instruction, postage, and so forth.

Mr. POWER: And salaries?

Major-General MEWBURN: No. There are no salaries at all. The militia units have not drawn a cent of pay practically for four years.

Mr. POWER: What is the command pay?

Major-General MEWBURN: The command pay is estimated on the basis of 60 cents for each man actually trained. A very large number of militia units in Canada have retained their organization and have actually trained their men. In one military district there are over four regiments of infantry that have kept up their regiments—men who were over age or medically unfit. These regiments trained in the spring and fall and never drew pay. They were kept as a nucleus. A great many of them spent enormous sums of money out of their regimental funds. One regiment, the 48th Highlanders in Toronto, spent over $23,000 in connection with recruiting for the overseas units, and that organization is magnificent to-day. The same is true of the 5th Royal Scots and the Victoria Rifles, and the 65th, the 8th and 9th, Quebec; and in Winnipeg the 90th and the Grenadier Regiment, and one in Vancouver.

Mr. COPP: What advantage is this to the country?

Major-General MEWBURN: There is every advantage, and I do not think that the country would be satisfied to have the militia units wiped out of existence.

Mr. COPP: But of what advantage is it to keep the units?

Major-General MEWBURN: I think it is absolutely essential that the militia units should be kept up. It is not for me to say whether their services will be required again or not. If it is the intention to wipe them out of existence that is a matter for Parliament, but I cannot for a moment imagine that they have not been of advantage in the past and may not be of advantage in the future.

Mr. COPP: The minister misunderstands me. What do they do?

Major-General MEWBURN: During the war they were the backbone of recruiting for the Canadian Expeditionary Force, and I think that the units, if they are kept on a peace basis, are very essential in aid of the civil power.

Mr. POWER: Will any definite policy be formulated with regard to the future of the Canadian militia?

Major-General MEWBURN: No definite policy has been formulated but considerable thought has been given to the matter. It would be premature for me even to suggest at this time what will be done; I have felt that until the Canadian Expeditionary Force is demobilized it would be unwise to state any definite policy. We organized and sent overseas a very large number of units. In the infantry we recruited in Canada something like 258 battalions. I shall not criticise the way in which it was done but a large number of them were broken up. A large number of units that were at the front are now coming back and are being practically disbanded, and the only thing we have on the statute-book is what is known under the Miliita Act which provides for a permanent and non-permanent force. There is the nucleus of a committee that has been giving a great deal of consideration to this matter and it is proposed to add to that committee some officer or officers who have served with distinction at the front representing the permanent corps—those who were neither in the permanent or non-permanent but served with distinction at the front. It is proposed that the committee shall visit the eleven military districts in Canada to get the views of the various officers who have served in the war as to the situation, and also to consult with people in certain centres who have been behind the militia in the past. Probably at a future session some proper scheme will be laid before the House as to the reconstitution of the militia, as a great many people feel strongly that these fighting units should be perpetuated. The 16th Battalion was a regiment that was raised originally in British Columbia and has now become a Manitoba battalion. There are others: The 15th which was ostensibly fathered by the 48th Highlanders in Toronto, the 13th and the 5th Royal Scots. There is considerable feeling that these units should be perpetuated, and I think there is reason for the view, as they have made splendid history for Canada and I would like something to be done to continue them. I am not prepared to say how far the country intends to go in the future in maintaining a military organization. It is premature at present to lay down any far-reaching policy until we know what our responsibilities and cares will be, but in the meantime it would be wise to try and keep the units in existence.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I am certainly not a militarist, but I approve of some of the remarks made by the Minister of Militia (Major-General Mewburn). There is no doubt that the success in recruiting in Ontario was largely due to the splendid military organization which was in operation there for many years. When I was Postmaster General I remember having been twice at Niagara camp in the summer and I was impressed with the splendid militia force on the grounds there. It was on the occasion of the establishment of the postal unit for the various regiments. I met on that occasion my hon. friend from West York (Mr. Wallace). I have followed that somewhat closely in our province for the last twenty-five years. The time for the annual drill in camp was certainly too short and there was not an opportunity, with all the other duties that the militiaman had to perform, to make of these boys real soldiers. The personal expenditure involved, if the officers wish to maintain their battalions is sometimes beyond their modest resources and if you are to have in the future an active militia organization, one that will be efficient in the case of emergency, the Government should revise the methods of the militia organizations throughout the several militia districts.

I said a moment ago that I am not a militarist, but I believe, especially after the magnificent part Canada played in this war, that we should be proud of our militia and that we should maintain, within proper limits, a militia organization on a sound footing. In order to perpetuate that organization I think we should begin at the beginning. After all it is a manly sport. Reviewing my college experiences, I have observed that the students who turned out best were those who had joined the cadet corps. Just to give an example, I was reading some statistics on Sunday in a Montreal daily. The minister knows that possibly the best cadet corps in Montreal is that of the Mont St. Louis College. Because of the organization which has been maintained for years and years, and which has been a source of pride to the citizens of Montreal, during the war, from that institution alone, 325 boys joined the colours. I attribute that to the fact that they were trained as cadets in that institution. As much as possible in our colleges, academies and high schools all over the country, without spreading any militaristic spirit we should have cadet organizations in which the boys would take pride and which would give them an opportunity of taking part in a manly sport.

I find much to commend in the Swiss system. In Switzerland every man knows how to handle a rifle, and we had evidence of that during the war. Although Switzerland was not engaged in the war, from the end of July, 1914, the whole Swiss army, which means practically the male population of age, was under arms in order to guard the boundary of Switzerland. In Switzerland, from the earliest moment of a man's life, he is called upon to practice all the military exercises. Yet it is a democratic country, probably the most democratic in Europe, and the entire organization is carried out with little expenditure. I am not for a carnival of expenditure in what I am propounding this evening; I think with a minimum expenditure you can have our young men fairly well trained in their country's defence. I think the militia organization should be maintained on a proper basis, because it is a school which will bring the best results to our young men. It is, I repeat, a manly sport, and some of our best men have belonged to this organization.

Mr. EDWARDS: It is pleasant to know that at times, Mr. Chairman, I can agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Lemieux), and to realize that the gulf which separates this side from the other is not one that at all times cannot be bridged. I am pleased to associate myself with the hon. gentleman in his remarks in regard to the cadet corps, and we will have an opportunity to discuss it more fully, I suppose, on the next item. But I want to say one word in regard to the active militia. I do not know whether there will be any annual camps this year or not; I heard it intimated that there would not be.

Major-General MEWBURN: This amount does not provide for them.

Mr. EDWARDS: It is quite true that in recruiting men for the front, the old militia those men who went out to camp year after year, did splendid service; a great many of those who were associated with the militia joined up and went overseas and did their part nobly. There were some, however, who for years had been connected with the militia but who never showed any disposition to enlist for active service. I know some men in my own part of the country who used to strut about with all the gold lace and brass buttons they could decorate themselves with, who for a great many years used to go out to the annual camp for fourteen days and take all the salutes that those under them could give, priding themselves on their rank in the militia, but who did not go overseas and did not want to go overseas. In any reorganization of the militia it would be a very great mistake if those gentlemen were given their old rank; that would be something which the country generally would resent very strongly. The hon. gentleman who has just spoken stated that fourteen days' annual drill was too short. In my judgment, if you have that annual drill conducted by men who have had experience overseas, you will get more benefit from the fourteen days' training under their guidance than you would get in four years under the old system. I would cut off every one of those men who paraded as militia officers, but did not prove themselves of the right calibre when the testing time came. The men to carry on the instructional work are the men who went overseas and did their bit, not those who were content to remain at home and who now, no doubt, will again haul out their uniforms from the dusty closet and strut about just as gloriously as they did for thirty-five or forty years before the war began.

Mr. McMASTER: I have little experience in military matters, Mr. Chairman, but I would like to express strong support of the attitude adopted by the Minister of Militia, which I understand to be this: He does not intend to launch a scheme of general reorganization of the militia until the present situation clears up. The great statesmen of the world have been working for months past in Paris to see whether the scourge of militarism can be removed from the civilized nations of the world, and on their success or failure will depend very largely whether this country, with other countries, will have to look forward to the burden of maintaining military establishments, or whether a reign of peace and harmony can be established throughout the world. I am hopeful for the future because the present situation is so awful. Possibly we have not realized it on this side of the Atlantic as much as the people have on the other side, but I fear the crushing weight of military establishments will be found too much, along with the tremendous load of national debt heaped up during the war, to be borne by a world which has been impoverished by four, aye, almost five, years of bitter conflict. I believe we are fortunate in having at the head of the Militia Department a gentleman who, although a general in the Canadian army, is of an essentially civilian turn of mind, and who is not desirous of seeing great military establishments formed in this country. May I be allowed to ask the House to approve and support the idea which he has set forth? I think we should not allow our militia organization to fall to pieces, I am quite at one with him there; but I would reduce the expenditure on the upkeep of our militia to the smallest point consonant with the maintenance of a skeleton organization. The load of debt which we have in this country does not for business reasons permit us to do otherwise. But there is something much greater than business reasons—the heart of humanity is crying out for release from mitilarism. In so far as we can do so consistently with national safety we should endeavour to meet that demand, which is uttered by the whole human race.

Major-General MEWBURN: I am delighted to hear the remarks of the hon. gentleman opposite. I have been pressed to lay down some immediate policy regarding our militia organization. We have been keeping very closely in touch and endeavouring to get information from Paris as to the future military organizations of the world We are also getting information from a commission which is sitting at the British War Office to-day dealing with post-bellum war conditions and reorganization of the British army, on which we have one of our most distinguished officers, General McBrien, who has been an outstanding figure throughout the war. He has been transmitting to us a lot of valuable information. Also we have been keeping in close touch with the reorganization in the United States. They started out with the idea of maintaining a permanent standing army of some 500,000 men, but I think they are modifying their views. I have felt, as I have already stated, that it would be very foolish for us in Canada to launch into a big military scheme at the present moment, and therefore we came to the conclusion that this suggested committee should go into the matter very carefully and get the views of various parts of the Dominion on the matter, and next session the whole matter could be fully considered.

I take issue with my hon. friend (Mr. Edwards) in his reference to members of the militia who, he considers, have not done their duty. No doubt in many militia units throughout Canada there were men of that calibre, but I think I can safely say that of most of the militia units that were in existence in 1914, every officer, non-commissioned officer and man who was of military age and medically fit has served at the front or is over there now. I speak particularly of the city corps. The peace establishment of an ordinary city battalion was something like 445. Not an officer, non-commissioned officer or man drew one cent of pay from the Government. The pay they got for annual training went into their regimental funds and they paid out of their own pockets for the extra uniform and equipment to keep these units up to their establishment. I believe most of the men of these city corps, without one exception, served at the front. The officers took a great many military and staff courses, paid their own expenses, gave up their holidays in order to train. The money devoted to these city corps really came back into the coffers of the Government for the benefit of the country. They maintained their own bands and other organizations at their own expense. I do not wish to speak boastfully, but of my own battalion in Hamilton some 124 officers and 3,800 men went overseas; 20 officers were killed; 12,000 men from Hamilton went overseas. While these men have been overseas the organizations have been kept up so that when the men come back from the front they have a home to go to. That is creditable, so it is advisable to keep up the nucleus of these organizations. But it is premature for us to launch into some big military scheme now; the matter will have to be given very serious consideration.

Mr. POWER: We have had almost a love feast here this evening. First the member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux) congratulates the minister; then the member for Brome (Mr. McMaster); and now I have my word of endorsation to add to what the member for Frontenac (Mr. Edwards) had to say. I agree with the member for Frontenac that there have been in Canada during the last three or four years a large number of militia officers who should have gone to the front. but did not. They have walked around in uniform for several years, and I do not think they should be in a position now to hold high commands in the militia. If the militia is re-organized, it should be the business of the minister to see that men who have been at the front are put in charge of the battalions. Further, if a man did not go overseas because he was medically unfit, but still remains in the militia, he should be retired, because if he is not fit to be a soldier in France I do not see what use he can be here.

Major-General MEWBURN: In the present reorganization, the senior officer in the militia unit concerned who has seen service overseas, will take command of the regiment and will make his recommendation with regard to new officers in that regiment. This will eliminate all those who have not been overseas.

Mr. POWER: When officers who were in the militia units and who proceeded overseas, return and are demobilized, what will be their rank?

Major-General MEWBURN: That is one of the policies that we have not definitely settled. What we have done is this: In many cases officers who held the rank of lieutenant in militia regiments went overseas and rose to the rank of lieutenant-colonel. As these officers return from the front and are struck off the strength, they are placed on what is called the Canadian Expeditionary Force Reserve of Officers, with the rank that they held overseas or obtained at the front. Of course, they may still appear on the rolls of the old militia units, because, as we have not yet settled upon a definite policy in this regard, we are not in a position to disband those militia units.

Mr. EDWARDS: What would be the rank, say, of a major who reverted to go to the front and did not succeed in regaining the rank which he originally held?

Major-General MEWBURN: The rank which he originally held would be restored.

Mr. MOWAT: What is the scope of the inquiry which is to be conducted by the Sir William Otter commission?

Major-General MEWBURN: Sir William Otter has been requested to organize a commission or committee to go into the matters of which I have spoken. As yet he has done nothing beyond collecting an enormous amount of data in connection with headquarters here and compiling a lot of information. In the meantime, he is awaiting the return to Canada of some officers from overseas. The commission will inquire into and report upon the future reorganization of the militia. A great many people in Canada—I frankly say that I myself am in favour of it, although I do not know whether I shall live to see it—advocate universal military training in this country. My hon. friend (Mr. Lemieux) spoke of the Swiss system, which is undoubtedly one of the best systems in the world, the cheapest and most satisfactory system ouside of conscription, in all the continental countries. Personally I think that the youth of this country should be induced in some way to put in a certain amount of training; it would be better for the youth, and better for the country. How far the country will care to go in that regard I cannot say. But this Committee will be able to give an expression of opinion from other countries as to what should be done.

Mr. MOWAT: I am in favour of universal training. Apparently General Otter's commission will inquire only into the best method of consolidating or co-ordinating the militia units overseas and at home on the old basis of pay. To my mind that is not the most advantageous system for Canada. Canada's soldiers should serve without pay; it is because pay has been attached to the service that many of our troubles in the past have arisen, and that difficulty has been experienced in getting men of the proper spirit into the militia. I would not like this item to pass without having had the minister say that this matter will be thoroughly discussed at the proper time when his other Estimates are up. I am delighted to hear the expressions of opinion which emanated from my hon. friend (Mr. Lemieux). I am sure that my hon. and gallant friend from Quebec East (Mr. Power) will take part in this discussion to the great advantage of the Committee and of the country. The trouble is that during the last couple of years a difference of opinion has arisen between Ontario and Quebec on the question of "conscription." As regards universal training of young men from eighteen to twenty-five, of whom there are some 336,000 in Canada, if they would train voluntarily, that is, receiving nothing more than mere pocket money, that would be of great advantage to their physical and moral well-being. Speaking of that, which I purpose advocating at another time, I think it is not unnatural that expressions of opinion in favour of it coming from hon. gentlemen opposite, should come from those living in Quebec, because that province first gave Canada the idea of universal service. As long ago as 1808, that province passed the first Militia Act which made every man then fit to carry arms in the province of Lower Canada a member of the militia. The only members of the militia to-day are those who are full of an ardent military spirit or who take the annual training for a holiday or for the money that is in it. That was not, however, the case with the men of Quebec in the early times. They joined because they felt it was their duty as well as a pleasure to do so, and I am quite sure the spirit which animated them in passing that Act still exists in Quebec to-day, and when we come to discuss this question, I am sure we shall have many supporters from that province.

If one looked through the militia list, one would find page after page, for almost hundreds of pages, of names of members of cadet corps established in the schools and seminaries of Quebec, a greater proportion in Quebec than in any other province, so that there must have been that idea prevailing throughout Quebec in the last few years. Those things all conduce to the idea that we can get rid of the pay system in the militia, which system has been to its detriment, and for which before the war in 1914, we paid $10,000,000. We can escape a great part of this enormous expenditure and get a much more efficient, loyal and better trained army of citizen soldiers as they have them in Australia, South Africa and New Zealand and as they are now to have in the United States. We cannot be behind the United States of America in this great idea because, if we are to live beside them in our present friendly manner, we cannot say to the world: We are going to drag behind and have no efficient force and be, to a certain extent, under an obligation to our great neighbour to the south. That would be beneath the pride of Canada. In the state of New York a system of universal training has been adopted for boys up to nineteen, and a boy cannot only not get a graduation certificate from a school, but he cannot get employment unless he has a certificate to show that he has been trained. That measure was passed in the state of New York last year after thorough debate, and I believe the same idea which made the legislature of that state come to that conclusion will be found to exist in Canada. Similar legislation is now before the United States Congress at Washington, with very good prospects of being passed there. Therefore, we are gradually accustoming our young men to the idea that as they pass through life they must recognize that some military force is necessary. We cannot do without it altogether, and the best way will be to accustom every man to think that not only must he go to school to educate himself in the ordinary rudiments of learning, but that he must look forward to taking part, if the call should come, in the defence of his womankind and his country, although we hope that he will never be called upon to do so. He will not be a paid soldier, a mercenary; he will be a man who is full of the best patriotism, and who will be willing to give a few weeks a year in order to take up arms if arms are necessary.

Cadet services—for pay of instructors, expenses of teachers qualifying at military schools, and contingent expenses, $75,000.

Major-General MEWBURN: I am sorry the hon. member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux) is not in the House just now. I agree with everything the hon. gentleman said as regards the cadet corps throughout Canada, which have a wonderful record. I have here a memorandum which I have not been able to complete, but for the benefit of the committee I should like to give these figures which are much less than the actual numbers, because we have not the returns from all parts. The figures I have show that the number of young cadets, that is, members of cadet corps in Canada, who enlisted in the Canadian Expeditionary Force for overseas service, was over 40,000. Of these, 2,319 were killed in action; 11 obtained the Victoria Cross; 857 received other decorations; and 401 obtained commissions. The record is a most creditable one. The vote of $75,000 is just the same as last year. The pre-war expenditures in 1913-1914 for cadet services was $392,000. Personally, I should like to see the appropriation increased a little this year, and I may ask later on in the Supplementary Estimates for an increase. The present vote is barely enough to keep the organizations going, and even now many of the schools throughout Canada are anxious to continue their cadet corps and build them up again.

Mr. POWER: What is this money expended on? For instructors?

Major-General MEWBURN: For pay of instructors, expenses of teachers qualifying at military schools, and contingent expenses. It includes the pay and allowances and transportation of all the organizers and inspectors, and also an instructional allowance of one dollar each for the first fifty cadets, and fifty cents each for the excess over fifty, in each corps. They furnish their own uniforms.

Mr. POWER: Is that amount per annum?

Major-General MEWBURN: Yes. A certain amount is paid for physical training instructors.

[Mr. Mowat.]

Mr. POWER: Is the cost of rifles and other arms included in this vote?

Major-General MEWBURN: No.

Engineer services and works, ordinary repairs and works, Halifax defences, Quebec defences, Esquimalt defences, $430,000.

Major-General MEWBURN: This is for all the care and upkeep of the various armouries and general engineer services. It does not cover the extraordinary amounts. That would come under Public Works.

Mr. POWER: Does this cover building the armouries?

Major-General MEWBURN: No, that would come under Public Works.

Mr. POWER: Is this not a large item for ordinary repairs and works?

Major-General MEWBURN: No, it has been pared down. The pre-war expenses ran over a million dollars.

Mr. POWER: What has been done to the citadel at Quebec?

Major-General MEWBURN: There is a re-vote of $20,000 for that. The whole vote was not expended.

Mr. POWER: What is it for?

Major-General MEWBURN: The upkeep of the walls of the citadel.

Grants to associations and bands—for grants to artillery and rifle associations, military bands and military institutions, $25,000.

Mr. PEDLOW: Does this cover grants to rifle associations?

Major-General MEWBURN: Yes.

Mr. PEDLOW: I was not aware that any grants had been allowed during the last four years, but I see that the same amount was in last year's Estimates.

Major-General MEWBURN: Only about $5,000 of last year's vote was spent, but we expect to expend the money this year. We have already had applications from several rifle associations, which want to reorganize and to go on with both Dominion and provincial rifle association matches. Even the Bisley matches are going on again in England, and the authorities overseas are anxious that we should send a team over, and it is suggested that some of the men who have been overseas should form a team. A number of civilian organizations would like to organize again.

Mr. PEDLOW: Is it in order for rifle associations to send in applications for grants as before the war, and for rifles and other equipment?

Major-General MEWBURN: It is quite in order, and we would be very glad to take the matter up.

Mr. PEDLOW: This year?

Major-General MEWBURN: I hope so. I would be very glad to encourage rifle associations in every way.

Mr. PEDLOW: Are rifles available now if asked for?

Major-General MEWBURN: Yes, there would be no difficulty in getting them now.

Mr. POWER: What military bands are included in this item?

Major-General MEWBURN: Regimental bands of the various city corps. A maximum amount of $180 was given to city corps for bands. I think I am safe in saying that nearly every city corps in Canada kept its band in some sort of organization, and many bandsmen went to the front. Quite a large number have come back and are going into the regimental bands again. They have, indeed, been a perfect God-send to the troops coming back, and many of them are turning out to welcome the returned soldiers.

This does not in any way maintain the organizations, as they are maintained by the regiments themselves.

Headquarters and District Staffs, $225,000.

Mr. COPP: What staffs are these?

Major-General MEWBURN: The Headquarters staff here, and the staffs at Military Districts Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 10, 11, 12 and 13. The staff includes the officer commanding the military district, general staff officer, the Deputy Assistant Adjutant and Quartermaster General, the officer in charge of administration, and the district intelligence officer.

Mr. COPP: Does the vote pertain to the headquarters staffs in the military districts where men are being demobilized?

Major-General MEWBURN: The bulk of those are only temporary appointments, changing almost every day. They come under the war vote.

Mr. COPP: At the proper time I wish to say something about these staffs in the different military districts, particularly in the province of New Brunswick. At the present time there is a sort of guard at St. John, N.B.

Major-General MEWBURN: Those men are all drawing Canadian Expeditionary Force rates and allowances.

Mr. POWER: I want to call the minister's attention again to the fact that in these headquarters' staffs for the military districts there are a large number of men who did not see service overseas. These good staff positions should undoubtedly go to the men who have seen service at the front. I drew the minister's attention to this matter last year, and he promised that at the earliest opportunity he would see to it that the overseas men were appointed to important positions on the district staffs. Shortly after that I put a question on the Order Paper asking who were employed on the headquarters staff at Military District No. 5. There were twenty officers, if I remember correctly, only four of whom had seen service at the front. The amount paid out in salaries per month was $4,000, of which something like $800 was paid to returned soldiers, and the general in charge of the staff also drew his salary out of that $4,000. Obviously, the returned soldiers of that district were not getting the positions to which they were entitled. At the beginning of this session I put another question on the Order Paper with reference to the headquarters staffs, but through delay from some cause or another, I have not received an answer yet. From the information that I have obtained here and there, however, I have come to the conclusion that most of the district staffs are in the same position as Quebec. There has been a slight improvement, I am told, since last year, but not to the extent there should have been. I do not like to bother the minister about this all the time, but I really think that the people of this country expect good staff positions to be given to returned soldiers.

9 p.m.

Major-General MEWBURN: Since I have been Minister of Militia and Defence I have not made any permanent appointments in the Militia Department, and so far as I am concerned every appointment that is made will be given to a man who has seen overseas service. With respect to the officers who have been employed and are employed to-day on district staffs through the period of demobilization, I am only too glad to retain the officers who have done faithful work during this war. A large number of officers have been unjustly abused for holding down what is called Government or militia jobs who were unable to go overseas. In the early period of the war a great injustice was done to some of our Canadian soldiers. When the war broke out some of the officers and non-commissioned officers of the permanent corps were prohibited from going overseas; they were held here, and rightly so; and these men felt very keenly because they could not go. They were willing to take their chances, and it was not cowardice that kept them back. If we had not had officers and non-commissioned officers in Canada we should not have had troops in France. It was absolutely necessary that they should do the work which had to be done here, and I think all credit is due them. Some people say that because they have not been overseas they should get out. That is not the proper spirit. I know hundreds of officers in the country were disappointed at not being allowed to go overseas, and before and immediately after the signing of the Armistice I received the resignation of many officers who wanted to make room immediately for officers from overseas. We have had the greatest difficulty in getting officers to stay and help in the problem of demobilization. The work that is involved to-day with the return of the troops is of great magnitude. We have to deal with 40,000 to 45,000 troops every month, and every man has to be dealt with individually. We cannot simply let the men go home, but every account has to be made up as well as the paysheets and it is like a run on a bank. I think that the people will appreciate, even if they do not say so, the loyal faithful way in which these officers have done their work. As regards permanent appointments all these districts staffs will be reduced to the minimum, and in some districts there will not be more than four or five permanent positions which I hope will be filled by officers from the front. Officers coming back are not anxious to take up civil life again, and I have made it a point to see as far as possible every officer returning to Ottawa and urge him for his own good to get back into civil work, because military jobs will no longer exist for many of them in two or three years' time, and it will be much harder then than it is at present for the men to resume civil occupation. Every important position in the Militia Department should be given to a returned man. But why should this not apply to all the departments—Customs, Post Office, Railway and everything else? And if it is suggested that those in the Militia Department who have not been overseas should get out, the same principle should apply to the other departments. We have an organization of railway troops, the Canadian engineers, the finest that the world has ever known, men of outstanding deeds in the war. In the United States the army engineers take charge of public works, and why should the engineers not take charge of public works in Canada and build canals and highways. We all say we want to give the returned soldiers jobs. Well, why not let them carry on the public works of Canada? I believe the country would save money and get better work and the returned soldier would get a better show.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Has the department disposed of the rifle ranges at Rockcliffe?

Major-General MEWBURN: No.

Mr. LEMIEUX: In my opinion these were the most magnificent rifle ranges in all Canada. Some years ago the department bought a farm in the county of Carleton and new rifle ranges were built. I happened to visit them three or four years ago with my hon. friend from Russell (Mr. Murphy), and I observed that there had been a vast expenditure of money at that place. Of what use is this rifle range to the department at present? Is it intended to make use of it in the future?

Major-General MEWBURN: An hon. member asked me last year about the Connaught rifle ranges.

Mr. COPP: He will accept the answer now.

Major-General MEWBURN: The Connaught rifle range was a property bought by the Government about five miles from Britannia. It is probably one of the finest rifle ranges, I was going to say almost in the world. It was laid out for a very large range, and considerable work was done on it. It was never quite completed, all the work having stopped with the war, but it could be completed with a very small expenditure. It is within a mile of the train. The Rockliffe rifle range is a beautiful place and if shooting develops as in the past, and a great deal of interest is taken all over Canada in the Dominion Rifle Association, it will come into being. The Connaught rifle range would be the proper place to carry out rifle shooting. It is a magnificent property. It could also be utilized for camp purposes. But during the war it has lain dormant and no use has been made of it.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Might I suggest, in view of the expenditures which were made for the acquisition and equipment of these ranges, that it would be in the interest of the country to sell the other property as a pure venture in real estate? I can assure my hon. friend that the Rockcliffe rifle ranges are worth money. You could get a very fine price for that property, and in that way recoup yourself for what has been spent on the Connaught ranges.

Major-General MEWBURN: I quite agree with my hon. friend. I understand it was the intention that the Rockcliffe ranges should be put on the market. But during the war and up to 1917 the Rockcliffe ranges were used for instructional purposes for officers going overseas. If the Connaught ranges had been completed, I understand the other would have been on the market.

Mr. COPP: Is the land comprised within the Connaught ranges cultivated land?

The CHAIRMAN: If hon. gentlemen would allow us to pass the vote now under consideration, this discussion would be perfectly in order under the next item, which concerns rifle ranges.

Mr. COPP: The hon. gentleman brought this question up himself.

Mr. NICKLE: I happened to be up in the Railway Committee so I am not aware of what may have taken place since this item was called. There are one or two points to which I would like to draw the attention of the minister, as I come from one of the military district headquarters in Ontario. I quite agree with what the minister has said that there were a number of men on the district and headquarters staffs who would have been glad indeed to have gone overseas if the opportunity had offered, but the necessity of undertaking the mobilizing and training of the men who volunteered and who were subsequently called under the Military Service Act obliged them to remain in Canada, and without doubt they did good work. In the progress of the war very many men in connection with the district and headquarters staffs attained, as was natural, very rapid promotion, with the result that the emoluments of their offices were very largely increased. At the present time they have the exalted rank incidental to war activities. It occurs to me that when Canada returns to a peace basis it would be well that the minister and his deputies should be active to see that there is a readjustment of the staffs, so that the Consolidated Revenue Fund is not unduly called upon to meet large expenditures for men of exalted rank who will be discharging duties of no very onerous character and involving no very great responsibility. In other words, what I am asking is that the minister should proceed as he has been doing in connection with the demobilization, as promptly as possible, to clear the service of all superfluous officers of high rank, unless these gentlemen are prepared to accept much less remuneration than that to which their present rank would now entitle them. I believe the people were quite willing to give remuneration in proportion to the responsibilities borne during war time, but I do not believe that they will be content, particularly when the strain of the war debt comes upon them, to have a large number of men of high rank engaged on the district and headquarters' staffs paid salaries—unless the suggestion I am making to the minister is put into effect—not commensurate with the duties that they will then be called upon to perform.

Major-General MEWBURN: I explained that pretty fully before the hon. gentleman (Mr. Nickle) came in.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: How many officers are there at the headquarters staff at Halifax, district No. 6?

Major-General MEWBURN: There are on the actual headquarters staff only five officers. There are in addition the officers in connection with the hospital situation there, the dental service, and the officers in connection with the fortifications that we are closing up. There are also in connection with demobilization the dispersal areas and the army service units. They are all temporary appointments.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: How many are there altogether?

Major-General MEWBURN: I would not like to say. There is a garrison regiment, the discharge depot, and the officers in connection with transportation and disembarkation at Halifax and who are temporary.

Mr. PECK: In the event of an officer of high rank, who had served in the army and who in the olden times had belonged to the permanent force being assigned to a military district, I presume that his salary would not be reduced?

Major-General MEWBURN: That is a difficult problem. There is no provision in the law for dealing with a case of that kind. Take the case of a Major General commanding a division in the field, or a permanent corps officer; when he comes home the only appointment he can get is at headquarters here or command of a military district. I am afraid that such men will have to come and take the salary of pre-war days unless Parliament is willing to increase these salaries. They would not receive the Canadian Expeditionary Force pay and allowances, because the pay and allowances will cease at the conclusion of the war. I appreciate the position of a lot of these officers who have attained high rank at the front, who have rendered distinguished services and who have commanded divisions in the field.

Mr. PECK: There are only three or four such cases?

Major-General MEWBURN: There are to my knowledge, three who have been Generals in the field and they are entitled to the first consideration. But there is no provision in the Militia Act authorizing us to deal with their cases. To-day they are drawing the pay and allowances of the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Mr. PECK: At present the commander of a military district is engaged for only three or four years?

Major-General MEWBURN: The usual tenure of command is four years. There is nobody in any military district who has a permanent appointment.

Mr. POWER: Is there no special allowance for a G.O.C. of a district?

Major-General MEWBURN: His pay and allowance covers everything. The Canadian Expeditionary Force pay and allowance overseas are greater than those of peace times here. In the permanent corps there were certain allowances.

Mr. PETER McGIBBON: Is it possible for some of the medical men in the Canadian Army Medical Corps to be released in order to procure the positions which are going to be created in connection with the Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment? I believe that most of these appointments are being made from amongst civilian practitioners for the very good reason that others are not available.

Major-General MEWBURN: That is one of our most difficult problems. I would not like to make the positive statement, but as near as our estimates can indicate we figure that we ought to be pretty well through with our hospitalization work in connection with the soldier patients about next February. I would not like to state that positively. The Civil Re-establishment work will go on for a great many years. At the time of the armistice our casualties overseas were 45,000. We brought back a large number of patients for treatment in our hospitals, and it was a most difficult problem to figure out our requirements. We estimate that some time about the first of May 18,000 Canadian patients will have been brought back to Canada. That indicates that the number is being reduced very rapidly. After that I do not think there will be more than 14,000 to bring back. They are gradually recovering; in fact, they are recovering more rapidly than we expected. They are coming out of the hospitals and going back to civilian life. Therefore, the medical profession, those magnificent men who went overseas, and even those who served in Canada in the hospitals, giving up their private practices in order to do so, are naturally anxious to get back and pick up their practices or to get some employment with the pension commissioners, or with the Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment Commission, which will be of a more permanent nature. We are endeavouring to cope with that situation and to release these medical officers as rapidly as it is possible to do so. We do not want to retain a medical officer one minute longer than we must. A large percentage of the medical officers and members of the dental profession are staying on out of a pure sense of loyalty to duty, in order to look after the patients in the hospitals. It is a most difficult problem, and it is most embarrassing for us to have to ask these men to continue. They are working for a mere pittance compared with the emoluments of their private practices, and although they are most anxious to get back and pick up their work, they are staying on the job simply because they think it is their duty to the returned soldiers who have been wounded.

Mr. BOYCE: Does that include the Connaught rifle range?

Major-General MEWBURN: I do not think that has anything to do with the rifle ranges.

Mr. BOYCE: I find here:

For grants to artillery and rifle associations,—

Am I out of order?

The CHAIRMAN: No, sir.

Mr. BOYCE: The Connaught rifle range is one of the finest properties in that section of the country, and I suppose that about half a million to a million dollars has been spent on it. At the present time it is used as a cattle range. There are something over 2,000 acres in this property let at a rental of 50 cents an acre. That is a very small sum of money for such a large piece of land. I only discovered that after a great deal of trouble. I also discovered that the department employs a caretaker to look after the property at $1,200 a year, and as it is only getting about $900 in return it seems to me not to be a very paying speculation. I do not think it is very much to the credit of the country to keep such a large tract of land for the benefit of a few cattle dealers. That property could be laid out as one of the best rifle ranges on the North American continent. Why does not the department rent the land to some farmers? A farmer tried last year to rent it, but he was turned down. Those few cattle dealers have been making a fortune fattening cattle on that range, and I think it is time something was done to stop this mismanagement. But that is not the worst part of it. I went several times to try to get some person a job and was asked: Was he a returned soldier? If not, he could not get the job. Is there a returned soldier on the job now?

Major-General MEWBURN: No; there is to be one.

Mr. BOYCE: Why does not the department put a returned soldier on it? It is giving a man who is not a returned soldier $1,200 a year for doing nothing. I was turned down last year on this item, I was told I was out of order, and I was beginning to think I would be out of order tonight, but I was determined to press my question. I hope the gentleman in charge of the department will see that something is done to improve this condition of affairs.

Major-General MEWBURN: I understand the range is let for grazing purposes. I did not appoint the careteaker, but I gave instructions some time ago for the appointment of a returned soldier directly the present man's contract is up. I am very glad the hon. gentleman has drawn my attention to the matter, but it had been already dealt with and the change he suggests is going to be made.

Mr. BOYCE: What are you doing with the timber?

Major-General MEWBURN: I do not think there is any intention to cut the timber. We do not know for what purpose we may require the property.

Mr. BOYCE: Some timber was cut down for firewood last winter.

Major-General MEWBURN: A certain amount of fallen timber was taken by the Militia Department last winter and used in various barracks for fuel.

Mr. BOYCE: I have it on the best authority that a hundred cords of good green standing trees were cut.

Mr. DEVLIN: There are some fine farms over there.

Mr. COPP: I could not hear all my hon. friend (Mr. Boyce) was saying, and he might have been giving to the minister the information I want to get. What money has been expended so far on this rifle range?

Major-General MEWBURN: I could not give exact figures now, but I think about $780,000 up to 1916.

Mr. COPP: And the work was not completed, was it?

Major-General MEWBURN: No. I think the balance of the contract at the time work was stopped was something like $40,000. It was stopped in 1916.

Mr. COPP: Has the land been cultivated by any person, and have any returns been received by the department from the sale of crops.

Major-General MEWBURN: I understand the only revenue derived is about $960 for grazing rights; there is no land cultivated.

Mr. COPP: Was it let by tender to one individual or more?

Major-General MEWBURN: I understand three or four tenders were received. The highest tender was accepted.

Mr. COPP: How many years has that been going on?

Major-General MEWBURN: Two years ago I believe, and the rights have been renewed.

Mr. COPP: I have not exact figures, but I understand a large quantity of valuable timber was cut and carried away by others than the Militia Department or any other department of the Government.

Major-General MEWBURN: I understand that the only timber cut was cut and utilized by the Militia Department in connection with one or two camps. I do not know that any good sound timber was cut.

Mr. BOYCE: That property includes 500 acres of the finest land in that part of the country, and I think advantage ought to be taken of it.

Mr. COPP: I would like to know if there is any correspondence in the department with regard to the mismanagement of this property?

Major-General MEWBURN: I would not say there is none, but none has been brought to my personal attention.

Mr. BELAND: Mr. Chairman, how many rifle ranges are maintained in the Dominion? A range was established a few years ago at the instance of the Megantic Rifle Association. It is situated in my own riding, although the members of the association live in the county of Compton. I attach special importance to this range, because on the day that it was opened I was invited by the members of the association to be present, and, although I never before had held a rifle in my hand, I demonstrated, by recording a bull's-eye at six hundred yards what a simple art the handling of a rifle is. Is this range still being maintained?

Major-General MEWBURN: I cannot say off-hand: probably it is a regimental rifle range. There is a range in every military district, in some cases more than one. In some parts of Canada rifle-ranges are organized in connection with militia units and maintained on leased private property.

Permanent force, $2,575,000.

Mr. POWER: Is the permanent force not now part of the Canadian Expeditionary Force?

Major-General MEWBURN: The permanent force pay and allowances have, during the war, been paid out of this vote.

Mr. POWER: Was not an Order in Council passed last summer or autumn to the effect that every unit in Canada was to be part of the Canadian Expeditionary Force?

Major-General MEWBURN: They are all part of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, but the permanent force has always been kept on separate pay and allowances.

Mr. POWER: Is it intended to keep up the permanent force as it has been during the war?

Major-General MEWBURN: We hope to be able to build up a permanent force of 5,000. If that is done, the amount of this vote will have to be increased in the Supplementary Estimates.

[Major-General Mewburn.]

Mr. EDWARDS: I assume that the pay and allowances of the permanent force would include pay and allowances to permanent officers located in Ottawa?

Major-General MEWBURN: It would include a few of them here.

Mr. EDWARDS: It is said that some of these officers who were too old to go overseas, or who, at all events, were required here, changed their uniforms to khaki when the war broke out and began to receive subsistence allowance, field allowance, and so on. Perhaps there is a good explanation for that, but it does not occur to me.

Major-General MEWBURN: During the war these men got this extra field allowance. A great many of them should have had their pay doubled, considering the hours that they worked. The men at district headquarters worked day in and day out, Saturdays, Sundays and nights. Last week the staff at headquarters worked until midnight Saturday night, and all day Sunday without going home to lunch —and they do not ask extra duty pay. There is very little criticism of officers working on Canadian Expeditionary Force rates of pay and getting this field allowance.

Mr. EDWARDS: I have no doubt that these men were doing practically double the work that they did in peace times, and were entitled to more pay. Perhaps this was the proper way to give them increased remuneration; it does not strike me that it is the proper way. For instance, the Department of Justice wanted to increase the pay of a certain man connected with the department, and they could think of no other way of doing it than that of making him a lieutenant and having him draw a lieutenant's pay as well as the salary of his official position in the department. That looks like a roundabout way of doing the thing; it looks as if there was an attempt to cover something up. If a man deserves an increase in pay, give it to him in a straight and above board manner. I do not say that these officers were getting more than they should, but I do not see the necessity of giving them consideration by sending around a roast of beef or bag of potatoes and calling it rations or subsistence allowance or something of that kind. It looks to the ordinary layman as a way of getting graft.

Major-General MEWBURN: The practice which has been followed, has prevailed in the army for a great many years.

Mr. EDWARDS: Yes, and there has been a certain amount of graft in the army for a number of years, too.

Mr. COCKSHUTT: Do I understand the minister to say that we have a permanent force at the present time of 2,000 to 3,000 ?

Major-General MEWBURN: The strength is a little over 3,000, and we hope to build it up to 5,000, the establishment authorized by the Militia Act.

Mr. COCKSHUTT: Under present conditions, a permanent force of 5,000 men for Canada is the least that any one should contemplate. I do not know what our responsibilities may be in the matter of the league of nations; perhaps the President of the Council (Mr. Rowell) can tell us. I understand that the United States have announced that they are prepared to organize a standing army of 500,000 men, if necessary, in order that they may take upon themselves their share of the responsibility of policing the world. Canada may be called upon to do a little of that from time to time, and surely the modest estimate the minister gives for the permanent force should be attained in the very near future. We have excellent material coming back from overseas at present, and amongst those men and officers will certainly be found some who desire to follow soldiering as a career. I trust the minister will get at least 5,000 men as soon as possible, and that they will be maintained as a permanent force in Canada, so that we may preserve our self-respect as a very humble member in the great League of Nations that is being proclaimed as practically the millennium of the world. After all, whether the League is an ideal, or something of a concrete formation, its ultimate resort will evidently be physical force, and we cannot expect to maintain the position of Canada in the League of Nations unless we have at least a few men upon whom we can call, who are, at any rate, ready for eventualities, I am heartily in accord with the prospect that the minister holds out, that we shall have 5,000 officers and men in the permanent force in the near future—and in my judgment it cannot come too soon.

Mr. POWER: Will the minister explain the procedure as regards purchasing provisions and supplies?

Major-General MEWBURN: Everything is done through the War Purchasing Commission.

Salaries and wages—for pay of caretakers, messengers, barrack labourers, boat crews at Halifax, engineers and firemen for the drill halls, and all other civil employees in the districts not provided for elsewhere, $260,000.

Mr. McKENZIE: What does this cover?

Major-General MEWBURN: It covers salaries and wages of caretakers, messengers and so on in the various military districts, at the dock yards at Halifax, and also in the barracks and hospitals throughout the Dominion. For instance, it includes all the caretakers at the rifle ranges.

Surveys, $35,000.

Mr. CASGRAIN: What are these surveys?

Major-General MEWBURN: They are military topographical surveys made all over Canada. The item has been gradually cut down, and we hope to get the work completed eventually. Salaries in connection with this work amount to about $24,500; transport and sundry expenses in the field and maintenance, $3,700; freight and express, $130; miscellaneous, $870.

Mr. POWER: On what scale are the maps?

Major-General MEWBURN: One inch to the mile. The total area surveyed amounts to 28,000 square miles.

Mr. COPP: What is the purpose of these surveys?

Major-General MEWBURN: To prepare a regular military topographical map, showing the water features; the boundaries of counties, townships and cities; the timber, and other features of military value. The maps, while ostensibly for military purposes, are most complete and can be utilized for almost any other purpose.

Mr. COPP: Are they sent out promiscuously?

Major-General MEWBURN: No.

Mr. COPP: Are they filed in the department?

Major-General MEWBURN: It would not be in the public interest to distribute them, but they are always available.

Mr. COPP: I cannot see what advantage they are to military officers if they are filed away in the department, and if the maps are of public importance they ought to be made public.

Major-General MEWBURN: It certainly would not be in the public interest to distribute these military maps.

Transport and freight, $25,000.

Mr. CANNON: Can the minister explain why the transport of the staff is estimated at $15,000 and the transport of the permanent force, which would include the whole permanent force except the officers, at only $10,000? Apparently it costs more to transport the officers than the rest of the army.

Major-General MEWBURN: We have cut the item down by $10,000. It is to cover travelling and other expenses in connection with transport between the different districts. A lot of shipments are made between the different districts.

Mr. CANNON: But my point is this: How does the minister figure out that it is going to cost more to transport the officers than the rest of the army?

Major-General MEWBURN: The men are not moving from one station to another as the officers are.

Mr. CANNON: It does not include the transport of a battalion to a training camp?

Major-General MEWBURN: Oh, no.

Training areas, $35,000.

Mr. POWER: In what district are these training areas?

Major-General MEWBURN: We do not propose spending very much this year. It is estimated that $900 will cover the cost of the site at North Sydney required for defence work. The site at Beaumont was selected early in August, 1914. This item is mainly to cover unforeseen expenditures in connection with the training areas, and there will be no particular expenditure on the training areas themselves.

10 p.m.

Mr. CANNON: I judge from the minister's answer that the department does not intend to buy any more property around Valcartier camp.

Major-General MEWBURN: No.

Mr. CANNON: Is that camp going to be closed down?

Major-General MEWBURN: I would not like to say it is going to be closed. I hope it will come into being again, because it is one of the best camps in Canada.

Miscellaneous—amount required to pay Consular officers abroad for services, $300.

Mr. CANNON: Is this to pay our own Consuls? I understand we have Consuls now.

Mr. ROWELL: No, Canada has not her own Consular officers. This item is simply to cover the expenses that may be incurred by a Consul in some foreign country in procuring information requested by this Government. This item is similar to last year's. It is to pay the Consular officers appointed by Great Britain to whom we might write to procure information on certain specific matters, the procuring of which would entail some small expenditure.

Mr. CANNON: If they are officers of the British Government, should not the British Government pay them? Why should we add to their salary?

Mr. ROWELL: I speak from a very general knowledge of the matter, but I understand that this is not compensation for their services, but to repay small expenses they may have incurred in procuring information for us.

Mr. CANNON: Can the minister give the House a concrete example?

Mr. ROWELL: I cannot to-night, but I shall be glad to get one. However, the item is very small.

Mr. CANNON: But the principle seems to be bad. For instance, if the Canadian Government has certain work to perform through the British Embassy in Washington, would the minister maintain that this Government should pay for services rendered by officers of the British Embassy?

Mr. ROWELL: No. I have already said that that was not the character of the expenditure. It is simply to provide for the payment of expenses incurred by a Consular officer at our request.

Mr. JACOBS: I think there ought to be some reciprocity between the two Governments. Suppose we obtain information for the British Government, do we charge them for the expenses incurred? They would only be trifling amounts.

Mr. ROWELL: This vote is only for a trifling amount.

Mr. JACOBS: The point I wish to make is this: If the British Government asked us to procure certain information we would surely do that without exacting from them the small outlay entailed.

Mr. ROWELL: There would be no charge for services rendered, but if an expenditure was made by us at the request of the British Government I presume an account would be rendered. If the British Government incurs an expense at our request, I presume an account would be rendered, and it would be paid out of this small appropriation.

Mr. CANNON: But the minister must have some facts on which this estimate is based. Why should we vote this $300?

Mr. ROWELL: It is the same amount as last year. If my hon. friend wishes the item to stand I am willing, and I will get him a concrete example.

Mr. Béland carried.

Salaries and expenses of the Paris Agency, $28,000.

Hon. Mr. ROWELL: Canada is represented in Paris by a Canadian Commissioner, Mr. Philippe Roy, who has charge of the office there and is rendering very efficient service. I think it was wise to open a Canadian office in Paris, and I believe it is being very satisfactorily administered by the present commissioner. Owing to the increased cost of living I expect it will be necessary to bring down a supplementary estimate making some further provision for the expenses of the Paris office. The vote is the same as last year.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I agree with what my hon. friend says in regard to the Paris office. In former years we had but a small office, and although the incumbent, Mr. Fabre, was a man of very great attainments, owing to the small amount which he had at his disposal for the maintenance of the office he could not do very much. There has been a great improvement, however, since the appointment of Senator Roy who has undoubtedly rendered most valuable service to the country. All our public men who have visited France during the last four years can testify to his ability and his earnestness in looking after the interests of Canada in Paris. He is a splendid representative, a man of great education, and, what is more, he is a business man. I think he will play an important part in developing our trade with France. I have read in the Revue France-Amérique and in other journals some of the speeches delivered by Mr. Roy at meetings of business men in France, and I was proud of our representative there. Evidently the cost of living in Paris as well as in London, Brussels, and elsewhere on the continent has doubled if not trebled, and I am glad to hear the President of the Privy Council state that he will see that our representative and his staff are treated fairly. Formerly the office was on rue de Rome, a by-street of Paris. Today, however, it is on the Boulevard des Capucins in a conspicuous situation, standing as a striking advertisement of Canada. I understand that the interior appointments of the office are modern and up-to-date and are a credit to the country.

Allowance to Mr. W. J. Stewart, Chief Hydrographer, for services performed under Order in Council of the 19th October, 1912, in relation to questions under consideration by the International Joint Commission, during the year 1919-20, $1,000.

Mr. CANNON: What was this Order in Council?

Mr. ROWELL: Under the treaty between the United States and Great Britain under which the International Joint Commission was appointed, the commissioner is authorized to investigate and consider questions relating to boundary matters between the United States and Canada. Mr. Stewart is one of the experts of the department here and is entrusted with special duties as adviser to the Canadian Section of the International Joint Commission. In regard to a question which arose last year with reference to water-power, Mr. Stewart investigated the whole matter on behalf of the Canadian section of the commission in order to inform them of the facts from the engineering and scientific standpoint. I am advised that he is a very capable man, and is rendering efficient service in protecting Canadian interests in this important regard.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Would the minister be good enough to lay on the Table as soon as possible the award or judgment which was rendered by the commission on this question of the St. Lawrence water-power? He knows what award I am referring to. Yesterday I brought up the question, and the Minister of Railways stated that the arrangement was that the company in question would be allowed to exploit that water-power during five years after the war. I do not object to the exploitation of that water-power on a basis which would be acceptable to both Canada and the United States, but I would not like any particular industry to have a monopoly of the power. The judgment, which I think has been published in book form would be very useful for future reference.

Mr. ROWELL: I shall endeavour to lay it on the Table to-morrow. My present recollection of the judgment differs slightly from the view given by the Minister of Railways and my hon. friend, but it is no use discussing it until we have the actual order here.

Mr. COPP: Is Mr. Stewart a regular employee of the Government?

Mr. ROWELL: I believe he is, although I am not familiar with the particular branch of the work he is engaged in.

Mr. MOWAT: Mr. W. J. Stewart was a distinguished graduate of the Royal Military College, and for about thirty years he has been engaged in work of this nature.

Mr. COPP: What department is he working in?

Mr. ROWELL: I am told that he is in the Department of Naval Affairs, but I am not sure.

Mr. COPP: This is a special allowance. But what does he do, and what is his regular salary?

Mr. ROWELL: In the absence of the Minister of Naval Affairs I cannot say what his work in the other department is. I can only speak as to his work in this department, which is undoubtedly very important and valuable. All those who have to do with Mr. Stewart have spoken in the highest terms of the service he is rendering on these important questions.

Mr. COPP: I have no doubt of that, and I am willing to accept the statement of the minister and of the other hon. gentleman in regard to this distinguished man. But that does not give us the information we desire. If this man is well paid by the Government for doing regular work and this is in his regular work, I do not see why, because he is distinguished, we should vote an extra allowance. If he has done extra work for which he is entitled to be paid, let us know what it is and we will be prepared to consider the question.

Mr. ROWELL: This is not a new allowance. On the general principle I am in accord with what the hon. gentleman has said; I think it is wiser that officials should be paid one salary only. But here is a case where an officer has been in receipt of a salary from two departments. He has been dividing his time between the two. Had he not been receiving these amounts from these two departments, and had he been devoting himself to the work of one department only I have no doubt that his salary would have been increased. The practice has been for each department to pay him a certain salary.

Mr. COPP: Has this been done for more than one year? What my hon. friend says may be absolutely correct he may be getting a salary from both departments. But I feel that we should call a halt in regard to a system of this kind. Every once in a while we have some minister getting up and slipping through a $1,000 for a man here, and $500 for another there, and we know nothing about it. Members of the House should have some information in regard to what these men are getting from the public treasury. If officials are not paid enough, I do not believe there is a man on this side of the House or the other but is perfectly willing to give them what they are entitled to.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: Why has the minister delayed the payment of this item since 1912?

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friend is not correct in that. The payment this year is the same as last year. This is the allowance he gets for the service he renders to this department each year. According to the Civil Service list he gets a salary of $4,000 in the Naval Service department; with this $1,000 his total salary is $5,000.

Mr. COPP: He has been getting this salary since 1912?

Mr. ROWELL: All I can say is that he got it last year. I understand he has been getting this salary for some years.

Mr. JACOBS: Why is this not included in the Estimates of the Naval Service Department?

Mr. ROWELL: Because this work is not done for the Naval Service Department but for the International Joint Commission which comes under the department of External Affairs.

Mr. JACOBS: Does the Government pay the cost of that commission?

Mr. ROWELL: It pays the cost of the Canadian section.

Mr. JACOBS: The appointments to the commission, I understand, are made by the British Government.

Mr. ROWELL: The appointments are made by the British Government on the nomination of the Canadian Government.

Mr. LEMIEUX: One of the last acts of the Laurier Government was the appointment of Mr. Aimé Geoffrion, K.C., as one of the commissioners. The recommendation was made and sent by the Canadian Government to London in order to get the ratification of that nomination by the British authorities. Meanwhile a storm passed over Canada and, unfortunately for this country, the Government which my hon. friend and myself supported so strenuously in 1911, was defeated. That was a very sorry day for Canada. A new Government came into office. The first thing that new Government did was to nullify the Order in Council recommending Mr. Geoffrion as one of the commissioners. His Majesty's Government was informed that the recommendation had been made in a moment of weakness, and they recommended Mr. T. Chase Casgrain, K.C., as commissioner. The Home Government accepted the recommendation of the Borden Government and Mr. Casgrain, who later on became Postmaster General, acted as commissioner. Then, when he was sworn in as a member of the Cabinet, he had to resign and his successor was Mr. P. B. Migneault, K.C., who was appointed to that same position following the same appropriate procedure. Then Mr. Migneault was appointed a few months ago a judge of the Supreme Court of Canada. Since that time there has been a vacancy on the International Waterways Commission. I am informed that the Minister of Justice (Mr. Doherty), on behalf of the Canadian Government, offered the appointment to Mr. F. J. Bisaillon, K.C. Mr. Bisaillon is one of the leading King's Counsel in Canada. He has been engaged in all the big legal cases and is well known throughout the country as a man of great ability. He certainly would be a credit to our country on that commission. It appears that the Minister of Justice informed Mr. Bisaillon that he had been recommended by this Government to the Home Government in succession to Judge Migneault, but since then nothing has been done and the vacancy is there. I hold no brief for Mr. Bisaillon, who is a political opponent, and than whom no one certainly is more deserving of recognition by the Union Government because he has always been—

Mr. McMASTER: May I interrupt the hon. gentleman? This Government has abolished patronage, and such an appeal as this is absolutely beside the point and rather insulting to hon. gentlemen opposite.

Mr. LEMIEUX: This is not an appointment by this Government; it is an appointment by the British Government on the recommendation of the Canadian Government. Mr. Bisaillon was one of the lonely old Conservatives who in the last general election gave a generous support to Union Government. He was told that he had been recommended by the Minister of Justice, and that the recommendation had been forwarded to London, yet nothing has been done. Could my hon. friend enlighten me on the subject?

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friend, I think, has been misinformed. No recommendation has been so far made to the Imperial Government to fill the vacancy due to the resignation of Mr. Justice Migneault. I imagine that none will be made until the return of the Prime Minister, as it is a matter for the Department of External Affairs.

Mr. CANNON: I would like to know how many sittings took place last year of the Commission and what kind of work the gentleman did for whom this vote is asked, and how long he was engaged on it?

Mr. ROWELL: This gentleman is not a member of the Commission; he is its technical adviser. I cannot state how many sittings of the Commission were held, although I recall a number. His work consists of looking into any question that comes before the Commission, and it may involve a large amount or a small amount of work, depending on the character of the question; but if he is not working on this branch he is working on the other. His total salary is in respect of his position with the Naval Department and his work on this Commission.

Mr. CANNON: We are paying this gentleman $4,000 a year in the Department of Naval Affairs, and $1,000 a year in this department. I would like to know exactly what he did to be entitled to the $1,000. If he was working exclusively upon naval matters he was getting $4,000 a year, and was not entitled to a cent more. If he was working all the time for this Commission, and got only $1,000, he was not getting enough. But you cannot have a man in two positions if he can only occupy one at a time. I would like to know whether his work is done in Ottawa or in Washington, and how much time he devotes to it every year.

Mr. ROWELL: Of course, my hon. friend will understand that I cannot give him those details to-night, but I can tell him the general character of the work. I know during the past year this gentleman made a study of the St. Lawrence power situation and reported on the application of the American company to build a dam, and attended hearings of the commission when the matter came up. That came under my personal observation. Any other matters of a similar character he would advise upon and would carry on his work whenever the necessities of the case required. I imagine that the matter I spoke of involved his visiting the site of the proposed dam and looking into the situation, and attending a hearing in Washington and a hearing in Montreal. When not engaged in this particular work he was engaged in work for the other department.

Mr. DUFF: Can the minister tell us what particular work he does for the Naval Department to earn $4,000?

Mr. ROWELL: His title indicates the character of the work he is doing. Personally, I have no knowledge of his work there.

Mr. JACOBS: If the vacancy on the International Joint Commission which has been referred to still exists, how it it possible for the commission to carry on its work? I understand the personnel consists of three American and three Canadian commissioners. It would be manifestly unfair if this commission sat with only two Canadian members in attendance as against three American. Have any sittings been held since Mr. Justice Migneault retired?

Mr. ROWELL: I believe some sittings have been held, but no matters of a controversial character arose where there might be a division of opinion.

Mr. JACOBS: Sittings have been held with three American and only two Canadian commissioners present, although three Canadians were appointed?

Mr. ROWELL: Yes; but, as I say, no question of a controversial character has come up where full representation was necessary.

Mr. JACOBS: Could the minister tell us when the vacancy will be filled?

Mr. ROWELL: I have already stated that it will be filled when the Prime Minister returns. I do not expect it will be dealt with until then.

Mr. CANNON: Is the absence of the Prime Minister the only reason why it is not filled?

Mr. ROWELL: It is in the Prime Minister's Department and is a matter for him to deal with.

Mr. JACOBS: The Prime Minister at the present moment is just in the place where the appointment is to be made. I understand it is made from London.

Amount required to meet expenses of the Lake of the Woods Technical Board and the Lake of the Woods Control Board, $6,000.

Mr. ROWELL: This is a board constituted as a result of an investigation carried on by the International Joint Commission to regulate the waters of the Lake of the Woods in order to conserve the interests of navigation and to prevent the waters falling below a certain level. As my hon. friend is aware, the Lake of the Woods is an international waterway, and people living on the American side have rights in it. We have to maintain the level, but as that level is influenced by the outlet, which is wholly in Canadian territory, and is not the work of an international commission, we regulate the level in our territory, but we are doing it pursuant to the orders of the International Joint Commission.

Mr. CANNON: Who are the commissioners?

Mr. ROWELL: The commission consists of two members appointed by the Dominion Government and two appointed by the Government of Ontario. Its duties are to look after the level of the waters of the Lake of the Woods and the proper conservation and control of the waters in the interests of navigation, water powers, etc., and to make regulations for the control of the same. The members of the commission appointed on behalf of the Dominion Government are: W. J. Stewart, who is chairman, and J. B. Challies, secretary.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: Is that the same Mr. Stewart?

Mr. ROWELL: Yes. This is not for salaries; it is for expenses in connection with the work of the Commission.

Mr. CANNON: How much did Mr. Stewart get last year as a member of this board?

Mr. ROWELL: Nothing. The Commission was not constituted until January of the present year.

Mr. CANNON: How much of this vote goes to Mr. Stewart, and how much to the secretary?

Mr. ROWELL: None of it goes to Mr. Stewart. As I have said, this vote is purely for the expenses of the Commission.

Mr. CANNON: What expenses?

Mr. ROWELL: They must do this work through men employed for the purpose.

Mr. CANNON: Who are the men?

Mr. ROWELL: I cannot give my hon. friend that information at present.

Mr. CANNON: When this item was prepared by the officers of the department surely they knew exactly what it covered. The minister should have this information and give it to the Committee.

Mr. ROWELL: If my hon. friend thinks it important to have the details, I shall be very glad to get them from the officers of the department.

Item stands.

Canadian War Mission and Representation at Washington, $50,000.

Mr. ROWELL: When this item was up before, the member for Three Rivers (Mr. Bureau) and the member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux) asked for some information. If the leader of the Opposition (Mr. McKenzie) desires it, I will let this item stand, as the time has come when I said the Committee would rise.

Mr. McKENZIE: I do not want to obstruct my hon. friend's Estimates, but he does not seem to be as well informed as usual, and he might as well take a little more time to go over the items.

Mr. ROWELL: I can give my hon. friend information with regard to this one.

Mr. McKENZIE: We will have the happy anticipation of getting it at the next sitting.

Progress reported.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Rowell the House adjourned at 10.40 p. m.

Wednesday, April 30, 1919.

The House met at Three o'clock.

QUESTIONS.

(Questions answered orally are indicated by asterisks).

PORTRAITS OF CANADIAN GENERALS.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Guysborough):

1. Have any portraits of Canadian Generals been painted under the direction of the Government or any department thereof?
2. If so, what are the names of the generals?
3. What has been the outlay in connection with these portraits?

Hon. Mr. BURRELL:

1. No.
2 and 3. Answered by No. 1.

H.M.C.S. TUNA.

Mr. DUFF:

1. Were the boilers removed from H.M.C.S. Tuna before that vessel was sold as a bulk?
2. Were the condensers removed?
3. If not, how many remained on board at the time of the sale?
4. Were the pumps removed?
5. If not, how many remained on board?
6. What became of all the other equipment belonging to the ship?

Hon. Mr. MACLEAN:

1. No; owing to heavy expense entailed.
2 and 3. One condenser of no use to Service remained on board and one removed.
4 and 5. Two small pumps of no use to Service and not worth cost of removal remained on board, all other pumps removed.
6. Equipment of use to Royal Naval College of Canada was shipped to Esquimalt for use therein.

Equipment of use to Niobe was handed over to that vessel, remaining equipment was placed on deposit charge at Halifax dockyard.

WIRELESS OPERATORS IN NAVAL SERVICE.

Mr. DUFF:

1. Do wireless operators in the Naval Service now receive benefits of separation allowance?
2. If so, from what date?
3. Why was Separation Allowance not paid wireless operators from the commencement of the war?

Hon. Mr. MACLEAN:

1. Yes.
2. 1st November, 1918.
3. The Wireless Branch of the Naval Department is a permanent organization undertaking in peace time a commercial service and providing aid to navigation, and in war time providing wireless service for naval purposes.

At the outbreak of hostilities this service was placed on a war footing and the operators and staff were given a naval rank in the R.N.C.V.R. at rates of pay practically identical with those they were already receiving and they continued to carry out their duties as operators at the different stations as before.

In the summer of 1918 the increasing number of patrol vessels called for the detailing of a much greater proportion of operators for duty afloat and having regard to this and the increasing cost of living, it was considered desirable to authorize the payment of separation allowance for this branch of the service. The same was approved and placed in effect on 1st November, 1918

CANADIAN MISSION IN LONDON.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Guysborough):

1. Who is the chairman of the British War Mission?
2. Who compose this mission?

3. What are their duties?
4. When and how were they appointed?

Hon. Mr. MACLEAN:

1. Mr. Lloyd Harris is chairman of the Canadian Mission in London, to which it is assumed that this question refers.

2. Mr. Lloyd Harris. While no other members of the Canadian Mission have been appointed, Mr. Harris has the following Canadians associated with him: Mr. William C. Noxon, Toronto; Mr. R. J. Younge, Montreal; Mr. Hugh McColl, Ottawa, and Mr. Geo. J. Hearn.

3. To represent the Government of Canada in connection with the purchase and distribution of Canadian agricultural products and manufactured articles by governmental agencies appointed by the United Kingdom and other allied nations; and to keep the Canadian Government and its departments more directly in touch with such activities; and to render important service generally with the purpose of securing for the agricultural and other productions of Canada their appropriate share in the markets of the world during the period of reconstruction.

4. Mr. Lloyd Harris was appointed by Order in Council of November 8, 1918. The other persons above mentioned have been engaged by Mr. Harris.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS—PURCHSE OF COAL.

Mr. COPP:

1. What quantities of coal, if any, have been purchased for the Canadian National Railways since the 1st of April, 1919, from whom purchased, and at what price?

2. Is the Government aware that large numbers of miners and returned soldiers who are miners are at present out of employment because no demand for the product of the Maritime Province mines?

3. Is it the intention of the Government to use Maritime Province coal exclusively on the Eastern Division of said National Railways?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. The following companies have orders for daily deliveries of coal subject to price per ton to be fixed as a result of negotiations now pending:—

Dominion Coal Co.	580 tons.
Inverness Ry. & Coal Co.	250 "
Acadia Coal Co	740 "
Melford Coal Co.	33 "
Intercolonial Coal Mining Co.	450 "
Dominion Coal Co., Springhill	260 "
Maritime Coal Railway & Power	671 "

2. The Canadian National Railways are taking delivery of all coal that is required for the operation of the railway, and in fact, to help the temporary depression, a certain quantity is being stock-piled.

3. Negotiations are now pending between the Executive of the National Railways and the Mining Companies and if satisfactory prices can be arranged the National Railways will use Maritime coal, exclusively, on the Eastern Division.

MEDICAL OFFICER TO INDIANS.

Mr. GAUVREAU:

1. Who was appointed medical officer to the Indians of Cacouna and Riviere du Loup, following the decease of the late Dr. Kane, and by whom was the appointment made?

2. What representations were made to the Government respecting said appointment, and by whom were they made?

3. Why was not the medical officer, who had temporarily replaced Dr. Kane and had given treatment to the Indians upon request of the Cacouna Indian Agent, chosen?

4. Did the present incumbent apply for the position?

5. If not, by whom was he recommended?

6. Was not the present medical officer a Conservative candidate in the general elections of 1908 and 1911, and a Unionist candidate in the elections of 1917?

Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN:

1. Dr. Luc Lebel; the appointment was made by the Civil Service Commission.

2. The only communication this department is aware of is a letter from Mr. C. A. Gauvreau, M.P., who urged the appointment of Dr. Parrot. The department has no power to make appointments.

3. The Indian agent had no authority to engage a temporary medical officer, and none was engaged by the department.

4. Yes.

5. Answered by No. 4.

6. The department has no information on this subject.

MR. JUSTICE McLENNAN.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT:

1. Does Honourable F. S. McLennan receive a salary, fee or any other remuneration when acting as Deputy Judge of the Admiralty Court for the district of Montreal? If so, what amount has he been paid therefor since his appointment?

2. When was he appointed to the said position?

Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN:

1. Mr. Justice McLennan is paid not by the Government but under a general order of the Court, and the fees of the judge form a part of the taxed costs in each case. Amount of such fees since his appointment $1,787.

2. January 9, 1917.

CONTRACTS FOR CARS AND RAILS.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Guysborough):

Referring to the statement in the Canadian Official Record of December 17, 1918, that the Government had, during the year 1918, contracted for 8,500 freight cars and 100,000 tons of rails.

1. What are the names of the companies with which these contracts were made, and the rates paid, respectively?
2. What was the gross amount of these contracts?
3. How many of the said freight cars have been delivered?
4. How many tons of rails have been delivered?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. (a) For rails: Dominion Iron & Steel Company.

(b) Contract provided for determination of price by Minister of Railways and Canals; second quality rails to be 5 per cent less than first quality.

Settlement has been offered by the minister at $65 per gross ton for first quality and $61.75 per gross ton for second quality.

This price has not been accepted and payments to date have been made at rate of $55 per gross ton on account until price is setttled.

(c) For cars: Canadian Car and Foundry Company, National Steel Car Company, Eastern Car Company, Pressed Steel Car Company.

(d) Box cars, $2,750; flat cars, $2,370; coal cars, $3,179.50; refrigerator cars, $4,097; stock cars, $2,271; water service tank cars, $3,793.56; general water service tank cars, $3,926.

2. Dominion Iron and Steel Company, (Payments to date) $6,281,098.53; Canadian Car and Foundry Company, $15,461,720; National Steel Car Company $2,750,000; Eastern Car Company $3,944,475; Pressed Steel Car Company, $192,989.

3. 7,670 Freight cars delivered on April 15, 1919.

4. 98,954 gross tons first quality (No. 1); 15,247 gross tons second quality (No. 2), total, 114,201.

ASSISTANT REGISTRARS.

Mr. SEGUIN:

1. Is the Government aware that the majority of assistant registrars who were employed in the electoral division of L'Assomption-Montcalm, in connection with National Service Registration, in the month of June, 1918 have not yet been paid for their services?
2. If so, why have these accounts not been paid?
3. Will the Government pay the said accounts without further delay?

Mr. ROWELL:

1. No.
2. Answered by No. 1.
3. Answered by No. 1.

COST OF HUNDRED MILLION DOLLAR LOAN.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Guysborough):

Including interest, commissions,, exchange, and all other outlay of every description arising out of the loan of one hundred millions borrowed in New York, what per cent per annum will the said loan cost the country at the due date thereof?

Sir THOMAS WHITE: 6.90 per cent per annum.

FAIR WAGE OFFICER.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Guysborough):

1. Who is Fair Wage Officer for the province of Nova Scotia?
2. What is his salary?
3. Who recommended his appointment?
4. Has he jurisdiction over the whole province? If not, what part of it?

Mr. MACLEAN:

1. There has never been a fair wage officer assigned to Nova Scotia.

2, 3 and 4. Answered by No. 1.

PURCHASE OF STEAM SHOVELS FROM C.P.R.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Guysborough):

1. Did the Department of Militia purchase two steam shovels from the Canadian Pacific Railway for the use of the Canadian Overseas Corps in 1916?
2. If so, what was the price?
3. Who purchased them?
4. Were they new?
5. Who recommended the purchase of these shovels?

Major General MEWBURN:

1. Yes.

2. $6,500 each, with an extra charge of $2,030 for tools, extras and spare parts, $120 for painting, and $550 for freight. The total cost, including these items, was $7,940 for one shovel, and $7,760 for the other. The first cost of these shovels is stated to have been $13,000 each.

3. The Department of Militia and Defence, by authority of the War Purchasing Commission, and an Order in Council dated March 10, 1916.

4. No.

5. Colonel Maunsell, Director General of Engineer Services; Brig.-Gen. Elliot, Master-General of the Ordnance, and Lt.-Colonel C. W. P. Ramsay, Commanding Canadian Overseas Railway Construction Corps.

SEPARATION ALLOWANCE TO WIDOWED MOTHERS.

Mr. BOURASSA:

Does the Government intend to pay separation allowance to widowed mothers of soldiers who are aged and poor, and whose sole support was an only son before enlistment; and will said payments of separation allowance be made retroactive, notwithstanding the fact that the claim for said separation allowance was not made within the prescribed limit of sixty days after enlistment, in the following cases; (a) where the mother of the soldier could get no information regarding Orders in Council to the contrary, and (b) where she was unable to apply for said separation allowance?

Major General MEWBURN:

P.C. 3173 deals with Separation Allowance and provides for payment of Separation Allowance to widowed mothers, if soldier is sole support, and, in certain cases, if soldier is main support. This Order in Council specifies that application in the cases of widowed mothers must be made within 60 days after enlistment of the soldier. In any case when, for any reasonable cause, it can be shown that the mother could not make the application within 60 days, the case can be dealt with as a special application by the Pay and Allowance Board under P.C. 2801.

*Mr. LEMIEUX.

1. Is the Government aware, as stated in the Financial Post of the 26th instant, that Sir Clifford Sifton, K.C.M.G., has opened an office in London, England, in the same building as the Canadian Trade Mission, where he places orders on a two and a half per cent basis, and that he then floats Rumanian securities to a syndicate, paying cash for goods purchased, less the commission referred to?

2. Has the same privilege been given to other individuals or firms?

3. If so, will the Government give the names of such firms?

Sir THOMAS WHITE:

1. No.

2 and 3. Answered by No. 1.

CANADIAN SHIPS REQUISITIONED.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Guysborough):

1. How many Canadian registered ships were requisitioned by the Admiralty since August, 1914?

2. What was their gross tonnage?

3. In how many cases did the Admiralty secure the consent of the Canadian Government?

Hon. Mr. MACLEAN:

1. Five.

2. 11,543 tons.

3. One.

[Major-General Mewburn.]

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURNS.

Mr. PREVOST:

1. How many commissions have been appointed by the Government since the year 1914, to date, and for what purpose was each appointed?

2. How many members were there on each of said commissions, and what are their names?

*Mr. LEMIEUX:

How many conscientious objectors are still in jail for contravention of the Military Service Act?

RETURNS OF ENLISTED AND CONSCRIPTED MEN; ALSO MEDICAL OFFICERS.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT moved:

For a return showing: (a) The names of all the medical officers who joined the Canadian Expeditionary Force since the beginning of the war; (b) the length of service of each of the said officers, in England, France, Canada, or elsewhere; (c) the units in which they served, the date and length of service therein, and (d) the decorations which said officers respectively received from the Imperial Government, and the reasons given therefor, in each case.

Also,

For a return showing: (a) How many men voluntarily enlisted for service in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, and the number of men who were conscripted for service by virtue of the Military Service Act of 1917, respectively, belonging to each of the electoral divisions of the provinces of Ontario, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Manitoba, British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Alberta, Prince Edward Island, and the following electoral divisions of the province of Quebec, namely: Chambly-Vercheres, Hull, Jacques Cartier, Laurier-Outremont, Quebec South, St. Ann, St. Antoine, St. Laurent, St. George, Sherbrooke, Westmount, St. Henri, and Wright; (b) the number of men belonging to each of the above-mentioned electoral divisions who enlisted for service in the said Force from the 17th November, 1917, to the 17th December of the same year; (c) the number of soldiers belonging to each of above-mentioned electoral divisions who, at this period, were on the American continent, in the Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and on the continent of Europe, respectively.

Major-General MEWBURN: In regard to these motions, in so far as my department is concerned, I am most anxious to give the hon. gentleman all the information possible, but I fear he has put these motions in such a way that we will be unable to obtain the information. Regarding the portion of the motion under the heading of (b), the individual file of every officer will have to be searched and we will also have to get information from overseas which will take some considerable time. With regard to the second part of the motion we have no record as to the number of men belonging to each electoral division. To obtain that information it would be necessary to go through six hundred thousand files, and even then, I am afraid, it would not be accurate. During the present congested period it would require an enormous staff to compile and furnish the information requested, although I may say I am very anxious to give the hon. gentleman whatever details he may require that it is in my power to furnish.

Mr. ROBB: Then the minister does not object to the passing of the motion.

Major-General MEWBURN: I have no objection to the motion, I am simply pointing out that it is almost impossible to furnish the information asked for.

Sir THOMAS WHITE: The motion had better stand until the hon. member concerned is present.

Motion allowed to stand.

C.N.R.—TENDERS FOR COAL.

Hon. H. A. MACKIE (Edmonton East) moved for

For a return showing the tenders received for coal for the Canadian Northern Railway and Canadian National Railways, between 1st January, 1918, and 1st April, 1919, also a statement showing the tenders accepted during the same period, along with a statement of all tenders for coal (a) received, and (b) accepted, by the Grand Trunk Pacific since that road passed into the hands of a receiver.

Hon. J. D. REID (Minister of Railways): In reply to the hon. gentleman I should explain that tenders for coal for the Canadian Northern have been received within the last day or two, but the contracts have not yet been awarded. To bring down the tenders before the contract has been closed might interfere with the decision as to the disposition of the tenders. With respect to tenders for the Grand Trunk Pacific I shall have to ascertain whether I would be justified in laying those documents upon the Table without consulting the Judge of the Exchequer Court, seeing that the affairs of the railway are not now in the Government's hands but in the hands of a receiver.

Mr. MACKIE: With respect to the tenders that have not yet been accepted the minister is doubtless justified in withholding the information for the present, but where tenders have been considered by the Government and a contract awarded, I submit that the documents should be laid on the Table.

Mr. J. D. REID: The hon. gentleman must understand that I do not object to giving information so far as tenders for the Canadian Northern Railway system is concerned. I will do that as soon as the contract has been awarded. But with respect to the Grand Trunk Pacific I would not like to give the information without first consulting the Judge of the Exchequer Court who is acting for the receiver as to whether I would be justified in doing so or not.

Mr. SPEAKER: In the meantime the motion had better stand.

CANADIAN TRADE WITH NORTH EUROPE.

On the Orders of the Day:

Hon. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX (Maisonneuve): Might I draw the attention of the Acting Prime Minister to a despatch which appeared in yesterday's Gazette. I will simply quote the "title" of the article—pardon me I mean the "heading" because I understand that titles were abolished this morning by the Committee having that subject in charge—the heading is:

Canada barred from trade in North Europe
Reported U.S. put embargo on exports from American ports. Shipping Manipulated. Danes prevented from doing half a million dollars weekly trade here.

I would ask if the Acting Prime Minister knows anything about the embargo referred to, and what steps are being taken at Washington to remove it?

Hon. A. K. MACLEAN (Acting Minister of Trade and Commerce): On the ground of congestion in American Atlantic ports, owing largely to strikes, the United States Food Administration has refused transit to Canadian wheat and flour through United States ports for Northern European ports. Officially that is all the information which this Government has. A license for a shipment of Canadian flour via an American port to Denmark was requested a few days ago, and was refused on the ground I have just stated. The matter is under consideration with the authorities at Washington, and as the application of the Canadian milling industry is being supported by the Danish legation at Washington it may be reported on favourably.

Sir SAM HUGHES (Victoria): Has this reference to American, British, or Canadian bottoms, sailing from American ports?

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: To American bottoms.

BUOYS ON THE ATLANTIC COAST.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: The member for Lunenburg (Mr. Duff) yesterday asked a question in regard to the placing of buoys on the Atlantic coast. I was unable then to give the information for which he asked, but I would now like to read a memorandum prepared for me by the officials of the Marine Department in respect to the matter. The memorandum is as follows:

The buoys are being prepared and placed as fast as the buoy-laying steamer can handle them. The "Stanley" is to-day placing the Spry Bay Bell Buoy, Beaver Bell Buoy, Nixonmate Bell Buoy and on completion of this work will proceed to Louisburg to place the buoys in position in that harbour.

The buoys around Prince Edward Island and the Magdalen Islands are for the most part ready and will be placed just as soon as we can get a steamer around there to handle them.

MILITARY SERVICE DEFAULTERS.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. C. A. GAUVREAU (Temiscouata): Has the Acting Prime Minister brought to the attention of the Acting Minister of Justice the question that I put yesterday?

Sir THOMAS WHITE (Acting Prime Minister): The hon. gentleman can always depend upon my carrying out such a request. I did as he asked.

Mr. GAUVREAU: There is no answer forthcoming as yet.

Hon. ARTHUR MEIGHEN (Acting Minister of Justice): As the question has been passed to me it is virtually the same as question No. 13 on the Order Paper. If that is correct, all I can say is that the matter of introducing a Bill providing for the disfranchisement of defaulters is under immediate consideration, and a definite statement will be made to the House either on Friday or Monday.

ADMISSION TO GALLERIES OF HOUSE.

On the Orders of the Day:

Sir SAM HUGHES: I would draw attention to the fact that a great many visitors come to the House and finding their member otherwise engaged—I shall not say absent—are unable to obtain admission to the galleries. Now that the war is over and all danger of ministers being blown up by a bomb has passed, would it not be well to relax the existing rule and allow any free-born citizen of Canada who presents himself at the door to enter the building which he owns as much as we do.

Mr. SPEAKER: The matter will be taken under advisement. The great difficulty in connection with this Chamber is that the gallery is so small that after space has been reserved for the wives of members and others entitled officially to be present, there may be over congestion, but the suggestion of the hon gentleman is worthy of consideration.

Sir SAM HUGHES: It must be remembered that these are the days of democracy.

IMMIGRATION ACT AMENDMENT.

House again in Committee on Bill No. 52, to amend the Immigration Act, Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN: When the Committee rose yesterday at six o'clock we were considering clause 1 of the Bill, and the hon. member for South Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) had the floor.

Mr. DONALD SUTHERLAND: When the Committee rose at six o'clock yesterday I was dealing with the remarks of the hon. member for George Etienne Cartier (Mr. Jacobs) with reference to the alien enemy within our country. There are several thousand such alien enemies interned in Canada at the present time, and the hon. gentleman thought that on account of that fact no danger was to be apprehended. On the other hand I made the remark that I thought it would be in the public interest if these people could be sent back to the country from which they came as quickly as that could be arranged for. Under present conditions some difficulty may exist in that regard. I would point out, however, that this question is one that affects the country to such an extent that it is very important we should have a proper conception as to what the effect of this Bill is going to be on the future of Canada. If you contaminate a stream at its source that stream will be polluted throughout its entire course. The next few years will undoubtedly see a great many people coming into Canada from other countries, and therefore I am glad to see that the Government has taken steps to meet the conditions which will confront us in future by establishing a separate department of the Government, with a responsible minister in charge, to take care of the stream of immigration that is likely to enter the Dominion.

A Department of Public Health has also been established with a view to preventing the lowering of the standard of our people through undesirable immigration and otherwise. We cannot pay too much attention to questions of this kind. Many people who have come here in the past had little or no means; in fact I believe that in many instances assistance was granted to them by the provincial governments to enable them to reach this country. Ultimately they became good citizens. During the next few years the Government should see that immigration to Canada comes from Great Britain in so far as is possible. We as a part of the British Empire must have people who are actuated by the motives that actuate the people of the British Empire; our educational institutions must carry on with that object in view.

I was surprised at some of the remarks that were made with regard to the foreign element which have established themselves in large colonies in Canada, particularly in the Western Provinces. The minister told us that no effort had been made by previous Governments to do anything for these people after they came here. The member from Montreal (Mr. Jacobs) contended that with our splendid educational facilities, there should be no difficulty in taking care of the foreign element who come to this country. Unfortunately, our educational institutions are not of a uniform nature; in one province certain regulations prevail, and in another province we have something entirely different. If we are going to remain a part of the British Empire we should have national schools; children should not be permitted to attend schools where a foreign language is taught, and in which the fundamental principles of the British Empire are not properly set forth. So far as the constitution permits, the policy which I suggest should be adopted and carried out in its entirety.

Mr. GAUVREAU: That is altogether nonsensical.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: Some reference was made to an Imperial policy. No doubt a policy will be formulated as a result of the negotiations which are taking place between the representatives of the various colonies, and the Motherland. It is not possible to anticipate what will be done, but this Bill will enable the Government to put into effect the conclusions arrived at as a result of those negotiations.

Reference has been made to the splendid reforms that have taken place among the people who have come into some of our provinces. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Jacobs) said that if the Austrians who have settled in Western Canada had not come here and become established in these communities they might have fought against us during the war, and that it was a splendid thing to have brought them here and thus to have prevented them from joining the ranks of the enemy at the front. If you stop to consider, you will be able to form an estimate of the deplorable influence exercised upon the standard of our citizenship by the attitude of those who are not and have not been in sympathy with us during this war. I remarked at the outset that the standard of a nation's greatness must be measured by the character of their people. Canada, with her tremendous undeveloped resources and her great possibilities for the future, must see that none but the most desirable people are permitted to come within her bounds.

The hon. gentleman also complimented the late Liberal Government upon the work which they did in the matter of immigration. I have my own opinion with regard to what was done in this respect while hon. gentlemen opposite were conducting the affairs of the country. I do not know that I could better illustrate the methods pursued by hon. gentlemen opposite than by reading a letter written by the notorious W. T. R. Preston, an officer of the then Liberal Government, who was at the head of the Emigration Department in the Old Country, with headquarters 17 Victoria street, London S.W., on October 18, 1901—a time when the peopling of Western Canada and even of Ontario by immigration was at its zenith—to an official of the Ontario Government, then a Liberal Government. The letter is as follows:—

Private.

My dear Southworth,—I have your letter of a late date on emigration to Ontario. You incidentally say in the letter that you are opposed to indiscriminate emigration. Well, in that respect you agree with everybody else. I do not know any one who suggests, or who would propose, that there should be indiscriminate emigration to that province. Whatever is done must be done carefully, and any who are sent out must be well-selected emigrants. But don't run away with the idea that only well-to-do people, or those with money, are going to emigrate. If you are going to keep up a population in the old parts of the province you must be satified with sober, energetic and industrious emigrants. I know all you people are terribly afraid of the foreign element. Upon that point I don't agree with you, and have no hesitation in saying that a good class of foreigners scattered about the old parts of Ontario will do very much more towards preserving a proper agricultural population than those from England for instance. Politically speaking I believe the introduction of a hundred families or so into some of those close ridings with the connections which could be had and maintained here would easily preserve for us many doubtful seats in that province. I know the anxiety or nervousness of the minister upon this question. Confidentially, I may tell you, I fear it bears some slight resemblance to one of courage. You know enough about politics to know that courage always beats. However as we don't agree upon that phase of the question we won't discuss it. Etc.

(Signed.) W. T. R. Preston.

This was the opinion of a man in the employ of the Government that, the hon. gentleman says, did such wonderful things for Canada. Large numbers of people were being brought from Central Europe by officials who were endeavouring to place people in Ontario for political purposes. When you realize the influence they would have over those people after placing them here, you can form some idea of the cause of the resentment and the outburst of indignation that swept through their ranks when they found that so many of their alien enemies had been debarred from polling their votes in the wartime election; they would not be able to exercise that control which they sought and which they had exercised for so many years. I need not say anything further in that regard, but I want to emphasize this, that we cannot permit those people in those communities of Western Canada to carry on their language and to teach in their schools whatever suits them, and at the same time expect that we are going to overcome the difficulties confronting us.

Reference has been made to the recruiting that took place in Ontario, and it was pointed out how well the people of Ontario volunteered. Last night when the Minister of Militia (Mr. Mewburn) had his Estimates before the House, an hon. gentleman opposite (Mr. Lemieux) pointed out that this was due to the military training they had. It was due not to the training they had along military lines, but to the fact that the old stock in Ontario was of British origin and, therefore, the people responded quickly to the call of duty when danger threatened this country. Danger may threaten this country again, because the menace with which we have been confronted during the past five years may again threaten. We must look to the future, and Canada must be built up on a sure and sound foundation. We are not going to take any chances in that regard, and I, therefore, compliment the Government on having established a Department of Immigration with a responsible minister at its head, and on having brought down a Bill which is going to ensure that in the future people who are not desirable will not be permitted to come within the borders of Canada, and consequently, the purity of the stream of our immigration will be maintained as it should be. The influence of the stock that came out here years ago and peopled this country will be felt in the future, and we must not jeopardize it in any way by permitting an indiscriminate flow of undesirables, as regards which it was stated last night by an hon. member opposite that no bars, no hindrance should be placed in their way, and that this Bill was introduced with a view to barring out the alien enemy. We are still at war with the enemy; peace has not as yet been declared, and we cannot read what the future may have in store for us. But we would be blind to our interest and our duty, if precautions of this kind were not introduced and placed before Parliament.

I do not know that it is necessary for me to say anything further on the matter, in view of the fact that we are in Committee on the Bill and that this discussion is really out of order, it being only by permission of the Chair and the House, because, owing to an oversight of some hon. members who intended to take part in the discussion, the Bill received its second reading without any discussion on the principle. Before sitting down, however, I would again refer to the urgent necessity, particularly during the next few years when reconstruction will be taking place, that nothing should be permitted in this country that would make possible such a condition of affairs as is now being experienced in many European countries; that nothing must be done to aggravate the situation at home. We must take great care to see that our returned men are given every possible opportunity and advantage to become reestablished in civil life. That being done, we must then see that only people of a desirable character are allowed to come into this country to develop the resources which have been placed at our disposal.

Mr. BUCHANAN: The question before the Committee at the present time is probably of more importance to Western Canada than to any other section of the Dominion on account of the fact that we are looking for people to develop the West. But I think experience has taught us that we should in the future be very careful in the selection of our citizens, and we should benefit from the mistakes that have been made in the past. It is true we want countless peoples to come to the prairies to cultivate the soil and produce wealth, but at the same time, we want more than that; we want people who will make good Canadian citizens, and the qualification of production of crops, production of wealth, is not sufficient in itself. Undoubtedly, some people have settled in the West who are not assuming the obligations of Canadian citizenship, although probably at the time they came to Canada it was not recognized that their characteristics were contrary to Canadian citizenship, and that they, to a greater or less extent, separate themselves from other communities and live by and for themselves alone. Since the commencement of this debate, mention has been made of the Hutterites and the Mennonites, and I feel my responsibility, as member for a district in which many of those people have been settling during the last year, to make some observations with regard to those two classes of settlers. I intend to argue that they are not desirable citizens, although probably not on the same ground as is defined in the Bill itself. I look upon a desirable citizen as one who comes into this country prepared to associate with the rest of the people and to assume all the obligations of citizenship. If immigrants fail to do that, then I do not look upon them as desirable citizens, and we should refrain from allowing such classes of people to enter the Dominion of Canada. For many years we have had Hutterites living in practically all sections of Canada, and I always understood that they lived in individual homes, although in communities, but the so-called Mennonites that have been coming into my district in the last year, do not live in what we would call individual homes. All the families live together in one large house; they all eat in one building, and all sleep in another. I do not think people of that type should be allowed to come into this country. Further, they want their own schools, and want to teach their own language, which is almost wholly German. Those of you who have followed the dispatches in the press will know that in Saskatchewan and Manitoba the authorities have had a great deal of difficulty in compelling some members of this sect to support the public schools and send their children to them. On the contrary, they want to maintain their own schools, have their own teachers, and perpetuate their own language. I object to that because I think that the only way we can develop good citizens in this country is for the newcomers to acquire a knowledge of the English language in order that they may mingle with the other elements of the population and become good British subjects.

I have another objection to these people —and I am going to class the Hutterites and the Mennonites together, although there may be some distinction between them— and it is that their property is vested entirely in one individual, who practically controls the situation. In South Dakota, I understand that an effort was made during the war by the authorities there to break up these organizations and force the property into the hands of individuals, and probably as a result of that action a great many Hutterites and Mennonites left South Dakota and came to Canada. Now, we have had experience with one class of people with a form of Government very similar to that of the Hutterites; I refer to the Doukhobors, who are also under the control of one head, in whom all the property is vested.

Another objection I have is this: When an effort was made in South Dakota to break up these organizations, evidence was adduced to prove that these people were prepared to admit that under certain circumstances their own laws were above the laws of the State, and that they would refuse to obey the laws of the State if they came into conflict with their own laws. I do not think we should admit people of this type into Canada. Some of them have come in already, but I think we should prevent immediately the entrance of any more of them.

We know what the attitude of these people is with regard to military service. There are many people who are quite sincere in their opposition to military service and to war; but the particular classes of whom I speak are not prepared to assume any obligations whatever in connection with war. They refused to contribute to war funds and war loans, though I understand that in my district they did contribute in some instances to the Red Cross by subscribing to the Victory Loan and allowing the interest to go to the Red Cross. At this time in our history, I think it is extremely important that we should only allow into this country, people who are prepared to assume all the obligations of Canadian citizenship, who are prepared to bear all the responsibilities, acquire a knowledge of our language, attend our own schools, and assimilate with the rest of our people. I maintain that these people are not prepared to do any of these things, and consequently I look upon them as undesirable citizens. We know that in the United States they did object to contributing to war funds, and objected to military service; and largely on account of the feeling of their neighbours in South Dakota they were forced to leave, and have come to Canada. I do not see by what right they have earned a place in this free country, and as it will take some time for this legislation to come into effect I would urge that an Order in Council be passed immediately, under the War Measures Act, to prevent any more of these people coming in. If we do not do that, they will continue to come in as they are doing at the present moment and have been doing for months past.

I do not represent the feeling of merely one class in my part of the country. I believe that all classes of our people desire that no more Hutterites and Mennonites shall be allowed to settle in Canada. Of course the agitation is strongest with the returned men, and I fully appreciate their point of view. They went across the seas and risked their lives, and they dislike very much to see other men who were not prepared to risk their lives or their money for the freedom and liberty they possessed come and buy land and settle in this country and enjoy all the privileges and protection of Canadian citizenship, and especially as these people are nearly all of German origin and want to perpetuate the German language in Canada.

But apart from the returned soldiers, a number of Canadian clubs throughout Western Canada have declared themselves against the entrance of these people into the Dominion. Now the Canadian clubs, as I know them, are supposed to represent a very high type of citizenship; they want to perpetuate the very best ideals of our citizenship, and if after mature consideration by men of all parties and of all creeds, the Canadian clubs in Winnipeg and elsewhere in the West declare that it is not in the interest of Canada that these people should be allowed to settle in this country, I think their views are worthy of the attention of this Committee.

By reading the press and the statements made by public men and leaders in all important movements, I find that the feeling is unanimous in the Prairie Provinces that these people should not be allowed to come into Canada. The women's organizations of the province of Alberta and I think the same remark applies practically to the whole of Western Canada, look upon these people as a menace and are urging their exclusion. I do not want to be classed as an individual who wants to discourage people coming away from oppression to a land where there is freedom. I am prepared to welcome to this country all classes of people who we are satisfied will assume all the obligations of citizenship when they come to this country, but I want to place myself on record as opposed to the entrance into this country of people who are not prepared to assume all the responsibilities of citizenship and who desire to live by themselves under their own form of government, who want their own schools, and if possible to use their own language exclusively. That is my reason for asking the Government to take immediate action to prevent any more of these people from coming not only into Western Canada, but into any other part of the Dominion. I believe it is in the welfare of Canada that they should be kept out.

Mr. GREEN: I desire to say a few words on this Bill, not because it affects Western Canada, but because the introduction of undesirables is a matter that affects the whole Dominion. This is a period of reconstruction. We have heard a great deal in the last few months concerning reconstruction, and I wish to congratulate the Government that in this Bill they are preparing to ensure that we shall get a better class of immigrants in Canada. Perhaps we in the West may be in a position to speak with more knowledge on this question than people in the East. Possibly Western Canada offers greater advantages to farmers, in that they have less trouble in breaking up new lands and establishing themselves upon the land. In the province from which I come the natural resources are not only very great, but are very easily accessible, and the climate appeals to people coming into a new country. In the past we have experienced difficulties in regard to Oriental immigration. I am not going to deal so much with the question of Oriental immigration, because it has been threshed out in this House and by the people from time to time and is fairly well understood. The hon. member from Montreal (Mr. Jacobs) yesterday eulogized Sir Clifford Sifton on his immigration policy. In the main I endorse that eulogy of Sir Clifford Sifton, but I want to tell the hon. member that Sir Clifford Sifton informed me himself that he made a mistake when he brought the Doukhobors to Canada. No one who knows those people can deny that they are sober, industrious and hard working. But they live in communities. Their families all live together, eat together, and have their buildings together, and they do not allow their children to attend the schools provided by the country, nor do they comply with the necessary regulations for the registration of births, deaths and marriages. They speak their own language, and as a class they are not even educated in their mother tongue. I do not think we would ever be able to assimilate these people so long as they are allowed to remain in these communities, and we should not allow the Doukhobors, Hutterites and Mennonites or any people of that sort to come into Canada and live under their present customs. If we are going to build up a united Canada we must have people whom we can assimilate and who eventually will join the family of Canadian life. The people I have mentioned are not of that kind and I wish it were possible in this legislation not only to debar any more from coming in, but—and I hope the Government may see its way to make this possible—to deport those who are living in communities, as well as interned aliens, and to send them back to the countries from which them came, Russia or wherever else it may be, where they will be more at home among their fellowmen. In this reconstruction period I think we should see to it that the necessary restrictions will be provided so that we may not be flooded with an influx of people whom it will take generations to get rid of or to assimilate. I do not think that any one should advocate the giving of the privileges of Canadian citizenship to interned alien enemies belonging to countries that we have been fighting and with which we are still technically at war. These men who were interned were not peaceable, law-abiding citizens. They were interned for some breach of the laws of the land; and at this moment, it seems preposterous that we should advocate, just because peace is about to be declared, that they be taken in as full citizens of Canada. One of the great troubles in the past has been the laxity of the naturalization law. I do not know whether they have experienced any trouble in the East, but in the West we have had traffic in naturalization papers, and I venture to say that it is not all over yet. Under the new law, however, this matter will be more easily dealt with than in the past. Under the old law a man was only required to live two years in the country, and if he made his application and it was vouched for by some one, even if proper notice had not been given to the public, he was accorded the full rights of citizenship. Under this Bill he must have five years' residence, and there are many restrictions in the Bill to-day that were not in the old law. I wish to again congratulate the Government on the introduction of this Bill, and I hope that when it is completed it will not only keep out of Canada those aliens who are not desirable, but will enable us to deport those who have proved to be undesirable while living amongst us.

4 p.m.

Mr. CALDER: If the general discussion is to continue I think we might bring ourselves in order by taking one of the sections of the Bill which will provide for a discussion such as this. Section 13 will, I think, be found wide enough to cover a discussion such as that which has been going on. If action is to be taken at an early date or immediately to prohibit the entry of certain of these people to Western Canada I would like to have an expression of opinion from this House on this particular section. I concur in the view that has been expressed that it will probably be ten days or two weeks and possibly more before the Bill is eventually through the House. But owing to the feeling that exists in the West, it seems to me that it may be desirable to act at once so far as these particular classes are concerned. I move that we proceed to the discussion of section 13.

Mr. JACOBS: Just a moment. With regard to clause 1, subsection (a) as to the position of the minister and the deputy minister. As I understand it, there is no deputy minister of immigration at present. Is it the intention under this Bill to provide for a deputy minister?

Mr. CALDER: The department provides for the appointment of a deputy minister and the Estimates do as well. Provision is already made in the Act to create a department with a deputy minister.

Mr. JACOBS: I understand that the Deputy Minister of Immigration is also the present Deputy Minister of the Interior. Is it the intention to divide the two positions so that we will have a Deputy Minister of the Interior and a Deputy Minister of Immigration, separate and distinct?

Mr. CALDER: That has been the intention. As the hon. gentleman no doubt was aware, during the past year, the volume of immigration has not been very excessive. We thought it advisable for the time being to ask Mr. Cory, who is the Deputy Minister of the Interior and who formerly had the administration of this Act, to act as deputy minister in the meantime for the purpose of getting ready for the immigration which we expect to come. That matter, however, has not been considered or decided. Unless there is an amalgamation of these departments again, or an amalgamation of this department with some other department, I think it would just as well to let the matter stand as it is now.

Section agreed to.

Mr. Calder moved that the Committee proceed to the consideration of clause 13 of the Bill.

Mr. RICHARDSON: I have a very few words to say on this Bill. I wish to take issue with the minister's statement that nothing had been done by the people for the vast number of Ruthenian and foreign immigrants who have been brought into the country in past years from central Europe. A great deal was done for these people. They were pretty thoroughly debauched very shortly after getting into this country by the politicians of both sides in the Northwest. I think it is just as well that we should be frank in regard to this question. In Manitoba the Ruthenians and other immigrants from central Europe were organized into clubs and herded in the cities and towns of Manitoba and they were supplied with whisky and beer. I see my hon. friend from Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux) raise his eyebrows in wonderment. I imagine he has never heard the words "whisky" or "beer" used in this House before. He seems to be quite horrified that I did not make a distinction as between the politicians of the different sides but that I placed the blame on both. The manner in which these people have been debauched became a public scandal throughout the West. Their votes were bought, they were herded into political droves, members of their own class were given offices and they were used as political bosses. I do not think this country has perpetrated any greater crime upon any portion of the population than it has perpetrated upon the foreign population that has been brought to the country.

Mr. EDWARDS: Was that in connection with provincial elections?

Mr. RICHARDSON: My hon. friend (Mr. Edwards) suggests that this has occurred in connection with provincial elections. I fancy that if my hon. friend will confer with the hon. member for Maisonneuve he will probably get a satisfactory answer to his question. It is a great satisfaction to me to know that in this Bill that is now before the House provision is being made which will prevent the importation into this country of undesirable settlers. We have Doukhobors, and Mennonites and now we are getting a portion of the Hutterites. I think all are undesirable. The Mennonites who were brought in when Alexander Mackenzie was in office under certain guarantees have proved very good settlers so far as agriculture is concerned. But they have not become assimilated with the other peoples to any extent up to the present time. I would like to testify to the fact that in connection with the Victory Loan, the Patriotic Fund and other subscriptions for the purpose of carrying on the war the Mennonites acted very well and subscribed a large amount thus showing their sympathy with the ideal of liberty for which the enlightened nations of the world were fighting.

An hon. MEMBER: Did they volunteer?

Mr. RICHARDSON: They did not volunteer at all; they believe in the scriptural injunction: "Thou shalt not kill." They have a firm conviction that they should not participate in war. It is a matter of conscience with them and I never felt that I should blame them very much for adhering to their conscientious convictions in that respect. I represented the constituency of Lisgar in the old days and a great many Mennonites are located in that constituency. I found them a very agreeable and law-abiding people. It is true they do not patronize our schools.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Did the first Mennonites come from the United States or from Russia?

Mr. RICHARDSON: From Russia I understand. I want to say, in case I should be misunderstood, that a new policy is being adopted in regard to the Ruthenian population in the province of Manitoba. The present Manitoba Government, for which I hold no brief, is pursuing an excellent policy. When these people were controlled by politicians, all sorts of promises were made to them and in many cases they were allowed to conduct their schools in their own way and use their own language. That has all been done away with under the administration of the Norris Government. Manitoba has, in the person of the Hon. Dr. Thornton, an excellent Minister of Education. It was recently my privilege to visit the constituency which I have the honour to represent in Parliament and in which there is a very large Ruthenian population. I visited some of these schools in company with the Minister of Education and Mr. D. A. Ross, the local member of the Legislature, and I found that marvellous progress was being made by the children of foreign parents. They are wonderfully bright and progressive; in fact they make almost greater progress than the children of the Anglo-Saxon population. In these schools nothing but the English language is taught; nor will be allowed to be taught. I believe that since partisanship has been abolished, or abandoned to a great extent, a better spirit is coming over the dreams of the foreign settler of that province and higher ideals are taking hold of our foreign population. I agree with the Minister of Immigration that we should follow the foreign population, endeavour to set the highest example and lead them along the right path particularly in regard to becoming British citizens. In my constituency, as I say, there is a very large foreign population. Under the War-time Elections Act, which prevailed when the last election was held, this population was not, of course, allowed to vote. I regret to have to tell the House that I have received from time to time lately very disturbing reports in regard to certain portions of the foreign population of Springfield, Winnipeg and other adjacent districts. It is even said that they expect an uprising and indeed that the day has been set for such uprising. I took the opportunity of letting the members of the Government know in order that measures might be taken to put a stop to anything of that kind.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: To what population do you refer when you say that there is danger of an uprising?

Mr. RICHARDSON: To the population brought in from Central European countries.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: In what portion of the West?

Mr. RICHARDSON: I was referring to Manitoba especially in my remarks.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: Can you give us any authority for that statement?

Mr. RICHARDSON: Yes, I have among my papers upstairs a letter from Mr. D. A. Ross, member of the Provincial Legislature of Manitoba in which he infers that there is danger. The night before I left for Ottawa last week, after visiting my home about eight days ago, Mr. Ross called me up by telephone and asked me to warn the Government that there was grave danger in the situation; that he had returned from a tour of the constituency, and that throughout it, as well as in the adjoining districts, foreigners were talking of rising at a certain time. I think he said the date fixed was some day in the ensuing month of May. I do not know why this is, but he states that the spirit of Bolshevism prevails and that these people have got the idea that the profiteers in Canada have made immense sums of money—

Mr. JACOBS: Hear, hear.

Mr. RICHARDSON: —that that ought to be taken away from them, and that certain other measures of retribution should follow.

Mr. JACOBS: Hear, hear.

Mr. RICHARDSON: I cannot tell the Committee just what views these people hold with regard to this matter, but if my information is correct their views are radical and dangerous.

Mr. TWEEDIE: How long have they been in the country?

Mr. RICHARDSON: I should think for ten, twelve, or fifteen years. They are very industrious and quite prosperous. They have taken up lands in small areas in that country and carry on market gardening, small farming, etc., and the progress they have made along agricultural lines is wonderful. If these people are properly handled even at this juncture there may not be much to fear. In this connection Mr. Ross tells me that Bishop Budka, of whom members of the House must have heard a great deal from time to time—

Sir SAM HUGHES: Hear, hear.

Mr. RICHARDSON: —is behind this agitation, and criticism has been indulged in that the authorities have not dealt with Bishop Budka as he deserves to be dealt with.

Sir SAM HUGHES: Is Bishop Budka the same bishop who is behind a Bill at present before the House having reference to certain Ruthenian children?

Mr. RICHARDSON: I am unable to give the hon. member any information in that regard.

Sir SAM HUGHES: I will give it.

Mr. RICHARDSON: I have no personal knowledge of the actions of Bishop Budka, but Mr. Ross, the local member for Springfield, assures me that he is a very dangerous man. I noticed in the press of Winnipeg that the returned soldiers propose to deal with Bishop Budka, and you may be sure, Mr. Chairman, that if the returned soldiers undertake to deal with him he will be treated in a summary manner. I observe, however, in a despatch in the morning papers that action has been taken, I think by the Dominion Government officials, probably as a result of the information I laid before the Government, to summon Bishop Budka before the authorities to show cause why he should not be deported. I presume that this action is a result of measures taken by the Government to see that justice is done, and I want to congratulate the Government upon its promptness. As I said before, I have no personal information to convey to the House, although I learned from quarters that I do not doubt are perfectly reliable that a rather dangerous, if not a menacing condition of affairs, exists in that country.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE (Edmonton): Will the hon. member for Springfield lay on the table of the House the letter which he states contains the statements referred to?

Mr. RICHARDSON: The hon. member for Springfield will do exactly as he likes about that matter. I rose for the purpose of giving the Committee the benefit of any information that has been conveyed to me, and I hope that the situation will be dealt with by the Government in such a manner as it should be. I took the first opportunity on my return from Winnipeg last week to lay a statement before the members of the Government, particularly charged with this branch of the administration. I then learned that action had been taken; that word had been sent to interview Mr. Ross, to collect all possible information, and to make such an investigation as would result in the prevention of any such incendiary outbreak as any portion of the population might have in contemplation.

Mr. MICHAEL CLARK (Red Deer): In saying a few words on this subject, I regret that I shall not be able to take quite the view that is entertained by the Government. I regret that the more sincerely because I know I shan't get any credit from a certain section of this House for differing from the Government. I listened to considerable portions of the speech of the minister (Mr. Calder), and I could not quite appreciate his point of view from the necessity which usually exists of having a coherent policy from the Cabinet. My hon. friend spoke very enthusiastically of Canada's need of increased population. Well, in ordinary times we should all feel just that way, and should use my hon. friend's language but we are not living in ordinary times, and where the policy of the Government, as a Government, appears to lack coherence is in this: That in its policy, as brought out in some of the measures which were mentioned in the Speech from the Throne, and in some of the measures which we have discussed here, there is an apprehension that we shall not be able to handle, without considerable difficulty, for the next few years the inhabitants we already have. I do not think, Mr. Chairman, that is a misrepresentation of speeches that we have heard in this House in support of certain measures. The Government has taken extraordinary steps, and has taken credit to itself for those steps, to prevent unemployment in this country in the years of difficulty that are immediately ahead of us, and that we all hope will not be numerous. Now I, for one, cannot see the coherence or consistency of a policy which on the one hand is directed to relieve the population we already have, and on the other to increasing that population by means of an immigration policy——

Mr. BELAND: Hear, hear.

Mr. MICHAEL CLARK: And I should be glad if, approaching this matter with no other thought in my mind except to take the wisest steps for Canada, the minister, or other members of the Government, can meet my difficulty on that particular point. My general position in regard to making a distinction between ordinary times and the present time, applies equally to some of the remarks which fell from my good-natured friend from Montreal——I forget his division.

Mr. McMASTER: Good nature is no distinction as regards members from Montreal.

Mr. MICHAEL CLARK: It is, I think, the hon. member from the St. Lawrence division, to whom I refer.

Mr. LEMIEUX: No, the hon. member for George Etienne Cartier.

Mr. MICHAEL CLARK: I heard a warble from another region which tempts me very much to tell a story, but I will not do it at this time.

Mr. BELAND: Let us have the story.

Mr. MICHAEL CLARK: I agreed with the spirit of the remarks of my hon. friend from Montreal (Mr. Jacobs) as to ordinary times, when he said that our enemies of to-day will be our friends of to-morrow. Everybody who knows British history will recall the period when Englishmen never referred to Frenchmen except as "frog-eaters," and when Frenchmen never referred to England except as "perfidious Albion," and that proceeded for some years after the great wars between England and France.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Some centuries.

Mr. MICHAEL CLARK: Well, not quite for centuries; it proceeded for some years; but as my hon. friend indicated would be the case now, those feelings passed away to such an extent that the two countries were allies in the recent war. Still, it took some time, and I think that my hon. friend, in his remarks, was not sufficiently careful to remember that fact.

There were other remarks of my hon. friend that I could not quite see the force of as encouraging a vigorous immigration policy. He reminded us that the race to which he has the distinction—I use the words very sincerely—to belong wandered for forty years in the wilderness, and when they got to the promised land there they made good. Well, the record of what they did when they got to the promised land was that they killed off all the native inhabitants, and if that is my hon. friend's idea of how immigrants made good, I hope there may not be many immigrants into Canada of that particular type. However, I repeat that with the general tenor of his remarks I agree, because they were based upon well-known historical facts. I do not think that these race asperities will last forever, by any means, or else we have fought the vainest war ever fought in history. I understand that the League of Nations, about which most of us are enthusiastic, is to put an end to war and to put an end as fast as possible to that hate in the minds of men out of which all wars must come.

Having said so much, I return to the ground of the present condition of Canada and to the immigration policy of the Government as I learn something about it from the speech of the minister. There are other grounds than the fact that we have just come out of this war and that there are great misunderstandings between the various races of the world why we should go very carefully about promoting immigration at this time, or—shall I say?—about how we handle the immigration question. Before the war began at all there was considerable emigration out of Western Canada. That was being stated in this House; it was never contradicted in this House, because it could not be contradicted. We may have an opportunity of discussing at considerable length before this session closes the economic reasons why that was taking place before the war. Of course, since the war began we have lost a large number of inhabitants from Western Canada; I do not want to go into numbers on that question, but it is notorious that that has happened. I quite apprehend that there might be an explanation of that in the early years of the war connected with the war itself. However, the fact is there, both as to the time before the war and since the war began, and that fact would lead one to look at this immigration point of view from a different angle than the enthusiastic one of the minister when he seemed to want to bring men in in great numbers. He said, indeed, that we had been to blame because we had done nothing for our immigrant population in the past. From one point of view, there is a great deal of truth in what he said, although I believe the very first reason he gave for wanting to get more men in shows that he is going to do something to them now, because he said that we needed more taxation. He is going to improve on our having done nothing for our immigrants in the past by now taxing immigrants when he gets hold of them. Well, that is perhaps too liberal an interpretation of what my hon. friend said. I simply point out, however, that that is not a reason why we should endeavour to flood the country at the present time with a certain class of immigrants, to say the least of it. The people who take up homesteads and the people who take up land on a small scale are not a very taxable quantity in the first years of their settling in Western Canada. That remark applies to the various other lines of national activity in which the minister said that an increased population would be useful to us. If I am right in saying that we were losing inhabitants before the war and losing them from the lands of Western Canada, then it is more necessary, to promote the best interests of Canada, that we should see what was wrong with our government of the West; what was wrong with our methods of taxation for instance; what was wrong with our trade policies; what was wrong with the life of the people in the West, that was making our inhabitants leave the country. That would be a more fruitful line of Government activity than the introduction of a Bill or the making of a speech in this House at this particular time to promote immigration upon a large scale.

We have arrived at a period in our history when, if we govern our country properly, we do not need to go over the world seeking to give inducements to people to come and live in Canada. I am one of those who can speak with the feelings and experiences of an immigrant myself, upon this question, and I think I know that no country in the world offers to a man such an opportunity of advancing his position in life and enjoying a rational and a free existence as Canada does—if Canada is properly governed. A great deal hinges on that. If we frame our laws so that equal opportunities are afforded to all sections of our population, then no country in the world offers the inducement that Canada does to people from more crowded lands to come and reside within our borders. But I should like to guard myself further—though I have been trying to use very guarded language, Mr. Chairman—by saying that the "if" that I have used is one of considerable size, and has been under all Governments, so far as I have been able to study economics in the direction of enlightenment. I do not think that we need to hurry about getting fresh inhabitants at this time. Canada has arrived at that period in her history when it is emphatically true that the best immigration agent is a successful colonist.

Let the Governments of this country in the immediate future get that thoroughly into their heads, and they will do a great deal to settle the immigration question so far as getting suitable and proper inhabitants into Canada is concerned.

When I rose I said that I viewed this question in a slightly different way from the Government, and there are in the Bill points which we shall, perhaps, discuss better when we come to them, but I would have approached the question from an entirely different point of view from that which seems to have guided the Government. They seem to be largely concerned about the people they are keeping out of Canada. I would have approached the question from the Canadian point of view entirely and said: What would be the general policy that would, under the peculiar after-war conditions in which we find ourselves, be the best for Canada? We did enormous things in this war; we sent an enormous number of our inhabitants overseas, and our very first problem at this time is to re-absorb into our civil life, and to place them in a good position when they have been re-absorbed. the boys who went across the seas and fought for us. Our first duty above all things is so to rule our country and direct our policies that we do the right thing by those citizens, primarily, because it is a duty that we owe to them, but scarcely secondarily, because it is obvious to everybody that, if we do well by those men, we have laid the basis of a population which will be second to none in the world if the men can only get women of a similar type to marry, and I do not think they will have much difficulty. On those two grounds I think the overwhelming primary duty of the Government for the next three years would have been to devote their attention to problems connected with our returned soldiers in connection with the immigration question. This consideration was evidently present to the minds of the government of the United States who have a longer national experience than we have, and that Government have, I understand, taken a step in regard to their immigration policy, rather different from that taken by this Bill. Before that announcement was made as to the Government of the United States, I had been in the West saying to my intimates that I personally would be in favour of closing the borders of Canada absolutely for a period of three or four years to everybody except carefully selected citizens of allied countries. I would support that policy—and I want the hon. member for George Etienne Cartier (Mr. Jacobs) to apprehend my point—not along the lines of hostility to any people on earth. I want to repeat that I agree with the general principles he laid down, and I can and will exemplify the sincerity of my belief by saying that within thirty miles of my home there are Germans, born in Germany, who have lived as long as I have in Western Canada, whose conduct has been perfectly correct during the war, with whom I have been on friendly terms during the whole of the seventeen years that I have lived in Western Canada, and with whom I hope I shall live on the same friendly terms in the years immediately in front of us. I do not hesitate to say that, however much it may be misunderstood in certain quarters. That is my point of view on this question. I do not advocate our imitating or following the policy of the United States from the point of view of exclusion, but I advocate it from the point of view of governing Canada in such a way as to make her a desirable country to live in for the best men in the world who are not satisfied with the countries in which they are living at the present time. That is all the contribution I have to make to what would, perhaps, have been a debate better conducted on the second reading of this measure.

Mr. ANDREWS: During the recent recess, it was my privilege to attend, at Winnipeg, a very large meeting comprising, I think, the Rotarians, the Kiwanis, the Canadian Club, the Women's Canadian Club, the Great War Veterans, the Imperial Veterans, the Army and Navy Veterans, Orange lodges and perhaps some others. It was estimated that at least 35,000 citizens of Winnipeg were represented at that meeting. It was pointed out by the chairman that, with the exception of the Canadian Club and the Great War Veterans, whose views on the subject of the entrance of those Hutterites were well known, the others had been invited without knowing to what they were coming. There was a free and open discussion without any strings attached to it, and there were present at that meeting at least four members of this House. Speeches were delivered by gentlemen who had evidently made a very careful study of the subject under discussion, and I am only too sorry that they cannot deliver them here to-day, because they covered the ground from the early days down to the present. It was pointed out, amongst other things, that the Hutterites were known to have been in existence for something like 400 years; and that to-day the community was very small, numbering only a few thousand; that during this time they had owned their property in common, and that if a man did not agree with them, he was thrown out on the street. Cases were cited of men 56 years of age who were destitute after having belonged to that colony for twenty years.

Sir SAM HUGHES: Like Government ownership?

Mr. ANDREWS: So far as I could gather, the Hutterite community, as an institution, was not looked upon as a very serious proposition there, except in so far as it was related to the entire alien problem in Canada. The Hutterites are not numerous as they have produced only a few thousand in 400 years, so that they have not been a success under modern conditions. So far, however, as the Hutterite community is related to the present alien problem, the unanimous opinion of that meeting was that they must be stopped at once, and that the whole subject of citizenship in this country must also be tackled immediately. A considerable amount of criticism was expressed at the slowness with which the Government had tackled this problem; and it was hoped that no further delays would be permitted, and it was stated that if further delays were permitted, they could not be responsible for the results. There is in the West, a very high feeling with regard to a certain class of aliens. It is so strong that it cannot be played with, and I say that advisedly. The minister in moving the second reading of the Bill yesterday pointed to the mistakes of the past. There is an old aphorism which runs "A man who never makes mistakes never makes anything else," which can be applied with equal force to governments as to men. As an old-time western man who had been out there for years among our undeveloped resources—and the Indians had been there years before me—I know we were all mighty glad to see these foreigners coming in under the old immigration policy, for we needed a little help in developing our country. As has been pointed out by my hon. friend (Mr. Richardson), who knows whereof he speaks, the mistake was not so much in bringing them in, as in the treatment they received after they got here. I sometimes think that the old-time western Canadian was too much of a trapper; he had a tendency to skin his capture as soon as he got it. I well remember those sheep skin coated men coming in, and fine husky men they were. The following winter they would go to the bush armed with small hatchets which they brought from the old land. One would get on each side of a tree and peck it down like woodpeckers, then they would cut it in four-foot lengths and after piling a cord, which it would take two men a whole day to do, all they received was thirty cents. A little later when an election came on, somebody thought that if these men could be taught to make a cross they would be able to vote, so they were sworn in as good citizens, and then a little later on came the bottle of white whisky. I am sometimes surprised that we have not had more trouble with our foreigners. But we have come to the jumping-off place now. Our returning soldiers have had the fact driven into them by six-inch shells that citizenship is a question of vital importance, which must be settled. It did not take John Bull or Canada two years to wake up. If it had, we would have been licked. I do not wish to be understood as saying that those men who enlisted early in the war had more courage than those who enlisted later, because as a matter of fact I am convinced that it took more courage to join up in the later stages, but it was the spirit of those men who sprang to arms in 1914 that saved the show; and I think we all realize that in the future the thing that will count is not our great railways not our enormous resources or our millionaires, but Canada's honour, and we must breed and bring up in this country men who at the drop of the hat will spring to arms in its defence.

Mr. REDMAN: I fully agree with other hon. members that we should not adopt in our immigration policy the principle of hostility to any nation or race. History records that eventually our enemies may become our friends. While that is true, and should be one of our guiding principles, it must be pointed out that the war is not yet over, and that the feeling in Canada, especially among the returned soldiers, against people of German blood and German tongue is very intense; and I could not imagine any better way of accentuating that feeling of hostility than to allow people of German blood and German language to come into Canada at this particular time. I think that if we wish to cure this feeling of hostility towards the German people, which undoubtedly does exist, we should see that the feeling of Canadian soldiers and Canadians generally is not irritated by an influx of people speaking the German language, if not of German blood. The War Veterans of Canada have taken a positive stand against the immigration of Hutterites and Mennonites into Western Canada. The hon. member for Lethbridge this afternoon gave in my opinion sufficient reasons why it is not desirable to admit these people into Canada. I do not think it is the policy of this country, and I hope it never will be, to exclude people from Canada on account of their religion; we should never act on that principle.

Sir SAM HUGHES: Does the hon. member mean that positively or negatively? A great many people have been brought in because they were of a certain religion.

Mr. REDMAN: I do not mean it either positively or negatively. I simply state that religion should not enter into the discussion of this question. In addition to the reasons which the hon. member for Lethbridge gave, I should like to point out another characteristic which is very unfair to the other citizens of Western Canada, and that is their method of purchasing land. They will buy a certain area of land, four pieces, perhaps, close together, and at once the other people on the circumference of that circle desire to leave. The value of their land goes down, no one but these organizations will take it, and in that way the colony spreads, to the detriment of the citizens settled around, and who, of course, have a right to live in any part of the country they please.

I am very pleased that section 13 of the Bill empowers the Government to remedy by Order in Council just such situations as these as they arise. The feeling in Western Canada during the last few months has been so intense—and this is not unreasonable when it is remembered that in that part of the country we have just as great a proportion of foreign-born people as we can possibly stand, and having regard also to the fact that we wish our people to live up to British ideals—the situation in the West is so serious that I think the Government should not wait for the Royal assent to this Bill before passing an Order in Council excluding Hutterites and Mennonites, but should exclude them now by passing an Order in Council under the War Measures Act. I do not think it is necessary for me to say that it would be quite proper to pass such an Order in Council under the War Measures Act, because the situation is one of the results of the war.

The soldiers of Canada do not wish to force their views upon the rest of the people, but the opinions which they have on this subject have been gained under circumstances which, I think it will be admitted, place them in a position to speak with knowledge. Their right to these opinions and their right to set them forth on all proper occasions must always be conceded. They have no uncertain voice on this question and have been asking that the Government should take some steps in regard to it. Now that the Government have enunciated their policy, and having regard to the fact that the situation is extremely critical and that these Hutterites are coming in even now while we are speaking on this Bill, and that it is difficult to know exactly what may happen if this stream continues, I think the Government would be well advised to take advantage of the provisions of the War Measures Act and pass an Order in Council to exclude the Hutterites, Mennonites and Doukhobors until such time as the Bill may become law.

Mr. WHIDDEN: With regard to clause 13, if the context is as good as the text which we have here there should be no trouble in having a very unanimous support.

Mr. CALDER: Will the hon. member permit me to interrupt him a moment? I intend to suggest to the Committee a new clause 13 before the discussion on this clause proceeds any further. It is proposed to amend clause 13 by striking out all the words after the word "nationality" in the sixth line and replacing them with the following:

or race or of immigrants of any specified class or occupation, because of any economic, industrial or other condition temporarily existing in Canada or because such immigrants are deemed unsuitable having regard to the climatic, industrial, social, educational, labour or other conditions or requirements of Canada, or because such immigrants are deemed undesirable owing to their peculiar customs, habits, modes of life and methods of holding property and because of their probable inability to become readily assimiliated or to assume the duties and responsibilities of Canadian citizenship within a reasonable time after their entry.

Amendment agreed to.

Section as amended agreed to.

Mr. WHIDDEN: I am satisfied that the clause as now amended will meet the views of fighting men returning to Canada from overseas. As has been pointed out by the hon. member for Red Deer, we must think of these people in their relation to the developing of Canada, and we must also consider what they think about other people in relation to our developing country. Whether all the men have thought correctly with regard to the Hutterites or not, I am not prepared to say, and I do not think any of us are, because we are not omniscient. But the general attitude of the men returning from overseas and of their families in Western Canada has been a sanely expressed view of this whole matter. I am sure that there is no desire on the part of any of us, as the member for East Calgary (Mr. Redman) has said, to exclude the Hutterites simply because of their religious views, but because embedded in the very heart of those religious views there is a false political philosophy, a false conception of their relation to the state, which makes it impossible for them to become other than a people in Canada, and what we need to-day is not more people, but more Canadians. We need just as many new people as we can assimilate, but only as many as we can assimilate. Numbers are not the greatest consideration at the present time. These people may bring money with them and may buy some of our best lands, but if they are allowed to come with their peculiar and, to us, false views we may be able to tolerate them, but it would be only toleration. They pay their debts well, I understand; they are good farmers and have good bank accounts. But so far as I can learn, the Government of South Dakota and generally the people residing there found that they were very loath to purchase, or even to consider purchasing, Liberty bonds. I am glad that the Minister of Immigration and the Government have been willing to consider seriously the taking of steps to relieve the present situation, and will make it possible to give the Hutterites a fair deal before they cross the line and, above all, to give the Canadian people a fair deal now and permanently by excluding the Hutterites.

I believe this Bill is one of the most important that will have been before this House during this session because it affects more than conditions to-day; it may affect conditions in Canada for many years to come. I am glad to see in the Bill evidence of more practical and scientific regulation of immigration, and a realization of the necessity of a national policy—that is a dangerous term to use, but I repeat it, a national policy—of immigration involving the preparation for nationalizing all people who come into our country. And I hope that, associated with this Bill, legislation will yet be brought down for the purpose of doing away with colonizing and of making impossible the growing up of classes of foreigners who have come into Canada in ignorance of the significance of Canadian institutions, Canadian laws and the Canadian spirit.

In other words, provision must be made, in some way or other, apart from the public schools of the several provinces, for simple machinery whereby the education and naturalization of aliens now in the land or who are yet to come in, may be taken care of, so that we may have more Canadians. I would like to submit before sitting down, four simple statements which, I believe, are involved in this Bill and most of which are either involved or implied in this clause. We should be slow to make statements, at least without considering all phases of the question, such as were made yesterday in regard to letting down the bars and making Canada an asylum, a place of refuge, for all who desire to come here. That may be a good church policy; it is not the way to built a nation. It may be desirable that missionaries of one kind and another shall have the spirit which was suggested by the words of the hon. member (Mr. Jacobs) who spoke yesterday,—I do not mean political missionaries. But certainly, the preaching of that gospel in this country at the present time and the creation of machinery which would make it possible for that gospel to be accepted, will not give us a united Canada or an intelligent Canadian people. It will give us a group of Canadian states—Balkan states if you please—throughout the West. Canada should—and I believe the hon. minister has this in mind—so regulate and, if necessary, restrict immigration that only so many of each race of people shall be admitted as can be wholesomely Canadianized.

Sir SAM HUGHES: Would it not be possible to so arrange matters, provincially and federally that each such immigrant would become a citizen of Canada rather than remain a member of a foreign state?

Mr. WHIDDEN: I am satisfied that it could be done. The presence in Canada of races who have become Canadianized will afford the best basis of a measure for the further immigration of other members of those races. I am satisfied, without giving very much consideration to the matter, that without any hate in our hearts at all towards certain alien enemies, that principle will settle the matter and will not let them come into Canada immediately peace has been signed. My third point is that Canadian standards of living should be protected from the dangerous economic competition of immigration whether from Europe or Asia. Such provision should be made for the care of aliens residing in our country as will most rapidly and genuinely promote their being Canadianized, and thus maintain intact our democratic institutions and real national unity. Let us then, Mr. Chairman, support the minister and the Government if they have the carrying out of these principles in their minds, as I believe they have, and see to it that immigration is regulated proportionately in a ratio based upon the possibility of assimilating foreign peoples, taking as the basis the number of these different peoples that we have in our country at the present time —five per cent of a given people, ten per cent of another, three per cent of another, and 15 per cent of another. Let there be no indiscriminate letting down of the bars. To use the term employed by the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Clark), let us get a selected immigration of the peoples from the allied nations in the immediate future. Let us also have a Federal distribution bureau. We should arrange in some way or other for a distribution of settlers which would be fair. In addition to all the educational plans and programme in our respective provinces. I submit that some provision should be made for a Federal bureau for the general education of all immigrants and settlers from non-English speaking countries who may yet come into Canada in elementary Canadian history and civics.

Mr. RICHARDSON: I neglected to say in my remarks that I was thoroughly opposed to the Hutterite immigration. Lest my silence may be interpreted as indicating that I am in favour of it, I would like to make this explanation, because in the West, and particularly in Winnipeg, it is a very acute question. I am opposed to Mennonite, Doukhobor and Hutterite immigration in its entirety.

Mr. STEELE: Clause 13, I think introduces a new era in the development of an immigration policy for Canada, an era which is going to be characterized by the fact that Canada has at last determined to select her immigrants. That seems to be the characteristic principle of this clause —the selection of immigrants. In the past we have to a great extent opened our arms to every immigrant who, for his own purposes, chose to select Canada as the country to which he would go. In the future that policy must be reversed and no man allowed to come into Canada as an immigrant except such as Canada wishes to receive.

We have been neglectful in the past; from the point of view of citizenship we have been almost criminally neglectful. Let us now, as Canadian citizens and as a Government, modify our policy in that respect and realize that every immigrant who lands on our shores is, as it were, a ward of this Government, for a certain length of time at least, and that the Government owes an obligation to that man to educate him and to train him into Canadian citizenship. I hope we shall never see in Canada again what we have seen during the past four years: The spectacle of men who have come to this country as immigrants, who perhaps could not be objected to very much in time of peace but who, when trouble arose and danger threatened Canada, showed that their sympathies were with the enemy. If that occurs again it will largely be because this Government has not done its duty to those men in educating them in the privileges and duties of Canadian citizenship. Without going into the matter at length, I believe one of the first duties in making Canadian citizens of the immigrants who come to this country is an insistence, if necessary, that within a very short time—within a very few years at least—that before they are granted the rights of citizenship they shall, to a substantial extent, acquire the English language. I believe that if we studied the cases of those whom we speak of as foreigners and who have not assimilated with the rest of the population, we should find that one of the main reasons is that they preserve their native tongue and make no effort to learn English. I would not object to any man preserving the language which he brings with him. But when he comes to Canada—where English and French, if we wish to unite the two, are the languages of the country—and decides to become a Canadian citizen, he should have it impressed upon him that before he becomes naturalized he must show that he possesses a substantial knowledge of the English language. Because when they acquire a knowledge of the English language these people will see that their families are also taught it; and as they get to know the language of the country they are able to associate more freely and with less hesitation with those whose language is English, and in that way, almost unconsciously, acquire the customs and the thought of the English people by whom they are surrounded.

I am glad that the Government has decided to modify this clause so that there shall be no exclusion of a religious sect. We have heard to-day a good deal of criticism of the Mennonites, and if the clause under consideration stood as originally drafted it would exclude, providing the Government passed an Order in Council to that effect, all Mennonites. I want to say that there are Mennonites and Mennonites, and if the estimate that has been made of the people of this community who are going into the Canadian West is correct, they are entirely different from many Mennonites whom I know that are located in the province of Ontario. I feel in duty bound to say a word for at least a section of Mennonites who are citizens of Canada and located in that province. I know many of them very well, and I must say there is no better class of citizens—perhaps I should say residents—in Ontario to-day, from many points of view, than the Mennonites. They are splendid farmers, they are an industrious people, their family life is above reproach, they are a moral-living people of a high type, and they are devoted to their church. Let me say also, what perhaps cannot be said of every class of people, that although the teachings of their church may be regarded as rather peculiar in some respects, you will find the Mennonites practising what is preached in their church. The only objection, I think, that can be taken to them is that they are not in favour of military service—they are opposed to war. They are opposed to war in their church teachings, and they religiously live up to that just as they live up to all the other teachings of their church. They have brought that teaching down from several centuries ago, when they suffered from oppression in Europe, and were glad to be free from that oppression. They obtained refuge in the United States, and from the State of Pennsylvania came over to Ontario, for the same reason—to escape the war service which was being imposed upon them during the great revolutionary war there. Let me say further that the Mennonites are not pro-German in sentiment. There may be some. I believe there are some, who may feel that way; but throughout the recent war their sympathies were largely with Britain, because—while they know little perhaps of British life and of Britain as a country—one of the teachings of their church is that every member of it shall be loyal to the country in which he lives, and they emphasized and illustrated that to a very large degree during the past four years. It has been said that some of the Mennonites will not contribute to the Victory Bonds. Let me give an illustration of how some of the Mennonites, those in my own neighbourhood, contributed to Victory Bonds last fall. A congregation of 160 families, living near the town in which I reside, contributed to the Victory Bonds at that time the sum of $39,000, almost $250 for each family in the congregation. At the time they were being canvassed for Victory Bonds, they were also being canvassed for contributions for the Belgian Relief Fund, and their contributions for that purpose amounted to nearly $5,200. I say this in justice to a class of the community in Ontario who are respected by every person, who are held in high esteem, who are absolutely honest, who live up to their religious doctrines, who are perfectly law-abiding—in fact, they do not believe in going to law at all—who live a high moral life, and who have adopted our public schools. Such great advocates of education are they, that they probably give their children a better public school education than does the average citizen of Ontario. They did nothing under the Military Service Act, I think the Mennonites of Ontario were exempt from military service. They are intensely opposed to military service, there is no doubt about that, but the Order in Council, which I understand has been passed, providing that no Mennonite coming to Canada hereafter shall be exempt from military service, obviates any difficulty in that regard. I am glad that the Government has brought down this Bill, and has inserted section 13. I hope that as the discussion goes on the necessity for selecting our immigrants in the future will be further emphasized.

Mr. J. M. DOUGLAS (Strathcona): I cannot see eye to eye with those who criticise the immigration policy followed in this country up to 1914, because the immigration policy of the late Liberal government was the cause of the great prosperity which prevailed in Western Canada for quite a number of years. I live in a section of the country in which there are large numbers of the settlers referred to as alien enemies, and I must pay this tribute to them: during the war, in spite of the fact that they felt aggrieved by the War-time Elections Act, which deprived them of their franchise, they behaved in almost every instance as good Canadian citizens should behave. true, their nationality was that of the people whom we were fighting, and blood is thicker than water; but their public conduct was as good as, if not better than, that of a great many other people with whom we were, one might say, on neutral terms. There were branches of nationalities in Western Canada, with whom the allied armies were not fighting who showed stronger pro-German sentiment than ever was exhibited by Austrian, German or Bulgarian in Canada.

One criticism has been that certain nationalities which have been brought into Canada during the past twenty years have carried out their own ideas of education and language. In Alberta we have not that condition. The Provincial Government maintains absolute control over educational matters, and no particular section of the community has endeavoured to teach its own language and preserve its own national traditions. That criticism, therefore, is not fair, at least in its application to a great proportion of the people in Alberta. I have also heard adverse criticism of the Mennonites. The member for Lethbridge (Mr. Buchanan) said that Mennonites in his section of the country lived in communities, had a sort of common household, and were communistic in their ideas and apparently socialistic in their method of carrying them out. The Mennonites that I have any knowledge of in Alberta live the same as any other men, in many cases it would be difficult to discern their nationality. In their methods of life, their habits, their industry, and in everything that goes to make up a good citizen—with possibly one exception—the Mennonites in Northern Alberta are a model citizenry. But they do object, on religious grounds, I believe. to military service. From my own knowledge, that objection took the form only of a refusal to serve as combatant soldiers. When it came to subscribing to patriotic funds, buying victory bonds and taking part in Red Cross and other war work, these people, my information is, contributed as generously as any other section of that community. So that it is only fair to say that this particular class of people should not be classified as they are in Southern Alberta.

I wish to draw the attention of the minister to the clause of the Bill pertaining to naturalization. Immigrants have been brought into Western Canada from different sections of Europe. Prior to the adoption of the new Naturalization Act of 1914, these men could be naturalized quite easily and without much formality, but it is a fact that when the war broke out there were men of foreign nationality who, though they had been residents of Canada for ten, twelve or fourteen years, had not been naturalized. That condition should not be permitted. If these men wish to take up their homes with us and obtain the benefits of Canadian citizenship, the Government should insist that after a reasonable length of time, say three years, they formally signify their intention to become citizens of Canada. In the United States it is necessary that an immigrant, after three years residence in the country, should signify his intention to become a citizen of United States. If in five years an immigrant does not signify his intention of taking out naturalization papers, I take it that he is not a desirable citizen and should be deported. Population is what we need above everything, but I do not think it is right that we should allow foreign people to come here, partake of the benefits that this country affords to any man who wishes to earn a competence, and yet not assume and live up to the obligations of Canadian citizenship. The minister will be well advised to look into that phase of the question and, if possible, to make some provision in the Act to compel people coming into the country to signify their intention of really becoming Canadian citizens and of adding to the wealth and prosperity of the nation with which they have become affiliated.

Mr. CALDER: If I understand my hon. friend aright, he states that in the United States there is provision of law whereby an alien who has resided for a certain length of time in that country is compelled to make a declaration of his intention to take out naturalization papers. That is not the case.

Mr. J. M. DOUGLAS: I did not intend to convey that impression. I understand that he must signify his intention within three years if he intends to take out naturalization papers within five. We could go further and insist that he signify his intention of becoming a Canadian citizen.

Mr. W. D. EULER (Waterloo, North): The minister in explaining the Bill made a statement with which I heartily agree. I do not give it in his own words, but he intimated that as a result of the war the mind of the people at large is, perhaps, not quite normal and that unless the feeling of Parliament is well controlled we may do injustice to others as well as to ourselves. Without a doubt, the war has brought about a great many prejudices and has bred racial hatred. This, probably, is not to be wondered at. But, in reference to that, I should simply like to throw out this suggestion, that after all those prejudices and hatreds will not last forever, and at this particular time it should be borne in mind that, while those feelings are quite natural and to be expected as the result of the events of the prolonged war which is now coming to an end, those feelings are not a safe guide for those who are legislating for the best interests of Canada.

What impels me to rise just now particularly is the speech of the hon. member for South Perth (Mr. Steele) and that of the hon. member for Strathcona (Mr. J. M. Douglas) with regard to the Mennonites. I am glad to endorse much that those hon. gentlemen have said. I have read, with a good deal of regret, some statements by public men published in the press with regard to the Mennonites. I desire to say at the outset that I know nothing whatever of the Hutterites, but they have at times been described as Mennonites. I know very little of the Mennonites in the West; I know there is in Manitoba a sect of Mennonites which immigrated into Canada in 1873 or 1875, and that they were accorded certain privileges. Criticism has been made of those Mennonites and others living in the Canadian West: that they do not yield themselves to the customs of the country; that they will not permit their children to attend the ordinary public schools; that they have their own schools in which they teach German and other languages; that they do not live as ordinary Canadians do and as well-living citizens ought to live. I want also to make the point made by the hon. members for South Perth and Strathcona that there are Mennonites and Mennonites. In the county, the northern part of which I have the honour to represent, there are a large number of Mennonites; in fact, one township is inhabited almost entirely by people of that sect. They did not come from Russia, nor from Germany; they did not come from any enemy nation at all; they immigrated into Waterloo county about one hundred years ago from the state of Pennsylvania. I am not sure that some of them did not come from Germany into Pennsylvania a long time before that, but I know many of them claim that they came from Switzerland. For many years these people and their descendants have lived in the northern part of Waterloo county. Some of them have settled in Perth, some in Huron and some in Bruce, but the central settlement of the Mennonites is in my county. They are considered amongst us as being of our very best citizens,—and I use the term "citizens," although I think the hon. member for South Perth (Mr. Steele) rather qualified his statement with regard to that. They are the best of farmers, understanding farming well; they are clean in their living; they do not live in communities; each family lives by itself, and they have never to my knowledge raised the slightest objection to having their children attend the same schools as are attended by all the other children in our county.

Mr. CALDER: Are any numbers of that class of people immigrating into Ontario at the present time, or have they been immigrating during the last few years?

Mr. EULER: I know of none at all. In fact, the immigration of Mennonites into Waterloo county and, I presume, into any other county in Western Ontario, has been an accomplished fact for many years. Whether those people were at the time of their entering into Canada a hundred years ago of the same character and class as those with whom so much fault is found in the West, I do not know. It may be that they were, and if they were, there is at least reason for hope that, if a considerable number of those people have already entered the Western provinces, it will be found before long that they are after all pretty good citizens and an asset to the Dominion of Canada. We should take cognizance of those people. The reports that have been spread abroad as to the Mennonites generally will be found to be untrue and not founded in fact. It is true they live to some extent to themselves. They do not very readily intermarry with the other people in the county, but they are absolutely respectable, hardworking, responsible people. Their word is as good as their bond, and in my county it is a fact that any man would almost sooner take the word of a Mennonite than that of anybody else. That is a strong statement, but I believe it to be true; and as I said before, you cannot find the same fault with the Mennonites of Western Ontario as is apparently to be found with those of Western Canada. They do not ask for schools of their own in which they may teach a foreign language. There is no distinction whatever as regards education between the children of the Mennonite of Western Ontario and those of any other class.

Mr. GAUVREAU: They are absolutely loyal?

Mr. EULER: They are absolutely loyal. They cannot be anything else, because all their traditions are Canadian. They did not come from a European country; they came from the United States. It would be a great pity and injustice if, at some time, their friends and relatives in Pennsylvania —and they have many relatives in Pennsylvania whom they visit occasionally—who happen to belong to the Mennonite sect, should be excluded from Canada. I do not think they should. For many people a basis of objection to permitting the entrance of Mennonites into Canada is that they do not believe in war. They take the Bible literally; they are entirely conscientious in their attitude; they refuse to go to war because of conscientious objections. I think we all hope that we shall not again have a war, and if that be the case, it may be after all that the objection which is raised to the Mennonites will never again become a practical one.

Mr. CALDER: I should like to point out to the hon. member that this section governs immigrants; that it would not prevent persons residing in the United States from temporarily entering Canada for the purpose of visiting here. I think in section 44 of the Act as it stands there is a general power given to the minister, notwithstanding any provision in the law, to allow any particular person to come in on humanitarian grounds, or on any other grounds. That is a section which we are called upon to exercise quite frequently, because, as hon. members can understand, there will be many cases where a power of that kind should be exercised on purely humanitarian grounds. I wish to make it clear that there is in the present law sufficient power to deal with cases of that kind, should they arise.

[Mr. Euler.]

Mr. EULER: The minister states that there is provision in law whereby those people could come into Canada for the purpose of visiting. I would like to ask him, if Mennonites from Pennsylvania, for example, and they are of the same class as our own, should desire to locate in Western Ontario, whether the proposed measure would exclude them. If it did, it would not be a just law nor one in the interests of our people.

Mr. CALDER: There is power to exclude.

Mr. EULER: But would that mean the necessity of excluding those Mennonites? If such a clause is added I think it is desirable that the minister should be given discretionary powers to decide in individual cases.

Mr. EDWARDS: I understood my hon. friend to say that the Mennonites object to military service on conscientious grounds. Do they object to others fighting for them?

Mr. EULER: They object to war altogether.

Mr. EDWARDS: It must be obvious that if this class of people were in Canada in sufficient numbers they might very seriously affect our policy in defending ourselves.

Mr. EULER: If all of the inhabitants of Canada were Mennonites, Canada would never be at war.

Mr. COWAN: But should we not be under the domination of Germany to-day?

Mr. EULER: No aspersions can be cast on the loyalty of the Mennonites; they are true Canadians. I know of Mennonites helping to-day to rebuild France. They have no objection to performing non-combatant service, but they do believe it is absolutely wrong and sinful to destroy human life.

Mr. EDWARDS: Is not that a limited loyalty?

Mr. EULER: The hon. gentleman may put his own construction upon it.

Mr. EDWARDS: It is not one hundred per cent loyalty from my point of view. Does the hon. member consider it one hundred per cent loyalty?

Mr. EULER: I am not responsible for my hon. friend's opinion.

Mr. EDWARDS: What about yours?

Mr. EULER: Should I be in order, Mr. Chairman, in discussing one or two other clauses now?

The CHAIRMAN: It would be much more in order if my hon. friend would wait till the particular clauses are called. By the unanimous consent of the Committee a great deal of latitude has been allowed to hon. members during the past two days, but I must draw attention to the fact that there has been a tendency in the House of Commons for some time to discuss the principle of a Bill in Committee instead of on the second reading. The discussion which has taken place to-day, while very interesting, should have taken place on the second reading. The minister has moved for the consideration of section 13 and I think hon. members should confine their remarks to the subject matter of that section.

Mr. EULER: It was not my intention to speak at any length on the other clauses. I had only one or two remarks to make.

The CHAIRMAN: The trouble is that the moment one hon. member makes even one remark on some other clause, an answer is made by an hon. member on the other side of the House and a very lengthy discussion may ensue. I must ask the hon. member to adhere strictly to the rules of the Committee.

Mr. JACOBS: I think the wording of the section would be improved by substituting the words "by reason of" for the word "because" in the seventeenth line.

Mr. CRONYN: May I suggest that this clause be allowed to stand for the present? I have not seen a copy of the amendment, and it is therefore quite impossible for me to judge whether it meets the case.

Mr. CALDER: We all know the objection that has been taken to doing things under the War Measures Act while Parliament is in session, and the only reason I suggested that this section be considered at this time was that I might have the approval of the Committee before taking action under the War Measures Act. If the Committee agrees to the principle, I think we might very well take immediate action under the War Measures Act to prevent these people from coming into Canada.

Mr. McKENZIE: May I suggest that if immediate action is necessary it could be taken under the present Act, which provides that you can prohibit for a stated period or permanently the landing in Canada or the landing at any specified port of entry in Canada of immigrants belonging to any race deemed unsuited to the climate or requirements of Canada or of immigrants of any specified class, occupation or character. Surely we can specify the Hutterites as a class of people unsuited to Canada? I think any lawyer, in fact, any member, will agree that the minister has power to take immediate action under the law as it now stands.

Mr. EDWARDS: I understood the Minister of Immigration to invite an expression of opinion as to the advisability of taking immediate action for the exclusion of these people who are seeking entry into Canada at the present time. In my opinion, and I think I am speaking for every one of my constituents, the Government should take immediate action by Order in Council, or any other expeditious means, to prevent the entrance of Hutterites, who, I believe, are of the same class and kidney as the Mennonites and very similar to the Doukhobors. The hon. member for Kitchener would like the bars let down and these people now living in Pennsylvania to come and settle in Western Ontario. He has made the remarkable statement that these people are absolutely loyal. What does he mean by absolutely loyal? I would take the qualifying word "absolutely" to mean that they were loyal in every sense of the word. These people who would not lift a hand to save this country from being placed under the heel of the Hun, but were willing to let others go across the seas and fight and die for principles that we hold dear, are in the opinion of the hon. member absolutely loyal. That may be his idea of absolute loyalty, but it is not mine.

We do not want in Western Canada or in Ontario or in any province in the Dominion people who are not prepared to assume their full share of the responsibilities of citizenship. If there are in the United States or Europe people of any class, whether they be called Mennonites, Hutterites or any other kind of "ites," we do not want them to come to Canada and enjoy the privileges and advantages of life under the British flag if they are willing to allow others to do the fighting for them while they sit at home in peace and plenty. We certainly do not want that kind of cattle in this country. Indeed not only do we not want that kind of cattle, but I would go further and support the view that we should deport from Canada others of the same class who were allowed to come in by mistake.

Mr. PEDLOW: I rise to a point of order.

Mr. EDWARDS: I would say, Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN: The hon. member for South Renfrew has risen to a point of order.

Mr. PEDLOW: The hon. member for Frontenac (Mr. Edwards) has referred to a certain class of people, who are conscientious objectors, as "cattle." I object to that statement, Mr. Chairman. I am of that class myself, and I object to being included under the description of "cattle."

The CHAIRMAN: I did not understand that the hon. gentleman's remark was addressed to any hon. member of the House, and I therefore cannot find the point of order.

Mr. PEDLOW: Probably my point of order is not quite understood. I belong to a religious denomination known as the Society of Friends. The principles of that society are opposed to war and we are therefore conscientious objectors: We object to taking direct part in war. The hon. member has described that class of people as cattle. Now, Mr. Chairman, my objection is to these people, who are in every other respect decent and eminently respectable and loyal citizens being referred to by the term which the hon. member for Frontenac has seen fit to use. As a member of the Society of Friends I object to their being called cattle, and would ask that the hon. gentleman be requested to withdraw that statement.

Mr. EDWARDS: Mr. Chairman, I will withdraw the statement, and apologize to the cattle.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Order.

The CHAIRMAN: The rule laid down by Sir Erskine May in connection with the point of order raised by the hon. member for South Renfrew is to be found at page 99. He says:

> If a member should say nothing disrespectful to the House or the chair, or personally opprobrious to other members, or in violation of other rules of the House, he may state whatever he thinks fit in debate, however offensive it may be to the feelings, or injurious to the character, of individuals.

I understood the remarks of the hon. member for Frontenac to be addressed against a class of people not represented in the House and therefore I cannot order him to withdraw them.

Mr. PEDLOW: I do not think you quite understood the hon. gentleman's remarks, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN: I understood the hon. gentleman to refer to the Mennonites. If his remarks were addressed to the hon. member for South Renfrew I would certainly request him to withdraw them.

Mr. EDWARDS: I had not the hon. member for South Renfrew in mind when I made the remarks to which objection has been taken. I certainly had no thought of the Quakers, although I would include the Quakers with the Mennonites or Doukhobors or any other class in this country who would object on conscientious or any other grounds to assuming their full responsibilities as citizens. When I used the word "cattle" I did not notice any hon. member on the other side of the House with horns or other characteristics of these four-footed animals enough to call the word to my mind. If I had looked more closely, however, I might have deemed it proper to use another word describing a different class of four-footed creatures that are more distinguished for the length of their ears than for horns. Then the hon. gentleman might have called me to order.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Order.

The CHAIRMAN: Order. The language now used by the hon. member for Frontenac is absolutely undignified and unparliamentary. It is out of order, should not be used in the House of Commons and must be withdrawn.

Mr. EDWARDS: I bow to your ruling, Mr. Chairman, and hasten to do so before you declare it six o'clock. I withdraw.

At six o'clock the Committee took recess.

After Recess.

The Committee resumed at eight o'clock.

On section 13:

Mr. EDWARDS: I just want to add one or two remarks before this clause is disposed of. I got in wrong with certain hon. gentlemen by using the word "cattle" in reference to certain people that I thought were an undesirable class to have in this country, or to be allowed to come in to any great extent. My use of the word—I am not going to withdraw it—had special reference to Doukhobors and such people as that. I had no reference whatever to Quakers or conscientious objectors. May I remind the Committee of a little incident that took place in this country a few years ago when some of these people—the Doukhobors they were called—went on a tramp, or march, through the country, men, women and children, absolutely naked. Is that the kind of people we want in Canada? I was perfectly right in offering my apology to the cattle when making a comparison between them and people of that kind. Cattle are pretty high priced now; they are valuable. That is not the class of people we want. It was a mistake that they were ever permitted to come in. It is a reflection upon the intelligence of the people who were administering the affairs of this country that they were allowed to come in under special conditions. It emphasizes, in my opinion, the mistake which has been made along immigration lines by every Government in Canada from 1867 down to the present time. One hon. gentleman spoke about the success that had attended the immigration policy during the Laurier regime. In my judgment, instead of estimating the success of our immigration policy by the number of immigrants we have obtained, in looking back over past history, we might take the number of immigrants as an indication of the lack of success which has been achieved, or the lack of thought which has been given to our immigration policy; for, just to the extent which we have been successful in point of numbers, in my judgment, we have been unsuccessful from the proper standpoint of getting people into this country.

Just one word in regard to another class which may be considered as being mentioned in clause 13—those who come under the designation of the conscientious objectors. I need not emphasize now what I said in that regard before six o'clock. I said then, and I still maintain, that we have a country here sufficiently attractive to people of other countries in Europe, or other parts of the world, that we can select the class of people that come to this country, and we should select them. If a man comes here, no matter from where he comes or what he may call himself, to take advantage of our splendid resources and to share in all the privileges that go with citizenship, we must make him understand distinctly that it will be part of his duty as a citizen to take his full share of the responsibilities of citizenship. If our country is in danger, if its rights have to be defended, or if we find it necessary to go to war, every person, no matter what he calls himself or to what sect he belongs, whether he is a conscientious objector or anything else, should come forward and do his full share and take his full part in the fight. Why should we open the doors of our country to all classes from the continent of Europe, to the people that have governed the continent with their doctrines and with the leprosy of their political ideas? What do we want them here for? Are we to consider that a man is a desirable immigrant because he weighs so many pounds and gives evidence of being physically able to work? Is that the only thing we are to go by?

One hon. gentleman objected to a reading or writing test. We are perfectly justified in requiring that a man should be able to read some language before he comes into this country. Fancy a community in a part of Canada—hundreds of them—who can neither read nor write. We are appealing to all classes of the agricultural community to farm along the best lines. We are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars getting out agricultural bulletins. For what purpose? They are got out to send to people who are engaged in agricultural pursuits in order to give them the advantage of the results of scientific research that has taken place at our agricultural colleges, farms and schools. What is the good of getting out these bulletins if a considerable proportion of your population cannot read or understand them?

The minister called attention to the fact that we had not done our part in trying to make citizens of these people. He said that we had failed in that respect. I think the hon. gentleman was perfectly right in that. We are not going to help any by allowing those people to come in here regardless of whether they can read or write any language. How are we to instruct these people or to give them the knowledge that we expect to give them along patriotic lines, how are we going to give them any idea of the British institutions under which we live if they cannot read? We are perfectly within our rights in insisting upon an educational standard at least to the extent that they should be able to read some language before they come into this country? We have been over anxious in trying to fill up the country. We have lots of space, lots of agricultural land, lots of opportunities for people, and we have thought that perhaps the larger our population the more we could divide the burdens of taxation and the public debt. That probably is all right. But we are in a peculiar position in Canada at the present time and would like to get the right class of people here to help in carrying through our period of reconstruction. In my judgment, we do not want in this country, for many years to come, an inferior class who will only increase our difficulties and troubles, so far as the labour market is concerned, without assisting us to any material extent in bearing the burden of our national obligations. For years we have placed restrictions upon certain people entering Canada. We have placed restrictions upon the Japanese, only a certain number of whom are allowed to enter Canada, and we have also placed restrictions upon Chinese immigration, and that has apparently been accepted by both parties in the Dominion as a proper policy. Now, it does seem to me that we have been illogical, to say the least of it, in placing restrictions upon the entrance into Canada of a progressive people like the Japanese, and a decent people such as the Chinese have shown themselves to be—at any rate all that I have seen coming into the country—and throwing our doors wide open to immigrants from countries in central Europe whom we have been fighting for the last four and a half years, and with whom we shall practically still be at war until peace is signed.

I am in entire accord with the idea of placing restrictions upon immigrants coming to this country. There is no necessity for us to cheapen Canada in the eyes of the world. We believe that we have the very best country on the face of the earth, and we can with confidence invite immigrants to come here. But I do not think it should be necessary for us to spend a dollar in inducing them to come. Our country is sufficiently advertised in the countries that we want immigrants from, so that we need not spend any more money for that purpose. Where do we want immigrants from? Principally, from the British Isles, from the United States, and from France, Belgium and Italy, the countries which have been allied with us in this war. If these countries have people to spare let them come, because we have tested them as they have tested us, during the past four and a half years of war. We know what these nationalities are like, and we know that we can depend upon them in a crisis or in an emergency; they will not hide behind any conscientious objections to military service, nor behind any Doukhobor or Mennonite doctrine; they will fight if necessary for the liberties of the country in the future as they fought for liberty along with us in the recent war. That is the class of people we want here. You do not need to advertise Canada to them because they know what it is like. The money we needed for the purposes of immigration, in my belief, should be devoted to a rigorous inspection on the other side of the Atlantic, before the immigrants board ocean steamships destined for Canada, supplemented by a further inspection on this side, to see that we exclude from the Dominion a class of people who have shown themselves to be troublesome in their own country, and from whom we can expect nothing but trouble if they are admitted here. Let me say emphatically that we do not want that class of people here at all; we have too many of them at the present time. In the past we have allowed things to drift, we have been too lax entirely. There has been too much compromise with these people, and too much compromise in the western provinces, in the way of allowing these people to settle in colonies and communities by themselves, to retain their own languages and their own customs, and their own ideas of how people should live. They have brought from Europe their own ideas of how a country should be run, and their ideas are not our ideas, and they are not the ideas, I venture to say, of any member of this House. Therefore I say we are perfectly justified in taking steps to maintain the high standard of civilization that we now have in this country. If there has been any lowering of that standard it is not due to our native-born population, or to immigrants from the British Isles or the United States. Any lowering of the standard of civilization in Canada has been brought about by our lax immigration laws in permitting the entry of people who never should have been allowed to come here, people who have shown themselves to be absolutely unfit for the privileges and liberties they have enjoyed here, and who refused to come forward and fight for those liberties and privileges. That is not the class we want in Canada, and I for one will support the Government in the most drastic legislation it can bring forward to restrict and prohibit that class of people from coming into Canada. I will go further and say I will support the Government in any move to debar from Canada those people who have shown themselves to be unreliable when the test came, and proved themselves to be an undesirable class of citizens.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE (Edmonton East): The position taken by the member for Lethbridge (Mr. Buchanan) is the position that I also desire to take in this matter as a member from the province of Alberta. I intend to speak on one of the points that has been brought up this afternoon when the Franchise Bill was introduced, but as I have been subjected to attacks in the press of Canada in that regard I deem it advisable to discuss at some length what has taken place and to refute the charges that have been made in several newspapers in reference to myself. This afternoon the hon. member for Springfield (Mr. Richardson) laid a charge against a population of three hundred and fifty thousand souls residing in the West, basing his charge on statements contained in a letter from D. A. Ross, a member of the Manitoba Legislature. I do not believe the rumours referred to, and I will give the Committee the grounds for my belief in a few moments. With the intention of assisting the member for Springfield I asked him to lay upon the Table the letter upon which he based his accusations, and the abrupt reply I received was that the member for Springfield would do just as he liked. I want to tell that hon. gentleman to-night that whenever he, and his friend from Kingston (Mr. Nickle), move resolutions, and amendments to resolutions, in this House, and line up the members behind them, and then secretly enter into a compact with a member of the Government that they shall withdraw such resolutions and amendments, and place members in a difficult position and force them to vote against their convictions so as not to give a slap in the face to the Government—I tell that hon. gentleman the next time I shall vote as I please, and I am sure that in saying so I am voicing the sentiments of a large number of my colleagues in the House. The hon. member was unfortunate in most of his irresponsible statements this afternoon, and unfortunate also in the choice of his language. In the Evening Telegram of October 8. 1918, there is an article written about me appearing in special correspondence from G. C. Porter.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Why not send for the hon. member for Springfield?

The CHAIRMAN: Order.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: He will get it. The heading of the correspondence referred to in the Telegram is as follows:

To restore vote to Aliens.—Hon J. A. Calder makes move.—H. A. Mackie, M.P., Admits Appeal to Premier Borden on behalf of Ukrainians.

In this article they make an attack upon the Minister of Immigration and Colonization and upon me, saying that we were endeavouring to restore the vote to those who were the enemies of the country. They conclude the article by saying that "Mr. Mackie, who has been chosen to carry on the negotiations with western members of this province, is a native of Quebec, a French Canadian Catholic." I shall be pleased, with your permission, Mr. Chairman, to file this article so that it may be published in Hansard. I do not blame the Evening Telegram, because the article in question is the special correspondence of Mr. Porter of Winnipeg.

Mr. CHAIRMAN: If the hon. gentleman wants any article to appear in Hansard, he will certainly have to read it.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Read it.

Mr. MACKIE: I did not like to take up the time of the Committee. It is as follows:

(Special Correspondence to The Telegram from G. C. Porter.)

Edmonton, Alta., Oct. 8.—Intrigue is rampant through the west to have the Dominion Elections Act disfranchising electors of alien enemy races abolished at the approaching session of Parliament. Hon. James Calder last week laid the plan before the Great War Veterns' Executive Committee, of Edmonton, and this week will take the executive at Calgary into his confidence. H. A. Mackie, M.P. for East Edmonton, has been selected to communicate with all the western members to see how they feel on the subject. He said to-day that he would move the resolution when Parliament opens. He admitted frankly that he has wired the Prairie members the following:

Seek Revision of Act.

"Local Ukrainian Association want revision of War Times Election Act relative to disfranchisement with a view of doing non-combatant work at soldier's pay and taking a share in the war. Their bishops and priests favourable. All western members are being canvassed. If Government is favourable will you concur?"

This is supposed to be a telegram which I sent. As a matter of fact, the statement is not correct. The article continues:

Mr. Mackie said he had already received some replies, both favourable and unfavourable. He defended his position very vigorously, saying this would solve alien enemy labour question of the prairies. He limited his observations to the Ukrainians.

Veterans to Oppose.

But Hon. J. A. Calder, in talking with the Soldiers' Committee, referred to all alien enemies disfranchised. The returned soldiers are individually bitterly opposed to the idea, and it will come up for discussion on Thursday night. The members are greatly excited, as this coming at the time of the immigration of so many German Mennonites into the prairies, has provoked the returned soldiers to desperation.

Not Wanted.

Tom Dace, Alberta's representative of the Dominion Great War Veterans' Executive, said he would not express an opinion until after the meeting to be held following the Calder suggestion of suspending the Disfranchisement Act. It was so serious that 2,000 members here should first be permitted to discuss the subject before he spoke. He did, however, say that he and all other soldiers were bitterly opposed to these Mennonites coming in here with their German schools and exemptions. As he put it: "We don't want any of these people being spewed out of the U.S., and the 2,000 returned members here and the similar number in Calgary are a raging volcano on the subject of the preferred treatment the alien enemies are and have been receiving from the Government."

He added that the soldiers' executive put the Mennonite menace up to Hon. Mr. Calder at the meeting here as they did to Hon. N. W. Rowell.

Mr. CALDER: Where was that meeting supposed to have been held?

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: In Edmonton. I will refer to it; I know what he means. I just want to give my friend Porter something that is coming to him in a few minutes:

—and neither faced the question squarely, and the soldiers were much disturbed by their equivocating demeanour. Each said he would have to take the subject up at Ottawa before making definite reply.

BISHOP BUDKA AGAIN.

Bishop Budka, of the Ukrainians, was in Edmonton last week in connection with the scheme to get his people's franchise restored, and has been working quietly all over the prairies for some time in this direction. He is now in Ottawa. This is the same Bishop Budka who was charged with sedition at Hafford in July, but acquitted, and it was Budka who issued a pastoral letter to his flock advising them to return to Austria and fight for the fatherland. He escaped serious consequences because the document was issued prior to Britain entering the war.

EDITOR GETS THREE YEARS.

Ukrainians are mostly Austrians, and there are from 70,000 to 100,000 of these alien enemies in the prairies. The editor of the chief Ukrainian paper at Winnipeg was sentenced to three years in penitentiary for seditious utterances.

There was intense excitement among G.W.V., Next of Kin British Citizenship League and Sons of England over the Mennonite menace, that the latest disclosure of the intrigue to give the alien enemy back his franchise, has enormously increased the feeling of alarm among patriotic societies, and feeling is general that the Act is likely to be suspended unless the greatest energy is displayed to convince the Government of its unpopularity.

BELONGS TO QUEBEC.

Mr. Mackie, who has been chosen to carry on negotiations with western members for this purpose, is a native of Quebec, a French-Canadian Catholic, and in his constituency there are two thousand alien enemies. His majority in the last election was 600, exclusive of the soldiers' vote, which gave him nearly 2,000 majority. He said he opposed the disfranchisement of these people last fall until he learned that the Imperial authorities did not want them sent overseas as soldiers.

The statement made by Porter with regard to the Minister of Immigration and myself is absolutely false and manufactured from his own immoral imagination. A meeting was held in the Macdonald Hotel, Edmonton, at which the Minister of Immigration and myself were present, along with a number of civilians and soldiers. We made a protest against the entry of Mennonites into Canada; not a word was said about the Disfranchisement Act, nor did I have any communication with the minister in connection with this matter, good, bad or indifferent, except that I stated to him that I was sending a petition to the Government asking that the War-time Elections Act be rescinded so that the Ruthenians who are British subjects could be conscripted for non-combatant work in Canada. This man Porter comes into my office and says: "I understand that you are to present a petition to the Dominion Government asking for the recision of the War-times Elections Act." He passes off as my friend; his zeal began with hypocrisy and ended with treachery. He says: "I am your friend. You are doing a great deal for the soldiers." I assented to all these remarks, and then when I told him what I was doing he began to ask me whether I was a Mason or a Roman Catholic or a Protestant. I resented these remarks and told him where he was "getting off at." Before he left he asked my permission to publish the interview and I granted it.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Was that before the election?

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: This was in October, 1918. What I told him was this: That the Ruthenian Association had asked me to send a petition to the Dominion Government asking for the rescision of the War-Time Elections Act so that Ruthenians, British subjects, could be conscripted to do non-combatant work in Canada.

I told him I thought that was the proper attitude to take. I did not see how I could reconcile my views with those of the Government who had disfranchised those people, because, even although they were not wanted overseas and their opinions might not be taken seriously in war matters in the Dominion of Canada, they could have been recruited for non-combatant work. Those are the views which I held then and which I hold at the present time. He spoke of Bishop Budka. I never met Bishop Budka until the month of February of this year, when I was on my way from Edmonton to this House, and in the presence of the hon. member for North Winnipeg (Mr. Blake), I told the reverend gentleman that if what was being circulated about him was true, I would be one of the first to ask for his deportation. In that regard the hon. member for North Winnipeg put upon the Order Paper a certain number of questions which were answered by the Acting Minister of Justice (Mr. Meighen), and I shall refer to that very shortly.

This report of Porter makes out that I am allied with Bishop Budka, and I do not know what purpose he has in view when he says that I am from Quebec, a French Canadian and a Roman Catholic. Again, Mr. Porter is not stating what I told him, and it is quite evident that he intended to do me an injury, one that I could not repair by correspondence through the press. I wish to point out to the press gallery here the power that they have in destroying men in public life by writing such articles as this, if they emanated from them directly. Not very long ago, the hon. member for North Simcoe (Mr. Currie) had to complain about the Globe, and may I tell my friend, Marchington, that he had better pay a little stricter attention to the truthfulness of his premises. There is only one member of the press gallery that is safe, and that is Ford, because he never transmits anything West. This man Porter came to me as a friend; at first he deceived me and at last he betrayed me by a most brazen and audicious falsehood. But that is not all.

We come to Jack Canuck, of January 11, 1919. I do not purpose putting Jack Canuck on Hansard. This paper that lives and thrives on carrion meat, is the scavenger in the political and social life of Canada and does not deserve anything more than a passing reference from me.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Is that a Government organ?

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: I do not know. It it is, the Government should blush for it. It is published in the holy city of Toronto.

Mr. MICHAEL CLARK: Is it an Opposition organ?

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: It may be an Opposition organ. Some parts of it, I imagine, came from them. The hon. member for North Winnipeg (Mr. Blake) put the following questions to the Government:

1. Is the Government aware as to whether or not Bishop Budka (Ukrainian), resident at Winnipeg, was charged with sedition at Hafford, Sask., in July, 1918?

2. Has the Government any knowledge of any accusation being made against the said Bishop?

3. If so, has the Government taken any steps to inquire into such accusations?

4. Has the Government taken any steps to prosecute the said Bishop for his said alleged utterances?

5. Has the Government any intention of deporting the said Bishop? If not, why not?

The answers were the following:

Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN:

1. Yes, but the charge was subsequently withdrawn.

2. He has been accused of disloyalty on several occasions.

3. Investigation has been made but no evidence to substantiate the accusations has been submitted.

4. No grounds disclosed to prosecute.

I see by to-night's paper that the reverend gentleman is brought to answer a charge before some local authority in Winnipeg by virtue of an Order in Council passed by the Local Legislature on 12th February, 1919. It is quite evident that Premier Norris is not a member of the Federal Government, or he would be able to write out a better Order in Council than the one which I hold in my hand, which says: Wheras this and whereas that—

Mr. LEMIEUX: He has not had the practice.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: That is what I say.

That pursuant to and under the provisions of the said charter—and so forth.

—a board to be known as the Alien Investigation Board of Manitoba with powers to investigate the whole situation.

That is the Order in Council constituting a board consisting of certain gentlemen in Manitoba to investigate the whole situation. What is the whole situation? What is the effect of this Order in Council except to foster a political move?

And what the Minister of Immigration and Colonization (Mr. Calder) said this afternoon is quite true, namely, that we have done nothing for these people, whom we have brought to this country, except to exploit them. There is, indeed, exploitation. I know, as a matter of fact, that a politician in the employ of the Norris Government has a room in Labour Hall, and he gets these people to come and report to him and he tells them: " Now, here is your exemption card from deportation; you are all right; keep that in your pocket or you will be deported, and the Norris Government is preventing you from being deported, by virtue of an Order in Council which is bound to investigate the whole situation." Are these people being treated fairly? Have they been treated fairly in Saskatchewan or Alberta, where, for instance, in a constituency I know a local member, a man totally incapable of broad and generous thought, who has three political organizations, English, French and Russian, that go forth with three political war-cries: "Long live the British Empire," "Long live Quebec," and "Russia forever?" And here, lo and behold, the Norris Government comes along with an Order in Council that is passed by virtue of some statute in Manitoba authorizing a committee of three men to investigate the situation, and the Rev. Bishop Budka is being investigated at the present time. If it be true that he has done anything against this country, I believe the Dominion Government, and not the Provincial Government of Manitoba, will have to take steps to deport him.

Mr. MICHAEL CLARK: On what side was that provincial member at the last election?

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: He is a member of the local Legislature of Alberta, and since the creation of that province there has been only one political side and I believe they are about to stick there for a longer time.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Who are the members of that board?

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: Judge Myers, a member of the Great War Veterans, and the name of the third I do not recollect. Adverting again to the article which was written against me and which was trying to link me up with the Rev. Bishop Budka, who was supposed to be guilty of seditious utterances and to be a traitor to this country, let me point out what I petitioned the Dominion Government to do, because this is the only place in which I can at least explain my conduct and give any publicity in the Dominion of Canada in refutation of articles which are absolutely untrue. On October 16, 1918, I forwarded this petition to Sir Robert Borden, and I shall read only portions of it, as it is rather long:—

> Recent representations were made to me by the local Ruthenian Association that the "War-time Elections Act" ought to be rescinded so as to permit the Ukrainians in Canada to render non-combatant service. To ascertain the feeling of the western members I wired all but two in the four provinces. The replies are enclosed herein. Some disclose that the member is not familiar with the law. Others show an open mind, and still others are decidedly against that proposition. . . . . .

> We now consider the advisability of rescinding the War-time Elections Act in so far as the foreign population, whose citizenship has been suspended, so that every one may render a non-combatant service at soldier's pay for the balance of this war, since we are forbidden by the Imperial authorities to take them for combatant service. . . . . .
>
> I have the assurance of the Ruthenian Associations here that they, supported by their clergy, are prepared to instruct their people and explain why their franchise was suspended and why they should serve, if allowed.

Is that what Porter said? The statement I gave to him is the statement I have just read, but the statement he gave to the press links me up with Bishop Budka. For the purpose of feeling the pulse of the Western members, I wired them, because they were all as much interested as myself and I felt that they would support me in having the Act rescinded so as to ensure a large number of these people doing war work in Canada. I stated to the Prime Minister some of the objections that were raised:

> Objection is taken that their non-combatant work would interfere with labour and their organizations. Non-combatant workers need not disturb economic conditions. The present equilibrium can be maintained and the surplus value of earnings can be diverted to a fund for returned soldiers.

That is what I was asking for, and what I told Porter, that the Act should be rescinded so that these people could do non-combatant service in Canada at $1.10 a day. And I said: Let the surplus value of their earnings go to a fund for returned soldiers. That was the request I made of the Dominion Government.

In 1916 a letter was addressed by the Ukrainians of Northern Alberta to Mr. R. B. Bennett, president of the National Service Commission, Ottawa:

> A recent political development in Europe, namely, the establishment of the independent kingdom of Poland and the promise of internal autonomy for the kingdom of Galicia, are principally responsible for the present letter addressed to you as Chairman of National Commissions, to secure your consent and support in adopting a certain new policy in our recruiting campaign.

This letter points out that the Ukrainians were willing to do national service, and they asked Mr. Bennett how best that could be brought about. On page 7, the letter says:

> The method of securing recruits should be gone into fully by the writer who is in a position to know what would be the best way to reach these people and to make them understand the reason why they have an interest in the present war. I should at all times be ready and willing to give you the assistance necessary in forming the plan.

May I call your attention also to the advisability of undertaking the recruiting among the Ruthenians of the western provinces by stating that it would very materially assist the undertaking of the Government to raise 500,000 troops in Canada?

I would like to point out to you that in the 218th Battalion, commanded by Lieut.-Col. Cornwall, there are a large number of Ruthenians who have volunteered to enlist and have been accepted and Lieut.-Col. Cornwall informs me that they are of the very best material in his whole battalion. Lieut.-Col. Cornwall also informs me that the Ruthenians in his battalion have shown a remarkable ability to learn the English language and that they understand the commands given in English just as well as any English speaking soldiers.

I should be very happy to read at your earliest convenience, that your Committee has given this matter their earnest consideration, and I trust that you will come to the conclusion that the Ruthenians in the Dominion of Canada are able to serve Canadian interests; that we are willing to become better Canadians if you will assist us; and that we realize fully the justness of the cause of the Allies in the present war.

In 1916, therefore, these people were asking to do national service, but the Government did not see fit to adopt their suggestion. What do we find at the present time? Let me read a petition that was addressed by the Ukrainian Council of Canada to the Dominion Government by these people who were alleged this afternoon to be uprising in Manitoba and creating a Bolshevik movement. I shall not read all the "Whereas" clauses, but I shall be glad to show the petition in its entirety to any hon. gentleman who cares to call upon me. I might explain that the Ukrainian Council represents 350,000 people, not 70,000 or 100,000, as has been stated. The Ruthenians do not all come from Galicia. Some come from Bukowina, Hungary, and the little Russias, so called. They are all the same people; they are Ruthenians, but they call themselves Ukrainians because it is the Ukrainian family in language, literature and ideals. The chances are that the Ukrainian republic will be established by the Peace Conference in Paris, which will furnish the key to the eastern situation. What did the Ukrainian Council ask the Dominion Government to do? The petition reads in part:

Whereas such politicians are advocating indiscriminate deportation.

Whereas, Ukrainians in Canada realize they have not become Canadianized as rapidly as might have been expected.

Whereas the Ukrainians are of the opinion that Canada cannot be a nation until a system of education is evolved whereby all people shall learn to suffer alike and to love alike, to revere the same great historical figures and to interpret the meaning of the flag in the same way.

Now therefore be it resolved that we on behalf of the Ukranian people of Canada, humbly petition the Canadian Government:
(a) To establish a national school as a remedy to the evils enumerated herein.

(b) That the Canadian Government do deport from this country all enemy aliens who have committed an offence against this country or the British Empire during the time of the war.

(c) That the Canadian Government do amend the Naturalization Act so as to make education a test, providing that no one shall be naturalized from now on unless he is capable of reading and writing the English language, with the proviso, however, that the Supreme Court judges or the Superior Court judges of this country shall take into consideration, such cases, for instance, of a man who is of an age and so situated that he could not be expected reasonably to acquire more than a smattering of the English language; trusting that such judges stand historically and traditionally as a great body of men who come between the legislative and the executive of the state and the public, and your petitioners shall ever pray.

EXECUTIVE OF THE UKRAINIAN PEOPLE'S COUNCIL OF CANADA.

What then do we find these people doing who, the hon. member for Springfield, seeking cheap notoriety, says, are uprising?

The CHAIRMAN: I think I shall have to ask the hon. member to withdraw the expression that an hon. member made use of his place in this House to seek cheap notoriety.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: If the expression is not parliamentary I gladly withdraw it, but I still believe it is true. These people in their petition to the Dominion Government asked that the Ukrainians in Western Canada be permitted to serve with the English and French forces to put down Bolshevism in Europe.

In conclusion, I say that before hon. members make a statement which has a tendency to stigmatize 350,000 citizens of Canada they should first take pains to find out the facts.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Speaking of this Mr. Porter, my hon. friend said that he attempts to link his name with Bishop Budka, and before that my hon. friend referred to the accusation of sedition brought against the Bishop. Will he explain that point, because there are so many rumours about Bishop Budka?

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: The difficulty that has arisen in Western Canada regarding Bishop Budka is a religious one. There is a difficulty between the Greek Orthodox and the Greek Catholic. The Greek Catholics recognize the Pope, but are not subject to his authority, instead of recognizing the Czar of Russia who was a religious and a political leader at one and the same time. So far as I have been able to ascertain a meeting was called prior to the declaration of war by Britain and the reverend Bishop attended and exhorted his people to advise their friends across the seas not to think of coming to Canada any longer because there was a question of labour and they were not in a position to take care of them. Is that the explanation that the hon. member wishes?

Mr. LEMIEUX: The charge of sedition was referred to.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: Yes, there was a charge of sedition against the Bishop. He was tried and acquitted. Other rumours have been circulated about his attitude, but so far nothing has come out of them, and the Acting Minister of Justice replied to the question which was put to this House by the hon. member for North Winnipeg. Under the Order in Council the whole situation is now being investigated and the Bishop will either be requested to get out of Canada or will once more be excused. I wish to say, in conclusion, that Porter could not have had any intention other than to create a feeling of antagonism against me at the hands of the returned soldiers, or to create a religious prejudice against me. It is true that I come from Quebec, but that is not the way Porter intended the remarks. I do not blush when I say that I do come from Quebec, which has given to the political and social life of Canada a Mercier, a Chapleau, a Lafontaine, and last but not least, a Laurier. And if hon. members will press me I will say why I prefer to come from that province than from any other part of Canada. The returned soldier is full of speculative ideals and he would like to see society differently constituted. But the time politician is the man who will 9 p.m. make the most of the material he finds in the country. A disposition to preserve and an ability to improve taken together form what in my opinion is the essence of true statesmanship in the matter of immigration.

Mr. W. D. COWAN (Regina): May I ask a question of the Minister of Immigration, in regard to the question that was brought up by the hon. member for East Edmonton? Will you deny that you are associated with the telegrams with which our country was flooded, after your visit to Edmonton—

The CHAIRMAN: I will have to ask the hon. member to address his remarks to the Chair.

[Mr. H. A. Mackie.]

Mr. COWAN: Well, Mr. Chairman, I will speak to the minister through you. At that particular time our section of the country, or at least a great many people, condemned the Minister of Immigration because they believed, and it was generally asserted, that he originated the telegrams which were sent out by the hon. member for Edmonton stating that the War-time Elections Act was to be repealed on condition that these men would go into non-combatant service.

Mr. CALDER: This is the first time I have had any inkling that that question has exercised the minds of persons out West. I had nothing either directly or indirectly to do with the origin of these telegrams. I have never discussed the matter in any shape or form with the member for Edmonton. It originated entirely with himself, and I did not know that the matter was of any concern to any people in Western Canada. I may say this too: I am fairly well acquainted with Mr. Porter, who has written and said a great deal about myself, and I ceased long ago to pay any attention to anything he either writes or says.

Mr. F. L. DAVIS (Neepawa): About twenty years ago the Ruthenians began to come into the district for which I am now the sitting member. At that time there was about a township and a half immediately south of the southwest corner of the Riding Mountain Reserve which was wild land heavily wooded and hilly, with a ravine separating it on the east side from the English settlement. It lies about fifteen miles from the town of Neepawa. These people came in and took up that section of the country. They have now about 60 per cent of it clear and about 25 to 30 per cent under cultivation, and they have been there from fifteen to twenty years. I have had a great deal to do with these people generally. They do not attempt to cultivate a whole quarter-section of land, but as a rule divide it into smaller areas, 40 or 50 acres, and as you go along the roads in one of their districts it is much like one of the river settlements in the West, a continuous village. The houses generally are built of logs, very neatly plastered—which work the women generally do—and are a story and a half high, roofed with shingles, or even thatched. The farm buildings are of log, and they are generally thatched with straw The people start out clearing a very small bit of land for a garden or a small field, and the men go into the harvest fields every season for labour, and this has been the source of our labour in the West. The older men who are grown up when they come, except those who have been out in employment hired by the year, very seldom get any command of the English language, and I regret to say that very few of the children have any knowledge of English. It will be understood that, due to political conditions into which I need not enter now, prior to 1915 in the province of Manitoba we had an abominable abuse of the bilingual situation which was first created in 1897.

Owing to that, the Government there permitted young Ruthenians to go to the Normal school, obtain certificates as teachers, and then go into schools to instruct the pupils. There was a stipulation, or a regulation, that these men should be able to speak English. I will tell you how far they were able to speak English. I have had three of these teachers at different times come into my office to do business, and they have had to go out and get an interpreter in order to talk to me. Yet, from a source like that, we were expected to get teachers who would have some command of the English language. That was the situation down to 1915. I, with many others who were interested in politics, I suppose, was to blame for having got these people naturalized as speedily as possible. I have paid $30, or $50, at a time for naturalization papers for them, and I suppose half of them knew practically nothing about the political situation. But we were all doing it and it had become a common practice in the West.

Sometimes we talk of these people being put into settlements and segregated. I do not know just how you are going to deal with that situation. A number of these people come in, they get their friends from the Old Country to come, and they buy land in a neighbourhood. The English-speaking people in that settlement get out, and for a very sufficient reason. In a settlement like that there are not too many people at any time to support a church organization or the social activities of the community. When people have different ideals and different languages there are not enough of them in a district to support those institutions, and the English-speaking people quite naturally get out. Besides that we find that we have a difficulty in regard to English-speaking schools. The English-speaking people find that with teachers such as they have, their own children are not getting proper instruction in English. In consequence, you have this segregation. You are going to have segregation as long as you are getting in these foreigners in large numbers. This will repeat itself despite almost any regulations Parliament may make. As a consequence of what I have told you, we have very few children of these people who are able to read and speak English with any fluency whatever.

What would you do to meet that situation? I have outlined to you the development and history of a typical community. There are hundreds—yes, thousands—of these scattered over our great West. The deduction I draw from that situation—and which I think any sensible man will draw—is that we cannot continue bringing in these people, increasing the area of such settlements and not only the area of the settlements which have begun but increasing the number of them. We have to call a halt until we have assimilated that population which is now out of hand largely owing to the mistakes we have made in the past. It is we who have sinned rather than they.

I wish to say a word or two for them. I know that many of these people have been willing in the past to enlist. They have been willing to do service according to their light, and they have in some cases contributed. But they have also committed errors. The accusation has been made, and, I think, in some cases rightfully, that when there were victories by the enemy they put up their flags and celebrated. They have not been Anglicized and they are not British citizens although they, in many cases, hold our naturalization certificates. We are very largely to blame. But the time has come now when we must check the further encroachment of this situation upon the opportunities and prospects of the Canadian West. If we do not do it the time will come when we shall not be able to control the situation.

You have seen in the province of Ontario 15,000 or 16,000 people every year going from your farms into the cities. The same movement was almost threatening before the war in the West. We found our English-speaking men going off the farms and into the cities. We saw a great many of them leaving the country. The consequence is that these people of whom I have been speaking are spreading very rapidly. There has been some evidence of that in my own district. They have been making money during these times. The constituency of my hon. friend the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Crerar) lies right west from mine and from the constituency which I now speak of clear across to the other side of the Riding Mountain reserve and almost to the western side of the constituency—that is on the north side of his constituency—there is a population of a character similar to that of which I have spoken. These people have been making money and buying farms down in the English settlements. It is curious to note the encroachment there. It was a subject of remark in my town within the last year that a splendid quarter-section two miles north of the town and right in the heart of an English-speaking settlement was bought by Galicians. They have been buying first-class farms. In my district we have a rather hard piece of land contiguous to the railway and facilities for shipment, and yet, because of its rough character, the English settlers had avoided it. These foreigners entered upon that and they have made good. But farther west we have a settlement in the constituency of my hon. friend the Minister of Agriculture which is better land. The settlers there made very rapid progress and many of them have farms which are worth $15,000 to $20,000. They have their Hudson cars. They have been making money. But they have not become Anglicized. We have perhaps a more difficult situation to deal with now that they have money, are able to organize and have leaders amongst themselves than we would have if they were poor and more or less helpless under our conditions.

I thought I should explain the situation to the Committee. There are many men in the East and, I think, some in the West, who have not been out through those districts as I have been. Time and again I have had occasion to go through these particular districts, and I thought it would be instructive to the Committee to understand the conditions of these districts industrially and in the way of settlement and also what has been the result of the effort to induce these people to become British subjects.

Mr. T. M. TWEEDIE (West Calgary): Just before we pass on I have a few remarks to make in regard to section 13. We have heard considerable discussion to-day in regard to the various classes of people who should be allowed to come into Canada, and it seems to be pretty generally agreed that great restrictions should be imposed upon future settlers, especially upon those from European countries. I have listened with pleasure to the remarks of the hon. member for East Edmonton (Mr. Mackie) in regard to the Ukrainians and Ruthenians, and also to the remarks of the hon. member for Neepawa (Mr. Davis) respecting the Ruthenians in his district, and despite the arguments of these hon. gentlemen I think we must conclude that the people referred to are a class that we do not want to settle in this country. Both gentlemen have shown completely that although these people have remained in the Dominion for a great number of years, and although they have become Canadianized to the extent that they have amassed considerable wealth, have acquired great areas of land, and have purchased their automobiles, still they have not become Canadianized or Anglicized to the extent that they can become part and parcel of the social and economic life of this country. I believe, further, that there are a great many settlers in Canada hailing from European countries who are absolutely out of sympathy with Canada and with the British Empire, and while these people may be naturalized and enjoy the benefits of our laws and the protection of our institutions, I think we must bring them to a full realization that there cannot be granted in the future, as there has been in the past, any concessions by reason of any political affiliations. We have received petitions from many people in the West, since Parliament assembled, asking concessions in regard to, for one thing, the use of their language. We have heard bitter complaints from many because the authorities have seen fit to deprive them of the use of the German language in their schools and in their press; but I do not believe that this Government, or any government in Canada, would be justified in allowing these people to conduct their commercial, social, religious, or educational life in the German language, or any medium which savours of that tongue, and in my opinion it is the duty of all governments, both federal and provincial, to see to it that that instrument of intercourse is curbed to the greatest extent in this country. It is very difficult for me to believe, and doubtless it is equally difficult for any member of the House to-night to believe, when a man uses as a means of intercourse the German language, that he is not so closely allied with the German race and the German people that his sympathies are German. While we curb the people who are already in the country in that respect, we must use the greatest caution and care to see that Canada is not settled for a long time to come by any class of persons who use that tongue as a vehicle for communication. In view of the agitation which has recently arisen in the West in connection with the Hutterites and the Mennonites, it may appear to some eastern people that there is over-anxiety or over-excitement in that country in regard to the matter. But we find that one of the things in connection with these people is that they have been brought up and taught to use the German language. They have been using it in South Dakota, and other parts of the United States, whence they come to our country. They now desire to use that language in Canada; they have been asking the privilege of carrying on their schools in the province of Alberta in the German language. Their sympathies are not with Great Britain or with Canada, but are first with the German people and then with the Hutterites and Mennonites, who, in the true sense of the word, are Hutterites themselves. We do not want these people in Canada at any time; and I trust that this Government will take immediate steps to prevent the entrance into Canada of any one single person of that class. Why do we not want them in this country? Some person will say they are good farmers, they can herd cattle, and their efforts will tend to the agricultural development of this great country and of Western Canada in particular. I admit that is perfectly true, but their social and economic status, their mental attitude and their ancestral affiliations are such that they can never become part and parcel of the true Canadian people. As has been pointed out by the hon. member for Lethbridge (Mr. Buchanan) this afternoon, we find that they are in one sense, and a broad sense, communists. What does that mean? They have been driven from South Dakota by the operation of the laws of that state. Following the doctrine of Jacob Hutter, they formed their various societies, which they call religious denominations, and through their medium operated in the state of South Dakota. An investigation was conducted by the authorities, and it was found that they were carrying on trade and commerce under the guise of religion. The state authorities at once put the law in force and are now bringing actions to dissolve these organizations. But the difficulty with the organization, so far as our economic system is concerned, is that the individual in it has no rights. If there is anything upon which we pride ourselves in this country it is our individual liberty, our individual freedom, and the right to enjoy and to hold property. These Mennonites and Hutterites who are now coming into this country as individuals have no power to enjoy any such rights; the property which they acquire as the result of their industry and of their labour becomes the property of their association or organization. The women toil, the men toil, but as a result of all that labour they are not the owners or the possessors of one dollar's worth of personal or real property—it all becomes the property of the organization. The result has been that in South Dakota, where actions are being brought in the courts for the dissolution of some of these organizations, we find there are men well on to fifty years of age who have toiled all their lives for these organizations, who are now turned out—they have not a dollar. We find again another case in which a man left behind him two wives and fourteen or fifteen children who have been thrown upon the mercy of the public. We find that every man who disagrees with that organization is, if possible, kicked out into the street, and receives no share of the profits that have been accumulated. Hutterites and Mennonites, so far as their organizations are concerned, are introducing into this Dominion the greatest possible form of bondage and slavery. It is a condition which is inimical to the best interests of our agricultural and our economic life, to the best interests of the individual, and to personal liberty.

Then if we turn from the economic side of the question, and consider it from a personal point of view, there is the character of their social life to be borne in mind. These people all live together. They live under conditions which are not suitable to our people, and which would not be tolerated by Canadian citizens. They live under conditions in which Canadians would not associate with them. They converse in the German language, they carry on their own trading amongst themselves, and they desire to have their own schools if the law will permit it.

Is this country to be benefited by that class of people? When they form their small colonies the English, Scotch or Canadian settlers round about them are gradually driven out because their form of life is inconsistent with ours and wholly incompatible with our customs and ideals. What we want is immediate action; we do not want one more Hutterite or Mennonite to cross the boundary from United States into Canada. The Government would be justified in passing an Order in Council under the War Measures Act dealing with this matter pending the operation of this proposed legislation. If this is not done there will be great unrest throughout Western Canada. Having excluded these people, the future policy of the Government should be to exclude from Canada all classes of people who have communistic ideas. Communism as practised by people of certain European countries is incompatible with the economic and industrial life of Canada. One of the best sections in the Bill is that which places in the hands of the Government power to exclude from our country people whose ideas and notions are wholly inconsistent with ours.

Mr. W. C. KENNEDY (North Essex): As the minister knows, a head tax of $8 is imposed by the United States Government upon Canadians visiting United States, the amount being refunded if the visitor returns within six months. The money is collected by the railway and steamboat companies, and sometimes it takes one, two or three months to get it back, even if the visitor remains in the United States only three or four days. Many Canadians who live near the border have relatives in the United States, and often illness or death in the family necessitates their making a trip to the American side. In many cases they can ill afford to deposit this head tax with the United States Government. The law is not aimed particularly at Canadians; it was originally intended to apply to entries at the ocean ports. Nevertheless, it affects our people. I am convinced that ninety per cent of the people of the United States have no knowledge of the law; it should be brought to their attention. The best way to do that would be to place a similar tax upon persons entering Canada from the United States, the amount to be refunded if the country whence they came accorded a similar privilege to Canadians. Is any progress being made in securing the removal of this head tax?

Mr. CALDER: No progress has been made in the direction of having this head tax removed; that is a matter for the American Government, which may see fit to impose a head tax against any peoples entering their country. However, we have taken the matter up with the United States authorities; the head of their Immigration Department is here to-day and the officers of my department have had another opportunity of discussing the matter with him. The head tax is not imposed on all Canadians visiting the United States; it is imposed only in cases where the United States immigration officers think there is good reason to disbelieve the statements made by those who enter their country from Canada. From the negotiations that have been carried on, I think that this law will be administered a little more carefully than it has been in the past.

[Mr. Tweedie.]

Section, as amended, agreed to.

On Section 2—domicile, etc.

Mr. JACOBS: A slight change might improve paragraph (vi) of Subsection 2. It reads:

> Members of dramatic, artistic, athletic, or spectacular organizations entering Canada temporarily for the purpose of giving public performances or exhibitions of an entertaining or instructive nature and actors, artists, lecturers, priests and ministers of religion, authors, lawyers, physicians, professors of colleges and commercial travellers entering Canada for the temporary exercise of their respective callings.

I would suggest that it should read:

> Members of dramatic, artistic, athletic or spectacular organizations entering Canada temporarily for the purpose of giving public performances or exhibitions of an entertaining or instructive nature and all persons entering Canada for the temporary exercise of their respective callings.

We have dealt with ministers, circus managers, lawyers and so on, but possibly we have left out some, and if we make the clause read in the way I suggest, we shall cover every occupation and calling.

Mr. CRONYN: We have left out one class that was in the old clause, namely, musicians. Why that was omitted, I do not understand.

Mr. G. B. NICHOLSON: Would the hon. member (Mr. Jacobs) suggest that persons whose business is spreading seditious utterances should be allowed to enter Canada?

Mr. JACOBS: If that is a calling, it would be for the minister to use his discretion under section 38 of the Act. We are dealing here with a certain specified class of people, authors, lawyers, physicians, professors of colleges and commercial travellers, and so forth. That does not exhaust the entire list of occupations and callings, and to cover those which we may not have in mind at the moment, we might say " all persons entering Canada for the temporary exercise of their respective"—and if my hon. friend would wish it—and respectable callings." That might improve the matter.

Mr. CALDER: The officials of the department have had a good deal of trouble in connection with the administration of this Act, and if we throw it wide open as the hon. member has suggested, it might lead us into serious trouble. I should, therefore, like to have a full discussion with the officials of the department before I would agree to his suggested amendment. As regards the inquiry from the hon. member for London (Mr. Cronyn), the term "musician" has been dropped from this section mainly because we have a very large and excedingly troublesome class of strollers called musicians who we think should not be admitted under this section. The only way in which we can properly deal with them is to exclude them from the provisions of this section.

Mr. JACOBS: If it is a profession?

Mr. CALDER: If the musicians belong to a dramatic, artistic or regular theatrical society that is coming in for the purpose of giving dramatic or musical performances, they are readily admitted, but the single musician who comes in can hardly in many cases be classed as an artist, and it would be just as well for us to watch him carefully.

Mr. JACOBS: What about Paderewski? He is a musician first.

Mr. CALDER: The department would class him as an artist, not as a musician.

Mr. NICKLE: Before the minister agrees to this amendment, I sincerely trust he will give very careful consideration to the possibility of an injustice being done in the border towns by the adoption of the suggestion of the hon. member (Mr. Jacobs). I know that in the riding from which I come there has been considerable discontent owing to the fact that American orchestras have come in, alleging that they were dramatic companies, and have interfered a great deal with Canadian orchestras. There is a conflict, more or less acute, between the provisions of this Act and those of the Alien Labour Act, and I would be exceedingly sorry to see the provisions of this Act so widened that orchestras, which certainly would come within the language of the amendment suggested by the hon. member (Mr. Jacobs) would be admitted as not being considered an immigrant class. I trust the minister, before changing this clause, if he has any idea of so doing, will look carefully at the Alien Labour Act and see that the two Acts are made to harmonize.

Mr. CALDER: If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Jacobs) presses his amendment, I will certainly ask that this portion of the section be allowed to stand until such time as I have an opportunity of looking into the side of the question mentioned by the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle).

Mr. JACOBS: I would suggest that it be allowed to stand for the moment. Before the clause finally passes, I should like to say a word or two with regard to section 2, paragraph (ii), which at present reads:

Canadian domicile is lost, for the purposes of this Act, by a person voluntarily residing out of Canada not for a mere special or temporary purpose but with the present intention of making his permanent home out of Canada.

That is to say, a man may have come to Canada and become a British subject. He leaves Canada with the intention of residing elsewhere for the purpose of improving his position, and then he finds, if he has not improved his position and wishes to return, that he cannot return to Canada, although a British subject, because of this section which says that the domicile governs and he has changed his domicile. I do not think that is quite fair.

Mr. CALDER: I scarcely think that is the interpretation to put upon this clause. The purport of the proposed amendment is briefly this: If a person retains his Canadian domicile and he leaves Canada temporarily, when he attempts to enter Canada again, having retained his domicile, the provisions of the law against prohibited classes do not apply to him. Let us assume that a man has retained his Canadian domicile, and he goes to the United States and remains there for a short time. He contracts some loathsome disease, or tuberculosis, or he becomes insane. We cannot shut him out from Canada as long as he has retained his domicile. But if he leaves the country with the intention of leaving the country, and he loses his domicile, then we have the right to shut him out.

Mr. JACOBS: Even although he be a British subject?

Mr. CALDER: Yes. We shut out people from Great Britain now if they belong to the prohibited classes. For instance, we shut out any one from Great Britain if he is of unsound mind, or if he is liable to become a public charge, or if he belongs in any way to any of the prohibited classes. If a man has come to this country from any part of the world and leaves this country with the intention of leaving the country, and during his residence outside of Canada he comes under any of those prohibited classes, why should we admit him?

Mr. JACOBS: Assuming that in every other respect he is qualified to come in?

Mr. CALDER: There would be no question about his entering. He would have a perfect right to enter.

Mr. JACOBS: A distinction should be made between a British citizen and a citizen of another country. We ought to give some protection to the British citizen who has shed his old citizenship and has acquired his British citizenship. He goes away to improve himself in business, and then he comes back and finds the doors are closed to him.

Mr. CALDER: Only if he belongs to a prohibited class.

Mr. JACOBS: That is not so stated in the section.

Mr. CALDER: That is the purport of it.

Mr. TWEEDIE: Suppose a man comes to Canada, becomes naturalized and has his domicile here, then goes to the United States with the intention of remaining there. Now, we could not shut him out within the prescribed time of his domicile if the United States immigration authorities wanted to deport him on account of insanity.

Mr. CALDER: If they deport him, we must accept him.

Mr. TWEEDIE: It does not make any difference whether he is in a prohibited class under our law. If he has his domicile here they can ship him back.

Mr. JOHNSTON: I see no provision in subsection 2 for the admission of farm hands or harvesters. In recent years the farmers of the Western Provinces have been very glad to get harvest help from the Western States. The harvesters work in the fields of Kansas, move on to the Dakotas, and then come to Canada. Apparently they would not be admitted under this Act.

Mr. CALDER: If there is any defect in the law in that respect it certainly has not been used against these people during the last ten years, for they have been coming in every year. The department itself has been responsible for bringing them in to help in the harvest fields. There is now a provision in the law whereby the minister may admit any person for any cause if he deems it advisable. I do not anticipate any difficulty over the harvesters.

Mr. CRONYN: Perhaps they will be admitted as members of athletic organizations.

Mr. JACOBS: How will paragraph (a) read as amended?

Mr. CALDER: It will read as follows:—

Idiots, imbeciles, feeble-minded persons, epileptics, insane persons and persons who have been insane at any time previously.

The law as it stands at present reads "within five years previous." The amendment will enable us to debar any one who has been at any time insane.

[Mr. Jacobs.]

Subsection 2 stands.

On subsection 3—diseased persons:

Mr. CALDER: With this amendment the law will read as follows:

Persons afflicted with tuberculosis in any form or with any loathsome disease or with a disease which is contagious or infectious or which may be dangerous to the public health. . . .

Mr. JACOBS: What would happen in the case of a person, not a naturalized British subject, who contracted tuberculosis in Canada, and, having been to Denver for treatment, attempted to come back to Canada?

Mr. CALDER: I think he could easily establish that he went to Denver purely for a temporary purpose. He could apply to the consular agent, if necessary, for a certificate to the effect that he went to Denver for the purpose of a cure. He would not lose his domicile.

Mr. JACOBS: The law is being very well administered by the department. I think the Department of Immigration is handled with more intelligence perhaps, than any other department of the Government; at least, that has been my experience. The Minister of Agriculture looks surprised. I think it would be well for us to make the Bill as clear as possible, because even ministers of the Crown sometimes change, and a king may arise who knows not Joseph, and who would apply the law more rigorously than at present. Many of these sections are satisfactory if handled intelligently, but I think cases of very grave hardship might arise if they were interpreted by a department not sympathetic to the immigrant.

Subsection agreed to.

On subsection 5—beggars and vagrants:

Mr. CALDER: The law at present reads as follows:

Professional beggars or vagrants or persons likely to become a public charge.

The phrase "or persons likely to become a public charge" is transferred to another part of the Act, and is put in a substantive section reading as follows:

Persons who in the opinion of the board of inquiry or the officer in charge at any port of entry are likely to become a public sharge.

On subsection 6, paragraph (k)—psychopathic inferiority:

Mr. JACOBS: What is meant by "constitutional psychopatic inferiority"?

Mr. CALDER: It is a medical term with which I am not very well acquainted, but a definition has been handed to me which I might read:

> In this classification are included various unstable individuals on the border line between sanity and insanity, such as moral imbeciles, pathological liars, many of the vagrants and cranks, and persons of abnormal sexual instincts. There is no well-defined dividing line between the various classes, and they should be included in one group and certified as cases of a constitutional psychopathic inferiority.

I understand that the doctors are thoroughly familiar with the full meaning and effect of this term, and I presume we shall have to issue very careful regulations to our officers administering this law to be sure to catch people with this disease, whatever it may be.

Sir HERBERT AMES: Can we deport those in Canada suffering from this disease?

Mr. CALDER. Yes, if they get in.

(a) Enemy aliens.

Mr. JACOBS: I think the Committee would like to have from the minister a clear interpretation of the meaning of this section.

Mr. CALDER: I must admit that when I first looked at the section I took a wrong meaning from it myself, but if it is read carefully the meaning will be clear. One would suppose that the mere mention of enemy aliens in the first line would indicate that hereafter all persons who are enemy aliens are to be rejected. That is not the purpose of this clause. The clause says: "Enemy aliens or persons who have been alien enemies." Once the peace treaty is signed, those people who are now interned and who will not be deported until after the war is over will not then be alien enemies, because the war will be at an end. So that the section as I interpret it is this: Enemy aliens who have been interned or persons who have been alien enemies who have been interned. That is, it does not mean that enemy aliens shall be prohibited, but enemy aliens who have been interned.

Mr. JACOBS: Would it not be better to strike out the words "or persons" and say "enemy aliens who have been interned in any part of His Majesty's Dominions"?

Mr. CALDER: But some of them may be interned after the war is over and they will not then be enemy aliens.

Mr. JACOBS: I must confess that the section appears to me to be rather obscure and I think it would stand re-drafting. For that purpose I would suggest that it be allowed to stand.

Mr. CRONYN: What will happen to those who are enemy aliens who have been interned and have been let out on parole?

Mr. CALDER: I did not know that any were let out on parole.

Mr. CRONYN: I am told that there are many hundreds.

Mr. CALDER: As was explained by the Acting Minister of Justice, in the early part of the war some thousands were interned, not because they were dangerous or had committed any overt act of any kind, and not because of disloyalty, but simply on account of conditions existing at that time. At that period employment was very scarce and many of 10 p.m. these people were interned merely to take care of them. To provide that these people shall be deported simply because they happened to have been interned in the early part of the war would be a great mistake.

Mr. TWEEDIE: I do not think it would do any harm to make the clause comprehensive enough to cover all those who should be dealt with.

Mr. CALDER: I think we might let the clause stand. I am not quite satisfied with the drafting of it, and possibly its intention might be made just a little clearer.

Mr. EULER: Does this clause refer only to those who have been interned, or also to possible immigrants after the war?

Mr. CALDER: This refers only to those who were interned.

Mr. EULER: Is it the intention of the Government after the war to debar absolutely those who are now alien enemies?

Mr. CALDER: They are now debarred and have been ever since the armistice. An Order in Council has been put through debarring all persons who are nationals of Germany, Austria-Hungary, Turkey and Bulgaria, and it is certainly the intention to keep that Order in Council in force for some time.

Mr. EULER: I am not raising any objection to that. I am merely asking for information. I have not Hansard before me, but I have a copy of the Globe of to-day in which the minister is quoted as saying that there was no provision in the law to debar alien enemies.

Mr. CALDER: Section 13, which we were considering all afternoon, gives the Governor in Council power to prohibit the entry of people of any nationality or race.

Mr. EULER: I missed that, and would have liked to make a suggestion when section 13 was under discussion. Would it be in order for me to make a suggestion now?

The CHAIRMAN: It would be out of order to discuss section 13 now. Paragraph (p) of section 3 is being discussed.

Mr. EULER: Will there be another opportunity?

Mr. CALDER: If the hon. gentleman merely has a suggestion to make, I think we might hear it, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. EULER: If the law is absolutely prohibitive without any discretion on the part of the minister or the Government, it should be changed. There should be some provision for the minister to make exceptions.

Mr. CALDER: There is a provision in the Bill whereby the minister may, under permit, allow any person to enter Canada. I explained that this afternoon. In addition to that, in the Order in Council which we put through, there is express provision for the minister to admit any of them. There are very exceptional cases arising that must be dealt with on humanitarian and other grounds.

Mr. PEDLOW: In view of the uncertainty as to the application of this clause and the fact that there is already an Order in Council dealing with the matter which the Government intend to keep in force, would it not be wise to delete this section altogether?

Mr. CALDER: Clause (p) deals with persons of enemy nationality who have been interned in any portion of His Majesty's dominions.

Mr, JACOBS: Or in any Allied country.

Mr. CALDER: Or in any Allied country. Persons who were interned in the United States or in any of His Majesty's dominions are shut out as being of the prohibited classes who have no right to enter Canada; whereas our general order applies only to persons who are living in enemy countries.

Mr. JACOBS: What does the minister intend to do with the interned alien enemies in Canada? Are they to be deported?

Mr. CALDER: An announcement has already been made to the House on two or three occasions by the Acting Minister of Justice to the effect that all those aliens now interned who are thought dangerous or undesirable will be deported. An arrangement has already been made by the British authorities whereby a hundred will be deported—if they have not already been deported—just so soon as shipping can be arranged and the countries to which they belong are open for their entry.

Mr. JACOBS: So that we will deport 2,117, the number of interned aliens during the war.

Mr. CALDER: No; there were 8,000 or 9,000.

Mr. JACOBS: The return brought down by the Minister of the Interior the other day stated that there were 2,117.

Mr. CALDER: That is the number now in the internment camps, but during the war there were about 8,000.

Mr. JACOBS: Then the Minister of the Interior misunderstood my question because I wanted to know the actual number interned during the war. I was told that it was 2,117.

Mr. CALDER: The others were out at that time.

Mr. NESBITT: As I understand the minister it is only the intention to deport those that are regarded as dangerous? He does not purpose deporting all aliens who have been interned?

Mr. CALDER: I think the fact that those spoken of by the Acting Minister of Justice are still interned, after some three or four years of war, is an indication that there is a very good reason for keeping them there. If I am not mistaken, the great bulk of those, unless some very good reason can be shown, will be returned to their own countries.

Mr. JACOBS: Many of them were sent to farms and made to act as farm help and others were put on railway construction. They were under the supervision of the Government but they were not actually interned in the sense in which we understand internment.

Mr. CALDER: I do not know that.

Mr. NESBITT: Many of them were employed on public works. I do not know about the 2,100 you have now. Certainly many of them were interned and then afterwards employed. What are you going to do about them?

Mr. CALDER: Do you mean those who were interned during the war?

Mr. NESBITT: Yes.

Mr. G. B. NICHOLSON: There has been a large internment camp in North Ontario. At one time there were 2,000 interned aliens in one camp. But they have been weeded out. Those that were considered not dangerous and not regarded as a class that it was necessary to intern, were allowed out. Those who are still in camp are men of a dangerous type who could not be safely permitted to run at large.

Mr. NESBITT: That is what I have been trying to find out.

Mr. G. B. NICHOLSON: We have in Northern Ontario many hundreds of men who were interned in the early days of the war, but who after a careful investigation by the officers of the Militia Department, were found to be perfectly harmless. They were allowed out. But they are still reporting month by month. There are several hundred still interned who are recognized as dangerous enemies.

Mr. CANNON: Some people were considered at the outbreak of hostilities as being alien enemies who have since become our Allies. What will the Government do in connection with these people? For instance, Germans who were living in German Poland were enemies and now not only are they not our enemies, but they have become our Allies, and I see by the papers they are going to sign the covenant of the League of Nations with Canada, Great Britain and other allied countries. Is there any provision made in this Bill for this class of people?

Mr. CALDER: The Order in Council to which I have referred excludes all people from enemy countries; that means Austria, Germany, Bulgaria and Turkey. It is quite true that, particularly in Austria, there are some of the people—Poles, Czecho-Slovaks and Jugo-Slavs—who were more or less opposed to the Austrian Government, and new nations are going to be set up under, I presume, a democratic form of government. But until these conditions are settled and we know where we are we feel that this prohibition should be maintained against people residing in that part of Europe. If I followed the discussion this afternoon, it is evident that there is a feeling in this House and in the country that, with conditions as they exist in Canada at the present time, during the reconstruction period, we have pretty nearly all on our hands that we can take care of without inviting people from these portions of Europe whether they are friendly or not.

Mr. CANNON: Under this Bill, will the Government be in a position to consider these people as living in these countries according to the boundaries as they existed at the time of the war, or according to the boundaries as they will be limited and defined at the Treaty of Peace? That is a very important question.

Mr. CALDER: Under section 13 the Government is left free to consider this question from any standpoint it chooses. That section gives the Government very large powers. The Government is empowered at any time to prohibit the entry of any class or section of people or people of any occupation and coming from any country. So that we will be able to deal with the people of such areas from time to time according to the conditions as they prevail.

Mr. CANNON: If Poland is set up as a new kingdom, if that kingdom is friendly to Great Britain and the Dominions over the seas, and if it signs the Treaty of Peace and the different covenants that are going to be entered into at Paris as an Ally friendly to this country, will the Government, according to international law, be allowed to treat the inhabitants of that country as enemy aliens now or later, or as a people who cannot enter Canada, or will they be justified in so doing?

Mr. CALDER: We would not treat them as alien enemies at all. If the hon. gentleman had been in the House and had heard the discussion that has taken place he would have learned that the members of the House and the people have come to the conclusion that in so far as the admission of any people to Canada is concerned, we should have the right to determine that for ourselves. There is nothing in international law that I know of that would prevent us from exercising that right. But while we exercise that right of determining for ourselves what people shall enter Canada, we must be prepared to bear the consequences of the exercise of that right.

That is, if we say to the people of any nation, "Your citizens shall not enter Canada," we must remember that that nation has the power to take action against us, in some other direction it may be, and we must be prepared to suffer those consequences no matter what they are, so long as the action upon which it is based is within international law. Again I say, I think the hon. gentleman is mistaken in holding that there is anything in international law to prevent us from making a prohibition against any class of people, the world around, whom we do not wish to enter Canada.

Mr. CRONYN: Reference has been made on one or two occasions to what happened at the Imperial Conference in 1918, and it might be well to place upon record the actual resolution that was unanimously passed at that time. The Imperial authorities, of course, were represented at that conference, and representatives from the Dominions. as well as from India, were there as well. This is the first clause of the resolution which was introduced in 1917, and passed in 1918:

> It is an inherent function of the Governments of the several communities of the British Commonwealth, including India, that each should enjoy complete control of the composition of its own population by means of restriction on immigration from any of the other communities.

That does not, of course, deal with foreign nations, but it is, I submit, a very admirable precedent on which we can act in dealing with nations outside of the British Commonwealth.

Mr. JACOBS: That is as between the British Colonies?

Paragraph (p) allowed to stand.

On paragraph (q)—persons guilty of espionage with respect to His Majesty or any of His Majesty's Allies:

Mr. JACOBS: What is the object of that at this time? As I understand, when the war is over, espionage automatically stops, it is no longer in force. This is liable to give rise to a great deal of misconception, and perhaps considerable activity sometimes on the part of the Government.

Mr. CALDER: The paragraph, as I understand it, simply means that any person who has been. found guilty of espionage during the war, or at any time should be placed in the prohibited class and not allowed to enter Canada.

Mr. JACOBS: Espionage in what respect?

Mr. CALDER: I am presuming, of course the expression has a well defined legal meaning.

[Mr. Calder.]

Mr. JACOBS: It has a well defined meaning in time of war, and has probably a different meaning in time of peace.

Paragraph agreed to.

On Paragraph (r)——Persons guilty of conspiracy against His Majesty or any of His Majesty's Allies, or guilty of assisting His Majesty's enemies.

Mr. JACOBS: What is understood by "persons found guilty of conspiracy"? Does it mean that he be found guilty by a court of justice, or deemed guilty by the department?

Mr. CALDER: No, he must be found guilty by a court.

Mr. JACOBS: I think it would be well to make the meaning clear by amending the paragraph so as to read:

> Persons found guilty in any competent court of justice—and so on,

> —against His Majesty.

Mr. NESBITT: The paragraph does not say that the man is "presumed guilty," but that he be "guilty."

Mr. JACOBS: Found guilty by whom? A person may be guilty and yet not be found guilty.

Mr. KEEFER: Under our law a man is always presumed to be innocent until he is found to be guilty.

Mr. JACOBS: This is a different case. This is a statutory enactment, and I think it is well to be as clear as possible in framing the language.

Mr. FIELDING: How would the word "convicted" do?

Mr. JACOBS: "Convicted of conspiracy" would be better.

Mr. CALDER: Instead of "guilty"?

Mr. POWER: Is there such a crime as "conspiracy against His Majesty"? I presume that conspiracy against His Majesty would be sedition and treason. It would be well to have a definition, because I do not remember such a crime in the Criminal Code as "conspiracy against His Majesty."

Mr. CALDER: The drafting was done by our law counsel, and I presume he has used the proper legal phraseology in describing these crimes. However, if hon. gentlemen think there is any question about it, I will have the matter referred to him again.

Mr. JACOBS: Suppose we let the paragraph stand?

Mr. G. B. NICHOLSON: What is declared here is that a person must be guilty of the crime of conspiracy. If conspiracy constitutes treason, then he is guilty of treason.

Mr. POWER: I do not think there is such a crime as conspiracy against His Majesty defined in the Criminal Code. As far as I know that is treason and should be defined as such.

Mr. CALDER: To save time and discussion, if there is any question about the matter, because I want to get the wording right, I am quite prepared to let this paragraph stand in order that we may have an opportunity to look into the question of the appropriateness of the phraseology used.

Paragraph allowed to stand.

On paragraph (s) Deported conspirators.

Mr. JACOBS: That ought to stand also.

Mr. MORPHY: I do not know how we are going to conclude the consideration of this Bill if everything is to stand on an objection raised by the hon. member. As I understand the meaning of "conspiracy" no one person can be guilty of it. It is a crime entirely different from sedition. One man may be guilty of sedition, but one man cannot be guilty of conspiracy, two men may conspire, and although their object may not be attained, one or both of them may be found guilty of conspiracy. I am sure the hon. member will understand that is the law.

Mr. JACOBS: That is the very reason why I asked that this paragraph should stand, so that we might have a chance to straighten out the difficulty.

Mr. MORPHY: I do not see any difficulty at all. It is so plain to the average lawyer that there should be no argument upon it.

Mr. JACOBS: For example, the paragraph in question reads:

> Persons who at any time within a period of ten years from the first day of August, one thousand nine hundred and fourteen, were or may be deported from any part of His Majesty's dominions or from any allied country on account of conspiracy against His Majesty or of any of His Majesty's allies, or for assisting His Majesty's enemies or because such persons were regarded as hostile or dangerous to the allied cause during the war.

By whom were they regarded as hostile or dangerous?

Mr. CALDER: By the parties who deported them.

Mr. JACOBS: It is not so stated. We ought to be particular in a matter of this kind.

Mr. CALDER: The clause we are considering only refers to persons who have been deported. Those persons would be deported by the state within which they were interned, and the authorities of that state must have regarded them as hostile or dangerous, otherwise it would not have deported them. Take the case of persons interned in Canada to-day. Some person must decide whether they shall be deported or not. Eventually they will be deported, and this prohibition will prevent those people from again entering Canada. Now, we will assume that there are certain persons interned in the United States, who will be deported because the authorities there regard them as hostile or dangerous to the Allied cause. The paragraph in that case obviously refers to the authorities who do the deporting. We can take it for granted that if the governments in allied countries have thought it advisable to deport these people we should not admit them to Canada.

Mr. POWER: To return to my objection of a few moments ago, I am quite convinced there is no such crime as conspiracy, and I therefore raised the question in order to make the matter clear. I understand, in reply to the question raised by my hon. friend (Mr. Jacobs), the minister said that the person to be refused admission must be convicted of the crime of conspiracy. But if there is no such crime, and you cannot indict a man for conspiracy, I do not see how in the world you are going to prevent him from entering Canada.

Mr. JACOBS: Conspiracy is an agreement between two or more persons to commit an unlawful act.

Mr. EDWARDS: If there is no such thing as conspiracy, no one will be affected by this clause; so why bother your head with objections?

Mr. POWER: I have a great deal of respect for the good name of the House, for the Minister of Immigration, and for the officers of the Department of Justice, and I would hate to see things that are of absolutely no use put into our statutes. This crime should be defined; we should ascertain exactly what offence will render a man liable to exclusion from the country under this provision.

Mr. EDWARDS: Why should we, in this Act, define crime or conspiracy in this country when the clause has reference to conspiracy in some other country?

Mr. POWER: Conspiracy in His Majesty's Dominions.

Mr. EDWARDS: If certain countries do not know better than to have such a thing as conspiracy and a law against it, persons convicted under that law should not enter Canada.

Mr. JACOBS: I am perfectly willing to let it go through, because we may be called upon in our legal capacity to interpret the law for the benefit of the Government or of others, and in that way make a handsome fee.

Mr. MORPHY: If two men conspire to commit sedition, that is conspiracy.

Mr. JACOBS: Conspire to do any unlawful act.

Mr. MORPHY: To commit the crime of conspiracy against His Majesty; to be guilty of sedition or treason. The provision is quite plain.

Mr. POWER: Conspiracy is not a crime, but conspiracy to commit treason is.

Sir HERBERT AMES: This is simply a category of prohibited classes; the officials of the Immigration Department will interpret these definitions. There will be no recourse against them if they decide, on the information that they have, that a person who has been engaged in a conspiracy in some other country is not a fit person to be admitted to Canada. I do not see how the hon. member (Mr. Jacobs) can get any law case out of that. If a person is refused admission to Canada he cannot sue the Government to secure permission to be allowed to come into the country.

Mr. JACOBS: Yes, he can; I have done it myself. We take out a habeas corpus and bring the party before the court, sometimes with splendid success.

Mr. CANNON: The clause would cover the case if it was made to read: "Conspiracy to commit any crime against His Majesty." Hon. gentlemen will search Section 74 of the Criminal Code, which enumerates all crimes against His Majesty, in vain for any such crime as conspiracy.

Mr. KEEFER: It is a kind of conspiracy —conspiracy against His Majesty.

Mr. CANNON: The Government wishes to keep out of the country any man who has committed an offence against His Majesty; that is all right. But the clause should be correctly drawn. There is no such crime in our law as conspiracy, but there is a crime called "conspiracy to commit an unlawful act."

Mr. KEEFER: Would you want to exclude a man who had conspired other than against the Crown?

Mr. CANNON: No, I would say: "Conspiracy to commit any crime or offence against His Majesty."

Mr. CALDER: I see no objection, in order to make these provisions perfectly clear, to adopting the suggestion that has been made. I move that the words "to commit any offence or crime" be inserted after the word "conspiracy" in paragraphs (r) and (s).

Mr. TWEEDIE: If we are going to limit this provision to conspiracy to commit a crime, we should include in the definition the words set out in the Criminal Code, in which are enumerated certain things which constitute a crime against His Majesty. But under the section as it stands it is possible to exclude from this country people whom we could not exclude if we confined the section to the literal meaning of the Criminal Code. An offence committed against a Sovereign in a foreign country might not constitute a crime under our Criminal Code; yet persons guilty of such offences in other countries might conspire to commit the same offences against our Sovereign. A man who commits what is a crime in his own country and under his own law is a very undesirable man to have in Canada, because he may conspire to commit that which is a crime under our Criminal Code. I submit that the wording of the section is better as it is, because they may conspire beyond the jurisdiction of the Dominion of Canada against our Sovereign, in a manner which does not constitute a crime, and consequently we could not exclude them, because we have this interpreted by the words of the Criminal Code. The section is better as it stands. It gives wider jurisdiction to the immigration officers; it gives them power to exclude people from other countries who conspire against His Majesty, but who do not commit an offence under the Criminal Code.

Mr. CANNON: This clause applies only to people who have been deported within ten years from Great Britain or a British colony or an allied country. Great Britain and the British colonies have all the same law as we have, that is the English criminal law, so that there cannot be any mistake as to that. If we are going to draft our statutes now to meet the Italian or the French or the Montenegrin or the Bosnian or the Grecian law, how far will we go? For instance, I understand that in Italy treason goes far further than it does in Great Britain or in Canada, and acts that are in no way criminal in this country or in Great Britain are considered in Italy to be highly criminal. Are we going to load our statutes with clauses to meet foreign laws? That would be an altogether new and very dangerous departure. When we are called upon to enact legislation in this Parliament, we enact it according to conditions existing in this country and to traditions given to us by the English tribunals. I am satisfied with the English law and with the fair play that exists in England, and I do not want to have in Canada laws that would be drafted to meet conditions existing in Italy or Greece or Montenegro, where people are put in jail for hardly anything. The hon. member for West Calgary (Mr. Tweedie) says the Act might be a crime in those countries. Is he sure of what is conspiracy against His Majesty in Montenegro? Does he know anything about the law in Greece, or in Italy? I do not, and I do not claim to know. I know the British law and I am satisfied with it, and I want our law to be the same as the English law. We shall be better satisfied if we stick to it than if we have adaptations from Italian or Greek legislation.

Mr. EDWARDS: My hon. friend takes this position then, that some person in Italy who was regarded by the authorities in charge of the administration and welfare of that country as unfit to remain there, is fit to remain in Canada?

Mr. POWER: Yes, otherwise, Garibaldi would never have been allowed to enter England, and Garibaldi was the saviour and founder of United Italy. And some of the leading Italian patriots would never have been allowed to enter England, for instance, Giuseppe Mazzini. The leading revolutionists of the past were deported from their countries and they sought refuge on the free soil of England and America where they were well received. Therefore, if we were to pass a law such as this, and if at some future time the laws of a foreign country are such that freedom is no longer enjoyed, are we to be debarred from receiving men of the stamp that I have mentioned? I do not think we should be.

Mr. MORPHY: On looking at section 74 of the Code quoted by the hon member for Dorchester (Mr. Cannon), I notice how closely the clause in question reads to the wording of the Criminal Code which the hon. member says does not contain this sort of crime. Subsection (e) of section 74 provides against:

> Conspiring with any person to kill His Majesty or to do him any bodily harm tending to death or destruction, maiming or wounding, or conspiring with any person to imprison or restrain him.

A little further down, subsection (g) probably brings it closer to the intent of this Bill:

> Conspiring to levy war against His Majesty with any such intent or any such purpose as aforesaid.

So that, in this respect, the Code clearly and distinctly recognizes conspiracy against His Majesty in the very words of this Act as a crime.

Mr. CANNON: Conspiracy, to do something against His Majesty.

Mr. CALDER: I am sure we have all but the one desire, and that is to have the Bill perfectly clear. From the discussion we have had, I can take the matter up with the law officers of the Crown and have them inquire into the point which has been raised, and if necessary I will bring back re-drafted clauses to the House.

Mr. RICHARDSON: I would suggest that the insertion of one word would meet the objections raised by hon. gentlemen opposite, and I think it would be an improvement upon the amendment proposed by the minister if the clause were to read:

> Persons guilty of 'criminal' conspiracy against His Majesty.

Then it is a crime, and the crime is defined.

Mr. JACOBS: Every conspiracy is a criminal conspiracy.

Mr. RICHARDSON: One might conspire to see that His Majesty gets a good brand of cigars or whisky. I fancy the hon. gentleman would agree that was not a crime; but if he says "criminal" conspiracy, then I suppose crime is defined by the Code.

Mr. JACOBS: The hon. member knows the proverb, "Sutor, ne supra crepidam."

Mr. KEEFER: The clause is quite plain. It says "conspiring against His Majesty."

Amendment stands.

Clause as amended stands.

On section 3, subsection (6), paragraph (t)—illiterates:

Mr. JACOBS: This is a clause about which I had occasion to make a few observations yesterday. I feel sure that the minister could not have given much attention to it, because, if he had, I am positive his sense of justice and fair play would have caused him to pause and consider before he submitted to the House the section as it is. I do not purpose going into the matter any further now, but merely wish to add that a clause of this kind cannot appeal to the good sense of justice and equity of this Committee. It is not right that a person who, through no fault of his own, but only through misfortune is unable to read, should be debarred entry into this country. If this had been done in the past we should have kept out of this country many people who have come here and made good and became assets to the community.

Sir HERBERT AMES: And many that we would be glad to be rid of now.

Mr. JACOBS: I think if we were to make a list of those we want to get rid of, we should find in the list more people who can read and write than who cannot. I pointed out yesterday that this test would exclude people not only from Europe proper, or what we are pleased to call the better parts of Europe, but immigrants from the British Isles in large numbers. In the remote portions of the British Isles there are many people to-day who have not had the advantage and blessing of being taught to read, and yet these people would make splendid material for this new country.

Mr. EDWARDS: Where are those remote portions of the British Isles?

Mr. JACOBS: I would say the Hebrides, the Orkney Islands, the Isle of Skye, and places of that kind where people earn their living from five or six years of age in fishing and mining, and consequently have not the time to learn to read; they have neither the opportunity nor the schools if they want to improve their condition. Now these are the very people who might want to come here to improve their condition, and are we to bar them out simply because they have not been taught to read? I have no doubt that this clause was inserted with the best of intentions, but I very much fear that it will not have the result the Government expect. We want to keep out undesirable classes, and page after page is devoted to describing these undesirable classes. Surely a man who is unable to read, if he has no other disqualifications, ought not to be debarred from entering this country. I appeal to the minister to strike this clause out entirely. I should like to have an expression of opinion from the House on this matter, as I am confident the majority of hon. gentlemen are opposed to the inclusion of a provision which would be a blot upon a statute which is in many other respects very good.

Mr. A. E. FINLEY (Souris): I think this is a very important section, because it is a very well recognized fact that illiteracy and crime have always been very closely allied. I received a letter a day or two ago from a statesman who has given a great deal of thought and attention to this very subject, which I should like to read:

As the subject of immigration will come before the House shortly, I wish to bring to your serious attention some considerations of great and vital importance to our national welfare.

The policy which has obtained during the past, of establishing communities in special colonies, and of granting special privileges to various sects and communities, has proved most unsatisfactory from the point of view of our Canadian national life; it is highly desirable that no special privilege should be given to any individual or community in the future, and steps should be taken to limit, and if possible, terminate, the arrangements that have previously been entered into.

The request by any community or individual for special concessions, such as exemption from military service, is a clear indication that these people do not wish to accept the general laws and institutions of this country, that they do not intend to become Canadian in spirit, but wish to retain their own institutions and customs. Their presence gives rise to many difficult problems in our community life, affecting municipal, social and especially school affairs.

The history of these settlements is that their proximity is resented by the neighbouring settlers, who finding it impossible to mend matters, sell out their holdings to the newcomers, sometimes at considerable sacrifice and move elsewhere. Thus the truly Canadian citizen is driven from his home; thus the colony spreads in extent and influence to the detriment and ultimate extinction of the true Canadian community.

Last year a colony of Hutterites was established in Manitoba, thirty-five miles west of Winnipeg. They left Dakota to escape from the obligation of military service. Already the selling out process has begun in this neighbourhood.

I am reliably informed of negotiations nearing completion for settlement of two similar colonies at other points in this province. Steps should be taken to prevent at once the entrance of any such, pending the passing of any necessary legislation. A definite and decisive policy should be adopted to exclude as undesirable immigrants, all persons or communities who will not accept unreservedly, all duties, burdens and responsibilities of citizenship or residence in Canada.

This could be accomplished by requiring of each prospective immigrant before his entry into Canada, a sworn statement that he is prepared to accept all responsibilities of citizenship in Canada, including military service if necessary. Any persons refusing or unable to sign this declaration, should be permanently excluded.

The Militia Act should be amended by removing from Section 11, the paragraph which gives exemption from military service to—

"Persons who from the doctrines of their religion are averse to bearing arms or rendering personal military service under such conditions as are prescribed."

With a view to terminating some of the conditions now obtaining in Canada, certain orders in council should be dealt with. These are, specifically—

(a) August 13, 1873, affecting Mennonites.

(b) December 6, 1898, affecting Doukhobors.

(c) August 12, 1899, affecting Hutterites.

Any persons now in Canada, who have come in while these orders in council were in force, should be notified that the provisions thereof will not extend to any of their descendants born after July 1, 1919.

These matters are of vital moment, and I would earnestly request your co-operation in having them thoroughly and satisfactorily dealt with.

This letter was written by the Hon. Dr. Thornton, Minister of Education in Manitoba, who has studied this question very thoroughly indeed. In that province we have some thirty odd different nationalities, with whom Dr. Thornton has come in very close contact. I thought the letter was worth putting on record.

Mr. CRONYN: I sincerely hope the minister will not consider altering or in any way amending this section. It is of the greatest importance that it should form part of our law, more particularly as it has been the law of the United States since 1917. If we do not follow their example, the ineviable result will be a larger percentage of illiterates seeking entrance into Canada. The hon. member for George Etienne Cartier asked what warrant the minister had for including such a proviso. I do not know that there was any warrant, if such were needed, but I am quite certain that if the minister and the department have taken cognizance, as I am sure they have, of what has happened in the neighbouring republic they could not help being impressed with the need of a section of this kind. I am not instancing what has been done in the United States as something that we must of necessity follow, but because it is evidence of a striking nature. Their experience in immigration has been on a very much larger scale than our own and has extended over a longer series of years.

What is termed the literacy test has been the subject of nineteen votes in the Congress and Senate of the United States, every one of which favoured it. Three times a law to this end passed by both Houses was vetoed by three different Presidents, and in each case either the House or the Senate failed by a narrow margin to overcome that veto. But in 1917 the literacy test was included in the law of the United States and has been in effect since that time.

All of the nine members but one of the Commission on Immigration, which, as I said yesterday, sat for four years and most exhaustively studied the whole subject, recommended the imposition of the reading and writing test "as the most feasible single method of restricting undesirable immigration." Of course, we know the inability to read very often arises from lack of opportunity, and neither this test nor any other that may be devised can prevent some undesirable immigrants from entering, whereas, on the other hand, it may possibly prevent a desirable immigrant from coming to Canada. The classic case of Lincoln has been quoted on the other side of the line until it is threadbare. It really does not touch the subject. We are dealing with a mass of figures and a vast volume of immigration, and, in my opinion, this test is one of the most valuable we could have.

Mr. J. F. REID: I just wish to say a word in regard to this section and in reply to the hon. member for George Etienne Cartier (Mr. Jacobs). He made the statement that in the remote parts of the British Isles the people could neither read nor write. I am sorry that he made that statement. I have lived in some of the remote parts of the British Isles and I presume I know just as much about the subject as the hon. member does. I did not know in the Orkney Isles, at the time I lived there quite a few years ago, any one person of my own age who could neither read nor write. They have the finest public schools I know of in the British Empire. They have compulsory education and truancy officers who see that the children go to school. I cannot speak with any great authority in regard to the Hebrides or the Isle of Skye, but I do not know that I have met a Highlander who could not only speak the English language, but could also speak the two tacks. I hope that this clause will be accepted in its entirety. Canada to-day does not need to go begging for a second or third class immigrants. We want the very best immigrants who can at least read and write in their own language.

Mr. CANNON: The most important part of this clause I think is the provision that those who cannot read the English or the French language, or some other dialect shall not be admitted into our country. If the clause simply restricted the class to those who could not read English or French I would support it, because it would mean that no one would be admitted who could not read one of the official languages and who would therefore be unable to become a true Canadian. The clause goes too far by including "some other language or dialect." Suppose a man comes from the remotest part of Russia and knows a dialect which is spoken by say five hundred people. He would have a right to be admitted and the Government could not exclude him. He could ask for a printed paper in his dialect and if he could read it would certainly have the right to be admitted. Would that tend to the advantage of Canada? Would you, Mr. Chairman, compare a Russian who was able to read a dialect spoken by five hundred people, with a clever and intelligent Irishman who, unfortunately, could not read English? Would it be contended for a moment that an Irishman who could not read or write English would not be as good a citizen as the Russian, and in all probability a very much better one?

11 p.m.

Mr. JACOBS: Where would you get your immigration from?

Mr. CANNON: If the qualification is only ability to read any language or dialect it is just as well to have no clause at all, because it is of no value.

Mr. TWEEDIE: I think it would meet the case if we took care not to exclude any from the British Isles or British countries. I practise law and I know it is not an unfamiliar thing to have Old Countrymen who cannot sign their names come into my office, men of the finest type. You very seldom see this inability among the Scandinavian races. I think we should provide for the admission of British subjects.

Mr. CALDER: We have had a fairly good day of it and I doubt very much if we would be able to agree upon this clause to-night. I suggest that the Committee rise and report progress.

Mr. McKENZIE: Before that motion is put; can the minister give us a fair idea of how many dialects there are and how many officers he expects to have standing with slips in their hands to test the ability of these people to read—about 3,000 or 4,000?

[Mr. J. F. Reid.]

Mr. CALDER: I doubt very much whether you will find those dialects in the form of printed languages.

Mr. McKENZIE: I think the clause is unworkable.

The CHAIRMAN: The minister has moved that the Committee rise and report progress.

Mr. McKENZIE: Cannot we speak to the motion?

The CHAIRMAN: It is an undebatable motion, but it may be withdrawn by the minister.

Motion withdrawn.

Mr. McKENZIE: I have not bothered the House very much to-day. I think the clause is unworkable and I wish to tell the minister that I am going to oppose it. He has to provide for agents to meet thousands of different kinds of people that come in. He will require officers to meet all kinds of people and he will have to submit to them a test in different dialects and languages and ask them to read it. I think it is entirely unworkable and it is no test of a man's ability to read or write forty words in some dialect when nobody can tell whether he is doing it correctly or not.

Mr. CALDER: I understand that in the United States, where they have been operating under a law very similar to this for two years, they have never found it necessary to use cards with more than thirty-five different languages. I doubt very much if in the actual operation of the law any difficulty will be found.

Mr. McKENZIE: Will the clause stand?

Mr. CALDER: Yes.

Progress reported.

TELEGRAM REGARDING STATEMENT BY MR. RICHARDSON.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: Before the House rises in view of the statement made in the House this afternoon by the hon. member for Springfield (Mr. Richardson) I wired to Winnipeg to the president of the Ruthenian Council, a lieutenant in the Canadian army, regarding—

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: Order. Do I understand the hon. member has risen to a question of privilege?

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: I do not know that it is a question of privilege.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: Otherwise the hon. gentleman's remarks would not be in order.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: I do not see that it can be a matter of privilege. It refers to a charge made in the House this afternoon against a large number of people in Western Canada.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: Unless it is a charge that concerns the hon. member personally I must rule it out of order.

Mr. McKENZIE: By common consent the hon. member might make his statement.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: Is it the unanimous consent of the House that the hon. member be allowed to make a statement?

Some hon. MEMBERS: Carried.

Mr. DAVIDSON: No.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: The hon. member for Springfield says, "No."

Mr. RICHARDSON: No, I do not.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: I beg his pardon. Well then the hon. member at my right says "no."

On motion of Hon. Mr. Reid the House adjourned at 11.10 p.m.

Thursday, May 1, 1919.

The House met at Three o'clock.

BELGIUM.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE SENATE OF BELGIUM TO MR. SPEAKER.

Mr. SPEAKER: I desire to lay upon the Table a cablegram addressed to myself by the President of the Senate of Belgium.

Mr. JACQUES BUREAU (Three Rivers): Can the cablegram be read for the information of the House?

Mr. SPEAKER: The Deputy Clerk will read it.

The cablegram was read by the Deputy Clerk:

"Bruxelles, le 30 avril 1919.

Monsieur le Président de la
Chambre des communes,

Monsieur le Président du Sénat,
Ottawa.

Monsieur le Président:

J'ai l'honneur de vous adresser, en vous priant d'en donner connaissance à l'assemblée que vous présidez, le texte de la résolution adoptée à l'unanimité par le Sénat, dans sa séance du mardi, 29 avril 1919:

'Le Sénat de Belgique ,ému par le vote de la Conférence de Paris que méconnait les titres de Bruxelles à devenir le siège de la Ligue des Nations, gravement préoccupé de la situation lamentable à laquelle la plus cruelle guerre a réduit son pays, convaincu que les ruines sans nombre qui couvrent le territoire ne peuvent être relevées par les seules ressources nationalles, s'adresse, sous l'empire de la plus vive anxiété, à votre assemblée et la conjure d'intervenir avec la dernière énergie en vue d'obtenir que les engagements solennels de prompte et complète restauration, fréquemment réitérés, soient exécutés dans l'esprit de large équité et de généreuse compassion qui les a dictés. Confiant dans les sentiments de solidarité qui unissent toutes les nations civilisées et dans les témoignages de sincère et profonde sympathies que votre assemblée a bien voulu donner à la belgique, le Sénat se tient assuré de trouver en elle un puissant soutien et une efficace intervention à l'appui des satisfactions légitimes et indispensables réclamées de la Conférence de Paris pour la restauration du pays."

Veuillez agréer,
Monsieur le Président,
L'assurance de ma haute considération,
Baron de Pavereau.
Président du Sénat."

Mr. SPEAKER: I may inform the House that I have had a translation of the cablegram prepared and a copy placed in the hands of the leader of the Government and the leader of the Opposition.

Mr. ERNEST LAPOINTE (Kamouraska): What is the date of the cablegram?

Mr. SPEAKER: April 30, it was received last night.

Sir SAM HUGHES (Victoria): I could not understand one word of what was read, and I would like to know what the cablegram refers to.

Sir THOMAS WHITE (Acting Prime Minister): Possibly it will meet the view of the hon. gentleman if I read the communication in English.

Brussels, Belgium, April 30th, 1919.

The Speaker of the House of Commons,
The Speaker of the Senate
Ottawa.

Mr. Speaker:—

I beg to send you and request you to communicate to the Assembly over which you preside the text of the motion unanimously adopted by the Senate during its session of Tuesday, April 29th, 1919.

The Senate of Belgium affected by the vote of the Paris Conference which disregards the claims of the City of Brussels to become the seat of the League of Nations, seriously preoccupied by the distressing condition to which the country has been reduced by this most cruel war and convinced that the numberless ruins which cover its territory cannot be restored by its own national resources, most anxiously appeals to your Assembly and implores it to intervene with the greatest possible energy in order to obtain that the solemn promises of prompt and complete restoration so frequently reiterated be now carried out in the spirit of broad equity and generous compassion which inspired them.

Relying upon the sentiments of solidarity which unite all civilized nations and upon the assurance of sincere and profound sympathy which your Assembly so kindly gave to Belgium, the Senate counts upon obtaining from your Assembly its powerful aid and effectual intervention in support of the legitimate and necessary atonements claimed from the Paris Conference for the restoration of this country.

Please accept, Mr. Speaker, the assurance of my greatest respect.

(Signed.) Baron de Pavereau,
President of the Senate.

Hon. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX (Maisonneuve): Has the Government taken any action in regard to this matter?

Sir THOMAS WHITE (Acting Prime Minister): The cablegram does not seem to call for any immediate action on the part of the Government. It is a communication addressed to the House of Commons which will have the consideration of the Government.

Sir SAM HUGHES: I suggest that before any action be taken in regard to it, the House be placed in possession of an official record of the damages done to large centres in Belgium.

ST. LAWRENCE RIVER WATER POWERS.

COMMUNICATIONS AND ORDERS IN COUNCIL AS TO ST. LAWRENCE RIVER POWER COMPANY'S DAM.

Hon. NEWTON W. ROWELL (President of the Privy Council): I beg to lay on the Table the following documents:

Copy of a Report of the Committee of the Privy Council, approved by His Excellency the Governor General on the 2nd September, 1918, with reference to the application of the St. Lawrence River Power Company, a corporation of the city of New York, to approve of the project to construct certain works in the South Sault Channel of the St. Lawrence River.

Copy of an Order in Council of the 2nd September, 1918, appointing Hon. Arthur Meighen, Minister of the Interior, and Hon. A. L. Sifton, Minister of Customs and Inland Revenue, to represent the Government of Canada at a conference with representatives of the United States Government concerning the application of the St. Lawrence River Power Company.

Copy of a Report of a Committee of the Privy Council, approved by His Excellency the Governor General on the 12th of October, 1918, in reference to the result of the negotiations between Hon. Arthur Meighen and Hon. A. L. Sifton, representatives of the Government of Canada, with the representatives of the United States Government in reference to the application of the St. Lawrence River Power Company, and also in reference to the Order of the International Joint Commission, authorizing the said company to construct certain works in the South Sault Channel of the St. Lawrence River.

Copy of an Order of the said International Joint Commission authorizing the said works dated September 4, 1918.

Sir SAM HUGHES: I would suggest that these documents be printed, together with maps and plans of the works proposed to be constructed, at the very earliest date, so as to be available for the use of members.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I would make a similar request, because the matter in question is very important.

Mr. ROWELL: I will be very glad to move that the documents be printed for distribution, and that Rule 74 be suspended in relation thereto.

Mr. SPEAKER: Perhaps the motion might stand until to-morrow in order that the resolution authorizing the printing of the documents may be properly framed.

SEDITION AND SEDITIOUS PROPAGANDA.

APPOINTMENT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO CONSIDER LEGISLATION.

Hon. HUGH GUTHRIE (Solicitor-General): With the consent of the House, I beg leave to move:

That Messrs. Guthrie, Tweedie, McIntosh, Allan, Thomson (Qu'Appelle), Boys, Douglas (Cape Breton South), Jacobs, Murphy, Ross, Archambault and Copp, be appointed a special committee to consider and report upon the law relating to sedition and seditious propaganda, and on any changes in the law which may be considered necessary to meet the existing conditions, and that the said Committee have power to sit while the House is in session.

Mr. SPEAKER: This motion can only be entertained by unanimous consent. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Mr. GUTHRIE: The reason for submitting this motion at the present time is the fact that the provisions of our law in regard to sedition and seditious utterances and propaganda are not very definite. It is not very easy to find or to apply them. In Great Britain a committee of lawyers of the British House of Commons was appointed to consider English law upon the subject, and in the United States a similar committee performed like duties there. The result in the United States is that a new law has been passed by Congress. The law officers of the Department of Justice consider it doubtful whether the present sections of our Criminal Code adequately provide for all questions which might arise at this particular time, and it has been deemed advisable by the Government to suggest that a committee of legal members of this House should consider these sections to see whether they do adequately meet present day requirements, and, if not, that the committee suggest to the House such amendments as they deem proper. I think that after one or two meetings the committee will be able to report, and then the matter can be dealt with.

Motion agreed to.

FIRST READINGS.

Hon. Arthur Meighen (Acting Minister of Justice) moved for leave to introduce Bill No. 81 to amend the Interpretation Act.

Mr. JACQUES BUREAU: Explain, please.

Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN: This Bill changes the definition of "superior courts" to make the same comply with the actual constitution of those courts in Ontario, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the first time.

CRIMINAL CODE AMENDMENT (ELECTROCUTION).

Mr. H. M. MOWAT (Parkdale) moved for leave to introduce Bill No. 82 to amend the Criminal Code (Electrocution).

Mr. BUREAU: Explain, please.

Mr. MOWAT: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this Bill is to provide that the mechanism of capital punishment shall be made more in accordance with present day public opinion. The law now is that the condemned man shall be taken back to the local jail and, after a sufficient delay to enable him to make peace with his Maker, that he shall be hanged by the neck until he is dead. The hanging is often inefficiently performed. The sheriff is the executive officer, but not being practised in such duties, he employs the public executioner, whose services are sometimes not available with the result that when a substitute is employed bungling has occurred. In the United States since 1889 execution by electric process has been well tested and has proved very efficient, the death sentence being carried out painlessly and instantaneously. A hundred years ago executions were public and they were made the occasions for wassailing and rioting by the people, but eventually with the advance of enlightenment these gruesome exhibitions have ceased and the sentence is now carried out in private. Those who are familiar with the Ingoldsby Legends will remember that my Lord Tomnoddy's appetite for sensation was so jaded that to revive his spirits his friends could suggest nothing better than an execution. This Bill provides that the execution shall not be in the local jail, as is now the practice, but it shall be in the nearest penitentiary of the province, the reason for that being that condemned men have made their escape from local prisons. Only this month in a certain city of the province of Ontario the death watch allowed communication between the condemned man and his paramour, and the convict escaped and is still at liberty. This Bill provides that a special room be set apart at each penitentiary for the purposes of the execution.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Is this a government measure?

Mr. MOWAT: No.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

QUESTIONS.

(Questions answered orally are indicated by asterisks.)

MISS LAMONTAGNE.

*Mr. DESLAURIERS:

Has Miss Lamontagne, of 91A Jeanne Mance, Montreal, received a bonus in connection with her services as an employee of the Montreal Board of Registration in 1918? If so, what amount did she receive?

2. Did any other male or female employees of said board receive a bonus?

3. Was the entire staff belonging to said board entitled to a bonus? If so, did every person thereof receive said bonus?

Hon. Mr. ROWELL: I am informed by the registrar of the Bureau that there is no such name on the list of employees.

MILITARY SERVICE DEFAULTERS.

*Mr. GAUVREAU:

Referring to the following statement made by the Minister of Militia and Defence during the debate on the Resolution moved in the House by Sir Sam Hughes, on the 9th April instant:

"In regard to the question of uniform penalties,—as I stated in the House the other day,—immediately after the armistice, on November 11, it was quite apparent that we did not require any more of these defaulters as soldiers, and the question was, what was to be done with them? Under the statute they were liable as deserters and defaulters and personally I never considered that they should be allowed to go scot-free. I do not believe that it is possible in this country,—unless we are going to engage in that work for the rest of our natural lives,— to attempt to arrest all the men of these various classes; but I would like to see some machinery quickly put into operation whereby all the classes mentioned by the Acting Minister of Justice (Mr. Meighen) should be disfranchised and deprived of certain civil rights for a period of years. This, I think, would be approved of by all good people in this country. Those who were defaulters would be thereby penalized."

Is it the intention of the Department of Justice immediately to recall the Dominion Police Officers who are now pursuing defaulters under the Military Service Act, and to pass a Bill founded upon the above minister's proposition disfranchising the said defaulters for a certain period of years?

Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN: A Bill dealing with the subject will be introduced very shortly.

STE. MARIE WHARF.

Mr. DESLAURIERS:

1. Is the Government aware that a landslip has occurred at Ste. Marie wharf, which prevents the steamer Boucherville from commencing its sailing operations?

2. In connection with the construction of the wharves at this point, already commenced, is it the intention of the Government to extend said wharf construction as far as Hochelaga Bay, during the summer season of 1919?

Hon. Mr. BALLANTYNE:

1. This locality is within the limits of the harbour of Montreal and under the jurisdiction of the Harbour Commission. The Harbour Commissioners advise that the damage to the wharf has been repaired and that the steamer Boucherville started running on the 23rd instant.

2. The Harbour Commissioners advise that it is proposed to extend the wharf during this season.

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURN.

Sir HERBERT AMES:

1. How many persons (not corporations) paid income tax under clause 4 of the Income War Tax Act, 1917, upon incomes (a) exceeding $100,000; (b) between $50,000 and $100,000; (c) between $30,000 and $50,000; (d) between $20,000 and $30,000; (e) between $10,000 and $20,000; (f) between $6,000 and $10,000 and (g) under $6,000?

2. What was the total sum collected from each of the above categories?

CANADIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE—FARMERS' SONS.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. J. A. ROBB (Chateauguay-Huntingdon): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called I desire to bring to the attention of the Minister of Militia a matter of national importance. From the items in the public press and the number of letters that come to my office and what I hear from other members, it is apparent that there is a great scarcity of farm help throughout Canada, and farmers are becoming restless for the return of their sons, some of whom are now in France, and some in England. I should like to know if the Militia Department cannot arrange a preference for the return of farmers' sons.

Major-General MEWBURN: This matter has, ever since demobilization commenced, been given most serious consideration. The British army attempted to work out a scheme of demobilization by pivotal or occupational groups, but immediately after the armistice that was found to be impracticable, and the British authorities had to abandon it immediately. It created great trouble and dissension in the army, and a great lack of discipline and a very bitter feeling throughout the whole corps. After a great deal of correspondence with the overseas minister and with the corps commander, it was found that giving priority of return to any individual or class created a very embarrassing situation and a great deal of trouble within the corps. It was, therefore, decided that it was found impossible to bring back any man in priority except on strictly compassionate grounds. I have the utmost sympathy with members of Parliament who are and have been receiving applications from their constituents for the return of soldiers. Those applications, which have been forwarded to me, have been coming in in very large numbers ever since November, and I have endeavoured to the best of my ability to deal sympathetically with each case. On the 29th of January last I sent a circular notice to every member of Parliament and every senator, explaining the situation and pointing out what men could be brought back only on compassionate grounds, and that medical certificates had to be procured from the districts from whence the men came.

As to demobilization in Canada, we met the situation and demobilized all men whose services were not urgently required, giving particular attention to that class.

As regards the corps, the men are being brought back as units, and I think the hon. member will readily understand, if in one unit one or two individual men are pulled out and brought back in priority to their comrades, the feelings of the rest of the men who are held back. Hundreds upon hundreds, in fact, thousands of applications have been received, not only from farmers, but from all classes for the return of relations and friends for whom positions are awaiting here. I spoke to many officers who came back and they all said that the giving of priority of return created a frightful situation, and that the only way to deal with the matter was to carry out the policy that has been laid down and that is sound and workable. Demobilization is proceeding more rapidly than was expected; the strike at Liverpool is now over, and the whole of the troops will be coming back at a very early date.

As regards individual men in England who are not with any of the units, they have been given priority in accordance with length of service, the married men being returned first.

Mr. WILLIAM D. EULER (North Waterloo): Could not the Minister of Militia consider the discharge of all farmers who are very badly needed in Western Ontario and elsewhere, who are still held at militia headquarters in the various districts? I think there are still some at London, Ont., and possibly elsewhere. Could not an exception be made in those cases?

Major-General MEWBURN: We have already given that most careful consideration, and, as I have stated, as regards demobilization in Canada, we have released every man possible. It has been absolutely essential, in every military district in Canada, to keep the smallest staff possible to carry out demobilization, which is of much greater magnitude than many people realize. We have also found it necessary, for more reasons than one, to keep a very small garrison unit in each district. We have given priority, as I have stated, and in connection with that I sent out a circular giving these instructions:—

Certain Units of the Canadian Expeditionary Force must be maintained in a state of efficiency; such as, Canadian Garrison Detachments, Canadian Medical Corps, Canadian Army Service Corps, and certain administrative units; but the personnel is being reduced as fast as possible, taking the following as a basis for priority of discharge.

Those who can be spared and who are desirous of discharge:

(a) With overseas service.

That is, the men who have had actual overseas service are entitled to priority.

(b) With dependents. This class will be determined by eligibility to receive separation allowance.

That is, married men have been next allowed to return.

(c) In low medical category and unable to render fully efficient service.

(d) In occupations required for economic reasons as indicated by Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment.

These men will be released as speedily as possible. It was felt that some of these men who had not been overseas could afford to devote some time to cleaning up the enormous work of demobilization, but I have, in every instance that has been brought to my attention, tried to meet sympathetically every specific request of any hon. member and I shall try to do so as far as possible.

NAVAL SERVICE—PRIORITY OF DISCHARGE.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR (Guysborough): Might I ask a similar question of the Minister of the Naval Service? I am informed that a number of young men who enlisted in the Canadian navy are being held at Halifax, although their services are much needed on our fisheries and farms. It is a puzzle to a good many people why these men are being held at Halifax, because some of them write that they have nothing whatever to do there. Is there any reason for that?

Hon. C. C. BALLANTYNE (Minister of the Naval Service): Before I took ill, I gave instructions to the Naval Department to demobilize as speedily as possible. Since my return I have not had opportunity to look into the matter, but I shall do so, and I will be very glad to give a more definite answer to-morrow.

MILITARY TRIALS IN ENGLAND.

On the Orders of the Day:

Lieut.-General Sir SAM HUGHES (Victoria): This morning I received information that a number of soldiers concerned in the Kinmel camp riots are being tried in England. Are these men being tried under the Criminal Law of England or under the military law? If they are being tried by military law, are they being tried solely and only by Canadian military authorities, as the Army Act provides, or are they being tried by Imperial and Canadian authorities together?

Major-General MEWBURN (Minister of Militia): My information is that there has been and still is a court-martial sitting in England, composed entirely of Canadians, according to the Army Act.

Sir SAM HUGHES: The case I refer to is that of one Smith from New Brunswick.

who, when the facts are known, will be found to be absolutely guiltless of any serious offence. I understand he is confined in the Tower with others on a very serious charge, the probability being that he will be lined up and shot. I trust the Government will give this matter their serious consideration.

Major-General MEWBURN: I am not aware of any of our men being confined in the Tower and liable to be shot, and I doubt if that is a fact. I remember the case of another man named Smith from New Brunswick who was acquitted the other day, and the trial of another man is awaiting witnesses who crossed over to this side and who have to return. Already two men have been tried and acquitted. As regards men being confined to the Tower, I think the hon. member must be misinformed. These courts-martial are sitting, and a very able man has been retained to defend all those men. I understand instructions are given that they are to be afforded every facility for their defence.

Sir SAM HUGHES: Under Canadian law?

Major-General MEWBURN: Yes.

CIVIL SERVICE RE-CLASSIFICATION.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. JOHN BEST (Dufferin): Might I ask the Acting Prime Minister (Sir Thomas White) if the report of the re-classification of the Civil Service is in the hands of the Government, and if so, when it will be laid on the Table?

Sir THOMAS WHITE (Acting Prime Minister): I am sorry the Acting Minister of Trade and Commerce (Mr. A. K. Maclean) who has immediate charge of the matter, is not in his place. I shall direct the question of my hon. friend to his attention. It has not come to my knowledge that the report has been received.

IMMIGRATION ACT AMENDMENT.

House again in Committee on Bill No. 52, to amend the Immigration Act, Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

On section 3, subsection 6, paragraph (t) —illiterates:

Mr. JACOBS: I beg to move that this paragraph be struck out of the Bill.

Amendment negatived; yeas 37, nays 75.

Mr. JACOBS: I would suggest that discretionary powers be given to the minister to permit, in cases where he deems it advisable, the landing of such persons as are mentioned in this paragraph, so that it would not be necessary to have these cases brought before Council or dealt with in some other way under the Act.

Mr. McKENZIE: I wish to record my dissent from this very unnecessary and unworkable innovation in the Act. It is absolutely impossible to carry out this test. There are thousands and thousands of different dialects in the countries from which we receive and expect to receive immigrants and it is proposed that slips containing between thirty and forty words in the dialect of the person attempting to enter shall be placed in the hands of our officials, who can neither read nor understand that dialect. If the immigrant can mumble over these thirty or forty words he is to be allowed to enter, althouth the official cannot tell whether he has read them correctly or not. The test, on the other hand, will debar the honest British subject, the stalwart healthy Scotsman, Irishman, or Englishman, who would make a desirable citizen in every sense of the term simply because he is honest enough to say that he did not have the opportunity in his early days of being taught to read and write. I submit that that is not a test at all; it is not British; we have never had such a test before. An army of officials would be required to carry out this test, and when carried out, I submit that it would be absolutely no safeguard. I am quite willing that all reasonable precautions be taken to secure a desirable class of immigrants, but I submit that if a man is healthy, physically and mentally, and complies with all the other requirements of the Act, he should not be debarred simply because he did not have an opportunity in his youth of learning to read and write. I am very sorry the minister has thought it necessary to put this unworkable barrier in the Act.

Mr. CALDER: The Committee will agree that there is something in the contention of the leader of the Opposition whose viewpoint I can see quite clearly. However, I do not think we will have the difficulty in administering the law which he anticipates. A very similar law has been in force in the United States for two years and it was only yesterday that I had an opportunity of discussing the matter with the chief official responsible for the administration of this law there, Mr. A. Caninetti, Commissioner General of Immigration, Department of Labour, Washington, whom I think many members in the Committee know, tells me that they have had very little difficulty in administering this law. While it is true that there are in all countries in the world some thousands of dialects, many of them are not in the form of written or printed languages. As a matter of fact, as I stated to the Committee yesterday—

Sir SAM HUGHES: Does the minister say, thousands of dialects?

Mr. CALDER: I am repeating what the leader of the Opposition says. He told us that there were some thousands of dialects and for that reason we would have all sorts of difficulties in administering the law. In the United States there have been some hundreds of thousands of people seeking entry every year, and the authorities have found it necessary to make use of only some thirty-five different languages. I do not expect it will be necessary to create an army of officials in order to administer this law. Very few officials will be needed, and there should be very little difficulty in training them to administer the law in a reasonable way. I agree that there is a possibility that under a law of this kind we may exclude some very desirable people; but on the other hand I am quite convinced that the great majority of the people in Canada have made up their minds definitely that this country is not going to be flooded with illiterates. That is unquestionable. It might be advisable to add a rider to this clause giving the minister, under proper regulations approved by the Governor in Council, some discretionary power in the matter. I can understand that persons who have not had an education may seek entry from Great Britain, but it seems to me that if that power is given every precaution should be taken to see that it is properly exercised. I think that before any persons desiring to come to Canada from Great Britain left it would be well that our officers there should thoroughly examine them and ascertain whether or not they would be desirable citizens of Canada, and report the facts to the department before the granting of permission for them to come. If the Committee thinks fit, we might add a rider placing some discretion in the hands of the department, and I would be quite prepared to have a clause drawn accordingly. When we consider that this law has been in force in the United States for two years, if we did not have similar laws here the tendency the world over on the part of people of this class would be to come to Canada, and we might have conditions that would be very undesirable indeed unless there were some check.

Mr. NESBITT: I would support the suggestion that the minister have a discretionary power as regards letting in people who cannot read or write. There are people who come from the British Isles and are unable either to read or to write, but who, nevertheless, might make excellent citizens. I think that if there is one thing more than another that we require in Canada it is ordinary labour, and a great many of these illiterates from the British Isles would make splendid ordinary labourers. As an occasional employer of labour to a limited extent, I have frequently met persons who could neither read nor write but who were good and successful citizens and acquired farms of their own. I think the trouble is that a good many of the people who come can read and write too well and do not want to do anything else. Many of the clauses in the Bill prevent people of bad character from coming, but I think that the suggestion is a very good one that the minister should be given some discretion in the admission of people who might be desirable although they cannot read or write.

Mr. CRONYN: As there has been considerable discussion on the question of illiteracy in the British Isles, it might be well to put on record a table covering a period of ten years which the United States Immigration Commission published after a long investigation. The average illiteracy during the period from 1899 to 1909 among all European immigrants was over 26.6 per cent, and it is interesting to note the striking difference between the illiteracy displayed by what are called the old immigrants and that displayed by the new immigrants. You will remember that on a former occasion it was pointed out that the old immigrants came chiefly from Northwestern Europe and the new immigrants from Southeastern Europe. This table of the percentage of illiteracy is based upon the inability of the immigrants to either read or write, so that it is a severer test than that proposed in this Bill. The table is published by the United States Immigration Commission and is quoted in Professor Fairchild's work on immigration at page 198. Percentage of illiteracy of immigrants of specified races, 14 years of age or over, for the years 1899-1909:

Scandinavian	0.4 per cent.
English	1.1 " "
Irish	2.7 " "
German	5.1 " "
Italian north	11.8 " "
Magyar	11.4 " "
Hebrew	25.7 " "
Greek	27.0 " "

Rumanian	34.7 per cent.
Polish	35.4 " "
Croatian and Slovenian	36.4 " "
Italian south	54.2 " "
Portuguese	68.2 " "

Sir SAM HUGHES: Where do the Scotch come in there?

Mr. CRONYN: I was just going to comment on the fact that Scotland does not appear in this list at all, for the reason, I suppose, that there were no illiterates. They are like our friends the Acadians, who, we were glad to hear yesterday, had no illiterates amongst them. I want to draw the attention of the Committee to the great difference between the Italians of northern Italy with 11.8 per cent illiteracy and the Italians of southern Italy with 54.2 per cent.

Mr. G. B. NICHOLSON: The table just quoted by my hon. friend (Mr. Cronyn) is of very great significance to any one who has had anything to do with the foreign peoples that have come into this country. You will note that of the Scandinavians 0.4 per cent were illiterate, while the Rumanian percentage was 34. I have lived for thirty-five years amongst a people in which all classes of foreigners are very thickly mixed. In the town in which I have lived for that period we have had a large number of foreigners. We have them yet in Northern Ontario and the foreigner that is giving us trouble, and that is giving this country trouble to-day by adopting a Bolshevik attitude, is the educated foreigner. There are three families living in the little town where I reside who came into this country and the fathers and mothers of whom were absolutely illiterate. They have lived there now for 34 or 35 years, their children have grown up, they have attended the public schools and have become good citizens. The mothers and fathers themselves have learned to read and write English and can converse freely in that tongue.

But when you get the educated Scandinavian who has been referred to, you get the class of man who is creating all the agitation amongst his fellows and trying to break down the ideals for which Canadians stand. I related an experience to one of the members of the House that we had this past winter with 500 Scandinavians. Nine or ten years ago, if you had asked a man who had paid any attention to public affairs in Northern Ontario what, in his judgment, was the best class of men that you could get into that country in order that it might be properly developed, on account of its rigorous climate and long winters, he would tell you the Scandinavian. That was our experience when we had a small number of these people but they have come in large numbers and since they became saturated with the ideas of the educated agitator they have become difficult to deal with.

At the present time in the town of Sudbury there are eleven men awaiting trial at the next sessions, not one of whom is an illiterate. They are men in the same class as that referred to by the hon. member for North Oxford (Mr. Nesbitt)—the man who does not want to do anything but read and write and circularize his fellow men of the same nationality in order to create unrest in the country and to break down the Government and the ideals of Canadian citizenship.

4 p.m

I have had something to do with many foreigners and with a very considerable number of Rumanians. This is the class of people who seem to be more willing than any others to enter into our citizenship, and I say that with all due deference to other classes, and notwithstanding the possibility that I may be misunderstood, of the Rumanians, and a number of people who were formerly citizens of Austria. A large class of men who were interned as enemy aliens in the early days of the war and were afterwards let out on parole have always been recognized as peaceful, law-abiding citizens in Northern Ontario. They belonged to countries that were part of the Austrian Empire and many people of these races are now citizens of the Allies. These are facts that cannot be gainsaid and any one who will go through the country and investigate conditions as they are cannot fail to come to the conclusion that an educational test on the basis of a man having been educated in the country of his origin, and for the country of his origin is not right. If the ideals that have been taught to him are not right, submitting him to this test gives us no assurance that we are going to get the right kind of citizen for Canada.

Mr. CALDER: If the Committee approve I would suggest the addition of some words at the end of the clause. The clause now reads:

> The provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to Canadian citizens and persons who have Canadian domicile, or to persons in transit through Canada.

I would suggest that these words be added:

—or to such persons or classes of persons as may from time to time be approved by the minister.

The Committee will understand that this places a very large discretion in the hands of the minister. It may not always be administered wisely, but that will be a matter for the minister and the Government of the day, whoever it may be, to look after. It is just a question as to whether or not the Committee thinks it advisable to place that discretion in the hands of the Government.

Sir SAM HUGHES: As those who are undesirable are debarred under some other section of the Act, it would not impose a great responsibility on the minister, because if the immigrant was not debarred on that ground the probability is that he would be debarred on some other.

Mr. CALDER: He would be debarred for other reasons and not on account of illiteracy. The clause would then read in this way:

The provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to Canadian citizens and persons who have Canadian domicile, or to persons in transit through Canada, or to such persons or classes of persons as may from time to time be approved by the minister.

Mr. McKENZIE: We have a situation in my part of the country as between ourselves and Newfoundland, which ought to receive consideration. Hundreds and thousands of people go back and forth pretty much all the time between Newfoundland and Nova Scotia, landing at North Sydney. They are the best men that we have in connection with our coal and steel works, and we could not get along very well without them. I am afraid that this test may keep a great many of them out. In many parts of Newfoundland they have no very great educational advantages, and while they are a splendid people, good workers and desirable citizens, I am afraid that this requirement that they shall be able to read and write may keep many of them out of the province. We are very anxious to have them come in and go out as they want to. The hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Keefer) suggested last night that this rule would not apply to Great Britain and Ireland. I wish to add Newfoundland. I do not think we would be running any risk by saying that this rule should not apply to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and Newfoundland. Let it apply to those who are really foreigners and let our own people come in if they are otherwise desirable. The probabilities are that most of them can read, but let us not put any obstruction in the way of the others.

Mr. TWEEDIE: It seems to me that if we follow the suggestion which has been made by the Minister of Immigration we will throw wide open the question of the literary test in regard to the immigrants that enter Canada. The arguments of the hon. member for North Oxford (Mr. Nesbitt) and the hon. member for Algoma (Mr. Nicholson) were not confined to cases of extreme hardship. As far as the immigrant himself is concerned, the hon. member for North Oxford points out that we require people of that class to come into this country for the purposes of labour. He says that we bring them in as illiterates, and being here, they are more contented while they are in that state. Therefore his argument practically means that we must permit the admission of ignorant people for the purpose of having quietness amongst the labouring class. My opinion is that if we throw the burden upon the minister of determining who shall be admitted he will be at once flooded by requests and petitions from all classes of employers in this country who will say that we need a certain class of farm labour. The hon. member for Cape Breton South (Mr. Douglas) suggests that we need another class of labour to operate the coal mines. It will also be suggested that we need others to work as section-hands on our railways; in fact, that we need for labour purposes generally throughout Canada the admission of ignorant people. I deem it right at the present time to face the issue squarely and say whether or not we are going to apply the literary test to immigrants coming to Canada, or whether we will allow the law to remain as it is. To make the minister the judge would, in my opinion, impose an unfair burden upon him, and he would be more than human if he could resist the many requests having for their object the evasion of this section of the law. I think we should apply the literary test and require the immigrants brought to this country to have a certain amount of education, so that even if they cannot speak the English language they may, through the medium of their own tongue and their own papers, become familiar with the conditions that exist here. We should not, as in the past, permit the entrance of a great many illiterates of foreign birth who cannot read in their own language, let alone read, write, or speak the English language, and who have no way whatever of familiarizing themselves with the prevailing Canadian conditions, except through such representations as may be made to them. The hon. member for Springfield (Mr. Richardson) charged last night that the illiterate immigrants that have been brought into this country in the past have been made the victims of political trickery, and have been imposed upon by the politicians of both parties. Well, if we wish to avoid that condition of affairs which no doubt has existed in this country in the past I can see no better way of making a start than by requiring the immigrants who enter Canada to be able to read and to write in some language. As far as regards the percentage of illiterates who would come from Great Britain it is certainly very small. I think we should either stand by the principle of the clause as it is now, and not place in the hands of the minister power to permit the entrance of any class of illiterates, or else we should wipe out the literary test entirely, and let the law remain as it is at the present time. Personally I am in favour of the application of the literary test, and I would be very sorry to see any such broad power placed in the hands of the minister.

Mr. NESBITT: The hon. gentleman has misquoted what I said. I did not maintain that it was necessary to bring in an illiterate man for labour purposes. What I said was that I would not bar his admission because he was illiterate, provided he was otherwise qualified. The hon. member for London (Mr. Cronyn) further said that no illiterate Scotchman had come to Canada in the last ten years. I have personal knowledge of a Scotchman who has come to this country in the last five years, who is illiterate and has a very broad accent.

Mr. J. F. REID (Mackenzie): He was an Irishman.

Mr. NESBITT: He was not an Irishman, but it would not hurt him any if he were. I personally am inclined to leave it to the judgment of the Minister of Immigration in certain cases to permit the entry, in his own judgment, of certain classes of immigrants. I am not afraid the present Minister of Immigration would ever abuse that discretionary power, or that he would not carry it out with ability, and I hope that in the future no Minister of Immigration will be appointed in whom we could not repose equal confidence.

[Mr. Tweedie.]

Mr. CALDER: I would like to point out the exact effect of this section. It will be noted that it says:

> The following persons shall be prohibited from entering or landing in Canada:—Persons over fifteen years of age,— and so on. Then it says:

> The provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to Canadian citizens and persons who have Canadian domicile or to persons in transit through Canada.

That is to say, it exempts those who have acquired a Canadian domicile, or those who are simply passing through Canada as tourists or travellers. What the section means, if it passes, is that every person over fifteen years of age who cannot read shall not be allowed to land or enter Canada. As I understand the situation down by the sea, every year there is a fairly large number of people who come over from Newfoundland to work in the coal mines.

Mr. McKENZIE: Yes, and in the steel works.

Mr. CALDER: That is, these people are engaged in seasonal occupation, and there seems to me no reason why in that particular instance discretion should not be used for the admission of these people to engage in such seasonal occupations. Again, it has been pointed out that on account of the conditions existing in Western Canada from time to time we must send to the United States and engage some thousands of labouring men to work in our harvest fields. Well, if the section remains exactly in its present form we must see to it that such persons are admitted to render that harvest help. It appears to me that, taking everything into consideration, some discretion should be permitted under this section whereby we might be able to meet the labour conditions that arise from time to time in this country.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE (Edmonton East): What would happen in the case of these people desiring to remain in the country permanently?

Mr. CALDER: I think we should provide that the section shall not apply to those people who enter Canada for the temporary purposes referred to, but if they wish to remain then the test will be applied.

Mr. COCKSHUTT: How would the minister deal with a case such as I am about to mention, of which I have experienced two or three in the last few years? The father has come to Canada and is providing, or is in the way of getting, a home.

He obtains a good occupation and later on sends for his wife and chidren whom he left behind in the Old Country—I am speaking now particularly of persons who came from Great Britain. In one of the cases there was a wife, and I think six or seven children, one of the children not being as bright as doctors thought she ought to be. The parents were faced with this condition: They either had to abandon all their arrangements and the whole family remain in England, or else come to Canada and leave the one dull child behind, although it was demonstrated she was not able to take care of herself. It appears to me that where the parents are prepared to guarantee that a child of that kind will be looked after and will be no charge to the country, it is scarcely charitable, to say the least of it, to break up a family circle and upset the plans of six or seven people wishing to come to this country because one of the number may be considered not as bright as she should be. I want to ask the minister if he has any discretion in dealing with a case of that kind?

Mr. CALDER: There is discretion under the law as it now stands to deal with cases of that kind, and the department is from time to time handling such cases. Usually we require something in the nature of security from the relatives that a child such as the hon. member speaks of shall not be a public charge, and the child is then allowed to enter Canada under a section of the existing law. All of those cases are gone into very carefully, and every precaution is taken to see that the person admitted does not become a public charge.

Mr. EDWARDS: I think perhaps it might be pertinent to ask what is the object of the reading test for immigrants? The only object of such a test that I have been able to gather was indicated by some words of the minister, to the effect that we have not done our duty in times past in our efforts to Canadianize those foreigners who have come to this country. So I assume that one of the objects is to enable us to impart information to them which they should have in order to know something about our institutions, customs and ideals. It must be clear to every person that if the immigrant is unable to read there is no opportunity of imparting such information. If that person comes from a country other than Great Britain, say from Italy or Rumania, and he can read his native language, we are in a position to place in his hands reading matter printed in his own tongue which will convey to him some idea of our national ideals, customs and institutions, and in that way we can carry on a campaign to Canadianize him. If that is true there is not the same reason to impose a reading test on an immigrant from Great Britain as to impose it on persons coming from foreign countries, because we can convey to a Britisher by word of mouth our ideals and customs—in fact, coming from the British Isles he understands them pretty well already.

It occurred to me that the real object we had in view in applying this reading test was to enable us to carry out our work of making these foreigners Canadian citizens, and I repeat, if they are illiterate there is no possible way of imparting to them the necessary knowledge of our ideals, customs and instructions. Therefore I think the reading test is consistent with the idea of the minister that we should be more particular and more energetic in performing our duty of turning these foreigners into Canadian citizens. But I do not think there will be any very great hardship in applying the reading test to persons coming from the British Isles. I think there is a smaller percentage of illiteracy among those people than amongst our native-born population as I understand the figures. In Scotland particularly the authorities have been giving very close attention to the subject of education, and I do not think immigrants from England and Scotland would have any trouble in passing a reading test, especially those coming from Scotland.

If an immigrant is under fifteen years of age the reading test does not apply, but if any boy or girl who has lived in the British Isles until the age of fifteen is unable to read the English language, I do not think it is desirable to allow such a youth to enter this country. Any boy or girl who has not had enough ambition, with the opportunities available in Great Britain, to acquire that reading knowledge had better stay at home for a few months longer until able to read.

I think the idea of a reading test is very good and is perfectly logical and consistent with the attitude taken by the minister all along. I might add that this fact has been very strongly impressed upon the people of the United States during the last three or four years. I was very much interested in reading a summary of a report presented by Secretary Lane to the President of the United States in regard to this very matter. I will not take up the time of the committee by referring to it in detail, but he impressed on the President in the very strongest language possible the great importance to that country—which we do not regard as illiterate by any means—of taking very vigorous measures to enforce attendance at schools, that the population might be better educated. He calls attention to the large number of illiterates in the United States and the very serious effect it has upon the country. So when the United States is taking energetic measures along the line of selection of their immigrants, it does seem to me that it would be unwise for us to be lax in this matter wherein, I think, we have in times past been altogether too negligent. I think we should have some test along the lines of enabling ourselves to carry on a propaganda of instructing immigrants, if not in our own language, then in their native language, by means of pamphlets and other reading matter.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I do not agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Edwards), because what we want is immigrants, and a man may be a very desirable immigrant although unable to read or write. We all know that we have had men from the British Isles who have made good citizens, and a great many of them have not had the advantages of an education. I know an old man who was not able to read or write, but he was a skilful farmer and a progressive man and gave his children a good education. It is a good while ago since he came to Nova Scotia, but his grandson is now principal of a great university in the United States. It would be foolish, I think, to exclude that class of men who are so unfortunate as not to have had educational opportunities. There are not as many of them at present as there were years ago, but there are still a certain number, and why should we exclude them? They are in no way dangerous citizens, and I take it that the purpose of the minister is to exclude undesirable people, and a man cannot be said necessarily to be undesirable merely because he is unable to read. The question raised by the leader of the Opposition (Mr. McKenzie) is important in Nova Scotia, and I do not see how the minister can very well deal with every separate case, because that would keep him pretty busy. In the spring of the year, when fifty or a hundred men, who are not able to read, arrive in Sydney from Newfoundland every day, they will not be allowed to land, and they will have to return home until permission for them to land is obtained from Ottawa.

Mr. CALDER: I do not think the hon. member rightly understands the wording of the proposed amendment, which is that the minister may allow persons or classes of persons to enter Canada. If it were adopted, provision would have to be made that those seasonal workers from Newfoundland be put in a class that would be allowed to enter.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: If the minister will have to make a regulation to apply to such cases as that, it might as well be inserted in the Bill. The minister should consider the advisability of not applying this regulation to the British Isles, or for that matter to the self-governing Dominions, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Newfoundland. I am not moving this as an amendment, but I submit for the minister's consideration that these words be inserted:

> Or to persons being British subjects emigrating from Great Britain or Ireland or from any of the self-governing Dominions of the Empire.

Mr. CALDER: I am afraid if we attempted to deal with this in the Bill in a specific way, we shall only land ourselves in trouble. If it is to be dealt with at all, discretion must be given to deal with such cases as they arise from time to time.

Mr. FIELDING: I should like to support the minister's proposal by way of amendment to add these qualifying words which will tend to soften the previous clause and to guard against a possible injustice, at all events, against a possible harshness of administration. It is not generally desirable that we should confer too much power upon any individual minister, but it is, from time to time, necessary to allow a minister a discretion. I quite agree with the minister that it will be better to leave the matter in a general way as he has proposed in his amendment than to adopt words specifying those who might be admitted. I know enough about the case of men from Newfoundland, referred to by the leader of the Opposition, to see the force of his representations. Yet, if we were asked to specify Newfoundland, that would seem to be an unfortunate discrimination against other portions of the British Dominions, and if we adopt the suggestion of the hon. member for Antigonish and Guysborough (Mr. J. H. Sinclair), mentioning several Dominions, that would still leave out other portions of the British Empire. I hope that the thing can be worked out as the minister proposes in his amendment, and I certainly think to go beyond that and specify particular countries might get us into trouble.

Mr. HAY: If the amendment "that discretionary powers be left in the hands of the minister" is to be included in the Bill, I will certainly support the Bill, because I would not be in favour of excluding British subjects, even if they were unable to meet the requirements in respect to reading and writing. That would be doing an injustice to British citizens if they met the requirements of the Bill in every other respect. It would be working a hardship on the people of England, Scotland, Ireland, and the rest of the British Empire.

Mr JACOBS: I was rather surprised and somewhat startled at the figures which the hon. member for London (Mr. Cronyn) gave us with respect to illiteracy. Quoting from Professor Fairchild's book, he gave us a list of the percentages of illiterates from various countries in Europe, and amongst those, he told us that Hebrew illiteracy was about 25 per cent. This is the first I have heard of there being such a country as a Hebrew country in Europe. These men come from certain specified countries in Europe, and a classification of some according to nationality and others according to race and religion would require explanation.

Mr. CRONYN: This is the heading of the table as I read it: "Percentage of illiteracy of immigrants of the specified races."

Mr. JACOBS: I think I know probably as much about Hebrews as Professor Fairchild, and no doubt more than my good friend from London (Mr. Cronyn). I can safely say that, in my experience, covering quite a number of years—and I have been the president of the largest Hebrew philanthropic institution in Canada—there never came under my review the case of a single Jew who did not know how to read his own language. In fact, such a thing is absolutely impossible. I have only to turn to the biblical command to prove that Jews must know how to read their own language, otherwise they cannot become members of the Jewish community If my good friend wants to accompany me to my room where I always have a Bible, I think I can show him the text. That being the case, I cannot understand why those figures should have been given by Professor Fairchild, unless it be for this reason that these Jewish people coming from various countries were unable to read the language of the country from which they came. But I question whether, if the test were put to them with regard to their own language, they would be found unable to read that language. Such a thing is absolutely impossible, and my object in rising was to put this clearly before the House. Furthermore I understand that an impression has gone abroad that I have strenuously opposed this section because it is going to debar Jews from this country. The reasons already given by me would indicate that I have no such idea at all. My object is rather one of endeavouring to assist others who, not so fortunate as the Hebrew people, have no injunctions of that kind in their religious cults. I would be satisfied with the clause as accepted by the minister namely, that we give discretion to the minister. I would have been more satisfied if the clause had been entirely struck out, but half a loaf is better than no bread. I trust, that with the intelligence which characterizes the department, no real hardship will be suffered by those who wish to enter this country, who are desirable citizens, but who may be disqualified by their inability to read.

Mr. CRONYN: I hope the hon. member will accept my assurance that in quoting this table I had no feeling against any race therein mentioned. His explanation may have hit the truth; there is nothing in the context to show. The table did include both reading and writing, and it might well be that the test was in the tongue of the country from which the immigrant came.

Mr. McKENZIE: I should like to know when these definite and well-defined arrangements will be made. I have in mind particularly people from Newfoundland coming over to Cape Breton. If a boat-load of these Newfoundlanders went to land at North Sydney, are we to infer that they would have to lie off North Sydney until Ottawa had been communicated with and it was ascertained whether they could come in? Or is it proposed to put the regulations in the hands of the immigration officers at North Sydney and other places, so that they can decide whether the men shall be allowed to land? There was almost a riot in our town last year on account of some regulations that had been passed, inadvertently, I believe, by the Department of Immigration. Three or four hundred Newfoundlanders were held up at North Sydney in consequence of this regulation, but after a few days we managed to reach an understanding with the department and they were allowed to land. These Newfoundlanders are the most loyal type of British subject; they have shown themselves to be excellent soldiers in this war and they are very sensitive of any obstructions placed in the way of their entry into any other part of the British Empire. I trust that whatever arrangements are made, they will not create any ill-feeling or misunderstanding between the colony of Newfoundland and ourselves.

Mr. CALDER: This section does not come into force until the first day of July, so that we shall have ample time to consider the situation down by the sea. My intention is to refer the matter to the officials of the department immediately, so that the necessary regulations may be framed and our officers in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island made thoroughly acquainted with them before the first of July. The same is true of immigrants from Great Britain. We shall endeavour to frame regulations and give our officials over there ample notice. It can all be done in ample time before the first of July.

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. CRONYN: I desire to move the addition of a further subsection to section 3. If the Committee are weary of the number of times I have risen on this Bill, I may urge in mitigation that heretofore this session I have not occupied much of the time of the House. Last week we had a prolonged and strenuous debate, but on that occasion I think I had some balance of time to spare over the one and seven-ninths of a minute which it was calculated was the allowance of each member. We heard then a good deal about figurative babies and imaginary wrecks. It seems to me this Bill is fraught with potentialities which will affect many real babies in the years to come, and may possibly bring about many human wrecks. It is in fact the resumption of one of the great biological and sociological experiments that we are considering in this Bill. My amendment, which I shall read later, proposes to prohibit for a term of years immigration from south-eastern Europe. It may be urged that under section 13, which has already been passed by the Committee, power is given by Order in Council to accomplish the same end. Perhaps I share with certain other hon. members of this House some apprehensions with regard to Orders in Council. At all events, if the Bill is passed in its present form, no member of the House should afterwards raise objection to Orders in Council affecting immigration passed under section 13.

There are divers views regarding the general subject of immigration, and I do not desire to detain the Committee by discussing these at length. There is the broad view of the man who may be termed a sentimental monogenist—the man who says "Are we not all brothers in this world?" and who points out that the great war was fought for liberty and mankind, and urges, therefore, that no country should shut its doors against any race. Of course, if he be logical, he must allow the entry of the natives of Asia and Africa as well as those of Europe, and while there are advocates who are prepared to go to that logical length, I fancy that few of them will be found in this country. The hon. member for George Etienne Cartier spoke of the white man's burden and Kipling's gospel thereon. Now, my memory of that gospel is different from his, and I shall take the liberty of calling the attention of the Committee to what Kipling actually did say. I shall not read the whole poem, because it is too lengthy. One or two stanzas will show that what Kipling was speaking of was the missionary effort of Great Britain to the less enlightened nations, and not of opening the doors of Britain or her colonies to these races:

Take up the White Man's burden—
Send forth the best ye breed—
Go bind your sons to exile
To serve your captives' need;
To wait in heavy harness,
On fluttered folk and wild—
Your new-caught, sullen peoples,
Half-devil and half-child.

Take up the White Man's burden—
The savage wars of peace—
Fill full the mouth of Famine
And bid the sickness cease;
And when your goal is nearest
The end for others sought,
Watch Sloth and heathen Folly
Bring all your hope to nought.

Take up the White Man's burden—
Ye dare not stoop to less—
Nor call too loud on Freedom
To cloak your weariness;
By all ye cry or whisper,
By all ye leave or do,
The silent, sullen peoples
Shall weigh your Gods and you.

Opposed to that general argument in favour of unrestricted immigration, there are those who believe in selective immigration. I shall not now delay the Committee to give the reasons which may be urged in favour of such selection. They are in a sense all covered by a word which has been frequently used throughout this debate—"assimilation." What does assimilation mean? The Century dictionary gives it as: "The act or process of making or becoming like or identical; the act or process of bringing into harmony." So that assimilation involves identity. There is one final test as to whether assimilation will be efficient in connection with race, and that test is the free intermarriage between the races. If marriage can take place between any man and woman in a country without reference to ethnic origin, then true assimilation has been found. But you may well say: You are talking of European immigration; no question arises in your proposed amendment regarding the white or black races. I therefore desire to say one word on the situation in Europe. Those hon. members who have at all been attracted by the recent discoveries in anthropology will know that the distinct trend of present scientific opinion is to the effect that Europe contains three main races which have nothing to do with national boundaries, languages, or religions, but come out of the womb of time, and the characteristics of which have been fixed, according to some scientific writers, by millions of years of growth. These three races of Europe are known by the names, Nordics, Alpines, and Mediterraneans. One could spend some time in describing the variations that distinguish these races, but I am afraid the Committee might be impatient if I went that length.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Go on.

Mr. CRONYN: These races shade into each other at different points, and the dividing line is indistinct at other points. Speaking in a loose way the Nordics occupy the extreme northwest of Europe, the Alpines are found in the west and central portions, and the Mediterraneans in the south.

The proposed amendment is to exclude for a time immigrants from southeastern Europe, and while I do not wish to repeat any of the remarks I made in the opening of the debate, I would like to summarize once again the objections against allowing these people free entry into Canada at the present time. In the first place, should we do so, they are likely to arrive in large numbers, judging by the past. Now it is well known that if you introduce into the body of man or beast an inordinate quantity of food, particularly of a new and strange variety, digestive disturbances arise and toxins are produced. And so with the body politic. If you introduce a large mass of strange people who cannot be assimilated, poisonous currents are set up which produce results similar to those mentioned yesterday by hon. members from the West. The second reason is that these immigrants flock for the greater part to the cities and rarely become occupants of rural districts. I gave the percentage on a former occasion and need not repeat it, but it is somewhat alarming to learn that in the case of certain of the races from that portion of Europe over 90 per cent stay in the city and cannot be persuaded to go on the land. The third objection is that so many of them are but temporary visitors to this continent. It will be readily understood that if a man is here to make money he will economize to the greatest extent in his method of living, and will decline to be interested in the social or political problems of this country. A good deal more might be said in that regard, and striking instances could be given of what happens in Canada to-day with that class of worker, but I must hurry on. The fourth objection is the great percentage of illiteracy among these immigrants. We have already dealt with that point and so I pass to the fifth objection, which is the lowered standard of living that must follow the introduction into the country of so many people of this type. I shall now read the proposed amendment as sub-paragraph (u) of section 3:

> 3. (u) the following persons, unless otherwise permitted by existing treaties, shall also be prohibited, for a period of five years from the first day of July, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen, from entering or landing in Canada:—
>
> (i) Aliens from the Continent of Europe whose domicile is situate south or east of a line drawn from the Atlantic Ocean east along the forty-second parallel of latitude to the fifteenth meridian of longitude thence north along said fifteenth meridian to the fifty-fifth parallel thence east along said fifty-fifth parallel to the twentieth meridian thence north along said twentieth meridian to the sixtieth parallel thence east along said sixtieth parallel to the thirtieth meridian and thence north along said thirtieth meridian to the Arctic Ocean.
>
> (ii) Aliens from the North American Continent of European birth who are not citizens of the United States of America and whose domicile in Europe was situate south or east of the above described line.

It may be objected that the above is a wholly artificial boundary. I wish some hon. gentleman would try to find some other way of getting at what I want to accomplish. With the map of Europe in flux it is a difficult matter to describe under any other method the boundaries which I suggest. Starting at the 42nd parallel of latitude, which is the southernmost latitude in which Canada lies, the 42nd or very close to it, being the latitude of Point Pelee, we are just above the northern boundary of Portugal. We cross the northern portion of Spain, past Corsica, just north of Rome to a point where the line bisects the 15th meridian of longitude. The line then runs north leaving to the west of it almost the whole of Germany, a great part of Austria and what is called on this map, Czecho Slovakia. I have no hesitation in leaving these alien enemy countries within the favoured area because of the declaration of the minister that provision has already been made for the exclusion of alien enemies as immigrants. The 15th meridian bisects the 55th parallel in the Baltic sea whence the line goes east to Konigsberg, north along the 20th meridian to the gulf of Finland, then east along the 60th parallel to a point north of Petrograd and then clear north to the Arctic ocean. To the north and west of the boundaries so defined and thus within the favoured area will be found the British Isles, Norway and Sweden, Finland, Denmark, the Netherlands, Belgium, France, Switzerland, the northern portion of Spain, the northern half of Italy, and, as I say, some of the enemy countries. These boundaries are crudely placed but I could find no other method of arriving at my object.

5 p.m.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: Your object is to exclude the Latin races?

Mr. CRONYN: My object is to exclude immigrants from Southeastern Europe for a period of years.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE: Does that exclude people from any portion of France?

Mr. CRONYN: The whole of France and part of Spain are taken in. Portugal is left out. As a matter of fact, in eighteen years, we have had exactly 110 immigrants from Portugal; so that omission is not a serious matter. Southern Italy is left out. It is somewhat remarkable that all the American articles on immigration point to the difference between the inhabitants from Northern and Southern Italy. So great is that difference that the American immigration tables always show the inhabitants of Northern Italy separate and apart from those of Southern Italy. The Southerners come almost entirely from the provinces or departments of Abruzzi, Campania, Calabria and the island of Sicily.

Mr. GUTHRIE: In what part of Italy is Naples?

Mr. CRONYN: It is of course well to the south. This map does not give the departments; I am speaking from memory as to those. It may be of interest to the Committee in passing to learn that I was unable to obtain a wall map of Europe from any department of the Government to which I applied; nor could I buy one in any book store. With the discussion which we may have later about the Peace terms, I took the opportunity of suggesting to the geographer of the Department of the Interior that he should have a supply of these maps on hand.

Mr. BALDWIN: You are going to distinguish between places bounded by certain degrees of longitude and parallels of latitude. These lines divide many countries that you propose to exclude immigration from. What is to hinder people from moving from one side of the meridian or parallel to the other? It seems to me that there will be a very great mix-up.

Mr. CRONYN: The words used are "whose domicile is situate." The word "domicile" is interpreted by the Act as follows:

> "Domicile" means the place in which a person has his home, or in which he resides, or to which he returns as his place of permanent abode, and does not mean the place where he resides for a mere special or temporary purpose.

I take it that the immigration authorities would demand, if this were put into force, a certificate from some proper officer of the country of origin that the immigrant had his domicile at such and such a point.

Mr. BALDWIN: Many people of this character are nomadic in their habits and they move from one place to another. They do not have the same idea as we have about holding real estate, they have no permanent abode and it seems to me that they cannot be lined up very closely.

Mr. CRONYN: That after all would be a matter of detail. I am bringing the amendment before the Committee more to present the general idea than in any hope that it will be accepted as the final working clause.

Mr. McISAAC: Would the hon. member explain in plain and less technical language from what portions of Europe he would exclude immigrants?

Mr. CRONYN: I am sorry I have been using language that any member of the House cannot understand; I had no intention of doing so. The lines drawn would exclude all Portugal, the southern three-quarters of Spain, the southern half of Italy and the Island of Sardinia, all of Greece, Turkey, the Balkan States, Bulgaria, and the whole of Russia in Europe.

Mr. CANNON: Would the hon. gentleman exclude people from Malta and the other British possessions?

Mr. CRONYN: So far as any inhabitant of Malta is not a British subject. I am using the word "alien" in a technical sense. As defined by the Act, an alien is a person who is not a British subject. British subjects either in Europe or the United States of America, would be free from this prohibition.

Mr. JACOBS: What would happen in the case of territories over which Great Britain has established a protectorate?

Mr. CRONYN: Perhaps the hon. member will inform me what places in Europe are under a British protectorat?

Mr. JACOBS: Take the case of Egypt. Great Britain has a protectorate over that country.

Mr. CRONYN: This clause is confined to the continents of Europe and North America.

Mr. JACOBS: Then emigrants will be admitted from non-European countries if Great Britain has a protectorate over them?

Mr. CRONYN: I did not attempt to deal with emigrants other than those from southeastern Europe and North America. This is a temporary expedient at best, and for a period of five years I think we can take it for granted that there will be little if any emigration from other continents.

Mr. CHAIRMAN: Shall the amendment carry?

Mr. CALDER: If the hon. gentleman insists upon the amendment I think it should stand so that we may have ample time to consider it. His proposition, in many respects, is a novel one, and how it can be worked out in a practical way I cannot at the present time see. Therefore, I should like to have ample opportunity to carefully consider the amendment from every angle. There are difficulties in the way of carrying out what is proposed. I cannot, for example, see how we can for a period of five years exclude Russians who live in Europe, and not exclude people of that nationality if they are domiciled across the Ural mountains. It seems to me there would be very little logic in that position. Neither do I see how we could exclude people from the continent of Europe, whom we regard as undesirable, and not exclude people from the continent of South America, or from the continent of Africa. The method proposed of applying geographical boundaries so as to exclude certain classes of people for a period of years will, I think, have to be looked at very carefully before the House commits itself to the principle. I would suggest that we proceed with the other clauses of the Bill and allow the proposed amendment to stand. It will be printed in Hansard, together with the discussion which has taken place on the proposal, and we will all have a full opportunity of considering the suggestions at our leisure.

Mr. ALFRED THOMPSON: I understand the hon. gentleman, by his amendment, proposes to exclude the Greeks and the Portuguese?

Mr. CRONYN: The Greeks and the Portuguese.

Mr. THOMPSON: That is to say, a portion of Portugal?

Mr. CRONYN: All of Portugal.

Mr. ALFRED THOMPSON: That immediately raises a question in my mind for the simple reason that these people are our allies in this war, which will not be concluded until peace has been signed. The Greeks and the Portuguese are still our allies in every sense of the word, and I question the advisability of this House excluding, or going on record as being willing to exclude, the soldiers from other countries that have fought alongside our own men and helped to win this war.

Mr. CRONYN: I have no objection to following the course suggested by the minister and allowing the amendment to stand. The suggestion made is, perhaps, novel, although not quite so novel as might appear to the Committee. The method followed in this case has already been adopted by the United States in connection with the entry of Asiatics into that country—that is to say, the method of using lines of latitude and longitude to define the boundaries of areas whence emigration shall be prohibited. I would much prefer—as I said in opening the debate—that the entire Act should be recast. I would like to adopt the positive instead of the negative method. Let us say, for instance: "We will accept immigrants from the countries of all our Allies," or from certain of them, and then consider the admission of emigrants from other countries. Unfortunately, the whole trend of legislation for many years has been the other way, and we are forced to hold the wrong end of the stick unless we are prepared to upset all that has gone before.

The CHAIRMAN: It has been moved that further consideration of this section and the amendment submitted in connection therewith be now postponed. Is it the pleasure of the Committee to adopt the motion?

Motion agreed to.

On section 4—Titles of officers.

Mr. DAVIDSON: The hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) is not in his seat, or he certainly would object to proceeding with this clause, which the Committee will observe opens up the whole question of titles, concerning which the House has pronounced so recently. I suggest that the clause be allowed to stand until the Committee appointed to deal with the question of titles has had an opportunity to report.

The CHAIRMAN: Shall the clause carry?

Mr. McKENZIE: I do not think the objection is entitled to very much consideration. The jocularity of my hon. friend from Annapolis (Mr. Davidson) completely carried me away, but I was going to ask, is it intended to appoint more officials at the different immigration stations? For instance, in my own town, there is a doctor and an immigration agent both engaged in the handling and examination of immigrants who land there. Is it intended that such a staff as that shall be increased under this Bill? Possibly the only immigration stations we have in the Maritime Provinces are at Halifax, St. John, North Sydney and Sydney. I would like to know if it is the intention of the minister to re-arrange those stations so as to increase the staff to any perceptible extent.

Mr. CALDER: I have had a thorough examination made of the Outside Service from ocean to ocean, and as a result our staff has been cut down to a very considerable extent. We have no present intention of increasing the staff; it will be increased only as actual requirements make such increase necessary. I think the hon. gentleman (Mr. McKenzie) is aware that we also had an inquiry made into the administration of our quarantine stations. I have a report from those who made the inquiry, but I purpose to hand it over to the new Health Department, to be created shortly, and leave to the minister in charge of that department the making of any changes that may be necessary.

Mr. JACOBS: The minister would require under this Bill, I understand, interpreters for thirty-five different languages.

Mr. CALDER: No. Sometimes we have been able to get interpreters with a knowledge of as many as ten languages, and I think we will be easily able to get them again. These interpreters are required at the eastern ports of entry, St. John. Halifax, and Quebec, where most of the people land from Europe. I think probably five interpreters would be quite sufficient to handle the great bulk of that work.

Mr. CANNON: The different provinces also have immigration commissioners, I understand. Is it the intention of the minister to make arrangements with the provinces for co-operative effort? Sometimes in the past there have been clashes between provincial and federal officials.

Mr. CALDER: The work of the provinces is entirely different from our work. They have nothing whatever to do with the matters covered by the Immigration Act and by this Bill. If they have commissioners of immigration those commissioners are interested in colonization work, and there is no reason in the world why the two sets of officers should not co-operate in every possible way.

Mr. CANNON: For instance, supposing the province of Ontario has a commissioner to promote settlement of certain portions of Ontario, and this department has a commissioner to promote settlement of portions of the western provinces, how would those two commissioners work?

Mr. CALDER: Some provinces have agents who are carrying on propaganda and publicity work, which they have a perfect right to do; there is nothing in our Federal laws to prevent them. But we have the right to decide at the port of entry whether those people who are so attracted to Canada shall be permitted to enter.

Section agreed to.

On section 7—Board of Inquiry:

Mr. JACOBS: The section provides "for the summary determination of all cases of immigrants." I understand that an appeal would still lie to the minister?

Mr. CALDER: Yes.

Mr. McKENZIE: What happens when there is not a sufficient number to constitute a board of inquiry?

Mr. CALDER: That is provided for in the next section, I think.

Section agreed to.

On section 8—Officer to exercise powers of board:

Mr. McKENZIE: My own port is a very important port of entry, but we have only two people there who have anything to do with immigration.

Mr. CALDER: That is covered by section 22, subsection (l):

Where there is no Board of Inquiry at port of entry, or at a neighbouring port to which a person detained under this Act could conveniently be conveyed, or to which a case for decision could conveniently be referred, then the officer in charge shall exercise the powers, etc.

Mr. McKENZIE: Is that an old section?

Mr. CALDER: Yes, it is the first subsection of section 22 as it stands now in the Act.

Section agreed to.

On section 9—Inspection of immigrants:

Mr. McKENZIE: I heartily approve of that particular provision and hope that the inspection will be made as efficient as possible, and so prevent a great deal of trouble on this side.

Mr. BELAND: Hear, hear.

Mr. CALDER: I do not wish the House to be under a misconception as to the purpose of this section. Numerous suggestions have reached the department, and it has been mentioned in Committee, that we should provide for the inspection of all intending immigrants before they get on board ship. That is not the purpose of this section. This section provides that we may make regulations for the inspection—we may do this if we think it is advisable. I am sure the Committee will readily understand what our difficulty would be. Imagine that we are back in normal times, say five years hence, with conditions settled, the country growing and prospering, and we are reaching out for immigrants in many countries; if we were to undertake medical inspection of those people in their home lands. I can assure the Committee that it would be a very big problem and a very expensive one as well. We may, however, find it advisable, at certain ports of entry, where those people would come from very largely, to have medical inspectors to see that the work of medical inspection is properly carried on by the ship authorities, and in the case of Great Britain by the officers of the Board of Trade upon whom certain responsibilities are thrown under the English laws. While we are purposing to take power to have certain of this work done on the other side of the line and on board ship, I would not like the Committee to think that we intend to see that every immigrant who, hereafter, purposes coming to Canada shall be thoroughly examined from the standpoint of health before he ever gets on board ship, because, from the investigations I have made, I feel quite certain that, if we ever undertook that work, it would cost this country a very large sum of money. On the other hand, under the law as it now stands, and as modified by this Bill, we throw upon the transportation company which brings those people to Canada, the full responsibility of ascertaining whether intending immigrants are up to the required standard of health and mentality. Personally, notwithstanding all that may be said on the other side of the question. I am convinced that that is where we should keep the responsibility. We should compel those transportation companies, through their medical officers, to continue to do that work, just as it has been done in the past. I am perfectly aware there are two sides to this question, but from all the information I have been able to gather and the study I have made on this subject, I believe it will be much safer, wiser and more economical, and the administration will be better conducted if we leave the law in the main just where it stands at present.

Mr. McKENZIE: While I would not suggest that there should be many places specified from which intending immigrants could start for this country, I do not think it would be any great hardship on them to say that there would be certain specified ports in Europe from which they would have to start, and that at those ports we would have our machinery for proper examination. Immigrants would have to come to those places by rail or otherwise, be examined and receive the proper certificate to permit them to commence their journey to Canada. Doctors and examiners are human like the rest of us, and I can well imagine, if I were a doctor in an office at Halifax and a man came to me who had paid his passage and had arrived in this country, my mentality towards that man would be very different from what I would feel if he were in his own town in some part of Europe to which he belonged. I would say to myself: This young man has come across here; after all, it will be all right, and it would be a desperate situation to dump him back aboard this vessel and send him home to his own country. That is the human side, and those are considerations which you cannot dispel from the minds of officials, because we are all human; we are all subject to those humane feelings, and it is a good thing that we are. That is why I am particularly anxious that such considerations should be removed from the mind of the officer, so that he would be dealing with a man at his home where those sentiments would not come in at all, and so that the man would be coldly and cooly told: You have no business to attempt to come to Canada, because you are not within the class of people we want there; you must stay at home. At the same time, I would not in the slightest degree lessen the responsibility which we put upon transportation companies which bring immigrants here. My purpose in emphasizing the desirability of this investigation and examination and of certificates being obtained by immigrants before they leave their homes is as a further precaution and one that is taken at the very beginning where no responsibilities are assumed at all.

Section agreed to.

On section 10—medical examination of passengers.

Mr. JACOBS: Are these medical officers to be on this side of the Atlantic, or are they to conduct examinations at the European ports from which the intending immigrant may sail?

Mr. CALDER: This refers to medical officers on this side.

Mr. STEELE: This clause touches one of the most important matters with which the Immigration Department will have to deal, namely, the examination of immigrants by medical officers. As an evidence of that, I have simply to point out what has been going on in the past, and to illustrate to the Committee what has been occurring in connection with our immigrants in past years, let me point to one fact, which will be sufficient. In Ontario, in 1914, out of 1,451 patients admitted to the hospitals for the insane, 545, or 37½ per cent had been born outside of Canada.

[Mr. McKenzie.]

That is an enormous burden to be laid on our country.

Mr. JACOBS: Could the hon. gentleman give us the proportion of the number of people in Ontario who were born outside of Canada.

Mr. STEELE: I could not give the hon. member that information. Through the immigration offices in Canada there had been admitted up to that time 545 persons who, in one year, were committed to hospitals for the insane in Ontario. How many were admitted in the other provinces, I have not the statistics to show. But I think we shall find that a very large number of such people are in our hospitals for the insane throughout the country, a burden that is laid upon this country, that will continue for years to come and that will grow in cost to Canada, because we know that these feeble-minded people, if they are not confined in some institution, multiply very rapidly, and statistics show that about eighty per cent of their offspring are also feeble-minded. Therefore, when we are putting to intending immigrants tests, such as those that have been already discussed, the literary test, the exclusion of some on account of the country in which they reside, the exclusion of certain classes and so on, let us remember that, in any of the classes that are admitted under the Act, there may be immigrants who themselves appear to be all right, but who will produce children that would be undesirable citizens. The mental condition of the parents is so little removed from the normal that it is very difficult to detect. If the parents are admitted, their offspring may be in the feeble-minded class and be a burden on our country for years to come. For that reason, I think it is most important that much greater attention should be paid to the medical examination of our immigrants, and I have no doubt the minister sees the importance of that. I think we all know that medical examinations in the past have been exceedingly lax for many reasons, but particularly for the reason that the men appointed for this work were not fully qualified. Only men who have the expert training in detecting feeble-mindedness are capable of detecting it. The ordinary physician may be an excellent man for other work; he may be able to detect tuberculosis, trachoma, and the contagious and infectious diseases that will debar an immigrant; but he might be quite incapable of detecting feeble-mindedness. For that reason I think we ought to have experts for this work. Although they might cost the country a good deal in salaries they would save the country an immensely greater sum by excluding the feeble-minded class. To illustrate this, let me mention this fact. Among the immigrants desiring to land at New York in recent years prior to the war, 4 out of every 1,000 were found to be in the feeble-minded class, and were rejected. If the same proportion prevailed with respect to the 400,000 immigrants that were coming to Canada in the years before the war, it means that 1,600 feeble-minded persons were seeking admission into Canada every year, and we did not reject anything like that number. Many of them are in this country to-day, and are multiplying our feeble-minded population. That is apparent in every municipality from one end of Canada to the other. I would urge the minister to make every effort to have our immigrants thoroughly inspected for feeble-mindedness. It matters not where it is done, but it does matter that men properly qualified for this work are appointed to do it.

Mr. ALFRED THOMPSON: I want to support the remarks made by my hon. friend. In my judgment this is, perhaps, one of the most important clauses of the Bill, because it deals with the health of the people who will in future come into this country. The figures which have just been given and the percentages quoted are, of course, absolute and accurate. I have no doubt if a poll were taken of the inmates of the insane asylums and hospitals in Canada a similar condition would be disclosed; that is, a very large percentage of the inmates would be found to have had their origin in countries other than our own. It is an exceedingly difficult thing to detect mental incompetency on a ship or dock as these people arrive. It requires very considerable experience and ability in the medical man to do this work properly, and I would urge the minister, when he is picking his medical men, to secure men who have been trained in this particular branch of the profession. If he does, I can assure him the country will be well repaid by the services these men render, no matter what the cost may be. Too often in the past medical men have been selected—both political parties have been guilty—more for their political affiliations than for their fitness for the work. As I have said, this particular class of work requires a man of very considerable experience and ability. But he should have other experience; he should be an expert in venereal diseases. These diseases have been imported into our country in the past, and no doubt will be in the future. Knowledge of these diseases is being acquired daily by the medical profession, and competent medical men at our ports could prevent a very considerable number of these immigrants from coming in. This is a very important phase of the work. I would again impress upon the minister the necessity of selecting high-class medical men for this work. Another very important disease we should be on our guard against is pulmonary tuberculosis, ordinarily known as consumption. A string of sanatoria stretches across Canada from Prince Edward Island to Vancouver for the treatment of this disease. I have had some experience in this particular work; I have been in practically every sanatorium in Canada, certainly in the majority of them.

Mr. JACOBS: As a visitor.

Mr. A. THOMPSON: Yes, fortunately, and one of the things that has impressed me in talking to the patients in these institutions is the fact that many of them were born outside of Canada. A number of immigrants suffering from tuberculosis would be turned back at our ports if we had competent medical men to examine them. That is another reason why we should have high-class medical men at the ports through which these people come.

My hon. friend has also mentioned trachoma, a disease of the eyes, which is perhaps not so difficult to detect as incipient disease of the lung, venereal disease, or mental incompetency, but which nevertheless requires considerable ability to detect. I am sure that if the minister selects high-class medical men for this work, the future of this country, so far as our stream of immigration is concerned, will be more rosy.

Section agreed to.

On section 11—no clearance if Act not obeyed, but deposit may be allowed:

Mr. McKENZIE: There is a word here which I think is not well chosen. There is no such thing as the consignee of a vessel. There is a consignee of cargo, but you do not hear of a vessel being consigned. I think it would be better if the word "charterer" were used instead of the word "consignee," so that it would read: "No vessel shall be granted clearance if the master, agent, owner or charterer violates or refuses or neglects to comply with any provision of this Act." I know a good deal about shipping and I have never heard of the consignee of a vessel.

Mr. CALDER: If the term consignee is not applicable, I must confess I am not familiar with shipping terms. I think we might make it "owner or charterer."

Mr. ELKIN: I do not think the hon. gentleman's point is well taken. There is a consignee on this side of the water or on the other side as the case may be. The owner or charterer always has an agent in the port to which the ship is bound, and therefore the word would, I think, be properly used in the section.

Mr. McKENZIE: Of course, I have some respect for the opinions of my hon. friend who comes from the little port of St. John, and I admit that once in a while a vessel does go there. But I take some pride in having a fair knowledge of marine law, and my hon. friend will search in vain in any authority on shipping for the expression "consignee of a vessel." However, if the minister is satisfied that it is not going to create any difficulty I am not particular. But the word "charterer" would be the right word to use.

Mr. CALDER: We might put both in.

Mr. McKENZIE: Very well.

Mr. CALDER: I move that the word "charterer" be added after the word "owner" in the fourth line of Section 11.

Motion agreed to.

Clause as amended agreed to.

On Subsection 4, Section 12—Penalty for bringing, landing, harbouring or concealing prohibited immigrants.

Mr. CALDER: In order to keep the sections uniform I move that the word "charterer" be added after the word "owner" in the fourth line of subsection 4.

Motion agreed to.

Clause as amended agreed to.

On Subsection 6, Section 12—Deposit of money as guarantee that non-immigrant will leave at time agreed upon.

Mr. JACOBS: In what respect does this change the law as it now stands?

Mr. CALDER: Under the law as it stood before, there was provision for the taking of a bond. In addition to that it is proposed to make provision for a deposit of money as a guarantee for departure within the time agreed upon.

Mr. JACOBS: You are doing away with the bond altogether?

Mr. CALDER: No. The bond is not done away with. This makes provision for a deposit of money in place of the bond if it is thought desirable.

At six o'clock the Committee took recess.

After Recess.

The Committee resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. CROWE: Does the minister intend to insert a clause, or clauses, dealing with Chinese and Japanese immigration. I understand there is an agreement with the Japanese Government in reference to a certain number of Japanese labourers coming into Canada every year, and that there is a separate Act dealing with Chinese immigration. I think that both Japanese and Chinese immigration should be dealt with in this Act. The matter should be consolidated under one Act. If that were done it would be far easier to handle.

Mr. CALDER: I am scarcely in a position to answer the question at the present. I suggested the other day the advisability of abolishing the head tax. If that is done very considerable amendments will have to be made to the Chinese Immigration Act, but until I have had time to further consider that question I am not in a position to make a statement to the Committee. As to immigration from Japan, I scarcely think any special legislation is necessary. There is no intention on the part of the Government to make any change in the agreement that has been in force for some years.

On section 14—duty of officers and municipal officials to send complaints to the minister regarding undesirable immigrants:

Mr. CALDER: Under the law as it exists, and the amendments, we provide for certain prohibited classes. This section merely provides that if any of these classes arrive in Canada, and information thereof is in the possession of municipal officers, that information shall be forwarded to the department.

Mr. JACOBS: I understand that this clause makes it incumbent on the secretary of a municipality to inform the department of the existence in that municipality of these particular people?

Mr. CALDER: That has always been the case.

Mr. JACOBS: What is the change that is made?

Mr. CALDER: Because we have made some changes in the law so far as certain prohibited classes are concerned, we have to embody these changes in this clause.

Mr. JACOBS: Where is the penalty for failure to do this?

Mr. CALDER: I presume provision will be made in the Criminal Code that when under any law an officer is required to do a certain thing and does not do it, he shall be subject to the general penalty there provided. When, by any provincial statute, a duty is assigned to an officer and he fails to carry out that duty, he is subject to a penalty under the general law.

Mr. McMASTER: I would point out to the minister the great difficulty, in a large city, of the city clerk or secretary of the municipality, knowing anything about this.

Mr. CALDER: This is only if it comes to his knowledge.

Section agreed to.

On section 15—arrest or prosecution of rejected or deported person remaining in or returning to Canada except in case of inability to comply with money qualifications:

Mr. McMASTER: What regulations, in brief, have been made under the War Measures Act concerning these matters?

Mr. CALDER: Since the armistice was signed an Order in Council was put through under the War Measures Act providing for the deportation of those interned at that time.

Mr. McKENZIE: In our part of the country quite a number were interned without very much justification, simply because they belonged to a certain alien enemy country. I do not know that we had any evidence in particular against them more than that. Before any people of this class are deported there should be an opportunity given to them to testify as to their conduct, or some trial or investigation should be held. It is only fair to ourselves and them that we shall have evidence as to why they should be deported.

Mr. CALDER: I have the Order under my hand. The operative part of it reads as follows:

> The minister considers it advisable that all alien enemy interned prisoners who may be regarded as dangerous, hostile or undesirable, should be repatriated with the least possible delay and he therefore recommends that it should be provided under the authority of the War Measures Act of 1914 that the Minister of Justice shall be authorized to direct the immediate expulsion, removal, or deportation from Canada, for the purpose of their repatriation, of all such interned aliens of enemy nationality as he may consider dangerous, hostile or undesirable persons residing in Canada. And that direction by the Minister of Justice under his hand shall be sufficient authority for the purpose aforesaid.

It will be noticed that this applies only to those who were in internment camps at the signing of the armistice, not to those who had been previously interned. Under this Order in Council, I understand, some one hundred of those who were interned have already been deported, and arrangements are being made for the deportation of others just as rapidly as they can go. I think it may be assumed that those who were kept interned, and were in internment camps at the time of the armistice, may be regarded as dangerous and undesirable. In the early part of the war, as I explained yesterday, there were a good many persons interned for other reasons than that they were hostile or dangerous. Those have long ago been liberated on parole, and this section only applies to those who will be actually deported under Order in Council, not those who were interned during the early part of the war.

Mr. McMASTER: Do I understand that it only applies to those who are dangerous and hostile?

Mr. CALDER: Yes.

Mr. McKENZIE: That was really the point I endeavoured to make. The minister is a lawyer himself and knows that when we talk of appealing to a tribunal—the Minister of Justice is the tribunal in this case—that any such state of things exists, that implies there has been an investigation, and that the decision is based on a finding upon facts properly submitted. Well, that is just what I was saying—the Minister of Justice should be in possession of well authenticated facts in order to reach a conclusion; it must not be by hearsay. If the Minister of Justice, after a proper investigation, and after well authenticated facts have been submitted to him, reaches a conclusion, I have nothing more to say.

Section agreed to.

On section 17—Cost of deportation after five years.

Mr. McMASTER: Do I understand the import of this clause to be that after an immigrant has been in this country for five years and then gets into trouble with the authorities, the transport company who brought him will be ordered to take him back at its expense? I do not know what the law now is, but that is a most drastic and onerous provision to impose on any transportation company. They bring in an innocent-looking Swede, let us say, who behaves himself for five years, when he falls into bad company perhaps, and gets into trouble. Then the transportation company is to be obliged to send him back to where he came from. We should try to be fair to all interests, and I would like to hear from the minister whether he has any defence of such a drastic provision as that. I see a smile on the minister's face, and I feel that in the back of his head he must agree with what I am saying.

Mr. CALDER: I fear the hon. gentleman has made a wrong guess. As a matter of fact this has been the law for a good many years, but what we are proposing to do will relieve the transportation companies of some of the responsibility imposed upon them in the past. In the past if any transportation company brought to Canada any of these prohibited classes, they were liable to be charged with all the expenditures in connection with transportation at any time up to the end of the three years, but that period under this Bill is being extended to five years. There is this difference, however, that if the clause for deportation does not arise until subsequent to the five year period then it is left to the minister to decide whether the cost of deporting the person should be paid by the department or by the transportation company. Heretofore the transportation company has always paid, but we think there are cases where the Government should pay. In the United States they have had for years a law the same as this, casting this responsibility upon the transportation companies.

Mr. McMASTER: I may be under a misapprehension as to the meaning of the clause, but as I read it, it would apply to a case like this: A man enters Canada and behaves himself as a good citizen should for a period of four or five years, and then backslides and gets into trouble. In that case the transportation company is asked to take him back to the country of origin at its own expense. If that is the law it appears to me to be a grievously unjust law, whether or not it has been on our statute book, or on the statute book of the United States, for years and years.

Mr. CALDER: It is not altogether a case of happening to go wrong. If a man comes to this country and after he comes here commits a crime—commits theft, murder, or any other crime of that character—that is not a ground for deportation.

Mr. McMASTER: Then I misunderstood the clause?

Mr. CALDER: If a man enters Canada and within a year afterwards becomes insane, that is a ground for deportation, and we cast upon the transportation company the responsibility of returning that man to his own country. I have not heard a single word from any of the transportation companies in regard to any of these provisions. The printed Bill was sent to these companies some weeks ago, and I have not had the slightest complaint from them in regard to this provision. We can therefore take it for granted that they are quite satisfied with it.

Section agreed to.

On section 20—Penalty on transportation company for bringing prohibited immigrants.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR (Guysborough): Is this a new section?

Mr. CALDER: Yes. That is, we cast upon the transportation companies the responsibility of not bringing into Canada these prohibited classes. If they do, then they are made subject to the penalties laid down in these several sections. Let me state the matter in this way: Under the law we provide that certain classes shall not be permitted to enter Canada, and we throw upon the transportation companies the responsibility of seeing to it that they do not carry these classes of people to this country. If they do they render themselves liable under this section.

Mr. McMASTER: Let us have the terms of the Act first. There are some terms here which it is hard for laymen to understand.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: It seems to me that if we make the conditions too onerous the transportation companies will withdraw from the immigration business altogether. There is a limit beyond which we cannot go if we are to get our immigrants brought overseas. This seems to imply medical examination on the other side.

Mr. CALDER: They all have that now.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: They pay for the examination?

Mr. CALDER: Yes.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: That is the only point I care about. I think the transportation companies rather like the immigration business when they can get plenty of it, but at the same time we have to be careful not to put too many burdens on them, or they will say: We will not carry your immigrants; or, if we do, we will charge them a higher rate.

Mr. CALDER: As a matter of fact the transportation companies in the immigration business now provide for medical inspection at the port of embarkation, and in addition to that they have their surgeons on every ship. The British Board of Trade also has its staff to see that emigrants of a certain class do not embark; similar provisions obtain in America, and also I suppose in other countries. The transportation companies are quite used to working under these laws, and there is no reason why we should not have similar provisions.

Section agreed to.

On Section 22—Duty of transportation company or master to deliver lists of seamen or employees on ship, and lists of crew and others on departure and of names of those discharged, and of deserters—Fine for neglect or refusal—Discharging crew without examination—Penalty.

Mr. McMASTER: Is this anything new?

Mr. CALDER: A great deal of it is new, not all. The purpose of this whole section is to keep a careful check upon seamen. There are some provisions in the existing law, but they are not full enough. We take the view that so far as seamen are concerned the department should have full information with regard to those who come on the ship, those who remain in Canada, and those who go back.

Mr. DUFF: Canadian seamen or foreign seamen?

Mr. CALDER: Any seamen.

Mr. DUFF: Suppose a vessel leaves the Nova Scotia coast for a South American port, when that vessel comes back the crew cannot be discharged without the captain going to the immigration office and complying with the provisions of this section?

Mr. CALDER: All the crew must be examined. We can take no chances as to whether or not exactly the same crew has been brought back. When that ship calls at one of our ports we must know which of those seamen land and which of them depart again, and we provide for the examination of those who land. That is the sole purpose of this section.

Mr. McKENZIE: The ordinary shipping master, if he complies with the provisions of the Merchants' Shipping Act, thinks that he has fulfilled his duty, and it is quite natural that he should think so, I find in many instances master mariners unwittingly break some of the provisions of the Immigration Act. Suppose a sea captain is two or three years away from Canada, there was no such law as this when he left, and when he returns and complies to the best of his ability with the provisions of the Merchants' Shipping Act, that is his confession of faith. I think there should be some co-operation between the Immigration Department and the Department of Marine with a view to making this Immigration Act a supplement to the Merchants' Shipping Act, or in some other way that may appear reasonable to the minister, in order that these men may be made acquainted with these provisions.

Mr. CALDER: I quite agree with the suggestion. I think we might have printed for the guidance of ship masters those sections of the Immigration Act that particularly affect them, with some explanatory notes added. At any rate, I can assure my hon. friend that his suggestion will be taken into consideration, and we will endeavour to so arrange that the owners and masters of ships will be made thoroughly acquainted with these provisions, to prevent any undue hardship arising from ignorance of the law.

Mr. DUFF: Is it the intention of the minister to appoint immigration officers at Canadian ports where there are none at the present time?

Mr. CALDER: There is provision now under section 8 that when at a port of entry there is no immigration officer under this Act the chief customs officer at that port, or any subordinate customs officer designated by him shall be, ex officio, an immigration officer. So if we have no immigration officer at any particular port the customs officer acts.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: Does this apply to the coasting trade? Subsection 2 seems to prohibit the paying off of seamen and officers by the master at any port of entry. I think it would be a very cumbersome regulation if it applied to our coasting trade; that is to say, if the master of a ship sailing from one Canadian port to another has to get an immigration officer aboard before he can discharge any out of his crew on arrival in port. This is a new section, and if this question has not been considered I wish the minister would consider it. I am referring to section 22, subsection 2.

Mr. CALDER: The Act, as a whole, which contains a good many provisions of this character, is made applicable only to vessels carrying immigrants from some place outside of Canada to Canada, and it has never been construed in the sense suggested by the hon. member.

Mr. DUFF: This clause is very clear. it means that no seaman can be discharged from a vessel at any port in Canada unless the captain goes to the immigration officer and secures a permit. As regards our coasting vessels, that is ridiculous. I can understand why, in the case of foreign sailors coming into Canada, the captain should report the matter to the immigration officer, but there is no reason why Canadian sailors who go to South America or the West Indies and come back should not be discharged on their arrival in Canada.

Mr. CALDER: If the hon. member will refer to the end of subsection 3, he will notice that it says:

> Provided that this section shall not apply to Canadian citizens or persons having Canadian domicile.

If a boat leaves for South America and sailors return on that boat and they want to land in Canada, is it going to be assumed that because they are sailors, they are Canadian citizens? We cannot afford to take it for granted that every man who happens to be a seaman on a boat is a Canadian citizen, therefore, some person must make an examination, and the proper person to do it is the immigration officer.

Mr. DUFF: I did not say that. When sailors join a vessel, they sign articles on which their names, their place of birth, their residence and other particulars are entered. When that vessel comes back with the same crew and goes through the customs, there should be no necessity for the captain to go to the immigration officer if all the men are Canadian citizens. If, on account of sickness, a vessel has to land one or two of the crew, say at Buenos Aires or some other port in South America, and has to ship one or two foreign sailors in their places, immediately on the arrival of that ship at her destination in Canada, the captain should report to the immigration officer that he has certain sailors on board who are of foreign birth, but the Canadian sailors should be at once released and paid off.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I think the section to which the minister drew attention covers the case. I did not know it was there when I raised the point.

Section agreed to.

On section 23—officers on immigrant ships:

Mr. JACOBS: I suppose the word "officers" would include female as well as male officers.

Mr. CALDER: Yes.

Section agreed to.

On section 24—deputy minister:

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: Is there to be any Superintendent of Immigration after this?

Mr. CALDER: The department has been reorganized with a deputy minister, and Mr. Scott, who was Superintendent of Immigration, is acting as assistant deputy minister. He still retains the title of Superintendent of Immigration. but as a matter of fact the deputy minister of the department carries out the administrative duties which he formerly had.

Section agreed to.

On section 2, subsection 2—non-immigrant classes:

Mr. G. B. NICHOLSON: Under this subsection, would accredited officers of recognised bodies of organized labour be permitted to enter Canada from the United States, or England, or Scotland, or Ireland, or any other country? For instance. would such men as Samuel Gompers and Arthur Henderson be permitted to enter?

Mr. CALDER: I do not think there ever has been or would be any difficulty at all, because people are constantly coming and going between the United States and Canada.

Mr. JACOBS: Last night I suggested that we strike out the enumeration of the various classes referred to in this subsection, and substitute for it the words:

> And all persons entering Canada for the temporary exercise of their respective callings.

I think that would be fuller. As I remarked last night, we may possibly have overlooked some callings, and if we adopt the suggestion I now make. the section would probably read better.

Mr. CALDER: I understand from the officers of the department that we might have a good deal of trouble with many classes if that suggestion were carried out. For that reason I am not prepared to accept the proposed amendment. We have had similar provision to this in the Act for a good many years, and the officers of the department tell me that it is very necessary we should not throw the door open as suggested.

Mr. JACOBS: Suppose a judge or a cabinet minister, the Secretary of the Interior, we will say, wants to come in from the United States, he could not come in under this clause.

Mr. CALDER: Oh, yes, he could.

Mr. JACOBS: I am glad to know you will not bar the doors against him.

Subsection agreed to. Section agreed to.

On section 3—prohibited classes:

Mr. CALDER: I move that paragraph (p) of subsection 6 be replaced by the following words:

Enemy aliens or persons who have been alien enemies and who were or may be interned on or after the eleventh day of November, one thousand nine hundred and eighteen in any part of His Majesty's dominions or by any of His Majesty's Allies.

Mr. JACOBS: I cannot see very much change there.

Mr. CALDER: It is only a slight change in the wording.

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. CALDER: I move that paragraph (r) be replaced by the following words:

Persons who have been found guilty of high treason or treason for an offence in connection with the war or of conspiring against His Majesty or of assisting His Majesty's enemies or of any similar offence against any of His Majesty's Allies.

Mr. JACOBS: This is an improvement over the section as it stands, but is not the section capable of still further improvement? I think it would be improved by adding after the word "enemies" the words "during the war," and I so move.

Amendment to the amendment agreed to.

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. CALDER: I move that paragraph (s) be replaced by the following words:

Persons who at any time within a period of ten years from the first day of August, one thousand nine hundred and fourteen, were or may be deported from any part of His Majesty's Dominions or from any Allied country on account of treason or of conspiring against His Majesty or of any similar offence in connection with the war against any of the Allies of His Majesty or because such persons were or may be regarded as hostile or dangerous to the Allied cause during the war.

Mr. JACOBS: I think that is a considerable improvement, and it is quite satisfactory to me.

Amendment agreed to.

Section as amended agreed to.

Mr. CALDER: I beg to move that the Committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I notice that we provide in this Bill—

The CHAIRMAN: The minister's motion is undebatable, but if the minister cared to withdraw his motion—

Motion withdrawn.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: By subsection 3 of section 2 we are providing for fining ourselves, because "transportation company" means and includes the Dominion Government. I do not think we should provide for punishing and fining ourselves; that is very unusual, and furthermore, it is no good, because if we pay the fine it is simply transferring the money from one pocket to another.

Mr. CALDER: The real purpose of that subsection is not to get after the Government, but after the officers who are not carrying out their duties. Subsection 5 of section 76 of the existing law, which has to be read in connection with this, provides as follows:

Every duty imposed under authority of this Act upon a transportation company shall be a duty devolving on every director, official or employee thereof, and every duty imposed upon the master of a vessel shall be a duty devolving upon the owner thereof.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: If the fine is imposed it will be imposed on the officers?

Mr. CALDER: Yes.

Progress reported.

BANKRUPTCY ACT.

House in Committee on Bill No. 18, respecting Bankruptcy.—Mr. Guthrie—Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

On section 6—Receiving order shall vest property in trustee:

Mr. McKENZIE: The trustee is a very important person and should be selected with a great deal of care, and I would like the minister to make it clear that there will be nothing haphazard about the appointment of trustees. We should have some assurance that they will be good, honest, capable men.

Hon. HUGH GUTHRIE (Solicitor General): The Committee dealt at some length with the question of the appointment of trustees, on which there was some difference of opinion among some representative bodies in Canada. It was considered that one of the defects in the operation of the Insolvency Act of 1875 was that a very poor class of trustees was permitted to administer that Act. In drafting the clauses of the present Act a good deal of care was therefore taken. The provisions for the appointment of trustees are under section 14. They are to be appointed by the Governor in Council upon application to the Secretary of State, and a sufficient number of trustees is to be appointed throughout Canada who will have a limited territorial jurisdiction. They will be required to give adequate security for the due performance of their duties and for the prompt payment over of funds which come into their hands. There are other provisions in the Act with regard to security. An order for increased security may be made upon the application of creditors where very large estates have to be handled. The security has to be kept in force until the trust is finally administered, and there are a great many safeguards in regard to the discharge of the trustee. Altogether, I think, we have very well guarded both the appointment and the security. The standing security is $10,000. The Secretary of State prepares the list of applicants and submits it to the Governor in Council. I apprehend that from time to time the list will be enlarged as the business increases, if it does increase.

Mr. McKENZIE: Giving the trustee unlimited territory does not commend itself to me.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Unlimited what? I did not hear the hon. member.

Mr. McKENZIE: I understood the minister to say that within his province there is no limit to the jurisdiction of the trustee.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Subsection 2 of section 14 provides that every trustee shall be appointed with authority limited territorially. That can be discussed when we get to that particular section.

9 p.m.

Mr. McKENZIE: If there is a section under which we can deal specifically with the appointment of jurisdiction and territory, I will defer my remarks on that point until we get there.

Section agreed to.

On section 11—Receiving orders and assignments to take precedence of attachments, executions, etc.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: What effect will this have on the local Acts now in force?

Mr. GUTHRIE: That question raises rather a wide subject. By the British North America Act, bankruptcy and insolvency are specially placed within the jurisdiction of this Parliament. The various provinces, in the absence of a Federal Act, have passed what to some extent may be regarded as insolvency legislation. In Ontario there is an Act respecting assignments and preferences by insolvent persons, and there is another Act known as the Creditors' Relief Act, both of which I think would be deemed to be insolvency legislation. Such Acts were passed not only in Ontario but probably in all the other provinces at a time when there was no bankruptcy or insolvency law; and when the matter was decided on an appeal from the province of Ontario to the judicial committee of the Privy Council it was held that in the absence of Dominion legislation upon the subject the provinces, within certain limitations, were entitled to legislate. But that if there were Dominion legislation, provincial legislation would be annulled. If this Bill should become law, all provincial legislation dealing with the subject of bankruptcy and insolvency would, in my opinion, become null and void.

Mr. LEMIEUX: What is the judgment to which the minister refers?

Mr. GUTHRIE: It is the case of the Attorney General of Ontario vs. the Attorney General of Canada with respect to the Ontario Act relating to assignments and preferences. It is reported in Appeal Cases 1894, page 189.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Have you a copy of the judgment declaring that provincial acts shall be null and void?

Mr. GUTHRIE: Yes, the head note is as follows:

> Held that the provisions of section 9 of the Ontario "Act respecting assignments and preferences by insolvent persons" which relate to assignments purely voluntary, and postpone thereto judgments and executions not completely executed by payment, are merely ancillary to bankruptcy law, and as such are within the competence of the provincial legislature so long as they do not conflict with any existing bankruptcy legislation of the Dominion Parliament.

I have not the report before me but I have some notes both as to the argument and the judgment.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Will my hon. friend recite the words where it is positively stated that the enactment of a federal bankruptcy Act shall render null and void provincial legislation on this subject?

Mr. GUTHRIE: I have not the report but that is the necessary result of the judgment.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I would like to hear it.

Mr. GUTHRIE: There may be a note in this volume from which I am reading. I cannot lay my hand on it at the moment but I will have the judgment hunted up and laid before the Committee.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I notice that a number of these sections are marked "new." Will the minister explain the basis of this legislation and where the sections are taken from that are not marked "new"?

Mr. GUTHRIE: The basis of the Bill is the English Bankruptcy Act. It is not possible to apply all the sections of the English Bankruptcy Act to the situation in Canada. The sections which have been taken exactly from the English Act are so marked. The other sections are marked "English section modified." Where the word "new" appears after the section that signifies that the section is not in the English Act but appears for the first time in the present Bill.

Section agreed to.

On section 13—composition, extension, or scheme of arrangement, subsection 1:

Mr. JACOBS: I think it would not be a bad idea for the Solicitor General to explain the meaning of this entire section. There are a lot of words which I think could be boiled down to a few paragraphs. The Solicitor General, who has been sleeping with the Act for the last year, knows it by heart.

Mr. GUTHRIE: The intention of section 13 is to provide an easy method of composition between a debtor and his creditors and to legalize a scheme which may avoid bankruptcy proceedings. I do not know that there is anything in the section that needs to be elaborated. I think the section itself makes the proceeding very plain. It provides that if an insolvent debtor desires to meet his creditors, such debtor after making an assignment may have a meeting with them. He may lay his affairs before his creditors and after an examination of the debtor by the creditors, if they desire to examine him, a settlement as between the two may be arrived at subject to the approval of the court. There is a provision that the court may refuse its approval if in its opinion the terms of the proposal are not reasonable or not calculated to benefit the general body of the creditors. That is to prevent anything like collusion between one or two of the principal creditors and the debtor.

Mr. LEMIEUX: The creditors are notified in due form and delays are provided for?

Mr. GUTHRIE: There are a great many subsections but they are all matters of procedure, and it is for the purpose of effecting a suitable arrangement between debtor and creditors and avoiding bankruptcy proceedings. The property, in the meantime, does not pass out of the hands of the trustees.

Mr. LEMIEUX: The court sanctions the agreement arrived at between the creditor and the debtor and creditors?

Mr. GUTHRIE: Yes, and if the court thinks there is collusion or the arrangement is unreasonable, it withholds its sanction.

Mr. BUREAU: Is it permissive? I see it says "Where an insolvent debtor intends to make a proposal—" Does that mean that the debtor will be precluded from making an arrangement with his creditors for a composition?

Mr. GUTHRIE: No, but after a man has made an assignment to a trustee a question arises as to his further rights over his estate. It is no longer vested in him. But the section preserves that right to the debtor.

Mr. BUREAU: That is, after the assignment?

Mr. GUTHRIE: Either before or after.

On subsection 12—Approval binding on creditors, but does not release debtor from judgments.

Mr. GUTHRIE: That is, from particular judgments—judgments for seduction or alimony, or a judgment against the party as co-respondent in a matrimonial case, or for the necessaries of life. From these he is not released.

Mr. McMASTER: It seems to me that the marginal note is very misleading.

Mr. GUTHRIE: It should be "from certain judgments."

Mr. BUREAU: It is only binding on a creditor who loses his interest.

Mr. GUTHRIE: On a creditor and a debtor.

Mr. BUREAU: Suppose the debtor asked for an order and it is approved by the courts?

Mr. GUTHRIE: It is binding on all parties, but not in specially obtained judgments for seduction, alimony, the necessaries of life, and the like.

Mr. LEMIEUX: In our province the party may be sued for damages and if he does not pay the damages in which he is mulcted he may be sent to jail. Is he saved by this paragraph?

Mr. BUREAU: It does not release a debtor from judgment, does it?

Mr. McMASTER: Only certain judgments.

Mr. LEMIEUX: And the judgments are enumerated. For example, he is not released from judgment against him in an action for seduction, or under an affiliation order, or for alimony, or under a judgment against him as co-respondent in a matrimonial case, or for necessaries of life, or alimentary debts, except to such an extent and under such conditions as the court expressly orders in respect of such liability. My hon. friend knows that under our Civil Code there are some parties who are liable to contrainte par corps, imprisonment for debt.

Mr. BUREAU: In a case of slander also.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Yes, in a case of slander. Furthermore, a curator and a tutor are liable to imprisonment if they do not render faithful account of their stewardship—the Code provides for that. Under this subsection the debtor may be allowed to go free. Will the Solicitor-General let the paragraph stand, and give his attention to it?

Mr. GUTHRIE: I have no objection to the clause standing, but it must be remembered that if this Bill passes it is to be a modification of, or an addition to, the law of a good many provinces. In the various provinces there are certain laws now in force. The effect of this Bill, should it pass, will be to modify or annul them, and the very case cited by my learned friend may be one of those affected. Personally I think a judgment for debt would be affected, but a judgment for imprisonment would not. I am not prepared to say that the effect of a compromise under this section, ratified by the court, might not operate as a discharge of the debtor, which would render him free from any subsequent proceedings. I have never had a case of the kind put to me before, and the Committee which dealt with this Bill has not discussed it.

Mr. JACOBS: Might I point out that the whole of this rests in the judgment of the court. If, as my hon. friend from Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux) suggests, a tutor has embezzled funds belonging to his ward, or a curator has embezzled funds belonging to an estate, when the matter is brought to the attention of the judge he forthwith refuses to allow a composition to be made—and that appears in several parts of this Bill—until the actual assignment. That is to say, where an assignment actually takes place it is specially declared that no composition can be made without the consent of the judge, and no discharge can be given unless the judge consents. Now, if the facts show that the debtor has been guilty of a criminal offence no judge would permit a composition or discharge to be given.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Under subsection (7) it is provided:

> The court shall, before approving the proposal, hear a report of the trustee as to the terms thereof, and as to the conduct of the debtor, and any objections which may be made by or on behalf of any creditor.

Mr. LEMIEUX: "Any creditor?"

Mr. GUTHRIE: "Any creditor," and the Court would refuse its approval to the proposition. I think that would be one of the matters which would be brought to the attention of the court to be dealt with.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I am only partially satisfied with the explanation of my hon. friend, and therefore I would ask him to allow subsection 12 to stand.

Subsection allowed to stand.

On section 13, subsection 19—Composition not binding in certain cases without assent.

Mr. McKENZIE: Is there any provision that at the final hearing for discharge all judgment creditors shall be notified and have an opportunity of being heard?

Mr. GUTHRIE: We will come to the clauses dealing with that feature presently.

Subsection agreed to.

On section 14—

Mr. LEMIEUX: I move that section 14 be considered subsection by subsection.

Motion agreed to.

On subsection (1)—Appointment of trustees.

Mr. LEMIEUX: How is the appointment going to be made?

Mr. GUTHRIE: Application is to be made to the Secretary of State, and he submits the names to the Governor in Council.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Are those trustees salaried officers?

Mr. GUTHRIE: No. The fees are regulated by a subsequent section, and have to be voted by the creditors.

Mr. LEMIEUX: What guarantee will be given as to the solvency of these men?

Mr. GUTHRIE: The security is the best guarantee.

Mr. LEMIEUX: The $10,000?

Mr. GUTHRIE: That is the general security. In addition to that there is a special security for each estate.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Will there be a limited number of trustees for each province, or will the appointments be open to any accountant or business man of repute?

Mr. GUTHRIE: Of course, the Act is a new departure and we do not know just how many trustees will be necessary throughout Canada; but there is a provision that every person who applies to be appointed as an authorized trustee shall state in his application full particulars of his qualifications, ability and previous business experience; then there is the security, which must be substantial and approved. I think that in practice probably the class of men who will make application will be chartered accountants, judging from the deputations that appeared before the Special Committee which considered the Bill. They seemed to take a very deep interest in it, and I think probably it would be men of standing of that class who would be able to qualify in security as well as in ability.

Mr. McMASTER: Is there any disposition on the part of those in charge of the Bill to limit the number of trustees?

Mr. GUTHRIE: None whatever. I do not know that there would be any objection to appointing a very large number, but at the same time I think in a province like Ontario or Quebec one or two from each county would be ample; in cities like Toronto and Montreal, naturally more.

Mr. McMASTER: I would not like to see this made a close corporation. It seems to me only fitting that men who can satisfy the authorities as to their responsibility and ability should be free to have their names placed upon the list.

Mr. GUTHRIE: That is the provision. It is open, there is no limit at all upon it.

Mr. JACOBS: Is any provision made for the payment of interest upon the sum which the assignee is obliged to deposit with the Secretary of State? When he puts up a cash deposit it seems to me there ought to be some provision whereby he would receive at least as much interest as the owners of Victory bonds.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I think if the trustee puts up cash security he certainly ought to be entitled to a return by way of interest; but I believe in practice it will work out in the form of guaranteed bonds. However, if my hon. friend thinks a clause should be inserted for the payment of interest in the case of cash deposits, that would seem to be quite reasonable.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Why not have these trustees appointed by the Solicitor General of each province? From my perusal of Hansard I understand that one of the principal causes of the failure of the Act in force from 1875 to 1880 was the appointment of trustees by the Governor in Council.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I agree with my hon. friend that the chief criticism of the old Act of 1875 was directed against the official assignees as they were called at that time—

Mr. LEMIEUX: They were very unpopular.

Mr. GUTHRIE: —on the ground that they were not the class of men who should have been appointed as trustees in important matters; they gave rise to the greatest dissatisfaction. I do not know that it would decrease the difficulty at all to have the Lieutenant Governor in Council in each province to make the appointments. I should think it would be quite as well to have the Governor in Council handle the matter, as this is a Federal Act. On this question many commercial bodies made strong representations to us; in fact, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and, I think, the Wholesale Grocers' Association, and one or two others seemed to think that the question of a proper trustee was most vital, and this is largely their suggestion, although not exclusively, because I think the Canadian Manufacturers' Association desired us to go a step further and have a special department of the Government administer the whole Act. The Committee did not think that a wise thing—

Mr. McMASTER: They did not suggest, I suppose, that their claims should be privileged?

Mr. GUTHRIE: No. The Committee did not think that either a wise or a feasible thing, and they left the administration with the superior courts of each province. I know the Committee was unanimous in regard to the clause now under consideration, and their endeavour was to hedge it around with every kind of reasonable security in order that the great defect of the former Insolvency Act might be remedied. I think hon. members will find, if they read the whole clause, that we have pretty well succeeded.

Mr. MOWAT: On the question of appointment of trustees, my recollection is this: As this is a new measure, the wholesale merchants and the retail merchants were watching it closely in their own interests, and a suggestion was made that the trustees should be appointed by the Governor in Council or the Minister of Trade and Commerce, I forget which, on the nomination of the boards of trade; but some of the retail merchants thought they were not very well represented on those large bodies, which were mostly composed of wholesale men, and they demurred. Thereupon the Committee thought it better to leave the section as it is now, and both sides assented to it before the Committee. It was thought that as such large security was required, and the business had been heretofore in the hands of well-known firms of chartered accountants and assignees, probably no difficulty would arise.

Mr. McKENZIE: The question of appointing the trustee is left rather loose in this Bill. The credit of the individuals who have to deal with the trustee generally, and also the interest of the creditors are in his hands; in fact, the manner in which the law will be administered throughout the country is largely, if not altogether, in his hands. The administration of this legislation is a very vital and important part of the administration of justice. If a man dies and leaves an estate, the law provides certain machinery by which that estate is handled and divided amongst his relatives. If, while living, he finds that his estate must be divided amongst his creditors, why should there not be a clear, well defined and safe way in which that can be done? I do not think it is a good proposition that Mr. A., who has a large business and who is about to fail, should be able to say to his neighbour or his brother or his brother-in-law or some friend: You make application to be appointed trustee and I will then assign to you. That can happen, and will happen, and that is going to bring this legislation into disrepute. Combinations will arise and schemes will be formulated and carried out to the discredit of this measure and much to the loss of individuals and the production of fraud on creditors. This should not be left to the haphazard of anybody making an application. The Governor in Council should take the responsibility of appointing trustees as they appoint judges, and then we should have some safeguard that there was no special influence or connivance on the part of the merchant to get his particular chosen friend appointed a trustee. Not too many trustees—perhaps in country places one man in every county or one in every two or three counties—should be appointed. Let a good man be appointed and let him be paid a good salary by the Government, and let a tax be collected by the Government from each estate to furnish, if necessary, money for the payment of that salary. If the Government take the matter in hand absolutely in that way, and take the same responsibility as they do in the appointment of county court judges or judges of the Supreme Court, then they will look about for men of standing and responsibility, and we shall have stronger reason to believe that first class men and men who will do the proper thing in the handling of those estates will be appointed. Somebody suggested to me not long ago that if that is done, it will be patronage. Well, let it be patronage, if necessary, but the Government will be taking the responsibility of the kind of men they will appoint, and it is of the highest concern to the whole country that this legislation should be administered with as much care, strictness and honesty as any other branch of justice in Canada. I should like to impress upon the Solicitor General (Mr. Guthrie) the great importance of the class of men he is going to permit to be appointed as trustees under this legislation

Mr. GUTHRIE: I can fully agree with what has been said by the leader of the Opposition (Mr. McKenzie) as regards the appointment of trustees. The sole object of the Government in framing this clause, and of the special committee in passing it, was to secure the very highest possible class of trustees. My hon. friend says that the same care should be taken in the selection of trustees as is now taken in the appointment of County Court judges. I assume that will be done, but in addition to the requirements which are usually looked for in the case of the appointment of County Court judges, we ask for very heavy securities. Suggestions were made that the appointment of trustees should be kept within various restricted classes. We were very strongly urged to confine the appointment of trustees to chartered accountants, but that suggestion did not meet with approval. We were also asked to limit the numbers, to appoint a very small number for each province, but that was not approved. It was considered better to have a free field, to have no limitation as to number, to have each applicant produce his own qualification and the required security, and then to allow the Governor in Council to deal with the matter. There would be no opportunity of collusion between an insolvent debtor and a trustee. The trustee is not clothed with full powers to manage or dispose of the estate. He is under the control first of the creditors, second, of the inspectors, and third, of the court. He has much less power than assignees have to-day in Ontario. If there is a suggestion of collusion between a trustee and a debtor, the creditors can remove the trustee at the first meeting on a simple motion, on a simple majority vote—majority of numbers, and amount of claims. I should welcome any suggestions from the Committee whereby the appointment might be safeguarded in any way. The special committee spent a great deal of time on this section, and we thought we had safeguarded it as far as human ingenuity could do so. But if any concrete proposal is made, we shall give it the best consideration we can.

Mr. LEMIEUX: The trustee will be an administrator?

Mr. GUTHRIE: Under this Bill, he is an officer of the court.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Why not leave the appointment to the provincial authorities?

Mr. GUTHRIE: As this is a Federal law, why do so?

Mr. LEMIEUX: The Criminal Code is a federal law, yet do the Provincial Governments not appoint the judges?

Mr. GUTHRIE: That is true. There may be something in the suggestion, but this is a federal law in relation to a federal matter, namely, commerce, and I think the federal appointment is the proper and logical one.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: This may be a federal law, section 91, subsection 21, of the British North America Act says that the federal power shall have the right to legislate on bankruptcy and insolvency; but at the same time, section 92, subsection 13, says that the provincial power shall have the right to legislate on property and civil rights. This affects civil rights and property. We have in our civil procedure in Quebec some fifty or sixty articles or sections relating to the abandonment of property. The law has been in force for a long time and has been of great service to the public. I think it would be much better to leave the appointment of the trustees to the attorney general of the province.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I cannot see any greater safeguard in that suggestion than is contained in the Bill. The attorney general of the province, being human, is just as liable to make mistakes as the Minister of Justice. My hon. friend says this is to some extent an infringement upon property and civil rights. It certainly is, I admit that; but the British North America Act says that to this extent we may infringe upon property and civil rights. When this question of property and civil rights was raised before, in the case of Cushing vs. Dupuy, the Privy Council held:

> It would be impossible to advance a step in the construction of a scheme for the administration of insolvent estates without interfering with and modifying some of the ordinary rights of property, and other civil rights, nor without providing some mode of special procedure for the vesting, realization and distribution of the estate, and the settlement of the liabilities of the insolvent. Procedure must necessarily form an essential part of any law dealing with insolvency. It is therefore to be presumed, indeed it is a necessary implication, that the Imperial statute, in assigning to the Dominion Parliament the subjects of bankruptcy and insolvency, intended to confer on it legislative power to interfere with property, civil rights, and procedure within the provinces, so far as a general law relating to those subjects might affect them.

That is the law as interpreted by the highest court we have, and that was a decision on this very question of bankruptcy. If this Bill becomes law and the Act is administered in this country, there will be some interference with property and civil rights as we know them to-day in the different provinces. The only other suggestion my hon. friend has made was as to the payment of salaries. That, too, was discussed by the special committee and the consensus of opinion was that payment should be made by fee, as set out in section 40 of the Bill.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: If I understand the hon. gentleman correctly, fifty or sixty articles of our civil code may be annulled by this law?

Mr. GUTHRIE: Only those affecting insolvent persons or their estates, and only to the extent that it is necessary to administer this law.

Mr. JACOBS: The same dictum with regard to property and civil rights being overridden by the Federal Parliament was given by the Privy Council in the case of the Union Bank vs. Tennant some twenty-five or thirty years ago, in identically the same terms. It was a question of the Bank Act infringing on the civil code of the province of Quebec.

Mr. MOWAT: In regard to the point raised by my hon. friend (Mr. Archambault) I have a quotation here from Lefroy's Canada's Federal System, which is recognized as an authority by all the courts and law schools. In discussing the case where provincial legislation as to voluntary assignments was held as not interfering with a bankruptcy law, Lefroy says (page 123-4):

> The provinces must yield to the Dominion, and Acts which come into collision must remain in abeyance until repealed by the legislature which passed them.

Discussing Cushing vs. Dupuy, 5 Appeal Cases. he says:

> When we find bankruptcy or insolvency mentioned as a subject for the exclusive legislation of the Dominion we must necessarily understand that the organization of an insolvent court and administration of justice and proceedings are excepted from section 92 of the British North America Act (i.e. property and civil rights).

That is his opinion.

Mr. McKENZIE: The first subsection of section 14 is new. Would the minister tell us the procedure adopted in England for the appointment of trustees?

Mr. GUTHRIE: In England they are appointed by the courts.

Mr. McKENZIE: Why not adopt that system here? When you appoint a receiver, which is closely akin to this, you have to go to the court. Constitute the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, for instance, a court in this case. Why not throw the responsibility upon the court to appoint the trustee as they do in England?

Mr. GUTHRIE: One difficulty that we have striven to overcome is the delay and expense in connection with applications to the courts. One complaint that has come to us from all over Canada is that the expense of cases that go before the court, notably the cases of companies under the Winding-up Act, is so great and the procedure so tedious that creditors have become disgusted. An outstanding case in British Columbia to-day is the case of the Dominion Trust Company. I believe that eighty per cent of their assets have been expended in courts, liquidators and the like. If one thing was impressed upon the Committee more than another it was that we should avoid as far as possible court procedure and court appointments. In England, I am told, the trustees are selected by the creditors, but they have to be formally approved and appointed by the court. One of the criticisms upon the English system to-day is its dilatoriness and expense. We are trying to improve on that by avoiding as far as possible applications to the courts. We have not been able to avoid them absolutely, because we have given the courts a general supervision, but wherever the creditors can themselves decide—and they are more largely interested than anybody else—we allow them to do so. I think all the interests that appeared before the Committee, and there were a great many, preferred this method of appointment to any other that was suggested, except those who advocated the administration of the Act by a department of the Government and the establishing in Canada of a bankruptcy court in every province. That proposal was seriously advocated, but was not entertained. I think we have provided, so far as is humanly possible, all necessary safeguards.

Mr. McKENZIE: We have almost altogether the English Act.

Mr. GUTHRIE: No, we have not.

Mr. McKENZIE: Almost. I have read it very closely, and here and there there is something new. But it is almost the English Act, under which the trustees are appointed by the court. Why depart from that feature of the Act when we are practically adopting the whole of the rest of it? To my mind, the reasons given by the Solicitor General are not strong. It is suggested that the appointment of the trustee by the judge involves expense and delay, and instead of that the Secretary of State recommends the appointment. But after it gets into the hands of the court and there is entirely the same procedure.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Not the appointment.

Mr. McKENZIE: Not the appointment, but the procedure. Every move then must be subject to the direction of the court. You cannot do anything without the consent of the court. You cannot accept the trustee's estimate of the value of the estate without the consent of the court. If a man in Nova Scotia seeks to be appointed as a trustee, somebody makes a motion before a judge of the Supreme Court of that province. The judge can familiarize himself with the conditions of the case in a very short time, and the applicant will be appointed largely as a result of the court's investigation into his character. The Secretary of State has to deal with the whole of Canada and is not in a position so readily to ascertain the qualifications of the applicant, and in that way he can be more easily imposed upon. He has to consult someone perhaps two thousand miles away as to the character of the person making the application. The advantage in this respect is decidedly with the English practice the matter could be settled ment by the court. A man in Sydney would have to communicate with Ottawa, nearly 2,000 miles away, whereas if we followed the English practice the matter could be settled on the spot. Seven times in the year we have judges sitting in Sydney. Altogether I think that instead of expediting matters you are only creating much more clumsy, expensive and inoperative machinery.

Mr. H. H. McLEAN: I understand that, first, official assignees are to be appointed on personal application, stating their qualifications, and then security is to be given in the sum of $10,000. I understand also that only these official assignees can be appointed trustees of the estate. Section 15 says that "a majority in number of the creditors who hold half or more in amount of the proved debts," and so on, may, at their discretion, substitute any other authorized trustee for the trustee named in the receiving order. I do not understand why only official trustees appointed by the Governor in Council can be appointed as trustees of the estate. Take a big fishing business like that conducted by the hon. member for Northumberland (Mr. Loggie)—this is merely an illustration—it would require a man conversant with that particular business to take charge of that estate and successfully wind it up. But they can only appoint an official trustee from that district, and a man who might have special qualifications for the position could not be appointed by the creditors. The same thing applies to shipbuilding concerns and lumbering industries, which require men with special knowledge. I do not see why the creditors' power of appointment is taken away. In England, and under our own Insolvency Act of 1869 and 1875, the creditors have the power of appointment. I would like the minister to explain why the majority of creditors, over 50 per cent, should not have the right to select the assignee of the estate, subject to the approval of the court, and why the choice should be limited to a particular class appointed by the Governor in Council. A certain number of people will apply and give securities and bonds, but in connection with large estates the creditors might not wish to have them, owing to lack of the particular qualification.

10 p.m.

Mr. GUTHRIE: The object in confining the trustees to a specially appointed list is to see that they all give the necessary security. The creditors can change the trustee but they must have a man on the appointed list, so that no irresponsible person may be permitted to act. It was to remedy a difficulty under the old system. It must be borne in mind that a trustee under this Act is an accountant. He cannot act in regard to the debtors' estate unless he is authorized by the inspectors and creditors. So that in the case cited by my hon. friend, if you want men particularly familiar with the shipping business, you have the appointment of suitable inspectors. The creditors have full charge of that matter. The trustee is more or less an accountant and has really very little to do with the disposition of the estate except in so far as he is authorized to act by the inspectors and creditors; the inspectors have the real control. The trustee cannot sell the assets, cannot either keep the estate running or close it up, and is under the authority of the creditors and inspectors. What is most required of the trustee is a prompt accounting, and the great difficulty in the past has been that the trustees did not pay over dividends when they were declared. That was the real difficulty, which, even with this security, many people apprehend in connection with this Act. These people say that dividends are declared, and the trustees neglect to pay over small amounts, and accumulate a fund for themselves, and so they ask heavy penalties against trustees who do not pay unclaimed dividends into court or into some fund of the Government. It is the intention to make the trustee accountable, to see that he provides adequate security, and as far as possible, to keep him from mixing up with the estate, save under the control of the inspectors and creditors.

Mr. H. H. McLEAN: I can remember very well, under the old Insolvent Act, when an assignee was appointed there were always inspectors appointed. We know that in the working out of the Insolvent Act the inspectors are appointed in different places, but they do not control the estate. This Act does not give them control of the estate, it vests in the trustee all the property and all the rights, you may say, of the insolvent. In the practical working out the trustee will have the absolute control of the property, the right to dispose of it and to manage it. The provision with regard to inspectors, in the practical working out, has never been a success. The inspectors are not paid for the work. They have other matters to attend to. They are only called in on special occasions to give advice. Then we come back to this principle: Why should the creditors be deprived of the power to control the estate? They are the persons interested, and if all the creditors unite and say that they want So-and-so appointed trustee of the estate, and if that is approved by the court, why should you prevent it? I object to one particular class having control of all these insolvent estates. You have to appoint accountants and no one else. The very worst man you can get to manage a business concern is an accountant. An accountant's business is to look over the books and add up figures. He has to be a book-keeper and he is a book-keeper. He is not a manager; he cannot control and manage an estate as a business man can. If you were appointing a manager of a business you would select a business man, not an accountant. You hire the accountant for one purpose, and that is to look over the accounts. I cannot understand this principle of taking the control of the estate, or of the assets, away from the creditors who own them. A man is an insolvent, he makes an assignment to his creditors and they unite and say that So-and-so should be appointed as assignee to control the estate. Why should that power be taken from them? Why should they be limited to a particular appointment or to a particular class?

Mr. GUTHRIE: It is not contemplated, under the provisions of this Bill, that the trustee will be asked to carry on the business. It is not the common experience, after an assignment takes place, that the business is carried on; it is wound up. One of the chief objects of the Bill is to see that it shall be wound up properly. It may have to be carried on, but it is not contemplated that the trustee shall do it. The creditors may appoint a manager. The insolvent himself may be appointed by the creditors. There is a special provision that the insolvent, who is the man most familiar with the business, shall be appointed if the creditors agree.

Mr. H. H. McLEAN: You say that the creditors may appoint as manager whomever they think fit. Why not go farther in principle and let the creditors have control of the estate if they desire it? Insist on a majority of three-fourths of them if you wish. Why should you not allow the creditors to take control of the estate and appoint as trustee whomever they may want to appoint?

Mr. GUTHRIE: The largest creditor bodies of this country, the Canadian wholesalers, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and the retailers have all passed favourably upon this clause; in fact, it is drafted very largely in accordance with their views. They do not approve of appointing any one as a trustee or of anything that might open the door to the appointment of the friends of any man or set of men as trustees or of anything of that kind which is not in accordance with the interest of the creditors. Under this you get a high class of trustees, men who are experienced accountants—although not necessarily accountants because there is no limitation of that kind in the Act. If you allow these men to do this work and to become familiar with the procedure, you will find it will work out to the interest of the creditors, and they are the ones chiefly concerned in the amount of their dividends. Cases have come within my own knowledge where at a meeting of creditors this man, or the other man, is appointed assignee of the estate because he is broke and needs the money. We have been trying to avoid that by appointing men of high standing who do not need the money or who are not in an impecunious state. Many of the old assignees were so, and as a result there was a great deal of discontent with the administration of the Act.

Mr. COCKSHUTT: As a member of the special committee that had to do with this Act, I sympathize very much with the views expressed by the hon. member for Royal (Mr. McLean) but I want to say that the principal proposal that he has made should be made in regard to the very small estates. I think I would be within the mark in saying that fully fifty per cent of the failures that take place in Canada are for amounts under $1,000. Therefore, it becomes necessary to keep down expenditure in dividing up the estate. Otherwise the result will be that even though a bankrupt might be able to pay fifty cents on the dollar if the estate was well managed, in the final analysis, the heavy expense will eat up the estate and you will have nothing to distribute to the creditors. The hon. member for Royal (Mr. McLean) is absolutely right in his contention with regard to small estates in the country, if the local creditors can appoint a man who is on the spot. The official trustee will have to travel anywhere from two hundred to four hundred miles, he will have to live at a hotel and his general expenses will run the liquidation cost away beyond the amount that would be incurred by a local man. Under these conditions the suggestion of my hon. friend is a satisfactory one. But it must be remembered that these estates will run anywhere from $1,000, or $2,000 up into millions and what is thought fit or proper for a million-dollar or five-million-dollar estate will be very unfit for a thousand-dollar or five-hundred-dollar estate. It must be remembered that as a rule the creditors are scattered all over the country and that many of them are in foreign countries and are unable to be represented at the meeting. I have had some experience in regard to small estates, as I dare say the hon. member for Royal has. If he has had the same experience as I have had he will know that after one or two meetings have been called with regard to an estate running from $1,000 to $5,000 and a statement has been presented showing that the estate is hopelessly involved, the final meetings of the creditors will be attended by five or ten per cent of the creditors at the outside. The others say it is hopeless, that there is no use of throwing good money after bad, and they do not attend the meeting at all. Their interest is lost in the estate if they think it is not going to produce any dividend. The winding up of a small estate with expensive machinery will mean that very little will come out of it. As I say, I have been at a good many creditors' meetings myself, being mostly there in the capacity of a man who had sold goods, and my experience has been that the number of those present is infinitesimal in comparison with the number of those who are entitled to be present. The British and United States creditors are usually unrepresented. Of course, you may say: Let them look after themselves. But the credit of Canada suffers if there is not an equal distribution of the estate. As the Solicitor-General has said, we have considered this Bill in Committee. We stayed with it for weeks, and the member for George Etienne Cartier (Mr. Jacobs) will bear testimony, I think, that the Committee worked as faithfully on this measure as on any Bill that has been dealt with in the House in recent years. For weeks and weeks we sat three and four times a week, and we heard all sorts of evidence. I was one who held just about the same notion that my hon. friend here has expressed, when I went to that Committee. I thought that the man on the spot was the cheapest to act as trustee, and he might often be a most efficient man, but then there was the question of security, and in large estates that is an absolute necessity, because if a man is going to get possession of money that he does not distribute there is going to be the dickens to pay. That is where the estate has been entrusted to a man and he is not paying up as he should. Now the inequalities in the size of estates, the situation of the town or city in which the estate is—all these things have to be taken into account. I somewhat reluctantly assented to the proposition embodied in the Bill as being perhaps, after all, the best solution of a very difficult job, but I quite agree that the creditors are the men first concerned, and the most concerned, and they should have a good deal to say as to the trustee and how the estate shall be handled, and perhaps should decide whether or not it should be retained for a time or whether it should be sold off. There is a variety of things to consider, but the average estate has to be wound up, or ought to be wound up, and an accountant is necessary—a man who knows how to keep accounts and who will give an account of the money received and the money disposed of. He is hedged about in this Bill as far as we can hedge him as to his expenditures, and is held down to what we thought was the minimum. I do not say the clause is absolutely perfect by any means, or absolutely just in every respect, but taking it altogether it may be the best solution. As to the objection of my hon. friend from Royal, there is difficulty in appointing a man on the spot; often the place where the estate is is very small or it is in a very out-of-the-way district. As regards large estates, you need a machinery that can handle it, as well as the smaller estates, though I think this is expensive for the small estates and I do not favour a trustee going a distance of two or three hundred miles if it can be avoided. However, the Bill provides for the creation of districts, if I remember well, and probably a trustee will not have to go that far. In my opinion the machinery that has been provided has been well thought out, and I hope it will be found by the House on examination that the course provided is as safe and wise as could be adopted under the circumstances.

Mr. H. H. McLEAN: I do not think the hon. gentleman who has just spoken quite understood my point. It is quite true these official trustees could be appointed, and there would be no objection to them. But suppose there are estates where the creditors represent three-fourths, in amount, or a majority number, and they say "We do not want to leave it to the official trustee, we want to appoint a trustee of our own." Provided that man gives security to the satisfaction of the judge, why should not he be appointed? That is the point I want to make. This question does not arise in the ordinary cases. In those cases the creditors may agree to the official trustee; but in such a case as I have mentioned why do you deliberately take away from the owners of the property—because if a man is insolvent his creditors own the estate—the absolute control of that property? If the creditors do not want to take control the official trustee carries on the estate; but here you are raising this barrier. If the creditors are united in the matter—representing say three-quarters of the amount involved, and also, if you wish, a majority number—and if they want to appoint a special person for a particular purpose, why should they not have that power of appointment? There surely can be no answer to that.

Section agreed to.

On section 14, subsection (4)—General security to be given by trustee.

Mr. JACOBS: I would suggest that the minister amend the subsection so that in case a cash deposit is made by the trustee he will be entitled to interest, say at the rate of five per cent per annum, during the period in which the money is deposited with the Government.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Has my hon. friend prepared an amendment?

Mr. JACOBS: I was merely making the suggestion.

Mr. GUTHRIE: If my hon. friend will prepare an amendment I will consider it.

Mr. JACOBS: If the minister will allow the subsection to stand I will prepare an amendment and hand it in.

Mr. McMASTER: I have another suggestion for the minister. It is provided here that the bonds shall be executed to His Majesty, represented by such departmental officer as may be designated by the Governor in Council. In the case of Montreal business, would that be some officer located in Montreal?

Mr. GUTHRIE: No, it devolves upon some particular officer of the Government who has to take the bond and execute it to His Majesty. There has to be some one named for the purpose of enforcing it.

Mr. McMASTER: Before whom are these bonds to be executed?

Mr. GUTHRIE: The bond would be executed to His Majesty as represented by the Secretary of State.

Mr. McMASTER: Under our procedure in the province of Quebec, judicial bonds are usually executed before one of the deputy prothonotaries of the Superior Court, or one of the clerks of the Court of Appeal. The point I want to get at is whether the Bill indicates the procedure to be followed or not. Perhaps that is unnecessary. The matter may be governed by rules and regulations drawn up for the carrying out of this Bill; but if the point has not been covered it seems to me it might be wise to indicate before what officer these bonds may be executed.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I should think that would be a matter that would be dealt with in the rules and regulations, but at any rate the bond will have to be satisfactory to His Majesty.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I do not think a higher rate of interest could be provided for than is paid by the Government Savings Bank.

Mr. JACOBS: Why not? We are paying five and a half per cent to the public for the use of their money?

Subsection allowed to stand.

On section 14, subsection (6)—Security.

Mr. McMASTER: That does not seem to me to be quite fair to, say, the young chartered accountant who has been in business only a short time. He has got to put up security, but a trust company has not. Why should a trust company be put in any better position than a firm of chartered accountants or an individual chartered accountant? It seems to me that the chartered accountant and the trust company should be put exactly on the same level.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Of course, the theory is that the trust company is already approved and has in all cases made deposits with the Government as security—not with this Government but with the provincial governments.

Mr. McMASTER: Not for this purpose.

Mr. GUTHRIE: But for all trust and guarantee purposes. As to their solvency generally, they are required to make deposits—at least I know they are in the province of Ontario, and I think a similar practise prevails in the other provinces.

Mr. LEMIEUX: What about the Dominion Trust Company?

Mr. GUTHRIE: We have trouble enough. I know in the province of Ontario we accept approved trust companies as trustees for the most sacred trusts without additional security. Parliament incorporates them for that specific purpose, among others. I do not think, therefore, that we should derogate from our own grant and say: You must get another company to secure you. I see the distinction which my hon. friend has pointed out, but I think it is only reasonable to accept any reliable trust company without security of this kind.

Mr. McMASTER: The guarantee to be given is merely for the purpose of securing the carrying out of what I might call professional work. The trust company there is not primarily a trust company; it is a receiver or trustee. I think it is eminently unfair to chartered accountants to say: Although you come in competition in this line of business with trust companies, those trust companies, just because they are trust companies, shall not be required to make any deposit or security, but you, being an individual, must do so, no matter how high your reputation may be or how considerable your solvency. It seems to me that the law should be fair and equal, and I submit with confidence that you are giving an unjust advantage to the trust company over the ordinary firm of chartered accountants, or chartered accountant, as the case may be.

Mr. GUTHRIE: In the case of a receivership in any province to-day, when the court appoints a private individual as receiver, it insists on security, but if it appoints a trust company it excuses security. That is a matter of adopted practice here and, I think, in every other country, simply because experience has shown that so far as security is concerned the bonds and pledges of these companies on the whole are better than private securities.

Mr. LEMIEUX: If my memory serves me well, there was a very long discussion in the Toronto press on the securities of trust companies after some land mortgage companies had not "delivered the goods." Does the minister remember that discussion?

Mr. GUTHRIE: I have seen some criticisms—I have made some.

Mr. LEMIEUX: It seems to me that in our province trust companies are assigned to special work—they administer estates.

Mr. McMASTER: They can, but they do not generally do so.

Mr. GUTHRIE: And they can act as trustees in bankruptcy under this Bill.

Mr. LEMIEUX: But it is a special venture to which generally they are not assigned.

Mr. GUTHRIE: There have been a number of cases where they have been constituted receivers for the purpose of winding up insolvent estates.

Mr. McMASTER: They do not do it much in our province.

Mr. JACOBS: I do not see why a trust company should not be put on the same plane as an ordinary trustee. It may not be a difficult matter for a trust company to provide the necessary security; it probably would be a more difficult matter for the individual trustee to do so. While it may be said that I was a party to the drafting of this particular section, still I am willing to admit that the argument of my friend from Brome (Mr. McMaster) seems to me to be pretty strong in favour of seeing that no particular advantage is secured by the trust company over the private individual. It will not be a hardship on the trust company to furnish security, and that being the case, why not put them all on the same plane?

Mr. COCKSHUTT: It seems to me there is quite a difference between a trust company acting in this capacity and a private individual. If my friend from Brome wanted to start a bank he would not be able to do so; banks have charters under which the Government impose certain restrictions before they are allowed to receive money. Trust companies likewise are obliged to live up to certain requirements, and their bonds are looked upon as a proper investment for trust funds in many cases, which seems to indicate that the law recognizes that the security of trust companies is such that it cannot be questioned, because any violation of trust is a very serious matter for anybody.

Mr. JACOBS: Take the case of the Dominion Trust Company.

Mr. COCKSHUTT: I can quite see that the private individual is going to be somewhat at a disadvantage, but if he follows this as a business, once he gets his $10,000 bond underwritten by a bond company—and most men of any integrity can get that done—he will not be obliged to go on multiplying that security indefinitely. Presumably he will be in a position to pay the necessary premium on his $10,000 bond. But the trust company will not have to do that, because it is in a superior position financially, and is so acknowledged by the Government of the province. I think my friend from Brome. who is also a member of the Committee, will remember that we thought there was quite a difference between an individual, so far as security was concerned, and a trust company subject to very special laws and regulations which it must live up to.

Mr. H. H. McLEAN: Do these trust companies have to be appointed by the Governor in Council as official trustees?

Mr. GUTHRIE: I said it was open to them to be so appointed.

Mr. H. H. McLEAN: They cannot be appointed trustees of an estate unless they have been previously appointed by the Governor in Council.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Certainly not.

Mr. H. H. McLEAN: That is a very good provision, because recently a small company was incorporated in New Brunswick for some particular purpose—I do not know why; in other provinces small trust companies have been incorporated; therefore it would be necessary for the Governor in Council to be very particular before appointing trust companies as official trustees to see that they have proper assets and also authority under their charters to act as receivers or trustees.

Mr. MOWAT: In Ontario the Committee will see that the trust companies are those approved according to the laws of the province. In practice these trust companies are on a list approved by the province, and the province sees to it from year to year that they do not give guarantees in excess of the security which they put up; they have to keep bonds on deposit with the provincial government commensurate with the liabilities under their guarantees.

[Mr. Cockshutt.]

Mr. McMASTER: Does that occur in all the provinces?

Mr. MOWAT: I do not know. although I assume it does. If there is any practice that a trust company should be approved by the province, this does not apply. The idea of the Committee was to give the public the impression of security; we were not thinking of benevolence towards young chartered accountants.

Mr. McMASTER: I do not want benevolence; I want justice, and it is fundamentally unjust, when you come to distribute professional trustee work, that the professional man, individual or in a firm, is obliged to put up security, while a trust company which is going to do the same work through its clerks or employees, is not obliged to do so. I quite see that, as a rule, a trust company should, just because it is a trust company, give a guarantee of security, but that does not always happen. There has, during the last few years, been a very striking failure of a trust company, and many people lost money through it.

Mr. JACOBS: A straight failure?

Mr. McMASTER: I did not say "straight failure," I said a very striking failure. These trust companies are not, I think. obliged to put up deposits with the Federal Government, which is relying upon other jurisdiction, and that being the case, would it not be better to put the chartered accountants and the trust companies on the same level? Some provinces may not be as careful as they should be with regard to trust companies. I cannot say, because I do not know.

Mr. JACOBS: British Columbia, for example.

Mr. McMASTER: They may allow trust companies to operate in unbusinesslike fashion; that is, they may allow them to issue more security bonds than they are able to guarantee. Therefore, instead of having the Department of the Secretary of State or the Federal authorities depending upon nine different jurisdictions for the security which is to be given to the creditors, why, on this ground as well as on the ground of fairness, should not the trust company and the ordinary man doing this trustee work be put on the same level?

Mr. COCKSHUTT: The Government of Ontario has that deposit already, so why require the company to put it up again? The company has to be approved by the laws of the province.

Mr. McMASTER: The deposit which the trust company has made with the province of Ontario is not for this specific purpose, but in connection with other activities of the company. This is to secure another activity of the trust company, and I do not see why we should make the distinction.

Mr. GUTHRIE: The security is in proportion to all the business done by the trust company.

Mr. JACOBS: A trust company is no more honest than the people composing it. A year or two ago, we had the instance of the Dominion Trust Company of British Columbia which went to the wall and caused the loss of large sums of money to the public who put their faith in that institution. I still believe, with the hon. member for Brome (McMaster), that this clause should be amended, and I therefore move:

That in subsection (6), of section 14, the words "notwithstanding the provisions of this section it shall not be necessary for trust companies approved according to the law of the province to provide such security" be struck out.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I will ask my hon. friend to allow that motion to stand until the Bill comes up for consideration tomorrow, and I will come to some conclusion in the meantime. I am not by any means wedded to the present clause. It is, however, following the general practice, and to strike it out would be an innovation. I would not like this Bill to go forth with a slap in the face to the great trust companies of Canada. I would like it to go forth with the accepted usage of measures dealing with trust companies.

Mr. JACOBS: If that is the only slap in the face they will get, let it go at that.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Our people are educated that investment in the funds of trust companies is a wise and proper thing. I believe that to be so, and I would not like it to be said that we have no faith in trust companies. We are dealing here, on a very important measure, with what appears to be a very trivial matter.

Mr. McMASTER: I do not consider it a triviality to do what I believe to be justice to individual professional men.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I do not think the case will arise once in a year.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: The Governor in Council has the power to appoint a trustee and they will not appoint a trustee whom they do not regard as solvent. Therefore, by selecting a trust company, the Governor in Council shows that that company is deemed to be solvent. It is rather a reflection on the party selecting the trust company that an insolvent company might be selected. We really come back to the former position, that the selection of a trustee who will carry on his duties without a bond must be made by the Government, and in exercising that selection they will take into consideration whether or not the company is solvent.

Amendment stands. Subsection stands.

Progress reported.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Reid the House adjourned.

Friday, May 2, 1919.

The House met at Three o'clock.

ST. LAWRENCE RIVER WATER POWERS.

FURTHER DOCUMENTS AS TO ST. LAWRENCE RIVER POWER COMPANY'S DAM.

Hon. NEWTON W. ROWELL (President of the Privy Council): Yesterday I laid upon the table of the House certain documents relating to the application of the St. Lawrence River Power Company to construct certain works in the St. Lawrence river. The House then intimated a desire to have those documents printed, and in order that the record may be complete I now beg to lay upon the Table these further documents: Interim Order and opinion of the International Joint Commission in the matter of this application; and statement of the case of the Government of Canada on such application.

With the consent of the House I beg to move:

That the documents relating to the application of the St. Lawrence River Power Company to construct certain works in the South Sault channel of the St. Lawrence river, laid upon the table of the House on May 1st, and the interim order and opinion of the International Joint Commission on the said application and the case of the Government of Canada, laid upon the table to-day, be printed forthwith, and that rule 74 be suspended in relation thereto.

Sir SAM HUGHES: Are there not any plans in connection with that matter which should also be published?

Mr. ROWELL: I have no doubt plans were filed in the case before the International Joint Commission, but the Government is not in possession of any plans so far as I know.

Before this motion is carried, Mr. Speaker, may I be permitted to draw attention to a provision of the minutes of Council stating the case of the Government of Canada? I do so in order to correct what appears to be a misunderstanding outside this House as to the position of the Government in reference to the development of power in the St. Lawrence river. I will just read this extract:

It is with this purpose also that the Canadian Government deems it appropriate to refer here to the proposal made in the Order in Council of the 2nd September, 1918, that the two Governments should take immediate steps jointly to prepare and carry out a scheme looking to the most economical and comprehensive development of the waters of the St. Lawrence River in the interests of the people of both countries. Even though the utilization of only a portion of the whole capacity of the river can be immediately contemplated, yet the endeavour should be to design at the outset a complete scheme into which successive developments might be fitted from time to time as and when the occasion might demand. Without some such scheme there is always present the great danger that the ultimate possibilities of St. Lawrence navigation may be neglected or even irreparably injured; for it must be borne in mind, not only that navigation is the paramount national and international use of this great highway of commerce, but that the possibilities of the stream in this respect have been as yet by no means fully developed. On the other hand it is certain that the subordinate and incidental but important use of these international boundary waters for power purposes can never be rendered as efficient and productive through a policy of simply permitting a haphazard series of unrelated private enterprises as through a carefully considered and comprehensive scheme of development carried out under public auspices by the two countries; and obviously it is only by agreement and concerted action between the two countries that such a development can be undertaken.

But, as already intimated, this is not all; there is, in addition to the economic advantages, the much more important consideration affecting the status of the treaties and conventions between the two countries. For the adoption of the proposed joint project as an international policy would, it is conceived, be calculated to obviate many occasions for public dissatisfaction and misunderstanding that on the one side or the other might otherwise arise from time to time in respect of private exploitations of the uses of these waters. Unquestionably these uses are becoming more and more regarded as public uses, and it follows that the responsibility for their development should be undertaken, and the benefits of such development enjoyed, by the public. Indeed, for this reason and in view of the other considerations here adduced the Canadian Government is trongly convinced that nothing should be allowed to prejudice the chance of such a comprehensive power development of the St. Lawrence waters, and so far as its consent may be necessary, it will, therefore, be unable to sanction further private enterprise of this nature.

Sir SAM HUGHES: Is that from the Canadian Government?

Hon. Mr. ROWELL: That is a portion of the Minutes of Council adopted by the Canadian Government and forwarded to the American Government as indicating our policy.

Motion agreed to.

SENATE BILLS.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill No. 83, for the relief of Albert Greensward.—Mr. Middlebro.

Bill No. 84, for the relief of May Jane Lyons.—Mr. Hocken.

Bill No. 85, for the relief of Rose Kent Miller.—Mr. Morphy.

Bill No. 86, for the relief of Elizabeth Winters.—Mr. Mowat.

PEACE TREATY—EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. M. R. BLAKE (Winnipeg North): I would like to bring to the attention of the Government an article which appeared in the press of April 30th, stating that an eight-hour day had been included in the Peace Treaty, and to ask the Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs if the Government has any information on the matter.

Hon. Mr. ROWELL: We expect to have text of the treaty very shortly, and it is possible that on Monday an answer may be given to the question of the hon. gentleman.

NAVAL SERVICE—PRIORITY OF DISCHARGE.

On the Orders of the Day:

Hon. Mr. BALLANTYNE: I desire to give the hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Sinclair) the information that he asked for yesterday in regard to the demobilization of the men in the naval service.

The numbers of active service ratings borne on the books of the Naval Service Department on November 15, 1918, were:—

Officers	700
Men	4768	5468
Officers borne April 15, 1919	200
Men	1758	1978
Total number demobilized		3490

Demobilization is being carried on as rapidly as possible, priority being given to men who entered early in the war.

The men from the overseas divisions are being discharged as they are returned from England.

The men on the stations at Halifax and Esquimalt are manning the vessels on hand, which have to be maintained in proper condition. The number of vessels is being reduced and men are discharged as quickly as is consistent with this service.

WORKERS' MEETING IN TORONTO.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. JOSEPH ARCHAMBAULT (Chambly and Verchères): I wish to call the attention of the House to a very grave incident that occurred in Toronto yesterday. I read in this morning's Ottawa Citizen the following:

One of the speakers at to-night's meeting was loudly applauded when he addressed the gathering as "comrades and fellow Bolsheviki" . . . . . "We all know that the propaganda started at this meeting will make for revolution" . . . . "We are in the first throes in Canada of a world-wide revolution. We are governed here by Orders in Council issued by the financial interests of this country. You must arise in your might and defy this Government, which has taken away the right of free speech."

Does the Government intend to take any action with regard to this matter?

Sir THOMAS WHITE (Acting Prime Minister): It does not seem to me that any Government action is called for. I should think that the speaker at that meeting might have been influenced by fallacious arguments put forth by hon. gentlemen opposite to the effect that the country is being governed by Order in Council, and not, as is the fact, under constitutional principles.

REPATRIATION OF CANADIANS IN IMPERIAL SERVICE.

Mr. G. B. NICHOLSON (Algoma East): A number of young Canadians who enlisted in the Imperial service under an arrangement with the Canadian Government are now being discharged from the Imperial service in England. I received a letter this morning in connection with one case where a young man went over from Canada in 1915, was wounded early in 1916, and went back to his regiment after his recovery. The regiment was sent to India and the young man arrived back in England late in March, was discharged on the 8th of April, and left England on his own resources. No provision has been made for his getting back to Canada; he may return as best he can, and without any remuneration for the delay. It seems to me that this is a situation that should call for some action on the part of the Government with a view at least to doing justice to these young men.

Major-General MEWBURN (Minister of Militia): About ten days ago I learned that some Canadians who had joined the Imperial forces were desirous of getting back to Canada and were unable to make the necessary arrangements for transportation. These included some flying corps officers. I transmitted a cable to the overseas minister requesting him to arrange with the War Office for the immediate repatriation—at the Canadian Government's expense, the cost to be charged back to the Imperial account—of Canadians who were in the Imperials for discharge. I also transmitted to the War Office a request that Canadians who had joined the Imperials and had been granted commissions—a large number of men from our universities got commissions in the Imperials—be given the privilege of taking their discharge and returning to Canada; and that arrangements be made for their repatriation. The overseas minister replies that he has taken the matter up with the War Office and will use every endeavour to see that this request is complied with.

Sir SAM HUGHES: What business has the War Office with these men who are on discharge? It is the duty of the Canadian Government, not of the War Office, to get them home.

Major-General MEWBURN: These men enlisted in the Imperial service, not in the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Sir SAM HUGHES: Once they are discharged, it is our duty to bring them home.

Major-General MEWBURN: They are not all discharged.

Sir SAM HUGHES: They should be.

PRIVILEGE—MR. EDWARDS.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. J. W. EDWARDS (Frontenac): I rise to a question of privilege. This morning's issue of that great family magazine printed in Ottawa, called the Journal, and edited by one P. D. Ross, Esquire, contains an editorial headed "An Unjust Aspersion," in which the editor says that I used these words—at least, they are credited to me; the words are in quotation marks, and as my name appears in the same paragraph, the inference is that they were used by me:

A number of militia officers walking around in uniform who never went to the front and never wanted to go.

Mr. Speaker, I did not use those words in this House or out of this House. I made no reference whatever in my remarks to men "walking around in uniform." My remarks clearly indicate that I was referring not to men in uniform, but to men who had been connected with the militia and had been out for drill for many years, but did not put on the uniform when war broke out or during the continuance of the war. I do not care to be represented as casting aspersions on men who were in uniform, and I have never made any reflections on such men. It was enough for me that they were in uniform; it was then up to the Government or to the Militia Department to say whether they went overseas or whether they could best serve their country here. Of course, a little matter of fact like that does not bother the editor of the Ottawa Journal.

Mr. SPEAKER: Order. The hon. gentleman has made his denial; it would not be in order for him to go any further.

Mr. EDWARDS: I wish to resent emphatically the unjust charge which is editorially levelled against me, and to say that a man who has been in receipt of some $80,000—

Mr. SPEAKER: Order.

Mr. EDWARDS: —in the last five years out of this Government—

Some hon. MEMBERS: Order.

Mr. EDWARDS: —had better occupy his time in other ways than by—

Mr. SPEAKER: Order.

Mr. EDWARDS: —casting reflections on members of this House.

BANKRUPTCY ACT.

House in Committee on Bill No. 18, respecting Bankruptcy—Hon. Mr. Guthrie—Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN: When the Committee rose last night, we had reached clause 14, which was being considered subsection by subsection. We had reached subsection 6.

On section 14, subsection 6—security:

Amendment (Mr. Jacobs) agreed to.

Subsection as amended agreed to.

On subsection 7—security to be kept in force:

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Did I understand the minister to state yesterday that he had received no complaints against this Bill from boards of trade, municipal councils, or Provincial Governments? Is it not a fact that the premier of the province of Quebec sent in a communication objecting to this Bill?

Mr. GUTHRIE: No protest from any Provincial Government has come before me. Copies of this Bill, as it left the special committee last year, were submitted to the Provincial Governments, and it is possible that the premier's objection may have been sent to some other department of the Government. I will make inquiries about it.

Mr. McKENZIE: What certainty have we that these bonds will be kept in force? A good bondsman to-day may be absolutely worthless as a bondsman to-morrow. I think we should provide that the security shall be continuous.

Mr. GUTHRIE: The intention certainly is that the security shall be continuous. Subsection 4 provides:

> No authorized trustee shall accept any assignment or trust or execute any duties under this Act unless and until he has given security to the satisfaction of the Governor in Council, by bonds or otherwise, executed to His Majesty as represented by such departmental officer as may be designated by the Governor in Council, for due accounting and for payment over and transfer of all moneys and property received by him as such trustee.

No trustee is permitted either to accept or to execute any assignments unless the security is there. I assume that the officer who is designated will see to it that the bonds are kept renewed from time to time. A trustee would not be entitled to act if he was in default of his security. I do not know that it is usual to provide that the security shall be continued in force, but perhaps a clause might be added that if for any reason the security lapses the trustee shall be disqualified. But I think the inference that the security must be maintained is very plain.

Mr. McKENZIE: I certainly think that the courts of the provinces would be able to handle this better than the Governor in Council. I do not know what definite knowledge the Governor in Council could have, of a bondsman in British Columbia or the Yukon, for instance. The Governor in Council would not be able to get the information from a remote place as expeditiously as the courts. I do not wish to interfere very much with this Bill, but it does seem to me that if any function at all in connection with this Act is to be discharged by the courts, it is the approval of the bonds. In case of default, the most expeditious and convenient way would be to apply to one of the judges of the provinces to have another bondsman substituted, so that this machinery might be kept in proper shape.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I do not quite agree that that would be the most convenient way. I am satisfied that there is some official of the Government to-day who deals with the approval of security much more expeditiously than any court could. I do not know just what department of the Government looks after this work, but securities are being passed on almost daily. Under subsection 4 some official has to be designated for the purpose of examining and accepting the security if approved. I fancy he will be familiar with all classes of security. I am satisfied that in practice the security will be that of a guarantee company. It may be that in some cases a private bond will be submitted, but I doubt very much whether the Government would accept a private bond. The Ontario Government does not. It used to, but now it will only accept the bond of a guarantee company. That has been found much more satisfactory, and I think that practice will be followed by the Dominion Government.

Mr. McKENZIE: Why, then, does not the minister specify that it shall be the bond of a guarantee company?

Mr. GUTHRIE: The Bill does not insist on that. It says the bond shall be to the satisfaction of the Governor in Council. I am not sure that the Governor in Council has prescribed any particular form of bond in regard to the public service of Canada, but I know that in the vast majority of cases the security is in the shape of bonds of a guarantee company. In Ontario the only security that will be accepted in these cases is the bond of guarantee companies. What the rule is here I am not prepared to say at present, but it must be to the satisfaction of the Governor in Council. I have no doubt that the official designated under subsection 4 will see that the security is in proper form.

Mr. McKENZIE: I have the greatest possible respect for the present or for any Governor in Council. I know that there are a great many large questions engaging their attention, and these gentlemen are usually very busy, and I can hardly conceive that they will be able to give the necessary attention to ascertain whether or not the security is adequate. I do not believe they will have the time to devote to matters of that kind, and that is why I say that a judge sitting in chambers or in court whose particular business it is to consider questions such as this should be the proper functionary to deal with this matter. However, if the minister can assure us that the security will be absolute and that the trustees, after receiving the money of the creditors, will not abscond, depriving men of the few dollars coming to them out of the estates, I would not be very greatly concerned. I do not think the Government of the day, or indeed any government, can have any particular knowledge about securities, for government officials who have to do with the taking of bonds have come to me and asked my opinion of men in different parts of the country, as to whether their bonds should be accepted. If they had machinery of their own I do not think they would have bothered me. I do not wish to repeat, but I would urge on the minister the great necessity of seeing that the operations of this Bill will not be farcical and that there will be no dishonesty and corruption.

Mr. GUTHRIE: In the drafting of the Bill we thought we were making assurance doubly sure by providing in the next subsection that there shall be a double security—not only the original security of $10,000 but the security of each individual estate. I think the security has been made absolute.

Mr. COCKSHUTT: Would not the fact that the Governor in Council is the custodian of the security indicate that the Government is the proper authority to release the security when it is assured that the obligations of the trustee have been fulfilled? It appears to me that the security is quite safe when deposited with the Governor in Council.

Mr. McKENZIE: But the bond may or may not be good.

Mr. COCKSHUTT: The Bill provides that the security will be absolute. It will be a trust company or bond company whose credit is beyond reproach. If the suggestion of the hon. member were followed the court sitting in the district would give orders to the security holders in Ottawa to release the funds, and we would have the anomaly of the smaller commanding the greater body. The fact that the security is with the Governor in Council seems to me to lay the onus on the Governor in Council to see that the bonds are not released until all funds have been paid over satisfactorily.

Mr. McKENZIE: My hon. friend does not quite understand my objection. If the minister will see that it is to be a guarantee company or some form of security that is absolutely permanent and secure, I have no fault to find. But my objection is that the Governor in Council may be imposed upon to accept a bond signed by two or three bondsmen who are not good, or who, though they may be all right to-day, may be insolvent themselves to-morrow. If I were looking for a bondsman in the town of Brantford I would very much prefer the hon. member's judgment than that of the Government as to whether or not that bondsman were satisfactory, because he would have specific knowledge.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I can assure the hon. member that the Government will see to it that the security is absolutely good and permanent.

Mr. JACOBS: I do not see anything in the Bill providing that in the event of the trustee's failure to carry out all his undertakings the security given to the registrar is to be turned over at once to the substituted trustee. Subsection 8 has no reference to this matter. Perhaps it is in another part of the Bill, but I think it is the intention of the Bill that this security should be turned over to some person acting on behalf of the creditors.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I do not understand what my hon. friend means. There is a provision for the removal of a trustee. Section 15 provides:—

> An authorized trustee may be removed and another substituted or an additional authorized trustee may be appointed for cause, by the court.

Mr. JACOBS: That is not the question. The trustee when appointed is obliged to give a second security by bond or otherwise to the registrar that he will carry out his undertakings. Should he abscond with all the assets of the estate there is no provision whereby the new trustee can make application to the registrar for the payment of any security which the absconding trustee has put up.

Mr. GUTHRIE: It is to be assumed that if there is a shortage or default the registrar can enforce the bond.

Mr. JACOBS: For the benefit of the creditors?

Mr. GUTHRIE: Yes.

Mr. JACOBS: That is the spirit of the Bill, but I do not see any clear provision to that effect. Of course, it is clearly understood that the creditors have no interest in the first security of $10,000. That will be turned over to the Secretary of State or some proper official and will form part of the consolidated revenue fund for that year. It is with regard to the second security I am inquiring.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Does my hon. friend suggest that the clause should go further, and say that the registrar shall enforce the bond for the benefit of the estate?

Mr. JACOBS: Yes.

Mr. GUTHRIE: That is a necessary implication. We need not express it in language, but I have no objection to doing so. Otherwise there would be no object in the bond.

Mr. JACOBS: It properly comes under subsection 8.

Mr. H. H. McLEAN: I think that the position taken by the Solicitor General is absolutely correct. These official bonds are given to the officers of the court and the officers of the court, on default, by order of the court, will sue on the bonds for the moneys which, upon recovery, are paid to the credit of the estate. That is the practice in regard to official bonds of that description. We have very many cases of that kind and there has never been any difficulty in working it out in a practical way. It would not be necessary to add the clause suggested by the hon. member (Mr. Jacobs). It seems to be sufficiently stated in the clause in the Bill. The bond can be enforced by the officers of the court subject to the direction of the court.

Mr. GUTHRIE: We might add the words:

> And the said bonds shall be enforceable by the registrar for the benefit of the said estate.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: The section specifically says that the bond:

> For the due accounting and payment over and transfer of all moneys and properties received or to be received by him as such trustee in respect of the estate of such debtor.

You might as well put a clause in stating that in the event of default you should have power to collect the bond. It is absolutely unnecessary.

Mr. JACOBS: But the registrar is the officer of the court and if the money is recovered by him, without any specific instruction, he may be obliged to turn it over to the provincial government or to the court proper. I think the suggestion made by the Solicitor General will be satisfactory.

Subsection agreed to.

On subsection 8—additional security to be given by trustee:

Mr. GUTHRIE: The amendment proposed would have to be made to this subsection and I think we had better let it stand until I have drafted the amendment.

Subsection 8 allowed to stand.

On subsection 9—meeting to be called if security not given:

An hon. MEMBER: Read.

The CHAIRMAN: If it be the desire of the Committee that I read the clauses, I am quite willing to do so, but, as the Bill consists of some 66 pages and has already been considered by a special committee, I do not think the Committee will ask the Chairman to do more than he is required to by the practice and the rules. According to May, page 369, the practice in England is:

> The Chairman proceeds to read the number of each clause, which is thus brought under the consideration of the committee.

Bourinot, page 522, says:

> The chairman usually calls out the number of each clause, and reads the marginal note, but he should give the clause at length when it is demanded by the committee.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Hear, hear.

The CHAIRMAN: It must be demanded by the Committee and not by one individual member. I am quite willing to meet the views of the Committee, and if the Committee so desires, I shall read the clauses.

Mr. JACOBS: We like to hear your voice, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: After the consideration of this Bill was commenced, I noticed that six or seven clauses were disposed of inside of five minutes. This is a very important Bill and the members have the right to have the clauses read in order that they can follow them properly. It is important legislation.

The CHAIRMAN: Is it the desire of the Committee that the clauses shall be read?

Some hon. MEMBERS: Yes.

Some hon. MEMBERS: No.

The CHAIRMAN: In my opinion the nays have it.

Mr. McKENZIE: As the Chairman is not reading the clauses, I suppose the members will have to read them in the presence of the Committee so that we will hear what the clauses are and have some conception of their consecutive order and effect. It is impossible to enact laws by reading the numbers of clauses or the marginal notes. We are warned in the Interpretation Act that no Act is to be interpreted by the marginal note. It is almost impossible to understand a clause, paragraph, or subsection by reading the numbers 8, or 7, or 5. While I fully agree with the Chair that he should not always read the clauses, I think that when there is a specific demand for the reading of any one clause, the Chairman should exercise his discretion and read it. This clause is:

> Unless the creditors, either at the first meeting, or at a meeting convened by notice—

Mr. GUTHRIE: That is subsection 8. We are now at subsection 9.

Mr. McKENZIE: Very well; subsection 9 reads:

> Should the trustee be unable or fail to give the security required, in the manner and within the time hereinbefore provided, he shall within ten days from the expiration of the said thirty days, by notice in writing, convene a meeting of creditors for the purpose of appointing a new authorized trustee, and should he neglect or refuse to call such meeting, he shall be guilty of an offence and subject to the penalties provided by this Act.

That seems to be all right.

Mr. LEVI THOMSON: Provided the trustees fail to perform that duty, who is punishable; what is going to happen?

Mr. GUTHRIE: There are penalties.

Mr. LEVI THOMSON: There are penalties, but penalties will not help matters. Is there any other provision for calling a meeting and electing a trustee?

Mr. GUTHRIE: Yes, there is provision for calling the creditors together and electing a new trustee.

Subsection agreed to.

On subsection 11—security surrendered:

Mr. GUTHRIE: There is a question in regard to subsection 11 which I might mention to the Committee. Some of the commercial bodies take the view that the trustee should not be released or securities surrendered, until there should be a final accounting which would satisfy the court that the trustee had properly fulfilled all his obligations. Perhaps subsection 11 had better stand until a little more consideration can be given to the amendment which has been proposed to the end which I have just indicated.

Subsection 11 allowed to stand.

On section 15, subsection (1)—new trustee may be substituted:

Mr. H. H. McLEAN: I would suggest to the Solicitor General that he take into consideration the advisability of making the following amendment to subsection 1 of section 15:

Also that creditors representing more than three-quarters in amount of the proved debt may, subject to the approval of the court, appoint any person or corporation in place of the official trustee.

The point I want to make is this: As the Bill now stands the creditors only have the power, if they wish to change the trustee, to appoint another official trustee. In other words, the control of insolvent estates is absolutely given to a class designated as official trustees who are appointed by Order in Council. In my own province of New Brunswick, which is a small province, and you can see the difficulty and hardship which would occur there. Probably the only men that would qualify and give the $10,000 security required live in the cities of Fredericton, Moncton, or St. John. The cases of insolvency that are frequent there are those of traders in the remote towns of the province—it may be a lumber business carried on in the upper parts of the province, or a fishing business—a particular type or class of business followed in a particular locality some two or three hundred miles from the cities I have mentioned. Suppose in that county there is an official trustee whom the creditors wish to remove; he may be counsel or lawyer for one of the parties, and because of that, or for some other reason, is absolutely disqualified. Now if the creditors want to appoint another trustee they would have to select one in a city where such a trustee could be found, located some two or three hundred miles away. The Committee can understand what an enormous additional expense would be incurred in connection with a small estate in a case of that kind. As to chartered accountants, there is in the province of Ontario a large class of such qualified men, or trustee companies. In my province I only know of one chartered accountant and he is so very busy that it would be difficult for him to give attention in a case of this kind, even if he were appointed. Therefore, I think it would be advisable to adopt this amendment, so that creditors representing three-fourths in value of the estate should in these particular cases have the right to appoint a trustee to manage the estate. The Committee must remember that when a man becomes insolvent his property is vested in the creditors. They become the owners of the property and on proving the debt are given the right to control it. Now, you say, by this proposed legislation, "You have the control, but if you do not like the official trustee you can appoint another person, but he must be an official trustee also." Why should you not leave to the creditors themselves the right of selection and let them appoint whom they think fit?

Mr. FRIPP: What person is desiginated by the words "official trustee?" Does that mean a trustee appointed by the creditors, or the official trustee?

Mr. H. H. McLEAN (Royal): The official trustee.

Mr. GUTHRIE: The interpretation clause gives the following definition:

One of the persons appointed by the Governor in Council under authority of this Act as proper persons to be trustees in bankruptcy, or otherwise hereunder, or one of such persons named in a receiving order or in an authorized assignment to act, or who is otherwise hereunder authorized to act, as a trustee in bankruptcy, or under an authorized assignment.

And so forth. That is the definition of an "authorized trustee."

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR (Guysborough): Is the debtor free to use his own trustee if he does not wish to accept the official trustee?

Mr. GUTHRIE: No.

Mr. MOWAT: Where does the hon. gentleman propose to insert the words contained in his amendment?

Mr. H. H. McLEAN: At the end of the subsection after the words "has been made." I wish to ask the Solicitor-General if I am correct in saying that the creditors can only appoint an official trustee?

Mr. GUTHRIE: Personally I have no objection to the amendment. I would point out however that it impairs the symmetry of the Bill as drafted, and may involve us in difficulties as we proceed. I must remind the Committee that the drafting of this Bill has been a highly technical undertaking. The various sections are very much co-related, and if we disturb one we are apt to disturb a good deal of the structure of the Bill. Mr. O'Connor, who was largely concerned in the drafting is otherwise engaged for a while this afternoon, and I would like to discuss the amendment with him before I give an opinion in regard to it.

Mr. H. H. McLEAN: I have no objection so long as the Solicitor General will take the matter into consideration, but I would like to see an amendment drafted embodying the views which I have expressed. I have gone over the Bill carefully and if I can assist him in the drafting I will be very glad to do so.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I know my hon. friend is very experienced in such matters, and if he would draft his amendment I will give it the very best consideration.

Mr. McKENZIE: All I have to say in regard to the proposition is that in Nova Scotia we had a provincial insolvency law which contained a provision such as the hon. gentleman (Mr. McLean) has suggested, and by reason of the way in which it was abused the provision was repealed and we reverted to the condition under which only a regularly appointed trustee can be chosen to manage the estate. We found that in certain sections fictitious accounts would be made out. Certain parties would get together and create the 4 p.m. condition under which they appeared to own more than half the value of the estate, and in any case where they wished to do so, would override the other parties concerned and appoint their own man. I am simply stating that so that the Solicitor-General may know that in our province the experiment has been tried and abandoned.

Mr. GUTHRIE: There has been considerable difficulty in Ontario on the same question.

Mr. MOWAT: Before the amendment is further considered, let me point out a trouble which may arise and which we endeavoured to avoid when considering the Bill in Committee. Suppose there were two or three large creditors of an insolvent. They might vote in an outsider, who was friendly to them, and they might get away with the state in that way; whereas if the management is left to an authorized trustee, his reputation and business will be such as to render him absolutely unprejudiced and not favourable to one party or the other. It was brought up in Committee, when the Bill was under consideration, that one or two powerful or influential creditors might influence the winding up of the estate so that the small creditors would come out at the small end of the horn.

Mr. COCKSHUTT: If I understood the hon. member for Royal (Mr. McLean) correctly, he believes that one creditor, who might own three-fourths of the liabilities, and wished to change the trustee, should be able to do so. We have already adopted a clause that I think would interfere with that, and which requires that there should be a majority of the creditors, in such a case, as well as two-thirds of the amount of the debts involved. Surely it would be putting a great deal of power in the hands of one creditor to do as suggested. He might happen to be a very large creditor, but the others might be very much less able to lose the amount at their disposal than the big fellow who would probably swing the estate as he wished, and control everything if he individually was allowed to appoint a trustee. It appears to me there ought to be some safeguard in connection with this matter, and it should not be in the power of one individual, who may be the largest creditor, to swing the whole thing as he pleases.

Mr. McLEAN: In drafting the amendment that objection can be easily met. I think the Bill should contain a provision that the creditors—a majority if you wish—should take control of the debtor's estate and put it in the hands of any person they think would be capable of winding it up to the best advantage. Such a provision would be especially applicable in my province, because, as I mentioned, we have not a sufficient number of skilled people to draw on in cases of this nature, and in out of the way places it would be necessary to secure a local man possessing the necessary qualifications. I think the principle is correct; the estate belongs to the creditors, and they should have control of it, rather than the Government should put A. B. in control because they have appointed him an official trustee. Under the old Act there was never any difficulty about the assignees appointed by the creditors; the difficulty always was with the official assignee. He was the man who made away with the estate.

Mr. FRIPP: He got all the estate.

Mr. McLEAN: When the official assignee got control of an estate you could not get an accounting from him.

Mr. DAVIDSON: Is it the intention of the hon. member for Royal (Mr. McLean) that this trustee, appointed by a majority of the creditors, should give two bonds?

Mr. McLEAN: Yes, it is already provided for I think by section 14, but we can see that the other sections are sufficient to require that the trustee appointed shall give the necessary security.

Mr. GUTHRIE: My hon. friend (Mr. McLean) states that the creditors should be put in control. That is not altogether the intent of this Bill. The object of a Bankruptcy Bill is to protect the debtor too, and, unlike any provincial legislation on the subject, this Bill provides under certain conditions for the discharge of the debtor, and the trustee has to represent the debtor in these matters, so that he is not altogether a trustee for the creditors. In fact, it has been argued that one great object to be attained by a Bankruptcy Act in Canada is the discharge of the honest debtor, and the trustee must act for him in that connection. However, in framing the clauses in regard to the appointment of trustees and the security to be given by them the Committee was influenced not only by representations made by Canadian mercantile bodies, but also by the arguments of exporters from Great Britain. Delegations representing them called upon me, and they were very insistent upon the question of official trustees with undoubted security. They say that as a rule they are minority creditors, and their experience in Canada has been very disappointing, that many times where dividends were declared out of small estates they got nothing—the dividends were never paid. They think our legislation in the various provinces has been highly deficient, and I must say that they are perhaps more insistent than any other mercantile interest doing business in Canada.

Mr. McLEAN: But in England they allow creditors to appoint trustees.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Every appointment in England must be submitted to the court for ratification.

Mr. McLEAN: We can have a similar provision in this case.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Those exporters say that if something is not done to regulate insolvency proceedings in Canada, it is ultimately going to injure our credit. The Committee had these matters brought before them and were very much impressed by that state of affairs, and I have no doubt that in framing these sections the main idea was to have an official class of trustees thoroughly approved and thoroughly secured. I would not like to see any departure from the course adopted by the Committee, but I appreciate the reasonableness of my hon. friend's contention, and if he will let me have his amendment I will consider it.

Mr. COPP: I was not present yesterday afternoon when this Bill was under discussion, and the Solicitor-General may have made the explanation that I am asking for now. I think a great deal depends upon my hon. friend's suggestion as to how many authorized assignees are appointed in the province or how closely they are located.

Mr. GUTHRIE: The committee purposely refrained from placing any limit. We do not know, and we will not know, until we gain experience, just how many trustees will be necessary to administer this Bill. It was supposed that one or two in each county might be sufficient, but of course in large centres more would be required. However, the door is wide open; any man can make his application, state his qualifications, and give his security. I do not know how many will apply. This strange situation might arise: After this legislation is enacted no man may apply; then there is no machinery for carrying out the provisions of the Act. I will have to make a suggestion in that regard, that the Act do not come into force until proclamation by the Governor in Council, because machinery will have to be adopted after the Bill is passed, forms will have to be prepared and rules of practice prescribed, and we will have to see to it that an adequate number of qualified trustees are available.

Mr. PROULX: What will be the form of security, by private surety or security bond?

Mr. GUTHRIE: There is nothing in the Bill to preclude private sureties, but the bond has to be to the satisfaction of the Governor in Council. In Ontario the practice of the Government has done away with all private sureties.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: Do I understand the minister to say that no trustee will be appointed unless he applies for the position?

Mr. GUTHRIE: He must himself apply to the Secretary of State.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: That is a curious way of dealing with the matter. The best men would probably not apply, and I think our experience would be that some worthless fellow who wants to get a job would apply, and if his was the only application the minister would be bound to give the appointment to him, I suppose?

Mr. GUTHRIE: No, his application has to be approved.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: It strikes me that provision should be made for appointments by the Governor in Council where no application was received. I notice that the districts are very large, a whole province is a district, and the trustee may reside five or six hundred miles away from the greater number of creditors. I think that difficulties will arise under such circumstances. It seems to me it would be preferable to have a trustee in each county.

Mr. MORPHY: Not having read the whole Bill and not having been a member of the Committee, I find a good deal of difficulty. But I think the hon. member for Royal made a very strong point, namely, that conditions might arise entailing a great deal of expense travelling over long distances and so forth in the conduct of the bankruptcy proceedings, both for the authorized trustee and others whose duty it would be to attend. It seems to me that the greatest security both to debtor and creditors would be ensured by providing that three-quarters, in number, of the shareholders might ask for the appointment of a trustee. Subsection 2 of section 15 says:

> An authorized trustee may be removed and another substituted or an additional authorized trustee may be appointed for cause, by the court.

Why should not the member for Royal have, under that section, by an application to the court, all the remedies which he seeks, for cause? Is there anything to show what is "for cause" in this Act? If for any cause, then the Act can be worked out as it stands. I think that three-quarters, in number, of those present at a meeting might apply to the court having jurisdiction in the locality and thus bring about the very thing that the member for Royal desires. In that case, owing to the way this Act is framed, you would have to provide that such changed trustee should be compelled to give the same security as is provided for trustees under the Act.

Mr. FRIPP: That would not seem to me to be the proper reading of subsection 2. Surely it is intended that the court shall appoint only where there is a failure on the part of the creditors to appoint. The creditors are to appoint the trustee; if for any reason they fail to appoint, application for the appointment of a trustee is made to the court. If this is not the proper interpretation of the subsection, there might be two trustees, one appointed by the creditors and one appointed by the court.

Mr. JACOBS: I would have no objection to the suggestion of the member for Royal if the trustee named by the creditors would submit to the rules laid down in this Bill with regard to trustees generally; that is, give security to the registrar and become, so to speak, an ad hoc trustee. As the Solicitor General observes, we have a large number of rules dealing with the obligation of the trustee, one of which is to examine the debtor and to report to the court concerning the method of administration of his business, and generally, to act in a sort of quasi-judicial capacity. Take the case of a man who has been carrying on a large business. He owes, say, a million dollars, $750,000 of which is due to the bank. Under the suggestion made by the member for Royal the bank could oust the regular trustee from that estate and put in one of their clerks or office boys. The debtor requires the assistance of the trustee for the purpose of placing his case before the court, and indicating that he was carrying on his business honestly. The trustee must act as between the debtor and the creditor; consequently it would not be right to give to one person the entire management and administration of an estate. The hon. gentleman also suggested that in remote districts of a province it would be a difficult matter for the trustee to attend. But it is not necessary that the trustee should camp on the premises of the debtor. In suits at law the parties go before the courts in the principal towns of the province. In all cases of importance that arise in the hon. gentleman's own province, the litigants go to Fredericton, St. John, or Moncton, for the purpose of obtaining justice. There is no reason why the estate of a debtor in the villages of say Blackville or Doaktown in New Brunswick could not be properly administered from St. John. It is not necessary that the trustee visit the premises, unless it be to find out how the debtor carried on his business—and that could be done by a detective, I fancy. If the trustee wanted to know something concerning the manner in which the debtor managed his business, he could have the debtor visit him at the town where he, the trustee, happens to reside; then put the debtor through his courses and get the required information. It would be a mistake to depart from the rule laid down in the Bill that every trustee appointed is to be an official trustee and clothed with certain powers.

Mr. LOGGIE: In a county like Northumberland, where the towns of Blackville and Doaktown are located, probably there would be only one official trustee who could fulfil the conditions and give the necessary security. If the creditors thought that some other gentleman than the official trustee should handle the estate, apparently no provision to that end could be made unless some one could undertake to give security for $10,000. It seems to me that we would not go very far afield if we provided, that in cases where creditors representing seventy-five per cent of the total claims so desired, some other gentleman might be appointed to handle the estate. I realize that a trustee so appointed should give security, though perhaps not so large a sum as that involved in the general security. There is another point. In many country districts there are estates in connection with which the liabilities do not exceed $1,000. If an official trustee acted in cases of that kind, a great part of the estate might be eaten up in costs. Besides, another clause of the Bill provides that if the official trustee is not satisfied with his percentage of the assets of the company he need not act, unless some creditor gives him so much money to go on with the work. It does seem to me it would be proper to relieve estates having liabilities of not more than $1,000 from the operation of this Act altogether, and let them come under the provincial Act.

Subsection stands.

On subsection 5—trustee not bound to act unless tendered fees and disbursements:

Mr. LOGGIE: This is the other subsection I had reference to. I think the trustee should be bound, no matter how small the estate, for his five per cent, if that is the rate, because every estate may not be remunerative as far as the official trustee is concerned.

Mr. NESBITT: This subsection says that if the estate is not sufficient to provide the necessary disbursements and a reasonable remuneration, the trustee need not act. He would hardly want to act if the estate would not pay the disbursements.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Quite so. I have known estates which have not paid the trustee's fee and the cost of advertising.

Mr. LOGGIE: The provincial Act should apply in cases of that kind.

Subsection agreed to.

On section 17, subsection 3—to insure property of debtor:

Mr. JACOBS: I think it would be well to add to this subsection after the word "situate," in the last line, the following words, "and in all things to act as a prudent administrator." I do not think the subsection as it stands goes far enough.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I cannot see what advantage there would be in adopting the proposed amendment. The language is very specific:

> The trustee shall . . . . . insure and keep insured in his official name until sold or disposed of by him all the insurable property of the debtor, to the full insurable value thereof, in insurance companies licensed under the laws of the province wherein the insured property is situated.

Mr. JACOBS: But suppose he does not take reasonable care of the property turned over to him—the care the average man is obliged to take of his own property. I think we should hold the trustee responsible.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I think he would be responsible. I think it would rather derogate from his position to add those words.

Mr. JACOBS: The law of the province of Quebec declares what the duties of the trustee shall be, and obliges him to act as a prudent administrator.

Mr. MOWAT: The subsection says "Insurance companies licensed under the laws of the province." Now some companies are licensed under the Dominion.

Mr. GUTHRIE: To do business in the province.

Mr. NESBITT: Yes, I think it means licensed to do business in the province.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: The subsection says that the trustee shall insure "unless otherwise directed in writing by the inspectors." I cannot imagine a case where it would not be necessary for the trustee to insure.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I can imagine a case where in the opinion of the inspector it might not be necessary to insure, if the risk was slight and the insurance very expensive.

Mr. JACOBS: If it was an asbestos business, insurance would not be required.

Mr. MOWAT: Every Dominion company has a provincial license, as I understand it, but in the John Deere case it was held that a Dominion company need not take out a provincial license. The trustee by this subsection would be bound to insure the property in a provincial company, whereas our best companies are Dominion companies.

Mr. GUTHRIE: They may have taken out a provincial license.

Mr. MOWAT: But they are not required to do so.

Mr. McMASTER: I beg to move to strike out the words "licensed under the laws of" and to substitute therefor the words "duly authorized to carry on business in."

Amendment agreed to.

Section as amended agreed to.

On Section 19, subsection 1—Trustee to have right to sell patented articles.

Mr. McMASTER: I do not understand the import of this clause. Is it to give the trustee more right to dispose of patented articles than the original holder has? That seems to me to be the meaning of it.

Mr. GUTHRIE: That is the meaning. A case was tried in the West in which the debtor was limited by his contract to sell patented articles at a certain price. He became insolvent and the question arose whether his assignee would be bound by that price. and it was held that he was not.

Mr. McMASTER: Is that consonant with legal principles? If I manufacture something and have the right to say to the dealer. "You shall sell at such a price," and the dealer becomes insolvent, is it right that the trustee in charge of his estate shall be relieved from the debtor's contract with me, and shall have rights in the goods which the original debtor had not? It seems to me that you are attacking contract.

Mr. GUTHRIE: The courts have declared it to be right in the case I have mentioned, —in re the Berlin Gramophone Record Company, tried in Calgary or somewhere in the West.

Mr. JACOBS: I may tell my friend from Brome that if this clause were not inserted the trustee would possibly never be able to sell the goods at all.

Mr. GUTHRIE: That is the idea.

Mr. JACOBS: He has to sell at auction, and must sell to the highest bidder.

On Section 20—Powers exercisable by trustee with permission of inspectors.

Mr. COPP: Are the inspectors also creditors in all cases?

Mr. GUTHRIE: They are to be appointed by the creditors at a meeting of the creditors are themselves creditors.

Mr. COPP: Is there not some danger in that? If the inspectors are creditors of the estate and are able to give permission to trustees to sell the property by private contract they might very well buy it themselves.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I think there is a prohibition against that in the Act.

Mr. COPP: I do not see that.

Mr. GUTHRIE: It was argued that this power should only be exercised by the creditors, but in a country like Canada where distances are so great it is very difficult and expensive to have a full meeting of creditors; otherwise I would have favoured the idea that creditors should authorize the sale. The creditors can do so if they see fit at the first meeting, but as a rule the sale is not authorized at the first meeting. Creditors will be more careful in future in the appointment of the inspectors.

On section 26, subsection 1,—Property not to be removed from province.

Mr. FRIPP: Is the Solicitor General taking the responsibility for these clauses being right? We have not time to read them, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I have given the best care and attention I can to the Bill, but a special committee dealt with these questions very exhaustively. Most of the provisions are taken from the English Act; some are modified and some are new. The Bill has been in print for a long time and I assumed that it was thoroughly read. However, I see no objection to our taking time to do so now.

Mr. MAHARG: Does the Solicitor General think that an Act that has been proved satisfactory in an old country like England will be equally satisfactory in a comparatively new country with large areas yet to be developed? That point should be carefully considered. I see certain sections, passed apparently without the consideration of the House, that will not be at all satisfactory to newer parts of the country and will no doubt be objected to, and provincial legislation will probably have to be enacted to annul them, if this House persists in passing them at this time.

Mr. MOWAT: We usually look upon my hon. friend (Mr. Maharg) as representing the farmers' interests. The farmer is excepted from the operation of the Act. Does my hon. friend say that he makes use of this somewhat threatening language after consultation with commercial bodies?

Mr. MAHARG: While I am credited with being the representative of the agriculturists, our body does not take that narrow view in any instance whatever. We are anxious to promote the good of the whole country. We have thousands of men throughout our own province who, if the terms of this Act are taken advantage of, would be put out of business. They come there with very little capital. There are many times when, at the wish or whim of any creditor, a man who owed $200 could be forced into bankruptcy—at the expense of the agriculturists, if you like to narrow it down to that, in a particular district.

Section agreed to.

On section 27—continuance of business by trustee:

Mr. McMASTER: By whom will the trustee be directed to continue the business?

Mr. GUTHRIE: The inspectors have power under section 20 to authorize the trustee to continue the business. He can only do so under the limitations of subsections (a) and (b).

Section agreed to.

On section 28, subsection 2—how claims are to rank where different estates:

Mr. CANNON: I think that subsection is a direct infringement of civil rights in the province of Quebec. I do not see how this law and our law in Quebec can be reconcilable.

Mr. GUTHRIE: That may be the effect of it. The subsection is pretty plainly worded:

> If any debtor who has made an authorized assignment or against whom a receiving order has been made, owes or owed debts both individually and as a member of one or more different co-partnerships, the claims shall rank first upon the estate by which the debts they represent were contracted, and shall only rank upon the other or others after all the creditors of such other estate or estates have been paid in full.

If the converse of that proposition is, as stated, the law of the province of Quebec, it would be an infringement upon what is known as property and civil rights, but that is only in so far as the administration of the estates of insolvents is concerned. To the extent proposed, I think, under the authorities, we have the right to go.

Mr. CANNON: I understand that under our constitution this Parliament has the right to legislate as to insolvency and bankruptcy, but the right of the Federal Parliament is limited to anything outside of civil rights. Everything that appertains to civil rights is given by our constitution to the provinces, and if this Parliament should legislate concerning civil rights in Quebec I do not think the law would be constitutional.

Mr. GUTHRIE: The hon. gentleman was not in the House last night when I gave the leading authority on the question at issue. It has been held by the judicial committee of the Privy Council in a number of cases that while it is to some extent an infringement upon the rights of property and civil rights in the various provinces, the fact that power has been conferred upon the Federal Parliament to pass legislation in respect to bankruptcy and insolvency, confers upon it the further right to take any incidental steps that may be necessary, or to infringe upon civil rights or property rights in so far as it may be necessary to give effect to bankruptcy and insolvency legislation, but no further. The case that is the leading case on the subject arose thirty or forty years ago in the province of Quebec, and it was specifically decided when, under the Insolvency Act of 1875, the defence was set up in a particular case that certain provisions of the Act were an infringement upon property and civil rights in the province of Quebec. The judicial committee held that that was undoubtedly so, but that it was a necessary consequence of the provision of the British North America Act, which gave to this Parliament authority to pass this legislation. We are not seeking to infringe on the rights of any province more than is necessary to give effect and validity to the particular legislation now in question.

Section agreed to.

On section 29—settlement and preferences.

Mr. FRIPP: I would like to lodge my protest against section 29. It is altogether too drastic. I have not had time to consider it, but it seems to me that if it passes it will be impossible for anybody to make any provision for his family whatsoever.

Mr. GUTHRIE: This is a very technical section and will require study and deliberation. After he has had an opportunity of considering it, I am satisfied that my hon. friend (Mr. Fripp) will conclude that all bona fide and valuable settlements are protected. Certain others are not protected. As sections 29 to 33, inclusive, are very important and involve a great many considerations, I suggest that they stand in the meantime. I trust that the Committee will in the interval familiarize itself with these sections, as they cannot be digested with a hasty reading . They are difficult. I therefore beg to move:—

> That the consideration of sections 29 to 33, both inclusive, be postponed.

Motion agreed to.

On section 36 subsection (1)—Insolvent corporations.

Mr. GUTHRIE: This subsection is an innovation so far as the Bankruptcy Law of this country is concerned. We have made the present Bill apply to all corporations in Canada with the exception of banks, trust companies, insurance companies and railways. Hitherto, as the Committee is aware, proceedings for the winding-up of corporations have taken place under the Winding-Up Acts. There have been very grave complaints from time to time that the procedure under these Acts is very tedious and very expensive, and it has been considered that a much cheaper mode of winding them up could be had under the simple provisions of the present Bill. To that end we have incorporated in this Bill the main or important provisions of the Winding-Up Acts and have endeavoured to harmonize them with the general principle of the Bill. To that extent this is a radical change from the legislation introduced last year when this clause was not before the Committee.

Mr. FRIPP: Do I understand that these sections practically incorporate what we have been working under under the Winding-Up Acts?

Mr. GUTHRIE: Yes, modified in some cases, and where the sections have been modified it is noted at the end.

Mr. FRIPP: So the trustee practically proceeds as though he were acting under the Winding-Up Act?

Mr. GUTHRIE: Yes.

On subsection 6—Demand on contributory by trustee.

Mr. McKENZIE: May I ask if there is anything embodied here except a transfer of the provisions of the Winding-Up Act?

Mr. GUTHRIE: This is a new provision and the reason for it is this: Under the Winding-Up Act the liquidator was an officer of the court and he, as such, settled the list of contributories. As soon as that list was settled it was returned to the court and was practically a judgment. That has to be altered, because there is no liquidator in this case, and the proceedings whereby the trustee settles the list of the contributories now follow.

Subsection agreed to.

On subsection (8)—Recovery of amount from the contributory.

Mr. McKENZIE: Is there a right of appeal from the decision that may be made by the trustee? The subsection as worded would indicate that the trustee had power to make a judgment that would be binding.

Mr. GUTHRIE: This subsection has been somewhat criticised. It says:

> If at the expiration of thirty days from the date of the service of such demand the contributory has not paid to the trustee the required amount, the trustee may, with the approval of the inspectors of the estate, institute in a court having jurisdiction in debt to such amount, an action or other proceeding for the recovery thereof.

The trustee has to sue under this provision, and has to avail himself of the ordinary remedies of the court. Under the Winding-Up Act the proceedings as to the list of contributories took place under the liquidation proceedings and when the list was settled it became a judgment. In the meantime appeals could be had. If any contributory was dissatisfied or objected to his name being on the list, under the provisions of the Winding-Up Act, he could go on appealing, but under this provision the trustee settles the list of contributories. A contributory may object and may serve notice of objection and the trustee may hear him. When the trustee settles the list he makes a demand on the contributory for the amount that is due. If the contributory refuses payment the trustee has to bring an action in the courts just as in the case of an ordinary action for debt.

5 p.m.

Mr. McKENZIE: I have no objection to find with the procedure if all the means of defence that a debtor or shareholder can enjoy are open to him, but I would not like him to be limited by any finding the trustee may make.

Mr. GUTHRIE: The only limitation is under subsection (7) which we have just passed, which requires that a man who objects to payment and proposes to defend shall give notice of the grounds of his defence to the trustee, and he shall not thereafter in an action set up a new defence.

Mr. FRIPP: I think this is an improvement on the Winding-Up Act.

Mr. GUTHRIE: It has been suggested that we should allow a trustee to act practically as a judge and settle the list as if he were a liquidator, but a liquidator acts directly under the control of the court, and a trustee does not to the same extent. I therefore think that the trustee should be permitted both to fix the amount and pronounce the judgment. The creditor who may say. " You are acting under a wrong impression.

I do not owe this money," should have a right to defend the action, and that right the Bill gives him.

Subsection agreed to.

On subsection (9)—Excessive or unjust demands.

Mr. GUTHRIE: This is a case where a contributory who says the amount claimed from him is in excess of what is required to liquidate the estate can apply to the court.

Mr. MORPHY: By action or by ex-parte application?

Mr. GUTHRIE: It would be by application under the rules for an order of the court.

On subsection 10—Order of Court.

Mr. JACOBS: I am not in favour of permitting this subsection to remain in the Bill. It says:

> If the court considers the demand to be grossly excessive or unjust it may order the trustee to pay personally the costs of any such application.

As I understand it, the trustee acts under the instructions of the inspectors, and it would not be wise to have this subsection remain as it is. The trustee is an officer of the court acting under instructions, and a clause of this kind may sometimes have the effect of preventing him from doing what his duty requires him to do.

I cannot conceive of a case where the trustee would make an excessive or unjust claim upon any party. He is merely acting in his capacity as trustee, he has nothing to gain by it, and what would be his object in so acting? He might be removed by the court at the request of the creditors or of the inspectors if he does anything which he has no right to do. But why single him out in this particular case and say: "If you do this—the act complained of in the section—you will be obliged personally to pay the cost?" While in connection with all the other acts he may do in winding up the estate there is no such penalty. I move that the clause be struck out.

Mr. GUTHRIE: The object of the clause is to prevent the trustee acting as against any particular contributory spitefully or maliciously to embarrass him. It was suggested that a trustee might harass a contributory by excessive demands, and, if so, the court should have power to review, by saying: "You have made an excessive and unjust demand upon this contributory, and any expenses he has incurred by your so doing you ought to pay." I do not see much object in retaining the clause, and I leave it to the Committee.

Mr. JACOBS: It is not in the English Act, and therefore I think we ought not to make experiments.

Mr. DAVIDSON: Is this to make the trustee pay if the contributory fails to pay?

Mr. GUTHRIE: No, this is against the trustee personally if he act maliciously or without good faith.

Mr. FRIPP: We might leave this to the courts. I second my hon. friend's motion that this subsection be struck out.

Mr. NESBITT: Is it not quite sufficient as it is? If the court considers the demand to be grossly excessive or unjust it may order the trustee to pay personally the costs. It does not say the court shall order payment. It is a protection to the ordinary human being who may be a contributory if the trustee should happen to have a little spleen to work off on him, and it is only reasonable protection under the circumstances. The clause is very carefully worded, and, personally, I would not vote for it to be struck out.

Mr. McLEAN: I agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Nesbitt). It seems to me that every safeguard is thrown around this section. As he points out, if the court comes to the conclusion that the demand is grossly excessive or unjust it may order the trustee to personally pay the costs. Why should he not pay those costs?

Mr. JACOBS: Personally?

Mr. McLEAN: Why should he not, if he takes proceedings which the court pronounce to be grossly unjust? Why should not the poor contributory be protected? The trustee is entitled to get legal advice, and to charge the estate for that advice, and if he takes proceedings which the court pronounces to be excessive or unjust, why should he not personally pay the costs? It is the ordinary rule in other cases; the court often orders a trustee or executor under a will to pay the costs personally if he acts wrongfully. I think the section ought to stand.

Mr. FRIPP: The court has power now in any proceedings to make an official pay the costs himself. Why put the clause in?

Mr. MOWAT: I support the motion for another reason. I do not think when we are trying to establish the fact that we have a highly respectable and competent class of business men whom we are going to make authorized trustees that we should at the same time suppose for a moment that they would make unjust or excessive demands. I think it is very unlikely that any such contingency will ever arise, and I do not see why we should assume it is likely.

Mr. MORPHY: I think the burden should rest as much on the inspectors who approve his action as upon the trustee; if one is liable they all should be liable.

Mr. MOWAT: This is left entirely to the trustee.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I do not think the inspectors have anything to do with the settling of the list.

Mr. MORPHY: I think they ought to have.

Amendment negatived.

Subsection agreed to.

On section 37—

Subsection 2—Abstract of receipts and disbursements.

Mr. GUTHRIE: There is a clerical error in that subsection. In line 39 after the word "sheet," the words follow "dividend sheet, dividends" etc. The words "dividend sheet" should be struck out.

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. FRIPP: Is there any time limit within which the estate must be wound up?

Mr. GUTHRIE: There is no time limit; that is under the creditors' inspector.

Subsection as amended agreed to.

On subsection 7—Division of property.

Mr. MORPHY: It is said that the English section is modified. In what way?

Mr. GUTHRIE: It is merely an extension of the time within which a creditor may prove his claim. If he has not proved it within the time prescribed he may apply to the court. The modification is this: We say: "within such further time;" the English Act says, I think: "within sixty days."

On section 37, subsection (9),—no action for dividend:

Mr. JACOBS: What is the meaning of this subsection?

Mr. GUTHRIE: I am not clear as to the meaning of that; I ask that this subsection stand.

Subsection (9) stands.

On section 40, subsection (1)—remuneration of trustee:

Mr. H. H. McLEAN: Provision is made in the Act that general meetings may be called by the trustee at any time he thinks fit, or by order of the inspectors. In the notice calling the meeting, it is not necessary for the trustee to specify the purpose for which the meeting is being called. A couple of creditors attend and vote whatever remuneration to the trustee they see fit. In such an important matter as this, proper notice should be given to the creditors of the purpose for which the meeting is called. I would ask the Solicitor General to consider this subsection with a view of drafting an amendment to provide for such notice.

Mr. GUTHRIE: At the first meeting of creditors there is generally a fairly good representation of creditors, and general directions are given for the management or winding up of the estate. At that time no one knows what the estate is going to realize or what amount of trouble the trustee will have; consequently, the remuneration of the trustee is seldom fixed at the first meeting of creditors. The difficulty is to get an attendance of creditors at all at the next meeting; the dividend as a rule, is so small that there is no inducement to them to come. In general practice the first meeting is the only meeting of creditors; the subsequent meetings are meetings of inspectors. This section provides that the creditors, or, in default of the creditors. the inspectors, may decide the amount of the trustee's remuneration. This provision is almost identical with the Ontario Act in respect to assignments and preferences. If we were sure that the creditors would attend and that a majority would vote the salary or remuneration, all well and good; but they will not attend.

Mr. H. H. McLEAN: Subsection (2) provides that the remuneration of a trustee shall be limited to five per cent. If he wants to get more than five per cent he should get it at a meeting at which a majority of the creditors are represented. If he wants to get that extra remuneration he must arrange that the creditors be present at that meeting in person or by proxy, and those creditors should know what they are to vote for. Otherwise, he will get the remuneration fixed by the Act.

Mr. FRIPP: This matter dealt with in this clause has been the subject of a great deal of—shall I say—malfeasance in office by assignees and inspectors. In my experience, assignees and inspectors sit down and simply vote themselves a large remuneration. The creditors, as the Solicitor-General has said, in anticipation of a small dividend, do not pay much attention to the matter. We hould curb the generosity to themselves of these gentlemen. The words "or of any creditor" should be struck out so that the subsection will read:

The trustee in bankruptcy or in authorized assignment proceedings shall receive such remuneration as shall be voted to him by the creditors at any general meeting, or by the inspectors in case the creditors fail to provide therefor, subject to review by the court upon application of the trustee.

I would like to see the court review the remuneration which the trustee is to get.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Why should not the creditor apply for a review by the court?

Mr. FRIPP: In practice, the creditor does not apply, and we have to protect the creditor against excessive charges on the part of the trustee or his inspectors.

Mr. GUTHRIE: That is what this clause proposes to do. If the creditors vote too much to the trustee, a single creditor may go to the court and say that it is too much.

Mr. FRIPP: I want to put the boot on the other foot. I want the trustee to satisfy the court, whether the creditor takes any action or not, that the remuneration which he votes to himself or receives by the assistance of the inspector is a proper one. The remuneration should have the approval of the court before it is payable for the very reason suggested by the Solicitor General—that the creditors do not pay any particular attention to the estate after the assignment has been made. It is all left to the inspectors, and the inspectors are very often appointed by the trustee himself, in this way: The trustee, or the assignee as we now call him, having a majority of the creditors' claims in his hands, writes to the creditors or gets their proxies and appoints John Brown and William Smith, friends of his, as inspectors. Very often it is a conspiracy between the assignee and inspectors to pay themselves large fees which they have not earned. I want the trustee to satisfy the court, in the absence of any action taken by the creditors themselves, that his remuneration is reasonable.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Suppose the creditors or the inspectors say to the trustee: "We are going to give you a very small amount." Why should he not have the right to go to the court? The creditors may give too much or too little. I think the remedy should be reciprocal; if either party is dissatisfied, let him have the matter reviewed by the court. I do not anticipate any difficulty, because the next section, I think, will be the guiding section.

Mr. LOGGIE: The point made by the hon. member for Royal (Mr. McLean), I think, is well taken. Many creditors may not be present at the meeting at which the remuneration is fixed, as they may not have known the matter was coming up. Would it not be well to provide for notice being given that the matter of remuneration will be considered at the meeting?

Mr. NESBITT: I quite agree that the notice should state that the remuneration will be considered at the meeting, but I would not like to see the trustee bound to get a majority value of the creditors there, because in many cases it might be impossible. If they took any interest in the matter, the notice would bring them. I think the majority of the creditors present should have the right to fix the remuneration. As to the contention that the creditors should not be allowed to appeal to the court, I think they should; the trustee should also be allowed to appeal if he thinks his remuneration unsatisfactory.

Mr. McKENZIE: I do not know that the inspector should have anything to say about the remuneration of the trustee. I think the subsection would be improved by striking out of line 20 the words "or by the inspectors in case the creditors fail to provide therefor."

Mr. FRIPP: There is another reason why the trustee, in the absence of any action taken by the creditors, should satisfy the court that his remuneration is reasonable. This Act is passed in the interest of the debtor as well as the creditor. Now the debtor is not protected unless the court passes on the remuneration.

Mr. McLEAN: The amendment seems quite satisfactory except that it does not provide for notice being given that the matter of remuneration will be discussed at the meeting. All hon. members seem to agree that that should be included.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I honestly think we are making a little too much out of this. The remuneration fixed by the creditors is subject to review by the court upon application of the trustee or of any creditor.

Mr. McLEAN: Our experience has been that in a number of cases, estates have been robbed by the creditors giving too much.

Amendment agreed to.

Subsection as amended agreed to.

On subsection 2—limited to 5 per cent:

Mr. JACOBS: I have received communications from various firms in Montreal who hope to be appointed trustees under this Act. They object to this section particularly, because it limits the remuneration to 5 per cent of the cash receipts. They represent that a small estate of $1,000 to $1,200, which may give them no end of trouble, would pay them only $50 or $60. They think the percentage should be increased, and I should be glad to get the opinion of the Committee on the matter.

Mr. MORPHY: If the hon. gentleman is prepared to discuss cutting down the percentage in the case of larger estates, I think the discussion would be worth while.

Mr. JACOBS: That is quite true.

Mr. PARENT: We are told that this Bill among other things seeks to reduce the cost of winding up companies. Under the Winding-Up Act the liquidator generally does not get as much as 5 per cent, particularly in real estate cases. In the city of Montreal the judge limits the fee of the liquidator of a real estate company to about 2½ per cent, while on moveable property he allows 5 per cent. This subsection allows 5 per cent for both real estate and moveable property, and if one of the objects of the Bill is to reduce the expenses of the proceedings, I do not think it is going very far in that direction. The courts in Montreal and Quebec are giving 2½ per cent on real estate, and I submit that this 5 per cent should be reduced to 2½ per cent.

Mr. GUTHRIE: This 5 per cent is only on the net cash and not on the value of the real estate. In most cases the real estate will be found to be heavily encumbered. If it is too much the court can reduce it under this clause.

Mr. PARENT: Not under this subsection.

Mr. GUTHRIE: It says:

> subject to review by the court but no application by the trustee to review the allowance shall be entertained unless the question of his remuneration has been brought before a meeting of creditors or inspectors before the preparation of the final dividend sheet.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: Does the trustee get nothing at all?

Mr. GUTHRIE: I do not think he gets anything unless the creditors vote it. He might have a lot of trouble and get no cash, and the creditors, I assume, would take that into consideration in fixing the remuneration.

Mr. MOWAT: Some estates are lean and some fat; he can take his chances.

Mr. MORPHY: I would like to call the attention of the Solicitor General to line 27. "subject to review by the court." At whose instance shall the review be had? I suggest that it be provided that the review shall be at the instance of any party interested.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Perhaps we might make it at the instance of the debtor, or of the creditor, or of the trustee.

Mr. MORPHY: Yes.

Mr. GUTHRIE: But that is implied, is it not? That is what it means.

Mr. JACOBS: I do not see the use of subsection 2 of section 40, because subsection 1 covers the case completely. The clause says:

> Where the remuneration of the trustee has not been fixed under the next preceding subsection before the final dividend the trustee may insert in the final dividend sheet and retain as his remuneration, etc.—

Why not make it incumbent on him to have it fixed? That would obviate the difficulty we now have of attempting to fix what we consider proper remuneration.

Mr. GUTHRIE: The difficulty in practice has been that the creditors did not meet and did not fix the remuneration. In our province I know of case after case where the assignee has gone to the judge, under the provisions of the Ontario Act, because the creditors have failed to fix his allowance. Under subsection 1 they have a right to do it, but if they do not the man cannot be deprived of all his allowance. Let him take his 5 per cent and if it is too much or too little it can be reviewed. As the hon. member for North Perth suggests, in the 27th line, after the word "court," we might add the words "upon application of any creditor, of the debtor, or of the trustee." I move that the subsection be amended accordingly.

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. PARENT: Here there is likely to be trouble. The clause reads:

That it shall be subject to review by the court but no application by the trustee to review the allowance shall be entertained unless the question of his remuneration has been brought before a meeting of creditors or inspectors.

Mr. GUTHRIE: The words "or inspectors" ought to be struck out of line 30. I move that they be struck out.

Motion agreed to.

Subsection as amended agreed to.

On Section 40, subsection 3—Disbursements to be taxed.

Mr. PARENT: Who is the authorized official?

Mr. GUTHRIE: The taxing officer has not been appointed, but the general rule provides for a suitable taxing officer, probably the registrar of the court. That is a matter of procedure.

On Section 42, subsection 3—Meeting of creditors by request.

Mr. H. H. McLEAN: As the Solicitor General has pointed out, at the first meeting the creditors are generally represented, but at subsequent meetings there are only a very small number of creditors. Would it not be advisable to provide that the trustees shall specify in the notice the purpose for which the meeting is called and the business to be transacted?

Mr. GUTHRIE: There is a good deal of difficulty about notices of creditors' meetings. The question arises of what may and may not be discussed, and you very often find that the meeting has gone a little beyond the notice. It is something that opens the door to litigation, because the notice may not be specific enough in naming the business to be transacted. I would prefer to allow the notice to be general in character. The creditors know there are only a limited number of things to be brought before the meeting which can affect them. They have a right to attend and hear everything discussed, and if they do not they take the risk.

I would not be too specific in this notice.

Subsection agreed to.

On subsection 7—adjournment:

Mr. JACOBS: This subsection reads:

(7) If within half an hour from the time appointed for the meeting a quorum of creditors is not present or represented, the meeting shall be adjourned to the same day in the following week at the same time and place, or to such other day as the chairman may appoint, not being less than seven nor more than twenty-one days. (Eng. Sch. I No. 25.)

[Mr. Parent.]

Why say " to the same day and following week "?

Mr. GUTHRIE: We have taken these rules exactly from the English procedure.

Mr. JACOBS: The last part of the subsection renders the first nugatory.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I do not think so.

Mr. MORPHY: I would think that "after" would be preferable to "from" in the first line.

Mr. GUTHRIE: I would not like to change the wording of the English sections if we can avoid it. Most of them have been judicially interpreted. If you change a word you are going to change the effect of the section.

Subsection agreed to.

On subsection 9—right of creditor to vote:

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: Subsection 9 provides that:

A person shall not be entitled to vote as a creditor at the first or any other meeting of creditors unless he has duly proved a debt provable in bankruptcy or under an authorized assignment to be due to him from the debtor, and the proof has been duly lodged with the trustee before the time appointed for the meeting.

Section 6 of the Act provides for the appointment of a trustee and the majority of the creditors at the meeting appoint the trustee.

Mr. GUTHRIE: No.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I do not see how these two sections harmonize.

Mr. GUTHRIE: The trustee is appointed by the assignment. The assignment is to the official trustee and then the creditors confirm or revoke it. When the debtor makes a statutory declaration he has a right to vote at a subsequent meeting.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: But section 6 provides that the trustee is the man who gets a majority of the votes of the creditors at the meeting.

Mr. GUTHRIE: No, the trustee is the man authorized by this Act to receive the assignment, and to whom the assignment has indeed been made.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I understand that.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Section 6 provides that if the creditors so desire they may remove, or confirm him. Section 6 applies where there is no assignment but where there is an application in the court and a receiving order is made.

Subsection 9 agreed to.

On section 43, subsection 2—appointment of inspectors revocation and remuneration:

Mr. JACOBS: Subsection 2 provides that:

The powers of inspectors may be exercised by a majority of them.

I would suggest that the clause be amended by adding, after the words "majority of them" the following words: "at a regular meeting called for that purpose." I remember that in my own practice a few years ago where the majority of the inspectors decided upon a certain line of action but not at a meeting held. A resolution was prepared and sent around to the various inspectors. Three of them signed, two of them failed to sign and the court held that inasmuch as no meeting was called for that purpose the resolution was void. I think that was a good judgment, and in order to avoid any such contingency under this Act I think it might be well to make clear that the inspectors must meet in order to come to a decision.

Mr. GUTHRIE: What are the words you suggest?

Mr. JACOBS: My suggestion is to add after the words "majority of them" the words "at a regular meeting called for that purpose."

Mr. GUTHRIE: For what purpose?

Mr. JACOBS: Or, I would move that after the words "majority of them" the following words be inserted "at a meeting of such inspectors."

Mr. MORPHY: I think it is not likely to improve the operation of the Act to have it so restricted. If inspectors were a thousand miles away they should be able, by telegraph, to send their consent to a meeting and also their views.

Mr. JACOBS: There ought not to be inspectors a thousand miles away.

Mr. MORPHY: I would suggest that the hon. gentleman proposes the additional words "at a regular meeting called for that purpose." I would suggest the addition of "or by writing under their hand."

Mr. JACOBS: The point that was made in the case I referred to was that had the inspectors presented their views they might have been able to influence the other inspectors to adopt those views. You cannot arrive at unanimity of opinion or arrive at any opinion unless you have the parties together. The case went to the court of review and the decision was maintained.

Mr. GUTHRIE: Perhaps we might give further consideration to the clause. I would like to have gone on with the Bill to-night, but I am sorry that I shall not be able to be present. I would be obliged if the Committee would agree to rise now and report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Mr. JACOBS: When shall we take up the consideration of the Bill again?

Mr. GUTHRIE: Early next week; whatever day will suit hon. members will be satisfactory to me.

Progress reported.

At six o'clock the House took recess.

After Recess.

The House resumed at eight o'clock.

PRIVATE BILLS.

The House in Committee on Private Bills, Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

CANADIAN WHOLESALE GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

Bill No. 45, respecting the incorporation of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association of Canada—Mr. Sheard.

On section 1—Incorporation:

Mr. ROBB: Before that carries, Mr. Chairman, perhaps the mover of the Bill would explain the amendments.

Mr. J. D. REID: The member in whose name the Bill stands is not here. I would ask that it be allowed to stand.

Mr. STEELE: Mr. Chairman, the second section describes pretty fully the objects of the Bill. It came before the Private Bills Committee recently. The Bill had been submitted to the law officers and also to the Department of the Secretary of State, and the committee scrutinized it very carefully. We made some amendments, and we believe that in the shape in which it is now presented to the House there can be little objection taken to it. However, if it is desired to go into details perhaps it would be better to let the Bill stand.

Mr. ROBB: Does the Chairman of the Private Bills Committee say that this Bill was passed by the committee unanimously?

Mr. STEELE: Yes.

Section agreed to.

On section 12—committees of inquiry:

The CHAIRMAN: Section 11 has been struck from the Bill. Section 12 becomes section 11, the following words beginning in the thirty-seventh line having been deleted:

upon oath (which oath any member of said committee is hereby empowered to administer).

Section agreed to.

On section 13—Restraint of trade:

The CHAIRMAN: A new section has been added to the Bill as No. 13:

Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to authorize any action that will operate in restraint of trade.

Section agreed to.

On section 12.

The CHAIRMAN: The title has been amended to read:

An Act to incorporate the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association.

Mr. McKENZIE: I would like to bring to the notice of the Government section 12, as it appears to me to be an innovation:

The association may, by by-law or resolution, provide for the appointment of committees of inquiry to inquire into any matter affecting the manufacturing, import, export, as well as internal or domestic interests of Canada, as affecting the grocery trade, and such committees may examine upon oath (which oath any member of said committee is hereby empowered to administer) any party who appears before them, and the evidence so taken may be used to assist the association in arriving at a decision with reference to the matter under consideration.

Heretofore all such public matters have been dealt with under the provisions of the Public Inquiries Act, and the Government has the right at any time to appoint a commission, and many such commissions have been appointed. This is the first time in our history, so far as I know, that we have empowered a private concern to establish a commission to go all over the country examining people upon oath.

The CHAIRMAN: I must point out to the hon. member that that clause has been slightly amended. The words: "upon oath (which oath any member of said committee is hereby empowered to administer)" had been struck out by the Committee.

Mr. LEMIEUX: But the "oath" remains there all the same.

Mr. McKENZIE: Even so I wish to discharge my duty by bringing it to the notice of the Government, as it is an innovation and something which should not exist.

[Mr. Steele]

No body of merchants have any business in their own private interest to make inquiries of this kind or to put any one on oath. The Government is responsible for all legislation that goes through this House whether private or otherwise, and I submit that it should not allow this section to pass.

Mr. ROWELL: The matter had not been drawn to the attention of the Government before. I agree with my hon. friend that it is quite an unusual provision in the case of the charter of a private corporation, and I think the Bill had better stand in Committee until the Government has had an opportunity to consider this section.

Progress reported.

CONSIDERED IN COMMITTEE—THIRD READINGS.

Bill No. 56 (from the Senate) for the relief of Eva St. Lawrence Cronk.—Mr. Fripp.

Bill No. 57 (from the Senate) for the relief of Helena Clara Gabriel.—Mr. Pardee.

Bill No. 58 (from the Senate) for the relief of Gretna Harris Hawkins.—Mr. Mackie (Edmonton).

Bill No. 59 (from the Senate) for the relief of Samuel Burgoyne.—Mr. Smith.

Bill No. 60 (from the Senate) for the relief of James Arthur McGregor.—Mr. Fripp.

Bill No. 61 (from the Senate) for the relief of William Lewes Evans.—Mr. Jacobs.

Bill No. 62 (from the Senate) for the relief of Richard Wilson Crashley.—Mr. McMaster.

Bill No. 67 (from the Senate) for the relief of Gladys Agnes Wilson Hawkins.—Mr. Jacobs.

SUPPLY.

The House again in Committee of Supply, Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

Civil Government—Post Office Department—Salaries, including Deputy Minister at $6,000, H. B. Verret, Assistant Deputy Postmaster General at $4,500; Superintendent Mail Contract Branch at $5,000, Controller Railway Mail Service, Controller Postal Stores and Superintendent of Staff Branch, at $4,000 each, $979,770.

Hon. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX (Maisonneuve and Gaspé): When the House adjourned on Wednesday preceding the Easter recess, it was understood that on going into Supply on the Post Office Estiates we would discuss the principle of the motion I had introduced earlier in the session concerning certain amendments to the Post Office Act, the desirability of which is only too apparent. In order that my hon. friend (Mr. Rowell) may appreciate the situation, I shall first of all read what the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. Maclean), minister of I don't know what department, said on that occasion in answer to my hon. friend from Antigonish (Mr. Sinclair) and myself:

I should like to have the opportunity of giving consideration to this matter and of bringing it before my colleagues and if my hon. friend will bring up the subject again, say on the Post Office Estimates, I should then be in a position to give the view of the Government.

So I avail myself of this opportunity of discussing with the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Rowell) this important question of enacting more drastic legislation respecting the daily and the weekly press, periodicals, etc.

This question came up on various occasions before the western conventions last year and two years ago. Indeed, the resolution which I put on the Order Paper was simply a copy of the resolution which had been adopted by the Grain Growers of Alberta, if I mistake not. It read as follows:

That in the opinion of this House all newspapers, magazines, trade journals and other periodicals publishing articles designed to influence public opinion shall be compelled from time to time to publish sworn statements setting forth the names of the owners, managers, editors, stockholders, bondholders and of any other person having an interest in such newspaper magazine, trade journal or other periodical.

We all realize that the press in this and every other country wields an enormous power. Indeed, when one can control the press, he may to a certain extent control for the time being public opinion. The weapon is a most dangerous one. It may constitute a beneficent power provided it is not corrupt. Unfortunately, in this country, as in the United States and in some countries of Europe, not excepting England, the press has not always lived up to its primary function, which is to enlighten public opinion and to exercise a proper control over the several constituencies. The other day when I brought this matter before the House I gave as an example of the evil influence of lax legislation in regard to the press the camouflaging of a paper by its proprietor in such a way as to make it appear to be speaking for one party whilst it was really speaking for the opposite party. That has actually happened in the good city of Montreal in the case of the Montreal Herald, a century-old paper, which has had for its directors and editors the most remarkable writers of the English-speaking minority in Lower Canada,—a history of the last century could not be made complete without referring to the files of the Montreal Herald. It so happened that during a period of at least fifty years the Montreal Herald was the accredited organ of the English-speaking Liberal minority in the province of Quebec. It had, besides, a large constituency outside of Montreal, and with the exception of the Montreal Witness, which was by far the most respectable paper we had in this country, it wielded perhaps the greatest influence.

Unfortunately it fell into the hands of a certain Mr. Brierly, who obtained control of it through tricks that were mean and ways that were dark, and after the elections of 1911, as it was perhaps easier to swim with the current, he made a bargain with the managers of the Tory party, into whose hands it passed, although for a while it kept the appearance of its primeval honesty and virginity, and the change of ownership was known but by few. It was heralded as the organ of the Liberal party in the district of Montreal. Some of us know that some very prominent gentlemen in the Tory party had control of it, but the paper masqueraded as a Liberal organ. Finally it passed directly into the hands of Mr. McGibbon, a prominent Conservative in the district of Montreal, who had some tramway and power schemes of his own. But he thought it was more profitable for him to sell the paper outright to Lord Atholstan, then Sir Hugh Graham. Sir Hugh Graham, who is a keen business man, did not want in the field any rival of the Montreal Star, and therefore considered it politic to maintain the Montreal Herald as an ostensible rival, the Herald getting the skim milk and the Star the cream. The Star was the organ of the Conservative party and had a large circulation, while the Herald was as insignificant as a paper could be. It published four pages, while the Star issued twenty-five, thirty and forty pages. Yet that lean and insignificant journal, the Herald, was represented as the organ of the Liberal party. Some of us, though only a few, knew perfectly well that the Herald was the property of Sir Hugh Graham. But, sometimes the saying "there is honour among thieves" is falsified, and a case before the criminal court in Montreal gave us the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, and it was proven that the Star and the Herald were the property of Lord Atholstan and that the Herald was kept in the field merely as a camouflage, and that it was not the organ of the Liberal party but the instrument by which Lord Atholstan endeavoured to prevent any other enterprising journalist from establishing a paper in the interests of the honest Liberal party in Quebec. I may say that since then the Herald has been released, so to speak, and has become the property of Mr. Leithead, who wrote me the other day protesting against the suggestion that the Herald was the property of any other person than himself, and affirming that it was now really an independent journal. I must give him the benefit of his declaration; I believe it is now an independent paper. I have read it since Mr. Leithead became the owner, and I do not think it has any more connections with its former proprietor, Lord Atholstan. This merely to show the tricks that can be played on the public by some enterprising gentlemen, and how dangerous a weapon a newspaper may become in the hands of an unscrupulous editor.

I have another case in mind. In 1904 my hon. friends' friends, Mackenzie and Mann, undertook to defeat the Laurier Government, and the first thing they did was to obtain the control of a certain paper in Montreal having a large circulation, which fact was pretty well known. But this evil is not peculiar to Canada. I am sorry to say that in England it prevails and has been detected. I have a pamphlet published in the United States, and it should not be necessary to refer to it because the facts to which I shall allude are well known to every member of the Committee. We all know that during the last general elections in Great Britain the great "dope" or Cellulose scandal was uncovered, and a close investigation of that scandal might perhaps have caused some heartburnings in Great Britain on the part of several gentlemen of world repute. The London Chronicle was one of the old standard papers of Great Britain. Its influence, moral and otherwise, was very great, and its editor Mr. Robert Donald—a good Scotch name—enjoyed the highest reputation throughout the continent. Indeed, his articles and reviews of current events were read in every Chancellery on the continent. But one morning the world was aprised of startling facts. On October 5, 1918, the London Globe announced that Lord Beaverbrook, whose friends were hopelessly involved in the scandal, had been trying to buy the Chronicle for some time, and that the alleged purchaser, Sir Henry Dalziel, represented him and others. The immediate resignation, October 5, of Mr. Robert Donald, who for twenty years had been managing editor and for seven years managing director of the Chronicle, following his exposure of the Walter Long-Colonel Grant Morden, or Marden, letter and its bearing on the "dope" scandal, astonished all Fleet street, yet no reference to the "dope" scandal has been published in America in connection with the sale of the Chronicle.

The New York Times, October 5, the date of the sale, published the following comparatively innocent cable dispatch from London:

> Commenting on the sale of the Daily Chronicle, the Westminster Gazette points out that the sale of the newspaper cannot be considered on the same level as the sale of a butter business, as men who can command millions have learned how they can use these millions to sway public opinion. The London Globe says widespread regret will be felt beyond the confines of Fleet Street at the news of the sale. We do not even know who the new proprietors are, though some time ago it was stated that the ubiquitous Lord Beaverbrook was endeavouring to acquire our contemporary.
>
> We nevertheless sincerely regret the transaction because under the editorship of Robert Donald the Daily Chronicle has acquired a remarkable position as a fearless and independent organ representing the best side of liberalism, while rigidly avoiding infection and defeatism, and subordinating every minor issue to victory.
>
> The Chronicle has been fearless in attacking financial scandals in which prominent politicians were implicated. The National News sees in the transfer a disquieting attack on the influence and independence of the press.
>
> The Editor and Publisher (New York), October 19, 1919, in a statement dated London, October 16, declares: "Announcement of the purchase of the London Daily Chronicle coming without any preliminary indication, caused the biggest sensation in Fleet Street since the announcement of Lord Northcliffe's coup giving him possession of the Times. Negotiations for the transfer were conducted so quietly that even Robert Donald was completely surprised by the announcement. He resigned immediately."

You can see that even in old merrie England, so Conservative in her traditions, so honourable in her transactions, there are, as unfortunately there have been in the United States and in Canada as well, editors who will sell their pens for a mess of pottage. I drew the attention of the House the other day to the evil influence which to my mind such a state of affairs can produce in the country. It creates demoralization and it certainly leads to revolution. If the plain people of this country begin to realize that the press can be bought, as it has been bought, they will also believe that the public men can be bought and can be controlled. It is an evil day for Canada when that impression gains ground and, unfortunately, it has gained ground.

I have said fearlessly and I repeat this evening it was a scandal that on one given day, and before the elections of 1917, the whole of the Liberal press in the province of Ontario made a right about turn.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh!

Mr. LEMIEUX: There are honourable exceptions. I have one in my mind especially; the London Advertiser remained true to its traditions, and there are others. What has disgusted the public, Mr. Chairman, and made it apprehensive and what has caused it to believe that this is really a true state of affairs, is that at the same time Sir Clifford Sifton and Mackenzie and Mann were closeted at the Chateau Laurier here in Ottawa and Parliament was rushing through the Canadian Northern deal. It was passed under closure because these things must be expedited, and they were expedited.

Mr. HOCKEN: The hon. gentleman mentions the change in the press of Ontario. Does he want the Committee to understand that it was due to corruption?

Mr. LEMIEUX: My hon. friend has listened to what I have said. I think I have been more severe even than the statement he is making now. I think he is very mild. Would you believe, Mr. Chairman, that in a certain city not far from Ottawa, where certain papers had in their constituencies Liberals and Conservatives alike, Liberal candidates were obliged to pay for the report of a political meeting? At that particular moment the whole of the press of Canada was plastered with placards insulting the late leader of the Liberal party, and insulting his native province, in order to stir up the feelings of the people of Canada for the "unity" of the Dominion. Who paid for these advertisements? Who paid, Mr. Chairman? We know just half of the truth. My hon. friend who sits beside me (Mr. J. H. Sinclair) has found that the amount expended by the Government on newspaper advertising since August 4, 1915, is $2,099,048.44, as follows:—

Amount expended by Government on newspaper advertising since August 4, 1915:

Department of Agriculture	$ 85,433.79
Department of Auditor General	6,822.16
Civil Service Commission	1,759.42
Under Secretary of State	4,634.46
Department of External Affairs	745.29
Department of Finance	710,947.56
Department of Indian Affairs	8,431.64
Department of Inland Revenue	86.48
Department of Interior	185,576.94
Department of Justice	172,428.41
Department of Labour	423.44
Department of Marine	14,967.49
Department of Militia and Defence	73,077.52
Department of Mounted Police	$ 3,328.26
Department of Naval Service	32,432.91
Department of Postmaster General	75,535.74
Department of Public Works	64,489.21
Department of Printing and Stationery	123.38
Department of Railways and Canals	9,400.63
Department of Secretary of State	5,490.72
Department of Trade and Commerce	16,304.72
Department of Immigration and Colonization	622,951.03
Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment	3,607.24
	$2,099,048.44

Mr. J. D. REID: In how many years?

Mr. LEMIEUX: Since August 4, 1915, and before 1917. We only know half the truth yet. We do not know what has been paid by Order in Council. We do not know what amount has been spent by the President of the Privy Council in his new department.

Mr. G. B. NICHOLSON (Algoma East): Will the hon. gentleman give us a specific instance of the wrong advertising which has been carried on so that we may get a clear grip of the situation?

Mr. LEMIEUX: I have a collection of the placards which were so freely plastered in all the newspapers of Canada with the exception of those of one province. I keep those placards as a memento for future generations and for future reference. If my hon. friend, who is fair-minded, were to read to-day what was published in the press of Canada during the months that preceded the elections in 1917, he would blush with shame for his country, because he loves Canada as I do. Do not believe, Mr. Chairman, that it is a pleasure for me to bring this matter before the Committee and before the country. I am doing my duty as a public man and doing it fearlessly, knowing that I shall probably receive, as I have already received, an avalanche of attacks from the press of this country. But we are not here to exchange bouquets only; we are here to speak the truth and nothing but the truth; and I want the Canadian Parliament to do what the United States Congress has done, in order, if possible, to put a stop to such a state of things in the interests of the good name of Canada. Now what is the privilege enjoyed by the press of Canada? By chapter 9 of the Statute 45 Victoria, we give the newspapers and the periodicals of this country a very great privilege. Let me read the preamble and the first clause of that statute:

To encourage and facilitate the dissemination of useful information in Canada, Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, enacts as follows:—

(1) On and after the first day of June in the present year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two, newspapers and periodicals printed and published in Canada, mailed by the publisher in the post office at the place where they are published and addressed to regular subscribers or news dealers in Canada, resident elsewhere than in the place of publication, shall be transmitted by mail to their respective addresses free of postage: Provided, that in order to be entitled to such free transmission, the publication for which it is claimed must conform to the following conditions:—

1. It must be known and recognized as a newspaper or periodical in the generally received sense of the word, and published regularly at intervals of not more than one month:

2. The full title, place and date of publication, and the distinguishing number of the issue must be printed at the top of the first page, and also on any paper purporting to be a supplement to it, and sent with it:

3. It must be addressed to a bona fide subscriber, or to a known newsdealer in Canada.

In the same Statute the powers of the Postmaster General for preventing an evasion of the said conditions are enumerated. It will be apparent that the press obtains at the expense of the public exchequer a very important privilege. If we wish to mail a newspaper to a friend it will cost us one cent—during the period of the war that postage has been two cents—but a newspaper can mail a paper to one of its subscribers free of postage. Now let us see what that privilege means in dollars and cents. My hon. friend (Mr. J. H. Sinclair) put certain questions on the Order Paper not long ago, and those questions were answered as follows:

1. What was the gross postal revenue derived from newspapers for the year 1918?

A. $291,539.21.

2. What is the estimated expenditure for the same year in so far as newspapers are concerned?

A. The department has no data on which a close estimate of the expenditure involved in handling newspapers can be made, except that newspapers make up about sixty-five per cent of the bulk of the mails. The total expenditure for the carriage of mails and the cost of mail bags during the fiscal year 1918 is $8,293,515.24.

3. What is the average daily weight of newspapers carried in the mails?

A. 239,731 pounds.

Now, sixty-five per cent of the total cost amounts to $5,390,784, and we only received from the newspapers $291,539. If this sum is subtracted from the other amount it will be seen that the press of Canada is very heavily indebted to the exchequer of this country, and we therefore have the right to expect that that press will respect the privilege which is given to it by this Parliament. What has been done in the United States, where they have suffered from the same evil? In the country to the south they have adopted the following law, of which my resolution is practically a synopsis:

9 p.m.

That it shall be the duty of the editor, publisher, business manager, or owner of every newspaper, magazine periodical or other publication to file with the Postmaster General and the postmaster at the office at which said publication is entered, not later than the first day of April and the first day of October of each year, on blanks furnished by the Post Office Department, a sworn statement setting forth the names and post office addresses of the editor and managing editor, publisher, business managers, and owners, and, in addition, the stockholders, if the publication be owned by a corporation; and also the names of known bondholders, mortgagees, or other security holders; and also, in the case of daily newspapers, there shall be included in such statement the average of the number of copies of each issue of such publication sold or distributed to paid subscribers during the preceding six months:

And there is a proviso that this drastic law shall not apply to religious, fraternal, temperance and scientific publications. But the United States Congress went even further and exacted from every newspaper editor that:

All editorial or other reading matter published in any such newspaper, magazine or periodical, for the publication of which money or other valuable consideration is paid, accepted or promised, shall be plainly marked "advertisement." Any editor or publisher printing editorial or other reading matter for which compensation is paid, accepted or promised, without so marking the same, shall, upon conviction in any court having jurisdiction, be fined not less than $50 nor more than $500.

Those, Mr. Chairman, are the two amendments which were made to the post office laws in the United States to cure the press of that country of the gangrene which there, as here, was infecting its vitals. Is there any fair-minded gentleman in this House who has the honour of his country at heart, and respects his fellow citizens of whatever creed, race or political affiliation, who will object to similar legislation here?

In my younger days I was a journalist myself, and I compare an editor to a school teacher—and when I look at my good friend from Toronto (Mr. Hocken) I am inclined to say that I compare him to a preacher, for, indeed, he was a preacher during the last general election. The editor of the Orange Sentinel was not satisfied with writing vitriolic, evangelical editorials against French Canadians and Roman Catholics, but he had to take the pulpit and preach to the faithful in the name of the Lord in order to retain in power the masters of the Administration,—Sir Joseph Flavelle, Sir Clifford Sifton and Mackenzie and Mann. I remember an incident mentioned in the history of the French Revolution, Mr. Chairman. A lady who played an important part in that revolution, Madame Roland, was, like many others, sent to the guillotine—as perhaps, if the wave of Bolshevism reaches Canada many editors will be. On her way to the guillotine as she passed near the statue of Liberty she stopped for one moment, and, bowing reverently before the statue, exclaimed, "O Liberty, how many crimes are committed in thy name!" And when I read that the editor of the Orange Sentinel and my good friend the member for Centre Toronto (Mr. Bristol), addressed the faithful from the pulpit in Toronto, I paraphrased the words of Madame Roland: O Religion, how many crimes are committed in thy name! Indeed, the press and pulpit during the last general election were strong for the Tory party, but I notice of late that some of the millionaire Methodists of Toronto are protesting against the Methodist church issuing a political platform. Mr. Parsons delivered an address the other day and said: "I will take my religion from the conference, but not my politics on the tariff issue; and if I am going to be lectured by my minister on the tariff issue, well, I may not continue a member of the church." It is the old story, Mr. Chairman,—the chickens are coming home to roost.

But I am asking seriously if any one would oppose the amendments which I suggest by this resolution. Once more I say that the editor is to be compared to the schoolmaster. The school-master is surrounded by the most drastic legislation so that he may be worthy of his class and his students imbibe what really education should give to them. And the editor should be as closely safeguarded by Parliament—protected, so to speak, against himself, and thereby his constituency, the larger class, the public, also protected. The United States have declared that the backers of newspapers shall be known; and if we had had similar legislation here, when Lord Atholstan got control of a newspaper in Montreal the public would know that it was he and not Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his party. I hope the Government will accept my resolution and will bring down during the present session the necessary legislation to cure an evil which, unfortunately, exists in Canada to-day.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR (Antigonish and Guysborough): I had the honour of seconding the motion when this question was up for discussion in the House a few days ago, and I may be permitted to say a few words in reference to it. What is asked for is publicity, and it seems to me that there can be no reasonable objection to the acceptance of the proposal of the hon. member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux).

We were crowded for time to discuss this question when it was brought up just before the Easter holidays, and the acting minister then suggested that the present would be the appropriate time to deal with it because it would involve an amendment to the Post Office Act. The chief reason, I suppose, for making the proposed regulation an amendment to the Post Office Act is the convenience of enforcing it. The owners or publishers who refused to comply with that regulation could be deprived of the use of the mails. I do not say that the press of this country is mercenary; I have a little more respect for it than that. But some very sudden conversions have taken place especially in Western Canada and have not been clearly explained. We have it on the authority of an ex-minister of the Crown, a very prominent man in this House and in this country who has had large experience, as a member of this Government, that there is such a thing as "sweetening" the press. In Nova Scotia, at the last general election, we had a fund which was popularly known as the "slush fund." It was in the hands of a prominent gentleman in Halifax who supported the Unionist movement and was available to any newspaper in Nova Scotia that would publish Unionist propaganda in its editorial columns. Large rates were offered to the newspapers for this purpose, and while some of the old Liberal newspapers remained true to their allegiance, others of them yielded to the temptation and accepted the money. This fund, I understand, was not confined to Nova Scotia; it was common to the whole Dominion. It would be very interesting to know where this "slush fund" came from and how much it amounted to—but we have not yet been told. I do not think it can be successfully denied that a great many of the newspapers have abandoned their time-honoured place of the defenders of the interests of the public and have become mere organs of the present Government. They are no longer newspapers but merely party organs, they do not even tell the public the things that happen. If you read the accounts of what takes place in this Chamber, you will find that very little is made public that reflects on the Government, and that many things are omitted that ought to be reported. Of course, that may occasionally be accidental, but it is very marked in the case of certain newspapers that are supporting the present Administration. I think it was last autumn that some ministers made a trip to the Pacific coast and certain things happened out there, at Vancouver and elsewhere, that found no place in the eastern newspapers. We discovered them later, but they were not among the press despatches. Very little publicity was given to the disclosures that were made at St. Johns Quebec, last summer; they were hardly mentioned in many of the prominent eastern newspapers supporting the Union Government. The speech of my late honoured leader at London, Ontario, was not reported in the eastern papers; and that was a very marked incident. A few weeks after that, an interview given by Hon. Walter Scott in which he announced that he was withdrawing his support from the Union Government did not appear in many of the eastern papers. Now, there was a time when things like this did not happen; when these items would be welcome as a matter of news, but at the present time in many newspapers matters of that kind are suppressed.

There also appears to be a great reluctance on the part of the Government to give to the members of the House information in regard to money that has been paid to newspapers. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Lemieux) drew attention to the fact that during the last few years over $2,000,000 had been paid out to Canadian newspapers in advertising—and that is not at all a complete statement. He mentioned also the fact that the country is every year contributing some $5,000,000 for carrying the newspapers in the mails. We are contributing $50,000 per year to the Press Association. The statement was made by the member for Sherbrooke (Mr. McCrea) a few days ago that a million and a half dollars were being contributed to the publishers by the manufacturers of paper under some regulation made by the present Administration with regard to the price of print paper. So that it would appear that we are making very large concessions to the press, and that gives us a right to demand publicity in regard to the ownership of the newspapers.

[Mr. J. H. Sinclair.]

I said that there was a great deal of reluctance on the part of the Government to give information in regard to the payment of money to the newspapers. When an hon. gentleman asks a simple question regarding the amount of money that has been expended for any special purpose, he naturally expects a prompt answer; but he does not get that kind of answer when the question relates to the amount of money paid to the press. Let me give you a few instances. On March 31, the member for Prescott (Mr. Proulx) put the following question:

> During the year ending March 26, 1919, what amounts were paid by the Government for advertising to the following papers: Dundalk Herald, Flesherton Advance, Markdale Standard, Durham Chronicle, Hanover Post, and Grey (Durham) Review?

Now, that is a very simple question, and you would expect the minister to instruct one of his clerks to find out how much money had been paid to these small newspapers, and to give the answer. But he does not do that; he puts it down as an order for return. That is only a sample brick. Some time ago the member for Frontenac (Mr. Edwards) asked the following question:

> What amount was paid to the Ottawa Journal and the Ottawa Journal-Press for Government printing, advertising and job work from 1896 to 1911 inclusive?
>
> What amounts were paid to the Ottawa Journal and the Ottawa Journal-Press for Government printing, advertising and job work in each of the years: 1912, 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917 and 1918?

That also was put down as an order for return. Then, take another. On March 19, the member for Prescott (Mr. Proulx) asked the following question:

> What amount, if any, was paid by the Government to the Halifax Herald for printing, advertising, job or other work for each of the following five fiscal years: 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917, 1918?

That also was put down as an order for return. The same day the hon. gentleman (Mr. Proulx) asked what amount had been paid by the Government to the Toronto News for printing and advertising; this also was put down as an order for return. He inquired also what amount had been paid by the Government to the Toronto Mail and Empire for printing and advertising during five fiscal years, and that also was put down as an order for return. The Orders of the Day are full of cases of that kind. Information regarding the amounts paid out in connection with the Victory Loan was also denied to the House.

Mr. BURRELL: It must be quite obvious to my hon. friend why information of this kind should be submitted in the form of a return rather than in the form of a question. It involves replies to a series of questions concerning all departments of Government, of which there are a great many, covering a number of years and requiring a great deal of time to prepare. The information has not been delayed unnecessarily at all, but rather expedited. The answers to the questions with regard to the Halifax Herald and Mail have already been laid on the Table. I am sure my hon. friend will recollect that the practice in Parliament has always been in cases of this kind to ask for an order for a return.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I do not think my hon. friend will say that it is purely a coincidence that every one of these questions has been put down as an order for a return. Some of these returns come very slowly. Questions were asked last session, more than a year ago, which were put down as orders for returns and have not been answered yet. Some of the questions asked covered a period of years, and others one year only; but in every case the Government denied us the information. The only explanation I can think of is that the Government are aware they have been paying altogether too much money to the papers. They have been attempting to corrupt the press—I do not say they have succeeded—and they are very anxious to conceal the facts. But I do not propose to discuss that phase of the question further.

My main purpose in rising is to ask the minister to consider the reasonableness of the proposal of my hon. friend from Maisonneuve. There are many reasons that could be urged in favour of accepting this proposal, and there is no strong reason against it. The proprietor who is conducting a respectable newspaper is doing a splendid work, and he will be glad to let the public know that he is the owner of such a paper. The man who is conducting a yellow journal that he is not very proud of, and which takes a course that cannot be approved by the public, will naturally want to conceal his identity; but we are not interested in a man like that. The proposal is a progressive one and ought to be accepted by the Government. It will increase the respect for truth. Slipshod exaggerated and untrue statements do more than anything else to destroy confidence in the press. If the ownership were made known, I submit that it would be a strong additional inducement to the proprietor to exercise care. It would tend to eliminate the influence of the mercenary press, or at all events to make it harmless, by removing the mask of secrecy and showing the proprietor in his true colours. It would elevate the tone of the press, and place an additional handicap on what is known as yellow journalism. I submit, therefore, that it is in the public interest that this proposal should be adopted by the Government, and I respectfully invite the minister now in charge of the Post Office Estimates in this House to give the proposal his most serious consideration.

Mr. H. C. HOCKEN (West Toronto): I should like to express my appreciation of the very high tribute paid to my versatility by the hon. member for Maisonneuve. He classes me as editor, school-teacher, and preacher. Now that is a pretty wide range of public activities for one individual, especially when he happens to be also a member of Parliament. I make no pretensions to being a preacher, Mr. Chairman. If I were in some isolated spot where a real preacher could not be found I might make a few moral remarks for the benefit of the inhabitants, but that is not my forte; it is something I have never cultivated. Perhaps my hon. friend will be pleased to know that on that single occasion when I did occupy the pulpit after the regular service I made quite a hit with the congregation, who told me afterwards that my remarks were very much to the point, and that as a consequence they thought Union Government would get more votes. That brief experience was not altogether unsatisfactory to myself, however the hon. member may regard it. Unfortunately, the collection was taken up before I spoke; they might have got a little more if they had not taken it up till after.

Mr. LEMIEUX: What was the text?

Mr. HOCKEN: My text was the preservation of civilization and liberty.

Mr. LEMIEUX: By the Orange Sentinel.

Mr. HOCKEN: It is a text that might inspire any man, be he preacher or editor. I might say that I endeavoured to the best of my ability to use that text on the platform as well, when I had the assistance of the hon. member for Centre Toronto (Mr. Bristol) who is no more adept at preaching than I am myself. I was interested to learn from the hon. member (Mr. Lemieux) that $2,000,000 had been spent in advertising by the Government.

Mr. LEMIEUX: More, from what we know, but that is only half the truth.

Mr. HOCKEN: Perhaps he has forgotten that through the expenditure of that $2,000,000 this country was enabled to raise hundreds of millions of dollars in war loans, and to educate the people in regard to food control and many other things. It was a perfectly legitimate expenditure, and I deny absolutely that it was of such a character as to influence any newspaper one way or the other. I do not think it had the effect of "sweetening," as the hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Sinclair) puts it, any newspaper in which these advertisements appeared. The hon. member for Maisonneuve couples that in a way with the expenditure in connection with the political campaign which is not altogether a fair thing to do, because they were from entirely different sources. I think those who were conducting the campaign prepared the copy for the newspapers, and it appeared very plainly as an advertisement. That was a commercial transaction in respect of which no complaints could be made against the newspapers; it was a perfectly legitimate and proper thing for the newspapers to do. In fact, some papers in our province printed one page favouring one party and another page favouring another—an amazing impartiality that perhaps other newspapers would have been just as willing to exercise if they had been offered the copy. There have been newspaper transactions in the city of Montreal, well known before they were revealed in the criminal court, which every person must condemn.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Hear, hear.

Mr. HOCKEN: No person will condemn them more vigorously or more sincerely than the men who are actively connected with the press. The purchase of one newspaper by another newspaper proprietor, and the continuance of that newspaper supposedly as the mouthpiece of the party to which the proprietor is opposed, can only be described as something discreditable. At least it is something that no decent newspaper man would attempt to condone for a moment.

Sir SAM HUGHES: Puck and Judge are both owned by one man.

Mr. HOCKEN: But they are not influencing political opinion in the same way as the paper mentioned by my hon. friend. My friend from Maisonneuve about three weeks ago made some general remarks about the newspapers of Ontario, and one of the principal papers there challenged him to name one Liberal journal in Ontario which declined to support the party in the last election and which had been bought. He has not named one, and will not. He will not name one outside of this House, and that is the test after all. I know that in my city the two principal Liberal newspapers—in fact there are only two daily Liberal newspapers there—are conducted by men of as much integrity as any hon. member. I know the men who publish both those newspapers, and up to 1917 they were as ardent Liberals as any man in Canada had been, and had rendered splendid service to the Liberal party. Their defection was not due to any "sweetening" nor to any purchase, but to the fact that they believed there was involved a principle which they had to maintain on their conviction. Any man who stands up and condemns a newspaperman for making a change of that kind because his convictions compelled him to do so, is guilty, I think, of an offence as bad as misrepresentation on the part of a paper.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Will my hon. friend permit me to say something here?

Mr. HOCKEN: Yes.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I do not care to name any editor, but my friend is an hon. gentleman and whenever it pleases him to receive my confidence I will give him the name of a very prominent western journalist who, at the very time when the whole press was veering round, came to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's residence on Sunday and in my presence declared, with tears in his eyes that he had to quit the paper with which he was connected. That paper was published in the West, was a very prominent one and for many years had supported the Liberal party, but had just been acquired by a certain organization, and this man was told that unless he agreed to write against his leader and his party he would have to quit. I will give the name of that gentleman to my hon. friend whenever it pleases him to receive my confidence in this matter.

Mr. HOCKEN: I do not know everything about the West—

Mr. LEMIEUX: I have given the precedent of the Herald.

Mr. HOCKEN: —but I am speaking for the newspapers of Ontario. Some things may happen two thousand miles away of which I do not profess to know everything.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Distance makes no difference; there is the telegraph.

Mr. HOCKEN: Was it the city of Toronto?

Mr. LEMIEUX: No, sir; not in the city of Toronto.

Sir SAM HUGHES: Winnipeg?

Mr. LEMIEUX: Winnipeg, says my hon. friend. Now, Mr. Chairman, we are all intelligent men; at least we are elected as such. What will the ordinary elector of the West think when it is known that Sir Clifford Sifton is the owner of the Winipeg Free Press, which supported Reciprocity in 1911, when Sir Clifford Sifton was the principal instrument in the defeat of reciprocity? What will the ordinary elector think of the association of the two names? That is precisely why I am advocating this change in the law.

Mr. HOCKEN: I know that the defection of the principal papers in our province from the Liberal party in the last election was due absolutely to principle, and my information is that the same is true of practically every Liberal paper in Western Canada. We must remember that in the last election there was before the people of the country a question of principle that exceeded in importance any other in our history, and it is unjustifiable to condemn these men for a change in party allegiance at that time because they followed their patriotic impulses. The hon. member for Guysborough complains that the London speech of the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier was not printed in the East. I do not know how far east of Ontario it was printed, but up our way the friends of the late Liberal leader complained that it was being printed too much. It was not only printed but reprinted in its essential parts, and its laudation of that noble race the German people, at the time they were devastating France and committing atrocities unparallelled in history, was something that the people in that part of the country did not want to see in print quite as often as it appeared. So that while my hon. friend from Guysborough may have a complaint against the papers in Nova Scotia I do not think he has any ground for complaint on that score as regards the papers in Ontario.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: Is my hon. friend opposed to the proposal to amend the Post Office Act as indicated by the resolution?

Mr. HOCKEN: I thought I would leave that for my peroration. I want to say a word for the newspapers, because there are not many newspaper men on the floor, and we are a very respectable guild as a rule. I do not like to see the newspaper men attacked without some reply, however inadequate it may be, from my lips. Complaint is made about the amount of money spent in advertising. The value received from that advertising was two to three times what it cost, and some of these great public movements could not have been carried out without advertisement. It was only in this great emergency that the Government learned the truth of the old saying, which I am sure the hon. member for Maisonneuve has heard before, "It pays to advertise." It certainly paid the Government to advertise the Victory Loans, and the amount of advertising used brought results that any commercial man would be delighted to have at the same cost. Just a word to my hon. friend from Guysborough in regard to his complaint that these returns are too long coming down. I discovered among other things that in connection with a return which covers the different departments of the Government, it took three clerks seventeen days to get the information for that return from one department. That will indicate the amount of work there is in going through the files to get out every item asked for by a question that is on the Paper. I believe the Government is not to blame for that. As to the principal proposition that was laid down by the hon. member (Mr. Lemieux), I am quite in accord with it. I think the public interest would be served by something of that kind.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I thought that a good preacher would come to my views.

Mr. HOCKEN: I am not speaking now in my ministerial capacity but in my capacity as an editor. I think that while there have not been many abuses of that kind in Canadian journalism up to the present time, undoubtedly there have been some, and the way is open for a great many more. We are not rich enough in this country for that kind of thing but abuses of that kind have occurred in the United States. Personally, I would not object to seeing a law of that kind enacted; in fact, I would go further and I would make another suggestion for the consideration of my hon. friend. I do not think a newspaper should get the mail privileges if it is sold for less than the mechanical cost of production. We have had papers sold for a dollar a year in this province when the white paper cost $4 or $5 a year.

Mr. LEMIEUX: And daily papers at that.

Mr. HOCKEN: Daily papers.

Mr. LEMIEUX: The Star.

Mr. HOCKEN: And La Presse and La Patrie. It takes a whole baggage car to carry the Sunday edition of La Presse or La Patrie every Saturday. Those papers, as well as the Star, are the chief offenders in that particular.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Do we not pay a special subsidy for a Grand Trunk train every morning to distribute the Toronto papers in western Ontario?

Mr. HOCKEN: If you pay a special subsidy it is not very much, because the Toronto papers do not circulate in the west to any extent.

Mr. LEMIEUX: In western Ontario?

Mr. HOCKEN: I think that subsidy would be properly spent.

Mr. LEMIEUX: To defeat the Free Press of London?

Mr. HOCKEN: Yes, and the Advertiser. I am sure that when I tell the hon. gentleman one feature of it he will agree with me that it should have been paid up to the present at least. Until a very recent date the only morning paper published west of Toronto in Ontario was the London Free Press. I am sure he will agree with me that under circumstances of that kind the Globe should have been subsidized to cover that territory. He may not agree with that at the present moment but he will agree with it prior to 1917 because it enabled the Liberal party to get its morning paper distributed to the St. Clair river and all through there almost as quickly and as early as the London papers.

Mr. LEMIEUX: To complete the statement, the Toronto Globe, the Toronto World, the Toronto Telegram, the Toronto News, the Toronto Star and the Toronto Mail all joined before 1911 to ask that the train be reinstated. It was a happy family.

Mr. HOCKEN: That is the morning train?

Mr. LEMIEUX: Yes, the morning train.

Mr. HOCKEN: Whatever interest the Star, Telegram and News might have in it I am at a loss to understand, because they could not possibly make any use of it.

Mr. LEMIEUX: What was done for them was done for all the others.

[Mr. Hocken.]

Mr. HOCKEN: It could not be done for the evening papers because the train went out between three and four o'clock in the morning. May I draw the attention of the Committee to another matter? I do not see anything in the Estimates to provide for additional remuneration to the sub-postmasters. In our city, in Montreal, and in the larger cities, there are quite a number of these sub-postmasters. They render a most valuable service. They are a great convenience to many hundreds of thousands of people and they are paid a salary of $200 a year with an allowance of one per cent for the sale of postage stamps. Nothing is paid for the premises in which they carry on this business and the amount that they make altogether is utterly inadequate for the service rendered. The cost of the rental of the space required to carry on the business would be at least two or three times what the department pays for the service that it gets. It seems unfair. These men have to give postal orders, register letters, and do all that kind of thing; they have to employ additional help in their places to do that and they have no remuneration beyond the $200, and one per cent on the sale of stamps. If a man sells $10,000 worth of stamps—and the gross sales of some of these postmasters amount to from $10,000 to $12,000—he gets $100 and these sales are made up of three, ten and twenty cent transactions, the smallest kind of merchandise sales that a man could have in any line of business. I would like the minister to tell me whether it is the intention of the Government to give some additional remuneration to these sub-postmasters.

Mr. ROWELL: First, in reference to the question raised by the hon. member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux); undoubtedly, under the Post Office Act the newspapers of Canada are carried at a substantial cost to the country. The revenue received from the newspapers of Canada is not at all equal to the cost of distributing the papers from one end of the country to the other. It has been the settled policy of Canada since Confederation to carry these papers at less than cost; in fact, it is only in comparatively recent years that any charge whatever has been made for carrying them. Originally they were carried free on the ground that they were distributing information over a large country more or less sparsely settled and that it was in the public interest that it should be distributed in order that the people in all sections of the country should receive the benefit of the news which was published in the press. Some years ago a charge was made. The charge then made has continued practically up to the present. The custom in Canada in reference to the matter is also the custom in the United States. There, the newspapers are carried at very much less than the cost of transportation because of the position which the public press holds and the function it serves in the life of the nation. While that is true, it is equally true that because the newspapers do enjoy that privilege there is imposed on them a certain duty and obligation to the public.

My hon. friend has suggested that the resolution he submitted was the same in terms as the legislation passed in the United States. I would draw his attention to the fact that there is a very radical difference between this resolution and the legislation there enacted. The question of the publication of the names of editors and proprietors of newspapers is not a new one in this country; it has been before the Canadian public for many years; it has been advocated by several of the leading Canadian journals—and particularly by leading newspapers which my hon. friend has charged were bought in the year 1917—they have agitated for the publication of just such particulars as my hon. friend has suggested. The Grain Growers and other organizations in Western Canada have also asked that this should be done. Personally I can see no reason why the newspapers should not publicly disclose the names of their editors, stockholders, and bondholders. I have entertained that view for some years, but one reason why the Federal Government has not taken action in that regard is because it touches property and civil rights. It is a matter which is clearly within provincial jurisdiction, a province can clearly require the newspapers to publish the particulars in question, and some of them do. Any province in the Dominion that thinks it is in the public interest to require the publication of this information is perfectly competent to pass the necessary legislation under which it could be given to the public.

Coming to the point as to whether we should take action such as my hon. friend suggests has been done in the United States the whole matter has been under the consideration of the Government. It may be that it would be wise to take action similar to that taken in the neighbouring country, but I am not in a position to-night to make an announcement as to the final decision of the Government in this respect. The subject has been under consideration, and is still being considered, but before the session proceeds much further there may be a definite statement of the Government's policy.

Mr. LEMIEUX: My hon. friend states there is a radical difference between my resolution and the United States legislation. I would like him to point out that distinction.

Mr. ROWELL: I have not my hon. friend's resolution before me, but if my recollection serves me it calls for the publication of the names of the editors, publishers, stockholders and bondholders of publications, whereas the United States legislation requires that they shall be furnished to the Post Office Department. My hon. friend did not indicate that this information was published by the United States Post Office Department, and in that respect, judging from what my hon. friend read, I should assume there was an important difference.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I have read the United States law and I think the Acting Postmaster General is quite mistaken. That law requires this statement to be made to the Post Office Department every six months, and it must be given publication in the next issue of the magazine or newspaper furnishing it.

Mr. ROWELL: The hon. gentleman (Mr. Lemieux) did not read that to-night, and I was basing my statement upon what he read. If that requirement is in the United States law, my hon. friend did not bring it to our notice. But even if the United States Act does not require publication, I see no reason why the information should not be published here, and I should think there would be no real objection on the part of the Canadian press; there should not be any objection to these particulars being published. However, the whole matter is under the consideration of the Government, and an announcement with reference to it will be made in due course.

It would not be right for me to resume my seat without taking cognizance of further remarks by my hon. friend. The hon. gentleman has deliberately challenged the integrity of the press of Canada, and he has deliberately challenged the integrity of the press of my province. I want to hurl that challenge back to my hon. friend, and tell him that he dare not repeat outside this House, where proceedings could be taken against him, that challenge against the integrity of the press, or say there that one of the leading Liberal papers of the province of Ontario was bought at the last election.

Mr. LEMIEUX: If my hon. friend will allow me, a few days ago the member for Red Deer (Mr. Clark) speaking publicly in Toronto referred to the charge I have made in the House, and he was answered by the public.

Mr. ROWELL: I was not dealing with what the hon. member for Red Deer said. I hold my hon. friend responsible for the words he uttered in this Chamber to-night. He challenged the integrity of the press of Ontario. He said it could be bought and that it had been bought.

Mr. LEMIEUX: By advertisements.

Mr. ROWELL: I do not care by what means, I say the statement is absolutely false, and there is not a shadow of foundation to support it. There is no more upright press in this country than the press of Ontario. I want to say this for the whole press of Canada, and I will include in the statement the press of my hon. friend's province: No finer contribution has been made by any class of the community to the cause of Canada and the cause of civilization in the recent war than has been made by the press and by the public journals of Canada. From the outbreak of the war the press, more than some of 10 p.m. the public men of this country, realized the magnitude of the issue which faced the Canadian people. They did not hesitate to set clearly before the people the character of the issue and all that was involved in it. During the whole period of the war their columns have been filled with news gathered at great expense, because telegraphic and cable news was particularly expensive, in order that the Canadian people might be kept posted on the events occurring in the theatres of war, as well as in all the countries with which we were brought into touch by reason of the war. From the very commencement of that great struggle the press of Canada has served a most valuable public function in forming and shaping public opinion in the Dominion, and giving the news, without which public opinion would not have sustained the carrying on of the war. And a public man is not doing credit to himself, or to this House, who challenges the integrity of that great medium of public opinion, the Canadian press.

One or two words further with reference to the situation. My hon. friend (Mr. Lemieux) said that at a given date the whole of the Liberal press of Ontario underwent a right-about-face, with the single exception of the London Advertiser.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I said with a few honourable exceptions.

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friend specially mentioned the London Advertiser. I say that statement is equally without foundation. The Liberal press of Ontario, for months prior to the date my hon. friend mentions, had been urging upon the Government of Canada more active and aggressive measures for the prosecution of the war. They had been urging that compulsory military service should be introduced in Canada, for without it we could not secure the necessary reinforcements. They had been urging upon the Government that the time had come—in fact, that the time had come long before—for the formation of a union or a national Government to unite the people of Canada for the vigorous prosecution of the war. When my hon. friend charges that the press sold itself I say there is no grander evidence in the history of this country, or in the history of any other country, of fidelity to high public purpose and noble national aspirations than was displayed by the Liberal newspapers of my province.

They stood by their principles, they stood by their convictions, they stood by what they believed to be the national interest to their own loss—because it meant the loss of subscribers and supporters when they could not necessarily carry all their friends with them in the course they took. They did not change their position. They declined to go back on their convictions, they declined to go back on the policy they had been advocating for months because the leader whom they would have been glad to support was unable to see his way clear to support the policy which they believed to be right. And, instead of charging those papers with having sold themselves, one should pay tribute to their fidelity to the national interest in the service they rendered the country in those critical times.

My hon. friend (Mr. Lemieux) has given certain illustrations of cases where the owner of the paper entertained a different view from the policy which the paper was advocating, and he suggested that the public might be misled. I was under the impression that the public knew that Sir Hugh Graham did control the Montreal Herald. I certainly have seen it stated in the press repeatedly, and, almost immediately after the transaction took place it was published in the press. Of the other case to which my hon. friend refers I have no knowledge. But I wish to point out that he has used those cases to justify him in attacking the advocacy by the Liberal press of a particular policy during the last general election, a matter that has nothing whatever to do with the resolution that he suggests the House should adopt. Does he mean to imply that if these newspapers had published the names of their editors and proprietors the course they pursued would have been different? Not one particle. I think it might have much strengthened their position if the public had known that the strong solid Liberals who held stock in those papers were back of the policy which was being advocated in support of the national interest.

My hon. friend has referred to the amount of advertising done. I think the answer made by my hon. friend from West Toronto (Mr. Hocken) is perfectly complete. I have absolutely no apologies to make for the money the Government has spent for advertising since I became a member of it. I believe that it is the bounden duty of the Government to keep the public fully informed as to its acts and policies.

The Government of this country is of concern to more than the members of the Cabinet, it is of concern to more than the members of this House—it is of concern to every citizen of the country. Every citizen is deeply and vitally interested in it, and the Government is serving the cause of the people in keeping them as fully informed as possible in connection with its policies and courses of action. My hon. friend has not suggested, and he cannot truthfully suggest, that the advertising which the Government has paid for was in support of any party or of any political activities. The Government was advertising the Victory loan; the campaign for greater production; matters in connection with food control; outlining the procedure being adopted in connection with repatriation. That money was wisely expended in the public interest. Every dollar expended that helps to give additional information to the citizens of this country in reference to the action of the Government in matters in which they are deeply and vitally interested is sound expenditure, if that information is useful and should be given.

But I want to say further that there was no discrimination in connection with that expenditure. All journals, irrespective of party, race, or creed, received the same advertising. My hon. friend knows that. The Government has been attacked from this side of the House because it gave advertising to Le Devoir and certain other papers in the province of Quebec. The Government may be open to criticism as to that, but it has treated the press of Canada alike irrespective of their political views, the racial origin of their editors or proprietors, or their religious faith, because in administering the affairs of the country we are trustees for the whole people and we went on the principle that every citizen is equally entitled to the information, no matter in what section of the country he lives, or what be his political leanings. My hon. friend referred to the bringing down of returns. That matter has already been fully explained and I shall not take time going into it.

Now, a word with reference to the remarks of my hon. friend from Guysborough (Mr. Sinclair). He said: "I would not like to say that the press is mercenary." He does not go nearly as far as my hon. friend from Maisonneuve, but he does suggest that there is something very suspicious about the press. I would like to put a question to him. Will he say that the Halifax Chronicle supported conscription and Union Government in the last general election because it was bought?

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I did not say that.

Mr. ROWELL: I know my hon. friend did not.

Mr. DUFF: Will the minister say it was not bought?

Mr. ROWELL: It was not bought.

Mr. DUFF: He cannot say that.

Mr. ROWELL: I say it was not bought by the Union Government.

Mr. LEMIEUX: He should ask Mr. Pearson.

Mr. ROWELL: I say it was not bought by the Union Government.

Mr. DUFF: That may be true; but the hon. minister cannot say it was not bought.

Mr. ROWELL: Hon. members ought not to make general accusations or suggestions casting aspersions upon the character of newspapers when they are afraid to back them up with particulars.

Mr. LEMIEUX: The people of Toronto said: It is true; it is true. The people know that.

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friend is trying to escape from the wholly indefensible position in which he put himself—

Mr. LEMIEUX: In spite of the concrete cases I gave?

Mr. ROWELL: —and he dare not name outside this House a single influential newspaper in Ontario and say it was bought during the last general election, because he would have a chance to prove it very, very quickly, and he could not produce a scintilla of evidence in support of his charge. Let me remind my hon. friend of this fact, that the character of a newspaper is just as important and valuable to the newspaper itself as is a man's character and reputation to himself personally. The standing of a newspaper in the community and its influence depends upon the confidence of the public. And the newspapers would have just as much right to say that my hon. friend from Maisonneuve was bought by the payment of so much cash, or something else, for adopting the course he recently adopted in Parliament, as has my hon. friend to say that those journals were bought at the last election.

Mr. E. LAPOINTE: Where would the money come from?

Mr. ROWELL: I saw a good deal of advertising in the last election that was paid for by the opponents of Union Government. I heard it suggested that it came from corporations, but I do not know that it did and I would not suggest it.

Turning to the question raised by my hon. friend from Centre Toronto, as to the scale of pay of sub-postmasters, that has been under consideration by the Postmaster General and the administrative officers of his department for some little time, and they have decided that under the conditions existing at the present time there should be an increase in the allowances, and I am glad to give the House the information as to the increase proposed.

The former scale was this. On a revenue less than $2,000, $100 salary; on revenue of $2,000 and up to $4,000, $150 salary; on a revenue of $4,000 and over, $200 salary.

The new scale is as follows: On a revenue less than $300, the salary is to be fifty per cent of the revenue, with a minimum salary of $60 a year; on a revenue of $300 and up to $1,000, $150 salary; on a revenue of $1,000 and up to $2,000, $200 salary; on a revenue of $2,000 and up to $3,000, $250 salary; on a revenue of $3,000 and up to $4,000, $300 salary; on a revenue of $4,000 and up to $5,000, $350 salary; on a revenue of $5,000 and over, $400 salary. The Commission of one per cent on stamp sales and the usual commissions on money order and postal note business will be continued as at present. Hon. gentlemen will see that this is a reasonable advance on the salaries which the postmasters at sub-stations have been receiving, and the department confidently anticipates that the increase will reasonably meet the situation.

Mr. ARGUE: Will that apply to rural postmasters?

Mr. ROWELL: No, only to sub-stations in the larger cities. The postmasters are supposed to be benefited by the mere fact that the offices are in their stores, as is the case in many instances, and they receive a limited compensation for the important service which they render.

In connection with the rural postmasters, a change was made in July of last year. I quote the following statement, dated at Ottawa, July 20, 1918:

Postmasters are informed that owing to the higher cost of living arising out of war conditions, the Postmaster General has, after careful consideration, decided to increase the salaries of those whose revenues do not exceed $10,000 by adopting the following scale of payment which supersedes the one in force since the 1st April, 1915, as set forth in the circular letter dated the 12th May, 1916:—

50 per cent on the first $1,000 of revenue, instead of 40 per cent on the first $800.

25 per cent on all over $1,000 and up to $10,000, instead of 25 per cent on all over $800 and up to $10,000.

Minimum salary increased from $50 to $60.

On all revenues over $10,000 the salary will be calculated according to the scale in force since the 1st April, 1915, that is:—

40 per cent on the first $800 of revenue.

25 per cent on all over $800 and up to $10,000.

15 per cent on all over $10,000 of revenue, but in the case of an office where the revenue is over $10,000 and up to $10,870, the salary will be the amount payable on a revenue of $10,000 under the new scale, that is $2,750, in order that the Postmaster may not receive less than one whose revenue is $10,000.

Allowance for Forward Duty:—

The rate of remuneration is 10 per cent on the revenue of the offices for which direct or indirect forward duty is performed. (No change).

Allowance for Rent, Light and Fuel:—

The allowance of all Postmasters is increased 25 per cent.

Allowance for Night Duty:—

An allowance is paid for night duty when a Postmaster is required to be in his office after 9 p.m. or before 7 a.m. The minimum allowance is $10 and the maximum $100, according to the time employed, and the work done. (No change).

Compensation for the transaction of Money Order, Savings Bank, and Postal Note business.

Money Order Business:—

Four cents for each Money Order issued, and one cent for each other order paid. (No

Savings Bank Business:—

27½ cents on every $100 deposited. (No change).

Postal Note Business—

One cent for each postal note sold. (No change).

All increases, either in salaries or allowances, will take effect from the 1st April, 1917.

Owing to the fact that the revision of salaries based on the revenue for the year 1917-18 has been delayed by the consideration of the Postmasters' application for increases, it will not be possible to pay salaries according to the new scale in September quarter. In the salary warrants issued during December quarter all arrears due from the 1st April, 1917, will be included, or overpayments deducted as the case may be.

The rural postmasters held a conference recently and sent a deputation to wait upon the Postmaster General urging that a commission be appointed to investigate the present rates of pay, their representation being that an investigation might result in an increase in their compensation. The view of the department—I give simply their view of the matter—is that having regard to the increase made last year and to the position of the revenues of the department, it is not expedient to take action this year and the matter should stand until another year.

The general revenue and expenditure of the Post Office Department is a matter of interest, and must be particularly considered in connection with the question of salaries. The revenue last year was $21,345,394.45, the largest in the history of Canada. The following were, in round figures, the revenues in previous years: 1911, $10,482,000; 1913, $12,060,000; 1914, $12,956,000; 1915, $13,046,000; 1916, $18,858,000; 1917, $20,902,000.

Mr. FIELDING: Is it not a fact that the large figures of recent years is accounted for by revenue from the sale of postage stamps which are used for cheques, notes, and other purposes? Postage stamps are used for Inland Revenue purposes and, as it is perhaps impossible to draw the line between the two, some of the figures my hon. friend refers to are not postal receipts at all.

Mr. ROWELL: I was going to explain that. It is estimated that about $6,000,000 is the revenue from the additional one cent postage, and the other receipts of the Post Office Department on account of war tax.

Mr. EDWARDS: In what year was that extra cent put on?

Mr. ROWELL: In 1915. The $6,000,000 is on the basis of this year's revenue. The Post Office Department estimates that 28 per cent, pretty nearly 30 per cent, of the total revenue comes from the sale of the war-tax stamps.

Mr. COWAN: Does any portion of the revenue from the sale of war-tax stamps go to the postmasters? Are they paid for the extra work of handling these stamps?

Mr. ROWELL: In effect, the answer is no. It works out differently in the cities from the rural districts, and the reason is this: it is no more trouble to sell a three-cent stamp than a two, nor a two than a one; and secondly it was thought that the country should, so far as possible, receive the full benefit of the tax. It is true that owing to the increases in salaries and the expenses of administering the department—the expenses of all departments have increased—the country has not received the full benefit of the increased revenue, because it has cost substantially more to administer the department.

Mr. FIELDING: If the postmasters are paid a percentage on the sale of stamps I do not see how you can make any distinction between the stamps sold for post office purposes and those sold for inland revenue purposes. When a man buys a sheet of stamps he does not explain to the postmaster what he wants them for.

Mr. ROWELL: In order to meet that situation they lowered the scale of pay. Having reached the conclusion that approximately 28 per cent of the total revenue was due to the sale of the war-tax stamps the basis of compensation was adjusted so as to give the postmaster practically the same pay as he would have received had the tax not been imposed.

Mr. COWAN: Has that always been the rule or was not the rule changed at one time after it had been adopted?

Mr. ROWELL: When they put on the additional cent war-tax the scale of pay was put back on the same basis that prevailed before we adopted two-cent postage. My hon. friend has asked if they did not get a percentage on the total revenue for a certain period, and if there was not some change afterwards.

Mr. COWAN: I want to find out the legal position the city postmasters are in. I understand that there was a time when the city postmasters drew this percentage as part of their salaries, and that a change was made. The postmasters are claiming this percentage as their right, and I should like to know the legal position.

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friend is speaking of city postmasters; I was talking of rural postmasters. The city postmasters,

I understand, are paid on the basis of revenue.

Mr. COPP: What percentage?

Mr. ROWELL: It is not a percentage, but the salary is fixed having regard to the volume of business.

Sir SAM HUGHES: Perhaps it would be better if the minister were to say which offices are paid on the commission basis, and which on the salary basis.

Mr. ROWELL: All city postmasters coming under the Civil Service are paid a certain salary, but the salary is dependent on the volume of business.

Sir SAM HUGHES: Where do the commission offices come in?

Mr. ROWELL: The sub-stations in the cities. The postmasters there receive a certain salary plus a certain percentage of the revenue.

Mr. BELAND: In order to ascertain the revenue properly belonging to the Post Office Department, we must deduct from the amount of $21,000,000 the $6,000,000 to which my hon. friend has referred.

Mr. ROWELL: Yes, and no. The revenue from the sale of these war-tax stamps is post office revenue, but the tax was imposed for a particular purpose. The situation undoubtedly would be this: If that additional revenue was not received by the Post Office Department, it could not pay the increases in salary without showing a deficit. I have given to the Committee the revenues from 1911. Let me now give the expenditure for the same period, in round figures. In 1911 the expenditure was $7,954,000, and there was a surplus of $1,192,000; 1912, expenditure $9,172,000, surplus $1,310,000; 1913, expenditure $10,882,000, surplus $1,177,000; 1914, expenditure $12,822,000, surplus $134,000; 1915, expenditure $15,961,000, deficit $2,914,000. Then the additional tax came in. In the following year 1916 the expenditure was $16,009,000, and the surplus $2,849,000. In 1917 the expenditure was $16,300,000 and the surplus $4,601,000, in 1918 the expenditure was $18,046,000 and the surplus $3,298,000. Had it not been for the increase in the salaries paid to the employees of the Post Office in 1918 the surplus for that year would have substantially exceeded the surplus of 1917. The difference between the surplus of 1917 and that of 1918 is more than made up in the increased payment to postal employees throughout Canada.

[Mr. Rowell.]

Mr. DUFF: Would there not have been a deficit of $3,000,000 had it not been for the fact that $6,000,000 extra was paid into the Post Office through the extra war stamp tax?

Mr. ROWELL: It is hard to say what the exact deficit might have been. One never knows the effect of the increased cost of postage on the volume of business. I presume the cheaper the postage the larger the volume.

Mr. DUFF: I thought it was stated a moment ago that the money derived from the war tax was $6,000,000.

Mr. ROWELL: Quite so.

Mr. DUFF: Then the deficit would be $3,000,000.

Mr. ROWELL: It might be, but one cannot ascertain the exact amount, because one does not know the volume of business. The advocates of lower postage will say, and I think with a measure of justification, that the lower the postage the larger the volume of business. I cannot say that the deficit would be that amount, but I have no doubt it would have been a very substantial sum.

Sir SAM HUGHES: How does the Department differentiate between stamps used for excise purposes and those that are used for postage? Suppose a merchant buys five dollars' worth of stamp's and uses half on excise and half on postage, how does the department know the proportion used for each purpose?

Mr. ROWELL: The Department cannot tell and does not differentiate. It cannot keep a separate record of that. With regard to the deposits in the Post Office savings banks the total amounts standing to the credit of open accounts, inclusive of interest allowed, at the close of the period for the past five years was as follows:

1914	$ 41,591,286.
1915	39,995,406.
1916	40,008,417.
1917	42,582,478.
1918	41,283,478.

Mr. BELAND: Has the rate of interest been increased?

Mr. ROWELL: It is still 3½ per cent. These savings would be substantially more had it not been for the investments in Victory Loans during the past two years, and it is a very excellent record that there has really been no substantial reduction in the amount of deposits in the savings banks.

Mr. CAHILL: Is it the intention of the Government to reduce the rate of postage in the near future in view of the opinion which the minister has just expressed?

Mr. ROWELL: That question was asked early in the session and the answer was given that it would be dealt with when the Budget Speech was delivered. I cannot give any further information than that.

Mr. COWAN: I understand we have no real chief post office inspector or superintendent. We have two gentlemen, one of whom is so designated, but it seems to me that we have not enough supervision, and I would like to know if the Government is considering the advisability of re-arranging the districts and placing a superintendent in charge of the whole of Canada?

Mr. ROWELL: That matter has been brought to the attention of the Post Office Department and is now being considered by the minister, who feels that the present senior inspector, Mr. Ross, is doing very efficient work.

Mr. COWAN: I am finding no fault with him at all, but I think he has far more to do than he can attend to efficiently. I think that a great deal of the trouble we had with the Post Office employees last year would not have occurred if we had had better supervision, and I would urge the importance of this matter. I find no fault with any of the Post Office officials, who have given excellent service, and I have always been able to get from the Deputy and everybody else every possible attention, but these men should not be asked to do more than it is possible for them to perform efficiently.

Mr. BUCHANAN: I do not want this interesting discussion about newspapers to conclude without some remarks from myself, because if I were to sit silent as a publisher of one of the papers known as Liberal-Unionist it might be construed as a recognition that some of the insinuations which have been made in regard to them were correct. I want to say that the demand which the hon. member for Maisonneuve makes, that there shall be published in a prominent place in every newspaper the names of the shareholders and officers, is not objectionable to me. I do not think that any newspaper in Canada would raise any objection to this proposal, although possibly there might be an exception or two. There have been many insinuations in the past that newspapers were controlled by corporations and others who could influence them as they pleased. But I am well enough acquainted with most newspapers in Canada to say that nearly all of them are under the individual control of the men in the business day in and day out during the whole year. The hon. member may shake his head, but I am talking about newspapers I know of, and I know most papers in Western Canada at any rate. We all live a good deal under suspicion in this world, and the hon. member for Maisonneuve is living in a state of suspicion in regard to the newspapers in Canada. I know that the voice of the journals in this country since he brought this question to the attention of Parliament has been almost unanimously in favour of the publication of the names of shareholders and officers, and if there were anything corrupt about the control of newspapers in Canada they would not favour the demand of the hon. member for Maisonneuve. But the insinuation has been made, not only by that hon. member, but by many others during the past year, that the Liberal newspapers throughout Canada had practically all been purchased in order to support conscription and the Union Government. I want to say to this Committee that the amount of business—and I am speaking as the publisher of a daily newpaper—that my newspaper has secured from this Government is not worth half of the business I secure from an ordinary advertiser in my own city. The advertising that was published in my newspaper—and I think that the same may be said of every newspaper in Canada—the advertising that went into my newspaper went into every Liberal newspaper in the Dominion. The Military Service Act advertising and the Victory Loan advertising went into every newspaper, Liberal and Unionist, Labour and Church, French and English.

Mr. LEMIEUX: My hon. friend said he got some business from the Government. Does he know that he had no right to receive business from the Government?

Mr. BUCHANAN: I cannot follow my hon. friend's question across the floor of the House. I will see in Hansard what he says and answer him on another occasion. As a newspaper man I want to say that I have always conducted a newspaper that supported, and that is supporting now, Liberal principles. The day when parties and leaders can lead a newspaper around and dictate what its policy shall be is past. Newspapers have minds of their own and they are going to express their own individual opinions. The best thing that can happen governments and parties is to have a press that is honest with them and a press that will not hesitate to criticise its own party or the government it is supporting. The trouble with governments in the past has been that the press has been too servile towards them and they have not attempted to criticise them as they should have done. What the Government and the country generally will benefit most from is an independent press. Take an example from the United States. Probably the greatest newspaper there is the New York Times. It is considered to be a democratic newspaper but the Democratic government at Washington cannot rely on the New York Times because the Times expresses its own opinion always and no leader of a Democratic party can go into the office of the New York Times and tell it what it is to do. It is going to be the case in Canada in the future that no leader or partisan can go into any newspaper office and say what kind of editorials it is going to publish or what kind of an opinion it is going to express to-morrow morning or to-morrow afternoon. In my judgment the time for that kind of thing is past. Talk about newspapers being purchased by advertising! If it were the case that newspapers were purchased by advertising nearly every weekly newspaper in Canada would long ago have been owned by Lydia Pinkham or Dr. Chase. As the publisher of a Liberal newspaper I was supporting conscription long before conscription was proposed, and I was advocating Union Government before Union Government came into existence. I was not going to abandon the things I had advocated when there was a possibility of their being adopted.

I am not asking for a light to be placed in the window, because I will follow my own course, but in so far as the paper I publish is concerned, I have followed an independent course during the war. The procedure that I will follow after the war will be decided by myself, not by any party, not by Union Government, and I think that will be the case with every Liberal Unionist paper in the country. I may not agree with this Government in the future, and if some other party comes forward with principles that I believe to be in the interest of Canada I am inclined to think that the newspaper that gives me my living and in connection with which I occupy most of my time, will follow and support those principles. That is going to be the policy of the press generally throughout Canada in the future.

[Mr. Buchanan.]

All these insinuations that are hurled at the newspapers, and all these charges about them being bought by advertising or about their being corrupt, are not worth the time that has been occupied by this House in making them by a responsible member of Parliament. I make the assertion that nobody can establish under any circumstances that any newspaper in Canada was paid to support conscription or Union Government—no Liberal newspaper at any rate, and I know most of them in Canada. The Liberal newspapers in Canada are still Liberal are still in favour of the principles of the Liberal party and the principle of conscription and of the unity of the country are principles of the Liberal party. That is why they supported conscription and that is why they supported Union Government.

Mr. CAHILL: Does the Post Office Department intend to give a service on the Canadian National Railway between Ottawa and Pembroke? There are fifteen stations along that line and four or five villages that are being served from Canadian Pacific points, by stage coach as a rule. While the service given was a little cheaper in that way, yet we are paying money for the carrying of the mails by stage that is going to individuals who are not making any profit but using up time and horseflesh because they are tied up to contracts. If this money were paid over to the Canadian National railways it would be like taking it from one pocket and putting it into the other, or, into the Canadian treasury. When you figure out the loss that would be made in operating the mails on the Canadian National railway between Ottawa and Pembroke it would be more than made up by the difference in the amount paid for the carriage of the mails. I would like to ask if the department would be in a position to give a service between Ottawa and Pembroke on the Canadian National railway.

Mr. ROWELL: The matter is one with which I am not personally familiar, as I am only speaking for the Postmaster General, but I understand it is under the consideration of the department. The question that arose originally when the matter was suggested was that of expense as compared with revenue. This is a road where the expense is very substantial and where the revenue is not as great as upon other sections where a service of that kind is given. However, it is true that the revenue would come into the Canadian National railway and the matter is under consideration.

Mr. PROULX: Is it the intention of the department to establish a mail service on the Canadian National railway between Ottawa and Montreal?

Mr. ROWELL: The whole matter of a mail service on the Canadian National railway is under consideration by the department.

Mr. G. B. NICHOLSON: I desire to say a word with reference to the position of the rural postmaster. It is true that since the last session of Parliament there has been some relief given to the rural postmasters but I am confident that an investigation of the situation in which they are placed will show that they are not being fairly treated. They are not being paid for the work they are expected to perform. Last year I took the trouble to go into the details of the scale under which they were paid and I satisfied myself at least that the new scale adopted did discriminate between the smaller postmasters in a manner that it did not do in relation to postmasters in offices where the gross revenue was from $8,000 to $10,000 and over. The new scale, or the scale in effect, as has been stated, was 40 per cent on the first $800 and 25 per cent on all over $800. It is now 50 per cent on the first $1,000 and 25 per cent on the balance. The old scale was 50 per cent on the first $1,000 and 30 per cent on all over $1,000. Leaving that aside altogether, when every other class of man in the country has had his rate of remuneration increased from 100 to 150 per cent, the rural postmasters, who are asked to perform a most important service for the public and the rural communities in particular had an increase of five or ten per cent in the rate of their remuneration.

In the constituency I represent there are dozens, yes scores, of postmasters and post offices that must be maintained—some one must be there all the time—where the remuneration would not pay for the services of a boy or girl of fourteen or fifteen years of age. The postmasters have to take all the responsibilities that go with the situation, and conditions are such that it is becoming almost an impossibility to get people of any reputation whatever to fill these offices. I have urged upon the department the importance of the post office service to the rural communities. One of the things that the Government of Canada can do to build up a contented rural community is to give them an adequate postal service, and yet in many parts of the country they are not getting it.

There is another point, to which my hon. friend from Regina (Mr. Cowan) has referred, and that is supervision. I have received a letter on that subject with a request that I read it to the House. I am not going to detain the House by reading the whole of the communication, but I will give some extracts that will emphasize the point to some extent. The letter also has relation to the question of salaries and the investigation which has been made by a commission with a view to re-classifying the public service, and the first paragraph that I will read relates to that:

> Men with experience should have been consulted by the experts appointed for the purpose. We suggested this to the commission months ago, but did not get even a reply; and when one of them was here he did not see, so far as we are able to learn, any mail clerk on a route perhaps the most important in Canada, as it is the trunk line where bulk is broken both ways for all Canada.

Then the writer says this with regard to supervision:

> The other night practically all the letter mail for the West—

That is the whole of Western Canada.

> missed the train, and was delayed twenty-four hours because the transfer man failed to make the proper connections. The main trouble with the Post Office service is that there are only privates and generals. For instance, in my opinion, the most important post office official in Toronto is the chief transfer man at the Union Station, and yet he ranks only as a transfer man with the nominal pay of a letter carrier. We have no traffic experts to correlate the business. Clerks on this route have almost begged the department to re-arrange the running so that the work would be more continuous and better done, but there is always a No, no, without even an enquiry. The department does not seem to realize that all other railroad service has outstripped the railway mail service, which just stands pat until there is a public protest. . . . . The post office service is the backbone of business, and it might pay business men in Parliament to have a committee authorized to call in for consultation a few of the field men who do the actual work.

I will not take up time by reading the balance of the letter, but the extracts I have read give some idea of what is in the minds of the men who are actually doing the work. I know some of these men and they have drawn to my personal attention the conditions that exist in connection with the mail service. I will go further and say that to my personal knowledge the mails going North and West out of the city of Toronto during a large part of 1918 were delayed, not once, but sometimes four and five days a week, for twenty-four hours, for the reason which has been stated in this letter—the lack of proper supervision. I question whether any commercial institution in the world would undertake to have a business of the importance of the Post Office Department carried out in the way that the mails are taken from the post office in large cities and placed on the trains. All over the Dominion this work is performed by a messenger without any one to supervise the manner in which it is done. If it was simply a matter of a few bags of mail it would not be so serious, but when four, five, six and sometimes seven carloads of mail matter have to be placed in such a way that it can be properly handled and properly distributed to all points in Western Canada—and the same applies to other parts of the country, but I am only speaking in regard to something that I am personally familiar with—you have a business that requires expert attention. You cannot go out on the street and hire some boy, and say: Take all this mail matter and load it on the cars and have it in such a way that the mail clerks can distribute it. The contention made by my hon. friend from Regina (Mr. Cowan) is perfectly correct. The Post Office Department will give more efficient service and in the end save money by getting experts to supervise the work that is being done; by calling into its councils some of the men who 11 p.m. are actually doing the work. The railway mail clerks—these are the men I know most about—are giving good service, but they are handicapped in the performance of their duties because they are working along the same lines as thirty years ago when transcontinental trains first began to run from the East to Vancouver.

Mr. TOLMIE: Is it the intention of the Government to consider the feasibility of carrying mail by an air service? This is a matter of great interest to some of us on the Pacific Coast. It has been taken up by our boards of trade out there with the suggestion that this method of carrying the mails be adopted, if it is found to be possible. We have a number of aviators, very expert men, in this country, who have returned from the war, but who, on account of their inability to find occupation in their particular profession, are now leaving Canada and going to other places where they can make profitable use of their knowledge and experience.

The CHAIRMAN: I do not want to interrupt the Committee, nor do I want to rule the hon. gentleman out of order, but the discussion which has been taking place for some time past refers more especially to item 310, Post Office—Outside Service. I take it for granted that the Committee will have no objection to this item and the one already announced being discussed together.

Mr. BUCHANAN: I did not at the time understand the question put by the hon. member (Mr. Lemieux), but I have since learned what it was. I may say that I am, and have been for some years, acquainted with the law in regard to members of Parliament accepting business from the Government, and there is no danger of my being disqualified any more than other members of the House who may be shareholders in a newspaper, or any other company, except, of course, those engaged in public works.

Mr. ROWELL: The matter to which the hon. gentleman (Mr. Tolmie) refers has been under the consideration of the Post Office Department for some months. Last summer certain trial trips in carrying mails from Toronto to Ottawa, and from Toronto to Montreal, were made, the result of which was satisfactory so far as expedition in the carriage was concerned. The whole question of an air service for Canada is a very large one, and affects a good many of the Government departments. Consideration has been given to it by the Department of Militia and Defence, the Department of the Naval Service, and the Department of Mounted Police. The Chairman of the Cabinet Committee on Reconstruction has been devoting particular attention to the subject, and has introduced a Bill into the House of Commons providing for the creation of an Air Board. It is really a question of practicability, having regard to the distances to be travelled. I quite agree with hon. gentlemen that in view of the present situation in Canada very great benefits would accrue if we could establish at not too great a cost the transport of mails by airplane, particularly to bridge the great gap between east and west, as it would really contribute to the unity of the country. But at the present time, as my hon. friend is aware, airplanes are expensive to purchase and to operate, and the whole matter will require the greatest care and consideration, and that is one of the objects of the appointment of an Air Board as suggested in the Bill now before the House. I agree with my hon. friend that in view of the magnificent part which our Canadian boys have taken in the air service abroad—they have been unsurpassed in their work, and individual Canadians have distinguished themselves, above all others I was going to say, but certainly equal to any—we would like to maintain their splendid traditions in some form by developing an air service here. The matter will receive the most careful consideration of the Government.

Mr. BLAKE: I desire to draw to the attention of the House, the laxity of the postal department in answering communication of postmen and hon. members during the postmen's strike last year. I think that strike could have been averted if the deputy minister, or whoever was in charge of the department, had been prompt in answering the communications of the men. The department was to my mind, certainly lax when the strike broke out, in withholding any information as to what the men were claiming and what wages they were receiving. No information on the matter was available in Winnipeg until the Minister of Labour arrived there and the strike had made considerable headway. I have had to wait as long as a week for an answer with regard to an inquiry I made of the department. I think the department might well look to their laurels and answer inquiries more satisfactorily, not only when communications are addressed to them by the postmen, but also by hon, members.

Mr. McKENZIE: I have listened, Mr. Chairman, with a great deal of interest to the discussion in connection with the Post Office Service. There is perhaps no public service that comes home more closely to every individual than the service rendered by the Post Office Department; and accordingly the discussion that we had a few weeks ago on the question of whether the minister in charge of such a public service should sit in this House rather than in the Senate comes very much to the fore to-night. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Rowell) in charge of the Estimates to-night for the Postmaster General is a good lawyer of wide experience, and as such he knows that hearsay evidence is not evidence at all, and that no judge will listen to it. My hon. friend (Mr. Rowell) gathered this hearsay evidence very industriously and very cleverly as he was going along, but it would have saved a good deal of trouble if the deputy minister, or the other assistant who is here, were permitted to furnish information direct, rather than put it through the unnecessary machinery of being chewed out to us by the President of the Council. It strongly emphasizes my point, that such a popular institution as the Post Office—I say popular because it deals with everybody— should be represented in this House by its head, the Postmaster General. I sat for many years in this House with the distinguished senator who is now Postmaster General, and far be it from me to say anything about him except that he is a first class man in every sense. But he is not in this House and cannot get a proper impression of public sentiment—and every public man must be governed to a very great extent, if not altogether, by public opinion. I said a few days ago that in this democratic country the head of every department should be represented in this House as far as possible. Of course, the hon. gentleman who was giving us this second-hand evidence to-night was doing very well, and possibly no other member of this Union Government could do very much better. Nevertheless, we cannot help feeling when we see a minister, I care not what department he is representing, casting about for information to support his Estimates, that he is not seized of the matter himself, and really has no opinion of his own. I submit, therefore, that it is highly desirable, as I have already stated, that questions of this kind should be dealt with by ministers sitting in this House, and I trust that the day is not far distant when this very important department will be so represented.

The management of the department seems to me to be somewhat extravagant. The ordinary revenues, of course, go into the coffers of the department, and are supposed to be used to carry on the operations of the mail service. We find that in 1911 and for a few years thereafter there was a very substantial surplus, but according to the figures given to-night we then struck deficit upon deficit, and I venture to say that if the department was confined during the past year to its own legitimate revenue we would have rather a striking deficit as a result. On the operations last year, stamps which were sold, not for the purpose of carrying the mails, but for other purposes, had found their proper channel, there would be a deficit of something like $4,000,000. That does not speak well for the management of the department, in view of the fact that the war has brought a great deal of additional revenue to it on account of the hundreds of thousands of men overseas to whom their parents and relatives were sending letters and packages.

Possibly larger subsidies had to be paid for carrying these mails across the water, but I do not believe that the number of employees in the post offices have been materially increased, or that additional amounts have been made to mail couriers throughout the country on account of the war. I do know, however, from the experience in my own town, that an enormous amount of mail matter went through the post office which would not have been transmitted had there been no war. I reason, therefore, that had not the extraordinary revenue of the war, direct and indirect, gone to the credit of the post office, the showing of that department would not be satisfactory; indeed, the deficit would perhaps be the largest we ever had.

Occupying the position that I do, I should be careful in entering upon this discussion about newspapers—whether newspapers were bought or whether newspapers were sold. We have passed through a period of very deep agitation. There has been a strong and striking division among the people, intensified by a situation which we hope we shall never again meet or have to deal with. Our attitude should be, I think, that every man and every woman in this country was earnest and honest in the course that he or she pursued in connection with the war and that the division that took place among friends on the question of conscription was of the most honest kind. That is the only way, as I understand it, in which equity, fairness and justice will be extended to all. The war has been won; we Canadians are engaged in advancing the best interests of the country, and I see no good purpose in perpetuating the division that arose over this question. So far as I am concerned, I will be no party to any such feeling. But apart altogether from any such accusations as that against newspapers, before as well as since the war-election the member for Victoria (Sir Sam Hughes) made very strong insinuations—not insinuations, but statements—along the line of the observations made by the member for Maisonneuve. Hon. gentlemen sitting to your right, Sir, had equal provocation then to stand up in their places and deny those accusations. Whether a charge of corruption against a newspaper comes from your right or from your left, Mr. Chairman, makes no difference; but it is a striking fact that nothing was said about the matter by hon. gentlemen opposite when the member for Victoria made the statement that the press was "sweetened;" that the money of this country was being used to corrupt the press and to create a favourable public opinion for the Union Government. Sir, I hear no strenuous denials of that statement. I am not saying that I lost any sleep in pondering its truth or otherwise; but if it was necessary for hon. gentlemen opposite to make vehement, denunciatory denials to-night, it was equally proper and just that they should have made them then. All of us were children once, and we shall always have some more or less childish sentiments. If one child hears another accusing his fellow of something, and it is not denied, that child assumes that the accusation is true. An accusation was made by the member for Victoria, and there was no denial of it; it was allowed to pass as true. It is only the instinct of childhood, therefore, for us on this side, in our innocence, to believe that the accusation is true; and if we repeat it we are only repeating what was stated by an ex-minister and a very prominent member of the Conservative party.

I need not emphasize the importance of a clean and untrammelled press, a press which is faithful to its duty to the people. I was surprised to hear the President of the Council even suggest to-night that it was necessary to pay the press in order that the views of the Government might reach the people. What is the press for? Do I pay for a newspaper merely for the sake of getting a piece of paper with some print on it? I pay for a newspaper as I pay my preacher, or as I pay a teacher who instructs my children. I pay for that newspaper because it is its business to gather news, to gather opinions, and to publish them so that I may read them. Is it to be said that, apart from what I am paying for my newspaper, the man whose opinions are worth having must always pay for having them published in the paper? That is the doctrine that is preached here to-night. Over two millions of the money of the people—who had no two millions to throw away—had to be paid to the newspapers in order that views of the Government and of public men should find their way into the press. That is not my view of public service as it should be rendered by the press.

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friend certainly misunderstood what I said if he thinks I said anything like what he is attempting to answer. What I said was that the people were entitled to know of the activities and of the work of the Government, and that the principal money spent along this line was in connection with Victory Loans, increased food production, and other campaigns of that kind.

Mr. McKENZIE: What my hon. friend said will appear in Hansard. I might go further and say that it will appear in print generally, whereas very little of what I say will appear. When a man on this side of the House tries to put his views before the people, a very meagre, indifferent and unsubstantial portion of what he says appears in the press, whereas the minutest details of the professions of hon. gentlemen who sit on the Government benches are lapped up with delight and glee. That is the striking difference. But we know that what we say will at least find its way into Hansard, and that we may, through some strenuous work, get it out here and there before the country.

We should like to reform the press so that it would convey to the people the views of everybody as expressed, without any painting of tainting, so far as may be worth while, and let the people judge for themselves. The people are the great jury in this country; let us put the evidence before them, and let them judge whether they shall serve Baal or whether they shall serve God. If they wish to serve Baal, that is their business, and the blood will be on their own heads. We have had a good deal of talk but, if the Chairman will excuse me, it has been quite germane to the subject under consideration. We are talking about a public service; we are rendering assistance by means of one public service to another public service. Newspapers may be private-owned, but they are a public service because their product goes through the public channels. You can buy your groceries from any store you like and nobody knows anything about it but yourself, but a newspaper is not confined to any individual; when it is published it is available to the whole country. It is therefore a public service, and it is important to us all that it should be conducted along proper lines, in a truthful manner, without any improper influence being brought to bear upon it, and without any contamination of the real fountains of truth. For these reasons it was quite proper for the hon. member for Maisonneuve to bring these matters to the notice of the House. An hon. member of this House is reproached if he says anything here that he would not say on the street. That should not be the case. It is possible for a man to go too far in that line, of course; the law does not always recognize the protection of this House. If a man says anything here that is malicious or slanderous or which cannot be justified, in the ordinary sense of the word, his shelter in this House does not protect him. The protection of this House is to afford an opportunity for fearless and open expression of opinions which if expressed outside, might possibly be slanderous in the eyes of the law. If a man makes use of that protection to bring before the public questions which he thinks are in the interest of the body politic, but which, if expressed outside, would drag him into court, he is simply making use of a protection which the British constitution has afforded to members of Parliament from time immemorial. If he uses that protection properly, for the purpose of getting the people to think of what is going on, I submit he should not be reproached or accused of taking improper advantages of the privileges which the law throws around a man sitting in this House.

As a last word, let me say that we were told by the hon. member for Victoria (Sir Sam Hughes) perhaps not more than twenty days ago in this House, that this Government was owned body and bones by a certain gentleman residing in the city of Toronto. I heard no denial of that statement; I hope it is not true. I only mention it to show that there is an opinion abroad that wealth cuts too much figure in this country, that corporations have too tight a hold on the Government and can influence the press, that big money has greater influence than the individuality of any single man. Those are the things that we are trying to bring to-night to the attention of the President of the Privy Council and the Government, so that they may guard against them. It is only a few days ago that I read in a newspaper that ordinary people in this country must not expect newspapers to be free from outside influence so long as they are not willing to pay for their newspapers. "You must expect," says that newspaper, "that the men who pay for the advertisements will have a certain influence on the editorial opinions of the paper." I was surprised to find that in a newspaper, but I suppose it is true. If it is the case that a newspaper is influenced, not by public opinion, but by the weight of advertising which comes into its business office, is it not time that we should receive with some degree of caution the expression of opinions as we find them in those newspapers? When a man becomes editor and launches into the newspaper business he must expect to be criticised and his conduct to be closely scrutinized as is the case with all public men. For myself, and I am sure I am speaking for every hon. member of this House, when we put ourselves in the hands of the public we are quite willing to be properly and legitimately criticised. The same holds true of a newspaper. It is better that we should sometimes tread upon the corns and hurt the feelings of a newspaper man than that, through any laxity upon our part, the people of this country should suffer for lack of purity of opinions or honesty of publication upon the part of the organs which have the best opportunity of expressing public opinion.

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friend spoke of the extra cost of administering the Post Office Department having regard to the revenues, and I think it is only right to point out in what respect that increase arose out of the war. The Post Office Department has, I think, approximately 1,500 employees who have gone overseas to serve at the front and who are paid by the department. The department has had to engage other employees to do their work here. Hon. members have only to stop and think to realize what a very large sum of money that amounts to. The second factor is the war bonus to the employees of the department, and the third is the increased cost of supplies. The three together more than make up any possible deficit which would arise if you deducted the revenue derived from the sale of the war-tax stamps.

Lest my hon. friend should on some other occasion say that he suggested that a certain gentleman was the owner of this Administration and I did not deny it, may I say that he is no more the owner of this Administration than is my hon. friend or any of the others whose names have been coupled with it on different occasions.

Mr. COPP: With regard to the 1,500 employees who went overseas, is it the policy of the department to give them back their old positions?

Mr. ROWELL: Yes.

Mr. COPP: Is it being done?

Mr. ROWELL: My information is that all permanent employees have been given back their positions. I know there are cases of hardship where there were temporary employees who retired from the service and went overseas and other temporary employees are now filling their positions, and the Civil Service Commission has been called upon to consider these cases. I know of cases of real hardship, and I hope the Civil Service Commission will find it possible to give to these temporary employees who enlisted and went overseas positions in the service.

Mr. COPP: I am very glad to know that consideration will be given to such cases, and when the acting minister said that positions were being given to these men I thought he was not well informed.

Mr. ROWELL: To the permanent employees. I understand they are getting their positions back, but the others I mentioned belong to the temporary class.

Mr. TWEEDIE: Some postmasters have small offices and their salaries are anywhere from $1,000 to $1,500 a year. They enlisted in the earliest stages of the war and other postal employees who had not offices enlisted at the same time. These employees received their full salaries as provided by Order in Council for civil servants who enlisted at the first of the war, but the postmasters who had these small offices were compelled to employ and pay postmasters to do their work. They gave up their positions and have lost their civil salary, which nearly all the other civil servants who enlisted at the same time receive. I would like to know whether it is the intention of the Post Office Department to adjust the claims of these postmasters and have them reimbursed to the extent which they have paid out to others to perform their duties while they were overseas. This matter has been before the Post Office Department, the Militia Department and the Civil Service Commission, and yet these men have been unable to get any satisfaction.

Mr. ROWELL: I understand my hon. friend refers to men who are not in the Civil Service. The rural postmasters are not in the Civil Service in the sense that the regular city officials are. The rural postmasters are paid a percentage on their business plus whatever minimum they get. So far as I know the matter has not been before the Government for consideration. It has not come to my notice, and I am sure it has not come before the Post Office Department.

Mr. TWEEDIE: My informant advises me that it had been before the Post Office Department and had been taken up with the Deputy Postmaster General and had been referred to the Militia Department.

Mr. ROWELL: I will see that it is brought to the attention of the Government.

Mr. TWEEDIE: I want more than having it brought to the attention of the Government. I want to see some measure of justice given these men. These men technically may not be civil servants. Their yearly salary is determined on the past year's earnings, and I think it is an absolute injustice to let them leave these offices, enlist and go overseas, and tell them they will not get a cent, while employees in other branches of the Civil Service get their full salaries. They are equally good men, and it is unfair to crowd them through some hair-splitting technicality. The number in the whole of Canada is not very large, and it would be only fair on the part of the Government to reimburse these men.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: Does the minister intend to give the House any information as to the reduction of the rate of postage? Is it not a favourable time to return to the two-cent stamp instead of the three-cent?

Mr. ROWELL: That question was asked in the absence of my hon. friend from the Committee. I said that it had been asked this session and that the answer was that any announcement affecting the revenue would be made in the Budget.

Mr. McKENZIE: It is now 11.40 o'clock, and we have had a good deal of discussion. I would suggest to the minister that we might let the first item go through and adjourn. We could let the second item stand.

Mr. ROWELL: I thought possibly we could let both go through because the Post Office comes up again under the Supplementaries. However, we will pass the first one.

Mr. DUFF: I would like to have this vote explained—Superintendent Mail Contracts, Controller Railway Service, Controller Postal Stores and Superintendent Staff Branch, $4,000 each. It seems to me before we let that vote pass we should have some discussion on the different items. What is the reason for these increases?

Mr. ROWELL: The increases have been given because it is felt that these public servants have earned them and should receive them. All Deputy Ministers are being increased from $5,000 to $6,000. Now in regard to these other men who are getting increases, not one of them has been in the service less than twenty-five years, and they run to thirty, and one over forty years of efficient public service. These public servants are simply receiving small increases having regard to the important positions that they fill.

Mr. PROULX: If all these officials deserve an increase, certainly, there is an army in the post office department in the country who also deserve increases.

The CHAIRMAN: Order. I allowed a great deal of discussion on the Outside Service on the understanding that both items would be considered together. I see now that the second item concerning the Outside Service it to be considered as if it had never been discussed. I therefore must rule that the discussion concerning Outside Service salaries is absolutely out of order.

Mr. DUFF: I have listened with a great deal of pleasure to the explanation given by the minister in regard to the reasons why the salaries of deputy ministers and others should be increased. I have no objection to that, but I notice that messengers, packers and sorters do not get any increase.

Mr. ROWELL: Messengers, packers and sorters get a special bonus or allowance, and there is a supplementary estimate before the House to continue to all those parties drawing the lower salaries the total bonus granted last year. The estimate continues the bonus to them to the first of July. In the meantime, we will have the re-classification of the Service before the House and it will give us the new salaries and new bonuses which will be dated back. All these are deserving of the fullest consideration, and that they will receive when we get the new classification before the House.

Mr. CANNON: I wish to call the attention of the minister to a circumstance that happened in Quebec some time ago. A mail clerk was killed in an accident on the Intercolonial.

The CHAIRMAN: Order, that has nothing to do with the Inside Service.

Mr. CANNON: Certainly it has to do with the post office.

The CHAIRMAN: That has to do with the Outside Service. All the clerks in the Quebec post office are in the Outside Service.

Mr. McKENZIE: That can be dealt with when that item is up?

The CHAIRMAN: Yes.

Mr. CANNON: I think the discussion was very much wider than this item.

The CHAIRMAN: The discussion was very wide on the understanding that the two items were to be discussed and passed together. Objection has been taken to the passing of the second item, and therefore I must keep the Committee to the first.

Mr. CANNON: Then I will discuss the first. The minister mentioned, a moment ago, that fifteen hundred employees of his department had gone to the Front. The Postmaster-General went over to the Front also, and I would like the minister to tell me when he came back.

Mr. ROWELL: According to my recollection, he returned about the month of July or August, 1918.

Mr. CANNON: While the Postmaster-General was in France or England, was he drawing his salary as a minister?

Mr. ROWELL: So long as he was Postmaster-General, I assume he drew his salary, but I have no personal knowledge.

Mr. CANNON: Is the minister in a position to tell me if the Postmaster-General drew his pay as a Lieutenant-Colonel?

Mr. ROWELL: I cannot say.

Mr. CANNON: These are very important matters and the public ought to know the facts. The Hon. Mr. Blondin is a member of the Senate, he is not here to give us the information, and I think the item should stand. The next time it comes up before the Committee the minister may be better informed.

Mr. ROWELL: I cannot consent that the item should stand. It is already agreed that it is to be passed to-night. I understand that there was a question on the Order Paper, and the answer given was that Mr. Blondin only drew his salary as Postmaster-General.

Mr. PROULX: Did he not draw his salary as Colonel?

Mr. ROWELL: I have no personal knowledge.

Mr. CANNON: While Mr. Blondin was in France, England or Italy, which department paid his travelling expenses, the Post Office Department or the Department of Militia and Defence?

Mr. ROWELL: I would assume that it would be the Militia Department; the Post Office Department certainly did not pay them.

Mr. CANNON: That is only an assumption?

Mr. ROWELL: I say that the Post Office Department did not, so I assume that it must have been the Militia Department.

[The Chairman.]

Mr. CANNON: Will the minister say whether Mr. Blondin was accompanied by Mr. Laflamme, what Mr. Laflamme did, and who paid him?

Mr. ROWELL: Mr. Laflamme accompanied the minister. I assume he drew his ordinary salary. I could give my hon. friend that information when we take up the next item.

Mr. CANNON: I shall not be able to discuss this with my hon. friend because the next item deals with the Outside Service.

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friend can put a question on the Order Paper and he can get an answer at once.

Mr. CANNON: I have a right to get an answer now. Now is the time for the minister to give me the information to which I am entitled. The minister has no right to tell me to put a question on the Order Paper. I will do that if I think proper, but if I wish to put a question verbally it is the minister's duty to give me that information, and if he cannot, I think the item should stand.

The CHAIRMAN: Shall the item carry?

Some hon. MEMBERS: Carried.

Mr. McKENZIE: With the understanding that when we go into the Post Office Estimates again this information will be given by the minister.

Mr. ROWELL: Quite so.

Progress reported.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Rowell the House adjourned at 11.55 p.m.

Monday, May 5, 1919.

The House met at Three o'clock.

ARMISTICE TERMS—LEAGUE OF NATIONS COVENANT.

Hon. N. W. ROWELL (President of the Privy Council): I beg to lay on the table of the House copy of a document received from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, being the terms of the Armistice concluded between the Allied Governments and the Governments of Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Turkey; also copy of the revised draft of the League of Nations Covenant as approved by the Peace Conference in plenary session on April 28, 1919. In view of the importance of the League of Nations Covenant and the desirability that members of the House should have copies in their possession, I move, with the consent of the House:

That one thousand copies of the revised draft of the League of Nations Covenant, as adopted by the Peace Conference in plenary session, laid on the table of the House on May 5, be printed forthwith, and that rule 74 be suspended in relation thereto.

Mr. SPEAKER: This motion requires unanimous consent.

Motion agreed to.

WAR TROPHIES.

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. J. H. BURNHAM (Peterborough West): I should like to ask the Government whether it has seen a news item in to-day's Montreal Gazette which says that Canada's display of war trophies may be housed in a building to be erected at Nepean Point, Ottawa, by Lord Beaverbrook. Is this report correct, or is it the intention of the Government to build a national museum for these war trophies?

Major-General MEWBURN (Minister of Militia): A small committee was appointed consisting of Sir Byron Walker, General Cruikshank and Dr. Doughty of the Archives, to go into the whole matter of the collection of war trophies and war records, the idea being that a commission would probably be formed, representative of all the provinces, to consider the matter. Dr. Doughty has succeeded in collecting a very large number of war trophies from the battlefields of Europe, and these will be gradually sent out to Canada. A large collection of paintings and photographs was also procured under the direction of the Canadian War Records, which was under the control, I understand, not of the Government, but of Lord Beaverbrook.

Sir SAM HUGHES: It was under control of the Government.

Major-General MEWBURN: It is the intention to present these paintings, which include some of the most valuable in the country, to Canada. It is hoped that some scheme will be worked out whereby a proper building will be erected wherein these paintings, and also the war photographs, may be displayed; and that a proper repository may be found for the war trophies. Moreover, a large number of trophies will be available for distribution throughout various parts of Canada. The committee to which I have referred has been getting data and receiving applications from various places in Canada so that when the trophies arrive here some systematic method of distribution throughout the Dominion may be adopted. Outside of that nothing definite has been worked out. The report of the committee will come in in due course.

CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS LIBERTY IN RE-ESTABLISHED COUNTRIES.

On the Orders of the Day.

Sir SAM HUGHES (Victoria): I wish to bring to the attention of the Ministry the desirability of having the representative of Canada at the Peace Conference instructed to see that civil and religious liberty shall be accorded to those re-established countries in which it has not hitherto been recognized. Have any steps been taken to ensure that in the re-establishment of those nations where clerical oppression has been the rule, there shall be no more of that class of tyranny, but that the utmost freedom of worship shall be accorded to all?

Sir THOMAS WHITE: I am not aware that the subject in question has been under consideration by the Peace Conference; possibly it has. I shall be very glad to take my hon. friend's suggestion into consideration.

DOUKHOBOR LANDS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

On the Orders of the Day:

Hon. CHARLES MURPHY (Russell): In common with other members of the House, I have received a communication from Mr. James Mavor, 8 University Crescent, Toronto, transmitting a printed copy of an open letter addressed to Sir Thomas White, Acting Prime Minister of Canada. The subject matter of both communications will be placed briefly before the House for the purpose of asking a question if I read three short sentences in the transmitting letter:

May I draw your attention to a scandalous proceeding which is now going on in British Columbia, ostensibly under the auspices of the Dominion Government.

I am given to understand that at the present moment appraisers are at work in the Doukhobor settlement at Grand Forks, B.C., valuating the lands and other property in order that they may be expropriated and the settled community broken up.

The scheme is clearly a conspiracy on the part of land speculators, local politicians and rival fruit farmers who are exploiting the returned soldier and proposing to rob a group of peaceable and industrious, though peculiar people, of the fruits of their industry.

May I ask the Acting Prime Minister if he has received the communication referred to in this transmitting letter, and if so, what information he has to give the House on the subject?

Sir THOMAS WHITE (Acting Prime Minister): I received a copy of the letter only this morning. It has not been drawn to my attention that the Dominion Government has in any way been connected with the transaction referred to. The question of ownership of land in British Columbia would seem to be under provincial jurisdiction. The Minister of the Interior, however, who has charge of the administration of the Soldiers' Land Settlement Act may reply to my hon. friend with more knowledge of the matter than I possess.

Hon. ARTHUR MEIGHEN (Minister of the Interior): I have read, at all events, most of the letter addressed to the Acting Prime Minister. The submissions of fact made in that letter are beyond what can be justified, so far as any information that has reached me goes. There is a committee of inquiry, headed by Mr. Paterson, investigating lands offered for sale in British Columbia, and amongst lands reported to be offered for sale were certain lands offered by the Doukhobor community. I do not know whether the committee have investigated those or not. Were they to do so, however, it would not be with the view to expropriate, because there are no expropriatory powers now vested in the Soldiers' Settlement Board and it is not purposed to vest the Board with power to expropriate lands now being reasonably used. At the time that the committee was at work, I received a telegram from Mr. Peter Verigin to the effect that he had made a certain offer to sell, but that the same was made under duress. I drew the attention of the Soldiers' Settlement Board to the telegram, and I advised Mr. Verigin that, if he had made any offer under duress, he should consult his solicitor in the matter.

PEACE TREATY—CONDITIONS OF LABOUR—THE EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

On the Orders of the Day:

Hon. NEWTON WESLEY ROWELL (President of the Privy Council): The hon. member for North Winnipeg (Mr. Blake) on Friday asked if the Government had any information as to whether provisions for an eight-hour day had been incorporated in the Peace Treaty, and I promised to give an answer to-day if possible. On Monday last, the 28th of April, on motion of the Prime Minister of Canada (Sir Robert Borden), the following clauses relating to labour were unanimously approved for incorporation in the Peace Treaty:

The high contracting parties, recognizing that the well-being, physical, moral and intellectual, of industrial wage-earners is of supreme international importance, have framed a permanent machinery asking that of the League of Nations to further this great end. They recognize that difference of climate, habits, and customs of economic opportunity and industrial tradition make strict uniformity in the conditions of labour difficult of attainment. But holding as they do that labour must not be regarded merely as an article of commerce, they think that there are methods and principles for the ratification of labour conditions, which all industrial communities should endeavour to apply so far as their special circumstances will permit.

Among these methods and principles, the following seem to the high contracting parties to be of special and urgent importance:

First—The guiding principle above enunciated that labour should not be regarded merely as a commodity or article of commerce.

Second—The right of association for all lawful purposes by the employed as well as by the employers.

Third—The payment to the employed of a wage adequate to maintain a reasonable state of life as this is understood in their time and country.

Fourth—The adoption of an eight-hour day or a 48-hour week, as the standard to be aimed at where it has not already been obtained.

Fifth—The adoption of a weekly rest day of at least 24 hours, which should include Sunday whenever practicable.

Sixth—The abolition of child labour and the imposition of such limitations on the labour of young persons as shall permit the continuation of their education and assure their proper physical development.

Seventh—The principle that men and women should receive equal remuneration for work of equal value.

Eighth—The standard set by law in each country with respect to the condition of labour should have due regard to the equitable economic treatment of all workers lawfully resident therein.

Ninth—Each State should make provision for a system of inspection in which women should take part in order to insure the enforcement of the laws and regulations for the protection of the employed.

Without claiming that these methods and principles are either complete or final, the high contracting parties are of opinion that they are well fitted to guide the policy of the League of Nations and that if adopted by the industrial communities who are members of the League and safeguarded in practice by an adequate system of such inspection, they will confer lasting benefits upon the wage-earner of the world.

That, I think, succinctly answers the question of the hon. member for North Winnipeg, as it appears that not only an eight hour day, but a weekly day of rest, a living wage, the abolition of child labour, equal pay for men and women for equal work, the right of the association for all lawful purposes, are declared to be the standard for which all nations should work. It is a matter of gratification to the House and to the country that the Prime Minister of Canada was permitted to move the adoption of those clauses which will in the future be looked upon as the Magna Charta of labour.

Sir SAM HUGHES (Victoria): I was out of the House when the first part of this statement was read, and after I came in I did not hear of any obligations on the part of labour. Are there any?

Hon. Mr. ROWELL: This is a declaration of what labour is entitled to.

PRIVATE BILLS.

SECOND READINGS.

Bill No. 83 (from the Senate) for the relief of Albert Greensward.—Mr. Middlebro.

Bill No. 84 (from the Senate) for the relief of Mary Jane Lyons.—Mr. Hocken.

Bill No. 85 (from the Senate) for the relief of Rose Kent Miller.—Mr. Morphy.

Bill No. 86 (from the Senate) for the relief of Elizabeth Winters.—Mr. Mowat.

QUESTIONS.

(Questions answered orally are indicated by asterisks.)

CHAMBLY CANAL AND ROADWAY.

Mr. BOYER:

1. Does the Government intend to repair in a permanent manner, this year, the roadway extending between Pointe Cascades and Coteau Landing along the bank of the Soulanges canal?
2. If so, what is the amount of appropriation therefor?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. Yes.
2. $75,000.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT:

1. Have sworn complaints relating to the construction of the Government highway along the Chambly canal been received by the Government since the beginning of the said construction three years ago?
2. If so, when, and by whom were said complaints made?
3. Is it the intention of the Government to investigate the matter?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. No.
2. Answered by No. 1.
3. Answered by No. 1.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT:

1. Have sworn complaints relating to the administration of the Chambly canal, particularly that which is under the direction of Superintendent Robitaille, been received by the Government?
2. If so, when, and by whom were said complaints made?
3. Is it the intention of the Government to inquire into the complaints made?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. Yes.
2. In 1918, by Alexander Champagne, Chs. Dupuis, Chs. Magavenny, Simeon Barsalou, L. H. Hebert, Stanislas Houle, E. S. Filiatrault, Arcade Bissonette, Joseph Aquin.
3. Yes.

PROVIDENT FUND ACT.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Queens):

1. Have the employees of the Government Railways asked the Government, since last session of Parliament, to amend the Provident Fund Act?
2. If so, is it the intention of the Government to have the said amendments passed by Parliament and become law during the present session?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. Yes.
2. Under consideration.

MESSRS. HENRY AND FERGUSON.

Mr. MACKIE (Edmonton):

1. Is the R. A. C. Henry, named in the Estimates of the Department of Railways and Canals, the young man referred to in the answer of the minister on April 7, as having been assigned to the Canadian Northern arbitration case?
2. If so, what is the amount of increase in salary given to him since December, 1917?
3. Is the Inspecting Engineer named in the same estimate, Mr. Ferguson, who was connected with the Canadian Northern arbitration? If so, how much has been added to his salary since 1917?
4. What were the salaries of these young men before they were assigned to the Canadian Northern case, and what will be their salaries when the Estimates now before the House have passed?
5. Were the increases of salary to these young men recommended by Mr. Graham A. Bell?
6. How long has Mr. Ferguson been in the service of the Department of Railways and Canals?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. Yes.
2. $900.
3. Yes, $1,200.
4. Mr. Henry, $2,800-$3,300; Mr. Ferguson, $4,000-$4,500.
5. Recommended by the chief engineer and approved by the deputy minister.
6. 14 years.

FEDERAL HOTEL, OTTAWA.

Mr. TOBIN:

1. Is the Government leasing a building formerly known as the Federal Hotel, corner of Sussex and Besserer Streets, Ottawa?

2. If so, from what date was this building leased?

3. What was the annual rental paid each year by the Government?

4. Has the lease recently been renewed?

5. What is the annual rental being paid now by the Government?

6. From whom is this building being leased?

Hon. Mr. BURRELL:

1. Negotiations are now in progress to lease this building for use of the Board of Pension Commissioners, but so far, no definite arrangement has been made.

2. Answered by No. 1.

3. No payments made.

4. No previous lease made.

5. Not established.

6. Stewart & Harris.

EMIGRATION FROM CANADA.

Mr. BALDWIN:

1. How many people have left Canada to settle in the United States within the last three years?

2. How many people have come from the United States to settle in Canada within the last three years?

Hon. Mr. CALDER:

1. No information available.

2. 173,418.

RETURNING OFFICER OF NORTH BRUCE.

Mr. MURPHY:

1. Who was the Returning Officer for the Electoral District of North Bruce in the General Election, November 19, 1917, to December 17, 1917?

2. What instructions, if any, were sent him by the General Returning Officer or from the office of the General Returning Officer, Ottawa, with reference to the question of the right of Indian women to vote?

3. Did Rev. F. Parke, the enumerator at a poll in or near the town of Southampton, Ontario, receive instructions to place the names of squaws resident on the reserve near Southampton on the voters lists? If so, by whom were such instructions given and when?

4. Is Rev. F. Parke a brother-in-law of Hon. I. B. Lucas, Attorney General of the Province of Ontario?

5. In his report to the General Returning Officer did the Returning Officer for North Bruce report that about sixty squaws voted at or near Southampton, and that he had instructed the enumerator to place their names on the list in consequence of a telegram he or enumerator Parke had received from the office of the General Returning Officer, such instructions being contrary to the law?

6. Did the Returning Officer in his report to the General Returning Officer report at what hour on election day Rev. F. Parke gave certificates to the squaws to vote without notifying the Liberal candidate or his agent that he (Parke) was so acting?

7. Did the Returning Officer in his report to the General Returning Officer state what number of squaws voted at or near Southampton?

[Mr. Tobin.]

Hon. Mr. BURRELL:

1. John Wesley Reany, Port Elgin, farmer.

2. By telegram dated December 10th, 1917, the returning officer of North Bruce enquired of the general returning officer at Ottawa whether mothers, wives and sisters of Indian soldiers overseas were entitled to vote. He was answered by wire on same day, not by the general returning officer in person but by an official of his office as follows: "Yes, mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of Indian soldiers have the vote." The general returning officer is of opinion that this advice was correct in Ontario only with respect to Indians not in receipt of treaty money and not living on a reserve, but that it would be correct without qualification in Quebec. Upon inquiry made, he finds that he directed the official who despatched the wire to the returning officer to answer in conformity with previous instructions given to returning officers, and that the official answered erroneously as the result of following instructions which had been issued to inquirers from Quebec province. The official so answered in good faith and the error was not discovered until after the election was over. This is the only known error which occurred within the office of the general returning officer throughout the elections.

3. No information.

4. No information.

5. No.

6 and 7. Answered by No. 5.

COMMERCIAL CABLE CO.—HAZEL HILL, N.S.

Sir SAM HUGHES:

1. Who owns the Commercial Cable Company property at Hazel Hill, Guysboro County, N.S.

2. Is this a Canadian, a British or a United States Company?

3. Who is the superintendent or chief officer in Canada of this company?

4. Who employs and discharges the officers and operators of the company?

5. Were officers of this company refused permission to enlist for overseas service?

6. Is Mr. F. G. Burstall in the service of the company? If so, in what capacity?

7. Has the Canadian Government any control over the company or over its officers and operators?

Major General MEWBURN:

1. The Commercial Cable Company, head office, New York.

2. A United States Company.

3. F. G. Burstall, Hazel Hill, N.S.

4. General Manager, New York.

5. Not so far as the Government is aware. After the passing of the Military Service Act, exemptions were applied for by the company on behalf of cable operators and granted by tribunal.

6. Yes. Superintendent, Hazel Hill station.

7. Governmental control over the cable station and the staff of the company is limited to censorship, and has not been extended to the relations between the company and its employees.

I.C.R.—EXPRESS PARCELS.

Mr. D'ANJOU:

1. Is the Government aware that a large number of parcels, which are sent by express on the Intercolonial Railway, either become lost or are not delivered to the person to whom they are addressed?

2. If so, what steps are being taken to remedy this deplorable condition?

3. If not, does the Goverment intend to take such steps as will insure delivery of the parcels which are committed to the express companies on the Intercolonial Railway for transmission?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. No.

2. No steps are being taken.

3. No steps can be taken except to call attention of the express companies to the complaints.

C.N.R.—LEGAL EXPENSES.

Mr. DAVIDSON:

1. How much money was paid by the Canadian National Railways or by the Canadian Government Railways, to the law firm of Bureau and Bigué, of Three Rivers, since the Canadian Northern Railway System has come under the control of the Canadian Government?

2. Is it to the knowledge of the Government that Mr. Jacques Bureau, M.P. for Three Rivers, is the head of the law firm of Bureau and Bigué?

3. Is it the intention of the Government to have Members of Parliament act as legal advisers for the Canadian National Railways?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. No money has been paid to Messrs. Bureau and Bigue by Canadian Northern Railway System since the Government acquired control of the company.

2. No.

3. Legal advisers of the Canadian National Railways will be appointed under instructions of the Directors of that company and it is presumed that they will avail themselves of the services of such legal firms as will best serve the purposes of the railway.

MESSRS. TASCHEREAU, ROY, CANNON AND PARENT.

Mr. DAVIDSON:

1. How much money was paid by the Canadian National Railways or by the Canadian Government Railways to the law firm of Taschereau, Roy, Cannon and Parent, of Quebec, since the Canadian Northern Railway System has come under the control of the Canadian Government?

2. Is it to the knowledge of the Government that Mr. Geo. Parent, M.P., is a member of the law firm of Taschereau, Roy, Cannon and Parent, of Quebec?

3. Is it the intention of the Government to have Members of Parliament act as legal advisers for the Canadian National Railways?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. Messrs. Taschereau, Roy, Cannon and Parent have been employed by the Canadian Northern Railway since 1903, and the annual fees are $2,000, and the amounts paid to them since September 30, 1917, are as follows: October 31, 1917, $1,000; April 30, 1918, $1,000; October 31, 1918, $1,000.

2. No.

3. Legal advisers of the Canadian National Railways will be appointed under instructions of the Directors of that company and it is presumed they will avail themselves of the services of such legal firms as will best serve the purposes of the railway.

DOMINION POLICE FORCE.

Mr. DECHENE:

1. How many men were employed in the special force of the Dominion during 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917 and 1918?

2. What were their salaries?

3. What were their duties?

4. What was the amount of their expenses?

Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN: So far as the Dominion Police Force is referred to, the replies are as follows:

1. 1913, nil; 1914, 250 employees at a total expense of $80,449.27; 1915, 254 employees at a total expense of $154,225.24; 1916, 228 employees at a total expense of $161,260.47; 1917, 249 employees at a total expense of $205,018.13; 1918, 505 employees at a total expense of $293,433.06.

2. From $2 to $6.66 per day.

3. General police and secret service work.

4. The total amount of their expenses was $894,386.17.

VICTORY LOANS—$50 BONDS.

Sir HERBERT AMES:

1. How many $50 bonds were allotted to subscribers in connection with the fourth or first victory loan?

2. How many in connection with the fifth or second victory loan?

3. What proportion of these $50 bonds mature within five years?

Sir THOMAS WHITE:

1. 699,451.

2. 612,744.

3. 1917 Victory Loan, 81.8 per cent; 1918 Victory Loan, 77.5 per cent.

IMPORTATION OF GASOLINE FARM ENGINES.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Guysborough):

1. How many gasoline traction engines for farm purposes were imported into Canada between November 30, 1917, and February 9, 1919?

2. What were the various values placed upon tractors so imported?

3. Were those tractors subject to the usual customs duty?

4. Was a drawback paid to importers? If so, what was the gross amount paid in drawback?

5. Was permission given to any special firms or importers to import said tractors or any tractors free of customs duties?

6. If so, what are the names and post office addresses of the importers obtaining such permission?

7. Was the privilege of importing such farm tractors between the said dates open alike to all dealers or only to special dealers obtaining permission from the Minister of Customs?

8. What was the gross amount of the customs duty remitted on farm tractors imported between said dates?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. The number of "Portable engines with boilers in combination and traction engines for farm purposes" entered at customs houses from November 30, 1917, to February 28, 1919, was 1,524. The number of "Traction engines for farm purposes, costing not more than $1,400 in the country of production" entered at customs houses from February 8, 1918, to February 28, 1919, was 15,121.

2. The total values of the foregoing were as follows: "Portable engines with boilers in combination, and traction engines for farm purposes," $2,541,613. "Traction engines for farm purposes, costing not more than $1,400 in the country of production," $14,640,609.

3. Traction engines, costing not more than $1,400 in the country of production, for farm purposes, were made free from 7th February, 1918, by Order in Council as per copy attached herewith. Traction engines costing more than $1,400 were subject to the usual customs duty.

4. Drawback was not paid to importers on traction engines.

5. No.

6. Answered by 5.

7. The privilege of importing farm tractors was open to all dealers alike.

8. $4,026,167.75.

EXPORT OF FEED.

Mr. REID (MacKenzie):

1. Was there an embargo against the export, except under license, from Fort Willian by the Fort William Grain Company, of a ground manufactured feed contained in cars N.Y.C. 216016; G.N. 20041; B. & O. 78872; G.N. 23408; M.P. 35687; G.N. 122391; N.Y.C. 241441; S.P. 21483; Southern 15081,, during December, 1918, and January, 1919?

2. Did the inspection certificates issued by the Government Grain Inspector at Fort William on these cars correctly describe their contents?

3. If not, in what respect were the contents incorrectly described?

4. Were false export entries declared by the exporters of these cars?

5. Was there any other firm or firms connected with these transactions?

6. Has the minister taken any steps to fine or prosecute those guilty of infractions of the law in these transactions? If not, why?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. The goods contained in these cars are stated to have been ground refuse screenings. There was an embargo during December, 1918, and January, 1919, against the export, except under license, of screenings produced in cleaning wheat and other grains, which was held to include refuse screenings and ground refuse screenings.

2 and 3. The exporters presented the certificates of the Dominion Grain Inspector at Fort William as correctly describing the goods as refuse screenings.

4. Export entries are certified, but not sworn to, by exporters. The exporters certified these goods to be refuse screenings—regarding ground refuse screenings as covered by the term "refuse screenings."

5. The Department of Customs has no information.

6. The exporters claim there were no infractions of the law and the Department of Customs concurs in this view.

VIOLATION OF M.S.A.

Mr. DUFF:

1. Was Harry Woodbury of Spa Springs, Annapolis county, N.S., apprehended during April, 1919, for violation of the regulations of the Military Service Act?

2. Was the said Harry Woodbury ever examined by a duly constituted medical board under the Military Service Act regulations?

3. If so, what report was made upon his medical or physical fitness for military service, and in what category was he placed?

4. Was the case of the said Woodbury ever dealt with by any member or members of a local exemption tribunal?

5. If so, what action was taken by the members of the said exemption tribunal?

6. Was the said Woodbury arrested for violation of the Military Service Act regulations? If so, where and when?

7. Where and before whom was he tried, and with what specific violation of the Act was he charged?

8. What penalty was imposed upon the said Woodbury?

9. Did he pay a fine or was he imprisoned? If the former, what was the amount? If the latter, what was the sentence?

Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN:

1. Yes.
2. Yes.
3. Category "E." Nervous disability.
4. No, as said Woodbury failed to register under the Military Service Act.
5. Answered by 4.
6. Yes, at Middleton, April 17, 1919.
7. Tried before Stipendiary Magistrate McLeod at Halifax as a Group 1 defaulter.
8. Fined $15 and court costs, amounting to $8; or, in default of payment of fine, thirty days in county jail at Halifax.
9. Paid fine of $15 and costs.

INCOME WAR TAX—ASSESSMENT OF FARMERS.

Sir HERBERT AMES:

1. How many persons giving their vocation as farmers or stock raisers have paid income tax under the Income War Tax Act, 1917?
2. How are these divided as to provinces?
3. Is the business of farming and stock-raising specifically exempted from the operation of the Business Profits War Tax Act?

Sir THOMAS WHITE:

1. Number assessed, 5,885; amount assessed, $417,349.10. Number paid, 3,623; amount paid, $219,826.84.

2.

	Number Assessed.	Number Paid.
Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia	12	7
New Brunswick	4	3
Quebec	30	27
Ontario	396	342
Manitoba	1,454	1,281
Saskatchewan	1,084	564
Alberta	2,826	1,325
British Columbia	79	74
Total	5,885	3,623

3. Yes.

THE INCOME WAR TAX—TOTAL ASSESSMENT.

Sir HERBERT AMES:

1. What was the total amount assessed on incomes under clause 4 of the Income War Tax Act, 1917?
2. Of that amount, how much had been collected and paid prior to December 31, 1918?

Sir THOMAS WHITE:

1. Assessments approved by Department of Finance to 30th April, 1919: Number, 42,145; amount assessed, $10,031,094.28.

Payments received at Department of Finance to 30th April, 1919: Number, 32,715; amount paid, $6,865,047.10.

2. Assessments approved by Department of Finance to 31st December, 1918: Number, 22,293; amount assessed, $4,570,140.77.

Payments received at Department of Finance to 31st December, 1918: Number, 13,009; amount paid, $1,698,445.37.

Note.—Many firms which would otherwise be assessable for income under the Income War Tax Act are not liable to assessment by reason of their paying a larger amount under the Business Profits War Tax Act.

CIVIL SERVICE APPOINTMENTS.

Mr. McCURDY:

1. Is it the present practice of the Civil Service Commission in making appointments to the Civil Service to stipulate that all appointments shall be considered as temporary until the period of demobilization shall have passed?
2. If not, is it the intention of the Government to prevent further permanent appointments until demobilization has been completed?
3. If not, what steps has the Government taken to insure that men yet on active service shall enjoy an equal opportunity to compete for these positions?

Hon. Mr. BURRELL:

1. No. All appointments of a permanent character are made from eligible lists of candidates who have passed prescribed examinations or have been successful in open competition after public advertisement. In both cases returned soldiers are required to possess only the minimum of qualifications when they take precedence over all civilians no matter how highly qualified. Permanent appointments are not made except on specific request from the departments.

2. Until demobilization has been completed, it is not the desire of the Government that permanent appointments to the Civil Service should be made except in those cases where it is necessary in the public interest.

3. Answered by No. 2.

ADVERTISING OF CIVIL SERVICE VACANCIES.

Mr. POWER:

1. By what means are vacancies in the Civil Service of Canada advertised?
2. Does the Civil Service Commission always advertise in the newspapers?
3. If not, under what circumstances are such advertisements published?
4. If so, what newspapers are authorized and paid by the department for such publications?

Hon. Mr. BURRELL:

1. The columns of the Canada Gazette, a mailing list of all persons known to the commission as likely to be interested, posters sent places of public resort, such as post offices, banks, libraries, colleges, universities, offices of the Great War Veterans' Association and its branches, and, in a few special cases, by newspapers.

2. No.

3. In the case of certain local positions, when a small advertisement in the local press seems to be the only means of bringing the notice of the vacancy to knowledge of persons interested, or when the other means of publicity have failed to secure a suitable applicant for a local position.

4. None. The paper, or papers, with the largest circulation in the particular centres where the vacancies occur are chosen in each case.

Mr. PAPINEAU:

1. Has the Government purchased a marble bust of the Right Honourable Sir R. L. Borden? If so, what was the urgency or necessity of the expenditure therefor, during war time?

2. What has been done with the said bust, and how much did it cost?

Sir THOMAS WHITE: Will the hon. member in whose name this question stands indicate any information that has come to him in regard to the purchase of this bust? We have made inquiry and have failed to find any basis for the question.

Mr. PAPINEAU: It is in the Auditor General's Report for the year 1915-16 under Public Works for repairs and furniture, Ottawa public buildings.

Sir THOMAS WHITE: I shall note my hon. friend's statement in Hansard and make further inquiry.

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURNS.

Mr. DOUGLAS (Strathcona):

1. What rental per month does the Government pay for all branches of Government service in the city of Edmonton?

2. What several branches of Government ser vice are represented in Edmonton?

3. What building or buildings do they occupy and what is the monthly rental of each branch of the service?

Mr. DECHENE:

1. What was the value of farm implements exported during the years, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917 and 1918?

2. To which countries were the said implements exported, and who were the exporters?

3. Were any tractors exported?

UNOPPOSED MOTIONS FOR PAPERS.

Mr. McMASTER:

For a copy of all tenders submitted and contracts entered into, concerning the installation of wireless equipment in all steamers built or acquired by the Government since August, 1914, together with all correspondence relating thereto.

Mr. LAVIGUEUR:

For a copy of all correspondence between the Government and the city of Quebec and other stockholders in Quebec, London, New York and elsewhere, with reference to the proposed purchase by the Government of the minority stock of the Quebec and Lake St. John Railway and of the Great Northern Railway of Canada, now forming part of the mileage of the Canadian Northern Railway operated by the Government?

[Mr. Burrell.]

CONTROL OF AERONAUTICS—APPOINTMENT OF AIR BOARD.

On the motion of Hon. A. K. Maclean Bill No. 80 to authorize the appointment of an Air Board for the control of Aeronautics was read the second time and the House went into Committee on the Bill, Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

On section 1—Short title:

Mr. BELAND: Has the minister given a general explanation of this Bill?

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: I really cannot say anything more than is stated in the Bill which I explained briefly on its first reading. Obviously there must be some development in commercial aeronautics in the immediate future. During the war the development in aeronautics related almost entirely to military and naval affairs. Private and commercial aeronautics was prohibited altogether and consequently there was no development along these lines. It is necessary, in view of the probably development of aeronautics, that there should be some governmental control of such matters and it is proposed to establish a Board which shall have entire control of any Government or commercial service. If my hon. friend will look at section 3 he will see there set forth the duties of the Board which will cover fully, I think, all the probable activities in aeronautics. Section 4 is the other important clause and that empowers the Air Board to establish regulations for the control of aeronautics.

Section agreed to.

On section 2—Air Board; chairman and vice-chairman; representatives of Militia and Defence and Naval Service Departments; term of office; salaries.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: It is not proposed to establish another department to administer this Act. I would suppose that most of the members of the Board would be selected from established departments of the Government. The administration of the Act will be largely in the hands of the vice-chairman of the Board who will be the chief executive officer. It is necessary, of course, to have representatives of the Naval and Militia Departments upon the Board for the reason that heretofore they have been very much and practically interested in aeronautics. Consequently it is proposed that they shall have direct representation on the Board. It might be urged that the Post Office Department, the Interior Department, the Dominion Police and some other departments should be represented on the Board. However, there was a reason at the moment existing for the representation of the two departments I have mentioned and it is not deemed advisable that other departments which may possibly be interested in aeronautics in the future should all be represented on the Board. But, it will be understood that this measure is of a temporary nature. I have no doubt that in the working of it during the coming year weaknesses will develop but experience will enable us to pass legislation which will be more satisfactory.

Mr. MORPHY: I have listened to the statement of the minister and I would judge from it that his intention is to set up a theoretical Board rather than a practical one. Otherwise, he would have stated the fact that we have a large number of the finest Canadians who have ever done service for their country many of whom have returned to Canada after real practical service on the battlefields of Europe. While there may be men who have been employed with the military and naval services in Canada this is a very opportune time of recognizing the boys who have been fighting for their country, and doing good practical work, and of calling to the service of the country some of these young men who fought for it. I will leave that with the minister. I think that there should be some recognition given to these boys who have done their duty overseas.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: Doubtless the class to which my hon. friend refers will be represented on the Board.

Mr. COPP: Has there been any consideration given to the question as to the salaries that will be paid as to those who serve on this Board?

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: No consideration so far has been given to the matter. It is impossible to give any information to my hon. friend which will be at all reliable at the moment. Possibly the chief executive of the Board will be one who is now employed in some department of the Government. The other members may possibly serve without pay. The development will be largely commercial and perhaps it will not be very extensive for a time. I am hopeful that all the members of the Board will not be paid.

Mr. COPP: Is any provision being made in the Estimates this year for this service?

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: There will be in the Supplementary Estimates.

Mr. COPP: You could give us some idea from that.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: The Committee will have some idea of the probable expense when the Supplementary Estimates are brought down.

Mr. STEVENS: Will the minister kindly state if it is in the mind of the Government that this Board shall at an early date undertake the commercial development of aeronautics, not with the idea that it is to be merely an adjunct of military and naval development but with the idea of taking up definitely the commercial development?

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: If my hon. friend is inquiring whether the Government intends entering into the field of commercial aeronautics, I am bound to reply that it has not yet considered the matter from that aspect. The operations under the Act will, of course, largely relate to commercial activities; I would expect that for the next few years, at least naval and military activities in aeronautics will be very limited, indeed.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I do not think the minister has given the Committee very much information as to the functions which this board is to perform. I have not got any clear idea as to whether it is simply to manage aeronautics in connection with private enterprise, or whether it is to embark upon some large scheme of its own.

The CHAIRMAN: The remarks of the hon. member will be in order when we take up the next clause.

Mr. CAHILL: Has the Government any idea with respect to its future policy on the subject of aeronautics?

The CHAIRMAN: The remarks of the hon. member will be more in order when we take up clause 3.

Mr. McKENZIE: Before we pass this clause I would like to ask if the operations of the board to be created under this Bill are to be centered at Ottawa?

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: Yes.

Mr. McKENZIE: It will be an organized body under the supervision and control of some department of the Government?

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: Yes.

Mr. McKENZIE: Is it intended, in connection with the operations of this board, to establish an institution or school where practical and theoretical instruction in aeronautics will be imparted so as to render a man thoroughly competent to take charge of an aeroplane?

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: Up to the present moment it is not the fixed or settled policy of the Government to establish a school for the purpose indicated. Speaking generally, the Government has no settled policy in respect to aeronautics. The Militia and Naval Departments, during the period of the war, carried out a programme, but it has now practically ceased. It was necessary to first enact legislation before any fixed policy could be adopted by the Government in respect of any form of aeronautical activity. Many applications have been received from commercial companies for the establishment of aeronautical routes throughout Canada; and, as I said a moment ago, it is open to the Government to embark upon various forms of aerial activities, such as the conveyance of the mails, the survey of forest, fire protection, patrols by the mounted police, and so forth, but at the present time, the Government has reached no definite policy in respect of any of these matters.

Mr. McKENZIE: What will be the real function of this board after it has been organized? What will it start out to do?

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: The immediate purpose of this legislation is chiefly to control aeronautics in Canada, established by any Government department or by private corporation. For example, it is not within the right of any individual to fly in the air with aeroplanes or hydroplanes, or any other machine of the kind, although there is no statutory law which directly prohibits it.

Mr. McKENZIE: It is entirely unknown to the common law.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: It is unknown to both the common law and the statute law. Consequently, nobody can legally engage in flying to-day, and in none of the provinces, nor in Canada, is there any statutory authority for any body to grant licenses for the purpose. This board must establish aerial routes, or to put it in another way: If a commercial company desires to carry on an aerial service between, say, Montreal and Toronto, their route should be first established and that would be one of the functions of the board. The machines used should be licensed and inspected just as a steamer is. The pilots and the crews must also be licensed, and that will be another function of the board. Furthermore, regulations must be enacted, compelling flying machines to use telephonic or wireless apparatus, and in relation to many other matters which do not occur to my mind at the present moment. I think a very close parallel to the control of aerial navigation is the control which we exercise over shipping, with, of course, the very notable difference that one operates on water and the other in the air. Generally speaking, the object of the legislation is to put ourselves in a position to control aeronautics, chiefly commercial, as that is the form we shall likely have in the immediate future in Canada.

Mr. ERNEST LAPOINTE: By this Bill, according to the minister, Parliament is establishing its authority over aerial routes and all matters concerning air craft. But does my hon. friend think that if a company, for instance, established a line between Montreal and Quebec, to operate exclusively within the limits of that province, it would be a provincial matter, and that the company in question should not come under the authority of this Parliament unless its undertaking is declared to be for the general advantage of Canada? My hon. friend classifies aerial navigation with marine navigation, but article 92 of the British North America Act declares that a provincial legislature may exclusively make laws in relation to the matters coming within the class of subjects "hereinafter enumerated," and article 10 of section 92 sets forth:

> Local works and undertakings other than such as are of the following classes:—
> Lines of Steam or other Ships, Railways, Canals, Telegraphs and other Works and Undertakings, connecting the Province with any other or others of the Provinces, or extending beyond the limits of the Province.

Therefore if such a company were operating exclusively within the limits of one province it would be a provincial matter, and I do not think this air board could fix the route, or control the license to pilots, and other matters in connection with it.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: The constitutional question, of course, arises in connection with this matter, and had it been pointed out to the Fathers of Confederation that we might possibly have this aerial development in later years, it would be difficult now to say whether it would have been placed in clause 91 or 92 of the British North America Act.

Clearly, the legislation, if enacted, would cover interprovincial aeronautics, and consequently to that extent the Federal Government would have control. Whether it has control over purely provincial aeronautics is a question open to very much doubt, and possibly it will have to be settled ultimately by the courts. There is a clause in the British North America Act which in effect states that subjects not assigned to the provinces fall within Federal jurisdiction. Aeronautics were not placed in the list of subjects assigned to provincial jurisdiction, and therefore it is arguable that the subject falls within Federal jurisdiction. However, any doubt we may entertain on the point does not affect the competency of Parliament to pass this legislation, although later it may be held by the courts that it is only intra vires in so far as it affects interprovincial aeronautics.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I do not know if this development of transportation was known before Confederation, but two of the greatest poets of the 19th century, Lamartine and Tennyson, predicted that some day we would see argosies floating in the fair blue sky.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: And Jules Verne also.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Yes. I think the objection of my hon. friend from Kamouraska (Mr. Lapointe) was well taken. It seems to me that as the Government is so anxious to have Government ownership of all kinds of transportation, it should not lose this favourable opportunity of furthering that project. There is no incubus attached to aerial as there is to railway transportation, and the Government should take control of this new industry, which no doubt will develop to a very great extent in the near future. The British Government have already organized an aerial postal service and have mapped out three routes, one for freight, another for passengers, and a third for some public service, I think the postal service. The United States also have organized a postal service between Philadelphia, Washington and Baltimore.

Mr. ROWELL: And New York.

Mr. LEMIEUX: This may be only a tentative service—

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: I think it is experimental.

Mr. LEMIEUX: That is what I mean. But it seems to me that the Government should take into serious consideration the propriety of experimenting in this matter. Perhaps we would save enormous railway subsidies by organizing an aerial postal service.

I regret sincerely that the Government did not take over the magnificent plant which the Imperial Munitions Board erected at Camp Borden during the war. Unfortunately the whole plant was sold to an enterprising Yankee, and Canada lost thereby an excellent opportunity. If it is not too late, I would urge upon the Government the necessity of taking over that plant and giving Canada the benefit of it. We do not lack enterprise in aeronautics. During the war our young men showed that they were equal to the best among the Allies in that particular sphere. I need name only one of them who is world famous—Bishop. We have not only the men, but we have all the elements that constitute the material part of the industry itself. During the war the Imperial Munitions Board found in British Columbia the timber which was best suited for the construction of aeroplanes, and I understand they went even as far as to subsidize very heavily a branch line several miles in length in order to tap the district where that special timber was obtainable in large quantities. It seems to me that the Government should be extremely careful in its legislation,—more careful than it appears to have been in the present instance,—so as to start this industry in the right way.

The CHAIRMAN: Before I permit any more speeches on the principle of the Bill, I must ask whether it is the unanimous consent of the Committee that the principle of the Bill be discussed at this time. If not, I shall have to call the Committee to order. I called an hon. member to order a moment ago on this ground. I did not want to interrupt the hon. member (Mr. Lemieux) but the rules of the Committee are not being followed, and this accounts in great measure for the length of the session. Is it the pleasure of the Committee that the principle of the Bill be now discussed?

Some. hon. MEMBERS: No.

Mr. CAHILL: Will this board be empowered to grant licenses to any persons who wish to establish lines between Ottawa and Toronto, or between other points?

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: Yes.

Mr. CAHILL: If a company which established a line between Ottawa and Toronto wanted to establish a line also between Ottawa and Montreal they might ignore the specified landing places around Ottawa and lease for a trifling sum landing rights on any field within a reasonable distance of the city. Would it be within the power of this board to say that no company should have exclusive right to own territory for landing purposes? Airmen are now ready to leave Newfoundland for England; they have all decided to start at about the same place. It is possible that Prince Edward Island would be a very satisfactory landing place—perhaps more satisfactory, on account of the absence of fog, than any other part of the eastern coast. Some company, if you gave them a franchise, might go in there and blanket the whole island for a trifling sum, obtaining exclusive right to land there. Is it intended to give these companies any such exclusive franchise as was given to the Bell Telephone Company in the early days, when it was thought that no one else would be in a position to compete with them? Before this board is established, before they take power to tie the country up to anything, it would be well for the Government to have a well-defined policy in this matter; it would be well for them not to go too fast until they know what the outcome is likely to be.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: The only thing I can say in reply to my hon. friend is that the Government have not in mind the granting of exclusive privileges in respect of certain routes to any individual or company which may be organized. But we must be guided largely by experience in this matter. While at the moment it may seem undesirable to grant exclusive privileges to any person or persons, still a limitation of licenses granted to individuals along certain routes may be necessary. It might, for instance, be perfectly proper to grant a license to twelve or twenty-four persons to fly between Ottawa and Toronto, but, in the light of experience, it might be considered improper, possibly dangerous, to grant licenses to several hundreds or several thousands. As I have already indicated, the policy of the Government in this matter is not yet fully considered or matured. We shall be guided very largely by efforts which are made to develop aeronautics commercially by individuals or corporations. My hon. friend might suggest the propriety of our establishing a mail service between Nova Scotia and New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. That might strike one as a very desirable place to experiment in aerial mail service. I should not like to speak for the Government at the moment and say that they propose establishing such a mail service, but naturally, in the course of time, the Government must develop a policy in respect to these matters. If there is great activity on the part of private interests and private capital, it might be well to allow such interests to do a great deal of experimenting.

Section agreed to.

On section 3—duties of Air Board:

Major-General MEWBURN: I was glad to hear the remarks of the member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux) with regard to our taking over some of the property at Camp Borden. The Imperial Munitions Board spent a large amount of money in Canada in connection with the Royal Air Force. They had a school of aerial gunnery at Beamsville, on lake Ontario, which we did not consider it advisable to touch. They also had large buildings at Deseronto and large aerodromes and plant at Camp Borden where they spent millions of dollars. When the armistice was signed I immediately took the matter up with the Imperial Munitions Board and all that plant and machinery was transferred to the Militia Department.

It was difficult for us to determine from a military standpoint what should be done as regards the air force. I realize what wonderful work the Canadians did in the Royal Air Force, and while it seemed to me that we could not utilize that force in Canada for training purposes, I thought it my duty to protect, as well as possible, their property and equipment. Therefore, the buildings and all the equipment there were handed over to the Government for a mere song, and they are on our own training ground, Camp Borden, which is recognized as one of the best training grounds on the North American continent and which has been used for training American fliers. We also had handed over to us, free of cost, a large number of airships and also a quantity of maps and so forth, and we have retained a very small staff there to protect them. Some of the buildings we expect to utilize as hospitals, thus saving the erection of hospitals. At Long Branch, on lake Ontario, where the rifle ranges are, the Imperial Munitions Board erected a number of buildings which have been handed over to us, but other properties which were on leased ground were scrapped. All the property I have mentioned is intact, and we have the facilities for continuing training and developing an air force in the future. When my Estimates were being discussed the other night, I was discussing the reorganization of the militia, and if we have to reorganize the militia for defence and other purposes, no doubt an air force will form part of it. That, however, was one of the subjects that we decided the commission would deal with, and as regards the Air Board, I sincerely trust the magnificent men who have made such a name for Canada in the air will have the first opportunity of being recognized in this. Many of them are coming back and are now talking of the commercial side of the industry which is being developed in England. We have a large quantity of information both from France and England as regards air forces, and I sincerely trust that our men who have made good in the air from a military standpoint will be able to make a success in the air from a commercial standpoint.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Were there any Canadians associated with the American who bought the whole of the aerial property in Toronto?

Major-General MEWBURN: I do not know that there were. Col. Bishop told me that he expected to be interested in some British machines for which he was offered the agency, and while he had not worked out just what he was going to do, he hoped to be able to develop in this country some commercial enterprise, possibly in conjunction with the postal service. This Air Board is only a temporary one to study the question, and the Department of the Naval Service is represented on it merely to keep in touch with a view of developing something in the future.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I cannot agree with Shakespeare's lines: What's in a name? I would suggest that the minister have Col. Bishop on the first aerial board in Canada.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: I should like very strongly to second the suggestion of the hon. member. Col. Bishop is a native of my town and is a son of my former legal partner. I have known him from the day he was born to the present time, and he is to-day the world's champion living airman, having brought down seventy-two aeroplanes. He is a boy of whom any country might be proud, apart altogether from his ability and record as an airman. I would respectfully suggest that anything that can be done by the minister to secure his services on this Air Board would be one of the best moves the Minister of Militia could make. I understand he served for a time on the Administration Board in connection with the air service in London, England, and would be admirably qualified for the position, though I do not know if he would accept it at the present time.

Major-General MEWBURN: I do not think any salary the Militia Department could offer Col. Bishop would induce him to take such a position. I have had many consultations with him, but at the present time he is making something like $30,000 a month under contract in the United States.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I am sorry, because I would like to see a "bishop" associated with the present Government.

Mr. COPP: Under subclause (b) of section 3 this Air Board can travel throughout the whole country studying this question, without let or hindrance on the part of any one. They may go even into other countries, as they see fit. Under subclause (c), they have power to construct and maintain all Government aerodromes and air stations, including all plants, machinery and buildings necessary for their efficient equipment and upkeep. In these two clauses, the approval of the Governor in Council is apparently not necessary, and I should like to know whether or not it is the intention of the Government to give such wide powers to this Aerial Board.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: The purport of subclause (b) of section 3 is merely a direction to the Air Board to take cognizance of and to study aeronautical development in all countries of the world. It does not imply that the board is to travel as a body to do research work in connection with this matter. It might conceivably at some time be desirable for a member of the board to visit some countries to study the development there taking place, but I do not anticipate that much in the way of travelling will be done by members of the board for a considerable time. I think, however, it is a very proper provision that members of the board be directed to study the development of aeronautics in all countries in the world. Section 7 says that all the moneys proposed to be expended under this Bill must be voted by Parliament, so that Parliament will have control over the matter.

The purport of subclause (c) is to place in the hands of the Air Board the absolute control of the construction and operation of any air service owned by the Government. If the Post Office Department should decide to establish a service between Halifax and Newfoundland, or Halifax and Charlottetown or Halifax and St. John the control of the service would be in the hands of this Board. The Board will also control any services which originate in either the Naval Department or the Militia Department, and this clause places in the hands of one body all matters relating to aeronautics. I trust that this will commend itself to the judgment of my hon. friend. For the time being it seems the best thing to do. D and E are similar in character to C: it simply gives the Board the control and management of all aircraft and equipment necessary for the conduct of any of His Majesty's services. Possibly the Government may establish other services of its own, but in any event, such services when once established, and so long as this legislation stands upon the statute books, will be under the control of the Air Board.

Mr. COPP: I would not like my hon. friend to think that I am raising any objection to the passage of the Bill. My only object is to get some information in regard to it. The minister suggested that the possibility in the near future of a postal air service between Prince Edward Island and the mainland. Suppose a private individual started such a service, would this Board have the right to designate the landing places on the island and on the mainland and undertake the expenditure of public money in regard thereto?

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: If it were a Government service, yes; and if it were a private service, still in some respects the Air Board would have control. For instance, it might very properly designate the route to be followed by the service, and should certainly have the right of licensing machines and naming the landing places. In the case of a private concern, the Government, of course, would not expend any money in securing the landing places; that would be done by the companies. There is in contemplation the organization of private corporations which will shortly approach the Government for subsidies for the carrying on of a mail service between different points in Canada. It was necessary that we should have this legislation in order that private companies might be in a position to approach the Government for assistance to carry on public services or to conduct any form of commercial aeronautics themselves.

Mr. COPP: I quite agree with the minister that such legislation should be passed at this session. Aeronautics are only in the experimental stage and it is but right that opportunities should be given to develop this service if it becomes of commercial value to the country. I would suggest, however, that we surround it with adequate safeguards, particularly in connection with the expenditure of moneys. I fear that if money is expended without the approval of the Governor in Council a very much larger expenditure will be incurred than the Government or this Committee foresees at this moment.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: The Governor in Council will exercise a very critical control of expenditures. Clause 7 of the Bill reads:

> All salaries mentioned herein and all expenses incurred under the provisions of this Act shall be paid out of such money as may be appropriated by Parliament therefor.

The authority of Parliament must therefore be obtained before any money can be expended.

Mr. LEMIEUX: If it is good in this case, why not in the railway case? My hon. friend says that companies are already petitioning the Government to establish aerial mail services, and he gives us a gentle hint that the Government may favourably consider the request made by these companies. He has mentioned possible routes —Halifax and Sydney—

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: The Magdalen Islands.

Mr. LEMIEUX: My hon. friend has struck the nail on the head. The Magdalen Islands are the only group of islands inaccessible during several months of the year. Navigation closes at the beginning of January and is hardly open on the first of May, and it would be highly beneficial if a mail service could be carried on during the winter months between, say, Pictou and Prince Edward Island, and the Magdalen Islands.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: I have no doubt that matter will receive the attention of the Air Board. They would have to study very carefully the atmospheric conditions, the affect of altitudes, etc., before it could be definitely decided how practical these questions are. But when one is thinking of the practical uses to which aeronautics may be applied in Canada in public services, one immediately thinks of Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, the Magdalen Islands, the Yukon Territory, across lake Superior, James Bay and many other routes.

Mr. LEMIEUX: And the cruising of our forests.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: Yes, the cruising of our forests.

Mr. LEMIEUX: The Conservation Commission is very anxious that such a service should be established, and I note with pleasure that the province of Quebec has secured two aeroplanes to cruise the forests there.

Major-General MEWBURN: They can also be used for photographic purposes in the making of surveys.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Yes. The great enemy at present is fire, and according to statistics published lately the losses are colossal. I see in the establishment of an aerial service a great boon for Canada not only in the matter of defence but commercially and industrially.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: I see in the American papers that the United States Government have been experimenting in the locating of schools of mackerel by aeroplane. Possibly aeroplanes might be useful in that direction.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: I have seen that in the papers but I do not think that any experiments in that direction have been really made. I know of something analogous to that, though. The seal fishermen in Newfoundland were endeavouring some months ago to secure the services of an aviator—I do not know whether they succeeded or not—to fly out over the ice floes to ascertain the location of the seals and the openings for sealing vessels and steamers. That is easy of accomplishment if atmospheric conditions permit.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: You can see deeper into the water from above, and schools of mackerel can be located in that way. By this section the Departments of Militia and Naval Affairs are associated with this Board. Which department will it come under?

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: Both.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: What minister will be responsible for the administration of this board?

Major-General MEWBURN: That is not settled. There will be a representative of the Militia Department on the board.

Mr. ALFRED THOMPSON: Is the minister in a position to make a statement as to what development has occurred in regard to coastal patrol by seaplanes which will operate under this board? Some time ago I took the opportunity of expressing some ideas I had in regard to the development of the hinterland of Canada by the use of aeroplanes, and I am delighted now that the minister has brought in this Bill. I feel, with the hon. member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux), and other hon. gentlemen who have spoken, that we are on the eve of great events in so far as aerial transport is concerned. On another occasion when I was addressing the House, I pointed out that we had a tract of land 1,600 miles long and 1,000 miles deep just north from here where aeroplanes could be used for exploration purposes and for the carrying of scientists, geologists, naturalists, topographers and photographers, in order that the country might be properly mapped and explored. I also pointed out that the geologists have told us that the Cobalt and Porcupine formations in Northern Ontario extend northward. There is a great field for the use of aeroplanes in a scientific way. But, what I particularly desired to bring to the attention of the Committee was an accident that occurred on the west coast of this continent last fall when a steamer was on the rocks of the Lynn canal, and when 343 people were drowned, not one person being saved. A great work could be done on the coast in aiding shipping in bad weather by the use of aeroplanes, and I would be glad if the minister could say as to whether the plans of the Government contemplate a service of that kind more particularly on the Pacific coast and in British Columbia.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: The service to which my hon. friend (Mr. A. Thompson) refers is one of the many that it is intended shall come within the purview of the board. Just how practical a service the aeroplane might render on the coast is one which, of course, will have to be determined by experience. But at least I can inform my hon. friend that that is one of the subjects which will have the attention of the board when it is established.

Mr. MOWAT: With regard to clause 3, which with clause 4 is the chief operating clause of the Act, I would say that the draughtsman has done his work well, but there is one thing that he has not had present in his mind in connection with the matter and that is as to the question how aeronautics is going to interfere with the property rights of the public. I would suggest to the minister that he consider that point before the Bill goes through. According to the law, as it has stood for many hundreds of years, the right of the property owner extends usque ad caelum ab inferno, that is up to the heavens and down beneath the earth. That is his property. It may be that we have arrived at a stage in the world's history in which a machine has come which will suddenly be launched across his property. While a flier may be far up in the air and could not be said to do very much harm to a man's property, sometimes aeroplanes come very near to a man's house and they do make a great deal of noise. You may have claims made by certain property owners who do not want these things coming over their houses or property. There is nothing in the Act which enables the Government to say that aeroplanes shall have the right to pass over a man's property or to define the conditions under which that right shall be exercised. I do not share with the minister the doubt that he seems to have as to his power to enact this legislation as having reference to the point raised by my hon. friend from Kamouraska (Mr. Lapointe).

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: As to provincial service only.

Mr. MOWAT: Quite so. Property rights will be provincial. You have the right to legislate with regard to that because you have the exhaustive clause of the British North America Act which says that anything which is not provincial is Dominion. You have besides that, the Post Office service, the naval service, and the military service, and, last, but not least, the service suggested by the hon. member for Yukon (Mr. A. Thompson)—the geological service. That brings it into the Interior Department. With all these uses in the different departments of the Government to which the aeroplane might be put, there seems to me to be a preponderating case in support of the contention that these are Dominion matters and would naturally come under the control of the Dominion authorities. How could an air man know where the exact position of the provincial boundary was? When he starts out on his journey he must have some rule or regulation which will carry him to the end of it in Canada without regard to what particular province in Canada he may be in. I doubt if any one will raise the point that this is a matter for exclusive provincial jurisdiction. If any one does, it behooves the Dominion Government to fight for Dominion rights with all the power they have. I agree that it is a good general purpose Bill. It is impossible to foresee all the things that will come under it but its provisions are expressed in general terms and if the minister will consider the addition of a clause which will give the right to go over properly either with or without compensation—I do not care which—he will be making a Bill which will do for the time being and until we know more about the subject. It seems to me that the Bill should pass at this session even if it is not wholly adequate to provide for all cases so that the world may know that Canada, is, as usual, in the van in regard to improvements in science.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: As my hon. friend (Mr. Mowat) in closing, referred to the necessity of legislation at this session, I would like to emphasize the statement a little farther and say that I am very anxious to have the Bill become law at once and that I shall probably ask His Excellency's assent to this Bill long before the closing of Parliament. I do not desire to amend the Bill with a view of abrogating any of the common law doctrines in respect to property rights in the air. In view of recent developments, the point is one for the courts to determine but I doubt very much if that doctrine would be held to have much validity under the circumstances. I would refer my hon. friend to paragraph (i) of section 4 which reads as follows:

(i) the institution and enforcement of such laws, rules and regulations as may be deemed necessary for the safe and proper navigation of aircraft in Canada or within the limits of the territorial waters of Canada;

The subsection 3 immediately below reads as follows:

(3) All regulations enacted under the provisions of this Act shall be published in the Canada Gazette, and, upon being so published, shall have the same force in law as if they formed part of this Act.

The important thing to have in mind in aerial navigation is the protection of life and property, and I have no doubt the board will provide by regulation that no flying machine shall approach the ground, or approach a building, within a certain number of feet. I have heard the story frequently, and I assume it is a fact, of somebody when flying in the city of Vancouver entering a bedroom where a patient was being attended by a doctor; the machine and pilot landing in the bedroom. We will seek to avoid the repetition of such a discourteous act as that by providing a regulation that the flight of the airplane shall be of a certain height in order to safeguard, so far as is possible, the safety of property and person. I submitted the Bill to the Justice Department before introducing it, and was told that the measure was perfectly constitutional and about the best that could be done to meet the situation for the time being.

Mr. CRONYN: I rise to support the suggestion of the hon. member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux) that this is a good opportunity to really consider Government ownership in connection with aeronautics, and I bring the point up under subsection (11) of the clause under discussion. I would urge upon the minister, when preparing the regulations considered necessary for the control or operation of aeronautics in Canada, to make those regulations so drastic for the time being that the Government will be able to keep that control within its own hands. I think one of the tests to be brought to bear on the question of public ownership is whether the particular business under consideration has become, or is likely to become, a natural monopoly; and while it is impossible for us to foresee, as was instanced in the case of the Bell Telephone Company, to what extent aeronautics may become a monopoly, there is some danger of it. Some months ago I overheard a discussion in New York about the formation of a wealthy syndicate to acquire the landing places around the great cities in the United States, and thus to completely control aeronautic operations, or aviation between those points. It is evident that unless an aeroplane can come close to the heart of a city to make a landing its speed avails little, because the time consumed after the landing is made to reach that centre, takes so much off the time gained between cities that the aeroplane comes then into competition with the railway. I might also be permitted to point out to the minister that Mr. Rudyard Kipling, many years ago, drafted a code of aeronautics. Following his wonderful tale which, I think, is called "The Night Mail," he as a matter of tour de force of the imagination, prepared a series of rules. I have not read them for many years, but in those rules Mr. Kipling covers some of the very points we have been considering this afternoon.

Mr. McKENZIE: I think it is only fair when we are dealing with so practical a phase of the development of aeronautics as the present, that I should suggest to the minister that he would—in connection with this board and in connection with any legislation on this subject—enlist the sympathy and help of the father of aeronautics in this country, I refer to Dr. Bell, who has a home at Baddeck, N.S., although he sometimes resides in Washington. I had the pleasure in September 1896 of being present in the machine shop experimenting office of Dr. Bell in the town of Baddeck, when it was considered a great achievement in aeronautics that he could cause a certain machine that he had in his laboratory to rise three or four inches from the ground. It is gratifying to know that we have today reached such an advanced stage of development in aeronautical science. Dr. Bell is a Canadian, born in Brantford in the great province of Ontario and is well known, and he spends about ninety per cent of his time at his beautiful home in the neighbourhood of Baddeck in the county which I have the honour to represent, and I think it would be only fair on the part of the Government to recognize his great services, the great research he has displayed, and what he has done for this science. The first airship that was ever built in Canada was constructed at his workshops at Baddeck, and did considerable flying. It was operated by a Baddeck boy, young McCurdy, who was famous afterwards as a flier and who was in charge of some of the works at Toronto or Camp Borden in the early stages of the war. I do not know where young McCurdy is now.

Major-General MEWBURN: Long Branch.

Mr. McKENZIE: He is the young man who took charge of the first flying machine that was built in Canada, if not on the continent of America, under the direction of Dr. Bell. He was assisted by another young Canadian, also well-known to fame—or at least his progenitors were, young Baldwin, the grandson of the famous Canadian statesman of that name. Mr. Baldwin is in charge of Dr. Bell's works at Baddeck, where not only flying machines, but machinery of the most advanced type in connection with transportation, are turned out. I therefore suggest to the minister that it would be a proper and well-deserved compliment, and a mark of recognition on the part of the Canadian people and Canadian Government, to Dr. Bell to enlist his sympathy and utilize as much as possible his great knowledge in connection with the enterprise in which Dominion authorities are now about to engage. As to landing places, if it is desired to take advantage of possibly the greatest site in the world, let me point out to the minister that his own native town of North Sydney is the place that was selected by both the United States and Canadian Governments while the war was on, and when they were looking for the very best location for the starting of an aerial service. At that time North Sydney was chosen as the best place on the east coast of America for the purpose. A large amount of money has been expended on the station there, and very extensive buildings erected which are now owned by the Government. Large areas of land were also acquired for the purpose of carrying on experiments, and I would suggest to the minister that the board to be appointed under this Bill are the proper persons to take charge of that property and see that it is not lightly thrown away. There is an idea that a portion of this land is to revert back to some of its original owners, and if that should turn out to be the case the Government may not again acquire it as cheaply as they did in the first instance. Those works were constructed, at the nearest point to Newfoundland, and there at least forty or fifty machines were built and put in operation last summer. We got so used to flying machines last summer in North Sydney that it was no more a novelty to see an aeroplane in the air than an automobile on the street. I am bringing these matters to the attention of the minister so that he may not forget to make use of the knowledge and experience of those great men who are to all intents and purposes Canadians, and of the development that has already taken place in connection with the use of aeroplanes and hydroplanes for commercial purposes.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: The property at Sydney will, of course, under this Bill, come within the control of the board, and it is not the intention of the Government, so far as I know, to part with it. I quite agree with my hon. friend (Mr. McKenzie) that it is a very desirable property, particularly in connection with trans-Atlantic operations. I am also grateful to him for calling the attention of the Government to the pioneer work of Prof. Graham Bell. His very valuable services in the science of aeronautics ought to receive proper recognition, and I shall be very glad to submit to my colleagues the suggestion of my hon. friend.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: The clause now before the Committee affords a good deal of scope for the imagination of hon. members in defining the duties of the Air Board. When we contemplate the great strides that have been made in the science of aeronautics during the last five years and the possibilities of the future, I think we may well realize that this is likely to become a very important service. I do not feel very much concerned about the danger of not having sufficient landing places. If there is one thing we may claim to have in abundance it is sufficient room for that purpose.

The question raised by the hon. member for Kamouraska (Mr. Lapointe) and other hon. members is, I suppose, a constitutional one, but to the ordinary layman it seems inconceivable that any province should claim a monopoly of the air. This is a case where provincialism should not creep in, and certainly it ought to be within the jurisdiction of the Federal Government. It seems to me that the Government have shown good judgment in promptly bringing a measure of this kind before Parliament. No doubt the Air Board will keep in touch with changing conditions and report to the Government from time to time, and I think this section should be made as broad as possible in order to give the Board the fullest control of the air service. But with regard to the disposal of certain machines which were in service during the war, those machines might be all right for training purposes, but a very different type of machine will be needed for commercial purposes.

I do not altogether agree with the view that the Government should exercise too rigid a control over the service. I think something should be left to the ingenuity or individual initiative if this service is to develop as we would like to see it develop. Our Canadian boys made an enviable record in the air at the front, and the Government would certainly be lacking in their duty if they failed to retain in our air service as many as possible of those splendid men who made such brilliant records overseas. When we consider the immense undeveloped resources of this country, and what can be accomplished through such an air service I think it is very important that instead of restricting the powers of this board we should extend them as far as possible. Practically the whole northern part of Canada is unexplored, and we have as yet no idea as to the value of our resources in that vast territory. This service can render very valuable work in the way of exploration and fire protection.

5 p.m.

Mr. TOLMIE: I think the Government is to be congratulated on taking this progressive movement and in recognizing the splendid work done by our air men at the front. In a country like British Columbia this service can be very usefully developed in connection with the handling of forest fires, and also in exploration work. But I hope one of the first things to be taken up by this Board will be to thoroughly investigate the possibilities of using the service for rescuing shipwrecked people. We have had many serious wrecks on the Pacific coast, some of them almost within a stone's throw of shore, such as the Princess Sophia recently, and the Valencia wreck on the coast of Vancouver Island a few years ago. The latter boat was within a few hundred yards of the shore, but owing to the shallow water and the steep cliffs it was an utter impossibility to rescue the passengers, and they dropped off the rigging one by one and only a few were saved. In such cases an aeroplane could render valuable help by carrying a cable to the ship by means of which those on board might be brought safely to shore. I trust this will be one of the first things investigated by the Air Board.

Section agreed to.

On section 4—powers of Air Board to make regulations with approval of Governor in Council.

Mr. McKENZIE: In the matter of penalizing a person who violates the rules, has the minister given attention to the question of jurisdiction? Where will the offender be tried and the penalty be imposed?

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: Such a case would be comparable, I suppose, to a case against an offender engaged upon a ship; he would first be served by a process of the court.

Mr. LEMIEUX: How about the customs laws?

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: Section 5 provides that the board shall have power to control the places in Canada where a landing may be made from a foreign country.

Section agreed to.

On section 5—officers and men:

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: The purpose of this clause is to provide for the control and discipline of those employed in connection with the Government service. For instance, if it was an air service in connection with national defence, the Air Board would acquire these powers, which are somewhat similar to the powers enjoyed by the Naval Department and the Militia Department. If the service had something to do with policing the unorganized territories of Canada, it would probably be necessary to house and clothe our men. The powers are very general, but important and necessary.

Section agreed to.

On section 7—payment of expenses, etc., under Act.

Mr. BELAND: Is it contemplated to have a certain number of aeroplanes reserved for the exclusive use of ministers of the Crown? It would mean a great saving in time—and time is precious just now, as is evidenced by the fact that we are interfering with the ordinary course of the sun to gain some of it. To have some aeroplanes reserved for ministers would afford them an opportunity, when they travel in that way, to see very much more of the country which they govern. Further, it would avoid the repetition of the fearful plight in which my hon. friend (Mr. McCoig) found himself at the station in Toronto the other day, when he was unable to get a sleeper because of the fact that three private cars were attached to the Ottawa train.

Major-General MEWBURN: You would not want to see the ministers any more up in the air than they are now, would you?

Section agreed to.

Bill reported.

LIVE STOCK AND LIVE STOCK PRODUCTS ACT AMENDMENT.

On motion of Hon. T. A. Crerar (Minister of Agriculture), Bill No. 75, to amend The Live Stock and Live Stock Products Act, 1917, was read the second time, and the House went into Committee thereon, Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

On section 1—selling and buying rights of other persons preserved:

Mr. ROBB: This clause makes some slight changes in the Act which was passed in 1917. I notice that it gives the farmer, drover, or other person the right to "buy his live stock at any stockyard". Why is the word "his" there?

Mr. CRERAR: The clause as it formerly stood, read:

> Nothing in this Act, or in any regulation made hereunder, shall take away, or in any manner limit, the right of any farmer or drover to sell his live stock at any stock yard.

The main change in the amendment is to provide that any farmer may buy as well as sell in any stockyard. My hon. friend directs attention to the fact that the term "other persons" is included, and he desires to know what is meant by that. It merely broadens the scope of the amendment.

Mr. ROBB: I was not objecting to that. I was drawing attention to the last line:

Or other person to buy his live stock at any stock yard.

Why is the word "his" in there? Why would a man want to buy his own stock?

Mr. CRERAR: I think there is an error in the printing of the Bill. The word "his" is not in the amendment as I have it on my notes here. And I would move that the word "his" should be struck out.

Mr. MORPHY: Why not also strike out the word "his" where it occurs before? A man might want to sell his neighbour's live stock as well as his own.

Mr. CRERAR: Yes. I would move that the word "his" in the tenth line, and also in the twelfth line of subsection (2) of section 1 be struck out.

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. McKENZIE: If the ordinary construction that lawyers put upon matters of this kind is applied to the term "other persons" in this section, it will not have the effect that the minister says; it will not widen the scope of the section. It means simply "other persons" of the classes already mentioned. The minister should be under no misapprehension, and if he intends that anybody at all can go there, that should be made clear.

Mr. CRERAR: "Any person of the classes mentioned" is what is intended.

Section agreed to.

On section 2—manner of inspection may be prescribed by regulation, also size of packages of wool.

Mr. CRERAR: I can, perhaps, make this clear by reading the clause as it stands in the existing Act:

The manner in which live stock, meat, poultry, eggs and wool shall be graded and branded or marked, and what shall be the size of packages containing meat, eggs and poultry, the kind of package that may be used, and how such packages shall be branded, marked or labelled.

The amendment provides that regulations may be made as to the manner in which these shall be inspected, and it adds wool to the other articles mentioned that are subject to regulation as to size of package. The request for this has come from probably 90 per cent of the wool growers in Canada who desire to have their commodity standardized and subjected to regulations the same as the other articles.

Section agreed to.

[Mr. Crerar.]

On section 3—requirements for shipping.

Mr. ROBB: The minister should explain where the inspection will take place. Must farmers have their stock inspected before it is shipped? Very wide powers are given to the inspectors as to the regulations they may prescribe, and I should like to know what the minister's policy is.

Mr. CRERAR: This provision is not intended to be applied in the manner suggested by the hon. member. It is rather for the purpose of giving shipping companies power to refuse shipments if they think the Act has not been complied with in respect to inspection and grading. A similar provision exists in the Meat and Canned Foods Act. It is not intended that a farmer shall have his stock graded before he ships it from the farm. This is not intended to apply to live stock at all, but rather to live stock products such as hides, wool and similar commodities.

Mr. McKENZIE: In connection with stockyards, could the minister give us some information about the proposition to build a cold storage plant at Montreal to some extent under the guidance and supervision of his department, and is it the policy of the Government to build cold storage plants in other parts of Canada. In the Maritime Provinces there are no cold storage plants for chilled meats, and very strong pressure is being brought to bear upon the department to extend to those provinces the same privileges as are being given to Montreal in the way of cold storage plants.

Mr. CRERAR: The cold storage warehouse to be erected at Montreal will be under the control of the Board of Harbour Commissioners for that port. The purpose is to erect a plant on the water front, to provide facilities for transhipment of perishable commodities. At present, the existing cold storage warehouses in Montreal are located at some distance from the water front, and it has frequently happened that deterioration has occurred in moving foodstuffs from the cold storage warehouse to the vessels for shipment. I know on some occasions last year, for instance, in the shipment of frozen beef, carloads of beef had to be sent back from Montreal to Toronto to be refrozen and put in proper condition for loading on the vessel to be carried in its refrigerated space across to Europe.

The development of cold storage and refrigeration in the shipping of perishable commodities, has been very remarkable in recent years. I urged on the Government the necessity of having such an equipment at the port of Montreal in order that we might have all the facilities for developing an overseas trade in this respect. For example Great Britain, I am informed, imports annually two hundred million dozens of eggs, of which large quantity Canada, I believe, supplies two or three million dozens. If we are going to take advantage of that market we must provide proper facilities for reaching it, and to that end it is essential that there should be proper cold storage facilities at the point of shipment, so that a carload of eggs, or beef, butter, or cheese, as the case may be, which comes into the port of Montreal and has to wait for a week or ten days or possibly two weeks for a vessel will have proper storage and be readily transferred to the vessel on its arrival. As to the policy of the Government, I am not in a position to speak, but I can express my personal opinion that this aid to the development of trade in these commodities is one that should be encouraged by the Government. That is only my personal opinion. I think that other ports such as Halifax should, as soon as opportunity offers, and it is possible, be provided with such facilities.

Mr. LOGGIE: Will the proposed cold storage plant have railway trackage so that cars can be run into the building or alongside of it in order to preclude depreciation in unloading? In what part of the city will the construction take place? I understand that a new cold storage plant is proposed, a short distance west of Mile End on the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks. It is intended to unload western frozen commodities there, and when they are ready for shipment overseas they will have to be reloaded in cars and sent to the dock to the steamer. I think it is important that the cold storage plant should have railway trackage to enable the cars to run either into the building or alongside. This would greatly facilitate loading on the steamer.

Mr. McKENZIE: The Government is assuming to itself all the virtues in connection with government ownership of all the great utilities of the country, and I might suggest that this is a field into which the hon. minister might extend his jurisdiction and his usefulness by announcing a policy of ownership of cold storage plants in Canada. If you will permit me some latitude, Mr. Chairman, I will point out to the minister what is regarded as a great curse to the ordinary people in the private ownership of cold storage concerns. It is said that five or six million pounds of butter is being held to-day in cold storage waiting for higher prices than the extraordinary prices we are now paying. If these facilities were held by the Government and foodstuffs such as butter, etc., could be put into cold storage and controlled, and only a fair profit allowed, we would not have the condition that exists to-day of butter which was bought for about 40 or 45 cents a pound, as I am informed, being held for higher prices which in some places have reached 75 and 80 cents a pound. Such a condition should not be permitted, when such a useful article of food as butter can be allowed to remain in storage in immensely large quantities until the price soars from 45 to 80 cents and over. In some parts of Canada butter is selling at one dollar a pound. I have read that Dr. McFaul, the representative of the Labour Department, who has been inquiring into this matter, has suggested to the Government that some immediate action should be taken in regard to these large quantities of butter now in cold storage. I would like the Minister of Agriculture to consider this matter and to see if anything can be done to relieve the situation. The Government should release this food so that people may have it at reasonable prices.

Mr. LEMIEUX: It puzzles me to know why Canadian butter is cheaper in London to-day than it is in Canada, and my hon. friend will be doing a great service if he can reduce the cost of living by giving us at least as cheap butter in Canada as in London. We are taking very necessary precautions against Bolshevism, and it is right that we should do all in our power to prevent any revolutionary wave from sweeping over Canada. But I would remind the Committee that revolutions are primarily caused by empty stomachs. The French revolution began at the bakeries, and when the French—

The CHAIRMAN: Order. I must call the hon. gentleman to order. I hope the Committee will not impose upon the indulgence of the Chair.

Mr. ROBB: I understand that the cold storage warehouse which the minister says will be erected on the property of the Harbour Commission of Montreal will be controlled by the Harbour Commission. If the Government are going to subsidize the Harbour Commission, they should be careful to make such regulations as will compel the Commission tc handle these products on a fair basis, and not such as will create the same arbitrary conditions as now exist in the grain trade. Grain that is sold locally pays more than grain for export. It is unfair to the people of Canada who are putting up the money that they should be taxed a higher rate than when grain is exported. The minister should be careful to see that the regulations will provide that on products for domestic distribution people will not be charged more than is charged on goods going for export.

Mr. CRERAR: I shall gladly keep the suggestion of the hon. member for Huntingdon (Mr. Robb) in mind when the regulations are being prepared. I want to make it clear to the Committee, however, that the main purpose of the plant to be erected in the harbour of Montreal is to facilitate the export of perishable agricultural commodities. As to the points that the leader of the Opposition has raised, of course they are very important, but they are not intimately related to the clause under discussion. The cause, mainly, of the high prices of butter at the present time is the great demand and the shortage of supply. The dairy herds of Europe have been depleted enormously by the war. Recently the dairy commissioner of the Department of Agriculture had an inquiry from Denmark to purchase Canadian butter. It is a well known fact that Denmark has, in the past, been one of the largest exporters of butter in Europe. The demand is so great and the supply so limited that the inevitable result is higher prices. To what extent the farmers of Canada should be controlled in the prices they are getting for their dairy products is another question. I quite agree with the leader of the Opposition that, if cold storage warehouses and butter speculators are cornering supplies of butter with a view of reaping a golden harvest, through the sale of it, there should be some method of formulating regulations which will reach such people. But from all the information I have been able to get, I really believe that in the main—practically altogether—the excessively high prices are due to the reasons I have stated. The tendency in the last few weeks has been for butter prices to come down. I believe that in Ottawa to-day first class butter can be secured for fifty cents a pound, and the dairy commissioner tells me that the Montreal price had dropped ten cents a pound during the last two weeks.

[Mr. Robb.]

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I do not like to let the remarks made by the leader of the Opposition, as to the prices of butter being so exorbitantly high, to pass without being challenged. The papers to-day say that on the Montreal market on Saturday choice creamery butter is quoted at 51 cents per pound. I do not know of any other foodstuffs that are quoted at any more reasonable price than butter at 51 cents a pound, and when you talk of butter at a dollar a pound——

Mr. ROBB: If the hon. member would allow me to interrupt him; the only fault that can be found with his argument is that you cannot buy butter at 51 cents a pound.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I am speaking about what the producer has to sell it for, and if it cannot be bought for that price I am unable to understand why. There must be some medium between the producer and the consumer, and there is room for complaint if, as the leader of the Opposition says, butter is now selling for from 70 cents to 80 cents and a dollar a pound. But you will see from the market reports that butter is not unreasonably high considering the cost and everything bearing on the production of butter.

Mr. McKENZIE: Let me say to the hon. member (Mr. Sutherland) that I have a right to believe the records as they come to us from the Labour Department. If he will look at the last Labour Gazette which gives the prices he will see that the price of butter at Sydney and Halifax was 75 cents a pound, and at St. John 80 cents. There are some other places where it went as high as $1 a pound. I am sure that my hon. friend, who is always very anxious to make a point against the leader of the Opposition, sometimes perhaps justly, but often wrongly, is wrong again to-day. I did not find fault with the price that the farmer was getting for his butter. I did not find fault about the farmer getting 45 cents a pound for his butter, but I do hold that the Government which my hon. friend supports ought to take steps to see that the coal miner, the lumberman, and every man who is a non-producer in so far as butter is concerned, is protected against the middlemen who are getting this difference between the price that the farmer is receiving, and the consumer is paying. That is the position of the leader of the Opposition, and if the hon. member for South Oxford gets any consolation out of it he is entirely welcome.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I am sorry if the leader of the Opposition should think that I would be so unkind as to try and put him in wrong on any question. I was merely referring to the market reports as to the price of butter. I am one of those who feel that it is not the province of the Government to do for the people what they should do for themselves. If butter is sold wholesale on the market, as it has been recently for 51 cents a pound, and if it is going down, I do not anticipate that there is any great difficulty in the people getting it at a reasonable price if they exercise the ingenuity which they usually do in business. I can hardly imagine that the people expect to be spoon-fed by the Government, and that they are not to put forth any effort in order to do the things that they would naturally be expected to do. I do not say but that there are things that the Government might be able to do. If butter is being held in cold storage for speculative purposes, for instance, which I very much doubt, then I do think it is the duty of the Government to step in and see that it is not permitted.

Mr. ROSS: Provision is made in section 9 for inspection, and my hon. friend (Mr. Robb) asked the minister certain questions as to where that inspection was to take place. I imagine his idea was to find out what trouble producers were going to be put to in regard to their food products. I have in my town one of the largest dealers in eggs. He tells me that when eggs are shipped out of the province, to the province of Quebec, or possibly out of Canada, they have to be inspected. He says that when he ships two carloads of eggs to Hull they have to be inspected, whereas, if they are shipped to Ottawa, they do not need to be inspected. On account of the restrictions imposed by the regulations, and the difficulty of getting inspectors to inspect the eggs when they are ready for shipment, great inconvenience and loss to the shipper, as well as loss to the purchaser results. I would like to know if there is any real justification for that restriction being placed upon a shipper of eggs in this country, how many inspectors the minister proposes to have and if sufficient inspectors are going to be provided to see that delays shall not occur.

Mr. CRERAR: If regulations are passed governing matters of this kind it is necessary that sufficient inspectors be appointed to carry out the regulations with reasonable convenience to the people who are working under them. The shipment of eggs to which the hon. gentleman alluded comes under regulations that are already in effect. As I understand, it is not within the jurisdiction of the Federal Government to lay down regulations governing the shipment of eggs from one point to another in the same province. But the Federal Government has power to make regulations governing interprovincial shipments and shipments for export, and the present regulation with respect to eggs is this: If a merchant in Canada has a shipment of eggs for export covering more than twenty-five cases of thirty dozen each, that shipment has to be inspected. In the case of an interprovincial shipment the merchant is allowed up to one hundred cases, but if the shipment exceeds that maximum he must have it inspected. The underlying purpose of this legislation and these regulations is to guard the public, as far as possible, against fraud in the shipment of commodities, and to establish reliability and reputation for the articles that are being traded in. It can be readily seen what the effect on our Canadian produce would be, for example, if some dealer in Canada sent a shipment of eggs to the London or the Liverpool market and when it arrived at its destination half the eggs were out of condition; or if hides, wool, or any other commodity were exported and did not reach the market over there in proper condition. The fact is that the producers of these articles are the ones that are mainly asking for the establishment of these regulations.

Mr. ROSS: I can appreciate the necessity in the case of national trade, but not in regard to interprovincial trade.

Mr. CRERAR: Of course, the consumers in Montreal, or any other Canadian city, are just as much entitled to protection against fraudulent shipments as in the case of such shipments to the London or Liverpool market.

Mr. ROSS: There is not the same danger.

Mr. CRERAR: The same danger exists on the part of unscrupulous dealers.

Mr. ROSS: But Canadian dealers are not unscrupulous.

Mr. CRERAR: I would not say that Canadian dealers are unscrupulous, but some of them might be, and the provision is there in order to protect the public. In that connection I might say that there has been a very notable development of the egg and poultry industry in the province of Prince Edward Island in the last few years. That is due, I am informed, almost altogether to the reputation and reliability which the producers in that province have been able to establish for their products, and by this legislation we aim simply to provide the machinery that will aid in bringing that about. If the regulations are working hardship to any interest in Canada it is the duty of the Government to take the matter under consideration, and if necessary modify, or change the regulations in such a way as to make them reasonable in their operation.

Mr. ROSS: I presume the Prince Edward Island trade to which the minister has alluded is overseas trade?

Mr. CRERAR: And interprovincial trade as well.

Section agreed to.

On section 4—penalty increased from $100 to $500.

Mr. BOYCE: What change does this clause make?

Mr. CRERAR: The clause in the Act as it now stands provides that the maximum fine shall be $100. We are increasing the maximum for violation of the Act or any regulation to $500.

Mr. BOYCE: Does the minister mean that the penalty applies to any violation of any part of the Bill we are now considering?

Mr. CRERAR: Yes, the fine is not to exceed that sum, but the amount imposed will be within the jurisdiction of the magistrate who happens to try the case.

Mr. ROSS: What fines have been imposed under this particular section, and what is the reason for increasing the penalty from $100 to $500?

Mr. CRERAR: I cannot at present state the amount of money that has been collected from fines imposed, but I will be very happy to obtain the information and supply it to the hon. gentleman privately. The purpose of raising the penalty is to impress upon dealers that they cannot violate the regulations without having to face the possibility of a severe penalty.

Mr. ROSS: Have there been many infringements of this clause of the Act?

Mr. CRERAR: There have been a few, but in the main the law has been pretty well lived up to. I regret that I cannot tell the hon. gentleman the precise number of infringements.

Mr. ROBB: In connection with this matter, a few days ago, when the Acting Minister of Justice was putting a Bill through the House and objection was made to the excessive amount of the penalty, the minister stated that these fines were generally imposed correlatively with the period of imprisonment. In this case the Minister of Agriculture has jumped the fine from $100 to $500, but has not increased the term of imprisonment. It is apparent therefore that the law officers of the Government have not the same basis for calculating fines in all the departments.

Mr. CRERAR: Probably in the case to which the hon. gentleman alludes the object was to place the fine and imprisonment more on a parity than it had previously been.

Mr. ROBB: The situation was exactly the opposite. There was a fine of $1,000 or ten years' imprisonment.

Mr. CRERAR: What does the hon. gentleman refer to?

Mr. ROBB: I am referring to legislation that we were considering a few days ago. Now we are dropping from that high level to $500, or three months' imprisonment.

Mr. PETER R. McGIBBON: I would urge the Minister of Agriculture to reconsider this clause, and make the punishment a little milder.

Mr. CRERAR: As I have already stated the object of placing the maximum fine at $500 is to hold before the person who consciously violates the Act or the regulations, the possibility of a stiff penalty. However, I am quite willing to reduce the amount to $400 if it would suit hon. gentlemen opposite.

Mr. McKENZIE: How will this section read as compared with the provisions of the old Act?

Mr. CRERAR: The section reads:

> Any person violating any provision of this Act, or of any regulation, shall be liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, or to both fine and imprisonment.

In the existing Act the penalty is $100, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, or both fine and imprisonment.

Mr. McKENZIE: The period of imprisonment is the same as it was before, is that right?

Mr. CRERAR: Yes.

Mr. PETER R. McGIBBON: I would ask the minister to make the fine $300.

Mr. CRERAR: I am willing to make a fair compromise, and place the fine at $400. I move that the clause be amended in that way.

Mr. BOYCE: Does the hon. gentleman (Mr. McGibbon) expect many evil doers in his neighbourhood, that he wants to make the maximum fine so low?

Amendment agreed to.

Section as amended agreed to.

Mr. CRERAR. With the consent of the Committee I beg to move:

That section 9 of the Act be further amended by adding the following, which shall be subsection (d) thereto: The manner in which live stock products imported into Canada shall be inspected, graded, branded or marked.

This is merely to provide for the application of the same regulations to these goods coming into Canada that we are applying to similar goods produced here.

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. CRERAR: In respect to the information desired by the hon. member for Northumberland on the cold storage plant to be erected in Montreal, the request came from the Harbour Board and was strongly supported by them. I understand that it is their intention to have the plant built on the wharf with full trackage facilities to it.

Bill reported.

At six o'clock the House took recess.

After Recess.

The House resumed at eight o'clock.

SUPPLY.

The House in Committee of Supply, Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

Miscellaneaus—amount required to meet expenses of the Lake of the Woods Technical Board and the Lake of the Woods Control Boards, $6,000.

Mr. COPP: What is this for?

Mr. ROWELL: When this item was before the Committee last week I explained that the International Joint Commission had considered, and made certain recommendations with regard to, the levels of the Lake of the Woods. The Lake of the Woods Technical Board was composed of officers of the different departments of the Dominion Government and certain representatives of the Ontario Government having to deal with technical matters of that kind. Its function was to collect the data necessary to enable Canada to present her case fully to the International Joint Commission. The board collected that data, and the case was presented to the International Joint Commission, which has made certain recommendations. These have not so far been acted upon by either Government in the sense of framing a convention to carry them out. The International Joint Commission, however, recommended that the water of the Lake of the Woods should be maintained between certain maximum and minimum levels. The Lake of the Woods Control Board is composed of two officers of the Dominion Government and two officers of the Ontario Government, whose duty it is to regulate the level of the Lake of the Woods in order to keep it within the limit fixed by the International Joint Commission. The amount of $6,000 is to cover the expense of these two commissions. The members of the commissions get no salary for their work in this connection. But they have to employ officers to assist in carrying on the work, and the amount voted is to cover the salaries of those officers and incidental travelling and other expenses of the board. The officers consist of one engineer at a salary of $2,600, and one technical clerk at a salary of $1,200. The same officers work for the two boards, and the two boards work in co-operation.

Mr. CAHILL: Is this commission to be perpetual, or will there be an end to it some time?

Mr. ROWELL: The Lake of the Woods Control Board will be a continuous matter, because the levels must be maintained to protect the interests of navigation as well as of the riparian owners on both sides of this international water.

Mr. COPP: How long has this board been in operation?

Mr. ROWELL: The Lake of the Woods Technical Board was established in 1914.

Mr. CAHILL: Under what department?

Mr. ROWELL: The Minister of Marine is chairman of the board. The Lake of the Woods Control Board, which was appointed in January of this year, is under the Department of the Interior.

Mr. J. E. ARMSTRONG: I wish to bring to the attention of the Committee the need of some control over ocean-going vessels as regards rates and tolls and tariff agreements. This matter is of vital interest to the shippers of this country, and should be dealt with at the earliest possible date. When the armistice was signed, some two hundred representatives of manufacturing establishments in our country went overseas to solicit orders. Orders were sent back, and the manufacturers found that in order to fill them they were compelled to pay an extortionate rate——

Mr. McMASTER: I rise to a point of order. I do not wish to be captious, but I do not see that this has to do with the item under discussion. Perhaps the hon. member is coming to it.

Mr. J. E. ARMSTRONG: We are dealing with external affairs, and surely I have the right to deal with the subject which I am trying to put before the Committee.

Mr. McMASTER: If the hon. gentleman asks for the consent of the Committee, I have no doubt they would be glad to grant it.

The CHAIRMAN: If the hon. member (Mr. McMaster) insists upon the point of order, it is well taken. Clause 5 of rule 13 states very clearly that speeches in Committee of the Whole must be strictly relevant to the item or clause under consideration. But, with the unanimous consent of the Committee, the hon. gentleman may be allowed to proceed.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Go on.

Mr. J. E. ARMSTRONG: I am sure that when I have finished what I have to say the Committee will agree that this matter is of urgent public importance and should be dealt with at the earliest possible day.

I was calling attention to the fact that these orders were sent overseas; that they were sent back; that when the manufacturers began to carry out their part of the contract they found that since the signing of the armistice ocean rates had increased from fifty to one hundred per cent and in many cases more. The result has been that not only have the manufacturers' profits been wiped out, but a great deal of additional expense has been incurred, and unless conditions are very materially changed we are liable to have a very serious interference with the development of our trade with other countries. In 1913, Sir Henry Drayton was appointed by this Government to go overseas and interview the Imperial Government on the question of joint control of ocean rates. He went, and on his return made a report in which he favoured joint control. In 1916, he made a further report in which he emphasized his position in that regard. His report was a very full one, and I wish to read only a paragraph or two of his summing up:

> The whole discussion is predicated upon conditions and practices existing before the war, and I am firmly convinced that, with a situation such as we have had it—with agreements between the carriers—with the absence of competition, a proper measure of sane and constructive Government control is necessary. That of itself, however, will be insufficient to cope with the situation arising on the proclamation of peace.
>
> On the one hand, there has been a large destruction of mercantile tonnage, made up in part, doubtless, by new construction, but resulting in the whole in all probability in a largely decreased tonnage. On the other hand, there will exist producing centres glutted with commodities they produce and oversea markets most urgently requiring these commodities.

He shows that he is definitely in favour of government control of ocean freight rates. In 1912, the British Government appointed a commission on natural resources, trade and legislation in certain portions of His Majesty's Dominions. This commission travelled throughout the different dominions of the Empire and made their final report in 1917. Their report, presented by command of His Majesty to both Houses of Parliament, includes the following as part of its summing up:

> Our investigations have satisfied us that in normal times the combination of shipowners is strong enough to limit the freedom of shippers, whose varied and detached interests make it difficult, if not impossible, for them to combine in any effective opposition, and that, therefore, in principle, it is not desirable that the operations of the steamship companies should remain longer without some measure of Government supervision.

Following this, the commissioners state:

> We are, however, unanimous in thinking, as we have indicated in the preceding paragraphs, that some measures of supervision are needed. In our opinion, the line which should be taken is as follows:—

And they give a number of pages of suggestions as to the lines along which they would advise joint control between the Dominions beyond the seas and the Imperial Government. I respectfully urge upon the Government the necessity of bringing about a permanent joint control of ocean freight rates. I need not tell the Committee how urgent it is that this matter should be dealt with at the earliest possible time.

Mr. McKENZIE: I suppose, the door being open to this discussion to all, it is necessary to give a little further attention to it. The subject brought to the notice of the Committee by the hon. member for East Lambton (Mr. Armstrong) is very important and one that was brought to the notice of the Government on several occasions. But the reasonings and warnings that were uttered, fell as the old saying has it, like water on a duck's back—there was nothing done. The question of shipping has been before the House for quite a number of years, more especially in 1910, when the naval policy of the Laurier Government was announced in this House and heartily supported by the Opposition of that day, led by Sir Robert Borden, as it was going to bring about the happy condition that we in Canada would own our own shipping and be able to handle our own goods and control, to a very large extent, our transportation freight rates. It is unnecessary for me to point out how that scheme failed by reason of the fact that some plan other than what was agreed upon at that time was devised, for political purposes, by my hon. friends opposite, thus defeating the scheme.

I wish to bring to the notice of the Committee, and incidentally to that of the hon. member for East Lambton, the fact that this Government, about the time of the signing of the armistice, took no steps whatever to secure shipping for Canadian business. A great many ships from Nova Scotia were commandeered by the British Government. The ships that carried our coal to Montreal and our other goods to many parts of the world were taken from us and used in connection with the war, and we had no complaint to make. But immediately after the signing of the armistice every Government in the world, every business agent in the land, was trying to get hold of shipping as rapidly as possible. One would naturally have expected that the great army of representatives that we had in Great Britain, ministers and missionaries in the shape of trade missions, as they are called, would waken up and look after Canadian interests. Such, however, was not the case. Canadian vessels were sent to Australia, and when shipowners in Nova Scotia looked for their ships, they found them chartered by the British Government, practically after the war was over, to concerns shipping wheat and other commodities from Australia to England and other parts of the world. Our Government were evidently absolutely indifferent about the business, and we have no ships at all. To-day, the hon. member who speaks about the trade that we are trying to create with Belgium and Roumania, will find, when the time comes for the delivery of the goods, that we have no ships. He will find that this Government started, as an eleventh hour matter, a death-bed repentance matter, to build ships at a time when they will be absolutely useless. The Government will find their ships coming in at a time when ships are plentiful and not in great demand. They are building ships at a time when they are costing 400 per cent more than they should cost, and are 400 per cent less useful than they would be if they had been built at the proper time.

That is the kind of action the Government is taking in connection with the building of ships and looking after the general interests of the country. I am pleased that there is some one behind the Government who has been enterprising enough to bring up this question, and I trust we shall have from the Government some constructive policy in connection with shipping. Yet, indeed, I cannot hope so; it is impossible now. The day is past when something could be done. But I hope that the hon. member for East Lambton will be able to infuse some life into this inertia that is passing itself off as a government.

Mr. ROWELL: The speech to which we have just listened is a good illustration of the unwisdom of departing from the rule that requires one to confine oneself to the subject under discussion. However, out of respect for my hon. friend I will say a word or two on the matter he has mentioned, and then suggest that the proper time for discussing the question will be when the Minister of Marine and Fisheries has his Estimates before the House. Then my hon. friend can discuss the matter at any length he desires. In reference to the question raised by the hon. member for East Lambton, he is in error if he assumes that the Government has not taken any action in this matter. The question he has brought up is an important and urgent one, and the Government has been active in regard to it. So long as the war was on all the shipping was controlled directly by the Controller of Shipping in London, and it was essential that the shipping of the Allies should be mobilized and used to the greatest possible advantage in the carrying of troops overseas or to the various theatres of war, and in the transportation of necessary food and war supplies to the centres where they were needed. Under these conditions, the bulk of the ocean-going shipping of Canada was commandeered, and as long as the attention of the British authorities was centred on the problem of transportation in the interests of the war, it was difficult to get them to consider the question of controlling ocean rates in times of peace. Notwithstanding that fact, however, the matter was brought up at the last Imperial Conference held in July, 1918, when this resolution was passed:

That, in order to maintain satisfactorily the connections, and at the same time encourage commercial and industrial relations, between the different countries of the British Empire, this Conference is of opinion that shipping on the principal routes, especially between the heart of the Empire and the Oversea Dominions, including India, should be brought under review by an Inter-Imperial Board, on which the United Kingdom and the British Dominions and Dependencies should be represented.

2. That for this purpose an Imperial Investigation Board, representing the various parts of the Empire, be appointed, with power to inquire into and report on all matters connected with ocean freights and facilities,—

The very question my hon. friend has mentioned.

—and on all matters connected with the development and improvement of the sea communications between the different parts of the Empire, with special reference to the size and type of ships, and the capacities of harbours; the board to include, in addition to representatives of the Governments concerned, persons with expert knowledge of the problems involved, including representatives of the shipping and trading interests.

The Government has recently been in communication with the Prime Minister and his colleagues overseas, as well as with the Canadian High Commissioner, to get into touch with the British Government in order to work out this very problem. Hon. members will realize that no one Government can deal with this problem of shipping, as it affects international communication; it can be done only by joint action of the Governments affected. This Government is not unmindful of the importance of the question, and is using its best endeavours to see that satisfactory action shall be taken. At the present time it is pressing the matter upon the attention of the British Government. The hon. leader of the Opposition (Mr. McKenzie) said the Government had not taken any action to get ships for Canadian shipping. Just so soon as the armistice was concluded and the urgent necessity for the mobilization of shipping for war purposes ceased, the Government did take up with the Imperial authorities—as did also the Canadian Pacific Railway and other companies controlling ocean transport—the matter of the release of these vessels, to have them restored to Canadian trade. Everything that the Government could do has been done in that respect, and having regard to the difficulties of the situation and the very great demands upon the world's shipping, I think the Imperial Government on the whole have met us in a fairly reasonable manner. They certainly had every desire to do so, and it has only been the difficulty of the shipping situation the world over that has prevented us from getting a larger use of our own tonnage. I hope that if there is further discussion it will be confined to the subject matter of the item before the Committee.

Canadian War Mission and Representation at Washington, $50,000.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Explain.

Mr. ROWELL: When this item was called some three or four weeks ago an hon. member—I think it was the member for Three Rivers (Mr. Bureau)—asked for a statement as to the work of the Canadian War Mission and as to what was proposed in this representation. The reason for the establishment of the Canadian War Mission was briefly this: When the United States entered the war the whole situation was changed so far as it related to trade between the United States and Canada. The Committee are well aware of the enormous development in the trade between the United States and Canada in recent years. To-day our volume of business with the United States, imports and exports, is more than 50 per cent of the external trade of Canada. For the fiscal year ending 31st March, 1919, Canada's total trade in merchandise was $2,124,057,238. Of that trade no less sum than $1,201,860,679 was with the United States. The Committee will therefore realize how important a part our import and export trade with the United States plays in the whole industrial life of Canada. When the United States entered the war and commenced to produce munitions and war supplies on a large scale she found that she had not sufficient of the materials which are the bases for that manufacture to supply her war industries and carry on domestic manufacturing enterprises at the same time. Canada was largely dependent upon the American market for the maintenance of many of its industries, in the supply of raw materials or partially manufactured materials basic to those industries. To meet the situation the United States established a license system for export trade, and to regulate and control this licensing of exports, they created what was known as the War Trade Board. Not a single article could be imported from the United States into Canada without first obtaining a license from the War Trade Board in Washington. Not only that, but the United States realized that if they were to get their war supplies produced within the time required it was essential that war materials should have priority in manufacture. They therefore established a scale of priorities whereby certain classes of contract were to have priority in point of manufacture over others. One could not expect to get a contract filled by a plant in the United States for the manufacture of any supplies unless he had a priority order from what they called the War Industries Board.

Then the question of transportation in the United States became exceedingly urgent, the railways were congested, they could not transport upon their railways all the war supplies required and at the same time maintain their domestic system of transportation. The United States railway administration therefore imposed an embargo on all freight traffic except under permits authorized and issued by the car service section of the Railway Administration. This embargo was imposed on the 24th January, 1918. If a Canadian manufacturer required to get speedy delivery of the articles that he had purchased in the United States he had to get a permit to transport them over the American railways. So this was the position—the Canadian importer had to get a license to export from the War Trade Board in the United States, he had to get a priority order from the War Industries Board, and then he had to get a shipping permit from the Railway Administration. One could readily see that, under such conditions, with American institutions, strong and powerful themselves, pressing for priority orders and shipping facilities, it became necessary for the Government of Canada to step in and protect Canadian industries and the development and maintenance of our industrial life. In order to do that it created the War Trade Mission at Washington and the Canadian War Trade Board here at Ottawa, the two working together to meet the situation. That was the reason why the mission was created. It was created under an Order in Council—

An hon. MEMBER: Hear, hear.

Mr. ROWELL: I would ask my hon. friend how else he would expect it to be created?

Mr. CAHILL: By this Government?

Mr. ROWELL: By any Government. If my hon. friend could tell me any way by which it could be created except by Order in Council I would be glad to hear it.

Mr. CAHILL: By Parliament.

Mr. ROWELL: If my hon. friend will refer to Orders in Council a little later I will be glad to give him all information upon them. I do not wish to break the continuity of what I am saying in reference to the Canadian War Mission by discussing Orders in Council. I say that by Order in Council the War Trade Mission was created, and Mr. Lloyd Harris became chairman of the mission. Subsequently three or four other members were added and they carried on their work in Washington so long as the war lasted.

Mr. McKENZIE: Who were the other members with Mr. Harris?

Mr. ROWELL: Mr. Frank A. Rolph, Toronto; Mr. Ross H. McMaster, Montreal; Mr. Arthur H. Scott, Montreal, and Mr. J. Allan Ross, Montreal. Mr. Young of Montreal was appointed secretary of the mission and he filled that position until Mr. Harris went to England. He accompanied Mr. Harris to England. In addition to the work I have mentioned, and which constituted a very important part of the Canadian War Mission work, an opportunity opened up for Canadian manufacturers to secure munition contracts from the American Government. In the latter part of 1917 the demand by the Imperial Government for munitions fell off. The Imperial Government had been steadily enlarging their own facilities in Great Britain for the production of munitions, and as these facilities were enlarged and as they were producing what they themselves needed, they desired to discontinue to a substantial extent the production of munitions in Canada. Our industries were faced either with the question of largely curtailing their operations and throwing a large number of men out of employment or of getting contracts elsewhere. The Imperial Munitions Board, being then in touch with the conditions, thought there was an opportunity of securing contracts in the United States. To that end they opened negotiations with the Ordnance Department of the United States. Mr. Harris had already gone to Washington. He went in January, 1918, I think, as the representative of the Imperial Munitions Board to endeavour to secure contracts from the Ordnance Department of the American Government in order to keep our munition industries in operation. Therefore when the Canadian War Mission was constituted, it acted not only on behalf of the Imperial Munitions Board in Washington to secure contracts for Canadian industries but also in connection with the other matters that I have mentioned in association with the War Trade Board in Canada.

I am sure the House and the country will be interested in knowing—and so far it has never been made public—the extent of the business that the Canadian War Mission secured from the American Government. From the time it was constituted in February, 1918, up to the date the armistice was signed, the Canadian War Mission secured for Canadian industries contracts to no less a sum than $231,045,544—a magnificent contribution to the industries of Canada, to work for the workmen, and at the same time a splendid contribution to the prosecution of the war by providing the American Government with munitions and supplies. I think it is only fair to say that so successful were the manufacturers and working men of Canada in producing the munitions required, and so excellent was the quality of the product, that the American Government was glad to avail itself of the facilities our plants offered to have munitions turned out and turned out satisfactorily. There was a certain period during the summer of 1918 when more shells of an important class, used by the American army at the front, were being turned out for the American ordnance department in Canada than were being turned out in the plants in the United States. Canada made a splendid record in the production of munitions and in the ramifications of industrial war work. When the history of this war comes to be written there will be no finer page than the record of the splendid achievements of the manufacturers and workmen in the production of munitions, to the success of which work the Imperial Munitions Board so largely contributed.

Mr. McKENZIE: The minister has referred to the magnificent record of the Canadian manufacturers of munitions, and the dire necessity existing in the United States for these munitions. Why was it necessary to create this commission and expend public moneys getting these orders?

Mr. ROWELL: I did not say there was dire necessity in the United States, but I believe there was real need. My hon. friend, I am sure, is quite well enough acquainted with the business men of any country to know that they are not anxious to have business go to another nation if they think they can get it themselves. The only way Canadians were able to get the business, and it is one of the evidences that the Union Government was on the job, and the country is getting the benefit of it—was by going after the business. They knew that we had the plant and the working men who could turn out the munitions, and they knew it was a good thing for the American Government to get the work done here, and so we secured the orders. It so happens that peace came earlier than was anticipated, and necessarily many of these orders were not filled, but were cancelled. I think possibly one-half of the total amount consisted of orders that were cancelled, and settlements have been made from time to time with those manufacturers whose orders were cancelled.

Mr. CAHILL: The minister stated a moment ago that there was $1,200,000,000 worth of trade between United States and Canada?

Mr. ROWELL: Yes.

Mr. CAHILL: Of that amount what part consisted of imports to Canada, and what part of exports to the United States?

Mr. ROWELL: Our imports from the United States were $746,937,511, and our exports were $454,923,170.

Mr. CAHILL: In view of the figures showing that we were importing to such an extent over our exports, would it not be advisable for us to retain the commission in the United States that sold us the goods instead of the commission that sold our goods to the Americans?

Mr. ROWELL: I am afraid my hon. friend does not understand business. I assume we only buy goods in the United States that we need. In view of the tariff against them, those goods would not be brought into Canada unless they were needed here.

Mr. CAHILL: The minister says that Canada was buying goods that she needed. Does he wish to imply that the United States were buying goods from us that they did not need?

Mr. ROWELL: I did not say so. I said the United States needed these goods for the war. The war is now over but the United States still needs certain of our goods. She requires our nickel and many other commodities. We are selling those to her, but we cannot now sell munitions to the United States or the particular goods that were being sold to that country during the war. I have pointed out the success of the commission in securing this large number of orders. Then allusion must be made to the success achieved in securing licenses for export.

Mr. COPP: Before the minister leaves that point. I understood him to say that this board had secured contracts amounting to about two hundred and thirty odd million dollars on munitions. Was that correct?

Mr. ROWELL: Two hundred and thirty millions for all purposes. The munitions consisted of $188,000,000.

Mr. COPP: Then do I understand the minister to say that about one-half of those contracts were cancelled when the armistice was signed?

Mr. ROWELL: Yes, I should say that one-half, or a little more than one-half, were cancelled when the armistice was signed. Practically all the orders that were not filled, or were on the way to being filled, were cancelled, and the American Government made such compensation as they considered right, or as was agreed upon.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: While the minister is on that point, will he state just what the duties of the board will be in times of peace? We all understand it was very useful to have the War Trade Board in Washington because there were many things there which they had to attend to. Could the minister now tell us how they have succeeded since November 11th in securing orders for Canada, or has anything been done in that direction?

Mr. ROWELL: The War Trade Board is winding up the business; there are no orders which can be secured at the present time. That matter has been carefully canvassed, and so far as business between the United States and Canada is concerned, it is now back to its normal channel. Canadian business men must obtain orders from the United States if they can, and American business men must secure business in Canada if they can.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: Is it intended to wind up the board altogether?

Mr. ROWELL: It is intended to wind up the board, but the item provides for representation at Washington because the Government intends to continue representation there. It is not necessary that I should elaborate this matter, it is obvious from the statement I have made how essential the work of the board was. In order to illustrate the character of that work, let me state that they had ten thousand applications for export, and in the case of each separate application, the War Trade Board had to be seen and a permit obtained. There were no less than 2,765 applications for priority, and we know how pressing the American manufacturers were in that regard. The Board had to take up and meet these applications and I think the country is indebted to them for rendering an exceptionally fine piece of public service. The board had to employ a staff who were paid, but the members of the board themselves served without compensation. I wish to say that not only in connection with the work of the Imperial Munitions Board in dealing with the question of munitions for Great Britain, but also in connection with their work in assisting in securing munition contracts for Canada from the United States, the country is deeply indebted to them for the services they have rendered. The American Government chose the Imperial Munition Board as the medium through which they distributed their orders in Canada, and the board acted in that capacity.

Mr. DUFF: Will the minister kindly give the names of the members of the War Trade Board?

Mr. ROWELL: The Minister of Trade and Commerce was chairman, and the other members were Messrs. Frank P. Jones, J. W. McConnell, Montreal; J. H. Gundy, Charles B. McKnight, and Joseph Gibbons, Toronto; Mr. C. A. Magrath, fuel controller, and Sir N. H. Laporte, chairman of the War Purchasing Commission were ex-officio members of the board. I was going on to say that not only are we indebted to the Imperial Munitions Board for the work they did in that respect, but for the splendid contribution—

Mr. CAHILL: Will the minister give us the names of the Imperial Munitions Board?

Mr. ROWELL: The chairman was Sir Joseph Flavelle.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friends say, "hear, hear." I want to say to the Committee that when the history of this war is written, and Canada's contribution is summed up, it will be seen that no single man in the industrial life of Canada, no man outside the military forces, has rendered more conspicuous service to this country in the successful prosecution of the war, and in assisting the Imperial Government, than did Sir Joseph Flavelle by his work on the Imperial Munitions Board.

That what I have stated is true I will give my hon. friend the proof, because I anticipated that some of my hon. friends would say "hear, hear." At a gathering held in Ottawa in November last, when the heads of the different branches of the Imperial Munitions Board met to say goodbye before the work of the Board was dissolved, the following cable from Mr. Lloyd George was read. I would draw the attention of the Committee to the fact that the Imperial Munitions Board was constituted by Mr. Lloyd George himself while Minister of Munitions:

> Now that hostilities have ceased, I am anxious to send you, on behalf of myself and my colleagues in the War Cabinet, our congratulations on the great work of the Imperial Munitions Board for three years, which has been of such signal assistance to the British Empire and to the Allied Cause.
>
> It is a great and varied achievement for your Board, not only to have produced so great an output of munitions, representing no small proportion of the shells used by the British armies, but also to have built over three hundred and fifty thousand tons of shipping for the Ministry of Shipping, to have assisted to so great a degree the Royal Air Force in Canada, and to have developed the great output of Aeroplane timber which has been essential for our Air Service.
>
> As the Board was appointed by me when I was Minister of Munitions, it is particularly pleasurable to me to recognize the success, efficiency and value of its work and to thank you, and through you, your staff, the Canadian manufacturers and the great army of workers who have so splendidly assisted you, for the great services so rendered.

Mr. Lloyd George would not pay that tribute if he did not know that it was deserved, and undoubtedly he knew the value of the work done by the Imperial Munitions Board.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: May I ask the minister the date of that cable?

Mr. ROWELL: November 22, 1918.

[Mr. Cahill.]

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Was Sir Clifford Sifton in England at the time?

Mr. ROWELL: I do not know. My hon. friend knows very well that Sir Clifford Sifton had nothing whatever to do with the message. Mr. Lloyd George does not move at the behest of any particular man; he gives praise where he believes it to be deserved.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Not always.

Mr. ROWELL: Well, possibly my hon. friends would prefer to hear what the then Minister of Munitions, Mr. Churchill, had to say. He cabled:

> As the Armistice with Germany has now been concluded I wish, as Minister of Munitions, to congratulate you and, through you, your staff on the splendid work of the Imperial Munitions Board during the last three years.
>
> You have carried through a work of the greatest magnitude with uniform success and efficiency and I wish to pay my personal tribute to the great ability, energy and organizing power you, as Chairman, have shown.
>
> Canada's remarkable output of munitions has played a large part in the munitioning of the British armies and will remain a testimony to the high value in that great struggle of the work of the Board and of all those, whether manufacturers or work people, who have shared the burden with you.

With these statements of Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Churchill I am in most hearty accord.

When I was in England in 1918 I heard from the Minister of Munitions and from Lord Weir of the Air Service nothing but words of the highest commendation for the character of the output of Canadian manufacturers and working men and of the fine work of the Imperial Munitions Board. In connection with aeroplanes Lord Weir told me that in his opinion there had not been a finer aeroplane factory anywhere in the world or one that had done better service than the factory operated by the Imperial Munitions Board and situated in Toronto. Our manufacturers and working men made as creditable a record in their sphere as did our gallant soldiers in their particular sphere; they all did magnificently.

Mr. MORPHY: What was the output of munitions under the auspices of the Imperial Munitions Board?

Mr. ROWELL: The Imperial Munitions Board expended in Canada something over $1,100,000,000. The principal materials entering into the production of shells were steel, copper, lead and zinc, of which the following amounts were used:

Steel	2,058,000	gross tons
Copper	47,000	net "
Lead	139,000	net "
Zinc	25,000	net "

Of these amounts approximately 1,720,500 tons of steel, 7,000 tons of copper, 70,000 tons of lead and 22,000 tons of zinc were produced in Canada. Prior to the war the steel capacity of Canada was approximately 1,000,000 tons of ingots annually. By the enlargement of the existing plants and the creation of new ones this capacity was increased, until at the time the armistice was signed the production was equivalent to 2,250,000 tons of ingots per annum.

We had more than doubled our productive capacity. I might go on giving figures of the remarkable development of the copper, zinc, lead, ferro-alloy, pig-iron and explosives industry during the war, to say nothing of the remarkable development in the supply of aeroplane timber. In fact, Canada has the finest timber in the world for aeroplane construction.

9 p.m.

The following quantities of munitions were manufactured and exported:

Shells	65,343,647
Fuses	29,638,126
Fuse parts	16,174,073
Cartridge cases	48,627,673
Percussion primers	35,386,488
Exploder containers	13,285,000
Shell and adapter forgings	6,412,115
Explosives and Chemicals—	Lbs.
T. N. T.	41,754,950
Cordite	28,542,157
Other (more than	41,000,000
Metals and Compounds—
Steel bars	43,077,923
Zinc	35,412,413
Nickel	1,792,000
Other (more than)	27,000,000
Lumber for Aeroplanes—	Feet
Spruce	16,289,227
Fir	6,801,324
Other Lumber—
Douglas fir	11,530,315
Pine, various kinds and qualities.	10,360,566
Spruce	8,345,675
Workers engaged in war contracts	200,000 to 300,000
Persons handling and transporting stores, about	50,000
Contractors in Canada for munitions, about	1,000

Mr. TRAHAN: The President of the Privy Council gave the name of the President of the Imperial Munitions Board, but he omitted to mention the other members.

Mr. ROWELL: Those members were Mr. Brand, Mr. Perry, Colonel Carnegie——

An hon. MEMBER: Sir Charles Gordon.

Mr. ROWELL: He was vice-chairman for some time then he went down to Washington to become chairman of——

An hon. MEMBER: Mr. Vaillancourt.

Mr. ROWELL: Yes. All the members of the board worked together harmoniously and very effectively.

As to the future, while the several British ambassadors at Washington have rendered admirable service to Canada, our business with the United States is now on so large a scale that the Government is convinced that our interests can only be adequately protected by a Canadian representative resident in Washington. While ordinarily the Government would wind up the affairs of the War Commission—and they are being rapidly wound up—yet in view of the decision to have permaneent representation at Washington, it does not deem it desirable to have an interregnum between the closing up of the War Mission, and the opening of the office of our permanent representative. Therefore it has been decided to continue the War Mission until permanent representation is arranged for.

Mr. LEMIEUX: How will it be arranged?

Mr. ROWELL: That is being taken up with the Imperial Government. It is one of the matters the Prime Minister has under consideration.

Mr. McMASTER: Would the minister point out what proportion of this $50,000 is required to wind up the present situation, if I may so term it, and what amount is proposed to be spent on the continuation of the mission for the next year?

Mr. ROWELL: The present expenditure in connection with the mission is between $4,000 and $4,500 a month. We do not anticipate that the expenditure in connection with the permanent representation will exceed that amount. It is impossible to figure the exact amount; the estimate is the best the Government could make of the probable expenditure.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I am pleased to learn that Canada is to have a permanent representative at Washington. If it is right that Canada should be represented in London, Paris and other large centres, surely the interests of Canada demand that we should also have a representative at Washington. Previously, matters arising between Canada and the United States were so managed as sometimes to cause heartburnings on the part of Canadians. For instance, if anything happened to a Canadian in business on the other side of the line which resulted in international complication, the negotiations had to be carried on via London; the Canadian Government could not, according to international law, go directly to the British Embassy at Washington. The Canadian Government, through the Governor General, would first address himself to the Colonial Office; the Colonial Office, through the Foreign Office in London, would address itself to the British Embassy in Washington; and matters which were the subject of correspondence or discussion might not be settled before many months. Some years ago, thanks to the common sense of the then Governor General, Lord Grey, a series of conversations began between the Canadian Government and the British Embassy at Washington, and the roundabout method of dealing with such matters was avoided. But this is all against international law. Subject always to British control, it is better to have, as far as possible, direct communication through our agent in Washington. During the war the Government took Sir Charles Gordon from the Imperial Munitions Board and sent him to Washington. I have the honour, as has the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Ballantyne) of being very well acquainted with Sir Charles Gordon. He is a Montrealer; he is one of the most progressive Canadians of the day; he is a credit not only to his native city, but to Canada as well. With his knowledge of business methods and his keen intellect, Sir Charles Gordon has been able to render very valuable service to Canada and to the Mother Country as well. About the year 1898 Sir Wilfrid Laurier, then Prime Minister, had almost decided to appoint a very distinguished Canadian to the high position of representative of Canada at Washington. I am not free to disclose the name; perhaps I will some day. At all events, the appointment by the present Government will be a welcome innovation. Most of our business, except that which we engage in with Great Britain, is with the United States; and now that we have been allies in the great war our trade relations and our other relations should become closer every year. The appointment of a prominent Canadian, well versed in business, who will be in a position to build friendships for Canada in that great country, is an excellent departure. It is an indication of Canada's growth. Besides, it will tend to remove old prejudices which since the time of the United Empire Loyalists have prevailed in our country. The United States and Canada are bound to be close allies in future, and I hail with satisfaction the announcement that Canada will be represented in the great capital of United States.

Mr. McMASTER: Will this representative at Washington deal merely with trade matters or will he have a diplomatic mission as well?

Mr. ROWELL: I heartily agree with all that my hon. friend (Mr. Lemieux) has said with regard to the importance of this appointment and the close character of the relations that must exist between Canada and the United States. If this representative is to be truly a Canadian representative, his functions must have a wider scope than that of merely dealing with matters of trade. The condition creates the need; the need undoubtedly will be met when the arrangements are completed. Moreover, Canada has a unique opportunity of being the means of keeping more closely together than they have been in the past the Mother Country and our sister nation to the south. We understand the Americans better than the Old Country people do, and we understand the Old Country people better than the Americans do; we may be interpreter between the two. I am sure, therefore, that the appointment of a Canadian representative at Washington is in the interests of the Empire as a whole as well as of Canada.

Mr. E. LAPOINTE: Will the appointment be made by the Civil Service Commission?

Mr. ROWELL: No, I think that will be beyond the scope of the Civil Service Commission.

Mr. CAHILL: How will this representative be useful to the farmers of Canada?

Mr. ROWELL: Any man who is useful to Canada as a whole is useful to the farmers of Canada. I am not one of those who believe that the interests of any one class are best served by ignoring all other classes. The greatest progress and success will be made in Canada when each recognizes that the other has a part to play and we seek to unite rather than to divide along any lines.

Mr. CAHILL: Doubtless this man will be useful to all parties in Canada, but he will be more useful, under existing conditions, to the manufacturer than to the farmer. The minister has told us that in the last year there is a balance of trade against Canada of something like $300,000,000, and that condition could, to a large extent, be relieved by the Canadian Government adopting the reciprocity agreement and reducing the tariff on certain goods that are imported into the United States. That would be much more useful to the people of Canada as a whole than the appointment of a trade commissioner at Washington. Has the minister in view the early adoption of the reciprocity agreement?

Mr. CHAIRMAN: Shall the item carry?

Mr. CAHILL: Does the minister refuse to answer the question?

Mr. ROWELL: The hon. member knows that the question of the reciprocity agreement is a fiscal matter and could be dealt with only in the Budget. He knows, even if we were considering it, I could not make an announcement on it to-night.

Mr. CAHILL: I understood that, by Order in Council, the duty was taken off wheat some time ago, and also off farm tractors and potatoes.

Mr. CHAIRMAN: Order. The hon. gentleman is wandering far from the item under discussion.

Mr. CAHILL: We are discussing the subject of trade between the United States and Canada, the appointment of a trade commissioner. The minister has so stated, and I think the question is perfectly legitimate.

Mr. CHAIRMAN: Shall the item carry?

Mr. CAHILL: The minister was, I think, getting up to answer the question.

Mr. CHAIRMAN: I have already ruled that the question is out of order. If the hon. member does not wish to abide by my ruling he will have to appeal to the House.

Mr. LEMIEUX: The name of Sir Charles Gordon was mentioned a moment ago in connection with the Canadian representation at Washington. Can the minister say, without revealing any Cabinet secrets, if the offer has been formally made to Sir Charles Gordon, and if there is any hope that he will accept the nomination? Sir Charles Gordon is a distinguished gentleman who would fill the position to the satisfaction of every one.

Mr. ROWELL: I agree with all my hon. friend has said as regards the ability and service of Sir Charles Gordon, and I am glad to say that he is now Acting Chairman of the Canadian War Mission at Washington. Canada would, indeed, be fortunate if he would continue to act as her permanent representative. That, however, is a matter for the future.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Has any offer been made?

Mr. ROWELL: I am not in a position to say.

Mr. E. LAPOINTE: What business is the Canadian War Mission doing now at Washington?

Mr. ROWELL: Contracts have to be adjusted and details settled, and the commission is, from time to time, taking up, on behalf of the Government, various matters with the Washington Government, but its principal duty has been closing up its own business.

Mr. McMASTER: None of the members are at Washington now?

Mr. ROWELL: No. Sir Charles Gordon was there in the spring, but he is overseas at present.

Mr. PEDLOW: As the balance of the orders have been cancelled and no orders are in hand at present, what business remains to be closed up?

Mr. ROWELL: All the contracts have to be adjusted and settlements made. Questions are coming up which have to be taken up with the American Government, and the members of the staff who are there are kept busy with the work they have in hand. As a matter of fact, they are exceedingly anxious to get back to Canada, especially the secretary, but we have kept him there on account of the necessity of the work he is doing.

Mr. E. LAPOINTE: Has the Government brought down any legislation as regards this representation at Washington? I suppose the Order in Council business is going to be closed up.

Mr. ROWELL: The voting of the Estimate by the House would be all that would be necessary to appoint a representative at Washington. Next session, when the matter is more fully understood, and we know exactly the relations, it may be considered desirable to introduce legislation.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Have we as a nation the right to appoint a diplomatic agent at Washington?

Mr. ROWELL: We have no right, except with the concurrence of the Imperial Government, to appoint a diplomatic agent, but the question of the status of this representative is now a matter of conference between the Prime Minister of Canada and the Imperial Government.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: We should not pass this Estimate before having power from the Imperial Government.

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friend need not worry. We shall have an understanding with the Imperial Government, and we shall have a Canadian representative at Washington.

Mr. McMASTER: In other words, the minister thinks it wise to appoint a representative first and to consider the getting of power afterwards?

Mr. ROWELL: No. We shall, I am sure, carry the judgment of the Imperial Government on this. As a matter of fact, they do not dissent from it. The only question is exactly what his status will be, and that is a matter of conference; and until that is settled, we continue the War Mission with Sir Charles Gordon as acting chairman. When we reach that agreement with the Imperial Government, we shall appoint a permanent representative, but in one case as in the other, we have continuous representation at Washington.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Have the Imperial authorities agreed to that?

Mr. ROWELL: They are agreed that we should have representation at Washington.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Is there any correspondence to that effect?

Mr. ROWELL: There are certain confidential communications between the Prime Minister of Canada and the Imperial Government. The negotiations are not yet closed. As soon as they are closed, I am sure the Prime Minister will lay the whole matter before the House, but he is conducting negotiations personally in Great Britain.

Mr. McKENZIE: Is the establishment of new relations between this country and a foreign country, although that foreign country is a neighbour, not of such importance that it should be dealt with by Parliament, and that the will of the people as represented by Parliament should be ascertained upon such a question? Is it to be said that a government of this country, without any mandate or authority from the people, are going to open negotiations of this kind and establish a new institution, entirely foreign to our former relations with the United States, without bringing down legislation with a view to establishing that position and defining what the powers and functions of the plenipotentiary shall be? We are already represented in the United States as a part of the British Empire by a British plenipotentiary. We are going to depart from that position and have a representative of our own.

It cannot be said that the appointment of a new man will not in any way influence the old status. It must necessarily do so. These are serious matters upon which there should be no doubt, and the relations between the British ambassador and the official whom we are going to appoint should be of such a character as to make any clash or misunderstanding impossible. Our representative might conceivably make certain representations to the United States Government, while the proper representative of the whole nation and of the British Empire might make others. It is not such a simple matter that a mere Order in Council, by which the Government appointed a Trade Commission whose duty was to secure contracts for munitions factories in Canada and to provide for rapid transportation over the railways of the United States, should be extended to create an institution to conduct the diplomatic relations between two countries. These relations are of such an important character that the whole policy of the Government should be embodied in concrete legislation and thoroughly threshed out before being put into force. I am not opposed to the idea involved. The closer the relations that exist between ourselves and our great neighbours to the south, the better pleased I am. I am in favour of the freest relations between the eight millions of people in Canada and the one hundred and twenty millions of our kinsmen across the way, and I only hope that this step will be taken in such a way as to ensure that the will of the people will be constitutionally carried out, and that there will be no rule-of-thumb arrangement that may afterwards be found to be inoperative and not based upon broad and well founded constitutional principles.

Mr. McMASTER: In his diplomatic functions, will this representative deal directly with the American Government or through the British ambassador?

Mr. ROWELL: I should think that matter would largely depend upon an understanding arrived at with the Imperial Government, and also upon the nature of the question involved. On a purely Canadian question, I should think he would deal direct, and on a question affecting the Imperial Government as well as Canada, he would co-operate with the British ambassador.

POST OFFICE—OUTSIDE SERVICE.

Salaries and Allowances.. ..	$10,428,354.75
Mail Service..	8,234,337.50
Miscellaneous..	843,838.00
Yukon Territory..	195,000.00
	$19,701,530.25

Mr. McKENZIE: When we were on Mail Service and Mail Contracts last year the Minister of Justice (Mr. Doherty), who is now absent, was Acting Postmaster General. The question of mail contracts was fully discussed, particularly contracts which were made before the war. The phase of it which we specially discussed was the cost of living for horses, if I might use that expression, and the cost of vehicles and everything else, which had gone up about 400 per cent. It was contended that those who took contracts under normal conditions were losing money and could not reasonably be expected to carry out their undertakings. At that time the Acting Postmaster General said that he would look into the matter, and we hoped for some relief for these people. I am told that nothing was done to relieve the situation, and I would suggest to the minister now that if it is not intended to supplement these contracts or pay a little more money to those who were obliged under security to perform the contracts, new contracts should be called for, so that the work might be performed under conditions as they exist now. The war came on suddenly and everything doubled and trebled in price, and it is entirely unfair that these poor men should be compelled to carry out the mail contracts under such circumstances. As a lawyer my honourable friend knows that when parties enter into a contract they are supposed to be cognizant of every consideration that affects the contract, but they are not supposed to make provision for extraordinary circumstances that they cannot possibly foresee. At the commencement of the war when men were entering into contracts for the carrying of mail for four years they could not know what effect war conditions would have upon the different elements that enter into the performance of that contract, and the Canadian people have no right to expect, nor do I think they do expect, to receive their mails in the regular course at the expense of suffering mail contractors. The Acting Minister last year thought he could deal with the subject, but probably found it impossible to do so. I admit it is a difficult thing to revise these contracts and add anything to them. But if nothing else can be done, I think that such a percentage might be added to these contracts as would bring them into proportion with increased costs at the present time. But if that cannot be done I would certainly expect that people who are suffering by reason of being bound by these contracts should be relieved and new tenders called. I have not heard of anything being done by the department to meet the situation, nor have I heard whether the promise which was given by the Postmaster General last year has been implemented. But if not I think the earliest opportunity will have to be taken to relieve these people from the distressing situation in which they find themselves by reason of the conditions which exist now as compared with those which existed at the time they entered into these contracts.

Mr. ROWELL: The matter which the leader of the Opposition has raised is one of very great interest and importance not only to the mail carriers themselves but to the service which they render. I presume there is not a member of the House who has not amongst his constituents people who are concerned in this matter. Last session the hon. member for West Peterborough (Mr. Burnham) moved the following resolution:

> That, in the opinion of this House, Parliament should provide that the Postmaster General shall have power to revise rural mail carriers' contracts not yet fully executed in order that the service may not suffer from conditions bearing unfairly on the said carriers arising from sudden rise in prices due to unusual circumstances and unfairly affecting the rate of remuneration contracted for.

That expresses in another form the idea which the leader of the Opposition has been expressing to-night, and it undoubtedly represents a condition which exists throughout the country. There is no doubt that contracts which were let before the war were let on a basis of prices and conditions radically different from those which existed during the war and particularly in more recent years. I have turned up the statement of the Acting Postmaster General to which my hon. friend has referred and I find that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Doherty), in speaking to this motion, made this statement:

> It is not impossible—it is, in fact, highly probable—that there are cases (quite a few have been brought to the attention of the department) where it is contended, and in many of them it may be true, that conditions have so changed by reason of circumstances quite unforeseen as to make the prices of the original tenders and the prices of the contracts made upon them inadequate. But it hardly seems to me that the proper remedy in those cases is to empower the Postmaster General to revise the contracts and enter into new contracts with the individuals at present holding them. It would seem to me that the proper method of dealing with these cases, if the conditions of the contracts to-day are, by reason of unforeseen circumstances, inequitable, would be to cancel the existing contracts and call for new tenders, which tenders would be made in view of and under the existing conditions of to-day. I may say that where it has been made clear to the department that there was serious loss resulting from entirely unforeseen circumstances, in not a few instances the contracts have been cancelled and new tenders called for, and I think I may say we are inclined to continue that policy. It does seem to me that it would be an unjustifiable procedure simply to modify the conditions of existing contracts in the direction of increasing the prices; that in effect, would be making a new contract, and where there is a question of making a new contract the proper thing in the public interest, in order that the best price obtainable under existing conditions should be had, and the fairest course to those who may seek to do this work would appear to be to proceed as I have suggested. The department is quite prepared to aid in that way whenever a case is made showing that there is serious loss on the part of the contractor.

Members of the Committee will see that the policy outlined by the Acting Postmaster General a year ago was that where complaint was made by a rural mail contractor that the price at which he had taken the contract was such that he could not carry it out except at a loss, the contract should be cancelled and new tenders called for. He then would have an opportunity of securing the contract at a higher price in open competition with others. The policy thus outlined has been carried out by the department during the year. When application for an increase in salary, or relief from a contract, is made to the department, if the contractor can establish to the satisfaction of the department that to insist on the performance of his contract will cause him serious loss, tenders are called for with a view to making other arrangements. If a reasonable offer is forthcoming, a new contract is entered into and the contractor is released. The old contractor submits a tender and competes on equal basis with the others. That principle has been applied to all contracts entered into prior to the first of January, 1918. In reference to contracts entered into since that date, the view of the department has been that any man who made a contract after that date made it in view of the existing conditions and that conditions had not so radically changed since 1918 as to justify the cancellation of the contract.

Mr. McKENZIE: Certain people who have contracts have written that their routes have been put up as many as three times since they have had the contracts and that the department found the tenders too high and continued the poor victims under the old contract, continuing them in harness and making them do the work. If I am put to the test I can produce written evidence to the effect that it is true. One man says: My route was put up for the third time, and each time the Government refused to make a new contract saying the price is too high, and I am compelled to continue the work.

Mr. ROWELL: I am only expressing my own opinion as a member of the Government but I would think that in a case like that there should be some method of relief. I would think that some additions should be made to the contract. If the Government cannot get anybody else to take the contract at a figure which they are willing to accept, there should be some measure of relief to the existing contractor. I will take the matter up with the Postmaster General and make representations to him in connection with it.

Mr. McKENZIE: I see a good deal of force in what the Acting Postmaster General says about contracts that were entered into in 1918. Of course, conditions have not changed so very much. The people had notice as to the conditions. But I am advocating relief for people who had before that time entered into contracts. There must be a great many of them. I have only mentioned a few.

But there are a great many who have had contracts for quite a period prior to 1918. I know personally that around the island of Cape Breton tenders have several times been called to replace contracts now existing, but they were not accepted because the department regarded them as too high. Of course, the department could call upon the man who already had taken the contract, and given securities, to continue, and in some cases that has been done. That may be regarded as economy, but it is economy at the expense of the poor man and economy that the Canadian people do not want, if I judge them aright.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I have a distinct recollection that about a year ago certain of the city mail carriers were brought under the Civil Service Commission, but the rural mail couriers were not. Could the minister give us any figures showing the average stipend paid to rural mail couriers as compared with the wages paid to the carriers or postmen in the cities and towns? It was only a short time after the House prorogued last year that the postmen in the city of Toronto went on strike. They demanded higher wages than they were then getting, and their deman was acceded to. As to the rural mail couriers, some of them, who had taken contracts several years ago, have carried on, but others have bitterly complained that they were not able to do so by reason of the increase in the cost of living. It must be remembered that the rural mail couriers have to furnish a horse and rig in order to carry out their contract, whereas the postmen in the cities and towns are relieved from any such expense, and in addition are furnished with uniforms. I think that such a comparison of cost as I have asked for will be very useful to the House and to the country at the present time.

Mr. ROWELL: I do not quite understand what my hon. friend refers to when he speaks of mail carriers having recently been taken under the Civil Service Commission. If he means the city postmen or letter-carriers, they have been under the Civil Service Commission for several years. I do not see how it is possible to make a comparison between the wages paid to postmen in cities and towns and the amount paid to a rural mail contractor. In some cases the contractor works all day, and in other cases his working day is short, depending entirely upon the nature of the route. The conditions are so entirely different between the two classes of employees that I have no figures upon which to base a comparison such as the hon. member (Mr. Sutherland) has asked for.

In answer to the leader of the Opposition, I intimated my own view that if a rural mail contractor took a contract before the war at pre-war prices, and if new tenders have been called for and the department cannot get one at a price it is willing to accept, the existing contract should be readjusted so that the contractor should not be compelled to carry out his duties at the old figure. If, however, the department, in calling for new tenders, should receive a tender at what it considered a fair price, I believe it would be its duty in the public interest to accept it.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I do not see why it is not possible to make some reasonable comparison between the wages paid to the postmen and the amount paid to contractors in the rural mail service. The average route for a mail courier is from twenty to twenty-five miles, which surely involves a day's work, now that the country is getting down to an eight-hour day basis. The rural mail courier has to provide a horse and rig, as I have already explained, and if a comparison such as I have suggested were made, I think it would be found he receives much less than is paid to the postman in the towns and cities, who is not obliged to make any such outlay, and is supplied with a uniform.

Mr. H. J. MACKIE: Comparing 1919 with 1915, I would like to ask the minister what he considers should be a fair increase in the remuneration now paid to a rural mail contractor?

Mr. ROWELL: I confess that I cannot answer the question, because there are so many conditions involved that would have to be considered. One would have to know what the actual contract was, and the conditions under which it was entered into in 1915 as compared with 1919. That, I think, would be a matter for the expert advisers of the Post Office Department.

Mr. H. J. MACKIE: We are told by the acting minister who had the affairs of the Post Office Department in charge last year, that he considered fifteen per cent a very fair increase, and that both the rural mail courier and the country should be satisfied with it. I think it would be a good business policy to cancel the existing contracts and call for new tenders, in view of the inadequacy of the present remuneration. I have in mind a case where a rural mail courier received $1,000 for the work which he performed. It was suggested to him that he should relinquish this contract and put in a fresh tender. He did so and re-tendered at what he thought was a fair price, viz: $1,250. He was the only tenderer, and months passed without the contract being renewed with him. Then there appeared upon the scene a representative of the Post Office Department who made a canvass from house to house, and eventually succeeded in getting a retired farmer to accept the contract for $950. The departmental official described to this retired farmer what a delightful occupation mail carrying was, describing that he was out in the early morning listening to the birds singing, but he did not enlighten him about the snowdrifts through which he would have to drive in winter, or anything of that nature. Now the representative of the constituency in question is being urged by this man to secure for him an increase of at least $400, so that he can meet expenses. I consider the tactics of the department were decidedly unfair in the case I have mentioned.

Mr. ROWELL: In the case the hon. gentleman has alluded to the official was perhaps over-zealous in the public interest is his desire to keep down expenses. If the increase was only what my hon. friend mentions I would have given the man the contract.

Mr. H. J. MACKIE: Then I wish the minister would bring the facts to the at- of the Postmaster-General, who has not the honour of a seat in this House, and that he would see that this man receives a proper increase in his remuneration.

Mr. HOCKEN: Am I at liberty, Mr. Chairman, to refer to the salary items for the Post Office Department under the heading "Civil Government," and to ask the minister a question with respect to them?

Mr. ERNEST LAPOINTE: We will have to come back to this item, I suppose, because I have something to say about it also.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. Steele): The hon. gentleman will be quite in order in referring to the salaries of the deputy minister and the assistant deputy minister, which items have not yet been passed.

Mr. HOCKEN: That will afford me the opportunity I want.

The CHAIRMAN: The officers mentioned have control over the Outside Service, and therefore the hon. gentleman would be quite in order.

Mr. HOCKEN: I have nothing to say with respect to the deputy minister, but I wanted to ask the minister if the increase being voted to Mr. Verret is in recognition of the services that he rendered in connection with the stealing of the examination papers from the Civil Service Commission. Perhaps the minister is not aware of the circumstances, and I will state them if he so desires. It will be remembered that a man named Petticlerc was caught with examination papers in his possession, and subsequently a Mr. Robert, of the Post Office Department, was arrested. Thereupon Mr. Foran, the Secretary of the Civil Service Commission, telephoned to the inspector of police and asked him to take the prisoner to Mr. Verret's office. When he was—

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. Steele): Anything which this assistant had to do with the outside service of the Post Office Department would be quite in order for discussion, but it would be scarcely in order to bring this particular matter up on this item.

Mr. HOCKEN: I just wanted to show how by reason of the steps taken the whole case went by the board.

Mr. CHISHOLM: The hon. member for North Renfrew (Mr. Mackie) has referred to a particular case in his own constituency, and I have a similar case to bring to the attention of the minister. Last spring before I left for home I interviewed one of the officers of the department and submitted a concrete case to him. I gave him the facts as well as I knew them and so convinced him that I got a promise that he would open up the contract and ask for tenders. He did so, and sometime in June he received offers which he considered so high that he proceeded to ask for further tenders, and he did that a third time. Then he communicated with those who had tendered to coax them to take the service at a lower figure. I have not the slightest complaint against the officer I have in mind, because I know him to be one of the best officers in the department—the Superintendent of Mail Contracts. He, however, kept this thing dangling until last April, when he finally agreed to give the contract to another man. The difference between the old contract and the new is so great that it must have been apparent to the department that the first contractor was not properly treated. He had had the contract for four years—it was made before the war—and he received under it $1,600 for his services. The lowest offer that the superintendent could get was $3,600, and he was finally forced to give the contract to the tenderer at that figure. I submit that by the manipulation of the department they succeeded in ruining the original contractor. He was an honourable man and sacrificed everything he had rather than throw responsibility upon his sureties, and he is now without house or home. In such a case it seems to me that the department should come to the rescue and compen-

10 p.m. sate this man to some extent for the services he rendered during those months while the departmeent scurried all over the country in their efforts to get another man to take the contract at anything less than $3,600. That was not the lowest tender anyway.

Mr. EDWARDS: How long a time elapsed?

Mr. CHISHOLM: Nine months.

Mr. ROWELL: What is the name of the route?

Mr. CHISHOLM: From Margaree to Inverness.

Mr. ROWELL: From those facts the department will be able to look the matter up.

Mr. CHISHOLM: I have been after the department since then, but have not succeeded in getting any consideration for the man.

Mr. E. LAPOINTE: I have a request to present on behalf of a very large population in the district along the Transcontinental between the city of Quebec and Edmundston, N.B. The Canadian Government Railways are running two trains daily, one in each direction. There is a mail car attached to the train leaving Quebec in the afternoon, but that car goes only so far as Monk in the county of L'Islet, about a hundred miles from the city of Quebec, and then it is attached to the return train. The population between Monk and Edmundston is asking that the car be retained on the train to deliver the mail on the whole section of the line. Petitions were sent to the department last fall and winter asking for this improvement. It is a very important section and a large business is transacted by lumber companies. There are among others the important settlements of Pohenagamooke, Blue River, River Ulanie, Lake Long, St. Eleuthère, Escourt, and Baker Lake.

The district is in the counties of Temiscouata, Kamouraska and L'Islet for the most part, with a portion in New Brunswick. I do not understand why the department is not operating this mail car on the whole route instead of only as far as Monk.

Mr. ROWELL: My hon. friend's question involves two considerations: the public to be served and the cost of the service. One of the reasons why, up to date, full postal facilities have not been provided on certain sections of the line is because of the cost of the service. Generally speaking, railway service depends on the volume of business, and the service is increased as the volume of business increases. With reference to the particular section that my hon. friend mentions, and certain other sections of the National railways, the whole matter, as I mentioned on Friday night, is under consideration by the Post Office Department. A number of requests have come in for increased postal service, and the department is now reviewing them to see what can be done to meet local needs, at the same time conserving public interests and not imposing too great a tax on the exchequer.

Mr. McKENZIE: Going back to the subject of contracts, I have a letter here from a place called Boundary Creek, in the province of Alberta. It is from a contractor who is an old servant of this department, his contract dating from 1911. He writes me that he has been making desperate efforts to be relieved from his contract, but the only relief he can get from the department is in the form of threatening letters to himself and his sureties that unless he carries out the terms of his contract the law will be enforced upon the bond. For the last three years, I understand, they have had hay and oat crops failures in the part of the country where this man lives, and he has to haul his hay and oats from a long distance in order to perform his contract. The man's name is Stuart Selby. He is an entire stranger to me, and I suppose he wrote me because I am leader of the Opposition and in the hope that I would bring this matter to the attention of the department.

His route is from a place called Carston to Boundary Creek and back; it is a thirty-mile route. This man appears to be in desperate straits. According to a letter he writes me, the amount which he gets from the department does not begin to pay for the upkeep of his horses; but he is bound under a bond, and can do nothing in the matter.

In my part of the country there is a mail route from a railway station at a place called Christmas Island to the head of East Bay, a distance of about twenty-five miles each way. The mail contractor, a man named McIntyre, has had the contract for a good many years. He has applied for some relief, but so far has received no consideration, and he is still performing the service faithfully and well. There is another contractor in the northern part of Victoria county on the mail route between Englishtown and Path End, or Ingonish Ferry, at the foot of Cape Smoky, a distance of thirty-five miles each way. This man, whose name is McInnis, is in the same position as the others who are claiming that they cannot perform the contract on the allowance that they are getting—though, if they get no relief, they will have to perform it whether they are ruined or not.

Mr. EDWARDS: Were all these contracts entered into prior to January 1, 1918?

Mr. McKENZIE: Yes. The McIntyre contract is much older than that, as also is the McInnis contract. There is a mail service from Christmas Island to East Bay three times a week. At the head of East Bay the courier connects with the Sydney route which runs from the city of Sydney to East Bay, and letters for the north side of East Bay were formerly carried by the Sydney courier and delivered to the East Bay-Christmas Island courier at the head of East Bay. The East Bay-Christmas Island courier would take this Sydney mail back to Christmas Island on his return trip and distribute it, so that the people along that route got mail every day, alternately from Christmas Island and from Sydney. But about a year ago the lady who kept the post office at the head of East Bay refused any longer to distribute this mail on the ground that she was not paid enough for doing so; consequently the people on the Christmas Island-East Bay route are deprived of the service that they had for thirty years. The amount of money that this lady asks for distributing the mail cannot be very much, but rather than pay it the department has thought fit to drop the service and deprive these people of a daily mail. I have taken the matter up by correspondence several times with the minister and with the inspector, but the only answer I get is that this woman refused to do the work. I was never asked to find out how much she wanted, but I am sure that a woman living in a country house would not be unreasonable in her demands. She should be paid a reasonable amount so that the people of that community may be served as they were for thirty years; the expenditure of a trifling sum should not stand in the way of giving them a good service.

Mr. ROWELL: I will have all the cases mentioned by my hon. friend looked into carefully and will report to him with regard to them. If the member for North Renfrew (Mr. H. J. Mackie) will give me the particulars of the case which he has mentioned, I will have it looked into.

Mr. BELAND: My hon. friend (Mr. Hocken) appeared to be anxious to know what was the reason for the increase in Mr. Verret's salary. I hold no brief for Mr. Verret, but my hon. friend will be interested to learn that Mr. Verret is one of the bravest, the most distinguished and most efficient officers who went overseas with the Canadian Expeditionary Force. He went as a captain and returned as a major, having been twenty-seven months in the trenches and wounded seven times. He bears the badge of D.S.O.

Mr. HOCKEN: I have heard all that before. I wanted to explain Colonel Verret's part in the Robert case, but you would not permit me, Mr. Chairman, to do so. I submit that after what has been said by the hon. member (Mr. Beland) I should be allowed to go on.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. Steele): The hon. gentleman may deal only with the Assistant Deputy Postmaster General in his connection with the outside post office service.

Mr. HOCKEN: This was a case where evidence was pretty nearly available and the man was going to "cough up," but after spending three minutes with Mr. Verret he closed up tight.

The CHAIRMAN: Order.

Mr. E. LAPOINTE: On Friday the minister promised to give certain information asked for by the member for Dorchester (Mr. Cannon).

Mr. ROWELL: I shall be glad to give it. The expenses of Mr. Laflamme, private secretary to the Postmaster General, on the occasion referred to, were paid by the Post Office Department, and the expenses of the Postmaster General himself by the Department of Militia. Mr. Laflamme's expenses amounted to $1,970.61.

Mr. E. LAPOINTE: That is for his travelling expenses?

Mr. ROWELL: Yes, and living expenses.

Mr. E. LAPOINTE: Was he drawing a salary apart from that?

Mr. ROWELL: Those are his travelling expenses. He would have his salary in addition.

Mr. J. R. WILSON: The minister knows about the letter carriers' strike which occurred last summer and which caused a great deal of trouble and considerable loss in the city which I represent. A war bonus was granted and the delay in its allocation caused a strike. That bonus expired with the last fiscal year. Has it been renewed, and is their remuneration satisfactory to the men—because we wish to avoid another strike this year?

Mr. ROWELL: All the bonuses to which the hon. member referred continued until the 31st March of this year. The Government have now a Supplementary Estimate before the House continuing the bonus for three months more, that is, up to the first of July, and the men are being paid the bonus now just as they were during last year. Much before the first of July, the Government anticipate the re-classification of the Civil Service will be brought down, upon which re-classification there will be submitted to the House for approval a new salary schedule and a new system of bonuses which will take the place of the old salary and the old bonus entirely.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: What salaries are the letter carriers receiving now?

Mr. ROWELL: The salary, apart from the bonus, is a minimum of $2 and a maximum of $3 per day, with an increase of 25 cents a day per annum. In addition to that, there is a series of bonuses and allowances totalling $350 for the East and $300 for the West, which has to be added to the salary in each case, and in addition there was $180 extra living allowance in the West.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: What would the maximum salary be?

Mr. ROWELL: It is $939 for salary and $350 for bonus, or a total of $1,289.

Mr. EDWARDS: As regards the renewal of contracts of mail carriers, the Government has adopted a very wise and just policy in allowing those who made their contracts previously to the first of January, 1918, to be, if they so desire, released from those contracts. But in cases where, after advertising, it is found impossible to get any one else to put in a tender for carrying the mail on a route, the Government should take the impossibility of getting tenders as evidence of the fact that the price paid has been too small; and while the Government must allow the service to go on and hold the original carrier to his contract, he should be held only for a reasonable time after the Government has exhausted its efforts to get tenders, and some consideration should be given to that man on his contract. He should not be compelled to carry it on because it is found impossible to get any one else to tender for the same kind of work.

There is another matter that I want to call to the attention of the Acting Postmaster General (Mr. Rowell), and I hope it will receive more consideration from the department than it has received in the past. The Government has seen fit to fix the salaries of postmen, and the acting minister has just told us that with the bonus their maximum salary amounted last year to $1,289. In the rural parts of this country, in fair-sized villages, we have a class of postmasters who are receiving practically no consideration and who never have received any consideration or any fair play from the Government. I refer to the country or village postmaster whose whole time is required for the work of his office. I took up with the Deputy Postmaster General the case of the postmaster at Sydenham, the largest village in my constituency, and asked if something could not be done to give that man fair play in the way of salary. His whole time is required for the duties of his office; he must be at his office by seven o'clock in the morning in order to prepare the mails for the outgoing stage, and he has to be there until eight or nine o'clock at night. Although those are pretty long hours, he has been receiving a salary of $800 or $900 a year, which is entirely unfair. That man is just as much a public servant as any postman or other civil servant in Ottawa whose salary is much higher. The majority of postmasters in the country districts carry on their work in connection with a store or some other business, the post office being a sort of side line, and in those cases, there is no great hardship. But I wish most earnestly to direct the attention of the department to those few cases in country villages where the whole time of the postmaster is required for the work. Such men should be placed in a separate class from the ordinary country or village postmaster, and their salaries should be fixed just as the salary of a postman or other civil servant in Ottawa is fixed. We are getting their services and they are not being paid for them. In a large village such as I have mentioned, the post office not only serves the village, but is the distributing point for several rural routes, so that the work of the postmaster is enormously increased. Civil servants in the Post Office Department in Ottawa have to work eight or nine hours a day, and not one of them but is receiving a much higher remuneration than that man. In my constituency, there would be perhaps only one other similar case, or possibly two. I hope the department will seriously consider placing those postmasters in a class by themselves, and not have their remuneration fixed as it is at present.

Mr. BOYCE: I do not think there is a more faithful body of men than the mail carriers, who are doing splendid work for from $750 to $900 a year, out of which they have to supply their horses, every carrier having one and sometimes two. It matters not how bad the roads may be, they carry on their work in every condition of weather, and at the end of the year they find that they have not been able to make ends meet. The mail carriers in the cities get from $1,000 to $1,500, and any civil servant who receives less than $1,800 gets a bonus of $250 or $300. Why should not the Government be generous to these people in the country? Are they not as well entitled to consideration as those in the cities? The Postmasters, too, get about $40 a year, but no consideration seems to be given to their extremely deserving case. The attitude seems to be that they can take what they get and need say nothing about it. I can mention a man who carries the mails six miles every day back and forth for the munificent sum of $300, and yet hon. gentlenmen seem to consider those men are getting enough. I do not intend to use any threats, but in the county I represent there will be a strike before two months pass if these men do not receive more generous treatment, and one can hardly blame them. I trust that something will be done to remedy this state of affairs, because if there is a strike there you may depend upon it there will be strikes all over Canada. These men are not demanding anything extravagant but they want to be treated honestly and decently and given a fair remuneration for the excellent service they render.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I think we have before us an example why the people are inclined to move from the country to the cities. When you witness the ragged and bedraggled rural mail carriers driving in from the country through all sorts of weather, furnishing their own horses and rigs and travelling over a twenty-five mile route for something like $800, while a postman in the city receives about $1,300 and two uniforms without any outlay such as the other has to incur, I think the injustice that is being done to these people will be apparent, and the manner in which the postmen can hold the Government up and compel them to meet their demands is an evidence that the rural mail carrier is suffering an injustice. He has also to furnish bonds. I am not sure whether the men delivering mails in the cities do the same, but do not think so. I have known several instances in which the rural mail carriers had to quit and lost what little money they had put into their outfit, and went back labouring for day's wages wherever they could obtain work. In regard to the closing of small offices throughout rural districts, I shall have something to say. The establishment of rural mail delivery was, I think, the greatest boon to the people in the rural districts ever experienced, but the policy of the Government apparently now is to close up as many of these offices as they can regardless of the effect it will have on the community. Many of these offices are located, as the hon. member for Frontenac (Mr. Edwards) said, in general stores, at points where there may be small hamlets of thirty or forty houses, and the postmasters receive a mere bagatelle for their services and the rent for the offices is very small. During the past summer a couple of offices were closed in the riding which I have the honour to represent, offices which I thought were serving a useful purpose. I felt an injustice was done, not only to the people living in the immediate vicinity, but to the farmers in the surrounding district who were accustomed to assemble at these places after their day's work and who were doing business through these post offices in the way of purchasing money orders, etc. In thickly settled districts these general stores are rendezvous where the people from the surrounding districts often gather at night to do their business. Consequently they serve a useful purpose. One of these offices to which I refer was about five miles and the other about eight miles from a town in a part of the country that was well served by rural mail delivery. The revenue in each case was over $100 above the cost to the country in maintaining them. The Postmaster General's report does not now contain the information which it previously gave, and I have not the figures for the last few years, but in 1916 the revenue of one of these offices was $182.13, salary, $68; and the postmaster got $6 rent for keeping His Majesty's mail in his store. The department derived a revenue of $118 from that office over and above expenses. The other office, which was about four miles distant, showed a surplus of about $94 over cost to the department. Both of these offices have been closed and the department will suffer a loss of revenue. The express companies deemed it of sufficient importance to open offices there and pick up some of the business which had formerly been carried on by the Post Office Department. I do not like to refer to cases of this kind, and these were the only two instances in the constituency which I represent in which I took exception to the closing of the offices. The two previous Postmaster Generals, acting on the advice of the inspector for that district, suggested the closing of these offices, and when the matter was placed before them they saw the wisdom of continuing them. However, the present Postmaster General thought it advisable to close them, with the result I have pointed out. But another objection is that the people will have to pay $4.50 for a box to be stuck up on the side of the road, and two beautiful country hamlets will be greatly disfigured as a result.

The manner in which these places have been disfigured by having these boxes stuck up at corners is a serious matter. This policy is not being carried out uniformly throughout the country. I have asked for information in regard to it with reference to adjoining ridings, and I understand that in these ridings where the revenues were not as great as they were in the offices to which I refer the offices are still being maintained. It is very unfair on the part of the department to show discrimination as between different ridings. If, as the minister has informed me, this is the policy that they have laid down, and that they are closing up these offices by the hundred regardless of financial loss to the country by reason of having given the rural mail delivery, let them apply the same rule in all constituencies. I know that in the constituency immediately to the north of me that policy is not being carried out and that offices are being maintained for the closing of which there would be much more justification than there was in the case of the two offices I am referring to. The names of these offices are Verschoyle and Culloden and they are offices which have been in existence for years. The express companies have deemed them to be of sufficient importance to open offices there to take care of the business which has been discarded by the Post Office Department.

Mr. ROWELL: I will ask the officers of the department to look into the particular case to which my hon. friend has referred. I am sure he will appreciate the difficulty that the Post Office Department faces growing out of the extension of rural mail delivery. I quite agree with him as to the great practical benefits that result to the people of the country from the extension of the service. If you can get your mail regularly without the necessity of going to the post office it is a very great boon. But this can only be done at very considerable cost to the country; the extension of the rural mail service has involved a very heavy financial outlay. The Government is extending the service from time to time as the conditions appear to warrant. During last year 266 post offices were opened and 366 closed. These offices were closed for the reason which my hon. friend has mentioned as applying to the two offices in his own riding—largely due to the extension of the rural mail delivery service and because it was not believed essential that they should be continued, as the mail was being distributed by rural mail delivery. The number of rural mail delivery routes in operation to March 31st was 2,674, and the number of boxes served 173,150. That great extension accounts for a certain number of offices being closed. The rural mail routes have taken their places.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I see by the Postmaster General's report that the revenue for the 1918 from the Verschoyle office was $243.34 and not $182 as it was for the year 1916. It shows that there was a material increase in the revenue from that office. At Culloden the revenue was $268.97 for 1918. It may be the policy of the department to close up these offices by reason of the rural mail delivery that has been inaugurated, but if you are going to allow revenue to go into the hands of the express companies it is a very poor business method on the part of the department.

Mr. PEDLOW: I have listened with a great deal of interest to the discussion regarding the rural mail service, and I endorse most heartily all that has been said with reference to the superintendent of that service. He is a most efficient, capable and energetic administrator. He has a most difficult department to administer, and I feel confident that if he had more latitude from the Postmaster General he would straighten out a great many of the complaints that have been voiced here to-night.

I have another matter of greater importance, in the interest of the country, than the rural mail service to deal with in connection with these Estimates. I think the Committee will be well advised to delay the passing of this Estimate for further consideration. I refer to the cost of the railway mail service. The entire cost as shown in the Auditor General's Report, page S-48, is $3,487,590.37, of which the Canadian Pacific Railway secured the magnificent sum of $1,735,644.44. I think that if a little attention were given to this feature of the expenditure, and if some of the carriage were transferred to the Government railways, it would tend to reduce the deficits that obtain from year to year on the Government roads. If the surplus mail that goes by express, instead of in the railway mail cars, were shipped over the Government railways rather than over the Canadian Pacific, the cost of this carriage would be added to the revenue of the Government railways and not to the revenue of the Canadian Pacific. This is a matter that I think deserves the sincere and earnest attention of the Postmaster General and I would be glad if the President of the Privy Council would call his attention to it.

There is another matter that I think supports my demand for delay in the passing of these Estimates and that has reference to the item of salaries and allowances. I do not see how the Committee can deal with this subject intelligently until the new classification has been brought before the House. I claim that it is not possible for the House to pass this Estimate to-night or to arrive at an intelligent decision on the subject. I do not know whether it is germane to the subject under discussion to go into the question of increases of salaries or not. Possibly it will not be until such time as the Supplementary Estimate has been brought down but I would point out one anomaly likely in connection with this matter. Take chief clerks in the Post Office classified as grade 1A. Now supposing a clerk is promoted from the Railway Mail Service to the position of chief clerk, Grade I A. At the present time the maximum salary for that position is $1,800, and the minimum $1,600. Under the re-classification which has been recently carried out the maximum and minimum salaries attached to that position may be increased to $2,600 and $2,400 respectively. The point that will be up for debate in the House is whether the employee in question —having been in the Service perhaps for a period of thirty years and having attained a maximum of $1,800 a year—should be advanced to the minimum or the maximum of the new classification. I think it will be admitted by all that a man who has given thirty years service to the country should in all fairness receive the maximum instead of the minimum under that classification. This at the first glance might appear to be unreasonable, but such an advance would be simple fairness to a man in such a position. For the two reasons I have given the minister will be well-advised in allowing this item to stand over for further discussion until the new classification has been brought down or until we have had time to look into the facts regarding the amounts paid to the railways for the carriage of the mails.

Mr. STEELE: I wish to join with a number of honourable gentlemen who have spoken to-night in urging the Government to give more generous consideration to the mail carriers. I hesitate to offer any criticism respecting a department that is generally so efficiently run as the Post Office Department, but, I presume, no department of the Government has ever attained absolute perfection. I believe that the minister and the officials of the department at the present time are most anxious that it should be managed as perfectly as possible, and knowing this I venture with a good deal of confidence to advance one or two suggestions which, perhaps, have not been brought to their attention, and which, in their desire to administer the department as efficiently as can be I know they will take under consideration. First, regarding the rural mail carriers, I can see great difficulty in connection with the matter. There is no doubt at all that many of those carriers are working to-day for a remuneration which is notoriously inadequate—in fact, I have told many of the carriers in my constituency that they were very foolish to undertake the work at all when they are losing money every day on account of carrying His Majesty's mails. However, I cannot forget that these men entered into the contract voluntarily, they are not under compulsion at all, and when they do that naturally the department expects them to carry out their obligations. I think, however, that contractors who took contracts three years or so ago, and are to-day carrying out those contracts on the same terms, should be considered, even if they do not put up a plea to the department and endeavour to show they are losing money. I think it would be better for the department to take up all these cases and deal with them on a uniform basis; it would certainly be greater satisfaction to the mail carriers. Another thing of which the carriers complain, and which I wish to bring to the attention of the department, is in connection with the sale of stamps and money orders to the people along their routes, especially stamps. There is but little trouble in the summer time when the weather conditions are favourable, but on stormy days in winter, when the carrier is going along muffled up in his fur coat, and wearing a big pair of mitts or gloves, and parties come running out to their gate to purchase two or three stamps, it is altogether different. The carrier has to stop, remove his mitts, unfasten his wallet to get out the stamps, and if it is a damp day the stamps are apt to get moist in the process. That seems only a little matter, but it requires perhaps three, four, or five minutes, and if he has to do that at ten, twelve, or twenty places a day it will be seen how much time he loses. I would suggest that the department supply the carrier with envelopes made of waterproof paper in one of which he might place twenty-five cents' worth of stamps, in another ten cents' worth, and so on. When the people come out for stamps he can hand them an envelope containing the amount of stamps they want and there is very little danger of the stamps getting moist and being spoiled.

There is another thing I wish to bring forward, which I know results in considerable loss to a number of postmasters. In the portion of the country I represent the trains leave very early and the mail is received very early, necessitating postmasters having their offices open at six a.m. Mails are also received very late at night. In both the towns in my riding mails arrive at eleven o'clock at night, necessitating the post office being kept open at that hour in order to take care of registered mail and so on. The postmaster of one of these offices writes me to say that he pays an extra allowance of $5 a month to a man to take in the mail at night, and dispose of the registered mail carefully. He has also to pay an extra allowance of $7 a month to a man to be there in the morning to open the office at six o'clock in order to get the mail ready to be despatched on the seven o'clock train. He says that for these two services he pays extra men $144 a year, and notwithstanding the fact that he has brought it to the attention of the department, all that it allows him for this purpose is $75 a year. Any of us who thinks of a man being up three hundred nights in the year till eleven o'clock to receive mail and for that is paid the magnificent sum of $5 a month will duly appreciate the fact that the Post Office Department, in that respect at least, is not extravagant. I do think the department might well recognize the services which these men are compelled to perform, and remunerate them according to the work they are doing. I do not think it is economy to have any man doing such work as this for the department and feeling that he is being paid such an unreasonable amount. We know that the salary of the country posmaster to-day is very inadequate, and that if he has to pay out of his own stipend for these extra services considerably more than the department will allow him he is probably filling the office of postmaster at considerable loss to himself. I hope the department will look into these matters and endeavour to be more generous to the postmaster in the small town as well as to the country postmaster.

Mr. PEDLOW: I wish to add one statement to my previous observations. Whereas the Canadian Pacific received $1,735,644 for carrying mail last year, the Government Railways received only $849,879 for the same service.

Mr. ARTHURS: I think that every hon. member who has had any experience with the Post Office Department will agree with me that the Post Office Department is managed very economically and with due regard to the public service. As a whole I have absolutely no fault to find in that regard, and I must say that during my experience with the present and the preceding Governments I have received nothing but courtesy. But while I believe that economy is desirable I agree absolutely with the previous speaker that both in the rural and other mail services the remuneration is very inadequate. Unfortunately, the practice followed by the department is to call for tenders for these various services, and after the tenders have been received the department, in their wisdom—or lack of wisdom in many cases—if a tender is too high immediately start to peddle the job round the country, or get the post office inspector to call round and interview certain men and say: " we will not award this contract for $100, we are going to get new bids".

The net result is that they induce some individual to take the contract at about half a living wage. We have in the same department demands for increases on behalf of the mail carriers in the cities. Those demands have been granted in many cases, and yet where a new route is being established—and I have in mind now particularly rural mail routes—the department adheres to the principle of a maximum sum per mile. A sum was fixed previous to war conditions, and if the sum asked by tenderers is greater than that maximum, the rural mail delivery is set back until somebody is foolish enough to accept the terms of the department. When these contracts are renewed the department inevitably find that they cannot get the work done for the same money. My experience has been that where a rural mail delivery has once been established, and new tenders have been called for on the old contract, the Government has in every case had to pay from 40 to 60 per cent more than the original sum allotted for that service. These men are entitled to a fair wage, and when the Government advertise for tenders they should abide by the tenders received or advertise for new tenders. I cannot see any reason why this practice should be continued of peddling these contracts around and ultimately inducing some poor fellow to take on a twenty mile route at $2.25 a day. As I said before, the general service of the Post Office Department has been entirely satisfactory to the public, but as far as the mail carriers are concerned, there is no question in my mind that they have a grievance. As previous speakers have said, these men took contracts under pre-war conditions, or during the first year of the war when prices were low, and they are continuing loyally to carry out those contracts. We had a promise from the minister last session or the session before that in any case where cancellation of such contracts was asked for it would be granted, but I find many cases in which cancellation has been refused. This is a very serious matter to the men concerned and is deserving of careful consideration on the part of the department.

Mr. EDWARDS: I have several times heard hon. members call attention to the revenue and expenditure of the Post Office Department, and if they can show that the expenditure has exceeded the revenue they think they have scored a point. In my judgment the Post Office Department is the one department of the Government where we should not look for a surplus. If a deficit is shown, that is not necessarily a point against the administration. Every dollar of revenue of the department comes out of the pockets of the people, and in my estimation every dollar should go back to the people in mail service of some kind or other. With demands for rural delivery over our very extensive Dominion I do not see how it is possible for the department to show a surplus if they give the people of the country districts the service to which they are entitled. The people in the country districts are contributing to the up-building of this country just as much as their friends in the urban districts, and practically the only thing that the Government can do for them is to give them an up-to-date mail service. There are many places in the rural districts where there are no public works, no money is ever expended by the department in building post offices, or wharfs where there is no water, and that sort of thing, and it is but right that the rural population should have an up-to-date mail service, even if it results in the expenditure of the department exceeding the revenue.

11 p.m.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: In my judgment the Post Office Department have not done nearly as much as they might have done for the rural districts. I am not now urging a large expenditure, but for a number of years I have drawn the attention of the department to the desirability of putting automobiles on the long routes instead of horses, but I have had no attention paid to my suggestion. Where the routes are short, and the population is dense, rural mail delivery by team is all right, but on the long routes automobiles are necessary. In my constituency there is one route sixty miles in length from Heatherton to Canso, one of the largest towns in my county. It would be impossible to apply the usual rural delivery to that route, because the postman could not get to Canso for a couple of days. I know of other routes forty miles long. If the department would introduce delivery by automobile it would be a great accommodation on those long routes. Some of the contractors have adopted automobiles and they find they are able to do their work most satisfactorily, but the department have taken no interest in the matter as far as I know, and have not figured on the difference between automobile and horse delivery.

Mr. EDWARDS: How about the winter season?

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: Of course it would not be practicable during part of the winter season; but these long routes are generally handled by men who have livery stables, and in the winter season they have very little work for their horses, whereas in the summer season there is a great demand for them. I rather expected the minister would explain to the Committee the very large increase that has taken place in the Estimates of the department compared with the service the people are receiving. In looking over the Public Accounts for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1918, I find on page 77, the expenditure of the Post Office Department for a long period of years. The last occupant of the position of Postmaster General under the late Laurier Administration was the member for Beauce (Mr. Béland) and I suppose we must make him responsible for the year 1912. In that year the administration of the Post Office Department cost the country $9,172,035.47. In 1913 the amount, in round figures, was $10,000,000; in 1914, $12,000,000; in 1915, $15,000,000; in 1916, $16,000,000; in 1918, $18,000,000. The expense has doubled since the Borden Administration came into power.

Mr. EDWARDS: Would it not be advisable to go back to the years 1909 and 1910, and to give the number of rural routes in existence in those years?

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: That would only make the comparison more striking, because the cost of administering the department in 1910 was $7,000,000, and in 1911 about the same. There was a large surplus at that time, which was paid into the general revenue of the country. The cost of the rural mail service does not explain the large increase. Of course, we must make allowance for the rural mail delivery. It is a progressive move; it serves the people, and we must pay for it. It is said that $5 a box would be a fair basis upon which to estimate the increased cost resulting from the establishing of rural mail delivery; the officers of the department are here and can say whether or not I am right in that. The post office returns for the present year show that there are 173,150 boxes, which would give $865,750 as the total increase of cost in connection with the rural mail delivery. Even if we allow a million for the increase on this account, the general increase is still very large and the greater part of it is not accounted for. The population of the country has not increased very much. The number of offices opened in 1918 was 216 and the number closed was 366; so we had 160 less post offices at the end of the last fiscal year than at the beginning. Nor is the increase due to the increased efficiency in the department, so far as I can see. I feel that it is largely due to the large and unnecessary increase in the staff in some of the cities, and that patronage has a great deal to do with it. I may be wrong in that, but I would like the minister to explain the enormous increase in the expenditure during the last seven or eight years.

Mr. ROWELL: Last Friday evening I gave the Committee some of the reasons for the increased expenditure. A good deal of the criticism, or comment, or suggestion, that has been offered to-night has been with the idea that the Post Office Department should be more generous in its payments; that the expenditure should be on a larger scale. I should judge that the general opinion of the Committee is that whatever may be the mistakes of the Post Office Department, it does not err on the side of spending too much money in carrying out the postal service of the country. My hon. friend suggests that one cause of the increased expenditure may be unnecessary appointments in some of the city post offices, and that that is one of the evils of the patronage system. My hon. friend must be very glad indeed, as we are, that the patronage system has been abolished and that the Civil Service Commission now has charge of all appointments. If such a condition exists as my hon. friend suggests, it will be disclosed when we have the report on the re-classification of the Civil Service. I should think that that report would show the number of men required in the various branches of the service.

Mr. LEMIEUX: It was promised for the beginning of May.

Mr. ROWELL: The first week in May—the first week has not yet passed. The Acting Minister of Trade and Commerce (Mr. A. K. Maclean) who is in charge of that matter, is not here; he will have to speak for himself. The extension of the rural mail service has cost many hundreds of thousands of dollars, and there has been a substantial increase of salaries in the various branches of the service. But the largest increase is due to three chief causes. First, some fifteen hundred employees of the department served overseas and in the meantime received their civil pay. The department had to employ and to pay temporary clerks to take their places.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Only until an Order in Council was passed cancelling the first Order in Council.

Mr. ROWELL: No, that has been continued. Those who enlisted after the Military Service Act was passed were not entitled to their civil pay, but those who enlisted prior to that were entitled to it.

Mr. PEDLOW: About how much did that cost during the past year?

Mr. ROWELL: The average salary of these fifteen hundred employees would be over a thousand dollars; my hon. friend can estimate what the figure would be. Another very important item in the expense is the bonuses that have been paid during the last two or three years. In 1917 a bonus of $100 was paid; there was another $150 last year; then there was the war bonus last summer of $50 in the West and $100 in the East, making $350 in bonuses to the East and $300 to the West. In addition the western employees had their regular special living allowance of $180, making a total bonus of $480 for the West. My hon. friend has only to apply these figures to the vast number of employees who received the bonus to see what a large amount that involves. The third was the increased cost, due to the increased price, particularly during the last two or three years, of supplies which the Post Office Department must buy and use. The items I have mentioned amount to some millions of dollars.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I notice that the Empress of Britain has, for the first time since the beginning of the war, reached Quebec. Were the mails conveyed by that vessel to Quebec?

Mr. ROWELL: They were.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I hope we shall have no more mails conveyed to Halifax, but that they will be landed in New York.

Mr. ROWELL: The Post Office Department have made representations to the Post Office Department in Great Britain which despatches the mails, pointing out what happened before and urging that that should be done. They have promised co-operation, so we anticipate that will be the result.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: What population must a town have before it is entitled to have delivery of the mails?

Mr. ROWELL: The general rule is 12,000 people and $20,000 revenue.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: If the revenue were larger and the population smaller, would there be a chance of getting the accommodation?

Mr. ROWELL: If the revenue were very large, I think the Post Office Department would take the matter into very sympathic consideration.

[Mr. Rowell.]

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR: According to a return that I have on my desk, the revenue last year of New Glasgow, the town in which I live, was $39,138, and the revenue of the town of Shawenegan Falls was $15,158.80. I do not know what the population of Shawenegan Falls is, but I do not think it is as large as that of New Glasgow, and yet Shawenegan Falls has a letter carrier service. Three Rivers, revenue $32,171.49; St. Hyacinthe, revenue $24,032.84; Strathcona, revenue $24,001.65, all have a letter carrier service. New Glasgow has not, and although I do not think the population of New Glasgow is 12,000, still, as the revenue is so large, it is perhaps entitled to this service.

Mr. ROWELL: The town will have to increase its population. The other figures would seem to indicate how carefully the Government is looking after the interests of Quebec.

Mr. DUFF: How much did it cost the Post Office Department last year for advertising throughout Canada?

Mr. ROWELL: I have not the figures here, but I can give the information to my hon. friend later.

Mr. McKENZIE: On several occasions I have brought before the House the question of the carriage of the mails from Halifax to St. Pierre-Miquelon. How were the mails carried last summer during open navigation, and how are they being carried now? The mails used to be put aboard the trains at Halifax and taken by rail to North Sydney, then taken out of the train and put into the post office at North Sydney, and afterwards taken aboard the Pro Patria or the St. Pierre-Miquelon boat at North Sydney. The Pro Patria every time she comes to North Sydney goes to Halifax, and I could never understand why those mails are not put aboard the boat at Halifax, because there is nothing done with them anywhere between Halifax and North Sydney. I have been bringing this matter up for years, and I can never get any satisfaction as to why the mails are not put on board the boat at Halifax.

Mr. ROWELL: The reason given to me is that the mails can be despatched at a later hour to reach the boat than if they were put on the steamship at Halifax.

Mr. McKENZIE: That reason is simply absurd, because while North Sydney is not such a small town, there is very little space in the post office and for days at a time it is filled up with St. Pierre-Miquelon mail waiting for the boat to come, so that the men cannot do their work. There must be some arrangement by which somebody is making a little money; the thing is not clean; it cannot possibly be. There is a contract for hauling the mail from Halifax to North Sydney; there is a contract for hauling it from the post office to the railway station, and all that business is carried on to no purpose in the world when the boat goes right into the wharf at Halifax, where the mails could be put on board and taken to St. Pierre-Miquelon. I have had this matter up a dozen times before, and the reason given by the Postmaster General is absolutely no reason at all.

Mr. ROWELL: I have no personal knowledge of the matter, but I will look into it and will give the hon. member the best reason the department has.

Mr. LEMIEUX: I hope the minister, when we next come to his Estimates, will bring the figures of what advertising has cost during the last two or three years. I am quite satisfied that a very large amount of money is being sunk in those advertisements for mail contracts. The department itself is not responsible, because those notices are published under the direction of the Secretary of State, or at least, that was the custom under my regime. Last year, I brought to the notice of the House a concrete case which struck me as being a case of pure jobbery. A contract for mail service in British Columbia was advertised in a small weekly paper in the county of Drummond-Arthabaska in the province of Quebec.

Mr. ROWELL: There is no excuse for that.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Certainly not, and I think if advertisements have to be published, they should be confined to the county or district in which the mail service is to be carried on.

Another matter I wish to call attention to. The boxes for the rural mail delivery service were changed some years ago, but I do not know whether they were changed all over Canada. The reason given for the change was that we were going to adopt the parcel delivery system. I would like to know the extension of this service and if the minister has any figures to give the House in connection with it. What was the revenue derived from it and what number of boxes were specially adapted for that service? The old box was too small to contain the ordinary parcel and larger boxes were secured by the department. Were those boxes distributed all over the mail routes, and does that account for the increase in the expenditure of the department? I would like to know if the rates are sufficiently low to justify the use of the parcel delivery to any reasonable extent.

Mr. ROWELL: When the Supplementary Estimates of the Post Office come in I shall be glad to give my hon. friend the information so far as it is available. Some of it is not available, because no revenue stamps are attached in the case of parcel post. I believe the service is efficient and is carried on, on the whole, under satisfactory conditions. But I shall take a note of the information my hon. friend has asked for and shall be glad to give it to him.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Are there special arrangements with large firms, such as Eaton and Simpson, Morgan in Montreal, and Dupuis and Paquet? The department store has practically put out of business the country store, and from the remotest places in my constituency mail orders are sent, and it is a great service to the people when they can order and receive their goods by mail. Are there special features of that service?

Mr. ROWELL: No, they come under the same terms as anybody else.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Does not the Post Office Department provide a specially allotted space in the mail car for that service? I have been under the impression of late that these large firms had obtained through the Post Office Department—I am not criticising—certain space in the mail cars for parcel post. If that is so, I should think the firms in question should pay for that service.

Mr. ROWELL: The hon. member is in error. They have not obtained any special privileges. Of course the Post Office Department must estimate the volume of postal business. There is a very large volume of business done by these companies, and provision must be made for the necessary cars to carry it, but these companies have no privileges. They are on the same basis as other people.

Mr. McKENZIE: The minister has recieved considerable valuable advice, and we have had many important speeches, but I am afraid that this item cannot go through without keeping us very late. There are three things which I think should engage the minister's attention more fully before the item goes through. First, what effect will the re-classification have upon the department? Then there is the very important question brought up to-night as to the policy that the Government should follow in the delivery of mails by rail. Now that we have railroads of our own pretty much all over the country, it is only proper that we should patronize them. The next thing is the huge increases in the general operations of the Post Office, brought out by the hon. member for Antigonish and Guysborough (Mr. Sinclair). The country will expect satisfactory information upon these matters before this large amount of nearly twenty million dollars is voted. The minister will understand that there is no disposition to obstruct him in his Estimates but this is the opportunity to get this information, and if he will inform the Committee on these questions on the next occasion I do not think he will have very much trouble in getting the item through. I suggest that as it is nearly twelve o'clock we might be permitted to go home.

Mr. ROWELL: The information my hon. friend asks for I can give in a minute. With reference to the re-classification, the hon. member for South Renfrew (Mr. Pedlow) suggested that the Estimate should stand because we had not full information. I think it would create an unfortunate situation in the country and grave unrest among the Post Office employees if they thought there was hesitation in voting these allowances. Until the re-classification comes down the bonuses will be continued. The re-classification will fix the scale of salaries, but we will have to deal with the re-classification when it comes down, and then will be the time to discuss the matter. With reference to the carrying of mails, the Canadian Pacific railway has been receiving substantial sums because it has been rendering services. It is on the basis of the service rendered that the Canadian Pacific railway, the Grand Trunk and the Canadian National railways are paid. But now that the Government has taken over the system of National railways, and especially if it gets the Grand Trunk, it will be in a position to serve the different communities. Speed and convenient service of the mails are essential and the Government will use the National railways to the full extent that the conditions will warrant. There is no difficulty about the Government's policy in that respect. In reference to increased expenditure I have already given information.

In so far as anything generally in connection with the Post Office is concerned, the Supplementary Estimates will be here and there will be a full opportunity for discussion. We have spent two nights on this one item and there has been a full opportunity to discuss all the aspects of it. We might put this item through now.

Mr. PEDLOW: I am glad to have the information voluntered by the Acting Postmaster General regarding his intention in reference to the railway mail service. It is, he says, his intention to recommend to the department that they use the Government railways wherever possible. What I had in mind was not the general mail service but the mail matter that is usually carried in express cars. There are express cars loaded with mail matter from Toronto to points like Winnipeg and Vancouver and these cars are shipped by express. My idea is that in future mail of this class should be sent over the Government lines and not over the Canadian Pacific. That will help materially in reducing the deficit in operating the Government railways. Another matter that I would like to mention. How does the department arrive at the value of the stamps the revenue from which it is entitled to credit to the Post Office department? Postage stamps are used largely for inland revenue purposes, very few inland revenue stamps are used. By what method does the Post Office department arrive at the division in the sale of stamps for these different purposes? Last year I called the attention of the Postmaster to the point, but it has apparently not been attended to. Postage stamps should not be used for inland revenue purposes and inland revenue stamps should not be used for postage purposes. The Government should be able to state the exact amount of revenue to be credited to each department. As the matter now stands it is mere guesswork.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Are postmasters in rural districts appointed by the Civil Service Commission?

Mr. ROWELL: Yes.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Will we be allowed to discuss this matter when the Supplementaries come down?

Mr. ROWELL: Quite so, and it will also be open for discussion when the Civil Service Report comes down.

Mr. PEDLOW: How is that division arrived at?

Mr. ROWELL: There is no division. There are no inland revenue stamps being used by the Post Office department. Postage stamps are used for inland revenue purposes.

Mr. PEDLOW: I am quite aware of that fact.

Mr. ROWELL: The department cannot separate the stamps used for inland revenue purposes from those used for post office purposes.

Mr. PEDLOW: Then the Post Office Department is getting an abnormal amount of revenue that it is not entitled to.

Mr. ROWELL: The Post Office Department is getting the full amount of the return from these stamps plus the additional one cent stamp which makes up the revenue to something like $6,000,000.

Mr. McKENZIE: It was not the intention that the proceeds should go holus bolus to the Post Office Department. I remember that when we returned to the three-cent rate instead of two cents, and when we enacted the law providing for putting stamps on cheques and notes, there was then a discussion in the House and the intention was that the revenue should be kept separate and apart and that the department would be able to tell how much revenue came from the mail service and how much came from other sources. It was thought at that time that a different kind of stamp would be manufactured for cheques and notes. But it was found to be very difficult and inconvenient. The whole thing was dropped and it was confined finally to the stamps issued by the Post Office Department. I am sure the department which my hon. friend represents now does not wish to be receiving money under false pretences. If it wants to get clear of the imputation of swelling its revenues by funds which it has no business to get it would be well to explain how much of its revenue is legitimate and how much is obtained from sources from which it should get nothing at all.

Mr. LEMIEUX: There are two or three seasons of the year when you appoint temporary officials in the large post offices. How are these appointments made?

Mr. ROWELL: By the Civil Service Commission.

Mr. McKENZIE: I am bound to tell the President of the Council about the most marvellous instinct of these commissioners. It is impossible for me to understand how it is that they will ferret and trace out in the remotest portions of the country a good, solid, substantial Tory.

Mr. ROWELL: It may be instinct.

Mr. McKENZIE: I cannot understand how it is. It must be telepathy of some kind existing between the Chairman of the Commission and the remote corners of the country. We know the Chairman of the Commission very well; he sat in Parliament for many years, and if ever there was an orthodox Tory in this country the President of the Commission is one. But he was always a very decent Tory and I do not know that he is responsible for the development of this wonderful instinct the evidence of which is to be found in every part of the country. I found that in several parts of my county last year when an old postmaster died and a new man was to be appointed this instinct never failed to get the right man and the right Tory for the place. Of course, that did not bother me. I knew there was somebody in the vicinity that was giving information. When I asked any question, as I did, I was told: Oh, it is all right. The post office inspector was getting the credit for the whole thing. I do not know whether he was entitled to it or not. The Acting Minister of Trade and Commerce (Mr. A. K. Maclean) is supposed to have something to say about patronage in Nova Scotia; or at least about the appointment to offices that are necessary. He could possibly reveal some information in that regard. At the present moment I am only paying tribute to the marvellous instinct, the pathfinding ability, of the Chairman of the Commission. I think the minister should know about this marvellous capacity to find out Tories just as they always did.

Mr. BLAKE: I want to challenge the statement of the leader of the Opposition. The trouble is, as has been said to me at least a dozen times, that all the appointments being made in Winnipeg are given to the Liberals, and the question was asked, why could I not get anything for the Conservatives.

Mr. McKENZIE: I would not stand for that for one minute.

Mr. BLAKE: The leader of the Opposition seems to stand for it in his own constituency, and does not come down with a club and kill the Chairman of the Civil Service Commission. I hesitate to take such a course as that. However, the statement made by the leader of the Opposition is far from the actual fact. Taking the country as a whole I am satisfied there are more appointments probably of men who have been Liberal in the political beliefs than of men who have had Conservative training.

Progress reported.

THE PEACE TREATY.

Mr. LEMIEUX: The press this evening publishes a rumour that the Government has received the text of the Peace Treaty.

I would ask if the report is true, and if so when we may expect that the terms will be made known to the House?

Mr. ROWELL: The report is not correct. The Government does expect to receive, as soon as it is available for release to any part of the world, a summary of some eight thousand words. It is expected that that will be released simultaneously in Ottawa, Washington and other capitals. Shortly after, it may be within two or three days, the Government hopes to receive the full text of the treaty, and it will be laid upon the table of the House as soon as it is released for publication.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Rowell, the House adjourned at 11.50 p.m.

INDEX

SECOND SESSION — THIRTEENTH PARLIAMENT, 1919

Abbreviations.—1r., 2r., 3r. = first, second, or third reading. Amdt. = Amendment. Com. = Committee. Con. = Consideration. Div. = Division. M. = Motion. Ques. = Question. Ref. = Reference. Rep. = Report. Res. = Resolution. Sec. = Section.

Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 13, 41, 73, 116, 141, 185, 230, 272, 318, 358, 399, 424, 463, 514, 551
No quorum, order lapses, 397; reinstated, 398

Adjournment. See House of Commons

Admiralty Court, Montreal, ques. 1440

Advertising. See Government advertising

Aeronautics, 1264, ques. 1340. See also Air Board
Air Service, 4689
Canada's hinterland, development by, 302
European-Asiatic route via Canada, 305
Mail service, by, 2036
Naval air bases, ques. 1532
Permanent Force in Canada, 2867
Transatlantic flight by Hawker, 2564

Age of Consent. See Criminal Code

Agricultural Education. See Technical Education

Agricultural Implements, 4008
Duties on, 3690
Freight rates on, 3926

Agriculture
Bulls, Ayrshire and Holstein, ques. 601
Department of
Orders in Council respecting, tabled, 270
Report of, tabled, 111
Staff and salaries, 2959
Experimental farms, prices, markets, pests, cold storage, etc., 2959-2976
Live stock
Bulls, Ayrshire and Holstein, ques. 601

Agriculture and Colonization, Committee, 113, 2652, 4376

Air Board Bill. 1r., 1865; 2r., com., 2050; 3r., 2143
Provincial jurisdiction, 2052, 2060

Alcohol. See Proprietary; Prohibition

Aliens, 222, 375, 497. See also Asiatics; Immigration Act Amdt.; Naturalization Enemies
Deportation of, 1946

Aliens—Con.
Interned, 1712, 1947; ques. 1611
Naturalization of. See British nationality
Discrimination—charged, 376
Non-alien territory, in, 1947
Policy respecting, 753
Prohibition of certain classes, Motion, Mr. Stevens, 769
Property and trade amongst, ques. 844
Property of, custodian, ques. 1535
West in, conduct of, 2320

Allan, Mr. G. W. (South Winnipeg)
Board of Commerce, 4511
Industrial unrest, Winnipeg strike, returned soldiers, etc., 3061
Militia, Permanent Force, 3979
Titles, 1474

Alpine Club, 4046

Ames, Sir Herbert B. (St. Antoine)
Baker, the late Lieut.-Col. Geo. Harold, M.P., 4456
Board of Commerce, 4527-8
Canadian Patriotic Fund Bill, 3738
Divorce, 3778
Housing scheme, 2536, 2542, 2546
Immigration Act Amdt., 1950
Income Tax, ques. 2049, 3722, 3729-35
Peace Treaty, copy of terms, 4239
Pensions, 4182-9, 4196-7, 4277, 4298
"Unmarried wife," 4277
Purchasing Department, Commissioners' Salaries, 3815
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 2768-9
Soldiers' Land Settlement — improving farms, 3882
Unsalaried war workers, 3815
Victory Bonds, ques. 2047

Amherst
Amherst Mineral Water Company, ques. 3997
Carriage Factory building, ques. 3997
Dr. Goodwin and Dr. Bliss, ques. 3377, ques. 4070
Internment Camp, 3848, ques. 4070
Morris, Col., ques. 2565

Amos Station, 2460

Anderson, Mr. R. K. (Halton)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 495. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—Canada at the Peace Conference, 495; Union Government—conscription, 496; disfranchisement of defaulters—aliens—franchise—pensions, 497; returned soldiers and tuberculosis—patronage in Civil Service, 498; Civil Service Commission—public health—Canada's soldiers, 499; national unity, 500
Pensions, ques. 1076
Proprietary Medicines, 2481
Public Health, 1198

Andrews, Mr. George W. (Centre Winnipeg)
Daylight Saving, 896
Hutterites, 1920
Immigration, exclusion of certain classes, 1920
Military Service Act, uniformity of administration, 1328
Postal workers—Civil Service Re-classification, 2342
Prohibition, 2356
Soldiers' Land Settlement, 3872
Sympathetic strikes—collective bargaining—Winnipeg strike, etc., 2851, 3019
Yukon placer mining, 632

Anti-loafing, ques. 883

Appropriation Acts
1. Bill No. 32 (for 1919-20, for $52,310,-026.12). Res., 1r., 2r., com., 3r., 842
2. Bill No. 113 (for 1818-19, for $18,827,-098.72). Res., 1r., 2r., com., 2462; 3r., 2463
3. Bill No. 123 (for 1919-20, for $148,211,-640.39). Res., 2952; 1r., 2r., com., 3r., 2953
4. Bill No. 181 (for 1919-20, for $162,527,-610.91). Res., 1r., 2r., com., 3r., 4689

Archambault, Dr. J. U., ques. 1306

Archambault, Mr. Joseph (Chambly and Verchères)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 435. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—French language and seconding of the Address, 436; peace and victory—Kinmel Camp riots—prohibition, 437; high cost of living, 438; prices, profits, food control—titles, 439; industrial unrest—Hon. Mr. Calder and Liberalism, 440; Government measures and Liberalism, 441; Mr. Richardson, M.P., in Europe—Quebec and enlistment—Soldiers' votes, 443; National unity, 445

Archambault, Mr. Joseph—Con.
Bankruptcy Bill, 1987
Non-traders, 2476
Provinces and, 1998
Trustees, 2006
Board of Commerce, 4530, 4560-4
Printing of Bill in French, 4530
Budget, The, date of, 2752
Canadian Expeditionary Force, enlistments in, ques. 2904
Canadian National Railway, 1857
Canadian soldiers, prisoners of war, ques. 1077
Censorship of soldiers' letters, 1663
Chambly Canal and Highway, ques. 2045
Clemens, Judge, investigation relating to, ques. 3066
Cold storage companies, taxation of, ques. 2904
Complaints of Canadian soldiers, alleged suppression of, 1618
Dafoe, Mr. John W., ques. 974, ques. 1789
Enlisted and conscripted men, lists, motion for, 1908
Fishermen, tax on, ques. 2144
Food Controller McFall, report of, ques. 4464
Franking of pamphlets, ques. 1791
Georgian Bay Canal, 2855
Gibson, Major, ques. 884, ques. 1440
Immigration, 2598-9
Industrial unrest, 1858
Hull industrial disputes, ques. 2905
Industrial Relations Commission, 1260
Labour Disputes Board, ques. 1535
Labour unions of the West, 1343
Winnipeg strike, nationality of leaders, 2598
Labour, Minister of, ques. 884
Letter carriers' bonuses, ques. 848
McLennan, Judge F. S., ques. 1075, ques. 1106, ques. 1906, ques. 2905
Montreal Admiralty Court, ques. 1440
National Service Registration, ques. 2145
Oil for asphalt manufacture, 4003-5
Pensions, 4031
Pension Commissioners, ques. 1790
Postmaster General, representation of in House of Commons, ques. 974
Public Health, "Social Welfare," 1188
Regimental Funds Board, ques. 2904
Siberian Expedition, 4001
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, ques. 974
Soldiers, in Hull, Pontiac and Wright, ques. 602, ques. 603
Toronto meeting—"Fellow Bolsheviki," 1997
Victory Loan, Montreal brokers, ques. 1612
War Service gratuities, ques. 4241
Washington, representation at, 2077-8

Argue, Mr. Ira E. (Swift Current)
Agricultural fairs, 2996-7
Arid Belt, so called, irrigation station, 2974
Budget, 3577; Liberal Unionists, 3577; Treatment of immigrants — wheat prices, 3578; Tariff Commission, 3579
Highways and railways, 742
Judges in Saskatchewan, 2311
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 2765-6

Argue, Lieut.-Col. J. F., ques. 3068

Argyll House. See War, Military Management

Arisaig Wharf, 2780

Armstrong, Mr. Joseph E. (East Lambton)
Athabasca and Grande Prairie Railway Company, 2778-9
Canadian Pacific Railway, 3215
Inter-Imperial trade—ocean transport rates —Board of Investigation, 3240, 3327
Pelee Island, 4041
Railway Act Consolidation Bill, 2625
Railway Committee, 1864, 1886
Steamship Services, 3829-30
Railway Act Amendment Bill (Coastwise and Inland water traffic), 71
United States, management of ships in, 2210
Upper Lakes, Government ships on, 2255
Water-borne traffic and rates, control of, 2068, 2929-40
Water-powers, Dominion control, 2530

Armistice. See Peace; League of Nations

Army, Canadian permanent. See Militia Act Amendment

Arthurs, Mr. James (Parry Sound)
Budget, 3672. Labour unrest—returned soldiers, 3673; tariff and cost of living, 3674; Tariff Board, 3675
Divorce Court Bill, 3784, 3786
French River waterway, 1087
Mail contractors, 2089
Naturalization, powers of Secretary of State, 4112
Pensions, 4173
Purchasing Commission, 3813
Sailors' wages, 2600
Soldiers' Land Settlement, 3865, 3870

Arthurs, Colonel James, M.P.
Service pay and expenses, ques. 2653

Asiatics in Canada, 433, 1048, 1976
Naturalization and voting, 3822

Asphalt, oil for manufacture of, 4003

Atlantic, Quebec and Western Railway, ques. 605

Auditor General, death of, 115

Auditor General's report, 138, 312, 514, 744

Australia, markets and shipbuilding, 2207, 2222

Automobiles, Government-owned in Ottawa, ques. 880

Baker, the late Col. Geo. Harold, 549, 2224, 4456
Pension to unmarried sisters, 3004

Baldwin, Mr. Willis K. (Stanstead)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 332; Demobilization—development of natural resources, 332; housing —capital and labour, 333; franchise—Siberian expedition — inland revenue stamp taxes, 334; farmers and production—Department of Trade and Commerce, 335; infant mortality, 336
Budget, 3276. Reciprocity—titles, 3276; public debt—commissions, 3277; shipbuilding—produce and save, 3278; Franchise Act—good roads, 3279; Quebec, 3280
Emigration to United States, ques. 2046
Good roads, 4390
Weights and measures, 2156-8

Ball, Mr. Robt. J. (Southeast Grey)
Fire prevention, 1579
Telephone companies, 2650

Ballantyne, Hon. Charles C. (Minister of Marine and Fisheries and Minister of the Naval Service)
Biological Board, 2568
Budget, 3270. Liberal Party and Free Trade, 3270; Manufacturers and the tariff, 3271; War Profits Tax, 3272; United States competition — foreign trade, 3273; shipping and shipbuilding, 3275; moderate protection, 3275
Buoys, etc., 2608
Canada Shipping Act Amdt. Bill, 2802-8, 3755, 3928-38
Cold storage, Montreal warehouse, 1619
Crerar, Hon. T. A., resignation of, 3270
Dominion steamers, 2600
Fisheries Act. Amdt. Bill (British Columbia), 2097, 3758-61
Fisheries patrol service, oyster culture, lobsters, hatcheries, etc., 2887-2903
Halifax Harbour Master, 2693-5, 2800-02
Industrial unrest—Speech at Verdun, 3241
Life-saving stations, 2850
Lighthouses and keepers, 2608-9, 2613
Livestock shipments, inspection, 2602
Marine and Fisheries Department, salaries, etc., 2600
Marine hospitals, 2613

Ballantyne, Hon. Charles C.—Con.
Masters and mates, 2600
Montreal and Quebec Harbour Commissioners (rate of interest), 3757
Meteorological service, 2613
Naval Service
Halifax, discharge of men at, 1959, 1996, 2226
Ministerial statement, answer to charges, 2811, 2839-47
Northern waters patrol, 2849
Pilotage, 2610, 2612, 3157-62
Radio-telegraph service, 2848
Royal Naval College, 2850
Schools of navigation, 2601
Shipping, registration of, 2602
St. John Harbour Commission, 4299, 4306, 4337-9
St. Lawrence Ship Channel, 2608
Shipbuilding, programme, vote, ministerial statement, 2202-16, 2251-3, 2261-3, 4682-6
Steamboat inspection, 2614
Steamers
"Brant," 2607
"Champlain," 2606-7
"Montcalm," 2607
Vancouver Harbour Bill, 3742-54, 4017-21
Vancouver-Skagway route, 3070
Verdun, speech at, 3241
Wharves, generally, 2611
Wrecking plants, subsidies, 2603-4
Wrecks, investigations into, 2601

Bankruptcy Bill. 1r., 229; 2r., 931; com., 1981, 1998, 2263, 2467; 3r., 2510; Senate amdts. concurred in, 4132

Banks. See also Finance
Excess circulation, 1103
Mergers, 1088

Bateman, Lieut. R., ques. 3067

Bate, McMahon & Co., 1277

Betiscan protective works, ques. 645

Bear River, N.S. Harbour and shipping master, 3242

Beaverbrook, Lord, 2872

Béland, Hon. Henri Severin (Beauce)
Air Board Bill, 2061
Aliens, interned, 1712
Belgium, reconstruction, 3294
Budget, 3293
Child welfare, 1200
Civil Service examination, 4496
France, steamship line to, 1291
Franchise, 3298
Jellicoe, Admiral Sir John, ques. 751
Laurier, the late Sir Wilfrid, 3293
Military Service Act, 1163

Béland, Hon. Henri Severin—Con.
Navy, the British, 3301
National unity, 3302
Pensions, 2692, 3001
Prohibition, 2348, 2358
Proprietary medicines, 2484, 2487, 2653
Public health, 1202, 1375
Soothing syrups, amdt., 2488, 2491-3
Three Rivers harbour master, 2694
Trade Commissioners, 4493-4
War Measures Act, 1163
Welcome to on release from German prison, 3
Acknowledgments, 3293

Belanger vs. The King, 1021, 1279

Belgium, restoration of, 3294
Cablegram from Belgian Senate, 1955

Bell, Col. F. McKelvey, resignation of, 3240, 3422, 3472, 3926, 4674

Bench, freedom of, 350. See also Judges Act Amdt

Bernier, Mr. K.C., 1021, 1027

Berubé, Esdras, case of, 2250

Best, Mr. John (Dufferin)
Agriculture—seed, 2971
Civil Service
Efficiency, 1558
Re-classification, 1960
Salaries of $2,500 and over, 1439, 4481
Daylight saving, 889
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 852
Good roads, 4425, 4428
Military Service, Guelph Novitiate, 1245
Purchasing Commission, 3812

Biological Board Act Amendment Bill. 1r., 2396; 2r., com., 2568; 3r., 2617

Blair, Mr. H. C., superannuation, ques. 2398

Blake, Mr. Matthew R. (North Winnipeg)
Budka, Bishop, ques. 646
Eight-hour day and Peace Treaty, 1996
Industrial unrest, labour unions, Bolshevism, strikes, etc., 3004
Partisanship in appointments, 2095
Postmen's 1918 strikes, 2037
Prohibition, 2358, 2665
Soldiers' land settlement; inclusion of Royal Air Force, 1437, 3873

Bliss, Dr. P., payments to, ques. 3377

Blondin, Lieut.-Col. P. E., ques. 1790, 2042, 2084

Board of Commerce Bill. 1r., 4198; 2r., 4497; com., 4527, 4549; 3r., 4567
Protest of Montreal Board of Trade, 4466, 4553
See also Combines

Board of Railway Commissioners. See Railway Commission

Boisdale Wharf, 2780

Bolshevism, 35, 42, 105, 111, 127, 141, 143, 145, 160, 247, 354, 368, 371, 435, 479, 1062-8, 2284, 2285, 4691
Calgary labour meeting, 1343
"Fellow Bolsheviki," 1997
Siberian Expedition and, 319
Trotsky, Leon, ques. 880
See also Criminal Code; Immigration; Industrial unrest

Boivin, Mr. George Henry (Shefford). See Deputy Speaker

Bonnell, Mr. Saul (East Kootenay)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 445

Boots and Shoes from United States, ques. 978

Boots, purchase of, 3202

Borden, Right Hon. Sir Robert (Prime Minister)
Bell, Lt.-Col. McKelvey, 3240, 3473
Birthday congratulations, 4133
Board of Commerce, 4466, 4474, 4554
British Nationality, Naturalization and Aliens Acts Consolidation Bill, 3585
Bruce Report, 4001
Canada Shipping amdt., 3936-7
Canadian Pacific Railway Bill, 3214
Canadians in the war—the nation's gratitude, 4696
Civil Service. See under this head Industrial unrest
Collective bargaining. See under this head Industrial unrest
Crerar, Hon. T. A., resignation of, 3193
Divorce Court Bill, 3777, 3789, 3791
Dominion Elections Act Amdt., 4621-5, 4644-9
Franchise Bill, 2906
Georgian Bay Canal, 2855
Good Roads, 4426-30
Suggested amdt., 4430-2
Gundy, Mr. W. P., death of, 3211
Horse racing, 4466
House of Commons, Saturday and morning sittings, 3420
Business of the House—legislation pending, 3999
Postponement of legislation, 4690
Inter-Imperial trade, Board of Investigation, ocean transport and rates, 3240, 3327
Industrial Relations Commission, 4621
Industrial unrest, 3056

Borden, Right Hon. Sir Robert—Con.
Collective bargaining, 2908
Conference, 2908, 3195
Peace Conference labour principles, 2852
Postal employees, Calgary, 3194
Post office appointments after, 4347-8
Strikes, 3056
Ottawa Street Railway, 4535
Toronto, 2851, 2953
Winnipeg, 2953, 3069-70, 3472, 3587, 3927
Trial of arrested parties, 3740
Intoxicating Liquors Bill—Senate Amdt., 4071-2, 4133
Free conference, 4497
Intoxicating liquors, interprovincial trade in, opinion of Minister and Deputy Minister of Justice, 4133
Letter postage rate, 4621
Members, absence of from Chamber, 3195
Peace celebration, 4238
Peace Conference, presence at. See Peace Conference
Peace Treaty, copy of terms, 4239
Ratification of, 3937
Signing of, 3473
Labour provisions, 4239, 4692
Poland and Ukranians, etc., 3472, 4534, 4620, 4690
Privilege, Manitoba Cold Storage Company, 4695
Proportional representation, 3069, 4620
Purchasing Commission, 3209, 3215, 4453-5
Railway Act Consolidation
Control of rates, 4144
Rates, three-year limit, amdt., 4147, 4152; res. moved, 4169; agreed to, 4170
Senate amdts., 3473-4
Telephones, 4167
Red Cross Society, 3162-4
Return from Europe, reception by the House, 2800
Senators, responsibility for opinions of, 4152
Shipping for St. Lawrence coal trade, 4335
Soldiers' votes, statement of Mr. W. T. R. Preston, 4135
Wheat, prices, 4466
Canada's contract with Greece, 2907
Ypres, war memorial, 4465

Boughton Island, P.E.I., 2784

Bourdreault, Benjamin, Judge of Exemption, ques. 1439

Bourassa, Mr. Joseph B. (Lévis)
Lévis aqueduct, ques. 1789
Separation allowance, ques. 1908
Transcontinental Railway, accidents, ques. 1211

Bowman, Mr. James (North Huron)
Daylight saving, 927
Bow River, election petition, 4
Boy Scouts and Girl Guides, 4486
Boyce, Mr. George (Carleton)
Connaught rifle range, 1896-7
Daylight saving, 904
Farming, conditions and prospects, 2964
Good roads, 4390
Highways and railways, 743
Income tax, farmers and, 3734
Land grants to religious denominations, ques. 2462
Livestock Amdt. Bill, 2066-7
Mail contractors, 2085
Military Service, Guelph Novitiate, 1249
Ottawa City, agreement with, 4384
Boyer, Gustave (Vaudreuil-Soulanges)
Coteau Landing roadway, ques. 2045
Highways Aid Bill, 732
Isle Perrot bridges, 733
Maple syrup and sugar, ques. 645
Ste. Anne de Bellevue, soldiers' hospital, ques. 1212
St. Zotique—River Beaudette roadway, ques. 2144
Vaudreuil-Soulanges rural mail, ques. 2566
Boys, Mr. William A. (South Simcoe)
Military Service, Guelph Novitiate, 1246
Railway Act Consolidation Bill, 2622-8
Senate amdts., 4157
Transmission lines on highway, consent of municipalities, 3126
Bradbury, Lieut.-Col. G. H., ques. 1107
Bran and shorts, 4007
Brien, Mr. John Wesley (South Essex)
Pelee Island, 4033
Briquetting coal. See Coal
Bristol, Mr. Edmund (Centre Toronto)
Railway Act Consolidation, transmission lines on highway, consent of municipalities, 3098, 3102, 3112, 3124
Shipbuilding, transportation, trade, 2230
Water-borne traffic, rates, 2949
British Columbia Courts. See Interpretation Act
British Nationality, Naturalization and Aliens Act Consolidation Bill. 1r., 3585; 2r., 3816; com., 3820, 4110, 4257, 4339; 3r., 4344
Secretary of State, powers of, 4110
Married women, 4127
Naturalization, Canadian autonomy, 4119
British Navy, 3301
British North America Act, method of amdt., 415
Broderick, Mr. Michael E., ques. 729
Brouillard, Mr. Joseph O. (Drummond and Athabaska)
High Commissionership, ques. 3242
Purchasing Commission, ques. 3470
Social Hygiene Conference, ques. 3068
Bruce Report, the, 1483, 2885, 4001, 4071
Buchanan, Mr. William A. (Lethbridge)
Budget, 3455. Tariff, 3455; cost of living, 3456; production and wealth, 3457; Western farmers, 3458
Canadian National Railway, 1855
Government contracts, personal position, 2033, 2036
Immigration Act Amdt., 1912
Industrial unrest, eight-hour day, profiteering, etc., 3021
Irrigation, 4601
Mennonites and Hutterites, 1913
Newspapers and periodicals, publication of ownership and control, 2033
Taber irrigation district, 4211
Budget, The, 3145. See also Ways and Means Amdt., Mr. McMaster, 3260; neg. on div., 3678; debate, 3242, 3293, 3378, 3422, 3474, 3587
Inquiry as to date of, 1343, 1712, 2752
Budka, Bishop, ques. 646, 1917-38. See Poles, Ukrainians, Ruthenians
Buoys, Atlantic coast, 1866, 1910
Bureau, Mr. Jacques (Three Rivers and St. Maurice)
Bankruptcy Bill, 1984
Board of Commerce, 4472, 4497, 4549, 4599-4600
Board of Internal Economy, ques. 605
British Nationality, Naturalization, etc., Bill, 3817-23, 4110-33, 4257, 4272
Revocation of certificate, 4119
Secretary of State, powers of, 4111, 4124, 4266
Canada Evidence Act, amdt., 1389-92
Canadian National Railway Company, 1395, 1403, 1414, 1420-21
Capital stock, 1777
Construction of lines, extension of time, 1717-26, 1751, 1765, 1787
Directors
Appointment, 1625, 1631, 1636
No personal responsibility, 1783
Payment of, 1653
Electric and power companies, 4573
Executive committee, 1667-74
Expropriation, 1695
First meeting, 1664-6
Fiscal year, 1705
Head office, 1651-3
Parliamentary control, 1691

Bureau, Mr. Jacques—Con.
Canadian National Railway Co.—Con.
Public ownership, 1748
Securities
Advances and, 1777-8
Issue of, 1780
Other companies, of, 1781
Steamships, 1682, 1689
Town sites, 1769
Work for the general advantage of Canada, 1706
Civil Service re-classification, 3927
Conference with Senate, no suspension of sitting of House, 3948-9
Criminal Code, aliens and British subjects, 4358-61
Dominion lands, pulp, etc., 4251-4
Dominion water-powers, 2512-32
Electric and Power Companies Bill, 4572-81
Amdt., 4580; neg., 4588
Good roads, 3909, 3911-2, 4395, 4423, 4426-7
Housing scheme, 2557-61
Income War Tax Amdt.
Members of Parliament, sessional expenses, 3991-2
Iron, galvanized, 3689
Judges' salaries, 4218, 4235, 4368, 4435-7
Jacobs, Mr., personal explanation, 4234
National harbours, advantages of Three Rivers, 3754
Negroes, rioting in England by, 3741
Newsprint control, 4540-1
Orders in Council, government by, 2557
Peace, celebration, 4238
Pensions, 4193-5, 4197
"Unmarried wife," 4208-10
Purchasing Commission, 3195, 3810-15, 4439-45, 4453-4
Railway Act Consolidation Bill, 2619-39
Telephone companies, 2647
Steamship services, 1289
Technical Education Bill, 3791-3808
Decennial payment to provinces, 3892
Toronto Suburban Railway Company, ques. 1611
Tuberculosis, Indians, 4062
Welland Canal contracts, 1594-6

Bureau of Statistics, 3838

Burnham, Mr. John Hampden (West Peterborough)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 108. Liberal party—reconstruction, 108; wages and cost of living, 110; Bolshevism, 111
Budget, 3599. Minister of Finance—Dominions' interchange of Governors General—Protection or free trade, 3599, 3601; Union Government, 3600; land held vacant for speculation, 3601
Canadian National Railway, 1801

Burnham, Mr. John Hampden—Con.
"Catholic" or "Roman Catholic," 1385
Civil Service, Outside, delay in appointments, ques. 3680
Combines and trusts in Great Britain, 3741
Cost of production, cost of consumption, 2854
Fertilizers Act Amdt., 2466
Foreign credits and home supplies, 3836
Harbours, national, control of, 3746-8
High cost of living and minimum wage, 2908
Income tax, allowance for children, 3724
Industrial unrest, cost of living, wages, etc., 3015
Judges' salaries, 2958
National economic interests, 2253
Public ownership, 1801
Purchasing Commission, 3203
Titles, 1457, 2712, 2715, 2731
Transmission lines on highways, municipal powers, 3088-9, 3110
Trent Canal
Rates of wages, ques. 3586
Remuneration to returned soldiers, ques. 3470
War trophies, 2043

Burrell, Hon. Martin (Secretary of State and Minister of Mines)
Bolshevism, 2285
Briquetting lignite, 3472, 4488
British Nationality, Naturalization, etc., Bill, 3819
Daylight saving, 914
Geological Survey and mines development, 4491-2
Government advertising, 2023
Government Printing Bureau
Civil Service Commission and, 1812
Strike, 230, 312, 399, 513
Immigration Act Amdt.—advocates of violence, 2285
Military Service Act, uniformity of administration, 1320
Mines Branch, 4489-91
Naturalization, 4264-5
Non-ferrous metals, 3682
Peat experiments, 4489
Public Printing and Stationery Dept. reorganization, 4687
Purchasing Commission, 3220-2
Tariff, Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt., 833
Technical education, 3801
Wounded soldiers, Civil Service positions for, 986

Business Profits Tax. See also Budget; Revenue Bills
Proceeds, ques. 1791

Butter, price of, 1618

Butts, Mr. Robert H. (Cape Breton South and Richmond)
British Nationality, Naturalization, etc., Bill, 3821
Budget, 3643. Resignations from Government—Opposition leadership, 3643; all protectionists, 3644; shipping, coal and steel, 3644
Civil Service, sessional employees, 1558
Expropriation, Dominion water-powers, 2518
Housing scheme, 2548
Militia, Permanent Force, 3981
Military Service, Guelph Novitiate, 1250
Naturalization, 4271
Nova Scotia Highways Board, 4435
Patronage, 1272
Pensions, 4280
War expenditure ($350,000,000), shipping and trade, 2234

Cables, 1052, 2794
State control of, 1827

Cadet Corps. See Militia

Cahill, Mr. Frank S. (Pontiac)
Air Board Bill, 2051-3
Bank mergers, 1095
Banks, excess circulation, 635
Canadian Government Railways, 2458, 2460
Canadian National Railway Company Bill, 1405, 1414, 1421
Annual meeting, 1799
Canadian Northern subsidiaries, 1784
Capital stock, 1777
Directors, 1627, 1639, 1799
Extension of time for construction of lines, 1717, 1770-6
First meeting, 1659, 1664-5
Governor in Council instead of shareholders, 1675
Parliamentary control, 2119
Political influence, 1633
Profit sharing with employees, 1622
Publicity, 1644
Public ownership, 1770, 2219
Civil Service, 2913
Cold storage, 2984-5
Combines, 4568
Cost of living, 4332
Dominion water-powers, 2513, 2516
Electric and Power Companies Bill, 4587
Experimental farms, 2976-8
Fertilizers Act Amdt., 1569
Fire prevention, 1574, 1585
Fisheries Act Amdt. (Salmon), 3759
Fisheries Department, salaries, etc., 2889, 2893
Foreign trade, credits to other countries, 2167, 2834-6
Gold, prohibition of export of, 1102-3

Cahill, Mr. Frank S.—Con.
Good roads, 3907, 3912, 4411, 4429
Grand Trunk Pacific Railway receivership, 399, 666, 1127, 1130-1, 1157
Hanna, Alta., removal of engine crew to, 671, 1407
Housing scheme, 2538-40, 2561, 2564
Immigration and Colonization Department, work of, 2570, 2593-4
Advertising, 2597-9
Exodus of settlers, 2579
Free land as attraction for settlers, 2572-4
Hutterites and Mennonites, 2570
Land speculation and, 2574
North Ontario as field for, 2574
Income tax
Farmers and, 3735
Publicity, 3718
Timber limits, 3721
Industrial unrest, 2908, 2953
Winnipeg strike, 2508, 2753
Lobster packing, 2989
Ottawa-Pembroke postal service, 2034
Packing companies, taxation, 4478
Parliament Building, 2336, 2340-1
Pensions, 4292
Railways, nationalization of, politics and, etc., 667-671
St. John and Quebec Railway, 2799-2800
Seed grain, 628, 1030
Shipbuilding, 4684
Steamship subsidies, 1293
Surveys, 4049-55
Tariff, Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt., 831
Transmission lines on highways, consent of municipalities, 3099-3104, 3115
Welland Canal contract, 1594-7

Calder, Hon. J. A. (Minister of Immigration and Colonization)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 62. Victory—after-war problems, 63; demobilization, 64; employment—soldier settlement, 65; reconstruction and repatriation, 67; progressive legislation—returned soldiers, 68; United Canada party, 69; tariff, 70
Aliens. See, under this head, Immigration
Budget, the, 3337. Union Government—tariff, 3338; elections, 3339; tariff revision, 3340; gravity of pending questions, 3341
Canadian National Railway
Branch lines in Saskatchewan, 1766-7
Connor, Mr., Immigration agent, 2591-3
Dominion Elections Act, 4651, 4656-7
Exhibitions, 2600, 4682
Garden villages for returned soldiers, 767
Good roads, 787, 3917

Calder, Hon. J. A.—Con.
Immigration. See also, under this head, Immigration Act Amdt.; Immigration and Colonization Department
Belgians, 2587
Canada's attractions, 2573
Chinese, of, 1975, 2599
Dangerous and undesirable aliens, 759
Great Britain, from, 2594
Hutterites and Mennonites, 1875, 2570-1
Northern Ontario and Quebec, 2573-4
Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, to, 2573, 2582
Policy
All Canada, for, 2585
Need for, 2577
United States, from, 2598
Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 1206, 1866-83, 3175, 3211-3
Acts of violence, 2283
Conspiracy, ques. 1949
Deportees, 1978
Domicile, 1971, 2286
Enemy aliens, 1945
Espionage, 1948
Illiterates, 1954, 1960, 1964
Non-enemy aliens in enemy territory, 1947
Officers, 1972
Psycopathic inferiority, 1945
Immigration and Colonization Department
Advertising, 2597-8
Agencies, 2569, 2586-94
Colonization work, 2570
Connor, Mr., agent, 2591-3
Deputy Minister
Extra work, payment for, 2441, 2442
Purposes and methods of, 1972, 2568, 2572, 2594, 2598
Land grants to Canadian Northern, 1873
Land prices in the West, 2579
Patriotic Fund, 3240, 3738
Public Health, 1199
Director General of, 2572
Quarantine, 4682
Retaining settlers, 2579, 2590
Technical education, res., vote $10,000,000, 3164-74
Technical Education Bill, 3791-3808
Distribution of grants, 4136
Town planning, 767
United States head tax, 1111, 1942

Campbell, Mr. J. A. (Nelson)
Budget, 3556. Public debt and natural resources, 3556; Manitoba's forests, fisheries and mines, 3558; Great War Veterans' scheme of mineral prospecting, 3560; development of resources by Government, 3561; Stefansson's proposition for development of the North, 3561; Mr. McMaster's amdt., 3564
Canadian National Railway, 1837
Lines, description of, 1838
Dominion Elections Act, 4647-8
Experimental farm, 2979
Good roads, 4409
Hudson Bay Railway, 4688
Judges' salaries, 2958
Land for soldiers—forest reserves, 3070-3
Naturalization, 4126
Railway Act Consolidation Bill, statistics, 2651-2
Titles, 2744

Campbell, Mr. J. A.—Con.

Canada Evidence Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 928; 2r., 1383, 1388; com., 1388; 3r 1619

Canada Food Board
Expenses, ques. 602, ques. 613
Fish, 121; ques. 2750
Licenses, ques. 602
Reports of Controller McFall, 4070, ques. 4464
Revenues, ques. 602

Canada Grain Act, administration, 3837

Canada Grain Act Amdt. Bill. Res., 3940, 3949; 1r., 3966; 2r., com., 4073, 4380; 3r., 4380; Senate amdts., 4662
Appeal Board, 4099
Surplus, 4073, 4380

Canada Medical Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 3240

Canada Registration Act
Cost and result, ques. 728
Lamontagne, Miss., ques. 1957, ques. 2145
Operation, ques. 844
Pictou, registrar at, ques. 2144

Canada Shipping Act Amdt. Bills
1. Pilotage and harbour masters. Res., 2802; 1r., 2808; 2r., com., 3157; 3r., 3162
2. Transfer of ships. Res., 3754; 1r., 3757; 2r., com., 3928; 3r., 4002

Canada Trade Commission, 4493

Canada Year Book, 3839

Canadian Council of Agriculture. See Council

Canadian Expeditionary Force. See War

Canadian Government Merchant Marine. See also Shipping
Rates of freight charged by, ques. 4241
Vessel for, ques. 3998

Canadian Mining Institute, 4492

Canadian Mission in London, ques. 1905

Canadian National Railway Company Bill. Res., 1380, 1394; 1r., 1422; 2r., 1620; com., 1623, 1663, 1713, 1734, 1797; 3r., 2143. Amdt. (Mr. Fielding—Revenue and Audit Act to apply), 2102; neg. on div., 2130; amdt. (Mr. Copp—Intercolonial Railway), 2133, neg. 2137; amdt. (Mr. Lapointe, Kamouraska—labour representation), 2138, neg. on div., 2141
Clauses and discussions
Abandoned lines, 1708
Advances and securities, 1777
Canadian Northern subsidiaries, 1784
Capital stock, 1647, 1776
Charters, schedule of, 1766
Closure, discussion under, 1797-1864
Constituent companies, 1694, 1784
Construction, extension of time for, 1709
Authority of Parliament necessary, 1779
Directors
Nomination of, 1623
Nomination of returned soldier, 1638
No personal responsibility, 1783
Payment of, 1623, 1653
Responsibility of, 1671
Term of office, 1646
Estimated expenditure, 4688
Executive Com., 1667
Finance, expenses to be paid out of revenue, 1699, 2102
First meeting, 1657-64
Fiscal year, 1705
Freight rates, 2457
Governor in Council instead of shareholders, 1675
Head office, 1648
Inquiries—Minister may provide for, 1782
Lines to be included, 1677, 1784
United States, in, 1693
Municipalities, consent of, 1782
Name, 1779
Orders in Council, powers under to construct, 1767
Railway and Expropriation Acts to apply, 1694
Securities
Issue of, 1779
Other companies, of, 1781, 1861
Steamships, 1681-2
Work for general advantage of Canada, 1706

Canadian National Railway
Cap Rouge, repairs, 2460
Cars and rails, contracts for, ques. 1907
Coal, ques. 611, ques. 1211, ques. 1906, res. for papers 2906, ques. 4377
Construction and betterments, 30, 4614
Directors, ques. 612
Employees (Canadian Northern) for, ques. 846
Government Railways
Construction and betterments, 3190
Expenditure proposed in year 1920-21, 3190
Locomotives, 1212
Halifax terminals, ques. 2398
Intercolonial. See that title
Labour troubles, reported, 1617
Lands at Fort William, Canadian Northern, ques. 883
Legal expenses paid
Bureau and Bigué, to, ques. 2047
Tachereau, Roy, Cannon & Parent, to, ques. 2047
Locomotives, ques. 1212
Managers, ques. 748
Mileage, rolling stock and equipment, finance, value, etc.—answers to questions by Leader of Opposition, 1610
Montreal terminal and tunnel, ques. 1213
National Transcontinental. See also Canadian National Railway Bill
Accidents, ques. 1211
Business during 1918, ques. 3065
Damage claims, ques. 616
Government use of line, Winnipeg, Quebec, Halifax and St. John, ques. 2398
Station operations and receipts, ques. 1211
Officials, transfer from Moncton, ques. 748
Patronage, abolition of, 1624
Prince Edward Island Railway
Coal purchase, ques. 4377
Gauge, broadening of, 460
Quebec and Cochrane line, 2456
Quebec bridge, ques. 977
Toronto building occupied by, ques. 612
West, in, 424

Canadian Northern Railway
Arbitration, ques. 2045, ques. 2145
Bonds, ques. 4241
Common stock, ques. 1214
Date of Government taking possession, ques. 1212
Equipment Trust, ques. 4240
Liabilities, ques. 1212
Net earnings, 1918, ques. 2462
New Westminster, 423
Port Mann, ques. 979
Securities, ques. 1214

Canadian Official Record. See Public Information

Canadian Patriotic Fund, 1164

Canadian Patriotic Fund Bill. 1r., 3240; 2r., com., 3738; 3r., 3740

Canadian Press News Service, 4482

Canadian Red Cross Society, 2874

Canadian Red Cross Society Incorporation Bill. 1r., 3004; 2r., com., 3162; 3r., 3164

Canals
Appointments on, 3175
Chambly, ques. 2045
Trent, returned soldiers, ques. 3470
Wages, ques. 3586
Welland, lock tenders, ques. 604
Construction, 1592

Canned Goods. See Weights and Measures; Meat and Canned Foods

Cannon, Mr. Lucien (Dorchester)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 264. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—military service defaulters, 264; Canada's war record, comparison of provinces—national unity—Peace Conference, attendance of Prime Minister, 265; German fleet—Canadian Navy—Canada a nation, 266; the Press—reconstruction, 267; party government—Union Government, 268; legislation by Order in Council—provincial rights, 269; franchise, 270
Bankruptcy Bill—Provinces and, 2008
Blondin, Hon. P. E., Postmaster General, 2042
Budget, the, 3413. Hon. Mr. Calder and Hon. Mr. Crerar, 3414; Peace Conference, 3415; public finance, 3416; industrial unrest, 3417; development of the Cabinet as an institution, 3419
Canadian National Railway
Lines in United States, 1693
Lines to be included, 1686
National Transcontinental, damage claims, ques. 616
Parliamentary control, 1670-1
Pesident's salary, 1659
Canadian soldiers in Ireland, ques. 849
Divorce Court Bill, 3789
Dominion parks, 2302
Expropriation for, 2304
Dorchester county
Level crossing accident, ques. 972
Mail service, ques. 729
Telephone lines, ques. 849
German merchant fleet, 1289
Good roads, 4418
Immigration
Deported conspirators, 1950
Illiterates, 1954
Non-enemy aliens in enemy territory, 1947
Kent House site, ques. 976
Laflamme, Mr., expenses of, 2042
Langelier, Mr. Justice, 1323

Cannon, Mr. Lucien—Con.
Military Service Act, uniformity of administration, 1323
Pensions, 2692
Pomeroy, Major A. L., ques. 2657
Proprietary medicines, 2487
Public health, jurisdiction, 1199
Quebec Harbour Commission, ques. 601
Railway Act—"avocats," 2632
Royal Northwest Mounted Police, 2695
Technical education, 3795, 3805-7
Titles, 2727
War Expenditure Bill, "any measure deemed necessary or advisable," 2244

Canso
Censorship, ques. 847
Distressed seamen, 2614
Harbour Master, 3158

Capilano Bridge, 2790

Capital and Labour. See Industrial Unrest

Capital Punishment, 1957

Carleton, Que., mail service, ques. 727

Carter, Mr. T. J., Solicitor, Public Works Department, 1270, 1274

Carvell, Hon. F. B. (Minister of Public Works)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 41. Reconstruction, 41; Bolshevism—Government expenditure, 42; shipping—unemployment — highways, 43; Department of Public Works, 44; housing, 45; branch railways—demands upon the Government, 46; local public works, 47; Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment—income and other taxes, 48; wanted, $100,000,000 a year, 49; immigration—duty of private employers, 50
Aerial service and works, 1265
Cables, 2794
Canadian National Railway, position of Intercolonial, 2135
Daylight Saving, 91
Dominion Elections Act Amdt., 4647-59
Dry docks, 2360, 4307
French River waterway, 1080
Harbours and rivers, 4613
Highways Aid Bill, 740-3, 4405
Hospitals, 1264
Hydroplane stations, 1263, 1274
La Prairie dyke road, 4059
Militia pensions, 2756
Ottawa City, arrangement with, 2495-2500, 4380-5
Ottawa highways, 2791-2
Parliament buildings, 2331-41, 4621
Provincial voters' lists, 2446
Public buildings, 4610-2
Public works, explanations in Committee, 2359-94, 2780-97

Carvell, Hon. F. B.—Con.
Public Works—Con.
Demands on Government for, 46, 2792
Department—staff, salaries, etc., 1262, 1266-70
Railway Act Consolidation—transmission lines on highways, hydro-electric, 3097, 3106-8, 3112, 3117, 3120
St. John Harbour, 2359, 4301-6, 4337-8
St. John and Quebec Railway, 2800
St. Charles River works, 1297
Seignorial rights, 2787
Slides and booms, 4607
Tariff, Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt., 828
Telegraphs and telephones, 2793-6, 4608
Tender and contract, 1263
Titles, 2737
War structures and works, 1263
Wireless, 2794-5

Casgrain, Mr. P. F. (Charlevoix-Montmorency)
Budget, 3427. Complaint of governmental delay, 3427; prices, 3429; patronage, 3430; wealthy ministers, 3431; extravagant expenditure, 3432; taxes, 3433; Government and the Press, 3434; "Produce and save," 3435
Canadian National Railway, 1835
Branch lines, 1693
Governor in Council instead of shareholders, 1675
Intercolonial, ques. 750
Quebec and Saguenay Railway
Baie St. Paul, branch, 2449
Flag stations, 1690
Transcontinental, accidents, ques. 1211
Capital punishment, commutation, 753
Compassionate allowance, case for, 3175
Debates, printing of, 424
Desjardins, Mr. Charles ("Ti-noir"), ques. 750
Dominion Bills, issues of, ques. 616
Experimental farms, ques. 1077
Gobeil-Simard investigation, ques. 619
Government printing, ques. 844
Isle aux Coudres, 2609
Laflamme, Mr. J. K. L., ques. 750
Lighthouses and keepers, 2608
Newsprint inquiry, ques. 752
Pilots, 2613
Prohibition, 2358
Steamers
Cold storage on, ques. 882
"Champlain," ques. 616, 2606, 2614
War, correspondence concerning, motion dropped, 753
Water-borne traffic, rates, 2946
Winnipeg strike, 2508

Casselman, Mr. Orren D. (Dundas)
Highways, 787, 789, 790
Weights and measures, 2153
"Catholic" or "Roman Catholic," 1383-8
Cavell, Edith, monument to, 2447
Censorship, 226, 295, 1110
Cable, ques. 847
Hazel Hill and Canso, ques. 847
Literature, forbidden, case of J. H. Lewis, 270
Removal of, 135
Chambly Canal highway, ques. 2045
Champlain Market wharves, ques. 1438
Chaplin, Mr. James D. (Lincoln)
Prohibition, 2349
Charges of Management, 4475
Charlottetown Convalescent Home, ques. 2296, 4464
Charlton, Mr. William A. (Norfolk)
Daylight Saving, 913
Chartered Banks, Excess Circulation Bill. See Finance Act
Charters, Mr. Samuel (Peel)
Prohibition, 2663
Child Welfare. See Public health
Children, medicines for. See Proprietary
Chinese in Canada. See Asiatics; Immigration
Chisholm, Mr. Alexander W. (Inverness)
Amherst internment camp, 4070
Buoy picked up, 2607
Cheticamp and Grand Etang, port physician, 2614
Forsyth, Mr. J. R., ques. 4379
Inverness Railway, 4614
Mail contracts, 2082
Port Hood wharf, 2782
Steamship services
Halifax and West Cape Breton, 1302, 3828
Hendrie & Co., 3830
Sick Mariners' Fund and fishermen, 2615
Circulation and Reserve, ques. 614, 637. See also Finance Act
Civil Service. See also Civil Service Act Amdt. For Departments, see their titles
Appointments, ques. 2049
Temporary, 279
Commission, 85, 293, 404, 1498
Appointments by, 161-6, 260, 963, 3230
Charges against
Chief clerk of files, 163, 286
Fruit inspector, 161, 282
Immigration and Colonization publicity agent, 279
Schools, preparatory for Civil Service, 164, 288

Civil Service—Con.
Charges against—Con.
Superintendent of penitentiaries, 162, 283
Theft of examination papers, 164, 289
Toronto Customs hardware appraiser, 161, 278
Toronto deputy postmaster, 161, 276
Examinations and examination papers, 162, 164, 282-4, 287, ques. 750
Printing Bureau appointments placed under, 1812
Returned soldier suggested as member of, 996
Salaries, 4495
Secretary, 165, 289, 292
Disadvantages of, 962, 4477
Double salaries, 1902
Examination, 985, 987, 990, 998. See also this title under Commission, above
Income tax, 3497. See also Ottawa Improvement
Pensions, on, 3713
Inside, efficiency of—Special Committee of Inquiry into Appointment, 1554, 1709
Reports, 2652, 3004, 3376, 3420, 4133, 4534
Insurance, report tabled, 138
List, tabled, 398
Murray, Sir George, report of, 2113, 2920
No minister of, 1559-60
Outside
Delay in appointments, ques. 3680
Dissatisfaction amongst, 404
Salary increases, 945-6
Overmanning of, 4605, 4670
Overseas men
Civil and military pay, 2925
Promotions, ques. 729
Patronage in, 58, 498, 1267, 1271, 3234
Postal employees' salaries, 1794
Postmasters at sub-stations, 404
Post Office appointments after strike, 4345
Promotions, 983
Reclassification, ques. 610, 956, 1267, 2292, 3827. See Civil Service Act Amdt.
Arthur Young & Co., 2911
Coms. of Civil Service Commission engaged in, ques. 617
Postal workers, correspondence, 2342
Report asked for, 1960
Report of, 3519
Returned soldiers, and, 291, 962
Wounded men and; motion Mr. McCurdy, 981; amdt., Mr. Morphy, 997; withdrawn, 1002
Salaries, 86, 1559
$2,500 and over, ques. 1439
Specialists, appointment of, 983, 989, 1182
Strikes

Civil Service—Con.
Appointments after, confirmation of, 3809
Superannuation, 1266-9, 4476
Report tabled, 138
Special com. report, 4133
Transferring officials, 278
Vacancies, advertising of, 2049
War bonus, 1, 955, 4687
Mail carriers, ques. 848
Vote of $2,500,000, 2824
Women in, ques. 2751

Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill. Res., 2909; 1r., 3293

Clark, Mr. Hugh (Parliamentary Secretary for the Department of Militia and Defence)
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 2764
Vocational training for under-age soldiers, 1014

Clark, Mr. Michael (Red Deer)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 231. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 231; victory and peace, 232; conscription—Liberal party, 233; tariff, reciprocity, free trade, 235; reconstruction, 236; markets and their effect on trade, 238; taxation, cost of living—farmers' movement, 239; income tax—British Corn Laws, 240; free wheat—competition, 241
Board of Commerce, 4467
Budget, the, 3378. Political independence, 3378; bureaucracy, 3380; lowering tariff—Messrs. Calder and Crerar, 3381; reconstruction, 3382; tariff proposals, 3383; prices and tariff, 3384; Britain under free trade, 3386; revenue raising methods—tax-free bonds, 3387; industrial unrest, 3388; Canada a bond of nations, 3390
Canada Shipping Act Amdt., 3932-4
Canadian National Railway
Construction of lines, extension of time for, 1729
Finance, Parliamentary control, 2118
Public ownership, 2118
Civil Service, deputy ministers, payments to, 1591, 2442
Daylight Saving
Ottawa time and parliamentary time, 1342
Railroad time, 1453
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 872
Grain trade, operation of elevators, 4089
Highways, 787, 3914, 3919, 3924, 4387, 4401, 4411, 4416
Provincial jurisdiction, 3901
Housing scheme, 2541, 2548

Clark, Mr. Michael—Con.
Immigration
Great Britain, from, 2596
Prohibition of certain classes, 1918
Military Service Act, uniformity of administration, 1317, 1339
Militia, permanent force, 3974
Naturalization, 4122-3
National harbours, control of, 3745
Pensions, 5203-4
"Unmarried wife," 4274, 4288
Ploughs, duty on, 3690-6, 3701, 3704
Post Office appointments after strike, 4348
Prohibition, 2657, 2664, 2679
Proportional representation, 3069, 4620
Public health, social welfare, 1138-40
Purchasing Commission, 3203, 3815, 4454, 4620
Scientific research, 4462
Shipbuilding, 2217-9, 2253-4, 2257
Soldiers' land settlement, 3866
Tariff
Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt., 813
Explanation of vote, 3749
Titles, 1467, 2712, 2746

Clemens, Judge, investigation relating to, ques. 3066

Clements, Mr. Herbert S. (Comox-Alberni)
Alien enemies and treatment of soldiers, motion, 753
Mounted Police, 761
National non-sectarian schools, 756
Naturalization papers, 754
Technical education, 756

Closure
Canadian National Railway. Notice, 1789; discussion, 1797
Interpretation of rule, 1796, 1799

Coal
Canadian National Railway, ques. 1906
Lignite, briquetting of, 3472
Railway contracts for, 1909
Railway rates, and. See Budget
St. Lawrence route, ques. 3471, 4335
Supply, 174

Coal Tar derivatives. See Proprietary

Coasting Trade
Railway Commission control. See also Railway Act Consolidation Bill
Bill to provide, 71
United States, with, 1110, 1209, 1260

Cochrane, Hon. Francis, Senate request his attendance at Hudson Bay Com., 2511

Cockshutt, Mr. W. F. (Brantford)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 124. Peace and victory, 125; Bolshevism—capital and labour, 127, 130; His Majesty the King, 128; income tax, 130; tariff, 131; Peace Conference, presence of the Prime Minister, 132
Agricultural implements, duties, etc., 3072, 3099
Ploughs, 3691
Bankruptcy Bill, 1990, 1994, 1999, 2003, 2475
Budget, the, 3349. Industrial unrest—Peace Treaty, 3349; Russia, 3351; trade conditions and tariff, 3353; tariff investigation commission, 3359; coal duties and freight rates, 3361; dumping, 3362
Canadian National Railway Bill, 1850
Freight rates and tariff duties, 3700
Grand Trunk Pacific receivership—nationalization; railways extending into United States, etc., 687
Illiterates, immigration of, 1965
Income tax, 3737
Materials for manufacture, purchase of in Canada, 3699, 3702
Military management, charges of Gen. Smart and others, 1531
Military Service Act, uniformity of administration, 1329
Militia, permanent force, 1899, 3973
Passports, 1052
Pensions, 4031
Railway Act Consolidation, transmission lines on highways, Hydro-Electric, 3087
Railway rates, Commission control, 4146
Returned soldiers, Civil Service positions for, 999
Shipbuilding, 2257
Titles, 1469, 2723, 2739, 2746-8

Cold Storage, 2062
Taxation of companies, ques. 2904
Transportation, 2980
Warehouses, 2982
Food in, destruction of, ques. 2906
Montreal, proposed building, 1619, 2062

Collective Bargaining, 3908. See also Industrial unrest

Collins, Mr., case under Military Service Act, 1326

Combines and Fair Prices Bill. 1r., 4198; 2r., com., 4567, 4588; 3r., 4601. See also Board of Commerce

Commercial Cable Company, property at Hazel Hill, N.S., ques. 2046

Commissions, return of number of, ques. 646

Connaught Rifle Range, 1894-8

Conner, Mr., Immigration agent, 2590

Conscientious Objectors. See Military Service

Conscription, 233, 346, 489, 496, 510. See also Military Service Act

Conservation, Commission of, report tabled, 312

Consular Officers, payment to, 1900

Contract by Tender vs. Force contracts, 1606

Cooper, Mr. Richard C. (Vancouver South)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 336. General Currie — St. Julien, 337; Cambrai, Mons, 337; Canada's war record, decorations won—proposed grant to Sir Arthur Currie, 339; Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 339, 340; scholarships as war memorials, 340; national defence service—women in Government service—aliens and fishing licenses—public works to give employment, 341; immigration—war service gratuity and clothing allowance, 342; war service button—land settlement — pensions — prohibition — taxes —vocational training, 343; party government, 344
British Nationality, Naturalization, etc., Bill, 3822
Daylight Saving, 887
Militia pensions, 2755-60
Pensions, 4175, 4201
Soldiers' Land Settlement, 3868-9
Women in Civil Service, 2751

Copp, Mr. Arthur B. (Westmorland)
Air Board Bill, 2051-6
Bankruptcy Bill, 2004, 2007
Canada Food Board, ques. 613
Canadian National Railway
Coal purchases, ques. 1906
Directors, ques. 612
Appointment—politics and patronage, 1639
Intercolonial Railway
Lines to be included, 1677
Managers, ques. 948
Moncton, transfer of officials from, ques. 948
Operation, 4615-8
Position of in C.N.R., amdt., 2131-7
Pugwash spur, 3067
Steamships, P.E.I., ferry, 1690
Toronto, buildings in, occupied by, 612
Demobilization, men in garrison at St. John, 3236-7
Divorce Court Bill, 3784
Economy in expenditure, 4053
Fertilizers Act Amdt., 2464
Fisheries
Lobsters, 714-24, 2902
Oysters, 2897
Petitcodiac River, fishway in, 2898

Copp, Mr. Arthur B.—Con.
Forestry and timber limits, 4053-4
Franchise, 4635
Government employees' compensation, 705-6
Housing scheme, 2560-1
Immigration agents, 2588
Indians, 4061
Judges' salaries, 4371
Lighthouse keepers, 2609
Migratory birds, 4604
Napadogan, ice at, ques. 972
Naval Service, 2241
Newcastle wireless station, 2849
Parliament buildings, 2338
Pensions, 4299
Commissioners' salaries, 2452
Proprietary medicines, 2486-7
Public Health, Director General, 2572
Purchasing Commission, 3237
Sackville public building, 4612
St. John harbour, 4300, 4305
Steamship services, freight rates, 1285
Steamships, management of, 4685-6
Technical education, 4136
Payment to provinces by population, 3893
Tinplate, 4447

Cost of Living. See High Cost

Costa Rica, message in celebration of peace, 2

Coté, Eugenie, alias "Venus," 2808

Coté, Mr. Louis, ques. 2566

Coteau Landing, highway, ques. 2045

Cottonseed Meal, 2446

Council of Agriculture, 578
Platform, 531
Policy and representatives, 556
Wood, Mr. H. W., 556, 566, 586

Courts Martial. See War, Naval Service, Military Service Act

Cousineau, Mr. L., ques. 1306

Cowan, Mr. Walter D. (Regina)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 168. Liberal Party, 168; Peace Conference, presence of Prime Minister, 168; Union Government—co-operation in the work of government, 170; medical men and patronage—housing, 171; tariff, 172; railways—Mounted Police, 173; coal supply—Health Department, 174; industrial unrest, 175
Budget, 3474. Tariff and reciprocity, 3474; Western problems, 3478; Hon. Mr. Crerar and wheat prices, 3479; tariff and prices, 3480; manufacturers' action under protection, 3481; implement prices, 3483; Western Provinces and natural resources, 3484

Cowan, Mr. Walter D.—Con.
Canadian National Railway, 1840
Cold storage warehouses, 2983-4
Daylight Saving, 898
Housing scheme, 2538-40
Immigration, 2576
Package goods, net weight, 2153
Postmasters and inspectors, 2031-3
Proprietary medicines, 2482-3
Public health, 1197
Red Cross Society, 3168
Rentals paid by Government, 2505
Royal Northwest Mounted Police, 2319
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 2774-5
Water-powers, 4049
Wheat, drought resisting, 2972

Credits, foreign. See Trade

Crerar, Hon. T. A. (Minister of Agriculture)
British embargo on Canadian cattle, 2963
Budget, the, 3328. Resignation from the Government, 3329; tariff and national development, 3330; prices, 3332; tax proposals, 3336
Canada Grain Act Amdt., 3953, 3961-4
Cattle, number in Canada, 2997
Co-operation, federal and provincial Departments of Agriculture, 2966
Cold storage
Transportation, 2981
Warehouses, 2982-8
Dairy products and the war, 2967
Daylight saving, 926
Experimental farms, 2965, 2976-80
Fairs, 2996-7
Flax, 1550
Grain trade—elevators, 4073, 4082
Health of animals, 2988
International Institute, 2992
Livestock Act Amdt. Bill, 1570, 2061-7
Livestock, pure bred, 2992
Meat and Canned Goods Act, 2989
Militia, permanent force, 3972
Oleomargarine, 2982
Pests, 2979-80
Publications, 2990
Resignation from Government, 3193, 3329
Tariff, Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt., 820
Wheat
Drought resisting, 2972
Local mills and, 2974
Market for, 2999-3000
Wheeler, Mr. S., experiments of, 2972-3
Yukon, wheat growing in, 2974

Criminal Code Amendment Bills
1. Fire prevention. 1r., 1382; 2r., 1573; com., 1574; 3r., 1619
2. Sexual offences. 1r., 1710; 2r., com., 2159; 3r., 2305; Senate amdt., 4634, 4689

Criminal Code Amdt. Bill—Con.
3. Excessive punishment. 1r., 2851
4. Unlawful associations, etc. 1r., 4134; 2r., com., 4355; 3r., 4380; Senate amdts., 4660
Unlawful associations, 4355; concealed weapons, 4356; bribing peace officers, 4361; venereal disease, 4362; indictable offences, corporations, 4363; election by prisoners, 4363; challenging jurors, 4363

Cronyn, Mr. Hume (London)
Immigration Act. Amdt., 1876
Alien enemies, 1948
Illiterates, 1953, 1961, 1968
Prohibited classes, amdt., 1969, 2280; withdrawn, 2283
Imperial Conference, 1919, 1948
Imperial Court of Appeal, ques. 1075
Peace Treaty, ratification, 2200
Pensions, 4296
Prohibition, 2349, 2655; amdt., 2656-7, 2688
Research, scientific, 4457
National Research Institute, 1565
Seed grain, 1031

Crothers, Hon. T. W. (West Elgin)
Militia pensions, 2755
Resignation as Minister of Labour, 129

Crowe, Mr. S. J. (Burrard)
Capilano Bridge, 2790
Chinese and Japanese immigration, 1976
Daylight Saving, 920

Cruelty to Animals, 2603

Currency Act Amdt. Bill. Res., 637; 1r., 639; 2r., com., 1044; 3r, 1111

Currie, Lieut.-Gen. Sir Arthur, 336, 370, 500
Currie, Col. John A. and, 545, 547
Proclamations by, ques. 607
Proposed grant and testimonial, 339, 548

Currie, Mr. John A. (North Simcoe)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 545, 551. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier — personal reference, war record, second battle of Ypres, 545; Canada's soldiers deserving of the nation's thanks — returned soldiers, 548; tribute to dead soldiers—Col. Baker, Col. Sharpe, 549; Rhyl riots, 550; tariff—economic war, 551; free wheat, 552; manufacturers and exports, 553; demobilization — soldiers' land settlement, 554; manufacturers' earnings—class hatred, 555; Canadian Council of Agriculture, 556; income tax—industries and resources of the several provinces, 559; proposals of action—elevators, ships, factories, 564;

*Resigned as Minister of Agriculture June 4; p. 3194

Currie, Mr. John A.—Con.
Conservative party, 566; Mr. Wood, President, United Farmers of Alberta, 556, 566
Franchise, 4642-3
Pensions, 4197
Railway Commission and freight rates, 4145
Shipbuilding, 2219
Siberian Expedition, ques. 1440

Customs and Inland Revenue
Department
Commissionership of, 3927, 4380
Messrs. H. C. Blair, Bryson Macdougald, John Ridley, ques. 2398
Preventive service, 965
Roe, Mr. James Sydney, ques. 1216
Salaries, 954
Duty, rebates of, ques. 646

Customs Tariff Act Amdt. See Revenue Bills

Dafoe, Mr. John W., ques. 974, 1789

Dairying Industry, development of, 2980

Dams, Government, 2796

d'Anjou, Mr. Joseph Emile Stanislas Emmanuel (Rimouski)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 224. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 224; bi-lingualism, 225; women's franchise—censorship—Orders in Council, 226; Siberian expedition—Military Service Act defaulters, 227; franchise, War-time Elections Act—Union Government—national unity, 228
Bradbury, Lieut.-Col. G. H., ques. 1107
Budget, 3450. War and conscription, 3450; election law, 3451; Siberian expedition—French-Canadians in the war, 3452; Guelph Novitiate, 3453; Hon. Mr. Crerar and Hon. Mr. Calder, 3454; tariff, 3455
Enlistments, May-December, 1917, ques. 609
"Hochelaga," steamer, ques. 609
Intercolonial, express parcels, ques. 2047
Keddy, Dr. O. B., ques. 2797
Laferriere, Capt. Alban, ques. 3135
Lennie, Mr. R. S., ques. 1612
Mahon, Mr. C. E., ques. 1612, ques. 1790, ques. 2295
Military Service Act, ques. 1306, 1332
Militia, permanent force, 3977
Naval Service recruiting, ques. 747
Parent, Dr. Rufus H., ques. 1213
Thompson, Lieut.-Col. Alfred, M.P., ques. 747

Dansereau, Mr. Lionel, 357

Davidson, Mr. Avard Longley (Digby and Annapolis)
Canadian National Railway, legal expenses, ques. 2047
Good roads, 3913-25, 4387, 4390, 4394, 4430, 4433
Point of order: discussion of motion standing on Order Paper not permissible—upheld, 190

Davis, Mr. Fred Langdon (Neepawa)
Board of Commerce, 4518
Budget, 3631. Greater revenues needed, 3631; excise and land taxes, 3632; tariff revision, 3633; farm labour shortage, 3634
Civil Service, com. on efficiency, 1517
Fire prevention, 1577-8
Immigration, restriction of, 1938
Livestock, pure bred, 2993
Mennonites and Hutterites, 1260
Naturalization, 4130
Ruthenians, 1938

Daylight Saving, 456, 505, 1074, 1208, 1383, ques. 3242
Ethier, Mr., vote of, 1482
Government's policy, 647, 970
Health and, 912, 915
Ottawa time and parliamentary time, 1342, 1422
Point of order (Mr. Denis) as to hour of sitting, 1432
Railway time, 929, 1433
Special motion to take up order, 886
Res. (Mr. Cooper), 887; amdt. (Mr. McCoig), 892; point of order (Mr. Guthrie), 903; amdt. to amdt. (Mr. Mackie, Edmonton), 910; div. 928

Debates. See House of Commons

Déchène, Mr. Aimé Miville (Montmagny)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 87. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier. 87; soldiers' settlement, 88; immigration—commissions, 90; foreign trade 91; war indemnity—pensions, 92; taxation — thrift, 92; tariff — public health, 94; returned soldiers, 95
Canadian National Railway, 2129
Dominion Police, ques. 2047, ques. 2144
St. Barnabé Island, ques. 4464
Spirituous liquors, entered at Quebec, 1533

Deep Brook post office, ques. 751

Defaulters. See Military Service Act

Delisle, Mr. Michel Siméon (Portneuf)
"Canada," H.M.C.S., ques. 1534
Destroyers, purchase of, ques. 1534
"Hochelaga," steamship, ques. 606
Life-saving stations, ques. 606

Delisle, Mr. Michel Siméon—Con.
Newfoundland R.N.R. ratings, ques. 1611
Seymour Narrows batteries, ques. 975
"Stadacona," steamer, ques. 880
Trawlers, ques. 746

Demobilization. See War

Demers, Mr. Marie Joseph (St. Johns and Iberville)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 344. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—reconstruction—franchise, War-time Elections Act, 344; aliens—independence of judges, 341; conscription—defaulters, 346; Canadian autonomy, 347
Conscriptions, number of, ques. 972

Denis, Mr. Jean J. (Joliette)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 446. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—French Canadians and national unity, 447; Quebec province and the "Black Robes," 448; the Orange Sentinel and national unity, 449; war indemnity, 450; Canada's sacrifice in war—Military Service Act, defaulters, 451; tariff and the Liberal party, 452; Liberals and Unionists, 453
Business of the House, pending legislation, 3420
Canada Evidence Act Amdt., 1390
Daylight saving, point of order as to time of meeting of House, 1432
Franchise, 3420
Grand Trunk Pacific receivership, 692
Parliament Buildings fire, 725
Pensions, 4181, 4185

Deputy Speaker and Chairman of Committees (Mr. George H. Boivin) Rulings and statements of Bills
Amendments
Changing character of Bill, 1745
Procedure in, 1198, 1204
Committee, in Reading of clauses by Chairman, 2001
Motion to refer back, 4064
Preamble read and postponed, 1623
Principle not to be discussed in Committee, 1929, 2053
Reconsideration of clause only by unanimous consent, 2929
Schedule, order of, 1725
Taxation measures originating in Senate, 2490
Chair to be addressd, 2538
Closing of debate, 3207
Closure, 1799

Deputy Speaker and Chairman of Committees—Con.
Rulings and statements of—Con.
Committee, limitations of debate in, 1034-5, 2508
Committees appointable by the House, not by Committee, 1639
Conversations in Chamber, 4200
Interruptions, 1174, 2869
Language
Not disorderly except as applied to members, 1930
Objected to Bolshevists—"Your friends," 1068
"Wilfully leading the House into error," 1854
Leader of the House, announcements by, 1566
Motion and amdt. debatable together, 2725, 2728
Motions not debatable
That Committee rise, 1583, 3816
To report a Bill, 4017
No motion before the House, 1566
Opportunity for discussion under the rules, 2760
Order and "Privilege," 2840
Past debate, 1608, 2885, 4588
Quorum, 397, 2361
Relevancy, 1175, 1273, 1631, 1746, 2068, 2480, 2661, 2977, 3734, 3813, 3984, 3986, 4480
Nickel, 3684, 3689
Orders in Council, 4487
Ottawa agreement, 4384-5
Pensions, 4257
Vancouver harbour, 3752-3
Repetitions, 3978
Resolution standing on Order Paper, debate not permissible, 190
Senate debates, reference to, 3278
Statement of member to be accepted, 1607
Taxes cannot be increased by Committee, 2487

Desaulniers, Mr. Arthur L. (Champlain)
Batiscan, works, ques. 645
Blondin, Lieut.-Col. P. E., ques, 1790
Enlistment of certain soldiers, ques. 3067

Desjardins, Mr. Charles ("Ti-Noir"), ques. 750

Deslauriers, Mr. Hermas (St. Mary)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 353. Profiteers—returned soldiers, 353; immigration—Bolshevism—Siberian expedition, 354
Budget, 3531. Social unrest, 3532, 3535; unsatisfactory answers to question, Deslaurier, Mr. Hermas—Con.

3533; cost of living, 3534; soldiers and liquor, 3536; Military Service Act, defaulters, 3537
"Canada," C.G.S., ques. 745
Canadian National Railway, locomotives, ques. 1212
Daylight Saving, 3242
Halifax disaster, ques. 879
Hull armoury, ques. 1215
Labour Union convention, Calgary, ques. 2143
Lamontagne, Miss Yvette, ques. 1957, ques. 2145
Luxuries, taxes on, ques. 749
Montreal, port of, labour, ques. 3997
Montreal strike, 1482, 1615
National Service Registration, accounts, ques. 2296, ques. 2565
Ontario and Quebec, Northern, colonization, ques. 748
Ste. Marie wharf, ques. 1958
Salvarsan, ques. 2144
Strikes in Canada, ques. 1792, ques. 2143
Transcontinental Railway
Business during 1918, ques. 3064
Stations, ques. 1211
Weights and measures, inspectors, ques. 2296

Destroyers, purchase of, ques. 1534

Destructive Insects and Pests, 111, 2979

Devlin, Mr. Emmanuel B. (Wright)
Budget, 3343. Pending questions and government, 3343; Canada's tariff history, 3344; waste, 3345; increased production, 3347
Canadian National Railway
Construction of lines, extension of time for, 1722-4
Directors
Salaries, 1623
Term of office, 1797
Head office, 1665
Patronage, 1625
Civil Service war bonus, 2919
Arthur Young & Co., 2920
Criminal Code (sexual offences), 2163
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 877
French River waterway, 1086
Influenza, cure of, 1175
Judges' salaries, 2957
Loans, public, 4198
Military Service Act, administration in Wright county, 2399-2402
Military Service, Guelph Novitiate, 1254
Statistics Act Amdt., 595-9
Tariff, 824
Yukon Act Amdt., 593-4

Dickson, Mr., contractor, 1376

Divisions
Budget, 3678
Canadian National Railway
Finance, 2130
Labour representation, 2141
Third reading, 2142
Cost of Living, 4334
Daylight Saving, 928
Divorce Court Bill, 3781
Fire prevention, 1619
Intoxicating liquors, 4072
Pensions, "Unmarried wife," 4336
Permanent force, 4002
Purchasing Commission, 3226
Railway Act
Power clause, 4165
Telephone clause, 4169
Tariff, 841
Titles, 1481, 2748

Divorce
Fees, remission of, number of divorces, 2779
Jurisdiction of Provincial Courts, 1438, 2779, 4535

Divorce Court Bill. 1r., 1662; 2r., 3761; motion (Mr. Fripp), six-months hoist, 3777; neg. on div., 3781; com., 3783

Dogfish, ques. 979

Dominion Bills, issues, ques. 616. See Currency

Dominion Coal Company, demand for ships, 2406

Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 4533; res., 4534, 4621; 2r., 4622, 4635; com., 4646; 3r., 4659

Dominion Forest Reserves and Parks Act Amdt. Bills
1. Bill No. 79. 1r., 1789; 2r., com., 2297; 3r., 3344
2. Bill No. 125 (Land for soldiers). 1r., 2953; 2r., com., 3070; 3r., 3073

Dominion Iron and Steel and Nova Scotia Steel and Coal companies
No amalgamation, 2342
Steel rails, 2251

Dominion Lands
Orders in Council tabled, 185
Provincial taxation of, 709

Dominion Lands Act Amdt. Bill (Rates of interest). Res., 1111, 1112; 1r., 4063; 2r., com., 4251; 3r., 4254

Dominion Lands Surveys Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 72; 2r., com., 930; 3r., 1029

Dominion Parks, expenditure, 4046

Dominion Police, 2925, 4670
Bourdon, Henri, ques. 1440
Men employed, ques. 2047
Special force, ques. 2144
Suspensions, ques. 1440

Dominion Power Board, 4028

Dominion Revenue and Expenditure, ques. 1217

Dominion Steamers, 2600. See Vessels

Dominion Water Powers Bill. 1r., 2291; 2r., com., 2512; 3r., 2576
Application, 2512
Bond issues, 2526
Director of water-power, 2523
Private lands, expropriation, etc., 2517, 2524
Surveys, 2522
Title in Crown, 2516

Dorchester
Customs receipts, ques. 882
Level crossing accident, ques. 972
Post offices and mail service, ques. 729
Telephone lines, ques. 849

Dorval, buildings, ques. 610

Douglas, Mr. James McCrie (Strathcona)
Board of Commerce, 4505
Canadian National Railway, branch lines in the West, 1771-3
Postal employees' war bonus, 2928
Returned soldiers
Civil re-establishment, 2764-7
Civil Service positions for, 1000
Telegraphs, North country, 2795

Douglas, Mr. John C. (Cape Breton South and Richmond)
Petit de Grat—Mulgrave service, 1303

Doukhobors, 2043

Draftees. See Military Service Act

Drainage. See Reclamation

Draper, Mr. P. M., ques. 3999

Drugs. See Proprietary

Drummond, Sir George, sale of paintings, 2447

Drummond, Mr. Huntley, Commissionership of Canada, ques. 3242

Dryden, Mr. Michael, appointment, 287

Dry Docks, 2360

Dry Dock Subsidies Act Amdt. Bill. Res., 4306; 1r., 2r., com., 4307; 3r., 4337

Duchemin, Mr. H. P., ques. 1536, ques. 1791

Duff, Mr. William (Lunenburg)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 116. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—French Canadian Liberals—peace and victory, 116; United States' part in the war, 117; demobilization—franchise, 118; resignation of Mr. McCurdy, 119; reconstruction, 120; fish prices, 121; Canada Registration Act—Peace Conference, 122; shipbuilding—coal miners, 123; ideals in public life, 124
Aliens, naturalization, ques. 616
Amherst Carriage Factory building, ques. 3997
Blair, Mr. H. C. and MacDougald, Mr. Bryson, ques. 2398
Buoys, Magdalen Islands, 1866
Canada Registration Act, ques. 978
Canada Shipping Act. Amdt., 3929-34
"Canada," steamer, coal, ques. 1340
Customs and Inland Revenue salaries, 961
Dennis building, Halifax, ques. 972
Dogfish reduction works, ques. 979
Fertilizers Act Amdt., 2286-9
Fish, Canadian, alleged accumulation in Great Britain, 3328
Fish, compulsory inspection, 949-951
Fisheries, British Columbia, 935, 3759
Fort George postmistress, ques. 602
Halifax harbour master, 2694
"Hochelaga," steamer, dismissals from, ques. 1340
Immigration Department, appointments, 2592-4
Immigration, discharged seamen, 1980
Liquor on patrol vessels, ques. 1340
"Lottie Russell," steamer, ques. 746
Lunenburg harbour, 2607
Marine hospitals, salaries, 2613-4
Messeroy, Mr. John A., ques. 1610
Military Service Act, ques. 749
Naval Service
Administration of, 2176
Boys in, ques. 607
"Canada," H.M.C.S., ques. 606
Canadian vessels in action, ques. 607
Courts-martial, ques. 607, ques. 1534
Efficiency—conduct in war, 2821, 2840
Pay, increase of, ques. 607, ques. 746
"Princess," steamer, ques. 615
Prize money, ques. 607
Starrar, Mr. Hall, ques. 616
Trawler "T-30"
Men sentenced, 3472
Repairs, ques. 2397
Newfoundland steamship service, 3829
Nova Scotia Carriages, Limited, ques. 3066
Nova Scotia fishing fleet, 1866
Pilotage, 2806
Proprietary medicines, 2483
Public Information Department, ques. 750
Pugwash brickyard railway spur, ques. 4239

Duff, Mr. William—Con.
Returned soldiers, Civil Service positions for, 1001
Shipbuilding, 2252, 2262
Steamship services
Britain, 1282
Clipper ships, 1288
Jamaica, 1284
Steel plate, price of, 2252, 2262
"Tuna," H.M.C.S., ques. 1534, ques. 1905
Victory Loan, cost of, ques. 1918, 2798
Wireless operators, separation allowance, ques. 1905
Woodbury, Harry, and Military Service Act, ques. 2048
Wrecking plants, 2605

Duff, Mr. Justice, allowance for Imperial Privy Council, 4687

Dunkirk, base commandant at, report of, ques. 1216

Du Tremblay, Mr. Pamphile Réal (Laurier-Outremont)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 149. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—Canada's war record, 149; French Canadian Brigade—industrial unrest—public expenditure, 150; business situation—tariff, 151; development, use of natural resources, 152; soldiers' settlement—labour problems—trade relations with the United States, 153; Victory Loan—war indemnity and public debt, 154; national unity, 155
Daylight Saving, 910
Public health, provincial rights, 1367
Seed grain, 1032, 1041
War indemnity, Canada's claim, 773

Ecum Secum wharf, 2780

Edmonton Bridge, 2790

Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway, 1208

Education. See also Schools; Technical; Vocational Land for school purposes, ques. 848
Mennonite schools, 2571
National non-sectarian schools, 756
Quebec, schools in, 2914

Edward VII, His late Majesty, monument to, 2797

Edwards, Mr. John Wesley (Frontenac)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 254. New Opposition leader, 254; Liberal party, record of leading Liberals, 255; franchise—Peace Conference, attendance of the Prime Minister, 256; repatriation in Quebec—war activities of various parts of Canada, 257; enlistment figures by provinces, 258; tariff, free trade record of Mr. Clark (Red Deer) and others, 259; Civil Service appointments by the Commission, 260; Union Government—tariff—defaulters and slackers, 263

Edwards, Mr. John Wesley—Con.
Agricultural implements, duties, 3704-5
Bank mergers, 1097
Barriefield, militia buildings, 3985
Board of Commerce, 4552, 4555
Budget, 3435. Reply to Mr. Casgrain, 3435; reply to Mr. McMaster, reciprocity, 3437; Hon. Mr. Crerar, 3438; protection and agricultural prosperity—profits and prices, 3440; Hon. Mr. Crerar and prices, 3442, 3638; tariff, 3444; Union Government, 3449
Calvin residence, Kingston, ques. 3377
Civil Service
Commission, 260, 2916
Examinations, 4490
Salaries, increases, 2915, 4480
Conscientious objectors, 1929
Criminal Code (sexual offences), 2161
Daylight Saving, 913
Education
Bi-lingualism in schools, 241
National non-sectarian schools, 2403
Technical, 2897-9
Eight-hour day, 914
Empire Parliamentary Association, ques. 2749
Feldspar, 3693
Finance Department, vacancies, ques. 847
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payment of, 850, 877, 1102
Good roads, 792, 3903, 3917-9, 3924, 4398, 4430
Immigration
Illiterates, 1965
Prohibition of certain classes, 1929
Income tax, judges, 3714
Military Service, Guelph Novitiate, 1250
Militia
Pensions, 2759
Permanent force, 1898, 3985
Policy and system, 1888
Parliament buildings, 2338
Pensions, 4298
Post Office
Mail contractors, 2085
Postmasters, 2085, 2927
Surplus, 2090
Privilege: statement of Ottawa "Journal," 1997
Prohibition, 2684
Return of Canadian soldiers, strikes delaying, 3741
Ross, Mr. P. D., 1997, 2915-7

Edwards, Mr. John Wesley—Con.
Royal Military College, clerk of works, ques. 4377
Titles, 2736
Correction, 3753

Electrical Measure. See Units

Electrical Development. See Canadian National Railway; Water power

Electric and Power Companies Bill. 1r., 4377; 2r., com., 4572; 3r., 4588

Elevators. See Grain

Electrocution Bill. 1r., 1957

Elkin, Mr. Stanley Edward (St. John City and Counties of St. John and Albert)
Agricultural implement duties—rebates, 3702-3
Fire prevention, 1576
Gold taken into United States, 637

Embezzlement, Quebec officer charged with, 2294

Emigration
Belgium, from, ques. 1874
United States, to, ques. 2046

Empire Parliamentary Association, ques. 2749

Employment Bureaux. See Unemployment

Employment Offices Co-ordination Act, 2450

Employment Works, 1597

Ethier, Mr. Joseph Arthur Calixte (Laval-Two Mountains)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 133, 141. Peace—late Sir Wilfrid Laurier — reconstruction, 133; Military Service Act, defaulters, 134; censorship—public works—highways—returned soldiers, 135; Public Health Department—unemployment—Georgian Bay canal, 136; prohibition, 137, 138, 141; General Pau's visit, 137, 141; Bolsheviki, 141, 143; duties on implements and raw materials—Prime Minister at Peace Conference, 142; financial situation—Siberian expedition, 143
Vote on Daylight Saving, recording of, 1482

Euler, Mr. William D. (North Waterloo)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 370. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—German - Canadian soldiers, 370; Canada's national status—Union Government and Bolshevism—Liberals and Unionists, 371; censorship—conscientious objectors, 372; reconstruction—financial situation—taxation, 373; succession tax—industrial unrest, 374; aliens, 375; discrimination in naturalization, 376

Euler, Mr. William D.—Con.
Budget, 3589. Cost of living—industrial unrest, 3590; tariff and manufactures, 3591
Canadian National Railway
Construction of lines, extension of time for, 1727
Directors, 1805
Public ownership, 1750
Draftees sent overseas, ques. 2297
Eight-hour day, 2856
Farm help, demobilization of farmers' sons, 1959
Fertilizers Act Amdt., 1569
Fire prevention, 1576, 1586
Grand Trunk Railway, obligations, 666
Immigration
Agents in United States, 2569-70
Exodus of settlers, 2580
Mennonites, 1927, 2570-1
Prohibition of certain classes, 1927
Ministers and Commons, motion, 1002
Naturalization, alien enemies, 4114-6, 4130, 4339
Prohibition, 2662
Railway Act Consolidation Bill
Power clause, 4163
Transmission lines on highways, Hydro-Electric, 3086
Roumania, credit to, 1110
Steamship services, 1296
Welland Canal, collapse of walls, 1593

Ewart, Mr., Public Works Department, 2331

Excess Profits War Tax, 419, 430, 526, ques. 977

Exchange Rate, ques. 2145

Exchequer Court
Grand Trunk Pacific receivership and, 664
Land expropriation, Belanger vs. The King, 1021

Exhibitions, ques. 1215, 2600, 4682

Experimental Farms, 2976. See also Agriculture
Number and location, ques. 1077
Report tabled, 111

Exports. See also Trade
Feed, ques. 2048
Woollens, ques. 845

Expropriation of buildings by the Government, 2506

External Affairs Department, 4669

Fafard, Mr. J. Fernand (L'Islet)
Budget, 3522. Government by Order in Council, 3522; free speech—industry and finance, 3523; industrial unrest 3524; Military Service Act administration, 3525; minorities, 3526

Fafard, Mr. J. Fernand—Con.
Canadian National Railway, 1421
Fertilizers, 2979
Monk Station roadway, ques. 1438, 2202
"Montcalm," steamer, ques. 978
"Princess," steamer to replace, ques. 2797

Fairweather, Mr., Canadian Northern Railway arbitration, ques. 2145

Farm Help, demobilization of farmers' sons, 1958

Farm Life, good roads and, 789

Farm Loans. See Banks

Federal District, 4385

Federal Hotel, Ottawa, lease of, ques. 2045

Ferguson, Sir Charles, and Canadian soldiers, 469

Fertilizers Act Amdt. Bill. Res., 1568; 1r., 1570; 2r., com., 2286, 2463; 3r., 2510

Fielding, Hon. William Stevens (Shelburne and Queen's)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 473. Latitude of Debate on Address—late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—returned soldiers in Parliament, Lt.-Col. Peck, V.C.—financial situation, 473; absence from Parliament of Ministers, 474; Peace Conference, war indemnity, 475; Peace Congress organization, 476; Canada's place therein, 477; Bolsheviki, 479; Canada's national status—Imperialism and Imperialism, 480; manufacturers and the West, 482; Laurier Government and the tariff, 483; party government, 484; Tariff Commission, 485; personal position as a candidate in election, 486; Union Government, 487; Liberals and Unionists, 488; conscription—Dominion grants and provincial rights, 489; highways—public health—prohibition, 490; franchise, 492; War-time Elections Act—aliens—"The word of an Englishman," 493; a free Parliament—titles, 494
Bank mergers, 1093
Board of Commerce, 4498
Bridges, Dominion responsibility, 2789-92
Budget, 3664. Fiscal situation, 3664; Civil Service—salaries of Ministers—currency, 3666; tax-free bonds, 3667; tariff—reciprocity, 3668
Canada Shipping Act Amdt., 3931-7
Canadian National Railway
Annual meeting, 1646
Closure, 2099
Directorate, 1628, 1633, 1653
Labour representative on, 2141
Returned soldier on, 1638

Fielding, Hon. William Stevens—Con.
Finance, 1698, 1702, 2098
Amdt., receipts and expenditures subject to Revenue and Audit Act, 2102
First meeting, 1666-7
Fiscal year, 1705-6
Head office, 1652
President's salary, 1657
Railway Act, application of, 1694
Supplies, purchase of, 3197
Canadian Press, news service, 4485
Chartered banks, excess circulation, 636
Civil Service, 2761
Extra work, deputy ministers, 2441
Overmanning of, 4671-2
Reclassification, 4488
Salaries, 964, 4476-7
Superannuation, 2761
Cost of Living Com., 4322
Daylight Saving, 917
Divorce Court Bill, 3779, 3784
Electric and Power Companies Bill, 4572, 4584-6
Fees, payment of officials by, 2692
Fish, cost of, 2890
Fisheries Com., 2463
Good roads, 784, 786, 4432-3
Government employees, compensation for injuries, 708
Halifax
Dry dock, 1281
Harbour master, 2692
House of Commons, Saturday and morning sittings, 3376, 3421
Housing scheme, 2537
Immigration Act Amdt., 1879
Illiterates, 1966
Income tax, 3720
Judges Act Amdt. Bill, 4377
Judges' salaries and taxation, 2956, 4231-4, 4436-9
Lobster, canned, 725
Migratory birds, 2165-6
Militia pensions, 2754-7, 2761
Parliament buildings, 2339
Peace Treaty, ratification, 2200
Pensions, 4178-83
Postage stamps used on cheques, 2031
Prohibition, 2349
Proprietary medicines, 2487
Soothing syrups, 2492
Provincial autonomy (technical education), 3169
Public health, 1374
Public works, Nova Scotia, 2783
Railway Act Consolidation
Senate amdts., 4156
Transmission lines on highways; consent of municipalities, 3095-8
Royal Northwest Mounted Police, 2696

Fielding, Hon. William Stevens—Con.
Seed grain advances, 627
Steamship services
Froude's Point and Lockeport, 1301
United States ports to, proposed, 1296
West Indies, 1288
Subsidies—steamship vs. railway, 1297
Tariff, Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt., 837
Taxation, not to be increased by Com.—point of order, 2487
Technical education, 3169, 3796
Telephone companies, 2647
Titles, 1478, 2740
War Expenditures ($3,500,000,000) Bill, "Any measures deemed necessary or advisable," 2242-5
Borrowing powers under, 2248

Finance. See Budget; Canadian National Railway; Highways; Technical Education; Loans
Canada's war expenditure, 14
Imperial Munitions Board, ques. 977
Loans, public, flotation cost, 211, 274, 290

Finance Act Bill. Res., 633; 1r., 644; 2r., com., 1103; res. referred to com., 1102; 3r., 1111

Finance, Department of Forsyth, Mr. J. R., ques. 4379
Salaries, 4475
Vacancies, ques. 847

Finley, Mr. Albert Ernest (Souris)
Immigration of illiterates, 1952

Fire Prevention. See Criminal Code Amdt.

Fiset, Dr. Michael, ques. 1791

Fisheries Act, 1914, Amdt. Bill (British Columbia licenses). Res., 933; 1r., 936; 2r., 2097; ref. to special com., 2098; com., 3757; 3r., 3761

Fish and Fisheries
Alleged accumulation of Canadian fish in Great Britain, 3328
Breeding establishments, 2899
British Columbia, 426
Canadian Fisheries Association, 2888
Dogfish reduction works, ques. 979
Fisheries Com., 114, 2463
Report tabled, 111
Fishways, 2898
Graft alleged, Major Burde's charges, 427
Inspection. See also Fish Inspection Act
Maritime Provinces, in, 2896
Pickled fish, of, 2898
Lobsters, 2894, 2899. See also Meat and Canned Goods Bill
Canned, 2902
Hatcheries, 2899
Port Daniel West, 609
Marketing overseas, ques. 2750

Fish and Fisheries—Con.
Naval men, returned, and, 451, 1959
Nova Scotia fishing fleet, 1866
Officers
British Columbia, Chief Inspector, ques. 1534
Maritime Provinces, Inspector, 2896
Overseers, 2893-4
Salaries and disbursements of, 2887
Oysters, 2894-9
Prices, 121
Protection service, 2848
Salesmen, 2889
Salmon fishing by farmers, 2896
Salmon and halibut, ques. 1535
Souris, P.E.I., fish drier, ques. 1662, ques. 3470
Tax on fishermen, 2144
Twine and cordage, 3708
Utilization of waste, 3341

Fish Inspection Act Amdt. Bill. Res., 949. 1r., 952; 2r., ref. to Com. on Marine and Fisheries, 2098

Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles
Letter from, 971
Payments to, 850, 1102
Pension, ques. 1109

Flavelle, Sir Joseph, 202, 2074

Flax Industry
Bounty, 3842
Res., Mr. Glass, 1537

Flint, the late Thomas Barnard, 1341

Fontaine, Mr. Joseph Eloi (Hull)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 417. Financial situation—the war and profiteering—War-time Elections Act, 417; returned soldiers, 418; Military Service defaulters—tariff, 418; surplus profits tax—economy—late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 419
Civil Service, 2921
Cost of living, 2921
Government property in Hull, ques. 1215
Loans to Imperial Government, ques. 1215
Military Service Act, uniformity of administration, 1328
Ottawa City, agreement with, 4249
Royal Air Force, repatriation of, ques. 1611

Food Board. See Canada Food Board

Food Control. See High Cost of Living

Foran, Mr. J. K., ques. 607

Foran, Mr. William, Secretary Civil Service Commission, 165, 289, 292

Forbidden Literature. See Censorship

Foreign Trade. See also Trade
Roumania, 3241
Sir Clifford Sifton, and, 1908

Forest Products Laboratories, ques., 3068

Forests. See Dominion Lands and Parks; Dominion Forest Reserves

Forests, Waterways and Water Powers
Com. appointed, 114

Forsyth, Mr. J. R., ques. 4379

Fort George Postmistress, ques. 602

Fortier, Mr. Hyacinthe Adelard (Labelle)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 508. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier —centralization of government, 508; government by Order in Council, 509; conscription, defaulters, 510; autonomy and British connection, 511
Budget, 3554. "Produce and save," 3554; alleged persecutions under Military Service Act, 3555

Fort Lawrence, N.S., dredging, ques. 3680

Fort William Grain Company, ques. 2048

Foster, Mr. Thomas (East York)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 397, 399. Sir Thomas White, Acting Prime Minister, 397; immigration, 399; highways and the provinces —transcontinental highway, 401; farm work and Government highway assistance—housing, 402; temperance question, 403; Outside Civil Service—postmasters at sub-stations — Civil Service Commission, 404; women's franchise, 405; War-time Elections Act and aliens — Ministers in the Senate, 406
Canadian National Railway, 1649
Daylight Saving, 926
Electric and Power Companies Bill, 4578-9
Fire prevention, 1586
Highways, 731
Live Stock Act Amdt., 1571
Prohibition, 2658
Public Works Department, unexpended balances, 1280
Railway Act Consolidation
Disagreement with Senate, power clause, 4162
Transmission lines on highways, consent of municipalities, 3093
Telephone companies, 2644
Toronto Harbour improvements, 2363

Fournier, Mr. C. A. (Bellechasse)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 176. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier —Canada's war record—post-bellum conditions, finance, demobilization, returned soldiers, 176-7; franchise—tariff, 178; high cost of living, 179; profiteering—the Press, 180

Fournier, Mr. C. A.—Con.
Canadian National Railway Bill, 1649, 1801
Liquor for Siberian Expedition, ques. 845
Pilotage—Shipping Act Amdt., 2806
Proprietary medicines, 2484-7, 3824-7, 3939
Public ownership of railways, 1866
St. Valerie wharf, 2786

Franchise. See Women; Dominion Elections Act; Enemy Aliens
Governor General's Speech, 1
Nova Scotia franchise law, 518

Franking of Pamphlets, ques. 1791

Fraser, Mr. Evan E. (Welland)
Welland Canal lock tenders, 604

Fraser, the late John, Auditor General, 115

Fraser River works, 422

Fraser Seigniory, ques. 882

Fraser Valley, See Representation Act

Fraserville, Que., Riou Store, ques. 1611

Fraternal Societies, foreign. See Insurance Act Amdt.

Free Trade. See Budget; Tariff

French Language
Income tax forms, 3712
Loan, printing bonds, 4475
Use of in seconding Address, 17

French River, 1077, 2796

Fripp, Mr. Alfred Ernest (Ottawa)
Bankruptcy Bill
Order of court, 2010
Settlement and preference, 2008-9
Trustee, remuneration of, 2011-2
Board of Commerce, 4557
Daylight Saving, 920
Divorce Court Bill, 3776
Dominion Police, pay of, 2926
Horse racing, 1710
Letter postage rate, 745
Ottawa City and the Dominion Government, 2498, 4250
Pensions, 4191-6, 4207
Prohibition, 2349
War memorial building, ques., 1216
War Purchasing Commission, 3200

Frozen Beef, 1287, 1292

Fuel Control, ques. 612, ques. 1532, ques. 2145

Fulton, Mr. Frederick John (Cariboo)
Good roads, 3904
Judges' salaries, 2954-5
Pensions, "Unmarried wife," 4288

Fushimi, Prince, visit of, 2455

Gabarus, beach protection, 2780

Galicians and Poland, 3472. See also Poles and Ukrainains

Galvanized Iron, 3681, 3689

Game, protection of. See Migratory Birds

Garden Villages
Returned soldiers, for, 761, 4012. See also War, Soldiers; Soldiers' Land Settlement

Gauthier, Mr. Louis Joseph (St. Hyacinthe-Rouville)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 73. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—unemployment—war debt of France, 73; shipping and conscription—patronage in repatriation medical service, 74; industrial unrest—Liberal party, 76; reconstruction—capital and labour, 77; agrarian question—Opposition's duty, 78

Gauvreau, Mr. Charles Arthur (Témiscouata)
Alcohol in medicines, ques., 646
Berubé, Esdras, 2250
Canadians in Royal Navy, 1434
"Champlain," steamer, 2606
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 858
Government Employees' Compensation Bill, 946
Intercolonial Pension Fund, ques. 605
Isle Verte, 2784
Langelier, Mr. Justice, 1312
Medical officer to Indians, 1906
Military Service Act, 1313
Defaulters, 971, 1866, 1957, 2250
Privilege, correction, 970
Proprietary medicines, 2481-7
Public Information, Department of, 2145
Riou store, Fraserville, ques. 1611
Seigniorial rights, ques. 882, 2786-7
Taxation Bills originating in Senate, 2490

Gauvreau, Mr. Charles, fire ranger, 2921

Georgian Bay Canal, ques., 843, 1082. See also French River Waterway

German Fleet. See War

Gibson, Judge, ques. 1440

Gibson, Major, ques. 884

Glace Bay harbour, 4613

Gladu, Mr. Joseph Ernest Oscar (Yamaska)
Military Service, Guelph Novitiate, 1240

Glass, Mr. Samuel Francis (East Middlesex)
Canadian National Railway, 1859
Daylight Saving, 900, 1431
Flax industry, 1537, 1553
London public building, 4611
Proprietary medicines, 3487

Gobeil-Simard investigation, ques. 619

Gold. See also Finance Act
Prohibition of export of, 1102
Shipments, ques. 614

Good Roads. See Highways

Goodwin, Dr. B. E., ques. 3377, ques. 4070,

Gordon, Hon. Major Rev. C. W., ques. 1440

Government Employees' Compensation Bill.
Res., 701. 1r., 708; 2r., com., 938; 3r., 1029
ques. 4465

Government Ownership
Aeronautics, of, 2053, 2059
Railways, of. See Canadian National Government Printing Bureau. See Printing Bureau

Government Railways. See Canadian National

Governor General's Speech, 1
Address in reply. See Address

Goyette, Magistrate, 2400

Grain. See also Canada Grain Act
Fort William and Port Arthur, ques. 604, ques. 605
Interior terminal, 505
Terminal, statistics of, ques. 880
Great Lakes, on, ques. 599
Prices, 537
Seed, ques. 979
Wheat. See that title

Grain Supervisors, Board of, 3837

Grand Etang, 2609

Grand Trunk Railway. See also Grand Trunk Pacific; Canadian National Superannuation and Provident Fund, ques. 1213

Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada Bill. 1r., 111; 2r., 229; com., 1184; 3r., 1210
Government's offer, company's counter 659, 694

Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Receivership Bill. See also Canadian National
Res., 649; 1r., 696; 2r., com., 1112; 3r., 1261-2
Statement by Minister, 316

Great Lakes
Armed vessels on, 1261
Government ships on, 2255-8

Great War Veterans' Association
Housing, resolution, 762

Greece, contract with Canada for wheat, ques. 2907

Greek Catholics in communion with Church of Rome, 1383

Green, Mr. Robert Francis (West Kootenay)
Dominion lands, reclamation of, 641
Good roads, 3901
Immigration Act Amdt., 1914

Gregory, Mr. William T., ques. 601

Grey, Mr. George Edwin, habeas corpus, 111

Grierson, Mr. Frank, ques. 613

Griesbach, Brig.-Gen. William A. (West Edmonton)
British Nationality, Naturalization and Aliens, 3819; amdt., 3821; withdrawn, 4118
Militia, permanent force, 3976, 3981
Pensions, 4174, 4180, 4195, 4201, 4206, 4282, 4292
"Unmarried wife," 4282
Titles, 2717, 2719

Grisdale, Mr., Deputy Minister of Agriculture, 2961, 2965

Grocers, Wholesale. See Private Bills

Grosse Isle, 2784

Guelph Novitiate. See Military Service Act

Gundy, Mr. W. P., death of, 3196, 3201, 3211

Gunning, Mr. John G., 1435, 1483

Gustave, Stuart, property bequeathed to Government, 544, ques. 604, 648, 2769, 2770

Guthrie, Hon. Hugh (Solicitor General)
Bankruptcy Bill, 229, 1981-95, 1998-2015, 2467-78
Arrest of debtor ("abscond"), 2266-8, 2279
Bona fide transactions, 2471
Claims, 2472-3
Composition, 1983
Assent to, 1984
Contributory, 2009
Court's jurisdiction, 2268-70, 2474-5
Dividends, no action for, 2471
Inspectors, 2015
Limited partnerships, 2270, 2475
Malicious proceedings, 2272-4, 2279
Meetings of creditors notices, 2014
Non-traders, 2477
Order of Court, 2010
Proof of debt, 2263-4
Secured creditors, by, 2265
Provinces, and, 1998-9, 2008
Settlements and preferences, 2008, 2469-70
Trustees
Appointment, 1984-90, 2468
Discharge, 2472
Insurance by, sale of patented articles, 2006-7
Powers, 2468
Reports, 2468
Security by, 1992-5, 2468-9
Surrendered, 2001
To be kept in force, 1998-9
Substitute, 2000-4
British Nationality, Naturalization and Aliens, 3816-23, 4110-32, 4257-74

Guthrie, Hon. Hugh—Con.
Criminal Code, Aliens and British subjects, 4357-8
Daylight Saving, 903
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 874
Military Service Act, uniformity of administration, 1315
Religious conscientious objectors, 782
Sedition, report of Special Com., 3285

Guysborough public library, ques. 846

Halifax
Dennis building, ques. 972
Dry dock, 1281
Explosion, ques. 879
Overseas mails, 886, 929
Terminals, cost of, ques. 2398

Halifax Harbour Master Act Amdt. Bill. Res., 2692; 1r., 2695; 2r., com., 2800; 3r., 2802

Halladay, Mr. Howard H. (Bow River)
Budget, 3582
Criminal Code (sexual offences), 2162
Daylight Saving, 902
Hanna townsite and Mr. D. B. Hanna, 1410

Hamilton, Mr. Charles McGill, Director Canadian National Railway, 1638, 1834

Hamilton, Major W. J., ques. 3067

Hanmer, Mr. I. B., cattle breeder, 2995

Hanna, Mr. D. B., 1408. See Canadian National Railway

Hanna, Alberta, townsite of, ques. 1535

Harbours. See their names
Dues, statement tabled, 40

Harold, Mr. John (Brant)
Budget, 3505. Reply to Mr. McKenzie, 3506; Canadian and American manufacturers, 3507; agricultural implements, 3508; business profits tax, 3509; land tax, 3510; free trade or protection, 3511
Canadian Expeditionary Force, files mislaid, ques. 1108
Freight rates, 3699
Gundy, the late W. P., 3201
Manufacturers' profits, 3699
Ploughs, duty on, 3701
Purchasing Commission, 3200-3
War; removal of bodies of the dead, ques. 1107

Harrison, Mr. Charles Robert (Nipissing)
French River waterway, 1077
Government employees' compensation, 945
Lake Nipissing water-power, ques. 1341

Hart, Mr. James I., ques. 602

Harvesters, admission into Canada, 1944

Hastings, Mr. J. R., appointment, 161, 283

Hawker, Mr., transatlantic flier, 2564

Hawkesbury-Grenville bridge, 2791

Hay, Mr. Thomas (Selkirk)
Budget, 3583
Immigration, illiterates, 1967
Indian Reserves, expropriation, 2302
Purchasing Commission, 3209

Head tax on Canadians entering United States, 1942

Health. See Public Health

Health Department Bill. 1r., 843; 2r., 1164; com., 1182, 1185, 1366; 3r., 1383

Hebrews, illiteracy among, 1967
"Helena," motor boat, ques. 3998

Henders, Mr. Richard Coe (Macdonald)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 454. Peace and its problems, 454; Union Government — Military Service Act, 455; public health—prohibition—daylight saving, 456; reconstruction—tariff, 457
Agriculture and Colonization Com., 4376
Agricultural implements, freight rates on, 4010
Board of Commerce, 4558
Budget, 3647. War and after-war problems, 3648; Western farmers and direct taxation — tariff, 3649; Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt.—co-operation of interests, 3650
Daylight Saving, 902
Grain trade
Appeal Board, 4100, 4103-4
Speculation, 4105-9
Warehouses and elevators, 4097
Live Stock Act Amdt. Bill, 1572
Pensions, 4297
Ploughs, duty on, 3692
Prohibition, 2662
Water-borne traffic, rates, 2950

High Commissioner, ques. 3242
Reported resignation, 647

High Cost of Living, 394, 409, 523, 1594, 1663, 2921, 3280-3. See also Board of Commerce; Combines; Industrial Unrest
Butter, price of, 2063
Daylight Saving and, 896
Measures to reduce, ques. 1792
Minimum wage and, 2908
Special Committee
Appointed, 2953
Reports:
2nd, 4069. Motion (Mr. Nicholson) to concur, 4307; amdt. Mr. McKenzie, neg. on div., motion agreed to, 4333
3rd (recommendations), 4664

Highways, 16, 25, 43, 53, 135, 167, 184, 302, 312, 458, 490, 530, 542, 2791-2
British Columbia mountains, through, 431
Farm work, effect on, 402, 732
Government policy, 731
Prices and, 789
Provinces and, 401
Railways and, 742-4
Transcontinental, 401

Highways Aid Bill. Res., 729, 784, 3899; 1r., 3926; 2r., com., 4386; 3r., 4435

His Majesty the King
Banquet to President Wilson, 103, 148

Historical Monuments, report tabled, 184

Hocken, Mr. H. C. (West Toronto)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 155. Canada's sacrifice in the war—"Department of Public Welfare"—mothers' pensions, 156; old-age pensions, unemployment insurance—trades unions—housing, 157; returned soldiers, pensions, 159; franchise—Bolshevism—the Civil Service, 160; theft of examination papers, 164
Board of Commerce, 4502-3
Canadian National Railway, 1807
Civil Service
Commission, 160
Committees, list of, ques. 617
Examination papers, theft of, 164, 2082, 2084
Post Office Department, salaries, 2082
Toronto letter carriers, 1341
Daylight Saving, 905
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 876
Foran, Mr. J. K., ques. 607
Guelph Novitiate, 1237
National non-sectarian schools, 2430
Newspapers and periodicals, publication of ownership and control, 2023-6
Newsprint control, 4539, 4547
Post Office statistics, ques. 2903
Quebec City, post office, ques. 2751
Quebec and Hamilton post offices, ques. 2750
Toronto, Montreal, and Winnipeg post offices, ques. 2750
Transmission lines on highways; Hydro-Electric, 3126

Holbrook, Mr. George H., ques. 646

Homestead Entries, ques. 751

Horse Racing, 1710, 4466

Hospitals, 2774. See also War
Maternity, 1374
Quebec Military, ques. 844
St. Anne's, 1264
Toronto Base, ques. 845

House of Commons. For questions of Parliamentary procedure see Speaker; Deputy Speaker
Adjournments
Ascension Day, 2851
Ash Wednesday, 185
Easter, 886, 1075, 1109, 1162
Leave to discuss urgent matter
Gen. Smart and Col. Pratt, charges of, 1099
Quorum, for want of, 397
Board of Internal Economy, ques. 4, 605
Business of the House
Budget Speech, time of, 1343, 1712, 2752
Government business, precedence for, 1110
Initial Committee rule, suspension of, 4456
Legislation forthcoming or postponed, 599, 1342, 1616, 2398, 3999, 4690
Questions, outstanding, 1342
Chamber, acoustic properties of, 2331, 2337, 2396, 2538, 2657
Committees, standing, 4, 111-2, 696
Estimates, Committee on, proposed, 1557
Daylight Saving and sittings of the House, 970, 1432
Debates, official report of Committee appointed, 114
Reports
Special editions of members' speeches, 1162, 1206
Volumes, publication of, 2198
Divisions. See that title
Galleries, admission to, 1910
Members
Apartments for, proposed, 2498
Representing two ridings. See House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill
Sessional indemnity of, 749
War record of, personal list, 195
Ministers in Senate, representation in, ques. 884, ques. 974
Motion, Mr. Euler, 1002
Officers
Clerk of French Journals, 357
Deputy Sergeant at Arms, 4
Messengers, pay of, 1558
Press Gallery, record in the war, 209
Privilege, Senate Address in place of request by Message, 642
Quorum, 397, 2361
Reading room, 318, ques. 843
Returns, inquiries for and statements concerning, 886, 1908, 4000
Sittings
Dominion Day, 4198
Non-suspension of, conference with Senate, 3948
House of Commons—Con.
Sittings—Con.
Saturday and morning, 3376, 3420
Wednesday, 1109
Speaker, living allowance, 2444
Vacancies, 1163. See also House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill
Votes and Proceedings and Journals, 41, 3065, 3292
House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 643
Housing, 15, 30, 45, 53, 144, 157, 223, 333, 530, 542, 1188. See also Public Health
Farm buildings in the West, 171
Garden villages for returned soldiers, 761
Loan to provinces of $25,000,000
Inquiry as to time of presenting measures, 1616
Order in Council tabled, 71
Resolution and debate, 2532
Hudson Bay and Strait, 2511
Hudson Bay Railway, 4409
Port Nelson terminals, 4688
Hughes, Gen. William S., 162, 285
Hughes, Lieut.-General Sir Sam (Victoria)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 195. House of Commons members' war record, 195; Military Service Act—Union Government—War Measures Act, 199; politics, patronage, independence — soldiers, regulars vs. irregulars, 200; Canada's rights—political intrigues, 201; the Press, 201, 203; Munitions Board—formation of Union Government, 202; "Canadian Official Record," 203; organization of Canada's forces at the front, 204; St. Julien, Cambrai, Mons, 205; demobilization and repatriation, 207; population, development — Press Gallery record in the war, 209; finance, public debt, 210; munitions—Victory Bonds, 213
Canadians entering United States, head tax, 1110
Canadian Expeditionary Force, rifles and ammunition, 1614
Canadians in Imperal service, 1997
Canadians in Royal Air Force, ques. 646
Canadian soldiers imprisoned, 1434
Circular, farmers and military service, 1326
Civil and religious liberty in re-established countries, 2043
Commercial Cable property, Hazel Hill, N.S., ques. 2046
Electric and Power Companies Bill, 4584
Fertilizers Act Amdt., 1658-70, 2464-5
Greek Catholic children, 1383-8
Guelph Novitiate, 4620
Motion for Com. of inquiry, 1218

Hughes, Lieut.-General Sir Sam—Con.
Halifax Harbour Master, 2801
House of Commons galleries, 1910
Immigration agents in United States, 2586
Interim supply—agreement of leaders, 842
Juvenile delinquents, 1383-8, 3843
Kinmel Camp riots, 316, 424
Land for soldiers, 3071-2
Marine insurance, Roumanian, etc., relief, ques. 2798
Military escort of Roman Catholic bishop, ques. 2296
Military management, charges of General Smart, etc., 1517, 1527
Military Service Act
Defaulters, 4238-9
Uniformity of administration, motion, 1308
Military trials in England, 1959
Militia pensions, 2755-7
Milk—marking of containers, 2345
Nova Scotia, farm conditions, 2586
Pensions, 4183, 4289-91
Committee, 139
Poles and Ukrainians, etc., 2343, 3472, 4466
Princess Patricia's Regiment, ques. 616
Prohibition, 2348, 2350-6, 2668
Purchasing Commission, 3204
Roumania, credit to, 3241
St. John Harbour—Fort Latour, 4302
Scientific research, 4461
Selkirk postmaster, ques. 1308
Service medal, ques. 883
Soldiers' complaints against authorities, alleged suppression, 1618
Soldiers' graves, 332
Trawlers built for Canada, 2210
Trotsky, Leon, ques. 880
War Purchasing Commission, 3199
Wireless stations, 2795
Wounded soldiers, Civil Service positions for, 984

Hull
Armoury, ques., 1215
Government property in, ques. 1215
Industrial disputes, ques. 2905

Hutterites. See also Immigration; Mennonites
Admission to Canada, 1382, 1875
Mass meeting in Winnipeg regarding, 1920

Hydro-Electric. See Railway Act

Immigration, 90, 99, 217, 300, 342, 354, 395, 399, 433, 1047
Chinese, ques. 751

Immigration Act Amdt. Bills. See also Immigration and Colonization
1. (General.) 1r., 1206; 2r., 1866; com., 1876, 1910, 1960, 2280; 3r., 2305; Senate amdt., 3175

Immigration Act Amdt. Bills—Con.
Alien Labour Act and, 1943
Aliens, enemy, 1945
Definition, 1876
Deportation, 1977
Deputy Minister, 1980
Domicile, 1942, 2286
Exclusion of certain classes, 1916, 1944, 1976-1969, 1923
Inquiry, Board of, 1972
Inspection, 1973
Non-immigrant classes, 1980
Officers, 1972-1980
Transportation companies, 1978-9
2. (Advocates of violence.) 1r., 3211; 2r., com., 3r., 3213

Immigration and Colonization. See also Immigration Act Amdt
Aliens, Government policy respecting, 753
Belgians, 2587
Canada's attractions, 2573
Department of Agents
United States, 2569, 2588
West, in, 2588
Staff and salaries, 2568-72
Deputy Minister, 1915, 2440
Interpreters, 1972
Exodus of settlers, 2579-81, 2590, 2595
Great Britain, from, 2594, 2596
Hutterites and Mennonites, 2570-1
Land, cheap, 2572-9
Naturalization papers, 754
Northern Ontario and Quebec, to, 2574
Nova Scotia, to, 2582
Policy for all Canada, 2585
Restrictions, proposed changes in the law, 769
Parliament's powers, 773

Imperial Board of Investigation, 3240

Imperial Court of Appeal, ques. 1075. See also Supreme Court

Imperial Government, loans to, ques. 1215

Imperial Guards, 2753

Imperial Munitions Board, 19, 2073

Imperial War Cabinet and Imperial War Conference, 40, 244, 1044
Cables, 1052
Minister's (Hon. Mr Rowell) statement., 1044
Passports, 1052
Ratification of acts of, 1059
Resolution, 1918 Conference, 1948
Resources of Empire, 1052

Income War Tax. See also Budget; Revenue Bills
Assessment, total, ques. 2049
Evasions, alleged, 429

Income war tax—Con.

Exemptions, 1917-18, ques. 611
Farmers, ques. 2049
Gross taxable income, ques. 2296
Judges and, 3711-3
Montreal office, ques. 2905
Officials, 2798
Unmarried women and, 3992

Independent Workers of the World. See Industrial unrest; Bolshevism; Winnipeg strike

India
Famine in, 2616
Status of, 1045

Indian Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 4171; 2r., com., 4254; 3r., 4257

Indians
British Columbia, 4062
Caughnawaga, 4057
Greater production on farms, 4664
Liquor and, 4063
Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and Northwest Territories, 4061
Medical attendance, 4060
Medical officer, ques. 1906
New Brunswick, 4061
Nova Scotia, 4060
Reserves
Opening up of, 414
Parks, expropriation for, 2302
Restigouche, ques. 609
Returned soldiers, lands for, 3807, 4015
Roads and bridges on, 4057
St. Peter's, ques. 1076
Seabird Island, 414
Schools, 4063
Tuberculosis and, 4062

Industrial Disability, Government insurance against, 994

Industrial Relations Commission, 1260, 4620
Personnel, 1305
Scope, 1432

Industrial and Scientific Research, 4376
Com., 1709, 2097, 4457
Report, motion to concur, 4457
Health laboratory, 1370
National Institute proposed, 1565
Vote of $120,000, 3341

Industrial Unrest, 16, 20, 26, 57, 73, 150, 296, 374, 393, 443, 574, 890, 899, 1858, 2883, 2929. See also Bolshevism; Board of Commerce; High Cost of Living; Industrial Relations
Conference to settle disputes, 2908, 3194
Discussion on motion to adjourn, 3004
Situation in the West, 2798

Industrial Unrest—Con.
Strikes
Canada, in, since signing of Armistice, ques. 2143
England, in, delaying return of Canadian soldiers, 3741
Montreal, 1482, 1615, 1663
Ottawa Street Railway, 4535
Sympathetic, "Collective bargaining," 2851
Time lost due to, 1792
Winnipeg, 2508, 2565, 2616, 2752-4, 2598, 2953, 3241, 3472, 3927. See also Post Office Appointments Bill
Arrests and trials, 3740
Prisoners' mooted removal to Kingston, 3587
Riots, 3843
Western situation, 2908

Infant Mortality. See Health

Inland Revenue
Bonded warehouses and liquors, 966
Violations, ques. 1536
Department
Expenses of, ques. 3242
Report tabled, 550

Inland Water Navigation
Railway Commission Control Bill. 1r., 71. See also Railway Act Amdt.

Inspection and Sale Act Amdt. Bill (Containers). Res., 2344; 1r., 2345; dropped, 3940

Insurance. See also Criminal Code
Department, 4479
Marine, Roumanian, etc., relief, ques. 2798

Insurance Act, 1917, Amdt. Bill. 1r., 1259; 2r., 1567; ref. to Banking and Commerce Com., 1568; com., 3987; 3r., 3988

Intercolonial Railway. See also Canadian National Express parcels, ques. 2047
Freight stolen at Charmy, ques. 2396
Mulgrave services, 1302
Operation, 4616
Position of, 2131
Property, earnings, expenses, ques. 750
Provident Fund, ques. 605, ques. 2045. See also Government Employees' Compensation

Inter-Imperial Trade, proposed Investigation Board, 3327

Interior Department
Deputy Minister, extra salary for immigration work, 2440

International Joint Commission, 462, 1901-4, 2396, 4670
Lake of the Woods Board, 1904

International Waters, sewage in, 1195

Interpretation Act Amdt. Bill (Superior Courts). 1r., 1957; 2r., com., 3r., 2313; Senate amdts., 2959

Interpreters for immigration service, 1972

Intoxicating Liquors
Custom houses as storage places for, 956, 966
Illicit stills, 969
Interprovincial trade in, opinions of Minister and Acting Deputy Minister of Justice, 4133
Northwest, in, statement tabled, 229
Quebec, entered at, ques. 1533
Shipments, prosecutions for, ques. 882
Siberian expedition, for, ques. 845

Intoxicating Liquors Act, 1919, Amdt. Bill. Res., 2345; 1r., 2396; 2r., com., 2654; 3r., 2752. Amdt. (Mr. Cronyn), 2656-7; neg., 2689
Senate amdt., 3782; House disagrees, res., Sir Robert Borden agreed to on div., 4071-2, 4133; Senate insists, 4475; free conference, 4497, 4550, 4572; House insists, 4659-60
Dominion Alliance, 2685
Intemperance
Causes of, 2686
Recreation, a cure for, 2686
Labour and, 2660, 2670-1, 2680
Medicinal value of liquor, 2667, 2682
Native wines, 2668
Ontario Temperance Act, 2655, 2678 2688
Prohibition, extension of, 2658-9
Provinces, 2347, 2662, 2679
Manitoba, 2673, 2678
Ontario, 2676, 2682
Rowntree and Sherwell report, 2685
Saleeby, Dr., opinion of, 2683

Inverness Railway, 4614

Iron, material for galvanizing, 3781, 3689

Irrigation, 4601

Irrigation Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 71; 2r., com., 633; 3r., 696

Isle Perrot bridges, 733

Isle Verte wharf, 2784

Jacobs, Mr. Samuel William (George Etienne Cartier)
Alpine Club, 4046
Bankruptcy Bill, 1983-5, 1992-5, 2000-15, 2264-73, 2468-78
Board of Commerce, 4460, 4552
Bolshevism, 2284

Jacobs, Mr. Samuel William—Con.
British Remount Commission, ques. 976
Budget, 3624. Reply to Minister of Finance—Mr. M. Clark and party government, 3625; post-war tariff revision, 3626; Hon. Mr. Crerar's resignation, 3627; Bankruptcy Bill—vacancies in House of Commons, 3630; Hon. Mr. Rowell and Cabinet secrets, 3627, 3631
Butter, price of, 1618
Canadian National Railway
Finance, parliamentary control, 2128
Head office, amdt. 1648, neg. 1653
Combines, 4569, 4590
Amdt., "British subjects," 4590-8; neg., 4591
Criminal Code, 4356-63
Aliens and British subjects, 4356-61
Sexual offences, 2164
Daylight Saving, 893
Deputy Minister of Interior, 2443
Electric and power companies, 4577-9
Employment works, Welland canal, 1600-4
Franchise, 4639
Government Employees' Compensation Bill, 940-8
Hebrews
Crime, absence of, 1881
Illiteracy unknown, 1967
Juvenile delinquents, 1386
House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill, 643
Immigration Act Amdt. Bill
Deported conspirators, 1949
Illiterates, 1952, 1967; amdt. proposed, 1960
Open-door policy, 1880
Temporary residents, 1942
Travelling musicians, 1942
Violence against constituted authority, 2284
Income tax, judges—personal explanation, 3720, 4234
Industrial unrest—Winnipeg strike, Peace Conference labour principles, collective bargaining, etc., 3043
Interned alien enemies, ques. 1611
Judges' salaries, 2956-9, 4374
Naturalization, 4118
Amdt., 4120; neg., 4126
Radziwill, Princess, ques. 618
Roumania
Credit to, 1618
Proposed Canadian guard for border, 1618
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, resignations, 4673-6
War expenditure, 1865
Weights and measures, 2150-2, 2159

Japan
Fushimi, Prince, visit of, 2455
Immigration from. See Asiatics; Immigration
Market for ships, 2220

Jellicoe, Admiral Sir John, ques. 751

Jenkins, Colonel, report of, 2285, 2294

Jesuits. See Military Service, Guelph Novitiate

Johnston, Mr. J. Fred (Last Mountain)
Budget, 3462. Industrial unrest, 3462; wheat and prices, 3463; School Lands Trust Fund, 3463; Hudson Bay Railway—Victory Loans, 3463; tariff and the land, 3465
Canadian National Railway, 1834
Franchise, 4641
Livestock, pure-bred, 2994
Ploughs, duty on, 3693
Titles, 1478

Jones, General Guy Carleton, ques. 615

Judges Act Amdt. Bills
1. (British Columbia.) Res., 2305; 1r., 2313; 2r., com., 2954; 3r., 2959
2. (Salaries.) Res., 4063, 4212; 1r., 4376; 2r., 4435; com., 4436; 3r., 4439; Senate amdts., 4661
3. (From the Senate.) 4135; 1r., 4377

Jurisdiction, federal and provincial. See Public Health; Highways; Technical Education

Juvenile Delinquents Act Amdt. 1r., 970; 2r., com., 1383; not proceeded with, 3843

Kay, Mr. William Frederic (Missisquoi)
Automobiles, Government-owned, ques. 880
Ayrshire and Holstein bulls, ques. 601
Canadian merchant marine, ques. 3998
"Canadian Volunteer," steamer, ques. 3998
Daylight Saving, 921
Food Board revenues, ques. 611
Fuel Control Board, ques. 1532
Military service payments, ques. 601
Newsprint control, ques. 613
Oleomargarine, 3708
Opposition and lower duties, 3703
Public Information Department, ques. 728

Keefer, Mr. Francis Henry (Port Arthur and Kenora)
Canadian Grain Act Amdt., 3955, 4097
Canadian National Railway
Annual meetings, 1646
Construction of lines, extension of time for, 1718, 1754
Directors, 1632
Expropriation, 1696
Head office, 1648

Keefer, Mr. Francis Henry—Con.
Cost of Living Com., 4317
Demobilization, N.W.M. Police, 2175
Dominion Police, 2926
External Affairs Department, 4669
French River waterway, 1083
Proprietary medicines, 2479-81
Public health, 1195
Medical profession and, 1378
Sewage in international waters, 1195
Royal Northwest Mounted Police, 2175, 2326
Water-borne traffic, rates, 2946

Kemp, Hon. Sir Edward, K.C.M.G. (Minister of Overseas Military Forces from Canada in the United Kingdom)
Administration of overseas forces, 2294, 2856-83
Demobilization, strikes delaying, 3741
Jenkins, Col., report of, 2294
Negroes, rioting in England by, 3741
Permanent Air Force in Canada, 2867-8

Kennedy, Mr. William Costello (North Essex)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 101. Government promises—franchise, 101; Paris Conference, Ministers in attendance, 102; foreign trade, 103; Bolsheviki—returned soldiers, 105; Siberian expedition—pensions, 106; employment of returned soldiers, 107
Budget, 3512. Taxation and public debt, 3512; tax-free debts, 3513; bank amalgamations, 3516; unwise regulation of trade, 3517
Head tax on Canadians entering United States, 1942

Kingsmill, Admiral, ques. 1340

Kingston, Calvin residence as nurses' home, ques. 3377

Kinmel Camp Riots, 315, 462, 550, 1100, 1320. See also War
Courts-martial, ques. 3469
Statement by Acting Prime Minister, 512

Knox, Mr. Andrew (Prince Albert)
Budget, 3646. Soldiers' land settlement, 3646; a protectionist Budget, 3647
Fisheries of Prairie Provinces, 2892

Kohn, Mr. Louis, ques. 747

Kriegoff, paintings of, 2447

Labelle, Mr. F. A., ques. 1306

Labour. See also Industrial
British Columbia, in, during war, 754
Eight-hour day, 914, 1996, 2856
Farm, shortage—returned soldiers, 140, 3905

Labour—Con.
Interprovincial Convention, Calgary, ques. 2143
Organized, opinions on prohibition, 2660
Peace Conference, principles on, 2852
Strikes in 1918, ques. 619

Labour Bureaux, 4607

Labour Department
Crothers, Hon. T. W., resignation as Minister, 139
Representation in House of Commons, ques. 884
Work of, 145

Labour Disputes Board, Chairman, ques. 1535

Lachute, Custom house, ques. 976

Laferriere, Capt. Alban, ques. 3135

Laflamme, Mr. J. K. L., ques. 750, 2042, 2084

Lake of the Woods Technical and Control Boards, 1904, 2067

Lake St. Joseph hotel, ques. 3067

Lalor, Mr. Francis R. (Haldimand)
Bank mergers, 1098
Board of Commerce, 4553
Income tax, 3714
Farmers and, 3733
War expenditures, 1363
Woollen trade, orders, 1363

Lamontagne, Miss Yvette, ques. 1957, ques. 2145

Lanctôt, Mr. Roch (Laprairie and Napierville)
Budget, 3321. The war, 3321, 3324; Province of Quebec—national debt, 3322; expenditure, 3323; French language—tax-free bonds, 3324; indirect taxation, 3326
Judges' pensions, ques. 1109
Loans to Allied countries, ques. 2565

Land. See also Dominion
Grants
Canadian Northern Railway, ques. 975
Railway companies, 1873
Religious denominations, ques. 2462
Policy, 587
Settlement of British sailors on, 1875
Surveying—Paris foot, 952-4
Tax, 819. See Revenue Bills

Lang, Mr. Norman (Humboldt)
Budget, 3467. Finance and tariff, 3467; aliens and franchise, 3468; pensions and land settlement, 3469
Grierson, Mr. Frank, ques. 613

Langlier, Mr. Justice, 1312

Lapointe, Mr. Ernest (Kamouraska)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 242. Canada's soldiers—Peace Conference and world peace, 242; indemnity payable by Germany—Prime Minister's presence at Peace Conference, 243; Imperial War Cabinet—Canada a nation, 244; Mr. M. Clark—reconstruction, 245; tariff — national unity—The Press, 246; Bolshevism—War-time Elections Act, 247
Agricultural implements, freight rates on, 3926, 4008
Air Board Bill, 2052
Canadian National Railway
Construction of lines, schedule, 1787
Directors, 1654
Government ownership, 1746
Head office, 1648
Labour representatives, amdt., 1643, 2137-40
Collective bargaining, 2908
Daylight Saving, 647, 917
Divorce Court Bill, 3785, 3791
Dominion Elections Act, 4622, 4650, 4658
Experimental Farm labourers, war bonus, 2924
Good roads, 4431
Provincial jurisdiction, 3906
Government Employees' Compensation 704, 947-8
Imperial Cabinet and Conference
Constitutional changes resulting from, 1068
Ratification of acts, 1059
Intoxicating Liquors Bill, Senate amdt., 4072
Judges' salaries, 4213, 4228-9, 4237
Laflamme, Mr., expenses of, 2084
Mail-car route, Quebec-Edmundston, 2083
Naturalization, 3816, 3820-2, 4117-26, 4249
Retroactive effect, amdt., neg., 4126
Peace Treaty labour provisions, 4239
Pensions, 4209
Seigniorial rights, 2787
Statistics Act Amdt., 599
Tea duty, 4005
Technical education, 3794, 3804
Titles, 1477
War Measures Act, 2148

Lapointe, Mr. Louis Audet (St. James)
Canadian National Railway
Directors, 1654
Head office, 1649
Labour, industrial unrest, etc., 1663, 3009, 3194
Steamship services, 1285, 1291
Tariff, Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt., 840
Yukon Act Amdt., 593-4

Laurier, Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid, death of Adjournment out of respect for, 4
Eulogies: Sir Thomas White, 5; Mr. McKenzie, 7; Mr. Lemieux, 9; Mr. Redman, 14; Mr. Manion, 18; Mr. McMaster, 32; Mr. Sinclair, 51; Mr. Gauthier, 73; Mr. Dechene, 87; Mr. Kennedy, 108; Mr. Duff, 116; Mr. Cockshutt, Mr. Ethier, 133; Mr. DuTremblay, 149; Mr. Clark (Red Deer), 231; Mr. McIsaac, 248; Mr. McCoig, 251; Mr. Edwards, 254; Mr. Cannon, 264; Mr. Maclean (Halifax), 272; Mr. Whidden, 221; Mr. d'Anjou, 224; Mr. Cooper, 339; Mr. Pelletier, 393; Mr. Savard, 407; Mr. Stacey, 412; Mr. Fontaine, 419; Mr. McQuarrie, 420; Mr. Archambault, 436; Mr. Denis, 447; Mr. Sinclair (Queen's), 458; Lt.-Col. Peck, V.C., 463; Mr. Fournier, 176; Mr. McGibbon (Muskoka), 181; Mr. Pedlow, 185-6; Mr. Turgeon, 307; Major-General Mewburn, 319; Mr. Cooper, 339-40; Mr. Demers, 344; Mr. Euler, 370; Mr. Anderson, 495; Mr. Ross (Middlesex), 508; Mr. Fortier, 508; Mr. Prevost, 521; Mr. Maharg, 529; Mr. Parent, 540; Mr. Currie (Simcoe), 545; Mr. Lemieux, 567; Mr. Reid (Mackenzie), 587; Mr. Michaud, 166; Mr. Fielding, 473; Mr. Béland, 3293
Monument to, 2797
State funeral ordered, 2

Lavigueur, Mr. Henri E. (Quebec County)
Canada-Great Britain steamship service, ques. 1107
Canadian National Railway
Improvements, ques. 978
Quebec bridge, ques. 977
Quebec and Halifax, ques. 977
Daylight Saving, 891
Dominion exhibitions, ques. 1215
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 874
National harbours, Quebec, 3752-3
Quebec, Champlain market wharves, ques. 1438
St. Malo workshops, ques. 1212
Transcontinental Railway, ques. 2398

Leader of the House, congratulations to Sir Thomas White as, 397

Leader of the Opposition
McKenzie, Mr. D. D.; Congratulations on election as Leader of the Opposition, 27, 51, 254, 567

League of Nations, 308, 348, 367, 1382, 2042. See also Peace
Covenant tabled, 138
Reference in Governor General's Speech, 2

Leduc, Mr. J. Alfred (Westmount-St. Henri)
Dorval building, ques., 610

Leger, Mr. Auguste Théophile (Kent, N.B.)
Agricultural pamphlets, 2991
Canadian National Railway, 1652
Cold storage, 2986
Daylight Saving, 904
Lobster, canned, 722
Local mills and wheat, 2973
Members of Parliament, accommodation for, 2498
Moncton and Buctouch Railway, 1382
Military Service Act, defaulters, 1208; ques. 2566
Proprietary medicines, 2486
Soldiers, furlough in France, 271
Weights and measures, 2153

Lemieux, Hon. Rodolphe (Maisonneuve, and Gaspé)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 567. Tariff and embargo—new Opposition leader—late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 567; "Quebec situation"—Liberals and Unionists, 568; victory and peace—Canada's national status—party government, 570; a free Parliament, 571; outlook for Canada, balance of trade, industrial unrest, 574; complaint of Government inaction, charges by General Smart and Col. Pratt, 575; Council of Agriculture platform, 578; Ministers interrogated, 579; Canada and the Empire, 582; national unity, 585
Aerial service, 1264
Air Board, 2053, 2055-7
Agriculture
British embargo on Canadian cattle, 2962
Literature in both languages, 2975
Production, 2959-60
Baie St. Paul, branch line, 2450
Bank mergers, 1088
Bankruptcy Bill, 1982-93
Belgium, 1874, 2586
Borden, Sir Robert, birthday congratulations, 4133
British sailors on land, settlement of, 1875
Bruce report, 4000
Budget, 3363. Party politics, 3363; Prime Minister and Cabinet, 3364; public debt and economy, 3366; war indemnity—reconstruction, 3369; low tariff, 3370; industrial unrest, 3374; French Canadian Liberals, 3375
Budget Speech, date of, 1712
Business profits war tax, suggested booklet, 4003

Lemieux, Hon. Rodolphe—Con.
Cables
St. Lawrence, 2794
State control of, 1827
Cadet corps, 1888
Canadian National Railway, 1399
Capital stock, 1826
Construction of lines, extension of time, 1713-5, 1728-9
Directors, ex-soldier, 1638
Finance — receipts and expenditures through consolidated revenue, amdt. 1415, neg. 1418
Lines to be included, 1678-9
Securities of other companies, 1781
Canadian Press news service, 4483
Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, oath, 2016
Canadians in the war—the nation's gratitude, 4699
Canals
Trent, 3187-9
Welland, deepening of, 3184-6
Caughnawaga and St. Lambert roads, 4058
Cavell, Edith, proposed monument, 2447
Civil Service
Commission
Appointment of woman as member of, 2909
Commissioners' salaries, 4496
Commissionership of Customs, 3927, 4380
Post office appointments after strike, 4346-8
Salaries, 2914
Superannuation, 2914-5
Cold storage and food, ques. 2906
Combines, 4593-4
Coté, Eugenie, alias "Venus," case of, 2440, 2808
Criminal code—medietate linguae, 4363-6
Daylight Saving, 888, 1208
Government policy, 970
Ottawa time and parliamentary time, 1342, 1422
Divorce
Fees remitted, number of divorces, 2779
Provincial authority in, 1438, 2779
Dominion Parks, bird sanctuaries, 2304
Dominion Police, 2925-6
Dominion Steel Company, 2251
Drummond, Sir George, sale of paintings, 2447
Fish, inspection, 950
Foreign trade
Credits, 1615, 2171
North Europe, Canada barred, 1909
Japan, 4019
France, need of steamship service to, 1291

Lemieux, Hon. Rodolphe—Con.
Franchise, 4621-3, 4637
Woman suffrage, 4638
Fuel control, ques. 612
Government measures, time of presentation, 1617
Grand Trunk Railway bondholders, 4245
Housing scheme, 2557, 2562
Immigration, exodus, repatriation, 2581
Imperial Cabinet and Conference, 1070
Imperial Guards, 2753
Income tax, 3712-4
Children, allowance for, 3723
Judges' and others' pensions, 3713
Military pensions, 3722
Montreal office, ques. 2905
Industrial unrest, cause of, 2883
International Joint Commission, 462, 4670
Judges' salaries, 2312, 2955-6, 4221
Kreigoff, paintings of, 2447
Land grants, Canadian Northern, 1873
Langelier, Mr. Justice, 1312
Laurier, Sir Wilfrid, death of, 9
Loan, $100,000,000, 4243-6
Magdalen Islands, 623, 1300
Mail order houses, 2093
Maps, engraving and distribution, 4047-8
Mercier, Cardinal, visit of, 1482; ques. 1611
Mignault, Mr., K.C., 462, 4670
Military management overseas, 2883-7
Charges of Gen. Smart, Col. Pratt and Col. Price, 1483, 1494-5
Military Service Act, 1312
Guelph Novitiate, 1232
Militia Department, overseas administration, 1099-1100
Militia
Pensions, 2758
Permanent force, 2980-1
Policy concerning, 1888
Mining industry, 4007-8
Montreal income tax office, ques. 2905
Murray Bay, ferry, 4335
Naturalization, 4111-31
Judicial vs. administrative powers, 4111
Newspapers and periodicals, publication of ownership and control, 1562, 2016, 2024-30, 4482
Nile Voyageurs, 4380
Ocean rates, 1051
Orders in Council, government by, 2554
Ottawa City, agreement with, 4248-50, 4380-3
Ottawa highways, 2792
Paradis, Mr., claim of, 3189
Paris agency, 1901
Parliament Building, 4621
Peace Treaty, 3473
Ratification of, 3937
Text, receipt of, 2096

Lemieux, Hon. Rodolphe—Con.
Pensions, 4186, 4200-4, 4206-9
"Unmarried wife," 4275, 4278, 4284-6
Amdt., neg. on div., 4338
Pilotage—Canada Shipping Act Amdt., 2805
Press, The, attitude of, 2917. See also under this head Newspapers
Proprietary medicines, 2488, 2492, 3939
Purchasing Commission, 3216, 4445
Advertising, 3232
Amdt. (six months' hoist), 3220; neg. on div. 3226
Exclusive power, 3232
Supplies that may be purchased, 3238-9
Religious conscientious objectors, 781, 784
Rental of buildings for the Government, 3236
Returned soldiers as mining prospectors, 4045
Rimouski and overseas mail, 886
St. Charles River improvements, Belanger vs. The King, 1021, 1026
St. Lawrence River water powers, 886, 1796, 1901, 4048
Schools and religious teaching, 2415
Seigniorial rights, 2787
Shell Oil Company, 929, 4070
Shipbuilding, transportation, trade, 2227
Sifton, Sir Clifford, office in London, ques. 1908
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 2762, 2765, 2771
Technical education, 3171
Titles, 2742
Trade and Commerce Department, 2171, 2227-9
Transatlantic mail service, 1711
Vancouver harbour, 4017-9
Votes and Proceedings, and Journals, 3292
War expenditures ($350,000,000), 2169-71
"Any measures deemed necessary or advisable," 2172, 2241
Washington, representation at, 1075, 2075-7, 2201
Witley Camp riot, 3472
Woman masquerading as man, 2440, 2808
Woman suffrage, 4638
Ypres war memorial, 4465

Lennie, Mr. R. S., ques. 1612

Lesage, Mr. Joseph Edmond (Hochelaga)
Montreal, conveyance of mails, ques. 979
Public health—Orders in Council, 1369
Registration of defaulters, ques. 610

Letter Carriers, 1341. See also Civil Service

Letter postage rate, ques. 745, 4621

Lévis
Aqueduct, ques. 1789
Rifle Association, ques. 1213
Station, 2458

Lewis, Mr. J. H., 270

L'Hereux, Major Napoleon, ques. 978

Library of Parliament
Committee, 114-5
Report, 2

Life-saving stations, ques. 606, 2850

Lighthouses and keepers, 2608-13

Little Current, 2789

Little Sands, 2609

Live Stock Act Amdt. Bill. Res., 1570; 1r., 1572; 2r., com., 2061; 3r., 2143

Livestock, shipments, inspection, 2603

Livingstone's Cove, 2780

Loans
Allied countries, to, ques. 2565
Imperial Government, to, ques. 1215
Printing of bonds in both languages, 4475
Temporary, outstanding, report tabled, 138
$100,000,000, New York, cost of, ques. 1907
$75,000,000, 4198
$100,000,000 Loan Bill. Res., 1r., 4242; 2r., com., 4243; 3r., 4335

Loggie, Mr. William Stewart (Northumberland, N.B.)
Bankruptcy Bill, 2005, 2012
Budget, 3651. Free food, 3651; manufacturers' profits, 3652; cost of living—wheat prices—Union Government, 3653
Fish, refrigerator service, 2890
Live Stock Amdt. Bill—cold storage, 2063
Lobster, canned, 714-727
Pilotage, 2610, 2805
Steamship services
Newcastle, Neguac and Escuminac, 1303
West Indies, 1287-8
Weights and measures, 2156

Lunenburg Harbour, 2607

Lyons Fair, 3840

Macauley, Capt. A. C. See Military Service, Guelph Novitiate

Macdonald, Mr. E. M., trade discrimination, cable from, 140

Macdonell, soldier imprisoned, 1434

Mackenzie & Mann. See Canadian National; Railway Act Consolidation

Mackie, Mr. Henry Arthur (East Edmonton)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 347. League of Nations, 348; Canada's national status—Province of Quebec—tariff, 349; freedom of the Press and of the Bench, 350; military service defaulters—Peace Conference and attendance of Prime Minister—war indemnity—education, provincial rights, 351; autocracy and democracy, 352

Mackie, Mr. Henry Arthur—Con.
Canadian National Railway
Extension of time, 1713-9, 1726, 1745
Public ownership, 1745
Canadian Northern Railway
Arbitration, ques. 1214
Bonds, ques. 4241
Equipment Trust, ques. 4240
Securities, ques. 1214
Civil Service Act Amdt., 2921
Civil Service and returned soldiers—Rangers Gauvreau and Trudel, 2921
Coal, railway contracts for, 1909
Criminal Code—neglect, 4362
Daylight Saving, 910
Deputy Minister of Railways, ques. 1215
Fairweather, Mr., ques. 2145
Good roads, 4422
Henry and Ferguson, Messrs, ques. 2045
House of Commons, difficulty in hearing speakers, 1211
Housing scheme, 2538-9, 2548
Immigration, 1932
Labour situation in the West, 2799
Militia, permanent force, 3978
Naturalization, 4262-8
Pensions, "Unmarried wife," 4282, 4286
Post office appointments after strike, 4354
Railway Act Consolidation Bill, 2619-22, 2628, 2652
Judges, transportation on railways, 2640-1
Schools, national, 2430
Ukrainians, 1932-8

Mackie, Mr. Herbert J. (North Renfrew)
Canadian National Railway, coal, res., 2906
Mail contracts, 2081
Pembroke wharf, 2787
Pensions, case of Col. G. Hunter Ogilvie, 2761
Upper Ottawa dams, 2796

MacLennan, Judge F. S., ques. 1075, ques. 1106, ques. 1906, ques. 2905

Maclean, Hon. A. K. (Minister without portfolio)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 272. Peace Conference, attendance of Prime Minister, 272; finance, public loans, 274; Civil Service Commission, appointments, methods, Secretary, 274
Air Board Bill, 1864, 2050-6
Buoys, Atlantic coast, 1910
Bureau of Statistics, 3838-9
Canada Grain Act, administration, 3837-8, 4094-4109
Canada Grain Act Amdt., 3942
Senate amdts., 4664
Canada Trade Commission, 4493-4

Maclean, Hon. A. K.—Con.
Canada Year Book, 3839
Canadian Engineering Standards Association, 3842
Canadian National Railway
Directors, payment of, 1654
First meeting, 1660
Head office, 1649
Civil Service
Commission. See also, under this title, Address
Appointments, 3230
Returned soldiers and women representation on, 2909, 2918
Salaries and contingencies, 4496-7
Efficiency, Committee of Inquiry, 1556-7
Labour and statistics, 4672
Overmanning of, 4604
Reclassification, 2203, 3519, 3927-8. See also under this head, Civil Service Act Amdt.
Returned soldiers and, 1001, 2921
Trade and Commerce Department, salaries, 4606
War bonus, 2924-8
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2909-22
Arthur Young & Co., 2111
Commissioners, 2914
Salaries of civil servants, 2914, 2922
Superannuation, 2915
Coasting, reciprocity in, 1209
Copyright, 4022
Editorial Com., 1566
Eight-hour day, 2856
Fertilizers Act Amdt. Bill, 1568, 2286-90, 2463-7
Fisheries
British Columbia licenses, 933, 936
Fish Inspection Act Amdt. Bill, 949-952
Flax, bounty, 3842
Foreign credits, 3832-6, 3831
Foreign trade
Lyons and other fairs, 3340
North Europe, Canada barred, 1909
High cost of living, 2908
House of Commons—Free conference with Senate, no suspension of sitting of House, 3249
Industrial and scientific research, 3341
Industrial unrest
Strikes
Montreal, 1566, 1615, 1663
Winnipeg, 2508, 2799, 2854-5, 2665, 3845
Danger to constituted authority, after-war conditions, etc., 3046
Magdalen Islands—Pictou service, 625
Marking of containers, 2344-5
Meat and Canned Foods Act Amdt.—lobsters, 713-727

Maclean, Hon. A. K.—Con.
Montreal power strike, 1566
Newspapers and periodicals, publication of ownership and control, 1565
Nova Scotia fishing fleet, 1866
Panama Canal, trade via, 1283
Patent, Trade Mark and Design, Copyright and Timber Marking Act Amdt., 4021
Patents Branch, 3808
Proprietary Medicine Bill, 2479-87, 2492-3, 2653-4, 3823-7, 3939-40
Royal Navy, Canadians in, 1568
Shipping and shipping rates, 4684-6
Statistics Act Amdt., 139, 595-9
Steamship services, 1105-6, 1282-1305
Australia, etc., 1105
Baddeck and Iona, 1300
European ports, subsidy not needed, 1291
Freight rates, 3830
Froude's Point and Lockeport, 1301
Great Britain, 1282
Gulf of St. Lawrence, 3827-8
Halifax and West Cape Breton, 1301
Mulgrave, 1302-4
Newfoundland, 1283, 1294
Petit de Grat and Mulgrave, 1303
Petitcodiac and Cumberland, 1303
Pictou, Mulgrave and Cheticamp, 1304
Port Mulgrave and Bras d'Or, 1304
South Africa, 1289
Sydney-Bras d'Or, 3829
West Indies and South America, 1283
Trade Commissioners, 3831
Units of electrical measure, 139
Weights and Measures Act Amdt. Bill, 952-4, 2149-59, 2290
Senate amdt., 4021

Maclean, Mr. W. F. (South York)
Canadian National Railway, 1824
Cost of Living Com., 4317, 4325
Daylight Saving, 906
Freight rates and Government-owned railways, 3697
Grand Trunk Pacific receivership, 672
Non-ferrous metals—nickel, 3681-2
Railway Act Consolidation—Municipal and provincial freight bargains, 4141, 4147, 4150
Railway question and tariff question, 675
Railways, public ownership of, 672, 3694
Senate and House of Commons, 643
Senate reform, 4167
Tariff and public ownership, 3694
Weights and measures, 2157
Wheat prices, 4466

MacNutt, Mr. Thomas (Saltcoats)
Budget, 3567. Production and taxation, 3568; land tax—manufacturers' prices, 3569

McCoig, Mr. Archibald Blake (Kent, Ont.)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 250. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—tariff—free tractors and ditchers, 251; prices, competition in agricultural implements, 252; highways—housing—commissions, Food Board, 253; Civil Service—demobilization of men in camps in Canada, 254
Board of Commerce, 4501-5
Budget, 3601. Production and economy, 3602; profiteering — conscription of wealth, 3603; agricultural implement duties—tractors, 3604; food prices, 3605
Daylight Saving, 892, 903
Fertilizers Act Amdt., 1569, 2465
Government railways, private cars, 1589
Livestock Act Amdt., 1572
Oleomargarine, 2201
Rural mail couriers, pay of, 2926
Weights and measures, 2157
Wheat, price of 1919 crop, 4466

McCrea, Mr. Francis N. (Sherbrooke)
Bank mergers, 1096
Board of Commerce, 4515
Canadian National Railway, 1850
Civil Service organization, 1271
Daylight Saving, 925
Deputy Minister of Interior, 2443
Good roads, 4410
Grand Trunk Pacific receivership, 1154
Newsprint control, 4541, 4547
Seed grain, 1033-5
Tariff, Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt., 838

McCurdy, Mr. F. B. (Colchester)
Civil Service appointments, ques., 2049
Intercolonial Railway rates, 4170
Public Buildings, 4610
Truro, 4611
Resignation from Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 4676
Wounded soldiers, Civil Service positions for, res., 981; withdrawn, 1002

McDougald, Mr. Bryson, ques. 2398

McFall, Mr., Food Controller, ques. 4464

McGibbon, Mr. Peter (Muskoka)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 181. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—Liberal party, 181; Peace Conference, attendance of Prime Minister—public debt and resources, 182; returned soldiers—tubercular cases, 183; highways—public health, 184

McGibbon, Mr. Peter—Con.
British Nationality, Naturalization, etc., Bill, 3823
Canadian Expeditionary Force, patients in England, ques. 615
Civil Service Commission, returned soldier for, 2918
Divorce Court Bill, 3779, 3790
Good roads, 3909
Housing scheme, 2534, 2547
Interned enemy aliens, ques. 844
Jones, General Guy Carleton, ques. 615
Military Service, Guelph Novitiate, 1244
Militia, Permanent Force, 3974
Paralytic military patients in Euclid Hall, ques. 749
Pay and Allowance Board, ques. 3998
Pensions, 4172
Board, ques. 3066
Payments, ques. 1307
Pratt, Col. A. C., statements of, ques. 1213, ques. 1216
Proprietary medicines, 2480-6, 2492, 2654, 2825-6
Public Health Department, appointments, 1182
Purchasing Commission, 3227
Scientific research, 1193, 1371
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 2767-8, 2774-6
Deputy Minister, ques. 2586
Staff, ques. 4240
Soldiers' Land Settlement, 3886
Technical education, 3174, 3805
Telephone companies, 2648
Totally disabled soldiers, ques. 1213
Transatlantic flight, ques. 2143
Tuberculosis in cattle, 2988

McGibbon, Mr. Peter Robert (Argenteuil)
Farming will save the country, 2963
Lachute custom house, ques. 970
Live Stock Act Amdt., 2066-7
Military management, charges of Gen. Smart, etc., 1502
Soldiers' land settlement, 3870

McGregor, Mr. Alexander (Pictou)
Pictou registrar, ques. 2144

McGregor, Mr. James D., cattle breeder, 2995

McIsaac, Mr. James (Kings, P.E.I.)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 248. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—Canada's status after the war, 248; franchise—alien enemies—Opposition critics—Peace Conference and presence of Prime Minister, 249; Liberal party—national unity, 250
Boughton Island, 2784
"Brant," steamer, 2607

McIsaac, Mr. James—Con.
Budget, 3517, 3519. Policy of protection—debt and revenue, 3518; reciprocity, 3519; labour troubles, East and West, 3520; public debt, 3521
Divorce Court Bill, 3779
Good roads, 3906
Judges' salaries, 2306, 4214, 4372
Little Sands, 2609
Magdalen Islands-Pictou service, 624
North Lake, 2784
Pictou-Montague service, 1304
Prince Edward Island Railway, 3190
Prohibition, 2687
Proprietary medicines, 2486
Souris fish drier, ques. 1662, ques. 3470
Technical education, 3799, 3893, 4136

McKenzie, Mr. Daniel D. (Cape Breton North and Victoria). See also Leader of the Opposition
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 21. Chosen leader of the Opposition—congratulations to mover and seconder—Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 22; returned soldiers—distribution of population, 23; Canada's war record—orders in council—franchise, 24; highways—public health, 25; capital and labour, 26; economy—standard of living—Liberal party—"Light in the window," 27
Agricultural implements, freight rates on, 4010
Agriculture, increased production, 2959-60
Small farms, 2975
Agriculture Department, publications, 2989-91
Air Board Bill, 2051-2, 2059
"Alert," The, 1966
Alien enemies, 773. See also under this head, Immigration
Baddeck and Iona wharves, 2611
Bankruptcy Bill, 933
Proof of debts, 2264
Trustee, 1981, 1986-8
Remuneration of, 2012
Replacement by creditors, 2003
Banks, excess circulation, 635
Board of Commerce, 4471, 4530, 4554, 4566
Bronze coins, 638
Budget, 3487. Reply to Mr. Cowan, 3487; coal and iron duties, 3490; bounties and protective duties, 3491; public expenditures, 3493; cost of living, 3494; Hon. Mr. Rowell, 3495; Government control of profits—"produce and save," 3496; fisheries, 3497; aliens—labour, 3498; industrial court proposed, 3499; party government — Liberal party's McKenzie, Mr. Daniel D.—Con.

Budget—Con.
trade policy, 3501; lessons of the war, 3504
Business of the House
Measures forthcoming, 1342, 3999
Business profits and income taxes, 3709
Cabinet Ministers in Senate, 1009, 2073
Canada Evidence Act Amdt., 1389-93
Canada Medical Act Amdt., 3240
Canada Shipping Act Amdt., 3755-6, 3935
Canadian National Railway Bill
Capital stock, 1842
Committee, reference to, suggested, 1621
Constituent companies, 1694
Construction of lines, extension of time for, 1709, 1719, 1721, 1730, 1760-7
Directors, 1656, 1661
Responsibility to Parliament, 1674
Executive Com., 1668
Expenditures, how controlled, 2115
First meeting, amdt., 1667
Fiscal year, 1705
General policy, 1730
Labour troubles, reported, 1617
Lines to be included, 1677-80
Management and "politics," 1675
Parliamentary control, 1418
Power to acquire securities of other companies, 1862
Public ownership, 1398-9, 1730, 1750, 1757, 2115
Questions asked, 1610
Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association —oath, 2016, 2295
Canadians in distress abroad, 2600
Canadians in the war—the nation's gratitude, 4698
Canals
Positions on, and returned soldiers, 3176-7
Welland, deepening of, 3180
Cape Breton public works, 2782
Censorship: Lewis, Mr. J. H., case of, 270
Christmas Island-East Bay postal route, 2083
Civil Service
Commission, 3234
Efficiency, special com., 1560, 2913
Extra employees during war, 4706
Patronage, 3234
Sessional employees, bonus, 2313-4, 2927
Clark, Mr. Michael, and protection, 3748
Closure, interpretation of rule, 1796
Coal, briquetting of, 4489
Coal used by government railways, ques., 611
Cold storage, 2980-1, 2986
Combines, 4601

McKenzie, Mr. Daniel D.—Con.
Corporation, influence in public affairs, 2039
Cost of Living Com., 4320
Criminal Code
Seditious books, etc., 4368
Sexual offences, 2166, 4689
Unlawful associations, 4356
Customs, preventive service, 966
Customs warehouses as storage places for liquor, 956
Customs war tax, 3708
Deserters, punishment of, 72
Divorce Court Bill, 3783-9
Divorce, Privy Council decision, 4535
Dominion Elections Act, 4623, 4648, 4655-7
Dominion Forest Reserves and Parks Act Amdt., 2298-9
Mineral claims, 2300
Dominion Steel Company, 2251, 2254
Dominion water powers, 2519, 2531
Economy in expenditure, 4245
Electric and Power Companies Bill, 4587
Elevators and American grain, 3837-8
Employment works and contracts, 1604-6
Fertilizers Act Amdt., 2288
Finance Department salaries, 4477
Fire prevention, 1578-9, 1583
Fisheries
British Columbia canning, 2098
Guardians, 2890-3
Inspection, 949, 951
Maritime Provinces, 2896
Pickled fish, of, 2898
Fisheries Act Amdt. (Salmon), 3759
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payment to, 865
Flint, the late Thomas Barnard, 1341
Foreign credits, 1359, 2188, 2196, 3832
Gabarus beach protection, 2780
Government advertising, 2038
Government by Order in Council, 4488
Government Printing Bureau, strike, 513
Grand Trunk Pacific receivership, 651, 1145, 1161
Government's legal position, 695
Grand Trunk Railway Bill, 1184
Gunning, Mr. John G., 1435, 1483
Halifax harbour master, 2694, 2801
Halifax-St. Pierre-Miquelon mails, 2092
Health Department, 4380
Highways, 731, 4408, 4431-3
Horse racing, 4466
House of Commons
Privileges of—Senate's action, 642
Procedure, reinstatement, preliminary motion under rule 25, 398
Saturday and morning sittings, 3376
Vacancies, 1615
Housing scheme, 2555, 2559, 2564

McKenzie, Mr. Daniel D.—Con.
Immigration and Colonization
Aliens, 2584
Chinese, 2599
Clearance, 1975
Deportees returning, 1977
Illiterates, 1954-67
Inspection, 1973
Lands and land policy, 2575, 2582-3
Nova Scotia, to, 2582-6
Income tax, judges, 3175-9
Indians and Eskimo, 4669
Industrial unrest—Government responsibility; cost of living, capital and labour—tribunal to settle disputes, etc., 3051, 3499
Inland Revenue Act Amdt., 1588
Irrigation Act Amdt., 633
Judges' salaries, 2308, 2955-9, 4368, 4373, 4437-9, 4661
Kinmel Camp, 462
Labour disputes, conference, 2908, 3051
Laurier, Sir Wilfrid, death of, 7
Little Bras d'Or, 2789
Live stock, pure-bred, 2992-7
Live Stock Act Amdt., 1570, 2062-6
Loans made and to be made, 2245-50
$100,000,000, 4245
$75,000,000, 4198
Lobster packing, 2989
Magistrates and Military Service, 1313
Mail contracts, 2079-83
McRae, Col. J. D., 2234
Migratory birds, 2165
Military management, charges of Gen. Smart, etc., 1529
Military Service Act, 1313
Defaulters, 4238
Guelph Novitiate, 1257-9
Mining Act, need of, 425-7
Minister of Railways, annual statement expcted, 1588-9
Ministerial changes, 139
Montreal and Quebec Harbour Commissioners, 3757
National harbours, control of, 3742, 3745
Naturalization, 4265-73
Naval service
Charges of Mr. Duff, 2842
Halifax, demobilization of men, 2224
Rebuff by master of N.R. 30, 2947
Neil's harbour, 2781-2
Newsprint control, 4548, 4662
Newspapers and periodicals, publication of ownership and control, 2038
Opposition and the tariff, 3701
Orders in Council, 1368
Ottawa City, agreement with, 4248
Ottawa Street Railway strike, 4535
Partisan appointments, 2095

McKenzie, Mr. Daniel D.—Con.
Peat, 4490
Pensions, 3000, 4187-90, 4208
"Unmarried wife," 4274, 4293
Pilotage, 2806-7, 3158, 3160
Post office revenue and expenses, 2037
Printing Bureau strike, 312
Public Health Bill, 1186, 1189, 1203
Social welfare, 1193-4
Public ownership, 1398-9, 1730, 1750, 1757, 2115
Purchasing Commission, 3228-39, 3810, 3814, 4454
Radiotelegraph service, 2849
Railway Act Consolidation, 2617-33
Assistant Chief Railway Commissioner, 2631-3
Disagreement with Senate, proposed three-year limit, 4169
Telephone companies — compensation, 2649, 4168
Transmission lines on highways; consent of municipalities, 3090, 3098, 3103, 3115
Railway crossings, 937
Railway rates, municipal and provincial bargains, 4142
Read, Mr. Joseph, M.P., death of, 1209
Reclamation of Dominion lands, 639
Royal Naval College, 2851
St. Charles River works, Belanger vs. The King, 1025
St. John harbour, 2359, 4306, 4337-8
Scotch Cove, breakwater, 2782
Seed grain, 1036, 1041
Shipbuilding, 2251, 2254
Soldiers' war gratuity, 2234
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 4681
Soldiers' Land Settlement, 2778, 3870
Default, re-sale, 3883
Exemption from legal process, 3885-7
Expropriation, 3889-90
Statistics Act Amdt., 595-9
Steamship subsidies
Baddeck and Iona, 1296, 1299
Home prices and, 1292
Newfoundland, 1295, 3829
Sydney-Bras d'Or, 3829
Strikes
Calgary, postal employees, 3194
Post office appointments after strike, 4351
Winnipeg, 2855, 2953, 3070, 3241, 3328, 3472, 3587, 3843, 3927
Trial of arrested parties, 3740
Supply, interim vote, 1919-20, 842
Sydney port, charges, 3158
Tariff, Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt., 808
Taylor, Senator George, death of, 885

McKenzie, Mr. Daniel D.—Con.
Technical education, 3166, 3173
Payment of subsidy by population, 3893
Provinces and, 3894-8
Titles, 1471, 2703
Trade Commissioners, 4494
Tuberculosis in cattle, 2989
"Tyrian," steamer, 2793
Vancouver harbour, 4017-20
Vocational training, under-age soldiers, 1019
War expenditure, 1359
Vote of $350,000,000, 2166, 2187, 2198, 2224-6, 2232
"Any measure deemed necessary or advisable," 2244
War indemnity, Canada's claim, 777-780
War Measures Act, 2148
Weights and measures, 952-3, 2154-8, 2290
Welland Canal contracts, 1597-1610
Wrecking plants, 2604
Yarmouth bar, 2783
Yukon Act Amdt., 593-5
Yukon placer mining, 630-2

McLean, Mr. Hugh Havelock (Royal)
Bankruptcy Bill, 1989, 1992-4
New trustee (amdt.), 2002-4
Notice of purpose of meeting, 2014
Order of court, 2010
Security, default, 2000
Trustee, remuneration, 2011

McLean, Mr., Assistant Chief Railway Commissioner, 2631

McMaster, Mr. Andrew Ross (Brome)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 32. League of Nations, 32; financial position — taxation — franchise, 33; congratulations to mover and seconder—national unity—labour and capital, 34; Bolshevism, 35; Siberian force, 36; orders in council —party government, 37; finance and tariff, 38
Agricultural implements, freight on, 4009
Alpine Club, 4046
Bankruptcy Bill, 1985, 1992-5, 2006-8, 2265-74, 2278-80
Beef production, 2962
Board of Commerce, 4528-33, 4549-54, 4561
Budget, 3242; amdt. moved, 3260
War expenditures—purchase of Canadian Northern Railway, 3243; national debt—Canadian currency, 3244; taxation, 3247, 3251; trade balance, 3250; estimates, 3251; "Canadian Official Record"—Bureau of Public Information—shipbuilding—housing scheme—Roumanian loan, 3252; high cost of living—tariff, 3254; duty on coal, 3256; mergers, 3259

McMaster, Mr. Andrew Ross—Con.
Canadian National Railway
Annual meeting, 1647, 1805
Capital stock, 1821
Construction of lines, extension of time for, 1715-7
Directors, amdt., 1632; withdrawn, 1636
Expenses to be paid out of revenues, 1701, 1705, 2111
First meeting, 1659
Government policy asked for, 1396-7
Orders in Council, 1692
Parliament and expenditure, 2111
Canadian Press news service, 4482-6
Cheese, 2962
Civil Service, equality of conditions in, 4479
Combines, 4591
Criminal Code, 4356-62
Aliens and British subjects, 4358-9
Sexual offences, 2161
Unlawful associations, 4356
Dominion Elections Act, 4658
Dominion Iron & Steel, and Nova Scotia Steel & Coal, 2342
Dominion water powers, 2526-9
Fertilizers Act Amdt., 2289-90
Fisheries inspectors, 2891
Flour mill machinery, 4006
Good roads, 4389
Government by Order in Council, 2549
Government Employees' Compensation Bill, 940-6
Grain Act Amdt., Appeal Board, 4101
Housing scheme, 2537, 2549
Immigration Act Amdt.—deportation, 1977
Income War Tax
Payment on making return, 3737
Personal and living expenses, 3988-9
Shareholders' profits through "rights," 3727
Unmarried women, 3993
Irrigation Act Amdt., 633
Judges' salaries, Mr. Justice Weir, 4369
Labour's share in railway management, 1823
Lobster, canned, 715-6
Militia
Permanent force, 3967-9
Policy and expenditure, 1889
Milk—marking of containers, 2345
Mines Branch, 4490-1
Newsprint control, 4539
Objectionable words addressed to, point of order, 2538
Oil for asphalt manufacture, 4005
Ottawa, Wellington street, 2497
Parliament Buildings, Hall of Fame, 2503
Patronage, 1271, 1278

McMaster, Mr. Andrew Ross—Con.
Pensions, 4280, 4292
Grandjean, Julien, case of, 4032
"Unmarried wife," 4280
Press, the, and Government advertising, 1822
Public health, 1377
Purchasing Commission, 3222, 4449
Railway Act Consolidation Bill, 2631
Seed grain, 1040, 1043
Shipbuilding, 2255
Steamship subsidies, 1290
Subsidies, policy, 1298
Tariff—amdt. to Supply, 794
Titles, 1464, 2710
Transmission lines on highways, consent of municipalities, 3110
Vocational training for under-age soldiers, 1015
Wheeler, Mr. S., wheat grower, 2973
Wireless on Government vessels, 2809
Yukon placer mining, 631

McQuarrie, Mr. William Garland (New Westminster)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 419, 424. British Empire and Canada, 419; Royalty and aristocracy and the war—Canada's war record—late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 420—new leader of the Opposition—Peace Conference, attendance of Prime Minister—Ministers and their duties, 421; Fraser river works, 422; Canadian Northern and New Westminster, 423; Canadian National Railway, 424-5; New Westminster and railways—British Columbia fisheries, 426; International Commission, Major Burdé's charges, 427; waste of fish, 428; Chief Inspector of Fisheries, office—income tax, abuses, 429; business profits tax—highways, 430; highway through British Columbia mountains—"Official Record"—technical schools—Health Department, 431; cost of living—immigration, Orientals in Canada, 433; Bolshevism—returned soldiers, 433, 435
Canadian National Railway, director from British Columbia, 1629
Civil Service war bonus, 2927
Daylight Saving, 904
Fisheries, British Columbia inspector, ques. 1534
Good roads, 3904
Railway Act Consolidation
Amdts., opportunity to make, sought, 2929, 3476, 4064, 4137
Municipal agreement, 4137

McQuarrie, Mr. William Garland—Con.
Railway Act Consolidation—Con.
Transmission lines on highways; consent of municipalities, 3095
Water-borne traffic, rates, 2948

Magdalen Islands, 623, 1910, 2794
Pictou service, 625

Magistrates. See Military Service

Maharg, Mr. John A. (Maple Creek)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 529. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 529; Peace Conference—Party and the farmers, 530; highways—housing—prohibition, 531; farmers' platform, 532; tariff, 534; manufacturers and Western farmers, 535; Union Government, 536; question of markets, 537; grain prices, 539; possible by-elections, 540
Bankruptcy Bill, provinces and, 2007
Budget, 3634. Returned soldiers—Hon. Mr. Crerar, 3635; direct taxation—freights, 3636; Hon. Mr. Calder, 3637; Western farmers' organizations, 3638; Western farmers and co-operation and income tax, 3639; apples—oleomargarine—labour troubles, 3640; regulation of food prices—land values tax, 3641; tariff reductions, 3642
Canada Grain Act Amdt., 4957-65, 4084-7
Appeal Board, 4101-5
Excess profits tax, ques. 977
Franchise, 4641
Good roads, 3899, 3910, 3925
National harbours and grain trade, 2749-52
Ploughs, duties on, 3690-6
Amdt., 3704
Seed grain, 1038, 1043
Soldiers' Land Settlement, 3869
Incumbrances, 3884
Initial payments, 3881
Wagons, sleighs, etc., duties on, 3707

Mahon, Mr. C. E., ques. 1612, ques. 1790, ques. 2295

Manion, Mr. Robert James (Fort William and Rainy River)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech (seconder), 17. Bi-lingualism, 17; late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—Victory—demobilization, 18; Canada's war record, 19; employment bureaux—Canada's development—war work of women, 20; public health—immigration—Canada's duty, 21
Budget, 3280. Tariff changes, 3280; high cost of living, profiteering, 3281; New Zealand's experience, 3282; profiteering and revolution condemned—

Manion, Mr. Robert James—Con.
Budget—Con.
natural resources, development of, 3283
Canada Grain Act Amdt., 3943, 3957
Appeal Board, 4103-4
Canadian National Railway, 1803
Civil Service Commission, returned soldier as member, 2909
Elevators and American grain, 3838
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 871
Military management, charges of General Smart, etc., 1526
Militia pensions, 2760
Parliament Buildings, 2339
Pensions, 4199, 4203
Case of John Taylor, 3001
"Unmarried wife," 4281
Proprietary medicines, 2491-3, 3824-6
Public Health Bill, 1179, 1202-3
Royal Northwest Mounted Police, 2325
Shipbuilding, 2259-60
Slate River—Roslyn station, ques. 3191
Technical education, 3798
Titles, 1475, 2718
Wounded soldiers, Civil Service positions for, 985

Manitoba Cold Storage Company, 4695
ity and, 711

Manitoba Surface Waters, Dominion author-

Manufacturers. See Tariff

Maple Syrup and Sugar, ques. 645

Marcil, Hon. Charles (Bonaventure)
Armed vessels on Great Lakes, 1261
Atlantic, Quebec and Western Railway, ques. 605
Canadian National Railway
Branch lines, 1677, 1681-2
Directorate, representation of provinces, 1670
Carleton, Que., mail service, ques. 727
Civil Service reclassification, ques. 610
Fisheries jurisdiction, ques. 609
Good roads, 4424
Matapedia Valley, ques. 1662
Government vessels, employees on, ques. 609
Matapedia aqueduct, ques. 745
Naturalization, 4258-9
New Carlisle postmaster, ques. 727
Oyster culture, ques. 609
Pensions, 4178, 4201, 4205-9
Port Daniel lobster hatchery, ques. 609
Quebec Oriental Railway, ques. 605
Restigouche Indian Reserve, ques. 610
Strikes, 1663
Vocational training, ques. 971
West Indies, trade with, ques. 1533

Marcile, Mr. Joseph Edmond (Bagot)
National Service registration, ques. 1075, ques. 1307, ques. 2296

Marine and Fisheries
Committee, 114
Department
Quebec buildings, ques. 1217, ques. 1439, ques. 1439
Report tabled, 40
Staff and salaries, 2600

Marine Hospitals, 1201

Market Gardening, profits of, 764

Marlow, Col. F. W., ques. 3066

Marshall, Mr. David (East Elgin)
Canned goods, net weight, 2153
Daylight Saving, 903

Marshall, Lieut. Hall, ques. 1790

Martin, Mr. Peter Francis (Halifax)
Pilotage, 2808

Massett, wharf, ques. 603

Masters and Mates, examination, 2601

Matapedia
Aqueduct, ques. 745
Bridge, 2790
Highway expenditure, ques. 1662

Matches, stamps on, 969

Mayrand, Mr. Hormisdas (Maskinongé)
Coast protection, ques. 745
Royal Naval Canadian Volunteer Reserve, ques. 603
Guinness, Hon. Rupert, and, ques. 603

Meat and Canned Foods Act Amdt. (Lobsters). Res., 713; 1r., 727; 2r., ref. to standing com., 2097

Meat Supply and foreign demand, 3831

Medicines. See Proprietary

Meighen, Hon. Arthur (Minister of the Interior and Superintendent General of Indian Affairs)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 514. Tariff, duty on implements, 514; freedom of Parliament—party government, 515; War-time Elections Act, 518; disfranchisement—Canada at the Peace Conference, 518; Union government, 521
Alien enemies, 756
Alpine Club, 4046-7
Bills to be introduced, 4456
Board of Commerce, 4466, 4524, 4528-9, 4549-67
British subjects interned in Canada, 1713
Canada Evidence Act Amdt. Bill, 1388-94

Meighen, Hon. Arthur—Con.
Canadian National Railway Bill
Abandoning lines, 1709
Capital stock, 1776-8
Advances and securities, 1778
Canadian Northern subsidiaries, 1784
Closure of debate, 1789
Interpretation of rule, 1796
Constituent companies, 1694
Construction of lines, extension of time for, 1715, 1727, 1760, 1765
Schedule, 1785
Directors, 1624-7, 1653-6, 1783
Executive Com., 1668-74
Expenses to be paid out of revenues, 1703, 1781-2
First meeting, 1664-6
Fiscal year, 1706
Governor in Council instead of shareholders, 1675-6
Head office, 1652
Inquiries, 1782
Labour representation, 2139
Lines to be included, 1679
Parliamentary authority for construction, 1779
Railway and Expropriation Acts to apply, 1695-6
Securities of other companies, 1781; amdt., 1782; withdrawn, 1862
Work for general advantage of Canada, 1706
Criminal Code amdts.
1. Unlawful associations, concealed weapons, etc., 4134, 4355-67
Senate amdts., 4660
2. Sexual Offences, 1710, 2159, 2164
Senate amdt., 4634, 4689-90
3. Fire prevention, 1573-85
Combines Bill, 4198, 4567-70, 4588-4601
Cost of Living Com., 4327
County Court judgeships, vacancies, 1796
Daylight Saving, 1422
Dominion Forest Reserves and Parks Act Amdt.
1. Corrective, 1789, 2297-2305
2. Land for soldiers, 2953, 3070-3
Dominion Lands Act Amdt., 1111, 1112
Pre-emptions, power sites, mining, timber, etc., 4251-4
Dominion Lands and Parks. See above, Dominion Forest Reserves and Parks
Dominion Lands Surveys Act Amdt., 72, 930-1
Expenditures, 4046-56
Dominion Power Board, 4048
Dominion water powers, 2291, 2512-31
Doukhobor lands, 2044
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 852
Forestry and timber limits, 4053-4

Meighen, Hon. Arthur—Con.
Grand Trunk Pacific Railway receivership, 1149-59
Greek Catholics in communion with the Church of Rome, 1383-8
Guelph Novitiate, 1227, 1258-9
Indian lands, mining rights, etc., 4254-7
Indians
Greater production, 4664
Liquor and, 4063
Medical attendance, 4060
Ontario and Quebec, 4668
Reserves, roads and bridges on, 4057-60
Schools, 4063
Tuberculosis and, 4062
Industrial unrest—Winnipeg strike, pretensions of strikers, duties and responsibilities of Government, Bolshevism, collective bargaining, etc., 3035
Interpretation Act Amdt. (Superior Courts), 1957, 2313, 2959
Irrigation, 4603
Irrigation Act Amdt., 71, 632-3, 696
Judges Act Amdt. Bill (British Columbia), 2305-13, 2954-9
Judges Act Amdt. Bill (salaries), 4063-4212-38, 4435-9
Senate amdts., 4661
Juvenile Delinquents Bill, 1383, 3843
Langelier, Magistrate, 1324
Mennonites and Hutterites, 1260
Migratory birds, 4604
Convention, 2164-6
Military Service Act
Amdts. by Order in Council, 2294
Defaulters, 971, 1910, 2198, 4238
Uniformity of administration, 1308
Wright County, administration, 2400-2
Mining laws, 4257
Oil-bearing lands, 929, 4136
Pelee Island, 4042
Post office appointments after strike, 4349
Railway Belt Act Amdt., 5, 592
Railway policy of Government, 1397
Reclamation of Dominion Lands by Drainage Bill, 71, 639-642, 708-713
Returned soldiers
Government policy concerning, 759
Mining prospectors, as, 4045
St. Lawrence river dams, 886
Seed grain advances, 625-9, 1029-40, 4047, 4054-5
Soldiers' Land Settlement, 2291, 3848-91, 4012-7. See also, under this head, Returned soldiers
Land from forest reserves, 2953
Royal Air Force, inclusion of, 1438
Surveys, 4049-51
Taber irrigation district, 4210-2
Tuberculosis and Indians, 4062

Meighen, Hon. Arthur—Con.
War Measures Act Extension Bill, 1433, 1566, 2097, 2148
Water-power, 4049
Winnipeg strike, 3845
Yukon Act Amdt. Bill, 5, 592
Yukon, government of, 4045-6
Yukon Placer Mining Act Amdt. Bill, 71, 629-632

Members of Parliament, accommodation for, 2498

Mennonites, 1260, 1913, 1920-7. See also Immigration

Mercier, Cardinal, 1482, ques. 1611

Messeroy, Mr. John A., ques. 1610

Mewburn, Major-General Hon. S. C. (Minister of Militia and Defence)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 319. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—Siberian expedition, 319; demobilization, 322; pensions—soldiers' land settlement, 323; dispersal areas, documentation, transportation, 324; the returned man and his job, 328; priority in return—war service badges, orders, decorations and medals, 327; war records and documents, 330; French Canadian Brigade, 331; soldiers' graves, 332
Air Board and Air Service, 2054, 4687
Bruce, Dr., report of, 1483
Canadians in Imperial Service, 1997
Demobilization, 2173-6
Dental Service, and, 2775
Farmers' sons, of, 1958
Ministerial statement, 1793
Portland, 648
Port of debarkation, 2403
Progress of, 4535
St. John, men in garrison, 2236
22nd Battalion, 1616
Enlisted and conscripted men, lists, preparation of, 1908
Guelph Novitiate, 1222
Imperial Guards, 2753
Jenkins report on Canadian Army Medical Corps, 358
Kinmel Camp riots, 315
Military management, charges of General Smart, Col. Pratt and Col. Price, 1493
Military Service Act, defaulters, 1208, 4238
Military trials in England, 1959
Militia
Allowances, 1886
Annual drill, 4495
Associations and bands, 1892
Cadet corps, 1888, 1892

Mewburn, Major-General Hon. S. C.—Con.
Militia—Con.
Command pay, 1886
Engineer services and works, 1892
Headquarters and district staffs, 1893
Returned soldiers and, 1893-8
Peace rank of war officers, 1890
Permanent force, 1898-9, 4495
Rifle ranges, 1894-8
Surveys, 1899
Training areas, camps, 1900
Transport and freight, 1900
Units, war, continuance of, 1887
War record of militia, 1889
Militia Act Amdt. (Permanent Force), 3469, 3966-87
Militia Pensions Act Amdt., 2691-2, 2754-61
Period of service, 2754
Widows and children, 2758
Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, 550
Purchasing Commission, 4448
Roumanian border, proposed Canadian guard, 1618
Siberian expedition, 971
Soldiers
Complaints against authorities, alleged suppression, 1618
Furlough in France, 272
Halifax, discharge or leave, 1663, 1711
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 1896
War expenditure ($350,000,000), 2173
War trophies and paintings, 2043
Winnipeg strike, 2753
Witley Camp riot, 3472

Michaud, Mr. Pius (Restigouche and Madawaska)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 166. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—after-war conditions, 166; women's war work—national unity—highways, 167; railways — tariff — soldiers' dependents, 168
Canadian National Railway, 1816
Clair, N. B., Immigration agent, 2569
Government Employees' Compensation Bill, 944-5
Militia, permanent force, 2969
Returned soldiers, Civil Service positions for, 1000

Middlebro, Mr. William S. (North Grey)
Bankruptcy Bill, 1995, 2266-7, 2279
Board of Commerce Bill, 4559
Second reading—Yeas and nays asked for, 4527
Canadian Pacific Railway Company Bill, 3214
Criminal Code Amdt. (Sexual Offences), 2163

Middlebro, Mr. William S.—Con.
Exportable wheat, ques. 1790
Fire prevention, 1577-82
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 869
Population of cities and provinces, ques. 1535
Prohibition, 2665
Railway Act, disagreement with Senate, power and telephone clauses, 4164
Railway Committee, permission to sit while House is in session, 1864
Revenue, expenditure, ques. 1217

Mignault, Mr., K.C., 462, 4670

Migratory Birds, 4604

Migratory Birds Convention Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 2097; 2r., com., 2164; 3r., 2305

Militarism, 1888

Military Defaulters' Disqualification Bill. 1r., 2198, 2293

Military Escort of Roman Catholic Bishop, ques. 2296

Military Hospitals Commission, 1264. See also Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment

Military Service Act
Administration
Expense of, ques. 601, ques. 645, ques. 749, ques. 973, ques. 1306, ques. 1438
Localities: Montreal, ques. 973; L'Islet, ques. 979; M.D. No. 3, ques. 1076; Hull, ques. 1306; M.D. No. 4, ques. 1439; Wright, 2399
Persons: Archambault, Dr. J. U., ques. 1306; Boudreault, Mr. Benjamin, ques. 1439; Coté, Mr. Louis, ques. 2566; Cousineau, Mr. L., ques. 1306; Harris, Mr. S. L. Dale, 3926; Labelle, Mr., ques. 1306; Lennie, Mr. R. S., ques. 1612; Taschereau, Mr. Alleyn, ques. 3066; Woodbury, Mr. Harry, ques. 2048
Uniformity of, res., Sir Sam Hughes, 1308
Amdts. by Order in Council, 2294
Conscientious objectors, 781, 1929
Defaulters, 134, 227, 264, 346, 351, 396, 451, 461, 545, ques. 883, 971, 1910, 2250, 4238
Deserters, 72
Disfranchisement of, 496, ques. 1957, 2198, 2293
Evaders, Chicoutimi, 409
Imprisonment of, ques. 2566
Return of, 1866
Shot at, alleged, 1208
Draftees sent overseas, ques. 2297
Exemptions, ques. 884, ques. 1108
Farmers, and, 1233
Guelph Novitiate, 4620
Motion, Sir Sam Hughes, 1218; withdrawn, 1259

Military Service Act—Con.
Number conscripted, ques. 972
Police employed, ques. 972, ques. 973

Military Votes Overseas, Judge Gibson, ques. 1440

Militia
Allowances, 1886
Annual drill, 4495
Associations and bands, 1892, 4495
Barrack labourers, etc., 1899
Barriefield Militia buildings, 3985
Cadets, 1888, 1892
Command pay, 1886
Department
Audit of accounts, ques. 2199
Engineers' service and works, 1892
Headquarters and district staffs, 1893
Officers, peace rank, 1890
Overseas administration, Gen. Smart and Col. Pratt charges, 1099
Printers in department plant, 312. See also Printing Bureau
Salaries, 1532
Permanent force, 1898, 4495. See also Militia Act Amdt.
Rifle ranges, 1894-8
Steam shovels, ques. 1907
Surveys, 1899
Training areas, 1900
Transfers and promotions, report tabled, 40
Transport and freight, 1899
War record of, 1887
War units, continuation of, 1887

Militia Act Amdt. Bill (Permanent Force). 1r., 3469; 2r., 3966; com., 3968, 3971; 3r., 4002; amdt., Mr. Robb, neg., 4002

Militia Council, report tabled, 40

Militia Pension Act Amdt. Bill. Res., 2690; 1r., 2692; 2r., com., 2753-4; 3r., 2856; Senate amdts., 3782

Mines and Minerals
Canadian Mining Institute, 4492
Coal, lignite briquetting, 4488
Committee, 114
Copper refineries, ques. 1106
Mineral rights in Dominion lands, 4251-7. See also Dominion Forest Reserves
Non-ferrous metals, 1052, 3681
Prospectors' tools, etc., 4007
Returned soldiers as prospectors, 4045

Mines Branch estimates, 4489

Minister of Marine, speech at Verdun, 3241

Ministers of the Crown
Absence from Parliament, of. See Address
House of Commons and, 1002

Ministers of the Crown—Con.
Resignations
Hon. T. A. Crerar, 3193. See also that title
Hon. T. W. Crothers, 139
"Minto," icebreaker, ques. 3242
Model Towns. See Garden Villages
Molloy, Mr. John Patrick (Provencher)
Budget, 3309. Protection, 3309; farming and tariff, 3311; industrial unrest—Victory loans, 3313; elections, 3314
Hutterites, 1382
"Montmagny," Government steamer, ques. 1613
St. Peter's Reserve, ques. 1076; ques. 1613
Sheep industry, pure-bred stock, 2994
Moncton and Buctouche Railway, 1382
Money. See also Banks
Bank and Dominion notes, figures at end of war, 634
Bronze coins. See Currency
Gold held against notes, 635
Monk Station roadway, ques. 1438, 2202
Montreal
Admiralty Court, ques. 1440
Conveyance of mails, ques. 979
Port, labour at, ques. 3997
Terminal and tunnel, ques. 1213
Montreal-Ottawa highway, 2791-2
Montreal and Quebec Harbour Commissioners Bill. 1r., 3293; 2r., com., 3757; 3r., 3761
Morphy, Mr. H. B. (North Perth)
Air Board Bill, 2051
Bankruptcy Bill
Order of court, 2010
Trustee, replacement of, 2005
Canada Grain Act Amdt., 3961, 3965
Canadian National Railway
Capital stock, 1829
Construction of lines, extension of time for, 1723
First meeting, 1665
Head office, 1665
Civil Service
Efficiency, inquiry into, 1560
Salaries, high and low, 3811
War bonus, 2925
Wounded soldiers, positions for, 997, 1002
Combines, 4596-7
Criminal Code—aliens and British subjects, 4359-61
Demobilization, Canadians in British units, 2175
Fisheries, refrigerator service, 2890
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 870
Highways, 786
Housing scheme, 2544, 2550-2, 2560
Morphy, Mr. H. B.—Con.
Income war tax—trainmen's expenses, 2990-1
Judges' salaries, 4226, 4371
Live Stock Act Amdt. Bill, 2662
Military Service Act, uniformity of administration, 1334
Militia, permanent force, 3970
Naturalization, property rights of aliens, 4260-1, 4270-1
Pensions, 4179, 4181, 4195, 4206-9
"Unmarried wife," 4295
Proprietary medicines, 2486
Purchasing Commission, 3811
Quebec officer charged with embezzlement, 2294
Railway Act Consolidation Bill, 2621-34
Assistant Chief Railway Commissioner, 2632
Telephone companies, 2643
Transmission lines on highways, consent of municipalities, 3129
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 2762-3
Taschereau, Mr. Alleyn, ques. 3066
Trade Commissioners, 4493
Weights and measures, 2150-1
Wounded soldiers, Civil Service positions for, 997, 1002
Morris, Col., ques. 2565
Mothers' Pensions, 156
Mounted Police. See Royal Northwest
Moving Pictures, 267
Mowat, Mr. Herbert Macdonald (Parkdale)
Air Board Bill, 2057
Bankruptcy Bill, 1986-8, 1994, 2274
Farmers and, 2007
Order of court, 2010
Trustees, 2003, 2006
Board of Commerce, 4558-60, 4566
Civil Service, efficiency of, 1558
Divorce Court Bill, 3783, 3786-8
Electric and Power Companies Bill, 4585
Electrocution Bill, 1957
Fire prevention, 1582
French River waterway, 1082
Garden villages for returned soldiers, 761, 4012-3
Judges' salaries and duties, 2312, 2956
Militia, permanent force, 2982
Railway Act Consolidation Bill, 2620-4, 2637
Power clause, amdt., 4147; withdrawn, 4165
Telephone companies, 2643
Transmission lines on highways, consent of municipalities, Hydro-Electric, 3073; amdt., 3082; neg., 3133; 2nd. amdt., 3133; agreed to, 3134
Universal military training, 1891

Murphy, Hon. Charles (Russell)
Bell, Col. McKelvey. See under this head, Soldiers
Bruce report, 4071
Canadian Army Medical Service, 358, 513
Censorship, 1110
Dominion Elections Act. Amdt., 4652, 4658
Dominion water powers, 2512, 2515
Doukhobor lands, 2043
Easter adjournment, 886
Farmers' sons overseas—labour shortage, 140
Government Employees' Compensation Bill, 942
House of Commons, Wednesday evening sittings, 929
Kinmel Camp riots, 315, 357
Labour situation in the West, 2798-9
Lobster, canned, 715
Marlow, Col. F. W., ques. 3066
North Bruce, returning officer, ques. 2406
Oil, Peace River district, 4135
Pratt, Lt.-Col., statements of and reported resignation of High Commissioner, 647
Printing Bureau strike, 314, 398
Sedition, 3291, 4134
Seed grain, 1029
Shaughnessy, Lord, report interview, 648
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, Director of Medical Services, 3240, 3472, 4240
Soldiers, penal servitude, cases, 1029, 1163
Trade discrimination against Canada, 115, 229, 314
Winnipeg strike, 3069
Postal employees, replacement of, 2855
Witley Camp riots, 462

Murray Bay
Ferry, 4335
Train service, 2449

Musicians, travelling, immigration of, 1942

Myers, Mr. Edward Thomas Wordon (Kindersley)
Budget, 3526. Tariff revision — wheat prices, 3526; returned soldiers and the land—income tax, 3529; natural resources of Western Provinces—tariff, 3530; optimism, 3531.
Eston, Sask., experimental farm, 2979
Live stock, pure-bred, 2993-4
Shipbuilding, 2261
Wheat
Crop of 1919, 3471
Shipment facilities, 2261

Napadogan, ice at., ques. 972

National Battlefields Commission, 138, 4482

National Gallery, 2797

National Research Institute, 1565, 1709. See also Industrial

National Service Registration, ques. 1075, ques. 1076, ques. 1306, ques. 2296, ques. 2296, ques. 2296
Assistant Registrars, payment of, ques. 1907
Bagot County, ques. 1307
Employees, ques. 2145
Expenditure, ques. 2296
Rental, ques. 2145
Salaries, ques. 1306, ques. 1440, ques. 2565
Unpaid accounts, ques. 2296

National Transcontinental Railway. See Canadian National

Natural Gas, Pelican Rapids, 4605

Naturalization, 1046. See British Nationality; Immigration

Natural Resources. See Dominion Lands; Mines and Minerals
Development of, 302, 3283

Naval Air Bases, ques. 1532

Naval Service
"Canada," H.M.C.S., ques. 1340, ques. 1534
Canadians in Royal Navy, 1434, 1483
Courts martial, members of, ques. 1534
Department of
Report tabled, 111
Staff and salaries, 2811
Destroyers, ques. 880, ques. 1534
Discharge of men, 1959, 1996
"Hochelaga," dismissal of officer, ques. 1340
Kingsmill, Admiral, ques. 1340
Ministerial statement, 2810
Newfoundland R.N.R. ratings, ques. 1611
Pay claims, ques. 746
Recruiting, ques. 646, ques. 747
Seymour Narrows battery, ques. 975
Trawler No. 30, ques. 975
"Tuna," H.M.C.S., sale of, ques. 1534
Wireless, separation allowance, ques. 1905

Navigation, Aids to, 2608-10

Negroes, Rioting in England by, 3741

Neil's Harbour, 2781

Nesbitt, Mr. Edward Walter (North Oxford)
Bank mergers, 1095
Bankrupty Bill
Order of court, 2010
Trustees, 2006, 2012
Board of Commerce, 4506, 4551-3
Budget, 3547. Cost of living, 3547; tariff and profits, 3549; business profits war

Nesbitt, Mr. Edward Walter—Con.
Budget—Con.
tax, 3551; tariff and freight rates, 3552; taxes, tariffs and tax-free bonds, 3553
Canadian National Railway Company
Commission control, 1403
Executive Com., 1673
Cost of Living Com., 4313
Daylight Saving, 899
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 874
Grand Trunk Pacific receivership, 691
Immigration of illiterates, 1961, 1964
Income tax, number of taxpayers, 3726
Militia pensions, 2757-8
Pensions, 4182-98, 4201-10
Prohibition, 2351
Public ownership of railways, 692
Purchasing Commission, 3205
Railway Act Consolidation Bill, 2626-34, 2640
Telephone companies, 2643-4, 2649
Transmission lines on highways; consent of municipalities, 3131
Railway crossings, 937
Seed grain advances, 626
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 2763, 2769

New Carlisle postmaster, ques. 727

Newfoundland. See Steamship services

New Harbour, N.S., 2783

Newspaper Postage, ques., 727

Newspapers and Periodicals, publication of ownership and control, 1562, 2016, 4483

Newsprint Control, ques. 613, ques. 752

Newsprint Control Bill. Res., 4535; 1r., 4549; 2r., 4662; 3r., 4663

New Westminster, railways, and, 423, 426

New Zealand, markets in, 2222

Nicholson, Mr. Donald (Queen's, P.E.I.)
Judges' salaries, 4369, 4373

Nicholson, Mr. George Brecken (East Algoma)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 143. Returned soldiers, 143; housing—capital and labour, 144, 145; tariff, 144; Department of Labour—franchise, alien enemies — Bolsheviki, 145; returned soldiers — patronage — commissions, 146; General Pau—prohibition—His Majesty's complimentary banquet to President Wilson, 147; Prime Minister and Peace Conference —Canada's war record, 148

Nicholson, Mr. George Brecken—Con.
Board of Commerce, 4499
Canadians in Imperial service, 1997
Canadian National Railway, 1402-19
Combines, 4571
Grand Trunk Pacific receivership, 683, 1137
High Cost of Living Com., 4009
Special report, motion for concurrence, 4307-8, 4333
Immigration Act Amdt.
Illiterates, 1962
Interned alien enemies, 1947
Land for soldiers, 3071
Liquor, illegal exportation, 960
Little Current, 2789
Military management, charges of Gen. Smart, etc., 1527
Military Service Act, uniformity of administration, 1333
Pensions, "Unmarried wife," 4287
Post office appointments after strike, 4352
Prohibition, 2669
Public ownership of railways, 682
Purchasing Commission, 3205
Railway Act Consolidation Bill, 2627
Telephone companies, 2649-50
Railway engineers—cattle on track, 2617
Rural postmasters, 2035
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 2769
Titles, 2720
Water-borne traffic, rates, 2951

Nickel, 1053, 3681

Nickle, Mr. William Folger (Kingston)
Board of Commerce, 4519
Coasting trade with United States, 1110, 1209
Criminal Code
Election by prisoner, 4366-7
Unmarried registering as married, 2160
Divorce Court Bill, 1662, 3761, 3779, 3883-91
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 858
Good roads, 3910, 4416
Grand Trunk Pacific receivership, 677
Immigration, orchestras, 1943
Income tax, 3736
Judges, 3716
Shareholders' profits through "rights," 3728
Industrial unrest — after-war conditions, profits, sympathetic strikes, etc., 3025
Military Service Act, uniformity of administration, 1336
Militia pensions, 2755-60
Militia, permanent force, 2967, 3971, 3985
Pensions, "Unmarried wife," 4283-5
Public ownership of railways, 680

Nickle, Mr. William Folger—Con.
Railway Act Consolidation
Disagreement with Senate
Form of resolutions, 4157
Free conference, rep. 4067
Power clauses, 4159
Transmission lines on highways; consent of municipalities; Hydro-Electric, 3105, 3109
Railway crossings, 700
Railway situation, responsibility for, 678
Returned soldiers, appointments to Civil Service, 290
Scientific research, 1566
Seditious books, etc., 4367
Titles, 1441, 1479, 2395
Correction of report, 2615
Motion for adoption of Com.'s rep., 2696, 2713-4, 2722, 2743
Votes and Proceedings, and Journals, 3292
Wounded soldiers
Civil Service positions for, 987
Disability, insurance against, 994
Vocational training for under-age, 1018

Nile Voyageurs, 4380

Nipissing Lake, water power, ques. 1341

Non-ferrous Metals. See Mines

Non-sectarian Schools. See Education

North Bruce, Returning Officer, ques. 2046

Northern Canada, development of, 302

Northern Construction Company, 1645

"Northland" Inquiry, rep. tabled, 111

North Sydney, works at, 1263-78

Northwest Territories, Commissioner of, 4045

Nova Scotia
Fair wage officer, ques. 1907
Fishing fleet, 1866

Nova Scotia Carriages, Limited, ques. 3066

Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co., 2342

Noxious Weeds, 4091

Nurses, Military, residence for at Kingston, ques. 3377

Oath, administered by private parties, 2016

Oaths of Office Bill, 2

Ocean Freight Rates, 1051. See also Waterborne traffic

O'Connor, Mr. W. F., K.C., 2452

"Official Record," 431

O'Halloran, Mr., 4021

Oil-bearing Lands
Leases, ques. 2199
Northern Alberta, 4070
Peace River district, 4135
Shell Transport and Trading Co., 929, 4070

Old Age Pensions, 157

Oleomargarine, 2201, 3708

"One Big Union"—Calgary, ques. 2143

O'Neill, Mr., contractor, 1274

Ontario, North, Vacancy, 4

Ontario, Prohibition Votes, 2663

Ontario and Quebec, Northern, colonizing of, ques. 748

Opposition Leadership
Congratulations by Sir Thomas White, 27
Mackenzie, Mr. D. D., announces his election as temporary leader, 21-2
Robb, Mr., Chief Whip, 3

Orchestras, admission to Canada, of, 1943

Orders in Council under War Measures Act, 4486. See also War Measures Act Extension
Alien enemies, deportation of, 1977
Number passed, ques. 2145

Ottawa. See also Parliament Buildings
Central Station, ques. 1213
Government arrangement with, 2495, 4380
Highways, 2791
Hunter Building, 2507
Public buildings, lighting, 2503
Wellington street, repairs, 2495

Ottawa and Georgian Bay Canal, 2855

Ottawa-Hull Bridge, 2790

Ottawa Improvement Commission, 138. See also Ottawa

Ottawa Improvement Commission Bill. Res., 4246; 1r., 4251; 2r., com., 4380; 3r., 4386

Ottawa River Dams, 2796

Oyster Culture, ques. 609. See also Fish

Packing Companies
Overcharges, 3281
Taxation of, 4478

Palmer, Rev. Kennedy H. See Military Service, Guelph Novitiate

Panet, Mr. Louis Charles, 4

Papineau, Mr. Louis Joseph (Beauharnois)
Bust of Sir Robert Borden, ques. 2050, ques. 2295

Papineau, Mr. Louis Joseph—Con.
Canadian Northern Railway, ques. 1212
Civil Service, state of, 4605
Fuel Controller, ques. 2145
Leases of oil lands, ques. 2199
Public health, social welfare, ques. 1205
Rate of exchange, ques. 2145

Pardee, Mr. Frederick Forsyth (West Lambton)
Budget, 3532. Tariff and popular unrest, 3542; profiteering, 3544; income tax—tax-free bonds, 3545; duties of labour and of capital, 3546
Daylight Saving, 918
Housing scheme, 2547
Judges' salaries, 2955
Railway Act Consolidation: transmission lines on highways; consent of municipalities, 3123
Shipping, transfers, 3928

Parent, Mr. George (West Quebec)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 540. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 540; returned soldiers, 541; highways—housing—Northern Quebec, Ungava, 542; excess profits tax—Military Service defaulters, 544; Quebec and national unity, 545
Bankruptcy, remuneration of trustees, 2013
British Nationality, Naturalization and Aliens Consolidation Bill, 3821
Canadian National Railway
Deficit, 2456
Quebec, conditions in, 2457
Dominion water powers, 2517, 2529
Parliament Buildings, 2331-41
Pilotage, 2806
St. Charles River dredging, 2788
St. Laurent, Isle of Orleans, 2785
St. Lawrence ship channel, 2608
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 2769-70
Steamers, "Lady Evelyn" and "Princess," ques. 3680

Parent, Dr. Rufus H., ques. 1213

Paris Agency, 1901

Paris or French Foot (measure), 952-4

Pariseault, Lieut., ques. 884

Parkinson, Lieut.-Col., ques. 1441

Parliamentary Procedure. See Speaker; Deputy Speaker; House of Commons

Parliament Buildings, 2331-41
Allocation of space, joint Committee with Senate, 3782, 3585, 3680
Materials, construction, plans, probable date of completion, etc., 2331-41, 4621

Parliamentary Documents, distribution of, 2455

Parliamentary Restaurant, Committee on, 115

Paroles, McMillan, Pearson and Heaton, 4070

Party Government and parties, 15, 27, 32, 37, 55, 69, 97, 108, 125, 268, 344, 371, 376-391, 412, 440, 489, 515, 530, 566, 570, 807, 1633, 1746

Patent Medicines. See Proprietary

Patent Record, 3842

Patent, Trade Mark and Design, Copyright and Timber Marking Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 3808; 2r., 4021; com., 3r., 4023

Patents, Commissioner of. See Patent, etc., Bill

Patriotic Fund. See Canadian Patriotic

Patronage, 146. See also Highways
Canadian National Railway, 1639
Civil Service and, 387. See also Civil Service
Medical men and, 171
Port Hastings, 961
Postmasters, 410, 412
Printing Bureau and, 387

Pau, General, visit of to House, 137, 141, 147

Peace, 1, 125. See also League of Nations; War; Reconstruction
Armistice, terms of, 2042
Celebration of, 4238
Costa Rica, message, 2

Peace Conference, 446
Canada's position in, 248, 777
Canada's representation at, 1, 14, 18, 132, 142, 148, 169, 182, 242, 249, 265, 272, 351, 367, 389, 421, 474, 478, 495, 530, 1381, 3676
Poland and Ukrainians, etc., 3472. See also Poles

Peace Treaty, 2096
Civil and religious liberty, 2043
Copy of terms, 4239
Labour provisions, 4239, 4692
Eight-hour day, 2044
Ratification, 2200
Signing of, 3473
Summary, 2146

Pearson, Sir Arthur, 2874

Peat, 4489

Peck, Lieut.-Col. Cyrus Wesley, V.C. (Skeena)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 463. Thanks for reception—late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—answer to criticisms of leaders of Canadian Corps, 463; Cambrai, 464; La Vicoigne—Sir Arthur Currie's care of soldiers' lives, 466; his promotion—Mons, 467; Canadian soldiers and British press and public, 468; Sir Charles Ferguson, 469; reconstruction, support of public opinion needed—women's war work, 470; Kinmel Camp riots, conduct of Canadian soldiers at Rhyl—Union government—Liberals and Unionists—free trade, 471; Grand Trunk Pacific—unifying effect of the trenches, 472
British Columbia salmon and halibut, 1535
Budget, 3676. Prime Minister and Peace Conference—free trade, 3676; social unrest—income, inheritance and land values taxes, 3677
Enters House of Commons Chamber, 185
Massett wharf, ques. 603
Military management, charges of Gen. Smart, Col. Pratt and Col. Price, 1501
Pensions, 4174, 4178, 4180, 4293
Railway Act—municipal rate bargains, 4141
Soldiers' graves, 332

Pedlow, Mr. Isaac Ellis (South Renfrew)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 185. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 185-186; Col. Peck, V.C., 185; victory and peace, 186; returned soldiers, 187; Liberal party, 189; finance, 191; tariff, 193
Agricultural implements, duties on, 3694, 3705
Arthurs, Col. James, M.P., ques. 2653
Bankruptcy, 2472-3
Bureau of Statistics, 3178
Business profits war tax, 3710
Canadian National Railway, 1410
Capital stock, 1816
Construction of lines, extension of time, 1773
Finance, Parliamentary control, 2137
President's salary, 1658
Canadian Press news service, 4485
Canal statistics; salaries, 3178-9
Cold storage, 2984, 2987
Combines, 4568-71, 4588
Draper, Mr. P. M., Printing Bureau, ques. 3999
Electric and Power Companies Bill, 4586
Electric wiring in public buildings, 2505
Exchange, rate of, 1362

Pedlow, Mr. Isaac Ellis—Con.
Fire prevention, 1574-81
Good roads, 4409
Government agricultural publications, 2991
House of Commons, cross benches, desks for, 2503
Housing scheme, 2562
Income war tax, 3718-23
Bad debts, 3722
Garment factory operators, 3994
Travellers on commission, 3990
Insurance Act Amdt. (actuaries), 3988
Letter postage rate, 4621
Military Service Act, 1312
Naturalization, 4128-9, 4258-9
Newsprint control, 4538
Ottawa City, agreement with, 4250
Oysters, 2899
Pensions, 4200, 4204, 4206
"Unmarried wife," 4287
Proprietary medicines, 2487, 3824
Purchasing Commission, 3207
Railway mail service, 2087-9
Soldiers' Land Settlement, 3872-3
Exemption from legal process, 3866-7
Notice of expropriation, 4016
Technical education, 3174-5, 3895-7
Titles, 1468
War expenditures, 1362
Weights and measures, 953, 2152-9
Wheat, market for, 1711, 2998-3000
Wool, 2989

Pelee Island, 4033

Pelican Rapids Gas Well, 4605

Pelletier, Mr. Francois Jean (Matane)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 393. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—industrial unrest, 393; cost of living, 394; soldiers' land settlement—immigration—War-time Elections Act, 395; national unity—titles—military service defaulters, 396; "Light in the window," 397
Canadian National Railway, 1831
Cold storage, 2984
Industrial unrest, after-war conditions, etc., 3017
Lumber purchases for railways, ques. 1217
Order, relevancy, 2725
Pilotage, 2808, 3160

Pembroke wharf, 2787

Pension Act Amdt. Bill, 1616. Res., 4033; 1r., 4033; 2r., com., 4171, 4199, 4274; 3r., 4335
Amdt., Mr. Lemieux, neg. on div., 4336
"Unmarried wife," 4198-9, 4274

Pensions, 17, 79, 92, 107, 159, 294, 323, 343, 497, 502, 588, ques. 882
Board, ques. 1790, 2448, ques. 3066
Appointments and returned soldiers, ques. 605
Employees, ques. 611
Vancouver office, ques. 3377
Committee, 139, 424, 550, 3926, 3997
European war and active militia (vote of $28,000,000), 3000
Number, etc., ques. 1076
Orders in Council tabled, 312
Payments, ques. 1307
Widows of Generals, 2448

Permanent Force. See Militia Act Amdt.

Peticlerc, Mr. Joseph, 164

Petitcodiac River, 2898

Piche, Lt.-Col., ques. 600, ques. 2871

Pictou Island, 2793

Pilotage, 2610
Report tabled, 185. See also Canada Shipping

Ploughs, Duty on, 3690. See also Agricultural implements; Budget

Poles and Ukrainians, etc., 3472, 4465, 4534, 4620, 4690. See also Peace

Pollution of Navigable Waters Bill. 1r., 2199

Pomeroy, Major A. L., Inspector of Farms, ques. 2567

Population
Cities and provinces, ques. 1535
Trend to urban centres, 896

Porter, Mr. Sydney P., 1638, 1834

Port Felix, Custom House, 956

Port Hood Wharf, 2782

Portland Cement, duty on, ques. 1612

Port Mann, ques. 979

Port Nelson. See Hudson Bay

Postmaster General
Report tabled, 40
Representation in House of Commons, ques. 1974. See also Ministers

Post Office. See also Industrial unrest; Strikes
Calgary employees after strike, 3194
Letter carriers
Bonus, 2084
Overseas service, 2444
Toronto, 1341
Letter rate, 4621
Lewis, Mr. J. H., ques. 3068
Mail carriers, 413
Mail contracts, rural mail, rural post offices, surplus, 2079-96

Post Office—Con.
Mails and Canadian National Railway, 2087, 2094
Ottawa-Pembroke service, 2034
Outside service, salaries, 2079
Postmasters, rural, 413, ques. 1536
Quebec City, ques. 2751
Quebec and Hamilton, ques. 2750
Refusal to deliver mail, 1435
Rural mail boxes—parcel post, 2093
Rural mail couriers, 2926
Salaries and allowances, 1435, 2016
Statistics, ques. 2903
Toronto, Montreal, and Winnipeg, ques. 2750
Transatlantic mails, 886, 929

Post Office Appointments Bill. 1r., 3809; 2r., com., 4345; 3r., 4355

Power Companies. See Electric and Power Companies; Canadian National Railway

Power, Mr. Charles Gavan (South Quebec)
Allowance to officers, ques. 1667
Argue, Lieut.-Col. J. F., ques. 3068
Ballantyne, Hon. Mr., speech at Verdun, 3241
Canadian National Railway
Directorate to include a returned soldier, amdt. 1637, neg. 1638
Lines to be included, 1686
Steamships, 1689
Canadian Pacific Railway Station, Quebec, ques. 3587
Civil Service vacancies, ques. 2049
Daylight Saving, 923
Employment agent, Quebec, ques. 1791
Fertilizers Act Amdt., 1569
Fire prevention, 1573-8
Fiset, Dr. Michael, ques. 1791
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 878
Forest Products Laboratories, ques. 3068
Gregory, Mr. William T., ques. 601
Immigration Act Amdt.—conspiracy, 1948
Industrial unrest, eight-hour day, after-war conditions, etc., 3032
Influenza patients, ques. 845
Kinmel Camp riots, ques. 3469
Lake St. Joseph hotel, ques. 3067
Lévis Rifle Association, ques. 1213
Marine Department, Quebec buildings, ques. 1217, ques. 1439
Military management, charges of Gen. Smart, etc., 1523, 1531
Militia
Permanent force, 1898
Staff positions and returned soldiers, 1893
Units and members, war record of, 1890-
Pensions, 4288-92, 4297

Power, Mr. Charles Gavan—Con.
Piché, Lt.-Col., ques. 600
Public Health, social welfare, 1206
Quebec terminal facilities, ques. 3469
Questions and answers, complaint of contradiction, 648
St. Louis Road property, ques. 604, 2769-70
Soldiers
Courts martial, 3470
Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, ques. 1307
Returned
Port of debarkation, 2402
Usurers and, ques. 977
22nd Battalion, 1616
Russia, in, 1216
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 2770, 2773-4
Allegations of Lt.-Col. McKelvey Bell, 3422
Solicitors, Department of Railways and Government Railways, 1591-2
Strikes, 1918, ques. 619
Titles—Com. to consider. Points of order—unanimous consent, and acceptance of principle, 1482
War bonus, arsenal and marine employees, 2926
War service gratuity, ques. 1791
Water-borne traffic, control of rates, 2945

Pratt, Lieut.-Col., charges by, 1099, ques. 1213, ques. 1216, ques. 1483

Precious Metals in Nickel Ores, 3682-9

Press, The, 201-3, 246, 267
Attitude of, 2917
Freedom of, 350
Government advertising, 1822
Public announcement of ownership, 1562

Preston, Mr. W. T. R., 1912, 4135

Prevost, Mr. Jules Edouard (Terrebonne)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 521. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 521; allegations of Gen. Hughes and Gen. Smart, 522; after-war problems, 523; prices, 524; tariff, 525; excess profits tax, 526; Union government, 528; French Canadians—grants for housing, highways, public health, 529
Casualties amongst French Canadians, ques. 644
Catholics, enlistment of, ques. 3998
Exemption tribunals, ques. 1438
Georgian Bay Canal, ques. 843
House of Commons reading room, 318, ques. 843
Military Service Act, ques. 2296
National Service Registration, ques. 1306, ques. 1440
War tax, income, exemption, ques. 611

Prices. See Canada Food; Combines; Cost of Living; Board of Commerce; Budget; Industrial unrest

Prince Edward Island
Greater production grant, ques. 601, ques. 2566

Prince of Wales, 420
H.R.H. visit to Canada, 2629

Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry. See also War
Travelling accommodation, ques. 1307

Printing Bureau, 424
Commission of investigation, 1812
Editorial Com., 1435
Expenses, ques. 844
Printing done by, ques. 844
Report, 229, 230
Strike, 398, 513, 1561
Statement by Minister, 312

Printing Com., 113, 115

Printing and Stationery Dept., 4687

Private Bills Com., 112

Private Bills Discussed
Athabasca, Grande Prairie and Fort Vermilion Railway, 2778, 4534
Canadian Niagara Bridge Company, 4344
Canadian Pacific Railway Company, 3782
Senate amdt., 3214
Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, 1211, 2015, 2295
Senate amdts., 2903
Grey, Margaret, divorce, 4533
Lachine, Jacques Cartier and Maisonneuve Railway, 1404
London and Port Stanley Railway, 1184

Privilege
Borden, Sir Robert—Manitoba Cold Storage Company, 4695
Bureau, Mr.—Statement of Mr. H. A. Mackie, 4002
Edwards, Mr.—Report in Ottawa Journal, 1997
Fournier, Mr.—Public ownership of railways, 1866
Gauvreau, Mr.—Hansard, correction, 970
Lemieux, Mr.—erroneous report of speech of Mr. J. D. Reid, 3378
Stacey, Mr.—misunderstanding of remarks of Mr. Lemieux, 3422

Privileges and Elections Com., 112

Privy Council Department, salaries, 4486

Production, grants to encourage, ques. 2566

Profiteering. See Board of Commerce; Budget; Combines; Cost of Living; Industrial unrest

Prohibition, 2, 137, 147, 223, 343, 403, 437, 456, 490, 531, 588, 2658. See also Intoxicating Liquors; War Measures Extension

Properties Leased by Government 3377

Proportional Representation, 3069, 4620

Proprietary Medicines
Alcoholic content of, ques. 646
War tax, ques. 1107

Proprietary Medicine Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 1259; 2r., com., 2479; ref. to special com., 2653; com., 3823; 3r., 3938

Prorogation, 4701

Protection. See Budget; Tariff

Proulx, Mr. Edmond (Prescott)
Bankruptcy, 2279, 2469-70, 2474
Budget, 3460. Taxes—economy in public expenditure, 3460; good roads, 3461
Canadian National Railway, coal, ques. 1211
Civil Service, specialists, 1184
Currie, Sir Arthur, proclamations by, ques. 607
Customs and Inland Revenue, salaries, 954
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 855
Fort William, railway lands, ques. 883
Franchise, 4622
Good roads, 3908
Hanna, townsite of, ques. 1535
Hart, Mr. James I., ques. 602
Hawkesbury-Grenville bridge, 2791-2
Judges' salaries and duties, 2311, 2958, 4226, 4370, 4375
Exemption from income tax, 4234
O'Connor, Mr. W. F., K.C., 2453
Port Mann, ques. 979
Repatriation Committee, ques. 613, ques. 1340
Ridley, Mr. John, ques. 2398, ques. 2566
Roe, Mr. James Sydney, ques. 1216
Speaker, Mr., living allowance, 2445

Provident Fund. See Intercolonial

Provincial Autonomy. See Housing; Highways; Technical Education

Public Accounts, 138
Committee, 113

Public Buildings, 2508, 4610. See Parliament; also names of localities

Public Debt. See Budget; War expenditure

Public Health, 2, 15, 21, 25, 94, 97, 135, 184, 214, 223, 456, 490, 504. See also Health Department Bill
Department of, 82, 174, 301, 431, 445, 4380
Appointments, 1182
Director General, 2572
Infant mortality, 336
Medical profession and, 1378

Public Health—Con.
Provincial rights and, 1369
Scientific research and, 1390. See Scientific Tuberculosis, 498
Soldiers, returned, amongst, 183

Public Information Department, 40, 203, ques. 728, ques. 728, ques. 748, ques. 750, 4673
United States Representative, ques. 2145. See also Public Information

Public Ownership of Railways. See Canadian National Shaughnessy, Lord, and, 1630, 1820, 1825

Provincial Subsidies, ques. 744

Public Welfare, Department of, proposed, 156

Public Works, 2780-97
Department
Cleaning, 2495
Clerk of Works, 2502
Concentration of works under, 1262-3
Contingencies, inspection service, 1278
Deputy Minister, 2330
Reform in, 2496
Report tabled, 40
Solicitor, 1270-8
Staff and salaries, 1262, 1266, 2330
Travelling expenses, 2331
Expenditure on, 44, 47
Ottawa
Hunter Building, 2507
New departmental building on Wellington St., proposed, 2507
Parliament Building, 2331-41
Public buildings, elevator service, lighting, heating, cleaning, repairs, furniture, etc., 2494-6, 2504
Rentals, 2505-7
Quarantine stations, 2503
Tender and contract, works not done under, 1263

Pugwash Spur, ques. 3067, ques. 4239

Purchasing Commission, appointments, 3470

Purchasing Commission Bill. Res., 3810, 4439; 1r., 1162; 2r., 3195-3211, 3215-27; amdt. (6-mos. hoist), 3220; neg., 3226; com., 3227
Commission, membership, powers, etc., 3227, 3232, 3236, 3810
Directors, 3228
Estimates, 3238
Records, 3236
Requisitions, 3237
Staff, 3228
Supplies to be purchased, 3238
Tender, 3239

Quarantine, 4682

Quebec and Saguenay Railway, 2449

Quebec Bridge, ques. 977

Quebec City
Canadian National Railway, improvements, ques. 978
Canadian Pacific Railway station, ques. 3587
Employment agent, ques. 1791
Federal buildings on Grand Allee, ques. 976
Kent House site, ques. 976
Military hospitals, ques. 844
Ross Rifle Factory, ques. 976
Terminal facilities, ques. 3469

Quebec Harbour and Port
Property and insurance, ques. 601
Spirituous liquors entered at, ques. 1533

Quebec Oriental Railway, ques. 605

Quebec Province
Northern, resources of, 542

Quebec Railway, Light and Power Co., 2504

Quorum. See House of Commons

Radiotelegraph, 2794, 2848

Radziwill, Princess, ques. 618

Rails, Canadian, sent overseas, 2239, 3863

Railway Act Amdts.
1. Coastwise and inland water rates. 1r., 71
2. Consolidation. 1r., 357; 2r., ref. to standing com., 936; com., 2617, 2929, 3073; 3r., 3157
Disagreement with Senate, 3293; message—consequential amdts., 3473; free conference: proposed, 3473; proposal accepted, 3679; managers appointed, 3738; meeting appointed, 3782; sitting of House not suspended, 3948; report, 4012; considered, 4064
Amdt. to clause 325 (the Board and tariffs), motion to insist, 4136-7, agreed to, 4139; amdt. to clause 374 (Power companies), motion to not insist, 4139, agreed to on div., 4165; amdt. to clause 376 (Telephones), motion to not insist, 4166, agreed to on div., 4169; Senate concurrence, 4456
3. Crossings. Res., 697; 1r., 701; 2r., com., 936; 3r., 1029
4. Location. 1r., 2342; 2r., com., 2510

Railway Belt Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 5; 2r., com., 592; 3r., 625

Railway Commission
Daylight Saving, decision, 1422
Officers of, and Civil Service Commission, 2633
Report tabled, 71

Railway War Board
Daylight Saving, and, 907, 910
Railway time tables, 929

Railways. See their several titles, including Government and Canadian National Cash subventions by provinces, ques. 604
Cattle on tracks—charge against engineers, 2617
Daylight Saving and. See Daylight
Railways extending into United States, 688
Level crossings. See Railway Act Amdt. Bill (Crossings)
Public ownership of. See Grand Trunk Pacific Receivership

Railways and Canals Department
Deputy Minister of, ques. 1215
Lumber purchases, Matane, ques. 1217
Salaries, 1588

Railways, Canals and Telegraph Lines Committee, 112
Leave to sit while House is in session, 1864, 1886

Raw Materials within the Empire, 1053

Read, Mr. Joseph (Prince, P.E.I.)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 214. Victory loan, 214; Department of Health—food control and European contracts—Union government, 215; general election, 216; Canada's immigrant citizens, 217; Hon. Mr. Calder—returned soldiers, non-productive employment, 218; shipbuilding—Liberalism, 219; tariff, 221
Civil Service, employment in, disadvantage of, 962
Daylight Saving, 901
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 878
Government Employees' Compensation Bill, 947
Grand Trunk Pacific receivership, motion for, 690
Tariff, Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt., 822

Read, Mr. Joseph, M.P., death of, 1209

Reading Room. See House of Commons

Reciprocity, 309, 794. See also Tariff

Reclamation of Dominion Lands by Drainage Bill. 1r., 71; 2r., com., 639, 708; 3r., 784

Reconstruction. See Board of Commerce; Budget; Highways; Housing; Immigration; Industrial unrest; Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment; Soldiers' Land Settlement; Technical education; War, demobilization

Red Cross. See Canadian Red Cross

*Deceased April 6

Redman, Mr. Daniel Lee (East Calgary)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech (mover), 13. Canadian Expeditionary Force, 13; Governor General, appointment of His Excellency, Duke of Devonshire — late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—Peace—co-operation of British Empire and United States—Paris Conference—Canada's war record, 14; reconstruction—public health—housing, 15; vocational training — highways — franchise—immigration—industrial unrest, 16; returned soldiers—land settlement—pensions, 16
Allied soldiers, settlers, 3881
Divorce Bill, 3781
Fire prevention, 1584
Hutterites and Mennonites, 1922
Immigration, exclusion of certain classes, 1922
Militia pensions, 2754
Soldiers, wounded, Civil Service positions for, 982

Regimental Funds Board, ques. 2904

Registration. See National Service

Reid, Hon. John Dowsley (Minister of Railways and Canals)
Department of Railways and Canals
Salaries, 1588
Solicitor, 1592
Canadian National Railway. See also, under this head, Canadian National Railway Company Bill
Construction and betterments, 3190, 4614
Death of employee, compassionate allowance, 3175
Expenditure, estimated, 4688
Intercolonial Railway, 2133
Labour trouble, reported, 1617
Operation, 4615-8
Patronage, 1642
Prince Edward Island Railway, 3190, 4618
Private cars, 1590
Rates, 4171, 4615-8
Canadian National Railway Company Bill, 1395-1404, 1405-22, 1620-30, 1640-7, 1653-9, 1667-71, 1676-95, 1705, 1713-6, 1724-5, 1750-4, 1760, 1766-70, 1774, 1779, 2098, 2133-6
Com., suggested ref. to., 1623
Construction of lines, extension of time for, 1713-6, 1724, 1769
Charters, schedule of, 1766
Directors, 1627, 1630, 1640, 1654
British Columbia, from, 1629
Executive Com., 1667
Management and operation, 1677-81, 1691

Reid, Hon. John Dowsley—Con.
Canadian National Railway—Con.
Powers to construct under Order in Council, 1767
Provinces, representation of, 1570
Railways to be included, 1677-81
United States, in, 1693
Securities, 1769-70
Canals
Power development and export, 1599
Trent, 3188-9
Welland, deepening, work for returned soldiers, 1592-1610, 3175-87
Civil Service
Com. of inquiry, 1709
Salaries, 1591
Coal, railway contracts for, 1909
Correction of report of speech, 3188, 3221, 3378
Custom houses, as storage places for liquor, 956, 964
Daylight Saving, 919
Electric and Power Companies Bill, 4572-3, 4583-7
Freight rates on raw sugar, 3471
Government Employees' Compensation Bill, 701-8, 938-948
Government railways, reference to ministerial statement, 1589
Private cars, 1590
Grand Trunk Pacific receivership, 399
Highways Aid Bill, 730, 785, 3899-3926, 4391, 4423, 4426-8
Amdt. (agreement with Province), 4431
Lévis station, 2458
Location of railways, 2510-1
National Research Institute, 1709
Paradis, Mr. M., claim of, 3189
Railway Act Consolidation Bill, 936, 2617-52, 3134
Senate disagreement, 4064-9
Board control of rates, 4136, 4139
Telephone companies, 4166
Transmission lines on highways; consent of municipalities, 3134
Railway crossings, 697-701, 936-8
Railways and Canals Department
Salaries, 1588
Solicitor, 1592
Railways and steamships, 4683-5
St. Charles River works, Belanger vs. The King, 1023
St. John and Quebec Railway, 2567, 2798
St. Lawrence River water powers, 1796
War Board, railways and Daylight Saving, 909, 929
Water-borne traffic, control of rates, 2939

Reid, Mr. John Flaws (Mackenzie)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 585. Tariff, 585, 589; late Sir Wilfrid Laurier — Government's land policy, 587; prohibition—returned soldiers, pensions—land settlement, 588; farmers, workers and manufacturers, 590
Agriculture, live stock, 2970
Briquetting lignite, 3472
Budget, 3593. Income tax—tariff, 3594; undue profits, 3596; agricultural implements—markets and prices, 3597; operation of grain elevators—agricultural implements, 3598; insurance of returned men, 3599
Daylight Saving, 926
Export of feed, Fort William Grain Company, ques. 2048
Good roads, 3916-8
Immigration, illiterates, 1953
Shipbuilding, ques. 610, ques. 644
Water-borne traffic, rates, 2948

Repatriation Com., ques. 1340

Representation Act (1914) Amdt. Bill (Fraser Valley). 1r., 4; 2r., com., 625; 3r., 727

Returned Soldiers. See War, soldiers

Revenue Bills
Business Profits War Tax Act Amdt. Bill. Res., 3154; 1r., 3738; 2r., com., 3988; 3r., 4003
Customs Tariff, 1907, Amdt. Bill. Res., 3151; 1r., 3738; 2r., 3988, 4003; com., 4003; 3r., 4012
Income War Tax Act, 1917, Amdt. Bill. Res., 3154; 1r., 3738; 2r., com., 3988; 3r., 4003
Dependents, 3992
Garment factory operators, 3994
Military pensions, 3994
Inland Revenue Act Amdt. Bill. Res., 1586-7; 1r., 1588

Rhodes, Hon. Edgar N. (Cumberland). See Speaker

Rhyl. See Kinmel

Richardson, Mr. Robert Lorne (Springfield)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 376. Young men and politics, 376; abolition of partyism — Union government — Liberalism, 377; tariff, 378, 391; party tyranny — Senate reform, 380; Liberalism defined, 381; leaders needed, 383; history of party, 384; vicious features of party, 385; public expenditures, 386; Printing Bureau and patronage—Civil Service — translators — Debates Com., 387;

Richardson, Mr. Robert Lorne—Con.
Address—Con.
Canada's troops—war work of Canadian women, 388; Peace Conference and Canada's representation, 389; Mount Carmel, 390; national unity, 392
Board of Commerce, 4509
Budget, 3654. War and aftermath of war, 3654; parties and protection, 3655; Liberal party and the tariff, 3656; tariff commission — East and West, 3660; public ownership—Civil Service—regulation of profits, 3663; Union-War government, 3664
Budka, Bishop, 1917
Canadian National Railway
Construction of lines, extension of time, 1755
Directors, 1635
Head office, 1648
Public ownership, 1630, 1757, 1760
Canadian Press news service, 4484-6
Conner, Mr., Immigration Agent, 2590-3
Cost of Living, 4323
Daylight Saving, 891, 923
Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway, 1208
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 874
Government printing, Editorial Com., 1435
Grand Trunk Railway Company Bill, 1210
Grand Trunk Pacific Railway receivership, 1116, 1152
Hutterites and Mennonites, 1924
Immigration
Exclusion of certain classes, 1916
Deported conspirators, amdt., 1951
Treatment of immigrants, 1916
Judges' railway expenses, 2641
Militia, permanent force, 3972
Newsprint Control, 4541
Prohibition, 2673
Public ownership of railways, 1630, 1757, 1760
Railway Act, local freight rate agreements, 4139
Subsidies, mistaken policy of, 1297
Titles, 1451, 2731
Winnipeg strike, 2799

Rideau Hall, 2500-2

Rideau Junction townsite, ques. 2398

Ridley, Mr. John, ques. 2566

Rimouski and overseas mail, 886, 929

River Beaudette-St. Zotique roadway, ques. 2144

Roads. See Highways

Robb, Mr. James Alexander (Chauteauguay-Huntingdon)
Agricultural implement duties and freight rates, 3697-8, 3706
Béland, Dr., M.P., welcome to, on release from German prison, 4
Board of Commerce, 4528-30
Business of the House
Legislation to be brought down, 1616, 2398
Weekly statement of prospective legislation, 599
Canada Grain Act Amdt., 3956-60
Canals, contracts, system of, 1598-1600
Canadian Trade Commission, ques. 644
Caughnawaga Reserve, 2902, 4057-8
Civil Service, enlisted men, 2925
Committee, Standing, 2
Cost of Living, 4316
Customs, rebate of duty, ques. 646
Dairy products and the war, 2966-8
Delayed returns, 886
Dominion water powers, 2513-7, 2523
Exhibitions, 2973
Toronto fair, 2997
Export trade, Trade Commission, etc., 2238
Farm help, demobilization of farmers' sons, 1958
Flour mill machinery, 4006
Franchise Bill, probable date, 2906
Good roads, 3902, 4392
Grain trade—operation of elevators, 4087, 4099-4100
Grand Trunk Pacific receivership, 686
Greece, supply of wheat to, ques. 2907
Housing scheme, 2540, 2564
Income tax and judges' and others' pensions, 3711, 3719
Income, taxable, gross, ques. 2294
Laurier, Sir Wilfrid, death of, 3
Live Stock Act Amdt. Bill, 2061-7
Militia
Accounts, audit of, ques. 2199
Permanent force, 2968, 2974
Amdt. to 3r. of Bill, 4002
National harbours and grain trade, 3751
Oil for asphalt manufacture, 4005
Pension cases, 3003
Rails from Canadian railways sent overseas, 2239
Railways
Public ownership of, 686
Provinces and branch lines, 695
Reclamation of Dominion Lands, 708
Schools and religious teaching, 2413
Seed grain advances, 1040, 1042, 4047
Sharpe, Lieut.-Col., death of, 3
Siberia, economic commission, ques. 613
Statistics Act Amdt., 595-9
Trade discrimination in Britain, 72

Robb, Mr. James Alexander—Con.
War expenditure
Vouchers for overseas payment, 1710
$350,000,000 vote, 2237
War Measures Act, 2148
Water-borne traffic, control of rates, 2942, 2950
Weights and measures, 2149
Wheat, free, 3707
Winnipeg strike, postal employees, 2508

Roe, Mr. James Sydney, ques. 1216

Ross, Commander J. K. L., offer of destroyer, ques. 880, 1534

Ross, Mr. Duncan Campbell (West Middlesex)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 500. Sir Arthur Currie, 500; demobilization — prospective deficit, 501; vocational training, pensions, land settlement, 502; franchise — War-time Elections Act, 503; public health—farmers and profiteering, 504; Daylight Saving — interior terminal elevators, 505; rural credits—tariff, 506; national unity, 507
Canadian National Railway Bill, 1669-70
Daylight Saving, 903
Fisheries, officers, 2893, 2895
Live Stock Act Amdt. Bill, 2065-6
Railway Act, Consolidation; transmission lines on highways; Hydro-Electric, 3091
Reclamation of Dominion Lands, 641

Ross, Mr. P. D. 2915-7
Buildings owned by, rental of, ques. 1438

Rosslyn, 3191

Ross Rifle, ques. 976, 1614

Roumania. See Foreign trade

Rowell, Hon. Newton W. (President of the Privy Council)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 358. War's effect on Canada's national status—Canada and Germany contrasted, 358; Imperial War Conference, 359; Dominions and foreign affairs — Imperial War Cabinet or Council, 360; the Dominion and the Crown — Imperial War Cabinet and Parliament of Canada, 362; Dominions and Prime Minister of Great Britain, direct communication, 365; consulting Parliament, 366; Peace Conference, Canada's representation — League of Nations, 367; Russia, Bolshevism, 368; Canada's war troops, Gen. Sir Arthur Currie, 370

Rowell, Hon. Newton W.—Con.

Air Service, mail by, 2036
British Nationality, Naturalization and Aliens Consolidation Bill, 3821-2
Budget, 3401. Victory bonds, 3402; Hon. Mr. Crerar and prices—iron, steel and coal industries, 3405; national debt, 3406; tariff revision, 3407; cost of living and industrial unrest, 3409; Bolshevism, 3412; unity and strength, 3413
Cabinet secrets, alleged revelation of, 3628, 3631
Canadian National Railway, 1747
Public ownership, 1749
Canadian representation at Washington, 2202
Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association —oath, 2016
Civil Service
Overmanning of, 4671
Postal workers' correspondence, 2342
War bonus, 2314, 2924-8
Consular officers, payments to, 1900
Dominion Police, pay of, 2925-6
Electric and Power Companies Bill, 4576-80
Flavelle, Sir Joseph, 2074
Good roads, 4392-5
Government by Order in Council, number of orders passed, 4487
Gundy, Mr. W. P., death of, 3196
Gunning, Mr. John G., 1435
Health, 1366-80
Social and industrial conditions, 1366
Health Department Bill, 843, 1164, 1182-3, 1186-1206
Housing scheme, ministerial explanation, 2532, 2539, 2551-64
Imperial War Cabinet and Imperial War Conference
Ministerial statement, 1044
Naturalization, East Indian immigration, cables and passports, resources of the Empire, Canada's status, War Graves Commission, etc., 1047-70, 4125-6
India, famine in, 2616
International Joint Commission, 1901-4
Lake of the Woods, technical and control boards, 2067
Mounted Police Bill, Senate amdt., 3809
Newspapers and periodicals, publication of ownership and control, 2026, 4482
Newsprint control, 4663
Ocean rates, 1051, 2069
Paris agency, 1901
Peace Treaty, 2146
Eight-hour day and, 1996, 2044

Rowell, Hon. Newton W.—Con.

Pensions
Commission, expenses, 2448
Com., 139
Pension Act Amdt. Bill, 4172-96, 4199-4208, 4274-99
Resolution and explanation, 4023
Taylor, Mr. John, 3002
"Unmarried wife," 4274, 4279
Vote, $28,000,000, 3000-4
Postal Service
Canadian National Railway and mails, 2094
Finance and expenditure, 2032, 2040, 2092
Mail contracts, 2079-81
Ottawa-Pembroke service, 2034
Postage rate, suggested reduction, 2041
Postmasters, substation and rural, 2030
Post Office officials serving overseas, 2040
Rural mail, 2081
Salaries and allowances, 1435, 1794. See also, under this title, Winnipeg
Prohibition, 2675-82
Purchasing Commission Bill, 1162, 3195-6, 3223-7, 4441-52
Salaries of Commissioners, res., 3810-6
Railway Act Consolidation, disagreement with Senate, 4160
Royal Northwest Mounted Police
Appropriation accounts tabled, 40
Supply; Ministerial explanation; history of force, war record, etc., 2313-30
Royal Northwest Mounted Police Bill, 2510, 2695-6
St. Lawrence water powers, 1995
St. Lawrence River Power Company, 2396
Shale Oil Company, 1056
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 2761-78
Officials, 4674-6
Titles, 2739
Transatlantic mails, Rimouski and Halifax, 929, 1794
Vocational training for under-age soldiers, 1016
War appropriation; demobilization appropriation, 2564
War Measures Act, Orders in Council under, 4135
War tax on cheques—postage stamps for, 2031-2
War Trade Board, 2072
Washington, Canadian representation; War Mission, 2070, 2076, 2202
Winnipeg strike, 3843-5
Post office employees and, 2508, 3809, 4345

Royal Air Force. See War

Royal Assent, 1111, 3213, 4701

Royal Military College building, Clerk of ques. 4377

Royal Naval College, 2850

Royal Northwest Mounted Police, 173, 4672
Appropriation accounts tabled, 40
Supply: Increase of the force; history, war record, etc., 2313

Royal Northwest Mounted Police Act Amdt. Bill. Res., 2509; 1r., 2532; 2r., com., 2695; 3r., 2752; Senate amdt., 3809, 3823

Royal Society of Canada, report tabled, 138

Rural Credits, 506

Ruthenians, 1938, 3472. See also Poles

Ste. Anne de Bellevue, soldiers' hospital, ques. 1212

Ste. Barnabé Island, ques. 4464

St. Catharines Bay and Tadoussac service, 411

St. Charles River
Belanger vs. The King, 1021
Contract for damming, ques. 677
Works, 1279, 2788

Ste. Famille wharf, 2786

St. Gedeon, postmaster, 410, ques. 972

St. John Harbour, 2359

St. John Harbour Commission Bill. Res., 4299; 1r., 2r., com., 4306; 3r., 4339

St. John and Quebec Railway Bills
1. Gagetown and Westfield. 1r., 41; 2r., com., 696; 3r., 784
2. Centreville and Andover. Res., 2567; 1r., 2568; 2r., com., 2799; 3r., 2800

St. Laurent wharf, 2785

St. Lawrence
Coal trade, shipping for, 4335
Dams, 886
North shore, communication, 411
Ship channel, 2608
Water power. See that title

St. Lawrence River Power Company, 2396

St. Louis Road property, ques. 604. See Gustave

St. Malo Workshops, ques. 1212

Ste. Marie wharf, ques. 1958

St. Pierre-Miquelon mails, 2092

St. Stanislaus Novitiate. See Military Service, Guelph

St. Zotique-River Beaudette roadway, ques. 2144

Saguenay and Labrador winter communication, ques. 2565

Salmon Fishing Licenses. See Fisheries Act

Salvarsan, sale of, ques. 2144

Sanders, Lieut. J., ques. 3067

Saskatoon public building, 739

Savard, Mr. Edmond (Chicoutimi-Saguenay)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 406. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier —French Canadians, 407; enlistment in Chicoutimi and Saguenay, 408; draft evaders—cost of living—woman suffrage, 409; patronage, local postmasters, 410, 412; returned soldiers, 410; North shore communication, 411
Boudreault, Mr. Benjamin, ques. 1439
Coté, Mr. Louis, ques. 2566
L'Hereux, Maj. Napoleon, ques. 978
Military Service Registrar, Montreal, ques. 973
Pariseault, Lt., ques. 884
St. Gedeon, postmaster, ques. 972
Saguenay-Labrador, ques. 2565
Tadoussac-Labrador, ques. 3327

Saw Pit Wharf, 2782

School and Dominion Lands in Taber irrigation district, 4210

Schools, Dominion, non-sectarian, 2403. See Education

Schools of Navigation, 2601

Scientific Research. See Industrial

Scotch Cove, 2782

Scott, Mr. Frank Stewart (South Waterloo)
Budget, 3302. Siberian expedition—tariff—shoe manufacture, 3302; business profits tax—income tax, 3307; Canada's record, 3309
Canadian National Railway, 2111
Public ownership of railways, 2111

Seaweed, 2787

Secretary of State
Powers of in naturalization. See British Nationality
Report tabled, 138

Sedition and Seditious Propaganda Com,, 1956, 3285. See also Criminal Code; Immigration; Naturalization

Seduction. See Criminal Code

Seed Grain, ques. 979, 2446, 4047, 4054-5

Seed Grain Advances Bill. Res., 625; 1r., 629; 2r., com., 1029; 3r., 1111

Seguin, Mr. Paul Arthur (L'Assomption-Montcalm)
National Service Registration, ques. 1907, ques. 2296

Selkirk, postmaster, ques. 1308

Semolina, 3681

Senate
Cabinet Ministers in, 406, 1002-11
Speaker of, living allowance, 2444

Sergeant-at-Arms, Deputy appointed, 4

Sexsmith, Mr. John Albert (East Peterborough)
Bran and shorts, 4007
Cow testing, 2982
Fertilizers Act Amdt., 2465-7
Good roads, 794, 3901
Income tax, farmers and, 3733
Military Service Act, 1323
Oleomargarine, 2982
Pensions, 4184
Railway Act Consolidation — telephone clause, 2644-8, 4168

Seymour Narrows Battery, ques. 975

Shale Oil Company, 929, 1056, 4070

Sharpe, Lieut.-Col. Sam, D.S.O., M.P., death of, 3, 549

Shaughnessy, Lord, 648, 1630, 1820, 1825

Shaw, Mr. Hugh Murray (Macleod)
Budget, 3583

Sheard, Mr. Charles (South Toronto)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 78. After-war problems—pensions, 79; franchise, 80; aliens—Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 81; Health Department, 82; public revenues and taxation, 84; Civil Service Commission, 85; Civil Service salaries, 86
Canadian National Railway, 1649
Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, 1211, 2295
Civil Service
Appointments by Commission, 2633
Reclassification, 2292
Divorce Court Bill, 3785
Electric and Power Companies Bill, 4580-3
Fertilizers Act Amdt., 3464
Pensions and disability, ques. 882
Proprietary medicines, 2482
Soothing syrups, 2491
Public Health Bill, 1175, 1182-5, 1205
Public health and social conditions, 1366

Sheard, Mr. Charles—Con.
Soldiers' votes, statement of Mr. W. T. R. Preston, 4135
Titles, 2705
Transmission lines on highways; powers of municipalities, 3100, 3117

Shell Oil Company, 929, 1056, 4070

Shipbuilding, 43, 53, 123, 219, 1688, 4682
Canada's achievements for war, 19
"Canadian Volunteer," ques. 3998
George, Right Hon. David Lloyd, opinion of, 2253
Government programme, ques. 613, ques. 644
Vote of $30,000,000, ministerial statement, 2202, 2251
Tariff and, 2217, 2223
Vessels built by Government since 1917, ques. 610

Shipping. See also Canada Shipping Act Amdt.
Inter-imperial, 1051
Registration, 2602
Shortage of Canadian tonnage, 2207

Ships. See Vessels

Siberian Economic Commission, ques. 613, ques. 747, ques. 1535

Siberian Expedition, 143, 227, 334, 3297, 3741
Alleged imprisonment of Canadian soldiers, 4000
Draftees in, 321
Liquor for, ques. 845
Return of, 971, ques. 1216
Statements by Ministers, 319, 1062

Sick Mariners' Fund, 40, 2615

Sifton, Hon. Arthur Lewis (Minister of Customs and Inland Revenue)
Budget, 3260. Hon. Mr. Crerar's resignation, 3260; taxation methods—tariff changes — people seeking special favours — tariff commission, 3261; after-war problems, 3262

Sifton, Sir Clifford, 1908

Signal Service, 2610

Simpson, Mr. Thomas Edward (West Algoma)
Budget, 3565. Canada's debt incurred at home—pensions, 3565; cost of living, 3566; iron and steel industries and the tariff, 3567

Sinclair, Mr. John Ewen (Queen's P.E.I.)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 457. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—highways—public health, 458; production and marketing, 459; P.E.I.

Sinclair, Mr. John Ewen—Con.
Address—Con.
railway, broadening the gauge, 460; fisheries and returning naval men—Orders in Council — deserters — franchise, 461; aliens—national unity, 462
Agricultural Gazette, 2990-1
Charlottetown Convalescent Home, ques. 2296, ques. 4464
Cold storage, 2983
"Earl Grey," icebreaker, ques. 2145
Fertilizers Act Amdt., 2287-9
Good roads, 4434
Greater production grant, ques. 600, ques. 2566
Judges' salaries, 4223
"Minto," icebreaker, ques. 3242
Oyster culture, 2892, 2898
"Prince Edward," car ferry, 4618
Prince Edward Island Railway, 460, ques. 4377
Soldiers at Halifax, 1663

Sinclair, Mr. John H. (Antigonish and Guysborough)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 51. Mr. McKenzie, leader of the Opposition — late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 51; victory and peace, 52; highways and housing, provincial rights—shipbuilding, 53; Military Service Act, 54; Union government—party, 55; patronage and graft—public loans, 56; food and Food Board—prices—industrial unrest, 57; Civil Service—trade with the United States, 58; efficiency, 60; Government commissions, 61; labour and reconstruction, 62
Air Board Bill, 2051, 2057
Alien enemies, property of, ques. 1535
Amherst
Doctors, payments to, ques. 3377
Internment camp, 2565, 3848
Mineral Water Company, ques. 3997
Anti-loafing, ques. 883
Arisaig Wharf, 2780
Ballantyne's Cove, 1302
Bankruptcy Bill, 2004
Bear River, ques. 3242
Bliss, Dr. C., ques. 3397
Board of Commerce, 4556-8, 4566
British Columbia fishing licenses, 934
Bruce, Dr., report of, 1483
Business Profits Tax, ques. 1791
Canada Food Board, ques. 602
Canada Shipping Act, 3756-7, 3931-7
Canadian Expeditionary Force, ques. 1440, ques. 2798
Canadian Generals, portraits of, ques. 1905

Sinclair, Mr. John H.—Con.
Canadian Mission in London, ques. 1905
Canadian National Railway
Abandoned lines, 1709
Annual meeting, 1810
Construction of lines, extension of time for, 1721
Directors, 1671, 1810
Finance, parliamentary control, 1417, 2124
Fiscal year, 1706
Governor in Council instead of shareholders, 1676
Steamships, 1681-4
Canadian Northern Railway, net earnings, ques. 2462
Canadian vessels requisitioned by Admiralty, ques. 1908
"Canadian Voyageur," steamer, ques. 1212
"Canadian Warrior," steamer, ques. 3327, ques. 3470, ques. 4241
Canals
Positions on, and returned soldiers, 3177
Welland, deepening of, 3181-4
Canso
Distressed seamen, 2614
Harbour master, 3158
Cars and rails, contracts for, ques. 1907
Censorship, Hazel Hill and Canso, ques. 847
Civil Service
Appointments, 963
Commissioners, 2909, 2916
Efficiency, 1559
Overmanning of, 4672
Combines, 4570, 4592-7
Copyright, 4022
Dominion Elections Act, 4621, 4629, 4648-51
Dominion Parks, sites in Western Nova Scotia, 2304
Dominion water powers, 2513, 2515
Duchemin, Mr. H. P., ques. 1536, ques. 1791
Economic Commission to Siberia, ques. 1535
Economy, 4051, 4673
Experimental Farms, 2977
Fair wage officer, Nova Scotia, ques. 1907
Farm tractors, ques. 1536, ques. 2048
Fertilizers Act Amdt., 2286-9, 2464-6
Fish and Fisheries
Compulsory inspection, 951
Lobsters, 714-726, 2894, 2899, 2900
Oysters, 2894
Protection service, 2848
Salmon (Fisheries Act Amdt.), 3758-61
Twine and cordage, 3708
Waste, utilization of, 3341
Foreign credits, Italy, 3831-3
Fort Lawrence, dredging, ques. 3680

Sinclair, Mr. John H.—Con.
Freight rates
Farmers and, 3698
Raw sugar, on, 3471
Gold, prohibition of export, 1103
Goodwin, Dr. B. E., ques. 4070, ques. 4465
Gordon, Hon. Major Rev. C. W., ques. 1440
Government Employees' Compensation Bill, 702-7, 938-9
Government-owned vessels, 974-5, ques. 1306
Grand Etang, 2609
Grand Trunk Railway Company Bill, 1185
Guysborough public building, ques. 846
Halifax
Harbour master, 2802
Pilotage rate, 2694
Terminals, ques. 2398
Heatherton-Canso mail route, 2090
"Helena," motor boat, ques. 3998
Homestead entries, ques. 751
House of Commons—questions and returns, 648
Housing scheme, 2562
Immigration Act Amdt.
Discharged seamen, 1979
Illiterates, 1966
Penalty on transportation complaints, 1978
Immigration and Colonization Department, 2572
Income war tax, 3717-8, 3725
Losses, 3991
Unmarried women, 3993
Intoxicating liquors, illegal handling of, ques. 883, 960
Judges
County Court, 1769, ques. 2565
Salaries, 4375
Land values tax, 3839
Lands for school purposes, ques. 848
Live stock shipments, 2603
Livingstone's Cove, 2780-1
Loans, public, 4242
$100,000,000, cost of, ques. 1907
Lobster, canned, 714-726
"McKee," steamer, ques. 1212, ques. 2397
Marine hospitals, 1201
Marine rates, ques. 4241
Matches, stamps on, 969
Military Service
Deserters and absentees, ques. 879
Expenditure, ques. 973
Guelph Novitiate, 1248
Militia
Pensions, 2759
Permanent force, 2986
Morris, Col., ques. 2565
Mulgrave services, 1302, 1304
National harbours, 3743-4

Sinclair, Mr. John H.—Con.
National Parks, 4051-2
Naturalization, 4270-2
Naval recruiting in Prince Edward Island, ques. 646
Naval Service, 2836
Bronze Star, ques. 602
Discharge of men, fisheries needing help, 1959
New Harbour breakwater, 2783
Newspapers and periodicals, publication of ownership and control, 1564, 2021-3
Old-age pensions, 1268
Parliament Buildings, 2334
Patriotic Fund, 1164
Pensions, 4188, 4199
"Unmarried wife," 4281
Pictou Island, 2793
Pilotage, 2612, 2803, 2804, 2807, 3159
Port Felix custom house, 956
Postage rate
Letters, suggested reduction, 2041
Newspapers, ques. 727
Post Office supplies, 2091
"Prince George," steamer, ques. 746
Provident Fund Act, ques. 2045
Provincial subsidies, ques. 744
Public Health Department, 1191
Appointments, 1182
Public Works, Nova Scotia, 2781
Purchasing Commission, 3230, 3238-9, 4454
Railway Act Consolidation — telephones, 4167
Railway crossings, 936
Railways, subventions to, ques. 604
Reclamation of Dominion Lands, 709-713
Rideau Junction townsite, ques. 2398
Royal Naval College, 2850
Rural postmasters, ques. 1536
St. John Harbour Commission, 4302-3, 4337-8
Seed grain, 627, 1035-40
Shipbuilding, 1688, 2211, 2259-61, 4683-4
England, in, cost of, 2213
Permanency in Canada, 2260
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 1770-2
Soldiers' Settlement Board, 1075
Soldiers' Land Settlement
Nova Scotia loans, ques. 847
Solicitors, ques. 883
Statistics Act Amdt., 596
Steamship services, 1283, 1284
Steam shovels for Militia Dept., ques. 1907
Taxation, statistics of, 3839
Technical education, 3167-73, 3793, 3896
Telephone companies, 2646
Trawlers
Built in Canada, 2213
Sale of, ques. 751

Sinclair, Mr. John H.—Con.
"T. J. Drummond," steamer, purchase of, ques. 2397
War Purchasing Commission, ques. 1216
War Trade Board, 2073
Weights and measures, 2149
"Willihad," steamer, ques. 616
Wine Harbour, 2783
Wrecking plants, subsidies, 2603-5

Slate River, 3191

Slides and Booms, 4607

Smart, Brig.-Gen., charges by, 1099, 1483

Smith, Mr. William (South Ontario)
Daylight Saving, 893

Social Hygiene Conference, ques. 3068

Social Welfare. See Public Health

Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 81, 1896, 4673
Department of
Allowances; vocational training, 2776
Buildings, etc., vocational training, 2764
Deputy Minister, 3586
Director of Medical Services, resignation of, Col. F. McKelvey Bell, 3240, 3422, 3472, 3926, 4674
Hospitals, 2774
Maintenance of patients, 2770
Officials without overseas record, 4240
Parliamentary Secretary, resignation of, Mr. F. B. McCurdy, 185, 974, 4676
Report tabled, 270
Representation in House of Commons, 974
Staff and salaries, 2761, 2772, ques. 4240, 4479

Soldiers' Land Settlement, 88, 96, 153, 185, 300, 323, 343, 395, 413, 446, 588
Board, ques. 1075
Salaries, 2452
Solicitors, ques. 883
Land from forest reserves, 2953
Offers of land, ques. 610
Royal Air Force, inclusion of, 1437
Santa Lucia, troops at, ques. 615
See also Soldiers' Land Settlement Bill; Dominion Lands and Parks; Dominion Forest; Reclamation

Soldiers' Land Settlement Bill, 1616. 1r., 2291; 2r., com., 3848, 4012; 3r., 4073
Board of Commissioners, 3873
Compulsory purchase, 2875
Default, resale, 3882-4
Exemption from seizure under ordinary laws, 3885
Free soldier grants, 3879, 4014
Garden villages, 4012. See that title

Soldiers' Land Settlement—Con.
Indian reserves, land from, 3875, 4015
Lands sold to Board free of commission, 3891
Liens, statement of, 3888
Loans on stock, fruit trees, etc., 3890, 4014
Regulations, 4014
School lands, 3879
Security, 3887
Surveys, 3890
Taxation, 3888
Title to land, 3874

Soothing Syrups. See Proprietary

Sowden, Mr. Felix M., ques. 729

Speaker (Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes)
Living allowance, 2445
Rulings and statements of
Adjournment—matter of urgent public interest—leave to discuss (Gen. Smart and Col. Pratt's charges), 1099, 1101
Appeal from decision to House—Daylight Saving, 1432
Bills
Introduction, unprinted, not in order, 3754
Motion to commit, limits of debate on, 2617
Second reading, limits of discussion, 3200, 3818, 4506-9
Chair to be addressed, 3639
Committees
Appointment of members opposed to principle, 1482
Reference in House to proceedings of, 3590, 3603
Report of—to be accepted as regular, 4313, 4320
Amendment of, procedure in, 2722
Clerical errors, correction of, 2616
Daylight Saving
Motion, form of, 928
Time of meeting of House under, 1432
Debate, special latitude of, 4141
Debating same subject twice—Mr. McMaster's amdt. to the Budget allowed, 3260, 3677
Divisions—not needed if no contrary voice, 4527
Galleries of House, 1910
Internal Economy, Board of, report under Rule 9, 605
Language: "defraud the electors," 1325; "culprit," 1326; "miserable, cowardly slander," 1334
Lapsed order
Member speaking at time of lapse continues only by consent, 399
Reinstatement, motion for, not debatable, 398

Speaker (Hon. Edward N. Rhodes)—Con.
Rulings and Statements—Con.
Member speaking may not interrogate another, 3638
Motions, form of, 2722
Withdrawal of, 1259
Newspapers referring to proceedings of the House, 3660
Orders of the Day: appropriateness of discussion on calling, 271, 318, 357, 2201, 2202, 2294, 2399, 3472, 3473, 4239, 4335
Attack on Government not in order, 3194
Questions only, no debate, 1435, 1483
Reading of document, 1711
Privilege
Address instead of message from Senate, 642
Limitation of speech, on rising to, 1998
Procedure under general resolution takes precedence over procedure subsequently set, 398
Question in interruption of speaker, 275-6
Questions and answers
Answers not debatable, 648
Copies, supplying of, 612, 647
Reading of documents from outside criticising members of House, 1488
Reconsideration, 4140
Relevancy, 643, 878, 1330, 1335, 1337, 1382, 4146, 4150, 4167, 4506
Senate
Amdts., advisability of form of, 4153, 4157
Non-concurrence in, form of motion, 3810
Conference with, no suspension of sitting of House, 3948-9
Message to, motion not debatable, 4170
Reflection upon proceedings of, 4148, 4154
Six months' hoist, 903
Unanimous consent, 936, 1479, 2653, 3175, 4140
Bill, amdt. on. 3r., 696
Necessary, resuming speech on lapsed order, 399
Written speeches, 117

Stacey, Mr. Frank Bainard (*Fraser Valley)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 412. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier—party government, 412; Soldiers' Land Settlement, 413; Indian reserves—rural mail carriers and postmasters, 414—amdts. to B.N.A. Act—national unity, 415

Stacey, Mr. Frank Bainard—Con.
Budget, 3390. Farmers and the tariff, 3390; after-war troubles, 3391; industrial unrest, 3392; reasons for vote, 3394
Representation Act Amdt., 4, 727
Soldiers' Land Settlement
Compulsory purchase—Indian reserves—amdt., 3875-9, 4016
Payments, 3882

Stamp Taxes, alleged abuses under, 334

Standardization, Canadian Engineering Standards Association, 3842

Standing Orders, Com. appointed, 112

Starrar, Mr. Hall, ques. 616

Statistics
Imperial, 1057
Industrial, 1917, tabled, 550

Statistics Act Amdt. Bill. 1r., 139; 2r., com., 595; 3r., 625

Stead, Mr. R. J. E., appointment, 280

Steamship Services
Australia and New Zealand, 1105
Baddeck and Iona, 1296
France, service advocated, 1291
Freight services, 1285
Froude's Point and Lockeport, 1301
Grand Manan, 1301
Great Britain, ques. 1107, 1282
Gulf of St. Lawrence, ques. 3827
Halifax and West Cape Breton, 1301
Liverpool, 1294
Magdalen Islands-Pictou, 623
Need of, 1290-6
Newcastle, Neguac and Escuminac, 1303
Newfoundland, 1283, 1294
Petit de Grat and Mulgrave, 1303
Petitcodiac and Cumberland, 1303
Pictou and Montague, 1304
Pictou, New Glasgow and Mulgrave, 1304
Pictou, Mulgrave and Cheticamp, 1304
Port Mulgrave and Bras d'Or, 1304
Railway subsidies vs. steamship, 1296
South Africa, 1289, 1291
Sydney-Bras d'Or, 3829
West Indies and South America, 1283

Steam shovels for Militia Department, ques. 1907

Steel Plate Plant, Dominion Steel Company, 2209, 2251-60

Steele, Mr. Michael (South Perth)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 96. Returned soldiers—land settlement, 96; Liberal party—Union government—public health, 97; immigration, 99

*Name changed: formerly Westminster District. See pp. 4, 625, 727

Steele, Mr. Michael—Con.
Canada Food Board, ques. 2750
Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, 2015
Civil Service, Committee to inquire into efficiency of, 1554
Daylight Saving, 911
Divorce, 3781, 3790
Famine in India, 2616
Fish, Canadian, marketing overseas, ques. 2750
Immigration
Medical examination of passengers, 1974
Prohibiting certain classes, 1924
Mail contractors, 2088
Mennonites in Ontario, 1925
Orders in Council, number passed, ques. 2145
Parliament Buildings, 2337
Portland cement, duty on, ques. 1612
Proprietary medicines, 2479-81, 2485, 3826, 3938
Opium and derivatives, 2489-92
Public Health Bill, 1189
Child welfare, 1375
Rural postmasters, 2089

Stefansson Expedition, 2849

Stevens, Mr. Henry Herbert (Vancouver Centre)
Air Board Bill, 2051
Board of Commerce, 4470
Budget, 3315. Foreign credits—tariff, 3316; war and protection, 3318; high cost of living, 3319; coal duties and freight rates, 3329
Canada Grain Act Amdt.—grain trade, operation of elevators, 3947-9, 4077-84, 4090
Chinese immigration, ques. 751
Civil Service, appointment of returned soldiers, 281
Combines, 4569
Copper refineries, 1106
Daylight Saving, 911
Elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur, ques. 604
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 872
Foreign trade—credits and ships, 2167, 3835
Grain on Great Lakes, ques. 599
Immigration, restrictions, 769-773
Judges, County Court, 2954
Judges' salaries, British Columbia, 2305, 2310
Mounted Police, service in Northwest Rebellion, 2322
Panama Canal, trade via, 1283
Railway Act Consolidation; transmission lines on highways; consent of municipalities, 3083

Stevens, Mr. Henry Herbert—Con.
Telephone companies, 2646
Transatlantic flight of Hawker, 2564
Vancouver harbour, 4021
Vancouver pension office, ques. 3377
Vocational training for under-age soldiers, 1011, 1020

Stewart, Mr. John A. (Lanark)
Insurance Act Amdt.—"actuary," 3987
Judges and income tax, 4230
Prohibition, 2351, 2356
Proprietary medicines, 2480-2, 2486
Coal tar derivatives and opium, 2490
Purchasing Commission, 4450

Stewart, Mr. Thomas Joseph (West Hamilton)
Canadian Niagara Bridge Company, 4345
Railway Act Consolidation
Commission's control of rates, 4142
Reconsideration of clause 325 objected to, 2929, 4140
Water-borne traffic, rates, 2943
Telephone companies, 2650

Stewart, Maj.-Gen. J. W., 2868

Stock Feed, purchase of, 2447

Stock Yards. See Live Stock Act Amdt. Bill

Strikes. See Industrial Unrest

Submarine, gift to Canada, 229, ques. 2868

Sugar, raw, freight rates on, 3471, 4683

Supply, Com. of, ordered, 592

Supply, 842, 954, 1044, 1105, 1262, 1282, 1483, 1588, 1886, 2016, 2067, 2202, 2251, 2291, 2313, 2359, 2440, 2493, 2761, 2780, 2808, 2887, 2952, 2959, 3175, 3827, 4033, 4475, 4601, 4664

Supply Bills. See Appropriation Acts

Supreme Court
Chief Justice, allowances to. See Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles
Final appeal, 1059

Surveys, 4049-51, 4055
Geodetic, 4045
Military, 1899

Sutherland, Mr. Donald (South Oxford)
Air Board Bill, 2060
Board of Commerce, 4512
Civil Service
Efficiency, 1561
Transfers, 1269
War bonus, 2929
Daylight Saving, 896
Good roads, 3904

Sutherland, Mr. Donald—Con.
Grain trade—elevators and mills, 4091
Immigration, 1884, 1910, 2595
Industrial unrest, causes of, 2929
Labourers needed, 3905
Live Stock Amdt. Bill—price of butter, 2064-5
Mail contractors and city postmen, 2081
Noxious weeds, 4091
Pensions Board; appointments and returned soldiers, ques. 605
Public Health Bill, appointments, 1184
Railway Act
Senate amdts., telephones, 2645-50, 4154
Rural mail delivery and closing of offices, 2086-7, 2928
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 2767-9
Terminal elevators, ques. 880
Titles, 1478
Wounded soldiers, Civil Service positions for, 995

Sweeney, Cpl. George, ques. 3067

Sydney Wharf, 4613

Taber Irrigation District Bill. 1r., 3997; 2r., com., 4210; 3r., 4211

Tadoussac-Labrador winter communication, ques. 3327

Tariff. See also Address; Budget; Taxation
Boots and shoes from United States, ques. 978
Commission, 311, 484
Implements and raw materials, 142, 514
Luxuries, on, ques. 749
Proposed amdt. of Mr. McMaster, 794

Taschereau, Mr. Alleyn, ques. 3066

Taxation. See also Address; Budget; Tariff
Commissioner of, 2798
Staff of, 3712
Methods, 830
Provincial taxation of Dominion lands, 709

Taylor, John, pension case of, 3001

Taylor, Senator George, death of, 885

Technical Education Bill. Res., 3164; 1r., 3175; 2r., com., 3791, 3891; 3r., 4136
Question as to time of presenting, 1616

Telegraphs and Telephones
Government, 4608
Nova Scotia, 2793

Thanksgiving Day Bill. 1r., 1305-6

Thompson, Mr. Alfred (Yukon)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 298. Union government, 298; Orders in Council, 299; women's franchise—Opposition leader—land for soldiers—immigration, 300; Health Department—foreign trade, 301; highways—aerial navigation and Canada's great hinterland, 302; world commerce via Canada by airship, 305; Canada's lead in great enterprises, 306
Immigration, medical examination, 1975
Mining machinery, 3692
Naturalization, 4273
Red Cross Society, 3168
Scientific Research, 4462
Shale oils, 3692-3
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 2763-4, 2766, 2771
Vancouver-Skagway route, 3070
Yukon Act Amdt., 503-5
Yukon Placer Mining Amdt., 629-632
Yukon, wheat growing, 2973

Thompson, Lt.-Col. Alfred, M.P., ques. 747

Thompson, Mr. Thomas Henry (Hastings East).
Daylight Saving, 906
Income tax, 3714-5

Thomson, Mr. Levi (Qu'Appelle)
Air Board Bill, 2057
Board of Commerce, 4568
Budget, 3579. Representative government, 3579; Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt., 3580; free trade or protection, 3581; income tax, 3582
Judges and income tax, 4234
Naturalization, 4263
Prohibition, 2682-4
Tariff, Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt., 823
Titles, 2739

Timber purchases in Canada, 1361

Time. See Daylight Saving

Titles
Address to His Majesty the King, motion for (Mr. Nickle), 1441
Amdt., appointment of Special Com. (Mr. J. D. Reid), 1464
Amdt., to change phraseology (Sir Thomas White), 1479; agreed to on div., 1481
Committee report, 2359
Correction, 2615
Day fixed for discussion, 2617
Motion to adopt (Mr. Nickle), 2696; agreed to on div., 2749
Amdt. (Mr. Nicholson, Algoma), 2722; neg. on div., 2749
Address to the King acknowledged by H.E. the Governor General, 3377

Tobin, Mr. Edmund William (Richmond and Wolfe)
"Bayfield," steamer, ques. 608
Boots and shoes from United States, ques. 978
Canada Registration
Persons registered and cost, ques. 728
Use made of information, ques. 728
Canadian National Railway, ties, 3900
Commanders Thurston and Seddon, ques. 608
Grand Trunk Provident Fund, ques. 1213
Kingsmill, Admiral, visit to Victoria, ques. 1340
Kohn, Mr. Louis, Secretary, Economic Commission to Siberia, ques. 747
Land grants to railways, ques. 975
Members of Parliament, sessional indemnity, ques. 749
"Mildred McColl," H.M.C.S., ques. 747
Military Service Act
Defaulters, ques. 883
Exemptions, ques. 1108
Expenditure, ques. 645
Men of 19 years, registration of, ques. 615
Police employed, ques. 972, ques. 973
Regulations in force, ques. 646
Militia, permanent force, 3984
Montreal terminal and tunnel, ques. 1213
Naval air bases, ques. 1532
Naval Service, Canadian ratings in Grand Fleet, ques. 608
Ottawa
Central Station, ques. 1213
Federal Hotel, lease of, ques. 2045
Proprietary medicines war tax, ques. 1107
Seed grain, ques. 979, 1030
Soldiers' Land Settlement, ques. 610
"Stadacona," H.M.C.S., ques. 747

Tolmie, Mr. Simon Fraser (Victoria City)
Air Service
Air Board Bill, 2060
Aviation in Canada, ques. 1340
Mails by, 2036
Budget, 3569. Tariff and Japanese competition—development of natural resources, 3570; labour unrest, 3571; dairy products, beef and pork, 3572; British embargo on Canadian cattle, 3573
Cold storage, 2986
Good roads, 4429
Judges' salaries, 2958
Live stock, pure-bred sires, 2995
Tuberculosis in cattle, 2988
Wrecking plants, 2605

Toronto
Deputy Postmaster, 161, 276
Euclid Hall as hospital, ques. 749
Harbour improvements, 2363
Letter carriers, 1341

Toronto and Niagara Power Company. See Railway Act Consolidation; Electric and Power Companies

Toronto Suburban Railway, ques. 1678

Tourist Traffic, 4046-53

Town Planning and garden villages, 761. See also Housing

Tractors, ques. 1536, ques. 2048

Trade
Commission and Commissioners, ques. 664, ques. 1905, 3831, 4493
Development of, $150,000 vote, 3840
Discrimination in Britain, alleged, 72, 115, 140, 229
Embargo, 567
Export, reference in Speech from the Throne, 2
Exports and Imports, report tabled, 550
Foreign, and credit, 3831-7
France, 1099
Italy, 3808
Japan, 4019
Roumania, 1110, 1615-8, ques. 3241
Sir Clifford Sifton and, 1908
United States, 58
Great Britain, trade with and credits to, 1353-61

Trade and Commerce Dept., 335, 4605

Trahan, Mr. Arthur (Nicolet)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 293. Peace Conference, Canada's representation — Civil Service Commission, 293; reconstruction — resignation of Parliamentary Under Secretary—returned soldiers, 294; pensions—censorship, 295; industrial unrest—women's franchise and election—Government labour and social programme, 296; tariff, 297; national unity, 298
Budget, 3394. Finance and currency, 3394; remedies for existing difficulties, 3397; tariff, 3398; income tax, 3399; real wealth, 3401
Industrial Relations Commission, 4621
Public Health, 1186, 1376
Social welfare, child welfare, 1200-5
Technical education, 3792

Transatlantic Flight, ques. 2143, 2564

Trnsatlantic mail service, 1711, 1794

Transcontinental Highway, 1401

Transcontinental Railway. See Canadian National

Transmission Lines on highways. See Railway Act

Trawlers
Building and use of, ques. 746
Sale of, ques. 751
T-30, ques. 975, ques. 2397, 3472

Trotsky, Leon, ques. 880

Trudel, Mr. Alfred, ques. 2921

Tuberculosis and Indians, 4062

Tuck, Mr. Donald, 279

Turgeon, Mr. Onesiphore (Gloucester)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 307. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier —Opposition leadership, 307; Canada's soldiers — League of Nations — tariff, 308; reciprocity, 309; manufacturers—expenditures on Government railways, 310; taxation — tariff commission—War-time Elections Act, 311; highways—printers in Militia Department plant, 312
Budget, 3262. Procrastination charged, 3262; finance, 3263; cost of living, 3264; customs and other taxes, 3265; naval policy, 3266; Canada and free trade, 3268
Canadian National Railway
Lines to be included, 1682
Term of office of directors—vacancy—annual meeting, 1814
Gloucester, fisheries officer, 2893
Guelph Novitiate, 1253
Lobsters and hatcheries, 723, 2901-2
Marshall, Lieut. Hall, ques. 1790
Petit Rocher as site for experimental farm, 2965
Technical education, 3170

Tweedie, Mr. Thomas Mitchell March (West Calgary)
"Belgian-Canada," 2587
Canadian National Railway, 1832
Daylight Saving, 926
Divorce Court Bill, 3780
Dominion Parks, 4053
Electric and Power Companies Bill, 4586
Frozen beef, 1287
Highways, 790
Immigration
Deported conspirators, 1950
Hutterites, 1876, 1941
Illiterates, 1963
Offices in the West, 2588
Prohibiting certain classes, 1940

Tweedie, Mr. Thomas Mitchell March—Con.
Judges' salaries, 2308, 2312
Post office appointments after strike, 4354
Post office officials enlisted, 2040
Public Health, social welfare, 1192
Railway Act Consolidation, transmission lines on highways; consent of municipalities, 3120
Railway branch lines, 792
Returned soldiers, Civil Service positions for, 1001
Royal Northwest Mounted Police, 2324
Water-borne traffic, rates, 2947

Ukrainians, 1933, 1937, 2343, 3472. See also Poles, Ruthenians

Unforeseen Expenses, report tabled, 138

Uniats, 1384

United States
Canada's relations with, 153
Canadians entering and returning, 1110
Immigration legislation in, 2281
Prohibition in, 2659
Trade with. See Foreign trade
War and, 14, 117

Units of Electrical Measure Bill. 1r., 139; 2r., com., 713; 3r., 784

Universal Military Training 1891

Unprovided Items, 2461

Vancouver District Pension Office, ques. 3377

Vancouver Harbour Bill. Res., 3742; 1r., 3757; 2r., com., 4017; 3r., 4021

Vancouver-Skagway route, 3070

Vaudreuil-Soulanges mail, ques. 2566

Venereal Disease, 1373. See also Public health

Verville, Mr. Alphonse (St. Denis)
Canadian National Railway, labour representation, 2138
Dominion Police—Henri Bourdon, ques. 1440
Military Service Act, M.D. No. 4, ques. 1438
Public health, 1377

Vessels
Canadian, requisitioned by Admiralty, ques. 1908
Cold storage on steamers, ques. 882
Government-owned, ques. 1306
Employees on, ques. 609
How engaged, ques. 974
Names
"A. J. McKee," ques. 1212, ques. 2397
"Alert," The, 966
"Bayfield," steamer, ques. 608

Vessels—Con.
Names—Con.
"Brant," steamer, 2607
"Canada," H.M.C.S., ques. 608, 746
"Canadian Volunteer," ques. 3998
"Canadian Voyageur," steamer, ques. 1212
"Canadian Warrior," ques. 3327, ques. 3470, ques. 4241
"Champlain," steamer, ques. 616, 2006
"Earl Grey," icebreaker, ques. 2145
"Helena," ques. 3998
"Hochelaga," steamer, ques. 606, ques. 609
"Lady Evelyn," steamer, ques. 3680
"Lottie Russell,' steamer, ques. 746
"Mildred McColl," H.M.C.S., ques. 747
"Montcalm," steamer, ques. 1978, 2607
"Montmagny," C.G.S., ques. 1613
"Princess," steamer, ques. 615, ques. 3680
Steamer to replace, 2797
"Prince George," steamer, ques. 746
"Stadacona," H.M.C.S., ques. 747, ques. 880
"Tyrian," steamer, 2793-4
"Tuna," steamer, ques. 746, ques. 1905
"T. J. Drummond," ques. 2397
"T-30," trawler, ques. 975, ques. 2397, 3472
"Willihad," steamer, ques. 617

Vickers, Limited, trawlers built by, 2214

Victoria, Astrophysical observatory, 4045

Victory Loan. See also Budget
Cost of (1918), ques. 2798
Montreal brokers, ques. 1612
$50 bonds, ques. 2047

Vien, Mr. Thomas (Lobtinière)
Board of Commerce, 4507, 4531-2, 4561-4
Canadian National Railway
Capital stock, 1776, 1853
Construction of lines, extension of time for, 1765-9
Directors, 1783
Securities of other companies, 1781
Circulation and reserve, ques. 614
Cost of Living Com., 4309
Dominion Parks, expropriations for, 2302
Enlistments and conscriptions, ques. 614
Federal district, 4385
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 878
Force contracts, Government policy in, 1603-9
Gold shipments, ques. 614
Grand Trunk Pacific receivership, 693, 1112, 1261
Judges' salaries and duties, 2311
Lévis station, 2458

Vien, Mr. Thomas—Con.
Loans, taxed and tax-free, 2246-8
Mineral claims on Dominion lands, 2298-9, 2300-01
Railway crossings, 937-8
St. Charles River works, 1023
Schools and religious teaching, 2404
Shipbuilding, ques. 613
Soldiers' dependents, payments to, ques. 644
Telegraphs and telephones, 4609
War expenditure ($350,000,000), transportation, 2243

Vimy Ridge, 1058

Vocational Training. See also Technical Education
Governor General's Speech, 2
Soldiers, of. See Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment
Under-age soldiers, for, 1011

Votes and Proceedings. See House

Voters' Lists, provincial, 2446

Wagons, sleighs, etc., duties, 3707

Wallace, Mr. Thomas George (West York)
Railway Act Consolidation, 2620, 2642
Telephone companies, 2642, 2650

War
Aerial craft and forces, 1263, 2866
Commanders Thurston and Seddon, ques. 608
Royal Air Force, ques. 646, ques. 1611
Argyll House. See, under this title, Overseas administration, Headquarters Staff in London
Armistice, 1
Prolonged, 111, 550
Battles
St. Julien, Cambrai, Mons, 205, 337, 464-7
Ypres, second battle, 545
Belgium, restoration of, cablegram, 1955
British Remount Commission, ques. 976
Canada's record, 201, 420, 499. See also, under this head, Overseas Administration
Canadian Army Dental Corps, 2871
Canadian Army Medical Corps, 2869-71
Canadian Cavlary Brigade, 2866
Canadian Expeditionary Force, 388, ques. 1307
Enlistments in, ques. 2904
Files, mislaid, ques. 1108
Religion and nationality, ques. 3998
Resolution of gratitude, 4696
Rifles and ammunition, 338, 1614
Routine orders tabled, 40

War—Con.
Canadian Field Comforts Association, 2874
Canadian Military Y.M.C.A., 2874
Canadian Officers' Club, 2874
Canadian Railway Troops, 2868
Canadian Red Cross Society. See that title
Canadian War Contingents Association, 2874
Casualties. See also under this head, Overseas Administration
Canadians as prisoners of war, ques. 1077
French Canadians, ques. 644
Chaplains, 2871
Correspondence, production not in public interest, 753
Currie, Lieut.-Gen. Sir Arthur. See that title
Decorations for Canadians, 327, 339, 2861
Demobilization, 118, 207, 322, 501, 1058, 4535
"Aquitania," SS., port of landing, 2292
Farmers' sons, 1958
Men in garrison, 2236
Ministerial statements, 1793, 2861, 2874
Plans. See below, Overseas Administration
Port of landing, 2402
Progress of, 971
Strikes delaying, 3741
Troops awaiting embarkation, entertainment and occupation for, 648
Deserters, ques. 879. See below, Military Service
Director of Military Estates, 2871
Enlistment
Chicoutimi and Saguenay, 408
Quebec, 443
Expenditures, ques. 2798. See also Budget; War Expenditures Bill
Summary by Departments, 1345
Vouchers for overseas payments, 1710, 1789, 1865
Forestry Corps, 2869
German fleet, 266, 1289
Germany's surrender, 1
Hospitals
Charlottetown Convalescent Home, ques. 2296
Doullens, bombing of, 2870
Etaples, bombing of, 2870
Ste. Anne de Bellevue, ques. 1212
St. Dunstan's Hostel, 2874
Troyes, 2871
Imperial Munitions Board. See that title
Indemnity
Cable from Prime Minister, 928
Canada's claim, 450, 773, 929
I.O.D.E. Clubs, 2874
Khaki University, 2873
"Llandovery Castle," sinking of, 2870

War—Con.
Maple Leaf Clubs, 2874
Medical Service, financial administration, 2885
Memorials
Building, ques. 1216
Scholarships, 340
Ypres memorial, 4465
Military Service. See also Military Service Act
Conscientious objectors, 372
Conscripted men in active service, ques. 610
Defaulters and slackers, 263, 418
Cost and control of registration, ques. 610
Enlistments and conscriptions, ques. 614
Hull, Pontiac and Wright, ques. 602, ques. 603
Totals May-December, 1917, ques. 609
Registration and men of 19 years, ques. 615
Naval Service
Boys in, ques. 607
British Admiralty and, ques. 603
Bronze Star for, ques. 602
Canadians in British Grand Fleet, ques. 606, ques. 608
Coast protection, ques. 745, 1263
Courts-martial, ques. 607, ques. 1534
Increase of pay, ques. 607
Newfoundland ratings in, ques. 606
Prize money, ques. 607
Royal Naval Canadian Volunteer Reserve, ques. 603
Nursing Sisters, 2870
Overseas Administration
Canada's forces at the front, organization of, 204
Brigades and divisions, 2865
Canadian troops, control and administration, 2858
Outside Canadian corps in France, numbers, 2858
Canadian war records, 2043, 2872
Decorations won by Canadians, 2861
Canadians for Mesopotamia, Palestine, North Russia, 2860
Charges by Gen. Smart, Col. Pratt and Col. Price, 513, 522, 575, 1483
Base Commandant at Dunkirk, records of, ques. 1216
Cinematograph films, 2872
Demobilization, 2857, 2874
Documents, 2878
England, discharges in, 2861
Steamship accommodation, 2877
French Canadian Brigade, 150, 331
Headquarters Staff in London, 2879
Names, 2880

War—Con.
Overseas Administration—Con.
History of operations, forthcoming, 2857
Mails for soldiers, 2864
Ministerial statement — Sir Edward Kemp, 2856-87
New organizations in active service, 2859
Overseas Military Council, 2860
Overseas Purchasing Comm., 2871
Stores, horses, etc., disposition of, 2862
Trophies, 2043, 2864
Paintings, 2872
Paris Conference. See Peace; Reconstruction
Patriotic Fund. See Canadian Patriotic
Pay Corps, 2871
Provinces, respective war records, 265
Records and documents, preservation of, 330. See also under this head, Overseas Administration
Regimental Funds Board, ques. 2904
Rifles, Canadian and Lee-Enfield, 1614
Roumanian border, proposed guard by Canadians, 1618
Royal Automobile Club, 2874
Royal Northwest Mounted Police
Cavalry squadron to Siberia, 2316
Siberian Expedition. See that title
Soldiers. See also that title
Canadian, and British public opinion, 468
Canadian Generals, portraits of, ques. 1905
Canadian, in Ireland, ques. 849
Canadian, in Imperial service, 1997
Canadian, in Russia, ques. 1216
Casualties, 2873
Censorship of letters, 1663
Complaints, alleged suppression of, 1618
Crucifixion of Canadian by, Germans 2872
Dependents, ques. 644
Widowed mother, ques. 1908
Equipment allowances for officers, ques. 1663
Furloughs in France, 271
German-Canadians, 376
Gratuity, war service, 343, ques. 1791, ques. 4241
Irregularities
Camp disturbances, 2876, 2886
Kinmel (see that title) 357, 424, 437
Trials and sentences overseas, 1029, 1163, 1434, 1435, 1959, 3469, 3470
Parade in London, 2874
Pay and Allowance Board, ques. 3998
Pensions. See that title
Prisoners in Germany, 2873
Regulars vs. Irregulars, 200

War—Con.
Soldiers—Con.
Returned, 95, 105, 135, 159, 177, 183, 187, 222, 294, 328, 353, 410, 418, 445, 548
Civil Service and, 280, 291, 962
Positions for wounded: motion (Mr. McCurdy), 981; withdrawn, 1002; amdt. (Mr. Morphy), 998; withdrawn, 1002
Community life and, 768
Disability, industrial, Government insurance against, 994
Employment of, 218, 1607
Garden villages for, 761
Halifax, at, discharge or leave for, 1663, 1711
Land settlement, 502
"Northland" inquiry, report tabled, 111
Occupation for, 764
Officers, rank in militia after peace, 1890
Paralytic patients, ques. 749
Parliament, in, 473
Portland, reported debarkation at, ques. 647
Repatriation, cost of Committee, ques. 613
Technical education, 756
Treatment of, Government policy respecting, 753
Usurious practices against, ques. 977
Vocational training, 502
Quebec, province, in, ques. 971
Under-age soldiers and, 1011
Service medal, ques. 883
Sickness and disability
Influenza patients, ques. 845
Patients in England, ques. 615
Total disability, ques. 1213
The honoured dead
Bodies, ques. 1107
Graves, 332, 2861
Votes, 3135
War record of Canadian soldiers, 308. See also, under this head, Overseas Administration
Trophies, 1349, 2864
Universities, work of, 2870
United States, part in, 14, 117
Units
Princess Patricia's C. L. Infantry, 550, ques. 616
22nd Battalion, demobilization of, 1616
War Service button, 343
Women's work, 388, 470

War Credits in Europe, 1352. See also Trade

War Expenditures Bill ($350,000,000). Res., 1343; 1r., 1366; 2r., com., 2166; 3r., 2343

War Graves Commission, 1057, 1061

War Measures Act, 1163
Orders in Council passed under, 4135
Powers under, 652

War Measures Act Extension Bill. 1r., 1433; 2r., 1566, 2097, 2148

War Purchasing Commission, ques. 1216, 3198, 3202, 4307
Letter from Canadian firm criticizing, 3236

War Revenue Act, violation of, ques. 1791

War Service Gratuities, 4241

War-time Elections Act. See Address; Ukrainians; Franchise

Washington, representation of Canada at, 1074, 2070-9, 2201

Water-borne Traffic, control of rates, 2929. See Railway Act Amdt.

Waterhen Lake, reclamation, 709

Water-power, development and export, 1599-1600
French River, 1077
Lake Nipissing, 1341
St. Lawrence River, 886, 1796, 1901-4, 1956
Documents to be printed, 1995
St. Lawrence River Power Co., 2396

Water Supply. See Public health

Ways and Means, Com. of, 592, 3081, 2952, 4689

Weights and Measures, salaries of inspectors, ques. 2296

Weights and Measures Act Amdt. Bill. Res., 952; 1r., 954; 2r., com., 2149; amdt. (Mr. Jacobs), 2151; agreed to, 2158; 3r., 2290-1; Senate amdts., 4021

Welland Canal, 1592-1610
Contracts to be laid on the table, 1609

West Indies, ques. 1533
Cable, 3840

Westman, Mr. Eldon, Toronto, 277

Westminster. See Representation Act

Wharves, piers, breakwaters, 40

Wheat
Crop and prices, 1919, 3471, 4466
Export, ques. 1790
Financing crop, 977
Flour duties, 2681
Free, 3706
Greece, contract for, ques. 2907
Market for, 1711
Ships to carry, 2259, 2261
United States' crop, 2259

Wheeler, Mr. Seager, wheat specialist, 2970-2

Whidden, Mr. Howard Primrose (Brandon)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 221. Late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 221; aliens—Liberal party—returned soldiers, 222; housing — prohibition, 223; public health—vocational education, 224
Budget, 3422. Mr. Cannon, 3422; industrial unrest, 3423; tariff reductions, 3425; reasons for vote, 3426
Canadianizing immigrants, 1924
Immigrants, undesirable, 1923
Peace Treaty, 1382
Prohibition, 2669
Technical education, 3800

White, Hon. Sir Thomas, K.C.M.G. (Minister of Finance). See also Leader of the House
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 27. Leader of Opposition—mover and seconder, 27; war and victory—Peace Conference, 28; Germany must pay—demobilization and reconstruction, 29; unemployment — construction of railways—housing, 30; export trade—highways—franchise—House of Commons, 31; League of Nations—party government, 32
Agricultural implements—duties on, 3694-9, 3705
Drawback on duty, 3699
Freight rates on, 3697-8, 3703
Auditor General, death of, 116
Auditor General's report, 514, 744
Baker, the late Lt.-Col. George Harold, M.P., 2224
Bank and Dominion notes, 634
Bank mergers, 1089
Bankruptcy, 2275-7
Béland, Hon. H. S., M.P., welcome to, on release from German prison, 3
Bruce, Dr., report of, 1483
Budget Speech, 1712, 3135. Cost of the war to Canada, 3136; national debt, 3136-7; loans and maturities, 3137; national assets and resources, 3139; industrial production — foreign trade, 3141; revenue and expenditure, 3143; tariff and taxation proposals, 3144; railway rates and coal duties, 3145; income and business taxes, 3147; tariff revision, 3150; resolutions, 3151
In reply, 3605. Conscription of wealth, business profits war tax, 3606; tractors —war and finance, 3607; currency and exchange, 3609; victory loans, press advertising and support, brokerage, interest rate, 3611-13; calling in of White, Hon. Sir Thomas—Con.

In reply—Con.
loans—prices, 3615; income tax, 3616; land tax—credits for foreign trade, 3617; cost of living, 3619; prospects, 3620; fiscal policy, 3621; Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt., 3622; increased public expenditure — national unity, 3624
Business profits war tax, 3709-10
Cabinet Ministers, House of Commons and Senate and, 1005
Canadian National Railway
Annual meeting, 1646
Construction of lines, extension of time for, 1734
Directors, appointment of, 1634
Term of office of, 1646
Expenses to be paid out of revenue, 1699, 1704, 2103
Head office, 1651-2
Labour representation in directorate, 1643
Orders in Council, 1692-3
President's salary, 1657
Public ownership, 1734
Canadian Press news service, 4482, 4486
Censorship, 1110
Chartered Banks' excess circulation, 633-7, 1103
Currency Act—bronze coins, 637
Customs war tax, 3708
Daylight Saving, 647, 886, 923, 970, 1208, 1434
Ottawa time and Parliamentary time, 1342
Railway time, 1434
Dominion Iron & Steel and Nova Scotia Steel & Coal, 2342
Doukhobor lands, 2044
Economy in expenditure, 4246
Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway, 1208
Farmers' sons overseas—labour shortage, 141
Finance Dept., salaries, 4475-7
Fishing—twine and cordage used in, 3708
Fitzpatrick, Sir Charles, payments to, 856, 971
Flint, Dr. Thomas B., death of, 1341
Foreign exchange, 2239
Foreign trade, credits, etc., 1351, 1360, 2190
Belgium, 1360
Roumania, 1615, 1618, 3241
Fraternal Societies—Insurance Act Amdt., 1567
Galvanized iron, 3681, 3689-90
Gold
Prohibition of export of, 1102
Reserves, 636

White, Hon. Sir Thomas—Con.
Good roads, 4412
Government measures, time of presentation, 1616
Grand Trunk Pacific receivership, 316, 1127-37, 1159
Exchequer Court and, 664
Government's position under, 694
Resolution for, 649, 653
Grand Trunk Railway
Finance, 4245
Proposed taking over of, 657
Government offer, company's counter offer, 659, 694
Grand Trunk Railway Company Bill, 1184-85, 1210
Greece, supply of wheat, 2907
High Commissioner, reported resignation, 647
Horse racing, 1710
House of Commons
Ash Wednesday adjournment, 185
Committees, standing, 2
Easter adjournment, 886
Legislation to be brought down, 2399
Privilege—address from Senate instead of request by Message, 642
Questions and returns, 648, 886
Saturday and morning sittings, 3376
Vacancies, 1615
Wednesday sittings, 929, 1109
Income war tax, 3710-38
Assessment, date of, 3737
Children, allowance for, 3725
Depreciation, renewals, etc., 3720-1
Timber limits, etc., 3721-2
Judges, 3715, 3719
Life insurance, 3718
Living expenses, no allowance for, 3725
Losses, 3991-2
Members of Parliament, sessional expenses, 3992
Number of taxpayers, 3726
Personal and living expenses, 2980, 3990
Publicity of assessment, 3717-9
Returns—penalties, 3736-7
Shareholders of tax-paying corporations, 3725
Shareholders' profits through "rights," 3727-9
Undistributed profits, 3727
Industrial Relations Commission, 1432
International Waterways Commission, 462
Kinmel Camp riots, 357, 424
Statement and cables, 512
Laurier, Sir Wilfrid, death of, 2, 4, 5
Loans
Authorized and to be made, 2245-50
Borrowing powers and loans made, 2343-4

White, Hon. Sir Thomas—Con.
Loans—Con.
Printing of bonds in both languages, 4475
Taxed or tax-free, 2246-7
$75,000,000, New York, 4198
$100,000,000, domestic, 2245-6, 4242-6
Military management, charges of Gen. Smart, et al, 513, 647, 1101, 1502
Military Service, Guelph Novitiate, 1257
Ministerial changes, 139
National Transcontinental Railway, summary, 665
Newsprint control, 2240, 4536, 4540-8, 4662-3
Nickel, 3685-9
Oleomargarine, 3708
Ottawa, the Dominion Capital, planning of, 4249-50
Ottawa Improvement Comm., 4246-51, 4385-6
Packing companies, taxation of, 4478
Patriotic Fund, 1164
Peace Conference, 1382, 2200
Cable from Prime Minister, 929
Ploughs, duties on, 3691-3705. See under this head, Agricultural Printing Bureau strike, 424
Prohibition, 2654
Res., 2346-58
Public ownership of railways, 1734
Read, Mr. Joseph, M.P., death of, 1209
Reciprocity, in effect a binding agreement, 3670
Returning soldiers, entertainment and occupation for, 648
St. Charles River works, Belanger vs. The King, 1025
Sharpe, Lt.-Col. Sam, D.S.O., death of, 3
Soldiers' complaints, alleged suppression, 1618
Soldiers sentenced to penal servitude in England, 1163
Supply, interim vote 1919-20, 842
Tariff. See also under this title, Budget; Address
Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt., 808
Taylor, Hon. Senator George, death of, 885
Titles, 1458, 1479, 2729
Amdt. to motion for abolition of—appointment of Com. to consider, 1464, 1479
Trade discrimination against Canada, 72, 115, 140, 230, 314
Transatlantic flight of Hawker, 2565
Wagons, sleighs, etc., duties on, 3707
War correspondence not produced, 753

White, Hon. Sir Thomas—Con.
War expenditure
Vote of $350,000,000, 2166, 2190, 2239-50, 2343-4
"Any measures deemed necessary or advisable," 2241-5
Ministerial explanation, 1343
Vouchers for overseas payments, 1711, 1789, 1865
War indemnity, 775, 929
Wheat, market for, 1712
Winnipeg strike, 2616, 2753
Witley Camp,, 462-3

White, Mr. William Henry (Victoria, Alta.)
Budget, 3573. Hon. Mr. Sifton and Hon. Mr. Calder, 3574; aliens, 3575; tariff, 3576; Hon. Mr. Crerar, 3577
Franchise, 4626
Naturalization, 4129, 4264-6, 4272
Royal Northwest Mounted Police, 2318, 2330
Seed grain, 1041
Tariff, Mr. McMaster's proposed amdt., 816

Wholesale Grocers. See Private Bills

Wigmore, Mr. Rupert Wilson (St. John City and Counties of St. John and Albert)
Coal ships, Sydney-St. Lawrence, ques. 3471
Grand Manan steamship service, 1301
Public Health, 1194, 1196
Returned soldiers, Civil Service positions for, 998
St. John Harbour, 4301
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 2769

Wilson, Mr. Gordon Crooks (Wentworth)
Railway Act Consolidation, Senate amdts., telephones, 4156

Wilson, Mr. James Robert (Saskatoon)
Budget, 3537. Land settlers needed, 3538; oil—tariff, 3539; land tax, 3541; wheat prices, 3542
Canadian National Railway, 1418
Highways, 739
Housing scheme, 2538, 2552
Pensions, 4297
Saskatoon letter carriers' strike, 2084
Shipbuilding, 2261
Wheat crop, shipping of, 2261
Wheat, experiments of Mr. Seager Wheeler, 2970
Wilson, President, banquet to by His Majesty, 103, 148

Wine Harbour, 2783

Wireless, 2794, 2848

Witley Camp, 462, 3472

Woman masquerading as man, 2440

Woman Suffrage, 226, 296, 300, 405. See Dominion Elections Act Amdt.

Women in the public service, 341

Wool. See Live Stock Act Amdt.

Woollen Trade
British orders in Canada, 1363
Exports, ques. 845

Worsdale, Cpl. R. W., ques. 3067

Wrecking Plants, subsidies to, 2603-6

Wright, Mr. H. O. (Battleford)
Budget, 2587. Record of the Government, 3587; farmers and wheat prices, 3588; tariff and free trade, 3589

Yapp, Mr., agent for woollen sales, 1363

Yarmouth Bar, 2783

Year Book, 3839

Young men and politics, 376, 383

Yukon, Government of, 4045

Yukon Act Amdt. 1r., 5; 2r., com., 592; 3r., 625

Yukon Placer Mining Act Amdt. 1r., 71; 2r., com., 629; 3r., 649