MONTHLY MEETING TOWN COUNCIL

The Town Council of Hartland held their regular monthly meeting on Monday evening. All the members were present except Alderman MacIntosh.

The session was interesting as many important matters were discussed.

The Police committee who, at the last meeting, had been instructed to report on the possible location and cost of a lockup reported progress and asked for more time. No definite decision was reached by the discussion on the subject and the matter was left in the hands of the Committee. Mayor Keith reported having written to the Minister of Public Works in regard to the construction of a steel river bridge here to take the place of the present wooden structure within a few years, but the reply received indicates that the wooden bridge will be made as permanent as possible and will be covered. Provision will be made by the Local Government for icing in the winter.

As the Chairman of the By-Laws Committee is absent no new by-laws were presented for the consideration of the council.

H. B. Boyer asked through Ald. Hagerman that the by-law relating to the age at which boys would be allowed to visit his pool room without their parents or guardians be amended, reducing the age limit from 16 years to 14. This was put in the form of a motion and after an interesting discussion the motion was lost, and the age limit still remains at sixteen.

C. R. DeWitt, the secretary of the old water works commission gave a brief report of the water works incorporation.

Mr. Hayward read the Act which is now being presented to the Local Government for their approval. This embodies the taking over of the water system by the incorporated Town of Hartland, and the changing of the date of the town election from the first of April to the first of January.

Alderman Hagerman suggested having one man to act as street supervisor, water works superintendent, policeman, etc. The majority of the Council were in favor of this plan if the right man could be found. Aldermen Cameron, Hagerman and Morgan were appointed a committee to take up the matter and procure the services of a suitable man to fill these positions without delay.

In this connection an animated discussion took place on the subject of sidewalks. Some favored building permanent walks as far as the town could afford from year to year, while others thought it the better plan to build a greater length of walk and not spend too much in a short distance.

The finance committee presented their report, which was accepted. The estimated expenses of the Town for all purposes during the current year will be $6016.25. This will reduce the rate on property a few cents from last year's assessment and will make the poll tax nearly $3.00 under that of last year.

Aldermen Cameron and Britton were appointed a committee, to enquire into the matter of having our streets lighted by electricity.

A motion was passed instructing the Town Clerk to request the C. F. R. to have their wharves at this station cleaned and the crossings at Depot and Maple Streets and the one south of the Beaulieu Bridge lengthened.

A motion was also carried asking the local editor to request all the citizens of the Town to clean up their premises on or before the 15th instant.

(The Observer concurs heartily with this motion. A few hours spent by our citizens on their grounds in removing piles of old lumber, garbage and other litter would greatly add 100 percent to the appearance of our town. Our street committee also might cooperate and see that those who have been using our sidewalks and streets for wood sheds and store rooms now find other quarters.)

A motion was passed empowering the treasurer to draw, sign or endorse checks for the town.

Meeting adjourned at 11:30 p.m. (The reduction of poll tax is general all over the province and is not exclusively through genius of the Town Council, but rather is it the result of there being no patriotic fund this year.

It also seems the council is getting along slowly in the matter of by-laws. At their present speed the heaviest part of this work will be left for their successors in office. If we are not mistaken one of the first things a newly incorporated town must do is to divide itself into wards. This important work has not been done.—Editor.

GOVERNMENT IS THANKFUL FOR AID IN SAVING BRIDGE

That the government of the day appreciates the good work done by the people of Hartland on Sunday, March 23, work of necessity that resulted preventing perhaps the total loss of the river bridge, is shown by the following two letters received by The Observer on Monday:

Fredericton, N. B., Apr. 5.
Editor Observer: Will you kindly give me space in your paper to convey my own appreciation for what must have been good work on the part of the men living on both sides of the river. From the report of my superintendents I am moved to believe that the province is in a good sum of money by this heroic work, and I want the people to know that I, as Minister of Public Works, appreciate the aid given our paid superintendents and workmen, as I also applaud them for staying with the job until the structure was made secure.

P. J. Veniot
Minister Public Works
Fredericton, Apr. 5.

Editor Observer: Will you permit me to use your columns to extend thanks on behalf of the Government to those energetic citizens of the Town of Hartland and those opposite who volunteered and did such yeoman service on Sunday, March 23, for the saving of the Bridge from great, if not total, damage.

It would have been a local calamity if the force of the ice and freshet had not been met and overcome by the efforts of the people and the Bridge thus saved from destruction.

Death of Wm. S. Henderson

The community was saddened last week to hear of the death of William S. Henderson, which occurred after a long illness at the home of Thomas Travers at St. Thomas. The funeral service was held at Windsor on Saturday, and the remains were laid beside those of his father and brother, at Knowlesville.

Mr. Henderson was born at Hampton, 74 years ago. In early life he came up country and spent most of his life in this vicinity. In his early manhood he lived at Windsor, the exact locality being known as Arnsford, named after his nephew. For a number of years he lived in California and accumulated a considerable amount of money. The year after the Hartland fire of 1899 he bought a lot of land directly opposite the Exchange hotel from the late George R. Burr, and erected a store and dwelling thereon. He lived there a year or two, his wife conducting a millinery store, when he sold out to the late George Watson who lived and conducted business there, after greatly enlarging the building. Mr. Henderson then built a large wooden building, with store and warehouse. Here he lived until his wife's health failed, but he later built a large building on the lot adjoining on the south. He had also erected a small dwelling in the rear, when all his handiwork went up in flames in the disastrous fire of 1907, except the one he originally constructed, which, while badly damaged in the fire, was not entirely destroyed.

Mr. Henderson was a builder by trade, a Baptist in religion, a liberal politician, and a thoroughly honest, good hearted man by nature. His wife who died 20 years ago, was Miss Augusta Avery and he leaves no children, but an adopted daughter, Mrs. Nettie Dickinson of Hamilton.

Among his later building activ-

Lakeville Gives Soldier's Reception

On Friday evening, April 4, a public reception was given in the Hall to our soldier boys who have returned. An excellent program was carried out. Addresses were given by Revs. J. B. Champion and S. Johnson of Centerville, M. H. Manuel of Florenceville and Father Hayes of Deerville. The vocal and instrumental music was especially good and well rendered. Helen Wilson and Maud Hudson sang two duets while Miss Wilson also sang a solo with splendid effectiveness. Several patriotic pieces were interspersed between speeches, Mr. John Watterson was chairman and Mrs. Rob Jones organist. Seated on the platform were the following returned soldiers: Robert Beariste, Leonard Sears, Joseph Sears, Cleo Kennedy, Harry Lifford, Ernest Woodcock and Henry Campbell. After the conclusion of the program, the ladies provided a very substantial, delicious, delectable and delightful repast, in the manner in which the ladies of Lakeville are so proficient and willing to serve. Following the delicacies were further patriotic and popular music, followed by a "tripping of the light fantastic" by a number of the young people and the gathering dispersed about 1 a.m. with many happy memories of a very pleasant and profitable evening spent to do honor to our brave soldiers.

There were two houses only lately built on the Rockland road, just within the town limits.

A Night Adventure

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

"You'll never know what life is till you raid a watermelon patch," proclaimed the younger brother of Eleanor Vesey.

"And particularly the patch behind the big Waltham place," added Ned's chum, one familiar with Barton.

"You boys are too full of mischief to exist," chided Eleanor, but indignantly.

"We were full of ripe, luscious watermelon to one's heart's content last night!" gloated Ned. "Say, sis, it's easy and it's fun. There's an old fellow with gray whiskers guarding the place, but he goes to sleep before it's dark."

"Don't encourage me to be hyphenated," remonstrated Eleanor, but a speculative expression came into her lovely eyes.

A breathless group of six girl friends joined Eleanor that evening in an old stone room of her home.

Excited and mysterious plans were exchanged. During the afternoon each one of the girls had managed to get hold of a suit of father or brother. Most of them were jumper suits, blue and brown. Eleanor wore white duck attire belonging to her father, which he donated in trimming the garden.

They got clear of the house and then the rear lane gained without discovery, chatting voices burst forth in a hubbub.

"The young man who has taken the place is named Gerald Waltham," announced one.

"What a romantic name! And I've seen him, and he's handsome as— as a movie actor!" declared Ellice Bartley.

"They say he's rich as Croesus," added another, "and his widowed sister is going to keep house for him."

The girls reached the watermelon patch and began to locate, press and thump their various selections.

"Oh, but I've got a whopper!" cried Eleanor.

"Girls, run, some one is coming!" cried Ellice, and six speeding forms cleared the patch and, burdened by their selection, Eleanor was left alone.

"Oh, you cowards!" she called after them. Then she made a wild dash past some shrubbery as she saw two men coming under the fence wire.

Her foot caught in a trailing vine. With a breathless gasp Eleanor went flat directly across the rocking ruin of the melon, deluging her white attire with sticky, fleshy, clinging seeds and a turd stain of red. She heard voices and put for a shed.

"Where's Budd?" spoke one.

"At the side of the house. He's to locate the old watchman and keep him quiet. Our share is the young man. He's got a small safe holding all kinds of rich plunder, Budd says. We'll quiet him, then for a haul worth while."

"Ooh!" shivered Eleanor, comprehending. "Burglars—robbers! And that nice young man!" She started for the house. As she rounded a porch the "watchman" from a hidden room beyond showed a recumbent form in a hammock. She approached the front steps and tried to screen door. It was locked.

"Oh, quick! quick! Wake up!" she cried, banging upon the door. A young man, the young man, Gerald Waltham, sprang to his feet and opened the door, staring.

"What's that?" he challenged sharply, and then his manner changed as he recognized feminine accents as Eleanor gasped forth:

"There's trouble—danger! Please get into the house and lock the doors and windows. Some men are lurking in the garden, bent upon robbing you."

Her involuntary best passed through the doorway and Eleanor followed him. He turned to survey her. A smile wreathed his lips. Eleanor caught a reflection of herself in a big mirror. Horrors! The white jumper was a sight her hair was in disorder. She looked like some wild woman!

She flushed scarlet, but nevertheless the color of her discovery. The enterprise of activity came into the same man's face. He slammed the door shut and locked down the windows.

"You are certainly a good friend," he said, and went to the mantel and took thence a revolver. "Hold the fort, even if you have to shoot," and placing the weapon in Eleanor's hand he sped to the next room and she heard him telephone to the town police. Then she uttered a scream and pulled the trigger of the revolver, as a sinister face peered in at the window, and then, womanlike, she fainted away.

She was lying back in a great armchair when sensibility returned, and the young man gazing upon her with a benign smile.

"You winced, your man," he advised Eleanor, "enough to cripple him till the officers come, and through him they will doubtless discover his accomplices. And now may I thank you and see you home?" and Eleanor, blushed at her inconspicuous attire, was very silent as he left her at her doorstep, with the weeds.

"I shall want to roll on you in the morning, to whom you a different way to the union match and peach orchard, with all of your charming friends whenever you wish."

And the last one of these charming friends, the day Eleanor was married to Gerald Waltham, wore a bracelet made of watermelon seeds.

HARTLAND, N. B., APRIL 10, 1919

WHAT IS CARVELL?

This is a question many people are asking these days. Is Carvell still a Liberal or has he "deserted his friends" and become a Tory? Or is he just a plain conscientious statesman striving to do his duty to his country? The Observer has always taken the last view, and each time the minister comes to the fore our belief in him as a statesman is strengthened.

Many people in doubt will form opinions of Carvell after the discussion over the tariff is ended. But in spite of all The Observer predicts that he will die a Liberal. Mr. Carvell realizes that the country has grown fat, the people rich, because of the war, while the Dominion and the Provinces are near to bankruptcy—also because of the war. There are tremendous revenues to be raised. The money must come from the people—the most from those who have made the most during these past five years.

Tariff for the protection of manufacturers has been the Conservative policy; tariff for revenue for the needs of the country and so judiciously applied as to afford a degree of protection without undue burden on the people has been the Liberal view.

Mr. Carvell has been an advocate during his whole career, either of unrestricted free trade or for tariff for revenue and the best interest of the most people conserved. These are still his principles no matter what may be his expressed attitude in the forthcoming tariff debate. He may "split" with the government on the tariff issue—he surely will if some measure of relief is not given. But he and his colleagues face the fact—not yet given to the people—that the forthcoming years will require unthinkable sums to carry on the business of the country, and all old methods of raising revenue must be retained or modified and new ways invented. Carvell is a free trader—born so and he will die so. But the stern exigencies of the day may cause him to drop into a state of suspended animation—and if he does we must not say "he has deserted us."

On Tuesday when the house went into committee of supply on the estimates of the public works department Hon. F. B. Carvell stated that there were only two buildings put through in Canada last year which had not been done by contract. These were two buildings which were erected at North Sydney and Dartmouth, for the department of the naval service. In every case where contracts have been let they had been awarded to the lowest tenderer.

Mr. Cope asked about Mr. Carter, a solicitor who had been appointed to the department.

Mr. Carvell replied that the departmental solicitor had been appointed by the civil service commission, but he considered him the best man he knew of for the position in Canada. As to what he intended to do regarding the old employees the minister said he was awaiting the report of the commission, and he would then know what to do.

Mr. McMaster accused the government generally of insincerity in declaring that patronage had been abolished.

Mr. Carvell resented the remarks, declaring that he had never dealt in patronage, but had observed the law.

Mr. Butts inquired of the minister as to contracts which had been given for the building of aeroplane stations.

Mr. Carvell suggested that Mr. Butts knew all about the matter without asking.

"Oh, yes," replied Mr. Butts, "I know all about it, but I want the house to know also."

He said that a number of Liberals, including Mr. Kyte, a former member of the house, were in a company which had given contracts. There was not one Tory in the outfit.

The work, said Mr. Carvell, had to be performed hurriedly in order to provide accommodation. There was no

BRIDGE NOW IN USE

For the present the work on renewing the river bridge is about completed. All this week heavy teams have been crossing with no apparent danger. It is considered that the bridge today is in as good condition as it was when the present government came into power. The new timbers all through are of much heavier dimensions than the old bridge and it is intended to proceed with the framing of the spans and each span will be roofed, boarded in and painted. Provisions will be made for leaving the floor in winter time. At present the weakest span is the second one from the west shore. While there is no danger of the bridge falling under an ordinary team, all rules governing speed and loads will be strictly enforced. It is a certain fact that two heavy loads on one weak span may cause it to collapse; swiftly running automobiles are very severe on the structure, while a horse trotted from one end to the other is almost certain to cause complete collapse of the fabric.

Mrs. Christopher Berkwick

The death occurred last week of Mrs. Christopher Berkwick at the home of George Somers, after a few days illness. On the previous Sunday she had come up to "the corner" to attend divine services, and before ready to go home she stopped at the home of Mr. Somers and complained of illness. She was prevailed upon to remain, but her condition grew rapidly worse until Thursday, when she passed away from pneumonia. She was twice married and is survived by her second husband, now 94 years of age. The funeral, held on Saturday, was in charge of Undertaker Adams. Rev. P. J. Trafton preaching.

In Memoriam

In memory of Wendell L. Jones who passed away June 24, 1914. Four years have passed since that day.

When our dear brother was called away, gone to the face we loved so dear, silent the voice we long to hear.

Too far away for sight or speech, but not too far for our thoughts to reach. We trust he has gone where Angels dwell.

But we miss him more than tongue can tell.

FOR CLEANER POLITICS

The government which went out of power in February, 1917, as already stated, was a government of scandals. It did more in one year to drag the good name of New Brunswick into the mire and make it a by-word throughout Canada than all previous governments since Confederation. There is now not the slightest doubt that had the legislature in 1915, on the receipt of the report of the royal commission on the timber land scandal, taken a stand such as that taken by the house last night, the Valley Railway and the patriotic potato scandals would never have been heard of. Instead of condemning the hoodlums, a servile government following applied the whitewash brush, thus giving to rascals in office and rascals out of office a license to continue their nefarious work. Premier Foster and his colleagues and supporters are to be sincerely congratulated on the

HARDWARE

A SHORTAGE OF HOUSES

ONE OF THE PROBLEMS FACING OUR COUNTRY.

Town-planning expert tells of difficulties in the way of supplying homes for the working men of Canada, and he boldly advocates a new policy of creating new towns so that speculators will not get the profits.

A SERIOUS problem facing Canada to-day is the shortage of houses which is reported from all parts of the Dominion. Mr. Thomas Adams, the town-planning expert of the Canadian Commission of Conservation, said recently in the course of a most valuable and instructive statement, "There is the same need for obtaining increased accommodation for the working classes in Canada during the war as there is in the United States and Great Britain. The shortage and dearth of capital, labor and material have the effect of destroying private enterprise in building, as the cost is so great as to make it unlikely that an adequate return will be obtained on the investment. There are serious difficulties at the present time in promoting the erection of houses by Government enterprise.

"It is true that we have a serious housing problem on this continent, but its worst aspect is connected with the lack of control of sanitation by our local Government, rather than that which is connected with increased congestion and the intensification of building operations in the last few years. In other words, housing evils that are more injurious, in my opinion, are those that have been sanctioned and encouraged for want of proper building regulations at a time when we had no war expenditure, and building was cheap.

"If we can spare public money, labor and material in building houses other than for returned soldiers, we should not do so without simultaneously enforcing a higher standard of sanitation in regard to existing working-class dwellings in our cities. One of the chief drawbacks in building houses with modern sanitary fittings of a durable material is that they have to compete with old, dilapidated property which can be rented at a low rate because of its small capital value. Another danger we must avoid in promoting Government housing is in allowing any portion of the Government subsidy to go into any pockets other than those of the class they are intended to relieve. We have also to avoid, in these free countries, the giving of public relief to any class that will have the taint of charity.

"Houses built by Government enterprise should not be subsidised for the benefit of any class or be used as a means of assisting real estate speculators. These difficulties and dangers can be obviated by proper regulations, and I mention them not because of any lack of enthusiasm for housing reform and for aggressive action at the present time, but because I foresee that if we do not provide the proper safeguards to begin with, we shall run the risk of failure that will be used to disprove Government enterprise.

"We have also to recognize the importance of dealing with the land question at the same time we are dealing with the housing question, and I have no sympathy with any scheme which means that public money is used to increase land values, or to build houses on vacant lots which still retain a considerable part of the fictitious values given to them during the boom days. Before we can solve the housing problem at home, we shall have to get down to some stable basis of land values whereby the capital value has a definite relation to the revenue value, and there is less exploitation of community expenditure on improvements. We shall also have to save much of the money which is now be-

"Fruit-a-tives" is certainly a wonder. For a year, I suffered with Rheumatism, being forced to stay in bed for five months. I tried all kinds of medicine but without getting better; and thought I would never be able to walk again.

"One day while lying in bed, I read about 'Fruit-a-tives' the great fruit medicine; and it seemed just what I needed, so I decided to try it.

The first box helped me, and I took the tablets regularly until every trace of the Rheumatism left me.

I have every confidence in 'Fruit-a-tives' and strongly recommend them to every sufferer from Rheumatism".

LIFT CORNS OR CALLUSES OFF

Doesn't hurt! Lift any corn or callus off with fingers.

Don't suffer! A tiny bottle of Frezzone costs but a few cents at any drug store. Apply a few drops on the corns, calluses and "hard skin" on bottom of feet, then lift them off.

When Frezzone removes corns from the toes or calluses from the bottom of feet, the skin beneath is left pink and healthy and never sore, tender or irritated.

ing wastes on costly land development and local improvement as a result of bad planning, or want of planning.

"But the opportunity to create new towns on Garden City lines is obvious to all who have studied the question of the development of towns and cities. Why should not the Government of Canada and the United States use the present opportunity to create at least one object lesson of this kind in America? The United States Government has ample capital and has decided to spend from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 in housing enterprise. It is already creating new industries of sufficient size and scope for employing a large volume of labor to enable it to be independent of the difficulty of attracting private manufacturers to new sites. It does not need to speculate on the coming of industries and workers to those districts where, in any event, it is going to establish industries and attract workers. All that the Government needs to do is to be careful in the selection of a site, properly to plan the area it proposes to develop, to lay down principles similar to those which underlie the Garden City scheme, and to set up an organization to provide good social conditions and up-to-date facilities for transportation and supply of community services. It has resolved on a policy of national housing, is that housing to be entirely carried out on the shortsighted unscientific method of building small accretions to existing centres, where land-values are already high and there is no opportunity to start de novo and plan on scientific and sound economic principles?

"To take a possible case for Government organization, which I recently suggested in an article on the subject. Assume that in the vicinity of one of the large shipbuilding plants it is contemplated that permanent housing accommodation will be required for 20,000 well-paid workmen, these men, their families, and the people who are required to supply their various social needs, will mean that provision will have to be made for a population of 50,000. In such a case the proper thing to do is not to build up suburban accretions to existing cities and towns, to hand over the increment of land-value to speculators, to crowd the houses together to pay the high cost of the land, and to create profits for established, highly watered public utility corporations, but to adopt the bold and more businesslike policy of creating a new town, just as the Steel Corporation would do.

"An area of from 12 to 15 square miles of agricultural land should be acquired within three or five miles of the plant, near to a main line of railway. Rapid transit should be provided to the plant within 15 or 20 minutes. The town should be planned, water supply and other works installed, roads and sewers built, theatres, stores and public buildings erected. Any surplus land should be provided for and encouraged. Private enterprise should be invited to assist in the structural development. The capital employed need not be greater than that which will be needed for any other scheme of settlement, for the cost of land will be sufficient to pay the cost of providing public utilities and social services. After paying, say, 5 or 6 per cent. on the capital employed, all profits should revert to the community for the benefit of the town, and a large portion of the land should be permanently set aside as an agricultural estate.

"We should prepare all our housing schemes with due regard to the part they may play in aiding or retarding the process of reconstruction after the war."

A Beloved Princess

Princess Patricia of Connaught will always hold a very warm place in the affections of Canadians. Her six years' residence here, when she entered so heartily into Canadian life, would assure that. But more particularly is she linked with the Dominion, for all time, through the gallant "Princess Patricia" Canadian Battalion named for her, which won such glory in France and Flanders. Her Royal Highness is indeed gazetted as honorary colonel-in-chief of this famous Canadian battalion.

At the wedding of their honours, Colonel twenty-four of the original "Pats" served as a guard of honor. Princess Patricia loved Canada. She loved the winter, with its sparkling snow, its skating, skiing and tobogganing at the capital, and the summer with its rivers and lakes and sweet-smelling forests. She loved the broad sweep of the prairies and the mighty mountains as she traveled to the coast, and here and there, she seemed to love the people.

One recalls many times when the princess has been in the public eye, and each occasion she has made you more conscious of how beautiful she is. It might be at such functions as the Drawing-room of their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught in their regal Senate Chamber in Ottawa, or when nothing now remains but ashes. It might be in Government House when a state ball was in progress. Again, it might be in the midst of a lovely series of a garden party given by their Royal Highnesses that she recalled her. It might be on such occasions, when she smiled on Girl Guides and won their hearts.

While here during the period of the war the princess was devoted to war work. Three times a week she was to be found working at the Red Cross rooms in Ottawa. She saved and knitted continually, always for the men in khaki. She also kept the Princess Patricia provided with comfort. And since her return to England has continually visited them in hospital.

"Oh, You Do Look So Strong and Well"

"AND why shouldn't I?" "You always wrote about how well you were, but we never thought you would be so hearty-looking as you are after all the hardships of camp and trench life."

"Oh, we had our share of hardships, all right, but except on rare occasions we had plenty of good, wholesome food and lots of fresh air and exercise. That is what makes a person strong and well. But I don't think I have it much over you. What have you been doing to look so hearty?"

"Didn't I tell you I was using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food?"

"You don't mean to say that has made such a difference. You were so thin and pale when I went away."

"Yes, it certainly has, and after you went away I had a regular break-down, and was in a bad state for some months."

I had nervous headaches, could not sleep, and grew down-hearted and discouraged. Mother got after me to try the Nerve Food, and I am so glad I did, for I did want to be well to welcome you home."

"It is a joy to me to find you so well. And now that we have such a good start surely we can keep well and enjoy life. My experience overseas has caused me to place a greater value on life and health than I ever did before, and your experience with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food convinces me that you women folks need not be pale and weak and nervous if you will but use it when you feel tired out and run down."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. Every box of the genuine bears the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author.

Middle Aged Women

Are Here Told the Best Remedy for Their Troubles.

Fremont, O.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change—heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which it surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared."—Mrs. M. Gordon, 925 Napoleon St., Fremont, Ohio.

North Haven, Conn.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored my health after over-fishing and had failed when passing through change of life. There is nothing like it to overcome the trying symptoms."—Mrs. Florence Izella, Box 197, North Haven, Conn.

Light Brigade at Jutland

SOME day, writes Eric Wood in the Captain, a poet will arise who will sing the story of the charge of the Light Brigade at Jutland, and he will reach crescendo when he sings of the wonder of the Fortune, for seldom has man had such a time as this. Her commander, Lieutenant Commander Terry, when he drove his ship into that lane of glory, made for the first big German that he saw. He went in, until to delay firing the torpedo, by which the gunners stood in readiness, would have meant disaster; for every gun that the enemy could bring to bear was blazing forth.

That Fortune lived long enough to send all two torpedoes among the wonders of Jutland, for other ships had opened on her by this time, and she was the mark of scores of guns of every size; it seemed that a dozen thunderstorms had broken upon her—that the wrath of the gods was directing the lightnings upon her. But Fortune got off her torpedo, and way off there in the darkness where she had last glimpsed her mark, a flash and a roar told her crew that that dash up the lane of death and hurtling shells had not been fruitless, although how fruitful it had been they could not tell; not merely because they could not see, because Fortune herself had reached the end of things.

Disaster had come, not in fragmentary details, but in one cataclysmic whole. The first salvo that caught her fell upon the forebridge, wrenching it apart, twisting its steel-made frame, melting the very metal itself, smashing it so that it was unrecognizable, and at the same time wiping out all who were upon it. Lieutenant Commander Terry went to his death with Sub-Lieut. Paul and the rest of the officers who had been there directing the doings of Fortune.

Poor Fortune! She staggered to the impact, then lurched forward despite her wounds, as though refusing to admit that she was done. But done she was, if not at that instant, then a moment afterwards, for ere the crack of one explosion had died away there was another, and the foremost gun, as though lifted by giant hands, was wrenched from its mountings and flung into the sea—crew and gun and all. And there happened one of the most remarkable escapes ever recorded; the gunlayer, even at the moment that the shell struck home, was laying his weapon and the gunsmith was driven back into his face, yet though he was hurled overboard his only injury was a black eye!

After the foremost gun, the amidships gun and crew went overboard as yet another shell, well aimed, burst through the steel deck, Fortune was indeed paying the price of courage, and she had not finished paying—the uttermost farthing had not yet been extracted. The foremost boiler added its rending explosion as a shell went into it, and then those wonderful engines which had carried her to glory and to death were tore out of her as shell went through the after stronghold and engine-room, carrying the machinery with it in its mowing course through the ship.

Fortune stopped now; a holed and battered and mangled and crumpled mass of twisted steel and tortured machinery settling down rapidly; while on her heaving deck, buckled into a switchboard over which men could not walk, were those who remained on board, expecting to surrender or to escape? Not a bit of it! They were gathered round the after gun and firing as though at practice; and they went on firing until a shell knocked the gun out of action and drove them to a torpedo-tube that was still undamaged. They trained that tube upon the nearest enemy vessel raining shells on the wreck of the once lithe ship; trained it and fired the torpedo a second before a shell struck the tube, lifting it high in the air, smashing it and putting the final touch to the ruin of Fortune; the ship took fire forward, and the survivors of her heroic crew, realizing that nothing more was to be done, cast off the two rafts that were available and took to the insecurity of them.

Thirty-five men only out of a hundred were—thirty-five men who had lived through inferno, and who, like those who had died at their duty, had done their bit for Empire.

—Democracy.
"It's great to live under a Democratic form of government."
"No doubt about that."
"A man can express his feeling freely. For instance, he can say what he wants done with the railroads."
"True, and then he can sit back and wonder who's going to do it."

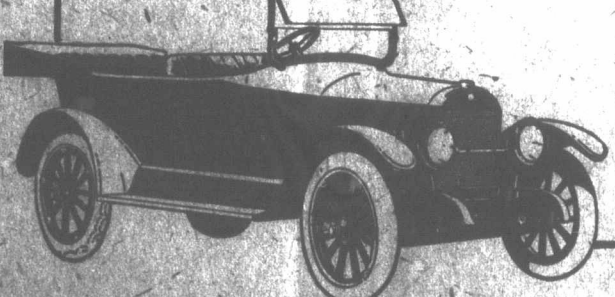

One Resemblance.
Wife—Are my doughnuts like those your mother used to make?
Hub (sampling them)—Well—er—the holes are just the same.
