THE ADVERTISER

Is not and does not propose to be a partisan paper. It is not an "organ." Its opinions are its own. The ADVERTISER alone is responsible for opinions expressed in these columns.

THE ADVERTISER

Advocates Free Trade—British free trade, Continental free trade, free trade with the whole world.

THE ADVERTISER

Looks forward with hope to Canada's future as that of an Independent Canadian Republic, in equally friendly alliance with the United States and with Great Britain, believing that such a status would be best for Canada, best for Great Britain, and promotive of the best attainable relations with the United States. Meantime, everything is to be gained by cultivating cordial relations between all English speaking peoples. Those who take an opposite course should be regarded as enemies of mankind.

THE ADVERTISER

Advocates Prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor; and all expedient general legislation and persuasion in the meantime.

THE ADVERTISER

Is an advocate of Equal Rights for women, whether as regards the franchise, or equal wages for equal work.

THE ADVERTISER

Is a believer in Christian Union, and considers the time has come when the various Christian denominations should come closer together. Those bodies which are now nearest should unite first. Under the present system there is an unjustifiable waste of men, means and effort. The differences between most of the existing denominations are no greater than the differences, natural to thinking men and women, to be found in every congregation. Even those Christian bodies supposed to be the farthest apart, the Protestant and the Roman Catholic, have more of belief that is common than of belief that is antagonistic. To the laity the differences between the various Protestant denominations are microscopic. For various reasons the clergy, even when, as is true of the best of them, they favor Christian Union, are not in a position to be as outspoken as the laity.

THE ADVERTISER

Advocates Obligatory Voting. Most of the electoral corruption centers around "getting out the vote." Let the duty be laid on every elector of getting out his own vote.

THE ADVERTISER

Advocates the more general use of the Plebiscite, the Initiative and Referendum, etc., believing that the interest of the people in public questions, apart from persons, would be increased, and that something would thereby be done to promote independence of political thought, as opposed to excessive party spirit.

London, Friday, Feb. 17.

THE KANSAS CRISIS AVERTED.

Bloodshed has been averted in Kansas by the prudent action taken by the Populist Governor after consultation with the Populist members of the Legislature. The State House being in possession of the Republicans, the Populists have decided to meet elsewhere during the remainder of this session, and thus remove the cause for immediate hostility.

Col. Hughes, commandant of the militia, and Sheriff Wilkerson are both Republicans, the former being a member of the Legislature. Both refused to obey the commands of the Governor. Col. Hughes did more than disobey his orders. He personally visited the besieged Republicans and said the troops would take no action to dislodge them from their position. So also the sheriff, who had replied to the Governor that he would not obey his order, manifested his partisanship by enlisting 1,000 men, armed with clubs, etc., on behalf of the Republicans. The action of the Populists under these circumstances is very highly commendable.

The public is mainly interested in this question: Why was not an appeal to the law made by the aggrieved parties? We have already said that in one case the Populists did appeal, and that the result of the appeal was that the court ruled it "had no power to compel the Republican State Board of Canvassers to reassemble and correct the returns in accordance with the votes cast." Having secured so little satisfaction in the courts it can scarcely be wondered that the other grievances of the Populists were not taken before the courts. In due time the Populist House was organized, and for a month the Republican members have refused to recognize it as a regularly constituted body. They elected a Speaker of their own, who, of course, was not recognized by the Populist Governor. They now confess that nothing was done by the Populists during all these weeks that gave them an opportunity to carry their grievance before the courts. It would, therefore, seem that the Populists are a pretty law-abiding body.

It is stated that the Governor had given orders that the Republican members should not be admitted to the House on Wednesday, and that the doors were guarded to prevent their entrance. This action may or may not have been beyond the power of a Governor, but the force used by Republican members at an early hour to gain admission was clearly culpable. Had they been denied admission when Populist members were admitted, or at the proper hour of assembling, their violent action would even then have been a breach of the law.

Then having gained admission to the House, why did the Republican members tear up the Populist seats and furniture and barricade the doors, refusing admission to Populists? Why did a Republican member, Breidenthal, who had gone out for food, secure his return to the House by drawing his revolver and telling the soldier guard who had raised his bayonet to intercept him that if he did not lower his weapon he would blow his head off?

The Governor's inaugural address, his discreet action in time of difficulty, and the evident desire of the Populist members to prevent the collision that could only have resulted in disgrace to the people of the State and country, have created for him a feeling that while there have been doubtless errors made on both sides, the desire of the People's party has been to act honorably and fairly at all times.

The trouble must now go before the courts. Why was it not carried there before the events of this week transpired? And when it goes there will there be any more partisan judges to render decisions that are not actuated by principles of justice?

IMPORTANT FACTORY ACT REFORMS PROMISED.

Lady Aberdeen, the philanthropic noblewoman who will grace Rideau Hall with her presence when her husband takes the Governor-Generalship next summer, formed one of a notable deputation who waited upon Home Secretary Asquith in London the other day. The object of the deputation was to press upon the Home Secretary the necessity for changing the system of inspecting the industrial institutions of the country with the object of improving the conditions under which the operatives earn their daily bread. More particularly they had in view the amelioration of the condition of working women.

The make-up of the delegation proves that a remarkable change has taken place in recent years in the relations existing between the various social organizations of Great Britain. There appeared before Mr. Asquith, Lady Aberdeen, representing 80,000 members of the Women's Liberal Federation, Lady Henry Somerset, representing the World's Women's Christian Temperance Union, and also representatives from the Women's Trades' Union Association, the Dockers' Union, the parliamentary committee of the Trades' Union Congress, representing 2,000,000 persons, and other strong organizations. A generation ago, what would have been thought of a combination in favor of factory act reform embracing elements so diverse as this? That co-operation and reform are necessary no one can deny who reads the statements made by the delegates. For example, it was pleaded that dockers—the men who load and unload ships—should be protected in some way by the law governing the employment of workers. It ten years, it was asserted, about 60 per cent. of the dockers are either maimed or injured while at work, and it was represented that proper inspection of the appliances and of the surroundings would vastly curtail these troubles. It was also proposed that the provisions of the Factory Act should be applied to quarrymen and blast furnaces. The Home Secretary said that blast furnaces were already under inspection, but it was asserted that if this was the case the inspectors do not perform their work.

A feature of the gathering, particularly interesting to us, however, is the promise of the Home Secretary to pay increasing attention to the wants of the women workers, and to apply whatsoever remedies are within his power to make them more comfortable. It was represented to him that many girls suffered because they were employed in workshops connected with shops which do not come under the provisions of the Factory Act, and the case of 30 girls who worked in a room heated with a gas stove, was adduced to show the great danger to health that results from lack of consideration like this. Girls so employed suffer from violent headaches, and are very subject to lung diseases. The Home Secretary made a reply which shows that the Gladstone Government means to grapple with the important reforms suggested. He promised to increase the staff of male inspectors of factories, which is now 60; to establish a headquarters for them, where they may confer, and to provide that factories and workshops of all kinds shall be registered and inspected periodically. As to the proposal that women inspectors should be appointed, Mr. Asquith said he always sympathized with the view that women could do good work in various public positions, notably as members of school boards and boards of guardians, and experience had shown that his estimate of their worth and ability was correct. We hold that the same results will flow from women taking an intelligent interest in public affairs in Canada. It is absurd to suggest that they are less keen than men in reaching conclusions as to what is the proper course to secure the best results, and in Great Britain the evidence abundantly bears out this contention.

As there are many factories and shops in which women are exclusively employed, the Home Secretary coincides with the principle that women factory inspectors could best perform the work of inspection. As the Home Secretary points out, difficult questions come up with regard to the inspection of factories in which females are mainly or wholly employed, which are hard to reach under a male system of inspection. On the other hand, when a woman is inspector, the frankest confidential relationship can and ought to exist between the two parties. To make a beginning, the Home Secretary has promised to appoint two women factory inspectors at once. One will be placed in London and another in Glasgow. They will be peripatetic inspectors, and will go around the country, making surprise visits, and as a matter of course treating all complaints reaching them as confidential.

The delegation asked that the new inspectors should be women who have themselves worked for a living, who have sympathy with their fellows, and are not merely ornamental members of the sex. This principle the Home Secretary also conceded. The salaries will be $1,000 a year rising to $1,500. This remuneration is liberal, and proves that the British Administration believes that sex shall not be a bar to fair payment for services rendered.

TOPICS OF TO-DAY.

One of the queerest railroads on this continent is the Salisbury and Haver, in Brunswick. It is but twenty miles long, and, although it connects with the Intercolonial road, an admirably constructed line, it is confessedly unsafe. A printed notice hung up in the cars cautions passengers that it is well to get out and walk on reaching a certain bridge, and it was long the custom to push the cars over this crazy structure before the mighty engine was trusted upon its rotten timbers.

The simple notions that prevailed from three to five centuries ago enabled travelers to tell in their published works whatever they may have seen, but readers of modern books of travel really miss many of the most absorbingly interesting observations of the writers. Those who have fallen in with Stanley's men and the explorers of Abyssinia realize how much of human interest must be kept from the public in order that modern notions of propriety shall not be violated.

A New Yorker was riding in a Boston street car the other day, when a respectable looking colored girl came in. The New Yorker edged away from his next neighbor, who was a white woman, to make room for the new comer, but the white woman did not budge. The conductor then begged her to make room for the colored woman, but she rose and, grabbing an overhead strap, said: "I prefer to stand." It was probably twenty years since such a thing was seen in New York.

An eighteenth century tombstone in the Catholic burying ground at Concord, Mass., proves that the best intended epitaphs may with the lapse of time take on ironical significance. The stone stands awry, is fast crumbling, and shows the discolorations of a century's exposure and neglect, but it still bears in legible characters this now incongruous inscription: "This stone is erected by its durability to perpetuate the memory, and by its color to signify the moral character of Mr. Abagail Dudley."

A German statistician finds that the most "unlucky" day of the week, so far as accidents to human beings are concerned, is not Friday, but Monday: 16.74 per cent. of all accidents occur on Mondays, 15.51 per cent. on Tuesdays, 16.31 per cent. on Wednesdays, 15.47 per cent. on Thursdays, 16.38 per cent. on Fridays, the same per cent. on Saturdays, and 2.69 per cent. on Sundays. From these figures it not only appears that Friday is not the unluckiest day in this regard, but that one day is pretty much as another. The "luckiness" character of Sunday is explained by the fact of little or no work being done that day.

Old English silverware is much in demand just now, and genuine pieces, especially those of historic interest, fetch high prices. There is a special interest in tableware of the seventeenth, eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. As both tea and coffee came into use in England near the middle of the seventeenth century, some of these coffee-pots and tea-pots are among the earliest of English make. Even then the device of the wooden handle, designed to interpose a non-conductor between the hand and the hot metal, had come into use. The best of the coffee-pots are large, stable vessels, with little ornament and no striking grace of form, but rather a look of solidity and a suggestion of coziness and comfort. Those bearing the hall mark of the old silversmiths are usually to be accepted as genuine.

Salt has no town council, no police, no clergymen, no physician. It possesses no postoffice, no church or chapel, no school, no registrar's office. On the maps of the kingdom, although it contains 1,200 inhabitants, it is not marked. And yet the State receives taxes from the people, but sends no tax collector to receive them; the taxpayers are compelled to undertake a journey of 60 kilometres once every eight weeks in order to pay their taxes. Once a year, in May, all the children born during the year are taken to Budeles en bloc, and there baptized. The dead are buried in the most primitive manner and without any trace of religious rites. Marriages are conducted on the same system, without any formality or ceremony, and are declared later on to the registrar or parish priest, sometimes long after they have been blessed with issue. Vaccination and medicines are only known from hearsay. The children grow up without schooling or instruction of any kind.

A recent incident related in Russian correspondence indicates that the hardships of Siberian exiles are by no means over when their sentences expire. A little girl of ten recently appeared before the Governor of Yaroslavl, M. Friede, with a petition in her hand, asking aid for her starving self alone. Her father, it was learned, had been an official, and for some offense or suspicion of offense was sent to Siberia. When his term expired he was told to get home as best he might. His wife was ill and he was penniless. He wheeled her in a barrow all the way from Siberia to Yaroslavl, the journey occupying many months, and the little girl trudged on foot beside the barrow, begging alms on the road. Arrived in Yaroslavl, the wife was so sick they could go no further. The father could obtain no work, and was asked to sell his little girl into an infamous servitude. As a last resort the unfortunate man sent her to the Governor. The Governor could do nothing, but the townspeople heard of the case, and a subscription was opened for the sufferers.

IT PUTS CANADIANS TO SHAME.

(Toronto News.)
Ferdinand de Lesseps and his son Charles have been sentenced to five years' imprisonment for complicity in the Panama fraud.

Canadians may well blush when they compare the action of the French Government with that of our own authorities at Ottawa.

Corruption as great in proportion as that of which the French engineer was guilty was proved to exist among certain men holding an official position at the Canadian capital.

Do these now languish in jail? Not much. They are slowly stepping back into their old positions, while the ring-leaders retain their seats in Parliament, and make laws for the guidance of sinful voters.

Cuticura Baby

This beautiful baby boy, the son of Geo. B. and Janetta Harris, Webster, Ind., is one of the thousands completely cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES of a torturing and disfiguring skin disease, after many doctors and remedies had wholly failed. The marvelous cures daily performed by these great remedies have astonished all familiar with them. None but mothers realize how these little ones suffer when their tender skins are literally on fire with itching and burning eczemas, and other itching, scaly, blotchy and pimply skin and scalp diseases. To know that a single application of the CUTICURA REMEDIES will afford instant relief, permit rest and sleep, and point to a permanent and economical (because most speedy) cure, and not to use them, is to fail in your duty. Parents, think of the mental and physical suffering to be endured in years to come from neglected skin, scalp and blood diseases. Cures made in infancy and childhood are almost invariably permanent.

Sold everywhere. Price: CUTICURA, 75 cts.; SOAP, 35 cts.; RESOLVENT, $1 00.
Prepared by POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Boston.
"All About the Skin, Scalp and Hair," 64 pages, 200 diseases, mailed free.
