The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol \rightarrow (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole \rightarrow signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ∇ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Advance "Q. O. R."

At the time the Queen's Own Rifles was struggling through its infancy, Canada was pondering upon the important step that was to form our coast-to-coast "Dominion."

Confederacy was just emerging from the experimental form when the Store planted its roots firmly into Canadian life.

After two score years and more we draw aside the curtain and witness three healthy, vigorous forces in the Empire's life. "The Twentieth Century belongs to Canada." The Store is the largest of its kind in the British Empire—the dominant power for a better class of living wherever its broad arm reaches—gathering the merchandise of the world and placing it at your door. And the big Regiment has won fame from coast to coast.

Brave men and true, let's name the land
Where freedom loves to dwell;

Canada! Canada! Canada!
Fair land so vast and free,
Oh! give me, then, fair Canada,
Aye, she's the land for me.

"SIMCOE'S FAREWELL TO CANADA."

Hail to thee, all hail to thee! our first and noble Governor;
You leave behind a name revered by famed Ontario's shore.
Thou first didst plant her greatness, nor ever sought reward,
You're in our heart of hearts enshrined, tho' you return no more.

Hail to thee, all hail to thee, hail, all hail, hail, all hail, hail, all

Farewell to thee, Simcoe, the pride of our hearts.

THE STORY OF THE PAGEANT.

By a Spectator from the Grand Stand.

A FOREWORD.

What is a Pageant? A Pageant is a series of historical events, regal or homely, grave or gay, heroic or simple, in a country's history, depicted by living representatives passing before us in processional review, accompanied by such music and suitable scenic embellishments as the theme or occasion may dictate. Pageants, masques and other entertainments of the like kind are hundreds of years old. Kings and Queens of the olden times were especially fond of entertaining rival monarchs in this style, each trying to outvie the other in splendor and novelty of surroundings. We may here mention one familiar to all students of history—the famous "Field of the Cloth of Gold"—this magnificent Pageant being given by Francis I. of France in honor of the visit of Henry VIII. of England.

The Pageant of Ontario, given by the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, will be the first Pageant to be held in the Province of Ontario, and as such deserves some place in the hearts of old and young alike, as a prominent factor in bringing before our very eyes living representatives, heroic and simple, who have been the makers of our country's history—makers of our great Dominion of to-day—the proudest jewel in the Crown of the British Empire.

SEEING THE PAGEANT.

We sit in the grand stand—in the gloaming of a beautiful June evening, a real Canadian June evening—among thousands of pleasant people, who have come, some of them many days' journey on the same bent as ourselves, to see the Pageant. Indeed, one notices compatriots from all parts of the Empire—from the British Isles, Australia, South Africa, India's Coral Strand, even Hawaii, Isles of Spice and Palm, have yielded their quota of the Queen's Own for this occasion only. The night deepens. The band of the Queen's Own, whom we have not noticed until now, seated in front of the green-swarded enclosure of the grand stand, suddenly assumes an attentive attitude. A shrill whistle is heard, a bugle sounds, and lo! as though by a magician's wand a flood of splendid light from arc and calcium suddenly envelops the scene and shows to our expectant gaze a wondrous picture—a rich Canadian woodland, distant hills, lakes fringed with rich wooded glade and dell, bathed in autumnal color. Even as we gaze in wonder at so stupenduous a result of the open-air scenic artists' work, our admiration increases. The music strikes up its martial and inspiring old-time airs, and the 650-foot long picture, with its 56,000 square feet of painted canvas, becomes instinctive with life and action.

break their ties of kindred and country and govern themselves as they saw fit.

These gallant and loyal souls are before us living, breathing men, women and children, lighting their camp fires, cooking their simple meal. Now come groups of disbanded soldiers in old-time uniforms, quaint accoutrements, as cleanly and bright as those rough journeyings would permit. Here comes Governor-General Haldimand, friend of the Indians, with his suite of smartly mounted officers. The disbanded soldiers salute him. Then the stirring strains of "Hearts of Oak" are heard, and on come the old-time British sailor man with his model ship, the "Andromeda," carried shoulder high, accompanying His Royal Highness Prince William Henry, who afterwards became King William IV. It is Prince Henry's first visit to Canada. He is very cordially received, Haldimand introducing all his officers to him. Hark to the Indian drum. Here comes Joseph Brant and his Six Nation Indians, brave descendants of a noble race, who gave their life's blood to keep Canada for us Canadians of to-day. We have a pow-wow, then a war dance, and to the beat of the drum the glades and wooded paths seem to swallow up these people, for when we look again, we find ourselves gazing at John Graves Simcoe and his indefatigable staff measuring out roads and pathways which still to this day bear evidence of his keen foresight for modern needs and requirements—evidence, Dundas St., Yonge St. and many others! More martial music. Here comes the old-time 1st Royal Scots and Artillerymen—men stationed in Canada from Great Britain in times of stress and trouble—men who fought Canada's battles in the long ago before Canada was able to take care of herself. Now Simcoe plants the flag of St. George by Lake Ontario's shore, and so began the Toronto of to-day. "Little York" was but a village of a few rough shacks in those days. But drums are beaten and salutes were fired in its honor then and with as good and loyal intentions as now. The glades and woodlands seem to give up their inhabitants as readily as before, for almost so soon as Simcoe dedicates his flag and sword to Toronto, again the scene is filled with men and women, Irish settlers, Scots settlers, carrying a model of the ship that brought them to Canada's shore—the little Dutch ship "The Hector"—and Glengarry men from the Isle of Skye, with Father McDonnell, red-headed and bearded Priest, a fine old fighter, as he proved many a time in Canada's defence, headed by Pipers playing a stirring choral. The Indians cheer Simcoe, the majestic strains are sung, so the quaint characters and costumes of the first epoch fade from our view, immediately to give place and space for the second epoch. I say immediately, for each epoch really merges into the next without even a pause, making the whole Pageant a living panorama of stirring and dramatic incidents without a break.

CALGARY

Now we are going to have some stirring business. Here comes James Secord, a captain of the Niagara Fencibles, a farmer, still a soldier, with his attendant drummer and staff-sergeant, all very prim and correct. What's that? a despatch. His drummer beats an assembly, and out rush, from all sides, soldiers, and still more soldiers, in quaint coatees and bulging shakoes, crowned with "pom-poms" as these worsted balls are called. And then here dashes on Lieut.-Col. John McDonnell on a spirited steed, and here are two American Troopers with an officer and a white flag. Of course, that's a flag of truce, and a despatch, which when McDonnell reads it, you can see something is wrong, for Van Renselear, who commands the American Troops on the other side of Niagara River, refuses to exchange British and Canadian prisoners for American prisoners held by the British. So here is trouble at once. The American officer, General Winder, says to Col. McDonnell's query, "that everything would be satisfactorily explained the day after to-morrow." So he and his Troopers dash off. Evidently that reply is not to McDonnell's liking, for he calls out more soldiers, and General Sir Isaac Brock dashes in sight, with the light of battle in his eye. You know instinctively that "Queenston Heights" is on the tapis, and lo! it is so. Drums, bugle calls, cheers, yells, and oh, how the Toronto boys can yell—if they like. Yes, there is Queenston Heights, a huge tableau of fighting figures—British, Canadian and Americans all mixed up. Explosives, bombs, smoke fires, rattle of musketry. There is General Brock down. Now there goes Col. McDonnell, James Secord also, with a broken knee, and many others. And as the din of the battle dies away, the soft, sad strains of the "Land o' the Leal" comes gently wafted to us, and the soldiers cover poor, gallant Brock, who fell in the hour of victory—like Wolfe at Quebec—and bear him off on a bier with the old Union flag cast hastily over him, and John McDonnell too—but who is that delicate little woman anxiously peering—lantern in hand—among the dead or dying soldiers? Of course, I know that's Laura Secord looking for her husband James. The military authorities won't allow women to look among dead or dying men nowadays for lost relatives, they say you must go to the field hospitals if you happen to be near a fight at all. But in those days there were no nurses or hospitals, and a woman to tend a wounded soldier was a God-send; and ambulance work was primitive, soldiers were often allowed to lie days on a battlefield ere they were picked up, indeed, you would be very lucky if you were picked up at all. You see, Mrs. Secord's house or farm was only a little way from the battlefield, so naturally as she knew the fight was over, she wanted to find out whether her husband was alive or dead, so she came to find him, and she found him, sorely wounded, but, with the help of a sergeant, she gets him off to their home.

From now everything seems to wear a dejected air, even the British soldiers are dispirited as they file in from a glade centre at back, seemingly wending their way towards Stoney Creek. Vincent and Harvey both seem down on their luck. All the kindly solicitation of James Gage fails to revive their feelings. What's that? Yes, "Yankee Doodle." It seems to rile Vincent, for he orders his tired soldiers to resume their march, Gage showing them the way. Yes, here come the Yankee soldiers, following in the British wake, but they have no stomach evidently for a fight, for they are no sooner on than they go to sleep on the ground. Peter Gage, a little fellow, evidently supplies a couple of American soldiers with provisions as well as fun, but if all is true, Peter has his revenge later, for no sooner have the U.S. men fallen asleep than Peter guides Harvey back to the sleeping Yankees with a few of his men. He surrounds the surprised Americans and forces them all to surrender, as daring a deed as any in Canadian history. The way he shepherds them off is a caution. Now we see Tecumseh, that bravest of all brave warriors. How he outwits General Harrison and is himself done to death, through the incapacity of the soldiers in command. Yes, Tecumseh and the battle of the Thames will ever find a place in Canadian folk-lore. The wail of the Indian warriors, carrying off the dead chieftain, is still in my ears, when a change comes o'er the spirit of the scene, instead of battle cries and gunpowder, pretty sylvan music, that tree revolves and Laura Secord's cottage comes in view. Oh, yes, the inside of it, just as real as any house you see every day. And if you look you'll find Capt. Secord in his cot-bed, he can't walk, his leg was broken. Here comes Laura round from behind the house tripping blithely, carrying her milk pail and stool, for has she not been milking the cow? and here come two American officers, smart young chaps. Of course they want to carry her stool and pail and they want food, and so she invites them to her house, and there they talk of things they should not mention, and one of them inadvertently lets fall a paper containing prepared plans of an attack on the British at Beaver Dam, and Capt. Secord secures the paper, as in duty bound, and when the American officers are gone, hands it to his wife Laura, who consents to carry this important document to Fitzgibbon, who commands at Beaver Dam.

Now we have all the incidents of her dramatic, but painful, journey, how she is beset by Indians, and all the rest of it, just as real as life, and then we have the battle of Lundy's Lane, the soldiers' fight, everything just as it happened, General Sir G. Drummond in his scarlet coatee and brightly waving sword, and a fight for the standard—a very sturdy fight, too—and the tableau passes all too soon, for one is so deeply and intensely interested in it all. Now what is this, the soldiers are all gone and yes, that's Montgomery's tavern. We have jumped from 1815 to 1837. The tavern is most realistic, all lighted up inside, rebel reformers moving about in their high-necked body-coats and stocks, and tall hats, and tightly strapped trousers, some of them cloaked and booted, and here a quaint body of militia—of course you'll all laugh over the "Awkward Squad"—I laughed until my eyes ran water.

There is William Lyon Mackenzie—that intense reformer, man of many moods and aspirations. Yes, Lount, Mathews, Van Egmond, the old Napoleonic soldier; Ralph, Baldwin, Gibson, Shepherd, Carmichael, the carpenter who carried the flag of truce; Anderson whom Powell shot; Colonel Moodie, headstrong man, also killed—all pass in the pageant, living embodiments of dead men, replete with life and action. Here come Colonels Fitzgibbon, Allan, McNab, Chisholm, Jarvis, McLean, Bond-head, the Hamilton Militia, the Toronto Volunteers, Major Caffrae and the Artillery, the Sheriff's men, all spoiling for a fight, and they have it; Montgomery's tavern reduced to ruins. A fine stirring episode is Epoch II. Not a moment lost. Canadian history in a panorama. On we go to Epoch III.

3rd EPOCH.

Representing incidents of historic value, including the Fenian Raid—showing the "Queen's Own" in the old-time uniform.

Red River Settlement. The half-breed disaffection. Harangue by Louis Riel. Murder of Scott. The Riel Rebellion. Grand Tableau—The Battle of "Cut Knife Creek," in which 50 Indians from the Brantford Reservation will take part. So we pass to the last Epoch.

A magnificent stretch of scenery builded by theatre craft on railway trucks representing Queen Victoria's Memorial Statue and those beautiful "Canadian gates" outside Buckingham Palace. They are actual size, thirty and forty feet high. Why, these bronze figures in front of steps of the statue stand fourteen feet high. Then the inspiring music, the procession of Kings and Queens contemporaneous with Canadian history, for we can go back as far as the time of Henry VII., the time of John and Sebastian Cabot, who discovered Newfoundland. The 400 School Children form a living flag and sing Empire's songs, sing splendidly, and the wee fellows dance the sailors' hornpipe, oldest of all dances. Then King George V. on horse-back and Roberts and Kitchener, and the trooping of the King's colors, by companies of Queen's Own, Grenadiers and Highlanders, and the final ensemble. Magnificent! Everybody—from all the Epochs—comes back from the shades of long ago, and the grand choral at the finish "Canada"—yes, that's it, "Canada." It's here on my programme—"Canada." 1,200 people sing it and the bands accompany it. You all feel you must join in it—you can't help it. And the finale grand procession—all pass in review before you to the strains of the "Maple Leaf," a fitting finish to a grand occasion.—God Save the King.

The Trip to England

This year the Queen's Own Rifles hope to gain the distinction of being the first regiment of colonial militia to visit Great Britain and take part in the annual manoeuvres of the British Army. The idea has been discussed for some time, and the officer commanding decided that this the semi-centennial year was the most suitable occasion for such a trip. Through the Militia Department an application was made to the War Office in London, and a generous assent and approval obtained. The officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Regiment were consulted, and the trip decided upon.

The Militia Department is supplying the Regiment with a new Khaki uniform, which will be substituted for the present drill uniform. With the Khaki will be worn black waist-belts and boots, but the puttees and headgear will be Khaki also. For full dress the ordinary uniform will be worn. A white duck uniform is provided for wear on board ship.

The first organization parade will be held at the Armouries on Wednesday, June 29th, and there will be weekly parades until further orders. These parades will be mainly for organization purposes, no hard drill being undertaken until Quebec is reached.

On Saturday, August 13th, the Regiment will parade with full equipment and entrain for Montreal, where the following day will be spent as guests of the 65th Regiment. Quebec will be reached the evening of the 14th. The Regiment will at once go into camp for training until the sailing of the steamer Megantic, of the White Star-Dominion Line, on Saturday, August 20th.

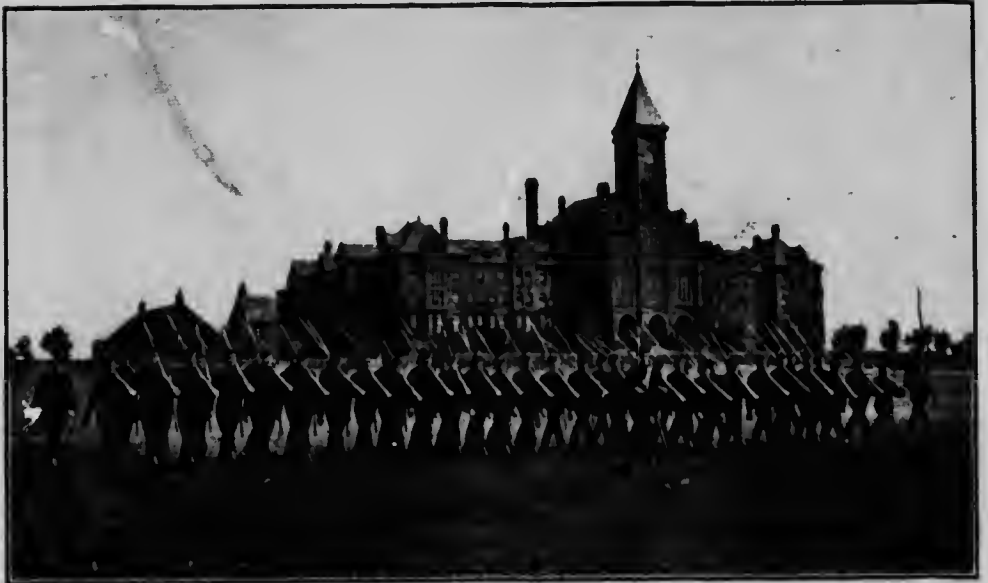

The strength of the Regiment will be over five hundred. There will be about eight staff officers, twenty-four company officers, a brass band of thirty-five, two duty buglers per company, and about fifty-five non-commissioned officers and men per company.

After arrival at Liverpool, which should occur on August 27th, the Regiment will immediately proceed by special train to Aldershot and go into camp. With the exception of four days to be spent in barracks in London the whole stay will be spent at Aldershot. Opportunities for leave of absence will be sufficiently numerous to give every man a chance to visit his friends, and to spend his evenings in the BIG CITY, which is only about thirty miles distant. Returning on the Canada, the trip will be timed so as to land the Regiment in Toronto on SUNDAY, OCTOBER 2ND.

All the men going must pass a thorough medical examination, and have a satisfactory military record. During the trip the men will be under pay, and will be free of all expenses of any kind whatsoever. The accommodations provided will be first-class in every respect, that on board ship being quite equal to ordinary second-class. Officers supply their own uniforms and servants, but otherwise their expenses will be defrayed. The trip is to be a generous contribution by the Officer Commanding to the development of the imperial idea amongst colonial militia.

Nasmith's

We show here a photographic reproduction of a trade circular issued by John Nasmith in Toronto in 1844.

It is old fashioned in many ways, but the sincerity of the message rings true, and no one who traces the Nasmith business from acorn to oak can doubt for one moment that its great and continued success has been the maintenance of Quality, or as J. N. puts it—"By keeping a good article, etc."

Emerson, in his logic, said: "If a man preach a better sermon or build a better mousetrap than his neighbor, even though he build his house in the woods, the world will wear a beaten path to his door." The business legacy of John Nasmith, Quality, has been maintained continuously for 66 years with these
