Two Little Girls Injured in Quebec—Forth Man's Life Saved Only by the Loss of His Hand—
The Air Gun's Work
Once More.

Egg Harson Crrv, N.J., Oct. 30.—Harry Menzies wrapped himself in a white sheet, daubed his face with sulphur, and hid in the graveyard to frighten his friend, August Fanst. Fanst was passing the cemetery on his way home at night, when Menzies confronted him. Faust fired on the "ghost" and Menzies is now lying at his home with a bullet in his lung.

Sr. Hyachter Que. Oct. 30.—Two little girls named Poulin were playing in the house of their grandmother, whom they were visiting. Hearing a young boy enter the room to see what was going on, they hid under the bed and kept quiet. The lad, perceiving a gun in the room, took hold of it to examine it, when it went off, the charge completely shattering the leg of one of the girls and breaking the other. The second little one was only struck in the leg by one pellet. The mangled limb was so much injured that amputation was found necessary.

Perri, Oct. 80.—Alphobso Byrne was climbing a fence when the hammer of his gun caught either in his clothee or one of the rails and exploded, discharging the contents in a straight line with his head. His hand, which happened to be between the muzzle and his face, was almost blown to pieces and was the means of saving his life, as the force of the charge was minized. As it was, several grains of shot were imbedded in his face and neck.

Washington, Oct. 30.—The final vote on the question of repeal will probably be taken this afternoon or evening.

By a vote of 39 to 29 the Senate rejected Mr. Steward's substitute for Mr. Perkins' amendment, which authorized free coinage in any denomination, instead of specific coins in the Perkins' amendment. The vote was next taken on Mr. Perkins' amendment with the monetary commission provision expunged. This amendment provides for free coinage, the Government retaining 20 per cent. seigniorage and other minor provisions. The amendment was rejected, 41 to 30.

Beams on ship and table legs have been hollowed out as receptacles for contraband opium. False bottoms are put in cubby holes and pantry drawers. Hiding places are sought in coal bunkers and under the engines and kollers. The methods of secretion are so varied and ingenious that frequently the officers are unable to find smuggled opium, even after they have definite information that it is aboard a vessel. Only recently the officers failed to find a lot, although they knew positively that it was on board. However, keeping the closest watch on everything that left the ship, they finally intercepted the opium as it was being taken aslore.

intercepted the opium as it was being taken ashore. Several years ago the officials were informed that a hole had been hollowed out under the stern of one of the China steamers as a receptacle for smuggled opium. When the steamer arrived, they made a search and found a hole largenough to contain between $3,000 and $4,000 worth of the drug, but it was empty. It had been dumped out into the bay off Fort Point, with floats attached. A considerable portion of it was picked up. A regular business was for awhile maintained by throwing the opium overboard, with floats attached to longlines, for confederates to pick up and take ashore in boats, but the officers became cognizant of it and broke it up.

Once a box containing the bones of a dead Chinaman was placed on a steamer at Victoria to be brought here for shipment to China. An accident caused it to be closely-examined, when a large quantity of opium was found concealed under the bones. Large quantity of opium was found concealed under the bones. A year ago Levi Layman, a prosperous farmer living near Callicoon, N. Y., had a dream, in which, he say, his deceased wife appeared to him and told him he would join her on or before Nov. 7, 1898. He has implied taith in the prediction and is preparing for his death at that time. This year he planted no crops other than would suffice to provide for his wants to Nov. 7. He has made his will and intends to have charge of the digzing of his grave, and will cae nas made his will and intends to have charge of the digging of his grave, and will order his coffin and burial clothes. Layman has suffered from rheumatism, and faith curists tried to heal, him, but he dismissed them, desiring their prayers in his behalf discontinued: He is 50 years old.

A Strange Superst

A Strange Superstition.

In Bosnia the people have believed at all times that a bridge could not be firm and lasting unless a human being was walled up in it. Thus there is a legend connected with the handsome Roman bridge at Mostar, which says that the fine arch across the Narenta could not be finished until the architect walled up in it a bridal pair. Now that a solid bridge is being built across the Save at Brazeka this superstition is revived. It is rumored everywhere that gravived. It is rumored everywhere that gravived. The Flying Porcupine.

There is a curious Dardistan superstition with regard to an animal called "harginn," which appears to be more like a porcupine than anything else. It is covered with bristles. Its back is of a reddish brown and the other parts of a yellowish color.

The animal is supposed to be very dangerous and to contain poison in its bristles. At the approach of any man or animal it is said to gather itself up for a terrific jump into the air, from which it descends unto the head of the intended victim. It is said to be generally about half a yard long and a span broad. Lal Mohammad, a saintly Akhunzada, but a regular Munchausen, affirmed to have once met with a curious incident with regard to that animal. He was out shooting one day when he saw a stag which semed intently to look in one direction. He fired off his gun, which, however, did not diver the attention of the stag.

direction. He fired off his gun, which, however, did not diver the attention of the stag.

At last he found out what it was that the stag was looking at. It turned out to be a huge "harginn," which had swallowed a large markhor with the exception of its horns. There was the porcupine, out of whose mouth protruded the head and horns of the markhor. The Gillight, on the contrary, said that the harginn was a great make, "like a big fish called nang." Perhaps harginn means a monster or dragon and is applied to different animals in the two countries of Ghighiti and Astor.—Dr. Leitner in Asiatic Quarterly.

Insuited Woman,

afternoon about 4 o'clock a most dreadful tragedy occurred in this village, resulting in the death of John Hill, known as "Wiry tragedy occurred in this village, resulting in the death of John Hill, known as "Wiry Jack."

It appears that Hill, accompanied by his brother-in-law, James McMaster, went to the house of William J. Hicks to make what seemed to be a friendly visit. During their conversation Mrs. Hicks requested McMaster to go home and ask his wife and family to some down and take tea with her. McMaster proceeded to do so. Hicks, having something to tell McMaster, proceeded to the door.

Hill came out of the room at this juncture and went where Mrs. Hicks was standing, and unceremoniously grasped her in an insulting manner. Mrs. Hicks ordered him to leave her alone, and called for her husband, who at once came, and, seeing the state of things, pulled Hill away and hit him in the face near the left ear with his fist, causing a severe wound. Hill at once clinched with his opponent, and the latter gave him a push, knocking him out of the door, Hill falling with the back of his head on a sharp stone, causing a fatal wound. Dr. Pettigrew was sent for, but before his arrival the victim was dead.

Hicks at once gave himself up to Magistrate Peasce. The prisoner is in a terrible state over the affair. Hill had always been a disreputable character, and cocupied a cell in the Kingston penitentiary for five years. Hicks is an honest, industrious, inoffensive man, well thought of by every-body.

The sultan of Johore was elevated from the rank of maharajah to that of sultan some years ago in recognition of the firm, unwavering friendship which he had always given to the English name and rule. Among his many cultivated tastes he possesses a love for gardealing. Somewhat above medium height, very dark in complexion, with a long, white mustache, he has always maintained his reputation as a dignified gentleman.

He usually dresses in English clothes of orthodox English cut and wears a black cloth cap, in the front of which fashes and scintillates a magnificent aigret of diamonds. Almost every finger is adorned with rings, two or more on each, of the same precious stones, but apart from this there is no trace of barbaric splendor about his highness.

He Looked Like a Murderer.

A Washington physician told the following peculiar experience to a Star reporter:

'I had been up all night with a patient on whom I had performed a critical surgical operation. It was a question whether he would recover from the shock. In fact, it was touch and go, so that I could not take a minute's sleep. About 5 a. m. I got away and started for home, so exhausted that it never occurred to me to think of my appearance.

never occurred to me to think of my appearance.

"The horse car I boarded quickly filled up with laborers on their way to work. Though very sleepy, I was somewhat surprised to notice that several of them eyed me strangely. Those of them who sat down near me quickly moved away, and one man who took a seat next to me—I was in one of the front corners—looked at me, got up hastily, and held on to the strap. Nobody else took the vacant place, though the vehicle by that time was crowded.

"Not being used to being regarded as a pariah, I was considerably puzzled. I observed the faces of two or three men who sat opposite to me, and I thought that they gazed at me with an expression of horror and disgost. What could it mean? I began to feel alarmed.

"Just then I chanced to look down at one of my outfs. It was saturated with Howard's father is a physician, and one day when the doctor was out Howard and a little playmate were "playing doctor" in the real doctor's office. Presently Howard threw open a closet door and revealed an articulated skeleton to the terrified gaze of his playmate, but Howard himself was perfectly calm. "Pooh, Walter!" he said to his playmate, "what are you afraid of? It's nothing but an old skellington!" "Wh-wh-where did it come from?" asked Walter, with chattering teeth. "Oh, I don't know. Papa has had it a long time. I guess likely 'ls was his first patient."—Harper's Young 'People. "Just then I chanced to look down at one of my cuffs. It was saturated with blood. The other cuff I noticed for the first time was bloody also. My trousers were spotted with blood, and there were fresh stains of it on my coat sleeves. My anxiety about the patient and subsequent exhaustion had prevented me from thinking of the matter, and I had not done more than wash my hands before starting for home. Unshaven as I was and wearing an old hat, I must have looked rather tough. Not a word was said as I got off the cur and made a sprint for my house, glad to get back safe, and to remove the traces of imagined crime from my person."

Saved From a Horrible Fate by a Sister's Unitring Devotion.

Edward Templeton of Saugus Center, Mass, was once a subject of suspended animation for several days. When asked to relate his experience while under this psychie spell, he relapsed into silence and seemed averse to talking of himself. His sister, Miss Annis Templeton, however, was more communicative and freely talked on the matter.

"It happened," said she, "during the summer of 1887. We were then living at Malden, Mass., but subsequently removed to Saugus Center. My brother had been taken seriously ill of a malignant fever. For several weeks his life was despaired of, but medical attendance and loving friends succeeded eventually in breaking the fever, although he was left in a weak and emaclated condition. He rapidly grew stronger, however, and gained well nigh former weight and strength. He was able to do light work in his carpenter shop, and we were congratulating ourselves

"One afternoon in September he came home earlier than usual from his work and complained of strange pains in his head and body. A Question In Hygiene.
The Jewish authorities in Switzerland have obtained the opinions of a large number of distinguished, physiologists and veterinary surgeons on the question—from a humanitarian and hygienic point of view, respectively—of slaughtering animals by the method peculiar to that race. The anawars in response to this question have, it hurriedly for our physician, Dr. Atwater, who exhausted all his efforts and medical skill to restore Edward to consciousness.

"Edward's body became as rigid as death itself, his flesh was colories, and the following day Dr. Atwater informed us that he was dead. We refused to believe this, however, and sent for Dr. B. M. Richardson of Boston to come in consultation with Dr. Atwater. He came, and after a careful diagnosis and a consultation, which consumed an entire afternoon, he coincided with Dr. Atwater that Edward was dead.

"Well, we prepared the body for burial and were to have held the funeral services the following Sunday. Somehow I couldn't convince myself that Edward was dead and kept a silent watch by his side. The Saturday before the date set for his funeral I was watching him intently, when I imagined I perceived one of his cyclids twitch. I called my mother, who was in an adjoining room, and she took up the watch, while I again summoned Dr. Atwater, informing him of what I had observed. Long and patiently he labored and was finally rewarded with signs of returning life.

"The same evening Edward was fully rethan is any other, some indeed considering it less so.

Hygienically some of the physiologists have further urged in its favor the hygienic properties of the meat, which, deprived of that factor so prone to decomposition—the blood—keeps longer and can, they consider, be better dealt with by the stomach and other organs of digestion, and it is further urged in this connection that the excretive materials contained in the blood rapidly give rise to chemical changes resulting in the production of toxic ptomaines, which, by their repeated action, injure the constitution.

He then told us that all the while we believed him dead he was in full possession of his mental faculties, but could not move a muscle of his body. He could tell you better himself of the awful horror which seized him when he heard the physicians pronounce him dead and could hear and see our preparations for his burial."

Mr. Templeton was again importuned to relate his awful experience, but simply remarked: "It is better to drop the subject altogether. I have no desira to revive the horror of those few days and simply thank God that I am here today instead of receiving the fate which so many afflicted with suspended animation have received."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

There is no doubt that the Germans ar There is no doubt that the Germans are the strongest people on earth and probably the most prolific, and I believe it is owing to their eating black bread. One of the happiest couples in the county of Elgin are Mr. and Mrs. John W. Cope, who live in the house at the tollgate, on the London and Port Stanley road. The cause of their joint happiness is that Mrs. Cope, who for three years has been agreat sufferer, and whose recovery was not believed to be possible, has been completely cured by Dr. Williams' Piak Pills for Pale People, after a number of physicians and many remedies had failed. The many reports of the marvelous cures effected by the use of Dr. Williams' Piak Pills in different places are so well authenticated as to leave no doubt as to the absolute truth of all that has been claimed by them.
