It is a mark of the vocation of great religious preachers that they are religious preachers that they are great only when they are religious. We know how inferior the historical lectures of Father Burke were in comparison with the grand proce poems of his religious eloquence. There is no sermon of his which is not, in its way, a master-piece There is no lecture of his which has the force, the unction, the world, and counts, as it were, one by one, the tear-drops of humanity. There is one stern which has the force, the unction, the conviction of his sermons. Similarly to those who weep the ladder of faith, till, with a firm but reverent hand, he can lift the veil of the unseen and infinite and bid them all trades and professions, from the highest to the lowest, and cobbler to the savant, were represented.

A murmur of impatience rises from the nave of the Catherial and mingles itself with the lingering notes of the organ, as the clerk draws the curtain of the pulpit and reveals Padre Agostino ab Monteiglitro. He looks around upon them all, a biase of enthusiasm flashing from the depths of his eager, sunches eyes, and with a winning smile, which, deepening round the mouth, affords, according to Lavater, an umfaling evidence of a noble and generous disposition.

This is a fine city and possesses high and level streets. We left Toronto for Port Huron, where the baggage is examined before entering the United States. On the way from Chicago to Dulath we say several farmers ploughing and seeding and had an excellent view of the beautiful scenery of Silver Lake. We arrived at Duluth at 12.20, p. m., Saturday, after a journey of 2,700 miles. Duluth seems as busy as ever, and there is quite a stir in railroad circles. The clevated road is well under way and the Union lepost is also building, which will cost $150,000. There are many other fine buildings in course of erection; among them I might mention three coal docks to hold from fifty to one hundred million tons of coal, and a flour mill which will be ready in July and is expected to be able to turn out 3,000 barrels per day. There are seven grain elevators in Duluth. In some future communication I will give you a description of the steel works, car works, blast furnaces and other large works. As I have already taken up too much space in the Healdo's valuable columns I will close. Yours respectfully,

Duluth, Minn., March 27, 1880.

A CURIOUS WILL.

Some time ago a wealthy man died in Brussels, leaving narly his entire fortune to a young woman entirely unaccualined with him. The American Art Printer explains that this is how it came to pass: He was a very eccestric man, and set out, like Diogenes, in search of an hannel man. His tub was an omnibus, and his lantern a small coin. In the omnibus he took his seat every day near the conductor, in passing up the money of passengers and returning the change, but to the latter he always managed to add a franc or half-franc. Then he would watch those to whom it came. They would count it gargefully, notice the extra coin, and invariably slipt it into their pockets. No one thought of the poor conductor, whose meagre salary of three frances a day could ill support such a loss. But at last a young woman passed here back with "Conductor, you have given me half a franc too much." Diogeneral contents of the conductor, you have given me half a franc too much." Diogeneral conductor, you have given me half a franc too much." Diogeneral conductor, you have given me half a franc too much." Diogeneral conductor, you have given me half a franc too much." Diogeneral conductor, you have given me half a franc too much."

"Ayer's Pills have been in use in my family upwards of twenty years, and have completely verified all that is claimed for them."—Thomas F. Adams, San Diego, Texas.

"I have used Ayer's Pills in my family for seven or eight years. Whenever I have an attack of headache, to which I am very subject, I take a dose of Ayer's Pills and am always promptly relieved. I find them equally beneficial in coids; and, in my family, they are used for billious complaints and other disturbances with such good effect that we rarely; if ever, have to call a physician."—H.
