Prisoners of War in Germany.

The following regulations, governing the regulating and despatch of parcels and money to Prisoners of War in Germany are published for the information of the public. The Newfoundland War Contingent Association is appointed by the Central Prisoners of War Committee to handle all matters pertaining to the forwarding of parcels and money to Newfoundland P. of W. in Germany.

The N. W. C. A. forward a regular supply from London to Germany as follows:—

(a) Food. Three parcels per man per fortnight containing such things as tinned beef, tinned salmon, biscuits, milk, sugar, margarine, dripping, baked beans, carbolic soap, chocolate, cigarettes, tobacco, and a few toilet necessities.

(b) Clothing. The following outfit is sent periodically to N. C. O's and men in Germany by the Pay and Record Office: 1 great coat, 1 jacket, 1 pair trousers, 1 cap (the foregoing is a special uniform for P. of W.), 1 pair of drawers (woollen), 1 undervest (woollen), 2 towels, 3 handkerchiefs, 1 pair boots.

(c) Money. It is inadvisable to send money, unless P. of W. ask for it. The amount which may be sent is Two Shillings per week for any one man. The Army Council have instructed the Central P. of W. Committee to the effect that they may not accept gifts of foodstuffs or clothing from members of the public, whether for despatch to a particular P. of W. or as a contribution to the general stock of the Association. This instruction has arisen through an arrangement with the German Authorities that all parcels forwarded should be packed and forwarded by the association.

Relatives may rest assured that everything possible is being done in London for the comfort and welfare of Prisoners of War in Germany.

Minister of Militia.

The Sound of Wedding Bells

Won After Great Perseverance!

CHAPTER XII.

He can scarcely speak for a moment, but stands wringing her hand and staring at her with all his impetuous soul in his frank, blue eyes. At last he manages to stammer out the commonplace inquiry as to her health.

"Not that I need ask," he says, in an undertone, and with a shy gaze of admiration. "You look—look simply the picture of health—and—beauty, he would like to say, but he is afraid, under the direct gaze of the dark, smiling eyes—and all that," he winds up, feebly.

"Thanks," says Dulcie, withdrawing her hand, and feeling rather than seeing, Hugh's eyes watching her with his grave, quiet regard. "I can return the compliment; and have you been all round the world?" she says, a little hurriedly.

Why will he stare so fixedly, so so enamoredly at her? All the other eyes in the room are watching theirs, she knows.

"No," he says; and he lowers his voice confidentially. "I haven't stirred from Rome. You see, I hoped that—that the invitation would come, and I didn't want to miss it. How can I thank you?" he adds, fervently.

Dulcie colors. This is a just punishment for her little piece of deceitfulness when they last parted.

"I—I don't want any thanks," she says, hurriedly, and sidling away from him.

"Oh, don't say that," he says, pleadingly. "I have been hugging the hope that it came through you."

"Then don't hug it any longer," she says, almost sharply; "it didn't." And before he can recover from this straight rebuff she goes off to Lady Falconer.

"I'm afraid we're late, but Miss Fairfax hasn't arrived, has she? You are waiting for her, I hope."

"Miss Fairfax is in the room," says Lady Falconer, sepulchraly.

Dulcie starts and looks round, and sees for the first time a small, a very small young lady, standing beside Maud and Edie. Not only starts with surprise at seeing her, but at seeing what she is. She expected to see a small, soft little woman, but had pictured her in her own imagination with much prettiness and all sorts of charms; and this, the real Miss Fairfax, is not even pretty. She is pale, has yellowish, sandy hair, and—positively green eyes. She looks—well, insignificant; a plain black dress, a little white collar, not a particle of jewelry, not an ornament.

A sudden rush of—alas! satisfaction and relief runs through Dulcie's frame; and she feels inclined to laugh at all her old fears, and doubts, and smothered jealousy. All this has passed through her mind in a second. Sir Hugh comes up beside her, and says:

"Let me take you to two ladies acquainted," and she finds herself opposite the slim figure, and inclines her head, but with a little smile Miss Fairfax holds out her hand.

"Oh," she says, "I hope Miss Dorrmore and I may be more than acquaintances! I have heard so much of her, that I seem to know her already."

Then in an instant Dulcie understands it! Lucy Fairfax silent and in repose, and Lucy Fairfax smiling and speaking, are two distinct and different beings.

The green eyes grow grey and brilliant with a feline but strangely fascinating expression; the voice is soft and flexible as a flute at the lips of a master; the plain, pale face suddenly becomes transformed into an eloquent speaking one, and the whole is a sudden transformation, magical, wonderful—and to Dulcie, appalling!

Suddenly she becomes conscious that she herself is dazzling, that the best Worth dress is too pronounced, that the rubies are too fiery, that she herself is too tall—and she wishes with a pang that she had put on the quietest, dowdiest frock in the wardrobe instead of the bewildering Parisian costume.

For almost the first time in her life she feels non-plussed and overborne. She, "a daughter of the gods, supremely fair, and divinely tall," is conscious of the power that the little green-eyed, red—yes, it is red—haired girl can wield.

"Dinner, my lady!" murmurs the butler, with sad reproach in his tone, and they file in two and two before Dulcie has uttered a word.

By accident, or is it design? Dulcie's chair is next to Sir Archie's. As she sits down she looks up with an instinctive foreboding. Yes, beside Hugh's tall, noble-looking figure is the little one in the plain black dress.

It is absurd, it is unreasonable, it is downright childish, but for the life of her she cannot suppress a sigh, a throb of jealousy! Is it to be always thus? Are those two going to sit together every evening during that fair girl's stay?

"Are you offended with me?" murmurs the musical voice beside her. She turns with a start; she had quite forgotten him.

"Offended! What do you mean?" His face lights up.

"Oh, nothing," he says, eagerly. "I thought—of course it was my fancy—that you were rather annoyed at me reminding you of your most gracious promise when last we parted."

She colors, but laughs.

"Don't ever rely on my promises," she says; "they are worse than piecrusts; they are not substantial enough even to be eaten."

"Yes, of course! Have you forgotten what I told you about them?"

"Forgotten!"

"Poor old Hugh!" he goes on, his golden head still nearer her raven one; "he is simply infatuated; and mind, I can quite understand it! That sort of little woman is very biting when you get bitten by them. She is not my style—you know," hesitatingly—"extremes attract, similars repel. I—I?" with a shy, eager glance, "I like dark women."

Dulcie's eyes are fixed on the other pair; she is scarcely listening; it's a matter of supreme indifference to her whether Sir Archie prefers black women, or pink, or blue. But if she is not attending to him, other people are. The eager glances, the murmuring voice, are not lost; under his dark, frowning brows Hugh watches the two.

"Already!" he thinks, grimly. She had promised him that she would not flirt with Sir Archie, and here she is, shamefully, openly breaking that promise. His face grows dark, and his hand closes over the stem of his wine glass; then, afraid lest his emotion should be noticed, he pushes into the other extreme, and pulling himself together, turns to talk to his neighbor with a smile.

And Dulcie sees it, misunderstands it, and joins in the game of cross-purposes. With something like abruptness she averts her eyes—she will not look at them, she vows inwardly—and turns her attention to Sir Archie.

"Oh!" she says, with a little laugh, "that is why he looks so happy? Yes, I remember, of course! And she is so fascinating, as she?"

"Quite too killing," he rejoins, in the slang of the day, "for those who like her style, you know; which old Hugh does. Haven't you remarked that men of his type always 'go for' little women with mousy ways and 'telling' faces?"

"No," says Dulcie; "but no doubt you are right; and I've no doubt you will prove it in the most forcible way; you will be at her all-conquering feet in a day or two, I suppose."

"Shall I?" he says, with a significant emphasis. "I think not; you know I shall not unless—a pause—"I am driven in despair by somebody else's ill-treatment."

J. ALEX. ROBINSON,
Postmaster-General.

"Yes," he says, all unconscious; "I remember him when you started; he looked bored to death, just as he does when he is in line of his queer humors. Not much of a lady's man, dear old Hugh!" he murmurs on; "he always said that ladies and children ought to be carefully packed in bales and given in charge of the guard when they travel. But he looks as if he had got over his journey; never saw him looking chipper. I suppose, though," with a lower voice and the soft, musical under-laugh, "that's easily to be accounted for."

"What—what do you mean?" she asks, her face scarlet, her lip caught in her teeth.

He chuckles softly, as over an excellent joke.

"Well, considering who is his next door neighbor, he ought to look pleasant."

She looks across the table; at that moment he is bending down—he has to bend down—to ask Miss Fairfax whether she came down comfortably. Nothing more than that; but he asks it with a pleasant smile, and the green eyes turned up to him are eloquently grateful for the commonplace inquiry, those eyes can look just what their owner desires them to express. That is all, but it appears to Dulcie as if it were so much more, and she grows pale with the effort to fight down the sudden pang of jealousy.

"Do you mean," she says, trying to speak carelessly, and pausing to examine an orchid in the specimen glass by her plate; "do you mean because he has Miss Fairfax next him?"

He nods, and murmurs behind his serviette:

"Yes, of course! Have you forgotten what I told you about them?"

"Forgotten!"

"Poor old Hugh!" he goes on, his golden head still nearer her raven one; "he is simply infatuated; and mind, I can quite understand it! That sort of little woman is very biting when you get bitten by them. She is not my style—you know," hesitatingly—"extremes attract, similars repel. I—I?" with a shy, eager glance, "I like dark women."

Dulcie's eyes are fixed on the other pair; she is scarcely listening; it's a matter of supreme indifference to her whether Sir Archie prefers black women, or pink, or blue. But if she is not attending to him, other people are. The eager glances, the murmuring voice, are not lost; under his dark, frowning brows Hugh watches the two.

"Already!" he thinks, grimly. She had promised him that she would not flirt with Sir Archie, and here she is, shamefully, openly breaking that promise. His face grows dark, and his hand closes over the stem of his wine glass; then, afraid lest his emotion should be noticed, he pushes into the other extreme, and pulling himself together, turns to talk to his neighbor with a smile.

And Dulcie sees it, misunderstands it, and joins in the game of cross-purposes. With something like abruptness she averts her eyes—she will not look at them, she vows inwardly—and turns her attention to Sir Archie.

"Oh!" she says, with a little laugh, "that is why he looks so happy? Yes, I remember, of course! And she is so fascinating, as she?"

"Quite too killing," he rejoins, in the slang of the day, "for those who like her style, you know; which old Hugh does. Haven't you remarked that men of his type always 'go for' little women with mousy ways and 'telling' faces?"

"No," says Dulcie; "but no doubt you are right; and I've no doubt you will prove it in the most forcible way; you will be at her all-conquering feet in a day or two, I suppose."

"Shall I?" he says, with a significant emphasis. "I think not; you know I shall not unless—a pause—"I am driven in despair by somebody else's ill-treatment."

The Sugar Supply.

We are glad to see that the Food Control Board is paying practical attention to this important matter, but we doubt if the method it is adopting (though it may be only preliminary) will be productive of practical results. It has ascertained that there is almost certain to be a falling off in the usual supply of sugar in the country, and it accordingly advises economy in the use of such supply as there is. We should have preferred it if the Board had used stronger measures, if it had commanded instead of requesting, forbidden instead of deprecating. It has power to do so and the power should be used. The amount per caput allowed—one pound a week—represents little hardship to anyone. The admonition published will have only one effect. Patriotic and unselfish persons, which is to say one in a hundred, will obey; the rest will not. It is hardly fair to shift the responsibility upon the retailers, who will be solicitous of the feelings of their patrons. If the reduction is necessary, there should be only one course, which is to compel it. The enforcement of the order would present little difficulty. The present action depends upon voluntary response to the appeal. The experience of Canada in this very respect and our own in respect of recruiting should be eloquent testimony enough of the worth of voluntary methods.

To-Morrow's Function.

Anyone who has an hour to spare to-morrow afternoon cannot spend it in a better place than at Canon Wood Hall, where there is a little function at which those interested in social and religious work to the permanent residents on Labrador, will have the opportunity to see some of the handwork of the people, and to meet Rev. Henry Gordon, the missionary who has been working among these letters for the last two years, and to drink a social cup of tea.

When you want Steaks, Chops, Cutlets, try ELLIS'.

Not as Good as Expected

We learn from an experienced farmer that the potato crop in St. John's East is not up to expectation. The late planting caused rot and the yields are more or less disappointing. The turnips are very much behind as well. This is mainly due to the flies and grubs that were seen in greater numbers than ever the past season. Late sown turnips are also very small. Fall cabbage plants, which have been transplanted to cold frames for spring planting, are showing signs of deterioration due to the grub from the eggs of the white butterfly. Many of the leaves are entirely eaten off but as soon as we get a touch of frost the grubs will disappear.

When you want Roast Beef, Roast Veal, Roast Mutton, Roast Pork, try ELLIS'.

Here and There.

OCTOBER FISHING GOOD.—Since October month was ushered in, hook and lining operations have been carried on the local fishing grounds with comparatively good success. When conditions are civil enough to allow boats getting on the grounds, excellent catches are secured. To-day there was an abundance of cod and of a large size on the grounds, and fishermen made good hauls, boats getting an average of four quintals each. The catches were disposed of readily in the local market at remunerative prices.

Poultry Talks.

The Poultry Association have again secured the services of Professor Landry, of the Agricultural College, Truro, who will act as Judge at the forthcoming exhibition. Professor Landry will also give a series of lectures in the British Hall on poultry culture; the subject will be illustrated with lantern slides. One day will be known as Sailors' and Soldiers' day, when the men in uniform will be admitted free. We understand Mr. Percie Johnson is donating a new shield for white leghorns, and Mr. James H. Mayo a handsome silver cup. The Poultry Club have been very hard hit this year owing to the enormous increase in the price of foods and as a consequence will be able to keep on hand only a sufficient number of birds for brooding purposes next year.

Social Service Congress

Yesterday Morning's Session.

Hon. Dr. Lloyd, Minister of Justice, occupied the chair at yesterday morning's meeting of the Social Service Congress. After a few introductory words he called upon Judge Johnson, who delivered a most scholarly address on "Actual and ideal methods of securing obedience to law." Ideal methods he defined as being both retributive and reformative; here no reformative methods obtain, nor are they permitted under our system. He sketched the history of the treatment of criminals and showed the number of broad influences that are nowadays recognized to bear on the question. Education is a most necessary factor and the training of scholars in their duties as citizens. Prohibition was an enormous help in itself, but there was need of other things, the influence of woman, an obligation lying upon the Government, and to improve their childhood and manhood. It should give the lead to the people in grappling with intellectual and social problems.

Rev. Dr. Jones then read a paper upon "Respective obligations of citizens and Governments in respect of the enforcement of laws." The speaker showed ably the relation of individual rights to communal and state rights; as the latter grow larger the former diminish. Citizens must have civic pride and submission to civic laws. Governments and officials, on the other hand, are the servants of the people and accountable to them. To train the people in citizenship is an obligation lying upon the Government, and to improve their childhood and manhood. It should give the lead to the people in grappling with intellectual and social problems.

Canon Tucker was the next speaker, his subject being "Women in modern life: the single standard in morals." He treated a difficult question skilfully and courageously. He showed how society, both in ancient and modern times, has always enjoined the strictest morality upon women and punished severely departures from it, while there has been no similar treatment of men, not even very often, a moral judgment upon them. He showed that morally and physically there was no justification for the distinction. The matrimonial principle is, one man, one woman. He then dealt with the most serious aspect of incontinence, venereal diseases, showing how terrible and widespread are their ravages and how all incurable they are. The only effective remedy lies in the application of the single standard of morals: the libertine must be treated with the same severity as the prostitute.

Dr. Hart followed on the subject of the single standard in economics and politics. He showed that politically the standard was being reached rapidly, the right of women to vote being recognized more and more everywhere. The essential question was not of her right, however, but of training her to be fit for the exercise of the franchise. Economically the matter was more difficult, for there were physical limitations to women filling the same places and engaging in the same occupations as men. But allowing for these, woman is coming to take an equal place with man in many trades and professions, and where she does so she should be treated equally with him and paid the same salary.

Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session was held in Canon Wood Hall, Dr. J. A. Robinson presiding. Dr. Tait was the first speaker, his subject being "Housing and Health." (We hope to give the address in full in another issue.)

Dr. Moore then spoke on "Unchastity: its causes and cure." He enumerated the causes of unchastity as (1) Ignorance; children should not be permitted to grow up ignorant of the most important things in life; the responsibility of their education rests upon their parents, who should teach them to study the flowers, birds and beasts; (2) Bad company, children being on the streets at dark consorting with bad companions and playing wrong games; (3) Immodest dress; (4) Inadequate wages to girl employees, tempting them to resort to unchastity. The common theory, the speaker said, that boys should sow their wild oats was false and damnable; there was not the slightest necessity for it on any grounds. Legislation was most necessary that should visit unchastity with serious penal ties. The cause, he said, lies in Christian fellowship, the helping hand stretched out to the unfortunate who have dishonored themselves, leading them again onto the right road.

Canon Tucker next spoke, on "Essentials of Ideal Family Life." Marriage, he said, is too often lightly regarded, though nothing is more important. Both men and women should approach it carefully, choosing their life partners with regard to their character. Women should not marry men addicted to drink or dissolute rakes, who do not reform after marriage; men should not choose the butterfly type of women, nor those who prefer the streets to home life. Marriage happiness is in the hands of the married and marriage vows should be respected.

After some discussion of this subject, Dr. Hart spoke of "The care of the Criminal," emphasizing the necessity that all penal institutions should aim at reforming the criminal, not at torturing or depriving him further. Criminals are men, with consciences and human feelings. Defects abound in many prisons and similar institutions. Juvenile offenders should be accorded different treatment from that suitable to adults. Some discussion followed on this important matter, and the meeting then adjourned.

Night Session.

Hon. R. A. Squires, Colonial Secretary, was in the chair at last night's meeting.

Dr. Shearer was the first speaker, talking for his subject Social Reconstruction. He showed how social reforms, changes in the structure of society, are in some cases, as in the recent ones of Russia and Greece, effected by revolution. In other cases they take the form of a process of nationalisation, whereby public facilities come under the control of the public.

Lloyd George is showing England how to nationalize industry, and a similar great movement is on foot in the United States and Canada. Newfoundland should consider how her natural resources could be nationalized and developed by State aid. So also should human resources be at the service of the nation. The spirit and morale of the British forces is their highest winning force, as it is of any people. Social reconstruction is the real issue of the war: The German military system must be abolished, German society so remodelled that its recrudescence will be impossible. The whole question of social reconstruction is crystallized into a struggle between privilege seekers and the mass of the people. The former class are not absent from democracies. Party workers who buy votes and sell the power achieved through them; political speculators who seek to monopolize Government properties; industrial bosses and many others are all examples of privilege seekers. So too are profiteers who are not content with a normal profit, and with whom the church as well as the law should deal.

After a collection had been taken up, Dr. Hastings Hart gave a most interesting address on the subject of the United States and the war, treating it under two large heads—why the States stayed so long out of the war, and why she eventually entered it. He expressed first of all the great pleasure it gave him to participate in such a gathering, particularly since Britain and America had entered into such close and cordial relations. He gave five reasons why the United States held aloof for so long from the world struggle. First, the President could not count upon a united nation, until the cosmopolitan elements, many of them of enemy origin, could be solidified by a sentiment strong enough to bind them all. Second, the Americans are essentially peace-loving and for long believed that international differences could be settled by other means than force. Third, the Monroe doctrine had taught them to avoid interference in European affairs. Fourth, they thought that they could be most useful as a powerful neutral at the close of hostilities. Fifth, the natural desire to avoid the terrible experience of other nations involved in the war.

The great force which eventually overrode these considerations was, to put it frankly, self-interest: her honour and her very safety compelled her to make war with Germany, which on the seas and in her own dominions was making war with her. She knew that Germany would sooner or later compel her to fight, and she preferred fighting with strong Allies to fighting alone. But this self interest was not selfishness. She perceives clearly the moral issues for which she fights, and she is moved by a profound sympathy with Belgium, Serbia and other oppressed nations. She is fighting for the weak against the strong, for right

Newfoundland Week.

The first appearance of the band of the famous Newfoundland Regiment in Hyde Park on Saturday afternoon was a striking success, not only as a musical performance, but as a popular demonstration. So large was the crowd that it filled the great band enclosure to overflowing. The representative character of the gathering, as well as its size—for it was composed of members of all classes—testified to the public interest in the celebration of the discovery of Newfoundland 420 years ago, and the widespread desire to pay a tribute of gratitude to the oldest English Colony, which had sent over 10,000 hardy and resolute fighters to help the Motherland.

The record of the Newfoundland Regiment in Gallipoli and Flanders is at once glorious and tragic. In Gallipoli they were part of the "Immortal 28th Division." They can boast of having reached the nearest point to Constantinople, a height which they captured and called Caribou Hill, after the reindeer which ranges their native hills. They also have the distinction of being the last unit of the British Army to leave at the evacuation of the peninsula. In Flanders they were the only Overseas force engaged in the opening operations of the battle of the Somme on July 1, 1916, and they lost a larger proportion of their total strength than any other regiment engaged that day.

Many wounded officers and men were present in Hyde Park with Lady Morris, wife of Sir Edward Morris, the Prime Minister of Newfoundland. Several members of the band were wounded in the fighting in Gallipoli, and in Flanders. The band was formed early in 1916 by Lieutenant-Colonel C. W. Whitaker, in command of the 2nd Battalion of the Regiment. It was accompanied to Hyde Park by the regimental mascot, "Sable Chief," a pure-bred Newfoundland dog, a breed which is now getting rather rare in the colony. The great shaggy animal was led about the enclosure during the band performance to be patted and stroked by the company.

The following programme was played under the direction of Mr. L. L. Worthington, the bandmaster, who was formerly bandmaster of the 1st King's Liverpool Regiment:—

1. March, "Fax Britannica,"—Brunel.
2. Overture, "The Bohemian Girl,"—Balfé.
3. Selection, "Bravo Brac,"—Finck.
4. Valse, "For Valour,"—Ancliffe.
5. Cornet Solo, "When You Come Home,"—Squire.
6. Selection, "Iolanthe,"—Sullivan.

7. Morceau, "The Bells of St. Martin,"—La Rondelle.
8. Selection, "To-night's the Night,"—Hubens.
9. Piccolo Solo, "The Deep Blue Sea,"—Brewer.
10. Patrol, "Wee Macgregor,"—Amers.

Every item of the selection was warmly applauded, and at the end, when the march of the regiment was played, "The Banks of Newfoundland"—a mixture of Irish and Red Indian strains, very weird and stirring—there was a prolonged outburst of cheers and clapping of hands.

Yesterday the band gave two performances to wounded soldiers—at 2.30 at the 3rd London General Hospital, and at 5 o'clock at the Gilford House Auxiliary Hospital. To-day the bandmen will play at 11 a.m. at the Royal Exchange, and at 5 o'clock at Weybridge Convalescent Home. To-morrow they will play at the afternoon concert at His Majesty's Theatre for the benefit of the Prisoners of War Fund of the British Red Cross Society.

Among other engagements of the band during the week is a performance in the forecourt of Buckingham Palace, on the occasion of the first investiture of the band may be obtained from Lieutenant H. A. Anderson, Newfoundland Contingent, 58

GIFT OF AN AEROPLANE.

Mr. C. J. Fairfax Scott, honorary organizing secretary of the Imperial Fleet Committee, has been in negotiation with the chief Sheffield firms, with the result that the Master Cutler (Mr. W. H. Ellis) has raised the necessary funds to enable an Imperial Air Fleet first unit aeroplane named the "Sheffield," to be presented to Newfoundland. The presentation will be made next Saturday at 3 o'clock at Sheffield. There were 50,000 people at the Leicester presentation, and 60,000 at a similar event at Leeds, and it is expected that a still larger number will witness the Sheffield demonstration.

The Colonial Secretary will, it is hoped, receive the aeroplane on behalf of Newfoundland, and it is expected that Lady Morris, Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P., Major J. L. Baird, M.P., General Sir David Henderson, and the Lord Mayor of Sheffield will be present at the ceremony.

Sailmaking Industry Comes Back.

Judging from the big rush around sailmaking jobs the past few weeks it looks as if the old time sailmaking days are again to be revived. The building of so many schooners of late is giving the "knights of the palm and needle" all they can do. It is hoped that parties who formerly imported sails for their vessels will not do so in future as during the winter months our local men have time to spare, and by giving them plenty of work patrons would benefit the country.

Hr. Grace Notes.

The potato crop in this neighbourhood is causing much alarm. In many cases they are really not worth digging. We have heard of some plots where the owners expected to get 15 barrels, but will not realize 4 barrels. Besides being small, many of the potatoes are rotten, due it is said to blight in August. On the whole it is said the crop will be away short of last year's.

The news that the Shipbuilding Co.'s steamer laden with machinery was lost at St. John's was received this morning with much regret by our citizens, as it will keep the work of shipbuilding back for some months.

When the Kidneys Fail.

Poisons Remain in the Blood, Which Cause Pains and Aches—Read Here of the Surest Way of Settling the Kidneys Right.

Brockville, Ont., October 10th.—If you have headaches, backaches and rheumatic pains you have reason to suspect the kidneys. Pain is caused by poisons in the blood, and poisons only remain in the blood when the kidneys are defective and fail to do their work.

This Brockville lady has reported her case because she believes that a great many people are suffering as she did without knowing the cause or cure.

Mrs. Frank Noyes, 9 Stuart street, Brockville, Ont., writes: "For years I was afflicted with kidney complaint. I became very nervous, was easily worried and had frequent headaches and neuralgic pains, especially through the back. I had indigestion, poor circulation of the blood, and often was bothered with weak spells. I commenced using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and had only taken two boxes when I felt greatly relieved. I continued the treatment, however, until I was completely cured. In all I took about ten boxes, and have not been troubled in this way since, and highly recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I think also that the Plasters and Ointment can't be equalled."

Here is another letter to show how rheumatic pains disappear when the action of the kidneys is awakened by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills:

Mr. John May, Walkerton, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with rheumatism in my legs and I became so lame that I could scarcely get around. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills were recommended to me, and so I commenced using them. After I had been taking them for awhile I was delighted to find that my rheumatism had left me, and to-day I am as sound as a bell, able to get around and attend to business. I have made use of Dr. Chase's medicines in many ways for the last forty years, and cannot speak too well of their good qualities."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. You cannot expect such results from substitutes. Insist on getting the genuine.

Accommodation Scarce

Quite a number of people from the outports who arrived by train last night experienced considerable inconvenience in securing a room to sleep in for the night. One woman from a nearby settlement, having in her possession $200, was unable to find a place of shelter for the night and was obliged to call at the police station, where she was made comfortable by the matron.

The over-crowding of hotels and boarding houses at this season of the year is mainly attributed to the fact that a large number of fishermen from Bonavista and Trinity Bays, who formerly came here in their schooners on which they lived while in port, now come to the city by train.

A Child's Tongue Shows if Liver or Bowels Are Active

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic, remember, a good "inside cleanser" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

Mr. H. Pike, of St. John's, arrived in town on Friday and spent a few days with friends here. He returned to St. John's again to-day.

Five-Eyed Bees.

The eyes of an animal can only work together when they can be brought to bear upon an object at the same time; so that, as a rule, the eyes of a fish must work more or less independently. This is sometimes also the case when the eyes can cooperate, as anyone who watches a plaice or other flat fish in an aquarium will soon discover.

Many animals possess more than two eyes, which do not act together. A leech, for example, has ten eyes on the top of its head, which do not work in concert, and a kind of marine worm has two eyes on the head and a row down each side of the body. Some lizards have an extra eye on the top of the head, which does not act with the other two. A bee or wasp has two large, compound eyes, which possibly help each other, and are used for near vision, and also three little simple eyes on the top of the head which are employed for seeing things a long way off.—Tit-Bits.

The Coastal Service.

In the interests of the travelling public and to afford better freight carrying facilities the Government have decided to supplement the coastal steamers Fortis on the western route and the Prospero on the north coast with the Glencoe and Fogo, respectively, for the next two months. The steamers for both services will leave St. John's in alternate weeks. The Glencoe will call at North Sydney, thereby helping to relieve any freight congestion that may exist there.

Bay de Verde Notes.

The season's voyage is nearly ended and the fishery will be a fairly good one. A few boats still prosecute the fishery with hook and line. Cod is however scarce on the grounds. Your correspondent is under the impression that the fishery has been considerably exaggerated, or in other words that fishermen have hailed for much larger voyages than they really have and that the catch will be far behind what is reported.

The Gorton Pew Co. have purchased over six thousand qts. of fish paying nine to nine dollars and fifty for dry fish and six sixty for stop cure. This enterprising company is also purchasing at Lower Island Cove and other places in the district and is a great boon to the fishermen who can sell their fish at remunerative prices in their own harbors and save the expense of taking it to St. John's.

The s.s. Progress sailed from here to St. John's Thursday with a load of fish to the Gorton Pew Co. and two schooners are here waiting to load for them.

Mr. Robert Moore and Miss Maisie Burt were here last week and gave six nights' entertainments in the F.P.U. Hall. Moving pictures and illustrated songs by Miss Burt brought crowded houses each night.

Miss English, of Branch, has arrived here to take charge of the R. C. Superior School. We trust that she will give the same satisfaction as her predecessor Miss O'Connor, whose departure from here is universally regretted.

Mr. Archer will arrive by to-morrow's train and will give entertainments for a week in one of the halls here. He will be accompanied by a lady actress, and will no doubt give an enjoyable weeks amusement.

The R. C. picnic will be held in St. Joseph's Hall on Wednesday next. It will be followed by a dance in the hall in which the older ones will participate.

The Church of England people will hold a Sale of Work in St. Barnabas' Hall next week.

The schr. Jane Churchill, master, and Agnes, Blundon, master, are loading fish for the Gorton Pew Co. The schr. Hope, Hogan, master, arrived to-day and will also load for the same company.

We understand that a large Oporto firm will purchase fish here next season, and that a local agent will be appointed.

Mass For Soldiers.

On to-morrow morning at 8.30 Solemn Requiem Mass will be celebrated at the Cathedral for the repose of the souls of the Officers and men of the Newfoundland Regiment, killed on 11th and 12th October, 1916.

Everyday Etiquette.

"I am to give a party in the near future and expect to invite a girl who is engaged. I am not acquainted with her fiance, but I should like to have him present. Please tell what to do in such a case," asked Edith.

"Send two invitations to the engaged girl and ask her to hand one of them to her fiance, explaining the reason for doing this," was her mother's advice.

The Unenthusiastic Guests.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Who was the man who used to have to push up hill a big rock that kept rolling down as fast as he pushed it up? It wasn't Tantalus, was it? No, it was Sisyphus. Well that's the man I always feel like after the strain of entertaining an unenthusiastic guest.

If I were a fairy godmother and could give a child just one gift I think it would be the gift of enthusiasm. Enthusiasm is such a wonderful leaven. And unenthusiasm is such a terrible curse, both to those who have it and to those who have to live with him or her.

Or even to entertain him.

Unenthusiasm is Always a Curse.

You've all been hosts. Now wouldn't you find it less of a strain to entertain an enthusiastic, appreciative (mind you I don't mean gushing) guest one week than the heavy unenthusiastic defect-seeker guest one day?

One of these unenthusiastic guests came into my home the other day. We have made a few little improvements and most of our guests are tactful enough to mention them. She said nothing about them. Her first remark was "Isn't it a hot day. The train was terribly uncomfortable."

Her second, "That couch cover has faded, hasn't it?"

We Gave Him Our Best.

Before another guest we had striven to set the best we could find in the line of eatables because we know he is particular. "I hope that steak is all right?" we asked. (It was a sirloin, which all things considered we thought good enough for any man.) "Yes," he said absolutely without enthusiasm or qualification and then proceeded to tell us what good tenderloin steaks they served at his favorite restaurant.

Later another guest said to him, "Don't you think that salad dressing is splendid?" (We are rather proud of that particular recipe and were most grateful for her effort to extort a little enthusiasm.) "Yes," he said, "It's all right."

Not To Say "Thank You" For A Gift.

One puts into one's home and into one's cuisine the expression of oneself. When one entertains a guest one is making him a gift as it were. For him to utter no word of praise or liking is as bad as to take a Christmas gift and make no response. Of course one cannot shed the blessed sunshine of enthusiasm everywhere unless one is born with that beautiful gift but one can at least try not to be too unenthusiastic.

Startling.

Billy Sunday, the famous American evangelist, recently converted a Japanese who was a butler. The next day his master had a large dinner party, and the Jap was told to do his best. Course after course came on, and the guests were delighted with the dinner. At last the Jap brought on a huge cake as a final touch, and remembering that Billy Sunday had closed his service with prayer, the Jap figured out that he should close the dinner with a religious sentiment. Not knowing much of the language or of the Bible, he decided to choose the phrase which converted him. So the guests were amazed to find on the cake in sugared writing: "Prepare to meet thy God."—Til-Bits.

WIVES.

Wives are useful and respected members of society who are allowed to do housework for a living. They are also allowed to bank in new clothes every spring and fall, at so much per bank. Some wives do more banking than baking, but the majority work harder than a section foreman after a cloudburst.

Wives are secured by means of the marriage contract, which ties them hand and foot, but leaves their vocabulary free to roam at will. Tyrant man has never found a successful means of quelling the turbulent vocabulary of a wife who looks back upon the men she might have had and then begins to compare them out loud with what she has got. This is one of the most painful experiences in married life, and causes the proud, Castilian spirit of a self-respecting husband to droop and wither like a frost-bitten cucumber vine.

AND ALECK DORSEY PROPOSED TO ME TWICE AND SO DID LUKE WARMWATER. MA WRITER ALECK IS COUNTY CROOKER AND LUKE IS WORTH EVERY CENT OF SEVENTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS.

Causes the proud, Castilian spirit of a self-respecting husband to droop and wither like a roasted cucumber vine.

For hundreds of years prior to the Christian era wives were counted as household goods and could be mortgaged for about the same sum as a second-hand cook stove. There was very little social etiquette in those days, and the ancient Roman could go down town any Saturday afternoon and buy five or six wives with good teeth for $2.49. How painful it must have been to become the bride of some alcoholic, red-necked Roman to whom one had never been even introduced! It is said that Rameses the Great had 9,400 wives, no two of whom were alike, which probably accounts for the sad, drawn expression which travelers have observed protruding from his mummy.

There has been a great and melancholy change since Rameses' time. Nowadays a man who has one wife is perfectly satisfied to let things stand as they are. All about us, in the busy mart of life, we hear men clamoring for this or that, for more maple syrup on their pancakes or more shortening in the biscuits. This is a beautiful lesson in self-denial which shows how rapidly the world is advancing to a nobler and loftier plane.

Wives have been the making of thousands of men who otherwise would be dodging their poll tax. The average wife has more courage, discretion, horse sense and piety than her husband, and if she ever gets hold of the purse strings there will be less blue sky tucked away in the safe.

BLESSING IN DISGUISE.

The cost of living still is high, and men of modest means must cut out porterhouse and pie, and live on wholesome greens. I used to freely blow my coin for viands rare and rich, expensive cuts of tenderloin, and terrapin and such. But in such grub I have no share, now, when the noon hour strikes; a horse might view my bill of fare, and find the things it likes. A cow might scan the daily spread in this, my humble cot, and sigh, "Right here I would be fed—such victuals hit the spot!" I gnaw the lucious ear of corn, or squash I eat my fill, and wash them both down with a horn of cider from the mill. To furnish me the food I need no creature spills its blood; I've eaten so much cattle feed that now I chew my cud. I'm eating horse feed day by day, clean herbs and grain and chaff and when I'd talk I often neigh, and whinny when I'd laugh. But, oh, I'm feeling fit and fine! I've shaken off disease; no rheumatism now is mine, no cramps are in my knees. We eat too much, our grub's too rich, when we have coin to spare; and it's a goodly thing to ditch the costly bill of fare.

Flour From Halifax.

Halifax, Oct. 6th.—There are now four schooners at Deepwater from Lunenburg to load flour for Newfoundland ports, the Hawanee, Francis W. Smith, Araminta and M. M. Gardiner. The latter has about completed her cargo for St. John's. The Smith and Hawanee, which arrived Wednesday, will begin loading to-day, the former for St. John's and the latter for Grand Bank, where she has been sold. Captain Cook, who sailed the vessel for seven years, will deliver the Hawanee to her new owners. The Araminta had not begun loading up to yesterday, although she has been lying there since Saturday. The Lauretta Francis, another Lunenburg schooner is here to load flour at Deepwater for St. John's, Nfld., began taking out her ballast at the Plant wharf yesterday.

Schooner Mattawa, at Smith's wharf and Strathcona, at Whitman's wharf, commenced loading salt yesterday, the former for Bay St. George, Nfld., and the latter for Labrador.

Schooner Minnie M. Cook went on the marine railway slip at Dartmouth yesterday to have her bottom scraped and painted after which she loads flour at Deepwater for St. John's, Nfld.

Your Boys and Girls.

It is possible to avoid travelling with a bottle-fed baby, but if it is necessary and the journey is short, buy a wicker-covered ice box made for travelling purposes, prepare and pack the milk as in your refrigerator at home. For a long journey supply unsweetened condensed milk in small cans. Remember the condensed milk spoils when open, also that it is twice as strong as plain or whole milk, and must be diluted accordingly.

If condensed milk is fed the baby for any length of time, give strained orange juice between feedings to supply a fresh element.

To-Day's Message

10.30 A.M.

THE WASTAGE OF GERMAN FORCES.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—The above comparison of the morning's early messages extended to the entire French front, if you consider that on the 15th to June 15th the enemy had 108 divisions against the French forces, and finally bears in mind that the success of British offensive at Ypres and the enemy to engage 15 divisions in the last 10 days, you can see why the German losses on the West Front grow heavier and heavier. Admit the loss of 116,000 men in May; 114,000 are estimated by the staff during the month of June, etc. This is because fighting on the West Front as a matter of fact never ceases, whether in French sectors of Verdun, Arras and Ypres, fighting discontinued at one point is taken up at another. In addition to the attacks, the quantity of casualties in small actions, which are crowned with success and the bulletins are not able to give a clear idea, increase the number of the Germans. This constant coinciding with the weakness of the action of the Russians, also why the Germans are obliged to maintain, three times larger than the French front—that of the Russian. In the beginning of the year there were 156 German divisions, 70 kilometres on the French front against 130 Austro-German divisions, 77 of which are on the East Front. This puts a stop to all active operations and that the reaction of events in Russia on the West Front has allowed Germany to concentrate during these four months a reserve for the West Front. It clearly appears at present that the German staff, remembering the situation in which they themselves following the French success on the Somme, fears to see their West Front by the Allied offensive in the measures they have taken to be of a defensive character and to strengthen their position on the face of the Anglo-French battle and withdrawing operations their front on the Hindenburg line. West Front between January and April a certain number of men did not suffice they have drawn men from each of their sectors on the East Front and with the assistance of the class of...
