indicate that there is no surplus of Anthracite Coal in the U.S. The shortage caused by the strike of Anthracite Miners last year has not been made up, and American hard coal will, in all probability, be hard to get and high priced. Coke is an excellent substitute for hard coal, and we have on hand a stock of same that will soon be disposed of, because a shortage of hard coal invariably creates an increased demand for our product. We advise our customers to book their requirements as soon as possible.

Queen Mary's
Doll's House.

London, August 24.—Very little has appeared in the newspapers about the doll's house which is to be a gift to Queen Mary, and which is to be shown at the British Empire exhibition at Wembley next year. The idea of the doll's house was conceived by Sir Edwin Lutyens noted architect and artist, who designed the house and whose fertile brain has devised the many groups of bright ideas which have taken shape in it. The Princess Marie Louise has devoted herself to the correspondence and organization by which the furnishing of the Doll's house has been completed.

It is a real gift house. Everything, from the tiny wine bottles in the cellars to the wonderful guides up which the walls of the house slide into space, leaving all the rooms free for inspection, is given free by the expert manufacturers, by artists, authors, artificers and craftsmen of all kinds. It is intended to preserve for posterity in a delightful form the domestic life of the present period in its most finished manifestation and great care and thought and invention have been lavished upon it. It is become the peculiar interest of certain members of the Royal Family, and it has been more talked of circles than any event except a coronation.

The Queen's doll's house is a building fashioned in scale of an inch to the foot, and all its contents are worked exactly to that ratio. Its height is a little over eight feet, and beneath it is a base constructed with four drawers holding—

A garden with flowers and shrubs exquisitely made in metal and other material.

A garage holding a number of motor cars.

Dolls exact in scale with the building and dressed in appropriate clothes so that they can be placed at once in the particular room in the particular attitudes desired; and

A wine cellar stocked with wine, the champagne bottles being about half an inch in length.

The walls of the house have been devised and fitted on a system which allows them to be instantly raised to the roof and put back again. The building is a modern Renaissance structure of the richest country houses type that Sir Edwin Lutyens has brought into country life. The ceilings, fireplaces, doors, windows and panelling are all delicately designed in Sir Edwin's famous manner.

The lower rooms and staircase have ceilings painted by William Nicholson, painter. The ceilings of the other floors are painted by Charles Sims, Edward Dulac, William Walcott, architect, painted and other, and other artists. The grand staircase is a precious work in jade and other rare materials. Sir John Lavery has painted miniature full-lengths of King Edward and Queen Alexandra, which, with frames, are about eight inches high. A large number of artists have contributed pictures and other decorations, most of the Academy and many of the independents being represented by their very smallest works.

Etchings the size of a postage stamp are preserved in the library in little folios. Everything one could think of and many one could not can be found in these wonderful rooms. Electric fittings, fires, fans, telephones, typewriters, pianos, playing cards—but the list is endless. There are two bathrooms, the King's being decorated with political cartoons. All the taps and everything work as in a real palace. Electric light, telephones and water are all laid on.

Then the library rejoices in books by famous authors that can be seen nowhere else. E. V. Lucas, editor of Punch, has written a book on the whole duty of dolls, with a word on each page, and Sir James Barrie and many other notable writers have not thought it unjust to themselves to write special books for this Lilliputian library. The kitchen rivals the library in its variety and novelty, and a whole dinner could be cooked in its delicate vessels for a doll's party of twenty or so.

After the movies, visit the Blue Puttee. Try a cup of Hot Chocolate or Coffee with Whipped Cream and some of our real Homemade Cake. You can't get anything like it in town.—a225.f

CHAPTER XXII.

He goes indoors feeling so ready to show that "serious talk" and that "humble pie" repeat that it is with surprise and satisfaction that he receives a message from the viscount, who wishes to see Captain Glynn in his private room.

"I don't think I have ever been favored by an invitation to walk into your parlor before, viscount," he observes, with a glance around the small, dingy room, which is lumbered and crammed with a huge, heavy old escritoire and bookcase, and a marble-topped table supporting a massive lamp, which is pushed untidily back against a screen that leans against the wall, having no room to stand properly.

"No," the viscount says, with a sour contortion of his face and a glimmer of an evil smile in his eyes. "Why that quotation, I should like to know? I certainly shouldn't bother to play spider to you!"

"The words are sufficiently insulting; the tone is worse."

"What do you want of me?" Dallas asks coldly and curtly, forgetting the "humble pie" altogether.

"I want to ask you what you mean by offering an insult to my guests," the viscount demands, with a snarl. "If you and your wife can't agree together, you might—at least, while you remained in my house—have refrained from letting your admiration of another lady be so marked as to be an insult to that lady—yes, an insult to her! I repeat it, sir!" the viscount says sternly, confronting Dallas with a severe judicial aspect.

Dallas, fairly paralyzed with rage and astonishment, stands gazing at him in silence.

"Your conduct has driven your wife to leave Pentreath this morning," the viscount resumes, with a menacing tone and an ugly lowering frown; "and, as you know quite well, step like that on the part of a wife means deadly injury to a young girl's reputation—her spotless reputation, sir," the viscount adds, fiercely, raising his voice, "which you would sacrifice to your vanity!"

"Don't you think, Lord Glynn, you have gone far enough?" Dallas says slowly; and his lordship fancies, from the look in his cousin's eyes, that he has gone far enough; but he knows—though he is afraid—that he must go farther.

"I have not spoken without reason—without strong reason," he resumes, rather blusteringly. "Mrs. Murray and her daughter have no resource to leave the house at once. Lady Maria is indignant beyond measure about it, and naturally feels very strongly on Joyce's behalf; she feels also that, but for her being unhappily an invalid, this might never have happened. In her proper place as hostess she could have protected poor Joyce."

"Don't you think," Dallas repeats, coming a step nearer, his eyes gleaming with anger, "that you have said enough? Not that I should dream of resenting your malice and hatred," he adds, with galling contempt; "you can't help your nature. But I won't listen to your championing Joyce against me! It is as needless as it is impertinent. Joyce Murray knows her good name is as dear to me as my life or honor. Joyce knows me and trusts me!" he finishes.

"Why don't you say at once that she loves you madly and means to be faithful to you forever?" Viscount Glynn asks, with a venomous sneer. "I shouldn't be surprised at any assertion of the kind from you."

"Wouldn't you prefer proof?" Dallas asks, mockingly, suffering himself to be betrayed into an indiscretion in his raging contempt.

The viscount's pallid face grows livid.

"Not even your wretched vanity could trump up a proof!" he says, huskily.

"Couldn't it?" Dallas rejoins, smiling; and the smile is like the red flag of the torero to the infuriated bull.

"I don't wonder at your wife leaving you!" the viscount says furiously.

"Nonsense!" Dallas responds, airily. "My wife hasn't left me. You've been swallowing slander wholesale, I'm afraid, viscount. My wife loves me, and I love her," he adds, a little unsteadily, "and I am going up to town to rejoin her this afternoon, unless the earl wishes me to stay."

"The earl has expressed no wish about you, sir!" Lord Glynn retorts, his sunken eyes flaming still. "If he were able to express a wish, I have no doubt it would coincide with mine."

"Thank you—for your courtesy and hospitality both," Dallas responds, smiling coldly. "I shall never forget either; and he quits the room, and half an hour later quits Pentreath, never to enter it again.

When Dallas departs, Lord Glynn locks his door carefully against intruders, and from behind the screen which is leaning untidily against the wall and masking the second small door peep out, the dark glossy curled head and sparkling eyes of Mademoiselle Bella Glover.

"Well," she says, laughing softly, "you said listeners would hear no good of themselves. That meant I should hear ill; but you see he never said one word against me, never suspecting I had the tip of my finger in the pie, poor young man!"

"I don't know what good you have done for yourself or anybody by putting your finger in the pie," the viscount says, gruffly. "You're too clever by half, Bella!"

"Oh, no, I'm not!" she retorts coolly. "I have to be very clever—poor little I!—in order to carry out my employer's wishes. You wanted to get rid of Dallas Glynn, didn't you? Well, you have got rid of him. Do be a little bit grateful to me sometimes!"

"Yes, I have got rid of him, I hope," he admits savagely. "Contented him and his impudence!"

"If you'd like to use a stronger expression than that to relieve your feelings, I won't object," says mademoiselle politely. "That remark of his about that quite too universally charming young lady seems to have riled you considerably, my lord. Do you want the 'proof' he hinted at? If so, and if it's to be had, and not a figment of his imagination, I'll get it for you."

"I wish you would," the viscount says, sullenly. "It is too bad for a fellow like that to be able to slander an innocent girl with impunity."

"Oh," Miss Glover rejoins, her lip curling, "I don't think it was exactly slander, do you know? But I'll find out for you, never fear! There's plenty to discover, I have no doubt."

And Viscount Glynn, turning over some papers, makes no reply to this friendly assurance beyond a savagely muttered imprecation.

"Haven't you anything better than that to say to me," Miss Bella murmurs plaintively, "your poor little friend who is devoted to you—interests?"

"I don't know why the deuce you wanted me to invite that fellow here," growls the viscount. "I did it to please you. I hate the sight of him."

"Never mind—I had my reasons—good reasons," his "little friend" says soothingly. "And I promised you I would soon get rid of him for good and all, out of your way, and I have kept my promise, you see."

The scheming woman speaks but the truth. Dallas Glynn has left Pentreath, never to re-enter it during its master's lifetime; for two days later Lyrulph Glynn is Earl of Pentreath, and, when the old earl's will is read, not only is Dallas Glynn's name not even mentioned, but there is no allusion to the sum of five hundred pounds which has been paid yearly from the estate both to the Honorable Percival Glynn and afterward to his son, Dallas. Dallas Glynn has therefore now no surety as to its future payment; and can only trust to the generosity of his cousin, the new earl, who never offers him, or ever intended to offer him, one shilling from all his newly acquired wealth.

A sucker is one who thinks the "good things" are peddled about over the country to give the small investor a chance.

What Do You Think of a Fluid

That will draw roaches and ants out of every hole, crack, or crevice before killing them and not poison food?

That will kill bugs instantly and not leave an unpleasant odor?

That will knock flies off the wall and not harm paint or paper?

That will keep the bedroom, kitchen, or verandah clear of flies, mosquitoes, etc., for several hours after a few sprays?

That will take fleas off a dog and not harm the dog?

That will destroy chicken lice without any injury to your stock?

That applied in small quantities to the exposed parts of the body will insure you from Mosquito bites?

End Corns

The simplest way to end a corn is Blue-jay. Stops the pain instantly. Then the corn loosens and comes out. Made in clear liquid and in thin plasters. The action is the same.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION OPENS AT TORONTO

TORONTO, Aug. 26. The Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto's big annual fair, was opened for its forty-fifth annual showing yesterday, when Dr. F. C. Banting, discoverer of diabetes insulin who became internationally famous during the year since the last fair, pressed the switch button that officially opened the exhibition to the public to-day. It was warriors' day according to the programme and returned soldiers with their dependents, were the guests of the directorate. Officials are aiming at an attendance of a million and a half people during the two weeks of the fair this year.

Big Programme at the Nickel To-Night

EXCELLENT VOCAL BILL BY MISS FREER.

Miss Margaret Freer has selected an excellent programme of popular vocal hits for to-night. This brilliant mezzo-soprano has already caused a stir in musical circles of St. John's, and we bespeak for her one of the most successful engagements ever played in Newfoundland. Her numbers to-night are: (a) "Were my song with wings provided"—Hahn; (b) "Little grey home in the West"—Lehr.

GERMANY HAS SPOKEN FRANCE HAS THE FLOOR

BERLIN, Aug. 24. Approval of Chancellor Stresemann's latest expression on the reparations issue is voiced to-day by the press of all parties. The Nationalist editors lay stress upon the emphatic manner in which the Chancellor rejected any compromise with regard to Germany's sovereignty over the Rhineland, while Socialist organs think the Chancellor displayed laudable sincerity in dealing with the issue. Chancellor Stresemann's speech, says the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, the organ of Hugo Stinnes, marks a distinct progress in that it makes clear to the world points of difference existing in the way of France and Germany look at the question. It goes straight to the crux of the whole issue, says the newspaper. Does France want reparations or the Rhine? Germany has spoken and France now has the floor.

TREATY OF ALGERIANS TO FOLLOW TREATY OF SEVRES

LONDON, Aug. 25. Under Tanager and other date lines, London newspapers to-night print reports of Spanish losses and difficulties in Morocco. The Tanager correspondent of the Daily Express quotes a Riffian communication on the fighting previous to the relief of Titraun as saying that the rebels counted 739 Spanish dead, while it took them two days to remove the enemy's wounded. Abdelkrim, the rebel leader, a week ago summoned 100,000 Riffians to arms and threatened to confiscate goods and lands of all who disobeyed the call. The French zone and Tanager itself is practically denuded of Riffians in consequence of the general response to the summons. Abdelkrim has issued a manifesto, the despatch adds, declaring the Treaty of Algerias must go the same way as the Treaty of Sevres, for his people are capable of governing themselves, and like the Turks, are prepared to prove they are able to prove their determination.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 25. Butler R. Stork, 31, a convicted forger, donned civilian clothes this morning, preparatory to stepping out of the Ohio Penitentiary into a position that will now pay him $250 a month. Sentenced to serve two years, Stork, after 21 months, has been granted conditional parole. The condition is that he follow the work he instituted among his fellow prisoners and in which more than 1,800 are now interested. Stork, a college graduate, and a former army captain, is the originator of the correspondence school in which convicts have been given an opportunity to educate themselves.

BILLY'S UNCLE

Good News Travels Too Fast for Billy.

BY BEN BATSFORD.

C. L. B. Cadets

Avon Battalion paraded as usual Thursday night at 7.45. The Colonel was in command and the following officers were present:—Major H. A. Osterbridge, M.B.E., Lieut. Fred Reid, W. A. Mott, R. G. Ash, M. Job Taylor, Captains P. B. Rendell and F. Burden and Major Williams (in militia). The lads were given the usual routine drill. Sergt. Major Best had charge Company instruction and the recruits were also actively engaged under their officers. The Armoury was visited during the evening by Mr. W. E. Baldwin and his son Max, Dick Baldwin of Montreal who were very pleased to see the Brigade at work and their magnificent Armoury, as the C.L.B. has nothing like it in the Dominion of Canada. After the close of parade in the Officers' Mess Captain Joseph Snow was the principal in a very pleasing event when his brother officers through Lieut. M. Job Taylor presented him with a keepsake in the shape of a set of military brushes. Captain Snow has been a very hard worker many years in the Brigade, having enlisted as a private and by merit won his commission as Captain—not only of his Brigade but his commission from the King as a Captain of the Royal Mtd. Regiment. All ranks are sorry Captain Joe is going and none regrets the parting more than himself, and he hopes the day is not far distant when he will be back again in his old Brigade.

Wedding Bells

MILLS—DAVIS.

At Cochrane St. Methodist Church at 3 p.m. on Wednesday last, August 22nd, a pretty wedding took place when Miss Beatrice Frances, daughter of Mr. Frank Mills, became the bride of Thomas, son of the late Samuel Davis. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. M. Wilson in the presence of a large gathering of the friends and well-wishers of the young couple. The bride, who was handsomely gowned in Lemon Silk with hat and veil, and carrying a beautiful bouquet of sweet peas and maiden hair ferns, entered the church leaning on the arm of her father. Miss Nellie Maunder attended the bride as maid of honor and was dressed in brown and henna crepe de chine with hat to match and also carried a beautiful bouquet. Mr. Frank Mills, brother of the bride, performed the duties of best man, whilst Mr. F. Young presided at the organ. After the ceremony the wedding party and guests motored around Quidi Vid Lake and then to the residence of the bride's uncle, Mr. F. Willar on Quidi Vid Road, where a very pleasant afternoon was spent with music and song. The groom's present to the bride was a pretty Labradorite pendant, and to the groomsmen a signet ring. The bride was the recipient of a large number of useful and valuable presents, including a number of cheques, testifying to the esteem in which both are held. The newly married couple left by motor car at 6.30 amid showers of confetti for Holyrood, where the honeymoon will be spent, taking with them the very best wishes of their numerous friends for a long and happy married life.

Our Greatest Investment and our Right of Control.

We entrust our moneys to two institutions in particular, the State and the Bank. In the case of the latter the act is voluntary, but we deposit our earnings with implicit confidence, with the expectation of regular returns in the form of interest, with absolute reliance that it will not be risked in wild speculation, that it will not diminish or disappear through leakages, and that it will always be managed by experts. Seldom in these days is that confidence abused. The bank is the guardian of our savings and our secrets, and its integrity commands our respect.

The State is no less a depository in which we have, generally speaking, an even greater part of our earnings invested and from which we are justified in expecting the same integrity, the same capable management, and the same watchfulness over investments. Unfortunately it cannot be claimed that the same care is exercised by the latter. It may be due in part to the system whereby we change from time to time the trustees of the Public Funds that the hard and fast rules of Bankers are not so scrupulously maintained by Governments. Unfamiliar with the handling of huge sums, they are often carried away with the power to spend which has suddenly been placed in their hands. Without intending to be wasteful, they nevertheless pay attention to a clamour for expenditure in a certain direction, and mistake the agitation for something trivial as a demand for an urgent need. They are often incapable of exercising judgment in a financial matter, and rather than be accused of being parsimonious, they err on the side of extravagance. They fail to realize their responsibility; that they are handling trust money, that the public have a right to a strict rendering of every dollar expended, and that they can be called to account for every dollar squandered. Unfortunately too, the numerous channels through which the public funds pass allow many opportunities to those who are dishonest to divert them to their own use.

Recently we stated that the greatest stimulus to arouse a public spirit would be by inducing our people to invest more generally in local enterprises. The question may well be asked, if that is the case, why there does not already exist that public spirit, when the people are such large investors in the public funds. The only answer is that they do not realize that the money which the Government expends is their money, that the roads, railways, public wharves, government buildings, government steamships and all the other public utilities belong indisputably to them.

No person wilfully destroys his own property, but we have only too many illustrations of the damage inflicted by the public in our parks, on our trains and boats, and in our government buildings. In fact almost everything that is said to be government owned is treated with scant respect, and to be defrauded by many as clever rather than criminal.

This can only be due to the fact that they do not perceive that what they are injuring is their own, that in being dishonest they are defrauding themselves, and are thereby preventing an expenditure on something that is urgently needed.

If once the community as a whole thoroughly grasped that public property was their property, that public funds were their earnings, that public trustees were their servants, a new spirit would soon pervade the public service, and there would be short shift for those who practice extravagance or allowed the funds of the country to be dissipated.

It is yet too soon to predict what will be the outcome in Italy of Mussolini's dictatorship, but in many respects his rule has been thorough, and he has done much to suppress venality and excess by summarily dismissing incapable or dishonest officials. With regard to State funds he says: "Remember that the State's money is sacred. It does not fall from the sky like rain, nor can it be produced by the simple process of working the printing-presses double time. It is the fruit of the sweat and the blood of the Italian people, and this money, even in its smallest amounts must be considered sacred, and spent only when absolute necessity renders it indispensable."

It will be well with us when we are possessed of a Government that will not only preach but practise that policy.

Detective Byrne Goes to Labrador.

WILL FURTHER INVESTIGATE MISS LINDSAY'S DEATH.

Head Constable John Byrne, chief of the detective department, left this afternoon by S. S. Sagona bound to Labrador. It is learned that Head Byrne's mission is in connection with the death of Miss Lindsay. The story of this young lady's mysterious disappearance from the Grenfell Station at Cartwright last August and the subsequent discovery of the body within a radius of the station has already been told. Following a post mortem examination an investigation took place. Several theories were held, two of which was suicide and accidental death. In the first theory the investigation and post mortem disclosed no motive and the second, no weapon could be found, although a wound was found on the body. Apparently the authorities are not satisfied and hence Head Byrne is being sent to make further investigation.

Magistrate's Court.

A messenger employed in a Government office, appeared before court this morning, first charged with being drunk, and second with the larceny of five bottles of liquor, valued at $15.00 the property of the Controller's Department. Accused pleaded guilty to both charges. The facts of the case are that the defendant visited the department in question on Saturday afternoon last, under the influence of liquor, and while Mr. Berteau, the Assistant Controller had his back turned for a few minutes the accused smelt some of the fiery odour, and decided to take as much as his pockets could hold. He was about to leave the office with the goods when Mr. Berteau intervened, but the man with the stuff eluded him and made good his escape. Upon being arrested by Sergeant Green a few hours later, and taken to the lockup, the defendant was found with five bottles of liquor in his possession. A fine of $28.00 or thirty days was imposed.

Three ordinary drunks arrested over Saturday night, were granted their release upon paying the usual deposit. Constable C. Pitcher had a cabman up before court for driving after dark without lights. The accused admitted his guilt, and was let go upon paying $5.00. A drunk and disorderly was fined $10.00 or 30 days. Judge Morris occupied the bench this morning.

Amendments Weaken Lady Astor's Beer Bill.

London, August 25. (A.P.)—Lady Astor's liquor bill is regarded by the liquor interests as a huge scheme to take so much as that they have made an serious efforts to hinder its passage. The most persistent opponents of the bill when it was first introduced in the Commons now regard the amended form so harmless that some of them even went so far as to support it. The original intention of the bill was to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors to persons under 18 years of age, heavy penalties being provided for infringements. The committee in charge of the bill, however, inserted the vital words "knowingly under eighteen" and now the proprietor cannot be fined or arrested unless it is proved that he knew the consumer to be under age.

Has Foot Amputated.

The gunning accident to Hunter Snelgrove, which occurred on board the Watchful at Stag Bay the early part of last week, turned out to be more serious than expected. Mr. J. T. GLOUCESTER CELEBRATES CENTENARY RACES TO-DAY.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Aug. 27. Ancient Gloucester, setting out on a week's celebration of its three hundredth birthday, is talking and thinking of nothing but schooners. Over-shadowing all other events on the centenary programme is the open fishermen's race for the Lipton Cup and Prentiss trophy which carries in addition thousand and eight hundred dollars respectively. Betting is on the Henry Ford to win. Each skipper is to take his boat over the starting line at nine o'clock this morning in trim that he likes best and the first boat home wins. Lipton arrived to-day to see the races. Two Boston schooners have entered, Mayflower and Shamrock; the others are Henry Ford, Elizabeth Howard, and Yankee. The course is thirty-one miles.

Amazed Thief.

PARIS.—In a secluded spot just outside the walls of Paris there stands a small and select infirmary where diseases of the throat are treated. Patients suffering from chronic laryngitis go there for medical attention. The attention of the police was called recently to a series of daylight hold-ups occurring in the vicinity of the sanatorium. It seems that ingenious crooks watched prosperous looking visitors enter the institution, noted the worst cases—those so unable to utter a sound that they had to make signs to the doorman—and then set upon them when they left and robbed them of their money and valuables. One of the stick-up men received the shock of his life the other day, when an intended victim, upon being attacked, suddenly shouted "Help, Thief!" in a voice which would have been a credit to a side-show Barker. Fear had brought back the sick man's voice. "You have cured me!" he said to the crook. "It's ten years since I have been able to shout like that. Here is a hundred francs; I would much rather give this to you than go on paying doctors."

Proposed Waterway TO OPEN UP CENTRAL EUROPE.

Bamberg, Bavaria, Aug. 27.—Charles-magne would have a bad hot hour if he could come back to life long enough to see how canal-diggers are gashing-up the eastern half of his old empire to connect the waters of the Rhine and Danube, and make it possible for ocean-going ships to travel from the North Sea to the Black Sea by inland waters. The Rhine-Main-Danube Canal, which was begun in 1911, contemplates a revolution in the transportation system of Europe, and indirectly of the entire world. Freight routes will be changed, and cargoes loaded on ocean-going ships of not greater than 1,500 tons capacity will be able to sail from Rotterdam to Galatz, at the mouth of the Danube, touching Cologne, Mayence, Frankfurt, Nuremberg, Vienna, Budapest and Belgrade on their way to the Black Sea.

Early Winter Predicted.

WILD DUCKS START FOR SOUTH TWO MONTHS AHEAD OF SCHEDULED TIME.

TORONTO, Aug. 26.—The croak of the crane and the quack of the wild duck are being heard throughout rural Ontario. According to reports received from several agents of the Canadian National Railways in the eastern section of the Province, these birds are beginning their southern migratory flights about two months ahead of the usual time. Old residents of the sections in which the birds were seen state that this is an unprecedented occurrence, and they believe that it presages an early winter.

From the North advice has been received that the wild rice, upon which the migratory flocks of ducks and geese largely feed, and close to which they have their breeding grounds, headed very early this year, and trappers and guides in the far North predict that this, coupled with the sudden migration of the birds, indicates that the winter is not far away. Further indication of this unpleasant promise was given by reports from the eastern section of the Province. Several Canadian National agents stated that there had been two or more degrees of frost in their section, and two specifically reported that within six past few days whole tomato crops had been ruined by being frozen to the ground.

Artificial Hay Drying.

LONDON.—Making hay while the sun shines is out of date. Hay is now being grown in many parts of England by methods over which the weather clerk has no control. In these advanced sections, the grass is gathered, perhaps in a damp state, as soon as cut, and crammed into a rick in the stack yard. An electric fan does the rest. When the rick is built a metal cylinder is inserted so that an air cavity is formed. This cavity will serve a 30-ton rick to insure the safety of the curing and cooling process. A fan placed in the cavity dries out the grass and keeps it from rotting. It is claimed that not only are the farmers saved the possible loss of their crops through bad weather, but analysis shows that hay dried in this way has a higher percentage of albuminoids and carbo-hydrates, and therefore increased feeding value.

Quebec Leads Pulp and Paper Industry.

ONTARIO A CLOSE SECOND AND IS THE LEADING PRODUCER OF PAPER—B.C. IS THIRD.

MONTREAL.—It is a close fight between Ontario and Quebec for leadership in Canada's pulp and paper industry, with Quebec holding the edge because of its leadership in the production of pulp, such as ground-wood, sulphite and sulphate. Quebec has $191,514,809 invested in the industry, as against Ontario's $133,749,684. Quebec employs 13,549 men in the industry, as against Ontario's 8,138.

Quebec leads in pulp production with 1,488,204 tons, as against Ontario's 736,308 tons, the valuation being $48,329,740 for Quebec and $27,363,874 for Ontario. But Ontario is ahead in the production of paper and produced 648,498 tons last year valued at $69,927,499, as compared with Quebec's 587,777 tons valued at $45,866,028. Ontario produced the most newsprint, the most book and writing papers and the most boards. Quebec produced the most wrapping paper.

British Columbia ranks a good third in all lines.—Financial Post.

Animals as Athletes.

SURPRISING FEATS OF SPEED AND ENDURANCE.

If you were asked to name the swiftest animal, you might answer the hare, or possibly the greyhound.

A first-class greyhound can travel for a short distance at thirty-five miles an hour, a speed about four miles an hour faster than that of a hare.

The speediest animals are the greyhound, race-horse, prong-horned antelope, hare, Texas jack rabbit, common fox, and coyote. Next come the foxhound and the grey wolf.

The speeds of all the animals mentioned have been measured by counting the number of bounds in a given space of time by means of a stop watch; then—preferably on a snow-clad surface—measuring the length of each bound.

A man can do no better than 2 1/2 miles an hour, and that only in a hundred yards sprint. His best speed for a mile is but fourteen miles an hour.

A Hundred Miles in a Night.

None of the animals mentioned can keep up the recorded speeds for any considerable length of time, but in this respect the fox and the wolf can beat either the greyhound or the racehorse. As a rule, wild animals have greater powers of endurance than domesticated creatures. The grey wolf, for instance, has been known to run over a hundred miles in a night, a feat which would be beyond the power of any horse.

Incidentally, there is a very interesting point. The domesticated horse is swifter than the wild variety, and even when carrying a rider a good horse can run down a mustang.

The racehorse is even more a made-for-production. Since through the records since times were first taken, and you will see that they are constantly improving. The most remarkable is the improvement in the speed of the trotter. In an American paper of 1896 appeared the following: Yesterday afternoon the Harlem race course opened, and a distance was trotted in two minutes and fifty-nine seconds, by a horse called "Yankee," a rate of speed, this believed, never before equalled.

Within less than a century Lou Dillon had trotted a mile under two minutes, or at a speed nearly a third faster than that of Yankee.

When we come to endurance records some of the speediest animals are nowhere. If you had to pick an animal to carry you for five hundred miles at the greatest possible speed across rough country, what would you choose? It should be a dromedary. A blood horse might travel sixty miles at a speed of fourteen miles an hour, but at the end of that distance it would be absolutely played out and in urgent need of food and rest.

Stories For All Moods.

SIR HENRY LLOYD'S NEW YARNS.

(John of London's Weekly).

One of the cherished relaxations of a popular young member of the House of Lords with a passion for mechanics was to run a train bound for the coast. He entered his name on the Labour sheet of the London and South Western Railway, and succeeded in becoming an expert engine-driver.

"One morning, he received a visit from a perennially needy neighbour, who represented himself as being more than usually near the verge of ruin. An immediate advance of £100 was the only way of preventing his tottering over. His lordship had not at the moment £100 to spare. But his generous heart could not resist this appeal. He raised the money and gave it to his visitor. Next morning he had a letter from the railway manager informing him that a special train had been ordered to run down to Southampton in the afternoon, and, if he liked, he might drive it. The offer was joyfully accepted, and the journey brilliantly accomplished. Arrived at the station the driver thought he would like to see his passenger. Strolling casually by the coach he beheld his needy kinsman accompanied by a rouged female on route for a little trip to Paris.

but, and go averts imminent starvation.

A Lloyd George Story.

One of Sir Henry's funniest stories is that about Mr. Lloyd George's night adventure in 1915. While his chauffeur was lighting the lamps of the car the Chancellor, as he then was, got out of the car to have a look at the rear lamp. Unfortunately, the chauffeur, thinking that Mr. Lloyd George was inside, drove off at full speed to make up for lost time, and failed to hear the Chancellor call. The statesman was five miles from his home in Surrey.

"Flodding along, he was cheered by the sight of a building fairly well lit up in front. He recognized it as the County Lunatic Asylum. Surely here he would get a lift. In response to his summons at the front door the hall porter made his appearance and sharply inquired the object of his call. Lloyd George explained, and asked for assistance to complete his journey home. The porter shook his head and prepared to close the door.

"But," said the wayfarer, "I am the Chancellor of the Exchequer."

"Yes, yes," said the porter, gruffly. "We've got six of 'em inside. You go out to the gate, turn to the left, and you'll get home before morning." There being no visible appeal from this judgment the Chancellor recommenced his journey, and had not gone far when, to his delight, he saw his car returning. The chauffeur, reaching home and opening the car door, found he had lost his passenger, and in a state of amazed trepidation went back in search of him.

Young Winston.

A glimpse of the very young Winston Churchill as revealed to Sir Henry by his mother, Lady Randolph Churchill.

"One morning at breakfast she showed me a letter the mail had brought her from her son, Winston, then at Sandhurst. It was a most delightful epistle, humbly begging his mother's permission to go out to Cuba and take part in a little war at that time going on in the island. It concluded with the expression of the hope that his mother would not offer any objection to a course dear to his heart. Then came the postscript, characteristically brief and to the point. 'I start for Cuba on Saturday.'

Pat and Mike in the War.

Another extract from Sir Henry's diary is a specimen of the shrewdness of the Irish peasant, as related by an M.P. on his return from Ireland.

"For many years he has been accustomed in the autumn to repair to a busy little port on the west coast in search of sea-fishing. He has regularly employed a boatman, hitherto anxiously looking forward to his arrival, straightway from the unknown recesses produces a plate of bread and

The man-child dreamt of golden deeds
And the spray of the restless sea,
And his young lips uttereth dauntless creeds,
For a warrior's soul hath he.

He has not tasted the wine of fear,
Though he knows 'tis a common drink,
And he's yet to young to be fashioned here
To think as his neighbours think.

He will draw his sword in the cause of right,
Set many a captive free;
When the challenge comes he will dare the fight,
Whatever the odds may be.

The man-child struts at a bugle call
And thrills at a battle shout,
And he rides by night to a castle wall
To carry a maiden out.

But life chains many a brave soul down,
As the man-child soon shall know,
And some are held by the walls of town,
As the long years come and go.

Some to the common tasks must stay,
And some are chained by fear,
And the dreams of a man-child fade away
As he bows to his duty here.

A Disgrace to the Family

The Recorder of London, Sir Ernest Wild, tells an amusing story of the chaplain of a certain gaol who, going his round of visits to the cells, found one of the prisoners, who was undergoing a sentence for burglary, considerably upset.

"What is the matter, my man?" he inquired sympathetically.
"I've got bad news from 'oms, sir," replied the man.
"I'm very sorry to hear that," said the chaplain; "what is it?"
"My brother, sir," replied the man bitterly, "he's gone into the workhouse, sir; the first of our family to disgrace us."

"How do you like your job as telephone operator?"
"Oh, it is all right."
"But doesn't it embarrass you to take rings from strange men?"

MUTT AND JEFF — MUTT'S UNIVERSAL PEACE IDEA NETS HIM TWO BERRIES.

By Bud Fisher

SHOOT YOU A GAME OF POOL WITH ME?
MUTT: "I'M WORKING ON ANOTHER IDEA ON HOW TO ABOLISH ALL WARS AND WIN THAT $100,000 PRIZE."

EVERY NATION'S POWER IS MEASURED BY ITS WEALTH. NOW MY IDEA IS TO INSURE PEACE IF POSSIBLE BY HAVING EACH NATION IN THE WORLD DEPOSIT ONE HALF OF ITS WEALTH WITH THE HAGUE PEACE BANK!

TO ILLUSTRATE MY POINT I'LL REPRESENT THE PEACE BANK AND YOU'LL REPRESENT THE SAMOA ISLANDS. YOU SAID YOU HAD FOUR BUCKS THIS MORNING SO AS A NATION YOU MUST DEPOSIT ONE HALF OF IT WITH THE HAGUE PEACE BANK. SUPPOSE!

TWO BUCKS! RIGHT! NOW TO BRING OUT MY IDEA THE SAMOA ISLANDS WILL HAVE TO DECLARE WAR!

ALL RIGHT, THE SAMOA ISLANDS DECLARE WAR! NOW WHAT?

WELL, THAT CAUSES YOUR DEPOSIT TO BE CONFISCATED BY THE PEACE BANK AS A PENALTY! AND BEING HUNGRY THE BANK WILL NOW EAT!

Humber Development—Some Details of the Project.

Lake, the site selected for the power plant of the Nfld. Power Co. is a magnificent sheet measuring approximately 1000 acres. It is situated on the western end of the lake, where the river flows west to the Gulf of Islands and is not more than 10 feet above sea level. On the eastern end of the lake the house is being erected. To persons whose mind turns to the country's unlimited possibilities of power across from the head of the lake there is to be seen a great line of rolling country extending to the eastward. It was originally intended to have the town, with the paper mills, located at Deer Lake, but this plan was abandoned when it was decided to locate the power house at the head of the lake. The power house will be a mile long and will be situated on the western shore of the lake. The main line of the power house is a mile long and will be situated on the western shore of the lake. S. S. Digby, Capt. F. Chambers, D.S.C., arrived in port at 8 o'clock last night after a rather stormy passage of 4 days from Liverpool. #### IN FITCHED BATTLE WITH RUM RUNNERS—SEVERAL THOUSAND DOLLARS STOLEN BY ATTACKERS.

Gloucester, Aug. 21.—Capt. Arthur Moore, of the three-masted British schooner believed to be the J. Scott Hankinson, and his steward, Harry Harm, are at the Addison, Gilbert Hospital, in Gloucester, the captain with four bullet wounds, and the steward with three bullet wounds in their bodies, their condition critical, as a result of a battle with rum pirates, seventeen miles off Gloucester last night. Capt. Russell C. Young and John P. Madruca, of Gloucester, were out in their power boat, Wewands, around 6.30, twelve miles from shore, when they sighted, about eight miles away, the British flag up ahead. They went out to the vessel, and were informed she had been boarded by rum pirates and that the captain and steward had been shot and several thousand dollars in money had been stolen. The deck of the schooner was covered with blood and empty cartridge shells were scattered about by the score, there being every indication of a bloody battle and a plucky attempt at defence.

London Church Still Pays Fine Imposed by Henry VIII.

London.—The record for a long distance fine appears to belong to the office of vicar of the Church of Our Lady of Willageen, which ancient edifice stands in one of London's suburbs, for that personage is required to pay an annual contribution of one pound, two shillings and sixpence to the king, and he has been paying it for almost 400 years.

This fine was imposed after the Reformation by Henry VIII on the medieval vicar because he allowed pilgrims to come to his church and bathe their eyes in the water of a well which is supposed to contain curative properties. The pilgrims in gratitude often left sums of money, which aroused Henry's ire, and the vicar escaped the stake only by handing all the money thus collected over to Henry, and agreeing to pay an annual fine, and vesting his sine on his successors.

Although Henry instituted many such penal methods of increasing the King's exchequer, this is the only instance of the fine still being paid.

The vicar of the church property will attract many pilgrims who come to bathe their eyes with the miraculous waters, many of whom claim to have been cured thereby.

Non-Unionists Wicked SAYS A LEADING UNITED STATES PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH PAPER.

Chicago, Aug. 20.—"No just name for it except sin," is the caption on an editorial appearing in "The Constitution," one of the leading Presbyterian papers in discussing the attitude of the Non-Unionists in the Presbyterian Church in Canada, in opposition to the proposed union with the Methodist and Congregational Churches.

The editorial points out that the Church is in the habit of condemning sin in those outside, and asks who is going to condemn sin in the Church itself.

The editorial goes on to say: "The Controversy thinks that such a time has come when the anti-union Presbyterian minority in Canada declares its determination to prevent the union of the Presbyterian and Methodist denominations there by injunctions set out in the civil courts. For such an attitude in such a case there is only one judgment possible where the distinction between right and wrong is equally held for all classes of people, professedly religious, or confessedly irreligious. That judgment is that this kind of opposition to the union of Christians is wicked, and if not repented of, must endure the severest condemnation of a just God. For there are no reasons embodied in the form of or in any other factor of the union agreement now consummated which can justify a doubt that this united Canadian Church will function for the greater glory of God. All the reasons that are given for opposing the union have their rootsage not in the glory of God, but in the selfish and totally irreligious prejudices of men, on which account they deserve to be completely reprehended by all Christian people."

Pointed Pars. A kiss may be heard, but should never be seen. It is far easier for a woman to say "no" than to mean it. What is wisdom but having a great deal to say and keep silent? A woman never dresses so carefully as when she goes to see her best enemy. Some people's idea of taking life easy means to be making it hard for the rest of us. When a widow wants to marry again, she keeps her hair light and her age dark. Love is like debt—the satisfaction of getting out is only less than the fun of getting in again. It's an awful bore when a man will insist on talking of his ailments when you want to talk of yours.
