

"My Heart Would Palpitate, I Had Weak Spells"

Mrs. L. Whiting, 202 King St. West, Brockville, Ont., writes:

"I took very sick with my nerves and stomach, and seemed to be all run down. At times my heart would flutter and palpitate so and I would take such weak spells in the pit of my stomach that I sometimes thought I would never get better. I had almost given up hope when a friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I did not stop until I had taken twenty-five boxes. It has done wonders for me and I want to recommend it to everyone."

CHAPTER XXIX.

"Yes," said Irene, quickly, "and your mistress is going to have another triumph at the ball, Marion. Now make haste and let us see the dresses."

Marion took out the costumes tenderly, reverently, uttering little exclamations of wonder and delight.

"Oh, my lady—oh, madame, see this! It is like a fleecy cloud with the stars shining through it. And this one of mauve silk—is it silk?—it is like cobweb. And there is one in black lace with poppies—and this, and this!" and her voice rose to a pitch of ecstasy.

Irene laughed.

"Marion is getting excited," she said. "Now, Madge, dear, which will you try on first?"

Madge looked on pensively.

"The plainest and simplest," she said, "decidedly. 'That black one will do if the poppies are taken out.'"

Irene laughed.

"That is nonsense, dear," she said. "Come, Marion, slip it on."

Madge stood up, and between them they put on the dress, and Marion clasped her hands in speechless admiration.

"Oh, madame—oh, Miss Irene! It is the very thing. If you would look in the glass, madame."

Madge cast a glance in the cheval-glass.

"Yes, it will do," she said.

But they would not let her off so easily, and made her try them all on; but she stuck to her first choice.

"Yes, I think you are right," said Irene. "Very well, then; put the rest back, Marion."

"But you, my lady," said Marion in accents of disappointment—"you have not chosen one yet."

"Oh, I," said Irene, carelessly; "it does not matter. Why should it?"

Beauty

A Gleamy Mass of Hair.

35c "Dandine" does Wonders for Any Girl's Hair

Girls! Try this! When combing and dressing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Dandine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! You can do your hair up immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy—a mass of gleamy hair, sparkling with life and possessing that incomparable softness, freshness and luxuriance.

While beautifying the hair "Dandine" is also toning and stimulating each single hair to grow thick, long and strong. Hair stops falling out and hairdressing disappears. Get a bottle of beautiful, refreshing "Dandine" at any drug or toilet counter and just see how healthy and youthful your hair becomes.

refuse to accompany them when they went out together?

These and similar questions crowded upon her and seemed to stifle her. She rose and stretched out her hands, panting as if for air, and pushing the miserable suspicion from her.

"No, no; I will not believe it!" she said, at last. "It is me he loves—it is me! He never loved her—never! He is my Royce!" and, in a kind of desperation, she trust the packet out of sight.

CHAPTER XXX.

It was the night of the ball. Inventions had been sent out freely, and guests were expected from far and near, there had not been such a gathering of the county families and residents' gentry for years.

Madge, as Marion dressed her, tried to remember the names of some of the people that had told her about, but she felt confused and bewildered, for she knew that the whole affair would prove a fresh ordeal for her.

Irene had taught her one or two square dances, and the new waltz, and had been astonished at Madge's quickness and aptitude. She assured her that she would dance as well as any one in the room—too well, indeed, for most of the young county squires, who were more at home in the hunting-field than the ball-room, but Madge was doubtful. A mistake which one of their own people might make would pass unnoticed, whereas, she knew, any blunder on her part would attract attention and be the subject of remark.

"Nearly ready, Madge?" said Royce, from the adjoining room. "May I come in?"

He stood stock still as he entered, and gazed at her with wondering admiration. The dress of black lace, relieved by the scarlet poppies, which Irene and Marion had insisted upon remaining, harmonized perfectly with Madge's rich loveliness, and she looked superb as she stood before him, holding a bouquet of faint yellow flowers.

"My word!" he exclaimed, at last. "This is war-paint with a vengeance."

"Do I look like a savage?" she murmured, with a smile.

He put out his hand to draw her to him, but Marion uttered a cry of alarm.

"Oh, please don't, Master Royce! You'll crush her so!"

Then, abashed by her temerity, she flew from the room.

Madge blushed, and Royce laughed. "Marion regards you as a work of art, still wet and untouchable," he said. "But you do look a tremendous swell, Madge. In that dress, and with madame's diamonds! By George! they never looked so well. I suppose it's no use asking you for the first dance, or any," he added, ruefully.

Her face fell.

"Why not?"

He laughed.

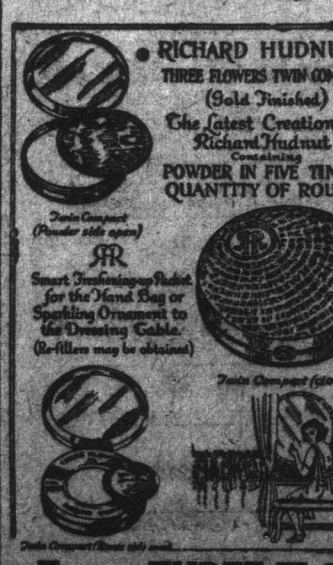

"Oh, because husband and wife are not supposed to dance together, unless it's the last gallop, and only then on sufferance."

She sighed.

"I am always learning things," she said, gently. "Are you sorry, Royce?" and she put her hand on his arm.

REGAL TABLE SALT FREE RUNNING

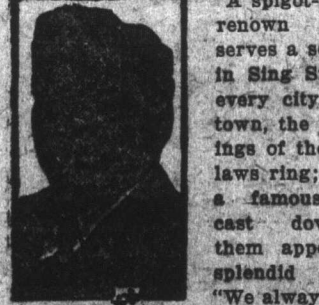

Over the Rim of the World

Occasionally a modern Marco Polo, like the scientific Ossendowski, comes out of sections of untravelled Asia, and tells us of what is waiting there for modern civilization. It is regrettable that there are not more Ossendowskis, for Europe and America really need to be awakened to their opportunities.

Trade goes adventuring over the rim of the world as confidently as do the hardy spirits who bring to trade its first news of what is to be found. When it comes to that, more trade originates beyond the business horizon than is usually conceded. Only a dozen years since the United States Government, in order to keep the natives of a portion of Alaska from starving, imported a few reindeer, with the idea that these natives might be trained to keep and care for them. What was at first a humane experiment has now developed into an industry. The small band of Alaskan reindeer has grown into an immense herd of more than half a million animals, and the limit of increase is not in sight. Today reindeer meat is a current Alaskan export and is selling in Pacific city markets at little more than the cost of competitive beef. It soon will be commonly sold in all cities—a possibility undreamed of when a kindly government first bought a few animals to keep a small number of its native wards from starvation.

Along the same line, and with consequences equally as good, the case of native Barren Land caribou may be cited. In the immense stretch of territory that extends from the fringe of civilization in Northern Canada to the Arctic, the caribou wander in countless herds. No man has counted them; very few outside men have seen them. But the estimates are all in the millions. These animals require no care. They find their own sustenance. Winter and summer, in the mossy that sprouts from the ground. The experiment of domesticating—or at least of keeping within territorial bounds parts of these herds is to-day a commercial enterprise. Canada has assigned for the experiment a portion of sub-Arctic territory to men abundantly equipped to promote the enterprise, and there is every reason to expect that within a few years this form of Canadian venison, or beef, or as one chooses to call it, may be competing with Argentine and American meat products in the cities of the world.—From the Journal of the British Empire Chamber of Commerce, New York.

Clash Feared Between Russia and Rumania

Norwegian Collier and Royal Mail Liner Collide in St. Lawrence—Poincare to Meet MacDonald at Chequers Court—New Pneumonia Serum Discovered.

CLASH SITUATIONS BETWEEN RUSSIA AND ROMANIA.

ROME, May 9. Special reports to the Corriere d'Informazione declare the situation extremely tense on the Russo-Rumanian frontier. A clash between the two countries is possible. Detachments of Rumanian troops have been rushed to the border.

STEAMERS COLLIDE.

FATHER PT., Que., May 9. The steamer Porsanger collided with the Royal Mail steamer Packet Orea last night in a dense fog. The Orea was hit amidships and made in her side about 15 ft. of water. She is taking on water. No one was injured. Both steamers proceeded on their way.

LIVER ABLE TO PROCEED.

QUEBEC, May 9. After telling her way out of the St. Lawrence through a dense fog, the Royal Mail Packet Liner Orea, which came from Europe from New York, Quebec, was rammed by the Norwegian freighter Porsanger last night. The Orea was hit amidships and made in her side about 15 ft. of water. She is taking on water. No one was injured. Both steamers proceeded on their way.

NEW PNEUMONIA SERUM.

BOSTON, May 9. Discovery of a new treatment for pneumonia in the form of proved serum, which it is said, might reduce the death rate from this disease by 25 or possibly fifty per cent., was announced by Dr. Lloyd D. Felton, Assistant Professor of Preventive Medicine at Harvard Medical School in an address at New England Health Institute, yesterday.

CANADIAN INCOME TAX.

OTTAWA, May 9. Since its inception, the income tax has contributed to the public treasury some $215,000,000, beginning with about $9,500,000 in the fiscal year, 1913-1914, it gradually increased and reached the peak of $78,500,000 in 1921-22. In the fiscal year, 1922-23, it dropped to $59,750,000. The figures for the last fiscal year are not available.

POINCARÉ THE GUEST OF MACDONALD.

PARIS, May 9. Premier Poincaré has accepted Prime Minister MacDonald's invitation to go to Chequers Court on May 20 for an informal visit with the head of the British Government.

BIG PURCHASE OF CANADIAN HORSES.

MOSCOW, May 9. It is reported that the "Ukraine Agricultural Bank" intends to make a preliminary purchase of 1,000 horses from Canada at once, and later this year will make more purchases, the total amounting to 30,000 horses. Arrangements are being made to supply the poor peasants with Canadian horses on a credit basis.

SIX DROWNED WHEN RIVER FLOODS.

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., May 9. Six members of the family of William Miller, an orchardist, were drowned in the flood waters of a small mountain stream, ten miles from here late yesterday.

RAFTING ICE ENDANGERS WAHANA.

GLACE BAY, May 9. The coal steamer Wahana, which has been off this port since yesterday morning, was forced yesterday to leave the harbor during the forenoon. Raft ice has prevented her from putting into Sydney, whither she was bound. At noon it appeared as if she were making for Louisbourg. The Wahana was due at Sydney to load 7,000 tons of coal, and both shovels were working at No. 7 Banking Station this morning. Failure of the steamer to make port made it necessary to discontinue operations at the bank. She will probably load at Louisbourg.

As New Zealand Sees Singapore

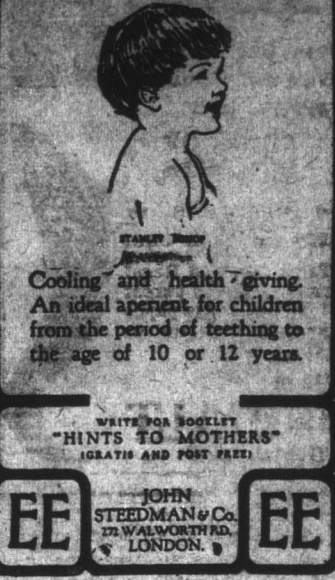

Outspoken utterances of disappointment over the British Labor Government's decision not to make a naval base of Singapore are found in the New Zealand press, which show the problem as it appears to Britain's possessions in the Pacific. This act of the Labor Government, says the Auckland New Zealand Herald, raises a constitutional question of the first magnitude, namely: "What has become of the scheme for consulting the Dominions in matters of imperial interest?" The facts are, it says, the Committee of Imperial Defense and the Imperial Conference reached definite conclusions concerning Singapore, and the Labor Government deliberately rejected these conclusions. To make matters worse, this daily asserts, the Labor Government went through the farce of asking the Dominions' views of that rejection without the slightest intention of giving effect to any of their replies that might traverse the Government's decision. We read then:

"Inevitably there arises a doubt as to whether anything remains of the consultative scheme built up laboriously in recent years. It would appear that the Labor Government has dealt it a destructive blow. The question is not affected by any discussion of the pros and cons of the Singapore proposals themselves. That lies outside the constitutional issue. The Committee and the Conference, exercising powers definitely given to them as responsible Imperial authorities, brought the proposals to the notice of the British Government, and Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's Cabinet has treated the proposals as if they had never been made. India, Australia and New Zealand, as the overseas territories most closely concerned, have requested that the proposals be given effect, and the Secretary of State for the Colonies has told the Commons that the view these territories deem urgently important has not been considered by his Government. This is not merely the collapse of consultation. It is the wanton destruction of it. Chapter and verse for these facts are contained in the resolutions of the Committee of Imperial Defense and the Imperial Conference and in the records of the Colonial Office."

Another New Zealand view is expressed by the Wellington Dominion,

STEEDMAN'S POWDERS

which says that the Labor Government's rejection of the Singapore plan is "conclusive for the moment," but "it does not follow that this substantial majority against the development of the Pacific base will be maintained." It is Mr. MacDonald's failure to bring about an international agreement for a further limitation of naval armaments. The British Government, we are told then, is no longer attempting to challenge the dicta of the naval experts who favor a base at Singapore and "tests" its case apparently on the unconvincing contention that it can bargain better for mutual disarmament without the base than with it. This newspaper goes on to say:

"No doubt the vote of the House of Commons was influenced by the existing good relations between the Pacific Powers, and also by the fact that economic conditions in Britain are so bad at present that any expenditure at all on armaments is likely to be regarded with a considerable amount of disfavor."

"The position reached, however, is one which neither Britain nor the Dominions can afford to regard with unconcern. At the same time it is a position which will be changed greatly for the better if the British Government is able to exercise a successful initiative in promoting a further limitation of naval armaments. The big point in doubt at the moment is whether the unconditional, the possibly temporary, abandonment of the Singapore base is a factually sound move in that direction."

"According to the Secretary of State for the Colonies (Mr. J. H. Thomas), the British Government is going to make a genuine effort at disarmament. If they succeeded," he added, "there would be no regrets. If they failed, they would stand the consequences."

"There are strong grounds also for believing that the British Government would have had better prospects of success in its effort at disarmament had it made the abandonment of the Singapore base contingent upon the conclusion of a new naval agreement instead of a step preliminary to negotiation."

"It clears the air to some extent, however, that the spokesmen of the present British Government have in effect recognized that the abandonment of the Singapore scheme can only be justified by a further mutual limitation of naval armaments in the Pacific. Mr. Thomas has put the position bluntly from this standpoint in his reference to standing the consequences, but Mr. MacDonald had already said that 'Singapore would become necessary when the conditions made it necessary.'"

"Should disarmament negotiations fail, naval defensive measures in the Pacific will be demanded as imperatively in the interests of Great Britain as in those of Australia and New Zealand and other British countries in touch with the Pacific. Apart from her vital trading interests on this side of the world, Britain can ill afford to throw the Dominions on their own resources in the matter of defense."

"A co-operative scheme of Imperial defense admittedly is essential to the security of the Dominions, and would still be essential even if their populations were being built up much more rapidly than at present by immigration and by natural increase. As a country importing vast quantities of food and raw material, however, and liable to be starved by an interruption of overseas supplies in the event of war, Britain is equally dependent for security upon a scheme of defense comprehending the whole Empire."

"These simple facts no doubt will speedily command attention in Britain as well as in the Dominions should the hopes on which the British Government is basing its policy with regard to Singapore prove to be illusory."—Literary Digest.

McShane and Habel Win Rounds of Applause

MAJESTIC THEATRE ARTISTS VOTED THE BEST YET.

Following the pronounced successful engagement of Cameron Geddes the Majestic management scored another success in securing Misses McShane and Habel, two exceedingly clever vaudeville workers, who won first fame with the Keith Circuit. Coming direct from Boston these two ladies enjoy a splendid reputation as entertainers. Last night they delighted the audience of the first night when they were enthusiastically applauded. There is no doubt about it that Misses McShane and Habel are the two best workers in this line we have had here for many years. The violin playing was indeed a rare treat whilst the singing and duets were likewise applauded and enjoyed, and those who had the good fortune to hear them voted them the best yet. To-night the same bill is repeated also at the matinee this afternoon, when the picture "The Little Orphan" will delight the children.

Protection and Preservation with B-H PRODUCTS

PROTECTION and preservation are as necessary to the tree that is moulded into new form, for building purposes, as it was when it stood in the virgin forest. Paint is that protection. Paint will preserve but, just as a nature protects with ever-renewing bark, so must paint be renewed.

Franklin-Henderson's products — and there is one for every painting purpose — bring real protection and preservation, no matter for what purpose they are used. And, to this protection, is added the economy of long wear and the beauty that comes from quality.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR A. GUEST

WHEN WE HAD IMAGINATIONS.
On the fun we used to know
In the distant long ago!
Then a dandelion field
Golden treasure used to yield;
Then green apples we could eat,
Sure the bitterest was sweet,
And the dog which used to be,
Didn't need a pedigree.

Three or four an army made,
Fit for battles or parade,
And a sandpile served us well
For an armored citadel; Give us but a plank or two
And we'd ride the ocean blue, Savely weathering every gale
With an apron for a sail.

We had but to think of things,
Pinto caves or plover rings,
And their joy was ours to know,
We could hunt for buffalo,
Or in battle bring to grief
Many a grim old Indian chief,
For we had, what's lost to men,
Real imagination, then.

Now we think all joy is real,
Something we can touch or feel,
And we cannot put away
All the trials of the day,
Fighting fancy turn to gold
All the common things of old;
We have lost the power to make Pleasure just for pleasure's sake.

Now we can't pretend to be Sailors putting out to sea,
We are slaves to cruel facts, Nothing fanciful attracts,
For the happy days are gone
When a dream could lure us on;
We've grown proud and learned to grieve
And we cannot make-believe.

Singers Receive Tremendous Ovation

JACKSON AND MILLER SCORE BIG AT THE NICKEL.

A genuine Newfoundland welcome was accorded Jackson and Miller who opened an engagement at the Nickel Theatre last night. They opened their programme with a duet, Schubert's "Serenade" which moved the audience to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. The applause tendered them was wholehearted. Miss Jackson who is a Lyric-soprano, not only has a remarkably beautiful voice, but has a most pleasing personality. She brings to bear upon the interpretation of the simplest lyric the careful thought and intelligent understanding of tone values and shades of expression that she reveals in her rendering of a brilliant aria. Her rendition of "Gianina Mia," delighted everybody and judging from comment she has already established herself with lovers of beautiful singing. Mr. Miller, one of the most popular baritone in America, is gifted with a wonderful voice of great range and of marked clearness. A noticeable feature of his voice is that there is not the slightest deviation from the pitch. He sang that famous baritone solo, "On the Road to Mandalay," in a masterful manner which immediately gripped the audience which applauded to the echo. That he is going to be popular with patrons of this theatre is already a foregone conclusion.

The Dwyer Sisters appeared in a new programme of catchy songs and dances. Their clog dance was performed with a neatness and grace of movement. This dainty dancing duo, apart from being excellent dancers, are gifted with a way of putting over their novelty songs in a peculiarly different manner from many performers we have seen. There is a magnetic appeal to their act which is difficult to describe in words. To those who could not see them last night we advise not to miss to-night's show.

Have you a Suit or Overcoat to make? We make a specialty of making up customers own goods at prices that are absolutely the lowest for first class work. FARRELL THE TAILOR, 810 Water St. - nov17/24

Great Bill at Crescent Last Night

ARCHIE HARROD SINGERS IN FAREWELL PROGRAM.

The Archie Harrod Jubilee singers concluded their engagement at the Crescent last night before a huge audience which thoroughly delighted with the splendid programme of songs and choruses.

The popular Amateur Contest made its reappearance last night and judging from the large turnout of patrons it clearly shows that this form of entertainment has lost none of its popularity. A good display of talent was evident and the prizes were awarded accordingly to merit.

A distinguished cast of players supports the charming new star of the screen, Helen Jerome Eddy, in her first important independent vehicle, "When Love Comes," to be shown for the last time to-day at the Crescent Theatre. Among the players are Harrison Ford, Fannie Midgley, Claire Dubry, Joseph Bell, Gilbert Clayton, Barry Messenger, Molly Gordon, J. Barrows and Fay MacKenzie. "When Love Comes" is being distributed by Film Booking Office of America.

Codfish Reported Plentiful on West Coast

THE EXODUS STILL CONTINUES.
Mr. James McDonald, who returned from the West Coast a few days ago reports that a splendid sign of codfish has made an appearance from St. George's down the coast, and the outlook for a good codfishery in these waters promises to better that of the past twenty years. With a plentiful sign of fish in sight, it is apparent that the fishery along the West Coast offers no inducement for the fishermen. During the last four sailings of the Glencoe west to Port aux Basques large numbers of men whose main avocation was the fishery have given up the country's greatest enterprise with disgust, and made connections at Port aux Basques across the Gulf to seek a livelihood elsewhere.

To Help the Cadets

The proceeds of the popular comedy "When a Feller Needs a Friend," which is being staged at the Casino Theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights, will go to the C.C.
C. Friends and supporters of the Cadets are asked to assist in swelling the funds by assuring full houses for each performance.

OPPOSED TO THE BUDGET.

OTTAWA, May 9.
W. D. Euler, Liberal, North Waterloo, announced in the House of Commons to-day, that he will vote against the Budget. "I would say I cannot approve of the more or less haphazard changes which have been made in the tariff," he said, in summing up his reasons for his decision.
"Changes are being made without accurate knowledge of what they may involve," he said. Hon. H. H. Stevens, Conservative, Vancouver Centre, advocated adequate protection for Canadian industry. Adjournment of the debate was moved by Hon. A. B.
Copp, the Secretary of State.

Train Notes.

The Portia's mail and passengers left Port aux Basques shortly after last midnight and is due in the city to-morrow morning.
The cross country express reached town at 8.20 a.m.
The express for foreign connections goes out to-morrow at 1 p.m.
The Carbonar train arrived at 1.30.

The Majority Love Plain Names

"In a plebiscite conducted by Messrs. Fry of Bristol, 628,000 persons voted on the subject of the best names for girls. And, strange to say, the Dorises and Imenes and Gladyses are right out of the picture," says the Star.
"At the head of the list stands the beautiful old English name of Phyllis, and next to it come Grace and Elsie, but after these the preponderance of votes goes to simple old-fashioned names like Barbara, Patience and Prudence, Jane and Susan, with Priscilla and Matilda also near. Royal names are conspicuously absent. The popularity of the Princesses does not produce any majority for Mary, nor is the Duchess of York's Elizabeth represented in the first ten."

"We regret the omission of Mary, which we should have put at the head of the list, and we rejoice over Jane, Philip Jane, which was for years overshadowed by the more pretensious names of the Gwendolens type.
On the whole, this reaction to a choice of simpler names for girls strikes us as healthy. There is many a girl who answers gracefully enough to Emrys-tress at the age of ten, who finds it rather a handicap at thirty."

In Passing

Yesterday the Mail stated that the article which it published on Wednesday, and which we termed "An outrageous Slander of Private Citizens," was but the first of a series which it had decided to issue, but which were withheld from publication following the resignation of Mr. Warren.

The "article" referred to reads as follows:—
Every man who walks the streets of St. John's as a supporter of W. R. Warren bears the brand of the ORDER OF THE ASSASSIN on his forehead.

Some bear two brands, the second being the mark of the ORDER OF JUDAS ISCAIRIOT.

Is that an attack on a public man, or is it not an uncalculated and an unprovoked slander of defenceless private citizens? The Mail states that this was but an introductory article, and that compared with the others already prepared for the hand of the printer it was nothing more than a children's bed time story. It reminds us very forcibly of those "bed time stories" dropped on defenceless London by the baby killers who recognized no rules of legitimate warfare and preferred to wreak their vengeance on those who were unable to hit back.

If the suppressed articles are directed at ourselves, we invite the Mail to publish them. We are perfectly capable of surviving the assault and of returning the attack with interest, but we cannot help feeling that the Mail finds security in the knowledge that The Telegram does not resort to the questionable tactics peculiar to that journal.

The Mail confesses that it cannot "follow the policy of the Telegram." That is not surprising; in fact we never for a moment imagined it possible to elevate it to such a level. Perhaps the following will make our meaning clear:

"I did not prompt the age to quit their cloths by the known rules of ancient liberty. When straight a barbarous noise environs me Of owls and cuckoos, asses, apes and dogs. But this is got by casting pearls to hogs."

"The policy of the Telegram," says the Mail, "is dictated by personal friendships or personal antagonisms, personal advantages, advancements, jealousies, or grievances." Apparently we hold all the cards, which explains why the Mail is playing a lone hand today. Who or what can be dictating its policy?

Speaking about games reminds us that the Mail claims to be a sportsman, but this coveted title is an honour usually conferred by the other side, and it is not considered necessary to remind the world of the fact by emblazoning it in bold letters across one's breast. The wide knowledge of the foul side of athletics shown by our contemporary makes it plain that it was not acquired by experience, but was gleaned from the Sports' Series of such gory literature as 'The Blood Stained Putty Knife' or 'The Wooden Legged War Horse.' For his edification we might explain that kicking shins in football or tripping an opponent with a hockey stick is considered as bad a breach of etiquette in games as for one player to call his opponent an 'assassin' or a 'Judas Iscariot.' It isn't done in decent society.

A Dangerous Mixture

To deal next with the Editorial in yesterday's Advocate would be somewhat of a pleasure were it not for the fact that it is so voluminous. The pleasure lies in the fact that its attempted thrusts are direct, and are not delivered in such a way as to wound non-combatants. We return in kind.

We are somewhat surprised to find that the organ of the new Administration is so guarded in its expression of appreciation of its new Leader. Why such caution? Does it not suggest misgiving? Possibly it is because the Coaker faction has not yet had sufficient time to become acquainted with their confederates of the merchant class. Certainly the mixture is an explosive one and the slightest spark, even of enthusiasm, might prove disastrous.

What means this suggestion of a request to Sir Robert Bond to associate himself with this Party? Is our contemporary intending to be humorous? And will it tell us what his answer was? To withhold the reply is to quite spoil the joke.

"The suggestion that The Telegram is all choked up with sorrow because it explains there has been a temporary set back to the clean up process" is another bit of humor. Really our contemporary is becoming quite facetious since it disguised itself in a Liberal garb. We have not yet withdrawn from the field, not yet are we sitting in sackcloth and ashes, and it is as well for the Advocate to amuse itself while it may. It is also as well for our contemporary to remember the old saw that 'he laughs best who laughs last.'

As an aside we might remind the Advocate that recently an investigation was held in connection with the public affairs of this country. We merely mention the fact because the reports of that Enquiry which appeared in its columns were condensed to such an extent that, should occasion arise, it might be unable to find them. Later when the cleaning up process begins, as sooner or later it will begin, we shall be glad to lend our contemporary a copy of the daily proceedings of the Enquiry with those sections marked which contain the rather outspoken comments of Commissioner Walker regarding the Coaker Contracts, and his terse remark on the somewhat unusual method adopted by the New Leader in connection with the wood cutting operations.

The spectacle presented today of a cosmopolitan party assuming control has done more to open the eyes of the country to its danger than anything else. The various factions have no common platform, nothing to justify their Union, and nothing that commends them to the ordinary citizen who anxiously looks forward to better times.

Committed to Supreme Court

Yesterday afternoon the depositions made at the preliminary hearing in the charge of larceny, preferred against Dr. Campbell, having been read over and sworn to, the accused was committed to the Supreme Court for trial. Bail was allowed in the same sum as before. The bondsmen are Messrs. P. J. Casey and M. J. Mulcahy.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR ACRES AND PAINS

Coaker-Hickman Executive

Mr. A. E. Hickman, who was recommended by Mr. Coaker to form a new Ministry following the resignation of Premier Warren on Thursday, has formed his cabinet and at 11 o'clock this morning the members were sworn in as follows:

A. E. Hickman, Prime Minister.
S. Wm. Lloyd, Minister of Justice.
W. H. Cave, Minister of Finance and Customs.
W. W. Halford, Colonial Secretary.
Dr. Barnes, Minister of Education.
M. E. Hawco, Minister Posts and Telegraphs.
J. Downey, Minister of Agriculture and Mines.
Dr. Forbes, No portfolio.
Dr. Mosell, No portfolio.
L. E. Emerson, No portfolio.

No announcement is made as to who is to be Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and Minister of Public Works. There is already a rumour in the camp for the offices, and defections by the disappointed will probably follow. A cursory analysis of the Executive shows that it is entirely Coakeresque. Three Executive seats go to Bonaville, and the South Coast is not represented at all. Dr. Mosell is leader in the Upper House. It is stated that a new office, that of Solicitor General will be created for Mr. Emerson, who superseded Mr. C. J. Cahill. The latter was slated for an Executive seat, but apparently Mr. Emerson rallied more supporters at last night's meeting. It would appear that before matters are finalized there will be of the thirty-six for whom some cushy job will not be found.

Fatality Feared at Red Indian Lake

The following message from Magistrate Fitzgerald was received this morning by the Department of Justice:

"Milton Holloway, aged 16, of Portland, Bonaville Bay, disappeared from work at Robeckes River, Red Indian Lake, this forenoon and is believed to be drowned. Holloway was engaged rolling logs in the river. The discovery of his oil clothes together with his actions leads to the presumption of locality of his body."

Clyde Reports

The Management of the Newfoundland Government Railway received a message from Captain Kneel of the Clyde yesterday, which reads as follows:

"Arrived Seldom 11 a.m. Fog reports impossible to get. Fog on outside. Have tried, and can't get to Change Islands or Fog. The coast looks in bad condition. Ice very heavy."

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES.

May 10th.—Abroad betimes, being anxious to hear the news of the Government, and meeting Wilkins, he tells me that Sir Robert Bond refuses to lead a party, and the Governor, therefore, to call on Sir W. Coaker to form a Cabinet. Anon, I learn how Sir William, to use local parlance, did pass the buck and Mr. Hickman consents to be Prime Minister in his stead. Much talk of who will be the new Ministers, and what is a most extraordinary thing, Sir W. Lloyd to be Minister of Justice, and the last man in the very worst, almost that I did expect to find in that office. Now, too, of a new party likely to be formed soon, and will make no easy election of it for Mr. Hickman, and, indeed, a public meeting like to be called for to-morrow night. Talking of politics with Mr. Morine, he to make use of a novel phrase, in describing the Cabals of recent times, to wit, fortuitous stoma, which is I think the best description, and the most concise, that ever I heard. Mightily troubled this day by a salmon served to our table, a very good salmon, but all the rest of it spoiled by my wife saying she pays 60 cents the pound for it, which is such a price as God knows I had never thought I should live to pay for one pound of salmon. Comes to-day my form to be filled for the payment of income tax, albeit my income so small that I find it the hardest thing to keep body and soul together, without the payment of monies to the Government. But Lord, how difficult it is to understand these forms, and seems how the Government will not alone have me pay the tax, but would also test my mathematics, and indeed, an unwilling to pay double tax, rather than I should puzzle my poor head with such ridiculous questions.

MAGISTRATE'S COURT.—A case against a woman for assaulting a nine-year-old girl was tried before the Magistrate's Court this morning. The assault which was only of a minor nature ended in the defendant being ordered to pay costs. There was not a solitary drunk on the sinner's seat this morning.

The People Aroused to the Country's Danger.

The mass public meeting called for to-night in the Casino Theatre will find a ready and welcome response in the hearts of all true men who to-day stand aghast before the spectre of dishonor and national disgrace.

It was hardly to be thought that an independent electorate would tamely submit to allowing their country and its fair name becoming a by-word and a reproach to outside opinion. The announcement that an Opposition may take the field against the forces recently brought together by the most cunning and audacious political manipulators yet enacted on our political stage, in order to cover up and camouflage the real rascalties of recent years, will be hailed throughout the length and breadth of Newfoundland as a sign of a New Day and the hope for a better future.

That every patriotic Newfoundland, irrespective of past party ties, will rally to THE CALL OF ARMS IS CERTAIN. Never in the public life of the Colony was there greater need for united action on the part of the people. The battle is theirs, a common fight against the forces of corruption, graft and political shuffling which for the past few years has so strangled the commercial and industrial life of the country.

There can be no denying the fact that the party now led by Mr. A. E. Hickman is dominated by influences most menacing to the best interests of the Colony. It cannot and will not succeed.

The strength of an Opposition is the feeling in the hearts of the people, their detestation for the present Government and their desire for a change.

That a large and independent audience will fill the Casino to-night is certain.

The will of the people shall be the law of the land.

Government is what the people make it.

Why Pay More

If you could buy a pound of good butter for ten cents you would not think of paying more would you? Providing of course that the ten cent butter gave you as much satisfaction as the more expensive kind. You would consider it extravagant to pay more than is necessary for any article. Then there is no reason why you should pay more than ten cents for your toilet soap for IVORY the pure, foaming snow-white soap can be had at any grocery store for ten cents. It is as good as any toilet soap you can obtain. It will do all for your skin that the most expensive soap can do. Then why pay more when Ivory can be obtained for ten cents?

Hearing Adjourned

The preliminary hearing into the charge of larceny preferred against Sir Richard Squires which was to have resumed this morning was postponed owing to the absence of Mr. L. E. Emerson, who is conducting the case for the crown. Mr. H. A. Winter for the crown asked that the matter be adjourned until Thursday. However, K.C., was heard on the question of exhibits. The hearing will be resumed on Thursday next at 3.30 p.m.

CUTICURA HEALS LARGE PIMPLES

On Face, Itched and Burned. Lost a Great Deal of Sleep.

"I had pimples on my face for several months. They were hard and large, and the skin was sore and red. The itching and burning almost set me crazy at night and I lost a great deal of sleep. The burning out caused disfigurement."

"I tried many different remedies but found no relief. I almost despaired of help when I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in a short time I was completely healed."

(Signed) Miss Annie Fletcher, Box 45, Hoston, Saskatchewan.

Clear the pores of impurities by daily use of Cuticura Soap and occasional touches of Cuticura Ointment as needed to soften, soothe and heal. They are ideal for the toilet, as is also Cuticura Talcum.

Big Auction Sale

Continues To-Day

Messrs. Dowden and Edwards had three sessions yesterday at the U.S.P. & P. Big Auction. Sale yesterday morning, afternoon and evening; the store was crowded and the auctioneers were kept busy. No attention was paid to cost of goods as it was knocked down to the highest bidder. Big bargains were the order of the day, and we understand there will remain a large quantity of high class goods. This afternoon the auction will be of special interest to ladies when ladies' costumes, coats, hats and furs will be offered. At night there will be a big bargain auction of men's suit lengths, etc., etc.—may 10.11

TODAY'S MESSAGES.

KILLED IN A DISTURBANCE IN MESOPOTAMIA.

LONDON, May 10.—One hundred townspeople and six soldiers were killed in a disturbance at Kirkuk, Mesopotamia, on May 4th, according to advices from the Colonial Office. The disturbance was an altercation between three British soldiers and a Native Levantine and a shopkeeper of the city, and the entire British Levantine detachment participated in the order was restored.

BOOTLEGGERS CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Word reached Congress to-day that the Bootleggers' Union, meeting in convention on May 1, at New York, unanimously adopted resolutions protesting against the modification of the Volstead Act to legalize the sale of beer, and forwarded a letter to the representatives, Griffin, a Democratic New York, said that delegates from locals along the Atlantic coast attended the meeting and were informed that various ill-advised and unscrupulous informers have initiated a vicious propaganda to break down the drastic and wholesome provisions of the Volstead Act.

A NEW GROUP IN DAIL.

DUBLIN, May 10.—Joseph McGrath, former Minister of Commerce, and Daniel McCarthy, former Government Whip, in Dublin, who resigned their posts during the recent army crisis, announced tonight the formation of a new group which policy will be complete independence, territorial unity and economic progress.

MONTREAL, May 10.

Calumniation of lunatics, was used by Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, in commenting on a new expressed by the Reds in the United States, that United States labor on this continent will line up with the third international in Russia. "The labor movement in Canada and the United States is the most potential, important and the most successful of any movement of any country in the world," Mr. Gompers declared. "It is less in flamboyant declarations and proclamations, but our movement is engaged in achievement and accomplishment of things for the men and women of labor. Any movement must be judged by its achievements and in the interests of those associated with it, and combined with the economic and social conditions of life and labor in other countries the conditions in Canada and the United States are better than any country on the face of the earth."

BRITISH HOME RULE BILL.

LEADS TO UPROAR. LONDON, May 9. The House of Commons closed today in an uproar this afternoon because the Speaker allowed the Scottish Home Rule Bill, introduced by Mr. Buchanan, a Glasgow member, to be talked out. Trouble arose when Sir Robert S. Lynd, Conservative, was requested the Speaker to continue the debate. Mr. Lynd and Liberal members stated that Sir Robert was the object of the Opposition to be called out for remarks, and Sir Robert would reserve the remarks for another occasion. William Adam, Secretary for Scotland, was speaking one minute before 4 o'clock when the House was closing time. A number of Scottish members in the Ministerial benches tried to move closure, but the Speaker declined to accept it, and for discussion exploded. In the ensuing uproar, David Kirkwood, member for Dumfriesshire, was suspended while Rev. Dr. Campbell, member for Glasgow, and Mr. Buchanan, who had been previously suspended for defying the Speaker, were also suspended. The Speaker declared the House closed. Mr. Adamson, on behalf of the Government, approved the passage of the Bill, which provides for the establishment in Scotland of a Chamber of Parliament of members, while Scotland continues to be represented in the House of Commons until a general election scheme is instituted for the United Kingdom.

ORDER FOR ARMS SENT TO BRITISH FIRM.

PARIS, May 9. A special London correspondent of the Times says he has learned that a German firm with headquarters in Germany and Berlin, asked a well-known British arms manufacturer (not given) to quote a price on rifles equipped with bayonets and one billion cartridges delivered to a German port. The German firm said the arms were ordered for a friendly government, a member of the entente. The correspondent informed the British manufacturer that the British Government has no steps to all the order.

What About To-Morrow's Forest?

(By GEORGE CARRUTHERS, President Can. Pulp and Paper Ass'n., in Canadian Forest & Outdoors.)

Canada, as we are all aware, is a very large country, having a population of less than ten million. Our Forestry authorities tell us that even now, with this meagre population, we are consuming our wood much faster than it is being produced by our forests. What then is our position likely to be by the time we have a population of one hundred million people, which is a conservative estimate of the population this country is capable of accommodating?

Obviously the time has come when we can no longer afford to temporize. The Canadian forestry problem has been so seriously neglected and has now assumed such proportions that it requires the most urgent action of the whole Canadian people, if we are to avert what in my opinion, would amount to a national catastrophe.

We have a number of notable men in Canada who have devoted the greater part of their lives to the scientific study of forest conditions as they obtain in Canada and in other countries, and we have also many practical foresters, who are more or less familiar with the problem from a scientific standpoint. We also have in Mr. Frank J. D. Barnum an outstanding citizen, who has proved himself a variable Mosaic in leading the Canadian people to a realization of their forestry responsibilities, and who in doing so has spent and is spending liberally of his own private means. It seems deplorable that we have never fully availed ourselves of the knowledge and guidance of these men in forestry matters and that we have not given them the encouragement and support to which they are entitled. The Canadian Forestry Association has also done excellent service. I am sure that every Canadian who is at all familiar with its activities, is justly proud of it. It is an Association which ranks among the first, if not the first, in teaching the Canadian people the importance of forests from an economic and from a national viewpoint.

There are millions of trees growing in Canada to-day, it is safe to assert, which would not now be in existence if it were not for the good influence of this Association; trees which stand as a living proof of the good work already accomplished, and as a token of the greater work which can and will be done when the Association receives the co-operation and support which it justly deserves.

In passing, I would like to mention the official organ of this Association, the illustrated "Canadian Forest and Outdoors." We have seen this magazine grow from very humble beginnings, gradually improving, until to-day it regularly contains leading matter which must be most welcome in the dwelling places of the humblest pioneers. At the same time it is a magazine which is worthy of a place on the library tables of our foremost men of affairs. It is this and similar literature on which we must depend finally to make the Canadian people "Forest Conscious"—a consummation devoutly to be wished.

It is estimated that the annual revenue returned from Canadian forests is $800,000,000. It will be understood that it is of the highest economical importance to Canada that the maintenance of this enormous volume of wealth shall be maintained; and the only way in which this can be done is to put into actual practice a rational forestry policy such as will at least ensure a continuance of the present volume of our wood supply. Great is the need of such a policy, for financial reasons. It is equally essential in order to ensure an adequate supply of cheap material for the construction of homes and for the general support of a wholesome form of civilization for millions of Canadian citizens as yet unborn.

The establishments of a forestry policy, which would be at all commensurate with the work to be done, will naturally involve the expenditure of large sums of public money. It is doubtful, therefore, if any government will be able to deal with it in any adequate manner, until the Canadian people are very much better informed on forestry matters than they are at the present time and are ready to support such a policy.

I have every confidence in the courage, common sense and the ability of the Canadian people to deal in a practical way with and sound problem.

position. Fortunately 90% of our timberland belongs to the public, and we may be sure that if the Canadian people can be made to realize the actual forestry situation, that they will see that our wood supply is maintained. Therefore the first step consists in formulating and putting into operation a practical plan for the purpose of acquainting the Canadian people with the actual and essential facts. Much has been spoken on the subject, and there is a lot of literature that contains an abundance of indisputable facts concerning the seriousness of our present position in respect to forests. One of the most recent contributions consists of a brief prepared under the auspices of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association for submission to the Royal Commission on Pulpwood. It is a document which should be read by every Canadian who is interested in forests. It is dignified and in no way overstates the facts, and I believe reflects great credit on the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association who prepared it.

Newspaper publishers have given space generously to arguments favoring Reforestation and Forest Conservation. Unfortunately writers on these subjects sometimes contradict one another, and this brings confusion to the lay mind. I am, therefore, under the conviction that the practical way to deal with this problem is to set up competent authorities, whose first duty shall be to deduce from existing literature, say, ten or twelve of the most vital and indisputable facts concerning our present precarious position. These facts should then be printed in pamphlet form and distributed broadcast, with the authority of the various Provincial Governments, the approval of the Federal Government, and backed by all the leading authorities on Forestry in Canada.

Let us for a moment consider the character of the facts which in my opinion should be incorporated in such a brochure. We have already known it to be a fact that we are consuming and destroying more wood than is actually being produced. You know this is true. I know it is true. But there are hundreds of thousands of Canadians who do not know it, do not realize the significance. It is said, with equal truth, that four times as much wood is being destroyed by fire, pests and wind, as is being used by our wood using industries. Some authorities say ten times as much, but I would strongly favor understating rather than risk an overstatement of the facts in all cases. Such a brochure should state these facts, but should also give a pointed explanation of the duty and responsibility of every citizen in regard to fire protection. I once arranged to enter a coal mine. Before descending I was relieved of all the matches I possessed and was informed that it is contrary to law to take matches into a coal mine. It was a safety precaution. It seemed most reasonable. Should we not then make it clear that it is equally reasonable that every citizen should be deprived of the privilege of going into the forest with matches, in the dry season, unless on urgent business. In view of the tremendous fire loss, which the nation annually sustains, is it right that any person should expect such a privilege unless under the most rigid regulations?

Such a brochure, prepared under the auspices of our Advisory Council, and receiving the approval of the authorities already mentioned, would serve as an authoritative foundation by which all Canadian citizens could learn the true significance of the Forests to Canada. Copies of the brochure should then be thoroughly distributed throughout the length and breadth of the country, so that every public man, every school teacher, every clergyman, every mercantile and industrial Association, every Boy Scout, every Girl Guide, the officers of all public service clubs, every immigrant who comes into our country, should be presented with one of these pamphlets and urged to study it. I am under the impression that the distribution of this and other Forestry publications should be supervised and managed by the Canadian Forestry Association. Also the directing of agents and lecturers, whose function would be to confer with the various country councils and to visit communities in woodland settlements. The fact that this Association is not conducted for profit, but purely for the purpose of advancing the interests of Forestry, entitles it to our complete confidence and gives it a unique position to enable it to do this work. In co-ordinating our forces we should give the Association, together with all professional and practical foresters, much greater moral and financial support than they have hitherto received.

Under the highly competitive industrial conditions of the present time, it is regrettable that many people are employed so intensively that their health is actually being injured. It would be possible to restore normal health to many such if they could be employed for a limited period at some occupation in the open air and sunlight and any Forestry policy which would permit of such an arrangement would be highly desirable. I know that it has been worked out in a small way by individual firms, and believe that it can be worked out in a larger way, under a system of Provincial Forest administration.

These, however, are details which no doubt, will receive due consideration from our Foresters and Government authorities. The main thing at present is to develop an enlightened public opinion. Let us demonstrate that we are clever enough both to conserve and use forests, so as to fully supply the requirements of our day and generation, and incidentally to pass it on to those who are to follow us: the rightful share of this great inheritance. Let us formulate and put into operation such a rational forestry policy as will enlist the interests of the whole people of Canada. It is an economic necessity. It is a duty which we owe to ourselves and to humanity at large.

DON'T MISS THIS TREMENDOUS SHOW

If the place of usefulness which this Association holds in connection with Forestry had been better understood by the Canadian people it is not likely that its Federal grant would have been reduced as it was last year. I am not disposed to speak lightly of our public administrators, no matter what their politics may be. The chief trouble is that they do not receive the support of enlightened public opinion. If the public had shown a really intelligent interest in forests, there would have been no necessity for the appointment of a Royal Commission to ascertain the position that Canada should take regarding the export of pulpwood. That the export of any raw material which is needed by the industries of a country is economically and basically unsound nobody will dispute.

I believe that our professional foresters are thoroughly capable of formulating the sort of a forestry program I have outlined and to develop a policy, based as far as possible on the plans which have been proved to be sound by the experience of other countries, modified, where necessary, to suit Canadian conditions. I believe that this plan can be so arranged as to enlist the sympathies and the loyal co-operation of the women of Canada. We know that the success of our most useful institutions, such as the church, our educational systems, and our benevolent agencies is largely due to the influence of our women. I know of one national institution, which was at first operated by men with indifferent success, until the co-operation of women was enlisted, and since that time it has made wonderful progress. I believe, therefore, that it would be a most serious mistake to undertake promoting a sane Forestry policy of national scope unless it provided for the co-operation of our women. Women's influence, in my opinion, the most effective and most vital force in the world to-day.

Under the highly competitive industrial conditions of the present time, it is regrettable that many people are employed so intensively that their health is actually being injured. It would be possible to restore normal health to many such if they could be employed for a limited period at some occupation in the open air and sunlight and any Forestry policy which would permit of such an arrangement would be highly desirable. I know that it has been worked out in a small way by individual firms, and believe that it can be worked out in a larger way, under a system of Provincial Forest administration.

These, however, are details which no doubt, will receive due consideration from our Foresters and Government authorities. The main thing at present is to develop an enlightened public opinion. Let us demonstrate that we are clever enough both to conserve and use forests, so as to fully supply the requirements of our day and generation, and incidentally to pass it on to those who are to follow us: the rightful share of this great inheritance. Let us formulate and put into operation such a rational forestry policy as will enlist the interests of the whole people of Canada. It is an economic necessity. TRINITY

RICHARD OF DORSET,
ENGLAND, 1800.

My own friend, and thy father's dear friend, not."

In the year 1784 there was born to the world a young man, the name of Richard of Dorset, in the County of Devonshire, England. His father was a gentleman, and his mother was a lady of noble birth. As far back as Robert, his grandfather, would remember the Hiscocks of the farm that his father culivated when he was born, and it was in the same old farm-house that his son Richard first saw the light. The village school of Upper Litchell had laid the foundation of Education in the persons of the boys, who for several generations had attended it; and though its standard did not go far beyond the three Rs, yet the work was thorough; and those who went out from it to other schools in which the curriculum was more extensive found themselves with a good foundation, upon which to build a superstructure.

It was in this school that the boy Richard Hiscock was taught the three Rs and his Church Catechism, during the ten years that he attended it.

and then was taken home to learn practical farming.

His father hoped that the boy would regard this as his vocation in life, and that he would succeed him as the owner of the best farm in that part of Dorset. His mother was not quite so hopeful about it. She had won the boy's confidence more than his father, and though she said nothing about it to his father, she knew—from what the boy had often told her—that a far away land beyond the sea was calling him; and that with the going away of each of the several boys who had been at school with him, the call was becoming louder, and her boy was becoming more and more uneasy. When Richard had spent a year on the farm, and was getting ready to celebrate his sixteenth birthday, he obtained his father's permission to go to Poole to say good-bye to two or three of his chums who were going out with a batch of youngsters to Newfoundland.
The few days that he spent there with them and their happiness, and the tang of the salt water, and the stories of the sailors, were like fire brought into contact with some highly inflammable substance, and all his latent longings leaped to the surface and impelled him to immediate action. The call that he had heard so often on the farm, now came to him from the salt air that he was breathing, and with such force, that he power on earth could keep him from responding to it; and within a few days before the vessel on which his chums were leaving, was ready for sea, Richard Hiscock had gone to the office of Garland & Co., and had been accepted as a youngster for their overseas business in Trinity, Newfoundland.

He wrote to his mother telling her what he had done, and asked her to tell his father about it; and to explain to him from her own knowledge, how unfit he was for farm life, and how happy he was sure that he would be in the life that he had chosen, and that he had longer for from his early school days. The contents of the letter were no surprise to his mother, for she and her boy had kissed each good-bye before he left.
Though at first his father was inclined to resent his boy's action, he soon became reconciled to it; and he left at once for Poole to bid him Godspeed. The vessel had been delayed a day or two, and he was just in time.

Richard was delighted to see his father; when he found out the reason why he had come, for it dispelled the sore the only regret that he had, viz., that he was a runaway from home.
Now he was no longer a run-away.
He had his father's and mother's permission and blessing, and he assured them that God helping him, they would never have cause to regret his action. The brig "Hope" was a good vessel, and Captain Lander knew all the tricks of the Atlantic, so that twenty-eight days after leaving Poole, they entered the harbour of Trinity, Newfoundland, and dropped anchor off the premises of Garland & Co. The business of dealing with youngsters was more or less routine. They were brought on shore, and welcomed by Mr. Garland in person, and then taken to the big cook-house where they could wash and tidy themselves, and partake of their first meal on shore without any hurry on their part. They were not to call at the office till the next day; and so, after their meal they went for a walk around the harbour, to get a general idea of the place where, please God, they were to live and settle down for life.

The next day, when they called at the office, each boy was introduced to the planter to whom he was to be apprenticed. Some went to Salmon Cove, some to the north side of Trinity, some remained in Trinity; whilst Richard Hiscock was introduced to his master—Richard Woodridge, a planter on the South Side of Trinity.

he went to the cook-house for his clothes-bag, and then went with Mr.
Woodridge to his home on the South Side. Mr. Woodridge had come out to Trinity from Devonshire in 1788, and was married to Mary Hiscock, of Salmon Cove; and the several indications of kind hospitality on their part, bespoke for Hiscock a happy apprenticeship. Three of the boys who came out with him were living in Trinity, so they met sometimes during the week, exchanged views of life, and spent a pleasant hour together. On Sundays, master, mistresses and boys all came over in the seine skiff to prayers in the old church; and the familiar services took them back in happy thought to the church in the old land, and made them feel more at home in the new world. The five years of young Hiscock's apprenticeship, were so many years of health and happiness and ever-increasing knowledge of things pertaining to all-round-manhood.
There was a song that the old people were fond of singing when I was a boy. It told the story of a boy who had served a faithful apprenticeship with an old farmer; and the last verse told the sequel in the words:

"The good old farmer died,
And he left the boy the farm he had,
And his daughter for his bride."

On the whole that song is but the history of the early years of the majority of the youngsters who came to Trinity Bight; and the following entry as contained in the Marriage Register of old St. Paul's, shows how true it was in that part of Richard Hiscock's life:

"1804. Married, Richard Hiscock, of the parish of Upper Litchell, in the County of Dorset, England, and Sarah, daughter of Richard and Mary Woodridge."

They lived in the old house for a year, and then they moved into their own house that had been growing towards completion during the previous two years. He fished with his father-in-law for a year, and then he became the owner of his own boat and fishing outfit; and in due time he became known as "Skipper Richard Hiscock, planter on the South Side."
So long as his father and mother lived he wrote to them as often as it was possible in those days, and they informed him about their joys and sorrows. To Richard Hiscock and his wife were born some ten or eleven children, of whom one was George, born in 1832. I mention his name because the family history is best traced through him. In due course I find the following entry: "1852. Married, George Hiscock and Elizabeth Verge, both of Trinity. Witnesses: William Hiscock, Thomas Verge." George Hiscock became one of our well known and highly respected sea captains, and Betsy Hiscock became a "Mother in Israel," and her influence for good will be felt so long as one of her neighbours lives. Some time after his retirement from active service, he and his wife died at St.

John's. There had been born to them three children, Richard, Mary Ann, and Sarah. Mary Ann and Sarah are still living in England. Richard was married to Emma Pittman. To them were born seven children, six of whom are still living. Their eldest son, George, is married to Isabel Phillips, of Glasgow, Scotland; (he is Captain George Hiscock to-day), and their boy Ian Richard, who is about eight years of age, represents the fifth generation from Richard and Sarah Hiscock of 1804. The eldest brother of Captain George Hiscock, Sr., was Robert, but he was affectionally known to every boy as "Robin" Hisc-cock, who in the days of the Baccalieu fishery was the commodore of the fleet. The five generations in outline are as follows:

- (1) Richard and Sarah Hiscock
- (2) George and Elizabeth Hiscock
- (3) Richard and Emma Hiscock
- (4) George and Isabel Hiscock
- (5) Ian Richard Hiscock

There were other families of Hiscocks in Trinity in the early days of settlement, and some of their descendants are still living. Some of those families spelled the name Hithcock and others Hiseock; but no matter how they spelled it, they always pronounced it Hiscock. Thus, in 1778 the following entry appears in the Marriage Register: "Married, Henry Hithcock of Devon, and Susannah Taverner of Trinity." For a few years they spelled their name Hithcock, though they always pronounced it Hiscock; and they spelled it Hiseock.

THE LOSS OF THE "UNION" IN 1833

In response to Mr. Shortis' kind reference to me in connection with the loss of the schooner "Union"—I have frequently heard that sad event referred to by those who had heard the old people talk about it; and occasionally one hears some person associate it with something that happened long years ago, in order to establish a date. For instance, I remember some twenty years ago having asked old Thomas Oates, of Green Bay Cove, how old he was; and he replied: "I was born the year the Union was lost." I have just interviewed one of our oldest inhabitants, who was about a year old when the Union was lost. He had often heard his father and uncle talk about it, but beyond the fact that the vessel left Trinity in the spring of 1833, in charge of Captain Delaney, and with a crew of twenty-eight men; fourteen married men, and fourteen single men, and that neither the vessel nor any one of her crew ever returned—beyond those facts, I say, nothing has ever been known with certainty. That the "Avon" and "Active" took some seals from the "Union," and that they towed her for two days, as given by Mr. Shortis—though probably correct—was unknown to the people in Trinity Bight. It was reported during the summer, that a Mr. Jesse H—, a schooner master, did take some seals from the "Union." Because of this having been done, without any report of honest efforts having been made at the time, to ascertain if there were any bodies on board; and if so, was it possible to do anything of a respectable and reverent nature for them. Because of this, I say, angry feelings were cherished for years by relatives and friends of the Union's crew.

A mistake in the model from which the Union was built, was responsible for a narrowness of beam, altogether out of proportion to her length, such as resulted in her being what fishermen refer to as "cranky." Because of this it has always been taken for granted that she, with all sail set, was struck by a sudden squall of wind and capsized—though it is still hard to understand why not one of her crew was saved. The majority of the fourteen widows, resulting from the loss, belonged to Ship's Cove (Port Rexton). Before marriage Mrs.

Delaney, nee Crocker. (The Captain's Wife) had lived in "the big house" in Trinity. When she became a widow, Mr. Garland sent for her again to be the housekeeper, and she occupied that position for some thirty years.
"And thou vast ocean, on whose awful face
—trace."

LOCALS

The Walters' families (who own the house and property that once belonged to G. H. Cole, Esq.) keep it in good repairs and respectable condition.
They have just replaced an old fence with a new painted-paling one. This is not only right in itself in the interests of the good appearance of their property, but it is an object lesson to other property holders. Several of our town fences are anything but creditable to us; and their condition is a handicap to other individual efforts to make the town tidy and attractive. We may be poor, but we need not be other than respectable. A few hundred palings, and a few brushes of lime carefully applied, will help keep up our reputation as a town, the property of which looks as though it belongs to somebody—but much has been left undone in the past.

A new automobile has been assembled in the Great Motor Shop, and forwarded to its owner—Mr. Monks—at King's Cove.

We have on exhibition just now, a Spanish olive-jar, that was brought up from the bottom of Trinity Bay by a fisherman, on one of the claws of his grapple. It has an interesting history, and may be associated with the discovery of Trinity in 1498. We shall give its history, and a description of the jar in the near future.

Mrs. James Sutton, nee Guy, died last week, and her body was buried in the Church of England Cemetery.

Mr. Jamieson, representing Gerald Doyle, registered at the Garland last week always glad to see him.

Mr. Andrew Green and Miss Jessie Bartlett, both of Trinity, were married in Boston, U.S.A., on May 3rd.
Every good wish.

As Others See Us And as we see Ourselves.

(By OBSERVATOR.)

"Rich man, bigger man, thief.
How we clutch at a glint of pleasure Selling our silver dreams
For a handful of tinsel treasure.

"Hurrying through the world,
With greed in our eyes to blind us, Cramming our pockets full Of things we must leave behind us."

One at least of our prominent public men with whom I often come in touch thinks the churches may perhaps solve the unemployment problem, but not by setting up ministers to hear evidence and to judge. Their part, in his opinion, is rather to teach than to judge, and to give than to take evidence. The chief duty of the church, it seems to me, is to preach to "both sides" to beware of covetousness. Sir Robert Bond used to be (and probably still is) in favor of non-intervention of the Church in the political disputes of capital and labor, and confining the Church's duty to the preaching of great moral principles, leaving their practical application, in any given case, to be decided by the individual concerned.

Reverting to the Church's attitude towards social, industrial and political questions, let me observe in passing that Pope Pius XI's Encyclical on the subject is an admirable example as to the way in which the Church should deal with these matters. It is an honest attempt on the part of his Holiness to apply the truths of Christianity to every day facts, and to bring them to bear upon political and social questions. The Archbishop of Canterbury strongly deprecates meddling where the clergy are not experts, and thinks that "the great duty of the Church at all times is to set forth high and holy principles and motives."

By the way, those excellent exhortations to the Church to preach abstract principles always remind me of James Russell Lowell's lines:
"I'll willin' a man should go toliably strong,
Ain't wrong in the abstract, for that kind of wrong."

is all unpoplar, and never gets plited.
Because it's a sin that no one committed."

It was not by emitting platitudes that the great Churchmen made Christendom and established the authority of moral law. There is no need for any man, Christian or un-Christian, to meddle with things of which he knows nothing, but if the Churches were in earnest, they would set about getting the things done.
They would not be any longer content with letting off their artillery against the sky, they would study the question and invite the co-operation of all those who without such intervention would probably never consider the matter, and when they had arrived at what was a basis of approval by common sense by the best men concerned, they would bring their whole influence to bear in order to secure its acceptance by the unreasonable minority. "Blessed are the peace-makers, for they shall be called the children of God," but it is precious little use trying to secure that blessing by merely pre-claiming absolute principles. Peacemakers in the realm of socialism, as well as in the domain of politics, have to do more than cry "Peace, peace," when there is no peace.

However, it is encouraging to know that in spite of all the cynicism with which the world is being cluttered in these times, there are to be found to-day abundant signs of the appearing of a new and better condition of things. Men are their way to higher levels, either through suffering or through understanding, and never before were both so tremendously at work in the world. The first duty of the good citizens of St. John's therefore, is to seek the basic confidence, and to let all his actions arise from it.

Browning's well-known saying,
"God's in his heaven; all's right with the world," is just what we make of it. It may be the supreme effort of a blind faith, or it may be the calm assurance of a well-founded understanding. There is a reason for public confidence just at this moment, and that reason is the inevitability of the triumph of principle—the victory of truthfulness and honesty over mendacity and graft.

The old-time party leader was very different from the one of the present day. He (the former) was not merely theoretically, but practically, above all things sincere; the necessity of doing, at all hazards, that which he judged, rightly or wrongly, to be just and proper, was the dominant note of his character. Take, for example, the late Sir Hugh Horgan. Of the controversies in which he became involved; some of the most troublesome were undertaken on behalf of other people who, as he conceived, had been treated with injustice. The same instinct of veracity ran through all Sir Hugh's work, in politics and everything else. This, which he knew, by being thoroughly and turned over on all sides, and probed through and through. This quality of active veracity, the striving after knowledge in connection with public affairs, as apart from hearsay, lay at the root of Sir Hugh's very remarkable powers of discernment which enabled him so readily to analyse the object and motives of his political opponents.

True, the urgent need of employment at a season of the year when every able-bodied man in the community ought to be working ready for the shore and Labrador fishery, is not a hopeful sign of the times to the casual observer. But the people must not be discouraged. The recu-perative powers of this colony are wonderful. We have had destructive fires, bank failures and other very disastrous experiences, which, seemed for the moment to paralyze everything. But, in due time, the clouds rolled away, the sun of prosperity came out shining brighter than ever, and Terra Nova, in every instance, arose, like a Phoenix from its ashes, stronger and better than ever, because of the purifying ordeal through which she had passed. And so it will be again! What with inexhaustible supply of fish-food, unlimited mineral resources, boundless waterpower and extensive shipbuilding possibilities, Newfoundland promises to be, in the near future, under progressive and economical administration, the most prosperous dominion in the whole British Empire.

Where labor must be regulated, it should be by the action of corporations and trade unions rather than by the Government. I could leave all possible liberty to these bodies, and to private enterprise of any sort.
We are apt to undervalue the work accomplished by the latter. Freedom of association under all its forms is a necessary part of liberty, for we must not confound liberty with individualism. The question of paramount importance at present—as I have already intimated—is how to find employment for the people. Just now it seems very evident that unless something is soon done to check the tide of emigration, in another year or two we shall have only decrepit old men and slow-thinking young men and women left in many of our extern towns and villages. We want a vigorous, up-to-date administration—and an honest one at that—to put new life in things. It requires only a casual glance at the situation to see that most of the industries in the colony just now need the doctor!

In forming up and putting into effective operation a new Government, the leader must not forget that in order to sustain the attitude of impartiality towards the whole body of ordinary citizens, all public officials should be "out of business." Else there will be a private interest, as well as a public interest, for these officials to struggle with, and, however good as men they may be, the public service must inevitably suffer from even the imputation of the former, and of what that imputation implies.

It is noticeable that modern legislation is coming in for severe criticism from many sources, and there can be no question that such criticism is well founded; although those who are unable to take the long view, remain unconvinced of any ill effect arising out of the tendency of the times. Obviously, the whole tendency of present-day Governments is to take upon themselves responsibilities which used to belong to the individual. As a matter of fact, we are suffering from a complaint that is casing comment all over the country—the complaint that during the past few years there has been too much legislation. The people should be

Foot and Mouth Disease not for Humans

This acute and highly contagious malady, which occurs chiefly in cloven-footed animals, has made its appearance among cattle and hogs in several counties of central California, but The Weekly Bulletin of the State Board of Health (Sacramento) informs its readers that they have little to fear personally from the infection. We read:

"The standard methods of control, which consist of cattle quarantine, destruction and burial of affected herds, as well as continued and careful search for cases, are being rigidly applied by the State and federal division of animal industry. For the benefit of health officers who desire information concerning the possibility of human beings contracting the disease, it may be said that they are not frequently infected. The disease may be contracted by children who drink raw milk from cows afflicted with foot-and-mouth disease. There is slight danger of children contracting the disease from this source, however, as most of the milk consumed in California is pasteurized, with the exception of certified milk and Grade A. raw milk, both of which should be safe, as they are produced under strict supervision. The disease in man is generally very mild, recovery taking place spontaneously. The symptoms are fever, vomiting, painful swelling, sensation of heat and dryness of the mouth, followed by an eruption of vesicles distributed over the lips, mouth and tongue. There also may be headache, pain in the back, vertigo, colic, diarrhea and weakness. Dogs, cats, sheep and goats are said to be infected occasionally, but the horse appears to be non-susceptible. The disease is primarily a disease of cattle. There have been five outbreaks of the disease in the United States prior to the present epidemic. All of them have been completely exterminated by the animal industry authorities."

France Builds Military Railroad

ACROSS SAHARA.

There is significance in the news that the base of the British navy is to be removed from the North Atlantic to the Mediterranean Sea. The menace of the North has been removed, since the German fleet was sunk at Scapa Flow, and the danger spot is now in the great southern sea. The British navy is the world's greatest instrument for enforcing peace, and preserving the liberties of other nations. By its trapping of the German navy at the outbreak of the war, it did, at one stroke, more toward winning the war than any other agency in the war. In spite of the tremendous war debts of France, that country is now contemplating the building of a railroad 2,200 miles long, across the Sahara desert from Algeria south, at a cost of approximately $25-$30,000,000, for the avowed purpose of having in readiness an army of native negro troops, to throw into Europe by the shortest possible route, in the next war. It is estimated that 550,000 of these troops, whose services in the late war placed the stamp of French approval upon them, are available from the French Colonies in Africa.
This development of a great military reserve in Northern Africa makes the French fortifications in Algeria, and the British post at Gibraltar the vital points in international politics. The concentration of the British navy in the Mediterranean, in the event of hostilities, would conflict with French plans for rushing the negro army according to Marseilles from Algeria, and consequently the French are contemplating the building of huge submarine transports. Is there peace? In the event of a conflict in which Britain and France joined hands, their united forces would be enormously strengthened by the construction of this railroad. In the impossible event of discord between the two countries, the British navy would again be found where it was most needed, as it was in the world war. British navy manoeuvres, now taking place, involve the largest concentration of British warships since the battle of Jutland.
There will be eighty-three ships, with full complement of submarines, aircraft, torpedoes, bombs and all other weapons of war. British trade in the Mediterranean totals 65 per cent. of the whole, and is six times as great as that of any other one nation.

Now... 8 women out of 10 are solving an old problem a new way

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND, Graduate Nurse

What this new way is, you should learn without delay. It brings comfort, protection, peace of mind, at all times, under all circumstances.

It delights the fastidious woman, with its assurance of immaculate, personal cleanliness always. Its practical convenience and hygienic importance cannot be explained here.

What is it?

All these advantages are combined in a product recently discovered—a product called Kotex.
To show you what it is and what it will do we offer a sample free. Simply fill out and mail me the coupon below.

Kotex is made from pure, white cellulose, super-absorbent discovered during the world war.

It absorbs 16 times its own weight—instantly.
It is five times more absorbent than ordinary cotton. It is light weight—it is cool.

The feature women appreciate most is the easy means of disposal, which protects you from inconvenience and embarrassment.

Accept the free sample—today

I ask, as a personal favor, every woman who reads this brief explanation of Kotex, to send for the free sample.

It means so much, to the active, energetic, progressive woman that certainly none should neglect this opportunity.

Besides, Kotex is of enormous importance from a health standpoint. This has been briefly explained in a book written by a doctor. A copy will be sent you with the Kotex sample.

Don't Say— "Just a Sore Throat"

In a few days, you know, "just a sore throat" may be something much more serious. For science has proved that the throat is not only the first spot reached by infectious germs, but also forms the ideal soil for them to multiply on.

Throat protection, therefore, means germ destruction and is a duty that you owe your health. It is easily achieved by the regular use of Formamint—the germ-killing throat tablet.

Formamint (which is endorsed by over 5,000 American physicians) is the scientific way of disinfecting the mouth and the throat. Handy to have with you—pleasing in taste—it frees an efficient germicide that mixes with the saliva and so reaches where gargles cannot go.

And a tablet taken occasionally during the day not only brings grateful and immediate relief from "sore throat"—but affords protection against even more distressing ailments that so often follow infection of the throat linings. At all druggists.

STAFFORD'S Sarsaparilla Blood Purifier

Skin Diseases, Anemia, Lack of Blood, Paleness, Impure Blood, Lack of Ambition and Vigor, Debility, Weakness, Tired Feeling, Boils, Pimples, etc.

THERE is no Remedy of more universal application than a genuine true-and-tried Blood Purifier and Blood Builder. A medicinal preparation that will truly purify, revitalize and renew the blood, restores hope and pleasure, ambition and happiness, vigor and vitality. It is of inestimable value not only as a strengthener of the system, fortifying it against invasion of disease, but also as a cure for Chronic Diseases which depend upon an impoverished condition of the blood. Diseases of this nature are usually caused by impurities in the blood deposited through the inactivity of the Liver and Kidneys.

These secretions if not removed from the circulation, gradually form poisons which deteriorate the condition of the blood and allow other diseases to obtain a more ready entrance to the system. In the effort of nature to throw off these impurities, frequently pimples, boils, carbuncles, etc., appear, and it is wise to respond promptly to the Warning of Nature.

One Bottle of this Blood Purifier is all that you will need to take to produce results.

British Possessions Not for Sale

The United States has often gazed with longing eyes toward that archipelago, known as the British West Indies. Any nation might well gaze upon these islands with desire, for "They are good to look upon."

The United States has always had her Imperial dreamers, with so much of the blood of England in her veins she couldn't help it.

Here has indeed been an amazing expansion. By the progress of her pioneers against the wilderness, by aggressive warfare against Mexico and Spain, by peaceful purchases from France and Russia, she has added to her original thirteen colonies, thus becoming the great United States of to-day.

On the Pacific, and on the Caribbean, the American spheres of influence have extended, until she has become a world power of the first magnitude.

There was a time when American Imperialists regarded Canada, as a part of, "Manifest Destiny." But even the most famous have finally thrown over the hope of American expansion northward, acquiescing to Our Lady of the Snows when she declares, "My ways are not your ways."

With the triumphal march of Manifest Destiny halted at the forty-ninth parallel, American Imperialists turned southward to the Caribbean. As an earnest of their hopes in this direction we have the present proposals to buy from France and Britain that part of the West Indian Archipelago over which flies the Tricolor and the Union Jack.

To bear out their claims, certain bargain seekers state that these possessions should be traded in as payment for those war debts, by which America was made secure.

Looking For Reward.

In a conference on American Foreign Affairs, Professor William Shepherd of Columbia proposed that all the British Islands of the Caribbean should be given to the United States as a reward for her participation in the war for freedom. It never seemed to occur to the Professor that sink or swim, survive or perish, as allies, we were all in it together.

Many others picked up this suggestion, some going so far as to introduce it to Congress. Senator Reed declared, on the floor of the Senate: "The application of the principle of the Monroe Doctrine and strategic considerations make it desirable that all the islands lying off the American Coast should be under American control."

Senator MacCormack's Chicago Tribune is one of the strongest voices arguing for the absorption of the British West Indies. The Tribune says, editorially:—"Amalgamation would remove from our doorstep what might become as great a menace to our interests in Central and South America, as was Germany's Heligoland to Great Britain."

The Prince Said It.

The Prince of Wales gave the answer to all such, when in a speech at Trinidad, he said: "The British possessions are not for sale."

Britain does not barter the loyalty of her citizens. There are values in our Empire beyond the values of the market place.

Our American cousins, in their proposals for annexation, have ignored the most important feature of all political connection, the loyalty and sentiment of the people concerned.

Only by conquest could these intensely loyal citizens be torn from their allegiance to the Union Jack.

The Mother Country herself might take lessons in loyalty to the Empire from the inhabitants of Barbados, an island that has remained in unbroken allegiance since 1826, where black and white alike, count British citizenship their most priceless possession.

The British West Indies belong to the orbit of the New World. In the New World their destiny is as yet unsettled. Their political allegiance is one with that of Canada, while commercial considerations tend to throw them more and more into the arms of the United States.

Reading Toward Absorption. In considering their future status, we are faced by one of the larger problems of British Statesmanship in the New World. A giant American monopoly that can buy bananas at three shillings a bunch in Jamaica, can sell them at ten to twenty shillings a bunch in New York, represents a power to be reckoned with.

I wish that my Canadian compatriots could come into more intimate association with these Dependencies, to realize the clandestine forces mitigating against closer associations between Canada and the West Indies, as it were, driving a wedge between us as to favor future absorption by the United States.

When they feed out their propaganda about the larger benefits which the United States is conferring, one might inquire, from 1914 to 1918, was it the Stars and Stripes, or was it the White Ensign that maintained the safety of those scattered and defenceless islands?

It's all right to talk about the white flag of the United Fruit Company, but when storms begin to gather the West Indies put their trust in the battle-ship of England.

A CASE FOR THE S.P.C.A.

I wonder how many adjectives there are in the English language?

There must be at least twenty or thirty thousand, mustn't there?

And yet, when you listen to people talking, it seems as if there couldn't be more than a dozen or so.

Cruelty To Adjectives.

For surely, if there were more, no one would be so cruel to the few words as to overwork them so outrageously. To say nothing of the cruelty to other folks ears in being constantly assailed by the few reiterated sounds. You remember the drop of water torture.

"Pretty" is one of the adjectives that the society for the protection of cruelty to adjectives ought to step in and look out for. There are people who never use any other word for anything they admire. Whether it be a dainty frock, or a magnificent vista, or an artistic house, or a young girl's lovely face, or an exquisite picture, the same adjective drops from their tongues.

"That Much-Abused Word 'Cute'." "Cute" is another word which has been wrenched away from its proper meaning and then been cruelly overworked. How often do you hear the word "cute" meaning "acute"?

Perhaps two or three times in a year if you are lucky. And how many times as you near a friend to express the feeling that any diminutive or appealing thing arouses? Or, worse than that, you may hear it applied to anything that a general word of praise is wanted for.

"A letter friend told me" that after she had played a wonderful record which gave the acting of the most dramatic scenes in Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, one of her young girl guests thanked her for it and said she thought the record was "so cute."

My idea of a hell for artists and authors' add my letter friend, "is a place where the natives never could know and never could understand."

THERE are as many types of motors as there are various kinds of work—motors built and designed to meet varying conditions. Be careful in choosing the type of motor for the machine, for the kind of current and for the labour to be performed.

Consult a Westinghouse distributor. Specify your needs and conditions—whether alternating or direct current is available and whether constant speed or varying loads are a necessity. Westinghouse distributors will designate the type of motor to meet existing conditions.

Here is illustrated a type CS Motor for constant speed to be used with alternating current.

By An Expert Soccer Player.

Even in the most humble sphere of football the side which is more physically fit than the other will win nine matches out of ten when there is equality in actual football skill. At the same time I hope the readers will not think I am going to advise for them a curriculum of "perks," and food restriction. There is no need at all for a player to regard training in the same way as the professional has to. Any healthy young man does not require it, he is fitted by nature with sound limbs and sound wind, and so long as he retains these he has little to worry about on the point of condition. The best training a player can do is to get the ball out at every opportunity. If it is only ten minutes or so it means added familiarity with the leather and its movements, and the better control of the ball, the better the player. A couple of forwards should get together and run up and down the field a few times using rapid, short passes, while the backs might get fifty yards or so apart and kick the ball to each other, attempting to kick it at whatever angle or bounce it comes. Shooting at goal will do all the halves and forwards good, as well as the goalkeeper. In fact, this cannot be overdone in practice. Learn to shoot straight, and place the ball towards the corners and you will score goals in your matches. Then, during the week, if you have the opportunity, put on your pumps and give yourself a few sharp bursts over sixty or eighty yards. This will make you faster and keep you on your toes more in a game, the latter, is a bigger asset than it appears to be, and may be acquired by diligent application.

M. G. C. A. SPORTS MEETING.

A meeting of the M.G.C.A. Sports

Committee was held in their rooms last night when preparations were made for the forthcoming season's games. Mr. T. W. Sparks occupied the chair in the absence of Mr. J. S. Ayre, before a large attendance of players and supporters. The first business was that of electing the football officers, which resulted as follows:—
Manager—Charles Quick.
Captain—V. Rose.
Vice-Captain—N. Ellis.
Secty.—Tress—J. Parsons.
League Delegate—T. W. Sparks.
Judging by the football material in evidence the Guards can be relied upon in placing a strong line-up in the field. All the players are very enthusiastic over the approaching games, and they will get down to hard practice beginning on Monday night next.

It was decided to hold the annual Field Day this year on June 18th. Application for the use of St. George's field on that date has been forward to the Secretary of the Football League for their approval.

The matter of arranging for an excursion to Mr. Grace about the third week in July was discussed and heartily approved of by the entire gathering. Should the outing materialize it is the intention of the club to take over the footballers, track team, tug-of-war and rowing teams to compete against the Harbor Gracians, while the Methodist Guard Band will also go along. The track team which visited there last year as the guests of St. Paul's Cathedral at their annual garden party and field day, caused a great impression. A committee of four was appointed to make the necessary preparations, and will report back at next meeting. The track runners and tug-a-war team will start training next week, while a rowing team will be picked to compete at the Earl Haig Regatta. The meeting was a very enthusiastic one throughout, and with the club represented in all the athletic events during the coming summer they are bound to be heard from.

ANNUAL MEETING SENIOR LEAGUE.

JUNIOR FOOTBALL LEAGUE ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Newfoundland Junior Football League takes place in the T. A. Armoury to-night when the season's programme will be arranged. The various teams which comprised the league last year will again compete, although it is said in some quarters that one of the teams will drop out. Four applications for admission into the League will be dealt with at to-night's meeting. The brand of football produced by the teams in this League was of a high order and with the experience they have gained they should all be in better form this year.

BOXING NOTES.

PARIS, May 1.—A twenty-round bout between Eugene Criqui, former featherweight champion of the world, and Danny Frush, United States boxer, was arranged yesterday. The fight will take place June 1 in the Buffalo Velodrome here.

This will be the first appearance of Criqui in the ring since last October, when he injured his hand in a bout with Henri Hebrans, Belgian fighter.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Benny Valger of the East Side last night easily out-pointed Al Belmont, of Newark, receiving the decision at the end of ten rounds of boxing.

SUZANNE MAY TAKE OATH ON BEHALF OF NATIONS.

PARIS, May 1.—A twenty-round being prominently mentioned in French Olympic Committee circles as the French athlete to be designated to take the Olympic oath on behalf of the competitors of the 42 nations to be represented in the events. Editor "Realms of Sport."

Dear Sir—I have noticed in an issue of your paper, in the "Realms of Sport" column, a letter from our friend Mr. Arthur Johnson, regarding holding a boxing tournament during the "Earl Haig Week," but in his list of names who would likely take part, he does not include the name of Ken Goodyear. Now, seeing that you apparently had no one in town anxious or willing to face him, perhaps it could be managed to get one from one of the British or French warships that will be in port. It is a pity that there will not be a German one as well, as that would be Ken's pleasure, meeting one of those chaps in the ring.

Yours truly,

Armand Massart, the fencers; Paoli, the shot putter, and Henri Cochet and Rene Lacoste, the lawn tennis stars.

The partisans of these various athletes have already raised such a controversy over the qualifications of their favorites that it seems quite probable the French committee will decide to bestow the honor on the redoubtable Suzanne, against whom no man's voice will be raised.

FOOTBALL PUSHING OUT BULL-FIGHTS.

The Spanish correspondent of the English Country Gentleman writes:—

To the civilized world in general and to this country in particular it is gratifying to note that bull-fighting in Spain is dying and that the death-blow has been dealt by a British sport. Incredible as it may appear, football has at last usurped the place that tauromachy has held throughout the ages in the heart of every true Spaniard. No longer does the healthy don thirst for the sight of a bleeding bull lumbering round an arena where truculent "toreros" emulate the feats of the Roman gladiators in the ever uneven contest between man and beast, and mutilated horses, with entrails protruding, writhe and kick in dumb agony. No, a current of true sport has been set in motion in the fully atmosphere of Spanish pastimes, and this new influence is rapidly bringing Spain to a foremost place amongst the sporting nations of the present day.

A rapid survey of Spain's position in the realm of sport will suffice to substantiate the argument. Last season no fewer than 30 of the leading amateur football clubs of Europe and two British professional teams (Birmingham and Dundee) visited the Peninsula. To say that the honours were evenly divided is inadequately to convey an impression of the wonderful form displayed by the Spanish novices. And the gates showed attendances at many of those matches of over 30,000 spectators—more than double the number ever chronicled as thronging the amphitheatres at a bull fight.

With football has come the initiation into and the ready pursuit of other pastimes of a progressive civilization. At tennis such names as the Conde de Gomar and Eduardo Flaquer have been made famous on the courts of Wimbledon and not so long ago M. Alonso gave champion Tilden the surprise of his life at Illinois. At motor-racing such aces as Seagraves and Lee Guinness can tell of the doughty opposition they have met with on Spanish tracks. And in other directions the same rapid progress is apparent. Even "brutal" boxing has claimed a host of enthusiasts, and in the city of Barcelona alone upwards of a dozen clubs are now devoted to the art.

The crucial test of the advancement of Spanish sport will be the Olympic games. Football, swimming, and other teams are to be entered, and enthusiasm even at this early hour runs high. The arenas are being neglected and the Spanish athlete, who but a short time ago was wont to yell himself hoarse at the dexterous slaughter of a "toro" is now in training fitting himself to take his stand against the competitors of other countries in contests that have been proclaimed noble, not by one nation, but by the whole civilized world.

The Passing Hour

Why He Didn't Stop.

It was during a trial at the Assizes. A burglar was charged with having broken into a lady's house and assaulted one of the occupants. The man who had been injured was in the witness-box.

"You say you had called to see Miss Billings, and that you were in the sitting-room with her at the time the burglary was committed?" asked counsel for the defence.

"Yes sir," replied the witness. "Then how," continued the barrister, did it happen that, when the prisoner dashed into the room and assaulted you, you leaped through one of the windows and rushed home, making no attempt to defend the young lady or summon help?"

"I thought it was her father," was the all-sufficing reply.

She Got There First.

A farmer called at the village post office.

"Hello, Seth!" he said. "Got anything here for me?"

"Don't see nothin' Jake," replied postmaster. "Was you expectin' thint?"

"Yes," answered the farmer, "was expectin' a postcard from Aunt Janny, tellin' me what day was comin' down."

"Hanner," called the postmaster, his wife, "have ye seen anything postcard from Jake Lee's Jinny?"

"Yes," was the prompt reply, "is comin' down on Thursday."

Tongues in Trees.

Nanny was ill and so a temporary nurse had been engaged to charge of the three Smithers' ren.

One morning she was to take for a walk, and before she left the Smithers told her to impart to children a few facts about the history—a subject that was to any means nurse's strong point.

"Now, Winnie," she remarked, "they had been out for about a week of an hour, 'you see that beech-tree over there? If it speak to us of its life, what do you think it would say?"

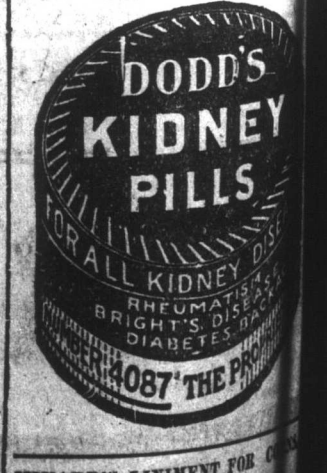

"I expect it would say, 'I'm sorry but with all due respect, I'm a tree!'" Winnie replied gravely.

Girls Friendly Society

The Girls Friendly Society Re-Union began with the Celebration of the Holy Communion in the Cathedral at 7 a.m. on Thursday, May 8th. There was an exceptionally large attendance. The Bishop was celebrant and addressed these present ladies as his subject, "The Parable of the Talents" showing the importance of little things, little sins, little duties and little prayers.

At the Synod Hall in the evening Lady Allardice, the Patroness of the Society, attended, and was received by a Guard of Honor of the G. F. S. Rangers. In charge of Lieut. Gladys Carter. The Bishop presided and invited Lady Allardice to present the prizes. Both His Lordship and Lady Allardice addressed the meeting.

A very pleasing entertainment followed, the principal item being a sketch, entitled "The Brown Paper Parcel," admirably acted by Mrs. H. LeMessurier and Miss Mary Ryan. Miss Harris sang, and Miss Rita LeMessurier contributed a whistling solo, and recitations were given by Mrs. Baird and Miss "Young Lady"; all of which were much appreciated by the audience.

At the close of the entertainment refreshments were served.

A New Crew Wanted

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—In reference to Pepys Behind the Scenes, where Mr. Harris says he would use his influence for a Woman's Government, Harris I agree fully with your suggestion. These good ladies have urged the "necessity" for relief for the poor, and it goes to prove they have the welfare of their country at heart. Should Mr. Harris' suggestion fail, I would suggest the importing of a few males or females to look after our country and show us honesty and plain dealing. Now, Mr. Editor, perhaps it would be a move in the right direction seeing that we had to import Mr. Hollis Walker, K.C. to put us right and to show a lot of us the real meaning of the I.O.U. system. Mr. Editor, this is the first time I have had anything to do in matters of this kind. Seeing our second Minister, W. F. Coaker, failed to right or keep the old ship afloat, we would suggest the putting of a new crew to the pumps even if they were of the female sex. Hoping, Mr. Editor, I have not trespassed too much on your valuable space, and as I am busy stowing away my cod traps and packing my grip for the land of Uncle Sam, as the boat is going to-day, I can't say any more at present.

Yours truly,

A Complaint Against Half-Time Men

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—With your permission I would like to make a few remarks on Taxi driving and what is happening in regard to the same. We find men in all business who have cars for 3 or 4 years putting them on the stand on the 40-50 basis, to try to get clear of their junk at the expense of the general public. That is to say, they get the driver to get a Taxi License and drive for him, and on Sunday they will have the car for their own use or any other time that they may feel inclined, as long as the driver makes all expenses for him. This also does the Council out of $18 or $20 in taxes by getting a Taxi License. We even have foreigners doing the same thing. I now ask Councilor Outerbridge, the real friend of the honest fare taxi man, to bring this before the City Council at the next meeting and stop those people that are trying to have a good time at the expense of the general public. In closing, I would ask the general public to give the real taxi men the preference—men who stand at your service through fair and foul weather, and stumpy the guys

Worry is only Fear Fear of Self-Fear of Others- Fear of the Future

AND what is the cause of worry? Lack of nerve force, energy, vigor. The man or woman who has good health and is living a full, successful life does not worry.

It is when the nervous system gets run down that worry comes to sap vitality from your body and to torment your mind.

There is not much use in advising one not to worry unless you can also offer some means of restoring the depleted nervous system.

The most rational and most successful treatment available to all is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is popular because it does not merely afford temporary relief but gradually and certainly restores vitality to the run-down nervous system.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food can make a better human being of you, mentally, physically—everyway.

The benefits felt will be in the way of new energy, new vigor and confidence.

The utility of worry will dawn on you and you will be able to see the bright and hopeful side of the future.

You will realize that you have the reserve force necessary to withstand the strain of life's work and ward off disease and discouragement.

But do not expect this change in a day. Some perseverance is necessary on your part.

The reconstructive process is slow but certain. The depleted nerve cells must be nourished back to health.

You will soon notice signs of improvement which will encourage you to keep up this treatment until the desired results are obtained. The important part is to get the building-up process started now—to-day.

Dr. Chase's Medicines are for sale in Newfoundland by all druggists and dealers in medicines.

If your local merchant cannot supply you write direct to Mr. Gerald S. Doyle, Water St., St. John's, as he is sole agent for the Dr. Chase Medicine Co., in Newfoundland.

The Secret of the Giants

Strange New Facts About Glands—Tiny Drug-Stores of Your Body.

(By PRESCOTT LECKY)

Department of Psychology, Columbia University.

A giant from the backwoods, arriving in Hollywood recently to begin his career as a motion-picture actor, furnished the newspapers with a sure-fire humorous story that set the nation grinning. For the giant, in order to accommodate his architecture to the limitations of a Ford car, had cut a hole in the top and protruded his head and neck through the aperture! No doubt we shall see him in slapstick comedy before long; and whether he is a comedian or not, undoubtedly he will succeed in entertaining us. He is a giant, and that is enough.

Giants have been a source of wonder since the dawn of history. We think of the giant as a superman, which is only one step removed from thinking of him as supernatural. Somehow he seems inexplicable in natural terms.

But now the mystery of the giants is going the way of other mysteries; for science has found the key to gigantism.

The key lies in a few bits of tissue so small that they can be held in the hollow of your hand, yet so important that they even may unlock the innermost secrets of the processes of life and death. Scattered about the body—in the head, neck and trunk—these unimportant looking little granular masses in reality are tiny chemical laboratories—a whole chain of bodily drug stores, dispensing wonder working remedies of their own manufacture.

So new are they to the scientific world that they are still known by three different names—"endocrine organs," "ductless glands," and "the glands of internal secretion." They empty their secretions directly into the blood vessels that nourish them, and so are distinguished from the so-called duct glands, which pour out their secretions through tubes or ducts and deposit them upon either the inner or outer surfaces of the body.

The important ductless glands are the pituitary, pineal, thyroid, adrenal, gonads, thymus, and the island cells of the pancreas. The wonder-working remedies they secrete are known by two names—"hormones," meaning "self-drugs"; and "hormones" meaning to arouse or stir up. They act as body accelerators, and sometimes as body brakes. The power of their action on the body passes belief.

Through the discovery of the locations and functions of certain of these "body chemical" laboratories, great research laboratories are writing a new and marvelous drama of science.

It is a tale not only of giants, but of midgets as well; also of fat ladies and human skeletons. And it goes even further, concerning itself vitally even with the water you drink, the food you eat, and the medicine your doctor may subscribe. You have seen in the papers recently that large cities are considering the matter of putting iodine in the city water. This is part of the story. So is the recent advice of the United States Bureau of Fisheries that you should eat more salt fish. So is the discovery of insulin, the wonderful remedy for diabetes, by Dr. Frederick Grant Banting, of Toronto, Canada. In short, the drama of life that science is unfolding in a few small glands promises to become, when completed, the most important body of information, from a human standpoint, yet discovered.

Consider, for example, the single item of insulin—one of the autotoxins, or chemical secretions, which Dr. Banting extracted from certain glandular cells of the pancreas. In the few short months since its discovery, practically every other diabetes remedy on the market, along with much of the old-fashioned medical procedure, has been thrown into the discard. What does this mean for the future? What will be the fate of our concoctions and patent medicines in use to-day? What will drug stores carry on their shelves 20 years from now?

Much of the evidence concerning the functions of the ductless glands has been obtained experimentally by administering to the human body secretions taken from the glands of animals. In some cases an entire gland has been grafted into the body. Other evidences come from clinical cases in which over- or under-secretion of the glands can be demonstrated.

These observations and experiments are a basis for believing that before long it may be possible to grow giants experimentally (provided, of course, any one wished to be a giant!). Just as botanists grow giant plants. Note the word possible. This experiment never has been attempted on a human being, and probably never will be. But even with the elementary knowledge and technique now available, such experiments performed upon dogs and other animals have shown some measures of success.

Perhaps our children or grandchildren may see dogs as large as horses produced by this means. This, too, is speculation; but that lizards grew to be saurs.

One of the main sources of scientific romance is the gland, an insignificant-looking mass of tissue, somewhat smaller than the bone of your little finger, situated just back of the ear, in a bony socket of the skull within a skull.

Few if any parts of the body are so carefully fortified against attack and injury, and with good reason. Its removal invariably causes the gland consists of two lobes, anterior, or front lobe, and posterior lobe.

Each has a different function. The anterior lobe of the gland, but do not be misled by its small size, it is, seems to control the size of the skeleton. In the secretion of this lobe causes the body to grow with astonishing rapidity. This is the cause of gigantism, or undersecretion, on the other hand, prevents the growth of the body, results in one form of dwarfism. Many lines of evidence have been gathered in the first place, a few dwarfs who have been found for X-ray study, the pituitary found to be exceedingly small.

Studies of giants, on the other hand, have shown that the abnormally large pituitary gland, the most convincing evidence ever, is to be found in actual cases where excessive growth has been demonstrated. The story of the Tuner, reported to Dr. Harlow, of Harvard, is a typical example.

At the age of 15, John Tuner, to grow rapidly. He demonstrated tremendous appetite, and he has taken a pint of whiskey daily for breakfast. He has a height of eight feet three inches, suffering from an overgrowth of the knee joints, his weight found to be 275 pounds, an extreme emaciation.
