Tupper, amid the laughter of the opposition, drew a word picture of the changed condition of affairs as regards Mr. Mc Mullen, and chaffed that gentleman in a most unmerciful manner. In the past it has been the habit of Conservative newspapers to apprise the reading public of the fact that Mr. Mchas slept with the auditorgeneral's report as a pillow and the public accounts clasped to his bosom. Now, all this is gone, Mr. McMullen has to keep within the traces and his silvery tones will be heard no more in attack. Occasionally he may be privileged to say a work in defence of his masters, but this will only take place when he gets the nod from his

FAIRLY CREDITABLE MANNER, albeit it was marred by some blots which added years and a more varied ex-perience will remove. The Eastern The Ho ress, while making due allowances for Mr. McInnes' peculiar position, has not hesitated to criticize his performance. For instance, the Montreal Witness, a stalwart Liberal organ, says of Mr. Mc-

"His speech did not meet with universal approval, even from his own side. He made the mistake of confining his remarks to the province from which he hailed. Nevertheless he made a vigorous speech, fairly well delivered, with for militia camps some rather good points, and aside from one rather unfortunate expression might | Senate bar. claim to have fairly well discharged his

"The "unfortunate expression" alludedto was to the following effect: "While we on this side of the house are the following effect: CAPT. DREVEUS' while we do not wear red shirts nor carry dag-gers, yet we do see that the conditions of society at the present day are becoming strained, and relief must How the French Military Traitor be given to those who are suffering from an enforced condition of poverty in our country, and if this relief is not forthcoming from these legislative halls it will be enacted in the streets." This revolutionary sentiment—a reminder of the barricades of Paris of the days of the French revolution—provoked many protests in the house. Mr. McInnes also, for a young man, made the mistake of treating too flippantly the leaders in the parliamentary forum since Confederation. For him, a young member not yet out of his parliamentary swaddling clothes, to attack one of the Fathers of Confederation and designate him "the great stretcher," was hardly in good form. Inded, Mr. Laurier

WINCED UNDER THE REMARK, and some other members of the government were evidently a little aghast. The Ottawa Citizen speaking of Mr. McInnes' effort, and apropos of the remark that the government should establish a mint in British Columbia, said that it was usual for mint sauce to go with lamb. In this case it was apparent that the two had been separated. Personally I have a great deal of sympathy with a young man entering parliament for the first time and having to take up a somewhat trying role. Mr. McInnes has now learned that that which might pass muster on a platform in the remote districts of some constituencies is not quite adapted for the House of Commons, and when next he addresses the house it will be in a somewhat more moderate manner. In the course of the debate the opposition had the government undoubtedly on the hip. No greater instance of Liberal inconsistency can be found in the parliamentary annals of Canada than their action respecting the issue of Governor-General's warrants. Time and time again Sir Richard Cartwright has fulminated against the Conservatives for utilizing this method for raising money in an emergency. While in one sense the Liberals may be commended for their action, inasmuch as it enabled a deserving body of men to secure their salaries, yet there does not appear to have been

After leaving the hall John Dillon, escorted by fifty or sixty members of the convention, walked up Sackville street, which was densely crowded. The delegates were followed by a noisy mob of about 1,000 Dublin roughs, who were evidently not in sympathy with the Dillonites. The leader of the mob kept shouting: "To hell with Dillon," etc., and missiles began through the air. To these the Dillonites replied by singing "God Save Ireland," increasing the riotous demonstration. The police were not able to compete with the roughs and reinforcements had to be hurried to the scene. The police soon turned out in strong numbers, and were just in time to stop what was beyond doubt a growng riot, which might have had most

Few mariners furnish by their experiences a more entertaining story than Captain Ridderbjelk, whose adventures in Northern Pacific waters would fill a book with stories that seem almost incredible. The log of the schooner Worlock on her cruise for seals, starting with the vessel's escape from the Alaskan authorities, and terminating in her sale for debt in some Japanese port after a trading voyage along 200 500 600 Tl. A large addition is to be built to St Joseph's hospital that will increase the about one-third. The plans have been drawn by Mr. S. Maclure, architect, and tenders are now called for, the expectation being that the structure will be completed within four months. The new addition, which is of the same general design outwardly as the present building, will extend south towards Humboldt street. It is planned for four storevs and a basement. The new wing overlapping as it does into the old build ing, has necessitated other changes in the present arrangements, and the op portunity will be taken advantage of to thoroughly renovate the hospital from top to bottom, no pains being spared to make it as complete and modern as possible. A large kitchen will replace the present laundry in the basement, and a special building tor a wash house will be erected in the grounds. Spain was forced to content himself with second honors in the half, and was beaten in for even this position by Wolff in the mile. In the open mile the positions were interchanged, Spain winning from a large field, with Wolff second, in 2:33; while in the open amateur quarter the order was Barker, Spain, Wolff, in 331-5. The one-mile handicap went to Emanuels (from 50-yard mark), Lester (scratch) putting up a fine fight for second, in 2:24 4-5. Vancouver's great trio, Barker, Spain and Lester, took the team race from Westminster, the Burrard club's representatives thus closing the day with a clean sweep, every amateur event on the list to their credit, Sykes having done the trick in the nov-Of the professionals Albert Deeming was once more the star, none of the visitors being able to hold him at the mile or five miles, though the field included such flyers as Metcalf, Rucker, Dow, Lee and Davies, in addition to local talent. His victory from scratch in the five-mile handicap was properly one of the most popular of the day. The only professional event that he did not secure was the open half, in which he finished second to Eli Lee in 1:10 1-5. The mile was won in 2:21.
