FUNNY, AIN'T IT? DID YOU EVER?

WRITTEN FOR THE REGISTER.

Great in the power of political eloquence, and greater still that of national. How splendid an achievement to show man the way to higher places, to teach how life may be made more enjoyable, and whisk away, as with one stroke of the brush, every particle of grit from the wheels of on-marching society, and make them, as they roll forward, with ever-growing speed, give out not the creaking sounds of ill contrived machinery, but a music sweet and low as might have followed the golden chariots in which Celestials of old were wont to take their airings. Splendid indeed! and yet I have heard a politician, of no more than ordinary pretensions, attempt all these things, and many others besides, in the course of half an hour's address. Before his illuminated, almost inspired mind, problems which have made philosophers pause and he lumbly lay as plainly disclosed as pebbles at the bottom of shallow water. The wonder he felt was the everyday element could not see so clearly an accomplishment as easily as himself. To him there was neither mystery nor difficulty in the small task of reforming the world, or, at least, his portion of it. And if those other fellows—that is the opposition—could only be got out of the way or silenced, he could see no reason why, in a very short time, and with very little effort, roads and bridges should not be improved, canals deepened, taxation almost done away with, and even the evils made to grow in more healthy independence of the weather. A grand man, surely, is your stump speaker who fills you with admiration of his many edidness and almost infinite resources. You scarcely have the heart to think, or at least, the candour to say, that on the average he is a very dull bore, pleasant enough for a few minutes, but after that an intolerable nuisance. For most of what he utters is more sound and fury, signifying nothing, except the distance he has covered in his own country, which could not be realized in Utopia, and would ruin that nebulous land if they could.

But grand as is the eloquence of the politician, though futile in consequence, and instead of some, it can not compete in extravagant absurdity with the flights of the Nationalist. The comparatively modest politician confines himself to advocating what might be good, if there was any possibility of securing it, and he is guilty only of settling the minds of the thoughtless. The Nationalist begins by assuming that perfection is already reached in his own favored land, and all that is needed is that the rest of the world should abandon their inferior ways, and, listening to him, be guided by the easy steps which lead to the eternal peace of his Olympus. What is it; blindness, folly, knavery, or a mere temporary mental intoxication which leads men, otherwise prudent and sober enough, to disregard the plainest truths, and make fools of themselves when they open their lips on a national platform or on a national subject?

Nobody, of course, objects to these glowing orators when they speak of their own country as the land of the free, or the mother of civilization, or the nurse of art and science, and so forth. Every child is allowed to praise its own mother. Nobody finds fault with that. But when they go on to lay down the law for every other land, on the assumption of their own superiority, they become always offensive, and not infrequently mischievous, and ought to be snuffed out at once. Even the sacredness of filial affection does not justify detraction of another's parents, and the very intensity of love we have for our own home is a strong reason for speaking and thinking with respect for the homes of our neighbors. But this is not the way with the orator on Nationalist platform. He has no sense, and tastes insipid unless mixed with abuse of every place else. It is not enough that the United States is (in his picture) the greatest, the noblest, the most civilized and true, of the nations of the earth; Great Britain must be base and bloody, France treacherous and cowardly, Italy degenerate, and Austria reactionary, and so on of all the rest.

Now, it is fair to ask, what is the good of all this? What useful purpose does it serve? What is not true can benefit no one nor promote the interests of any but the father of lies. It is said in Scripture "We should speak as the Lord speaketh, in truth and judgment and justice"; and this frothy declamation is in the very teeth of the whole thing. It is false, injudicious and unjust; it is not to our interest, and ought to be denounced by every man who makes pretence to either ability or an honest heart.

We are sorry to find a man of the high standing of Burke Cockran detracting from his reputation by descending to these small ways. In an open letter to President McKinley on "American Mediation in the Transvaal," after much that is fair and sensible, he winds up as follows: "It is not extravagant or unreasonable to insist that any country seeking an alliance, formal or tacit, with the United States, must show some semblance of regard for moral law at least during the period of courtship." Thank God that I am not like the rest of the people, not like that wretched Publican! "And," echoed back the Declaimer, "Take heed ye sinners and common people, wash your faces and trim your garments before you draw nigh unto me, for I am good and full of moral law."

Of course Burke Cockran does not say this of himself. He is too modest; but how much better does he make it—far worse many will think—by the way he does put it. The Great Republic is so upright and full of ambition, so observant of the rights of her neighbors, Mexico, for instance, and Spain, and the poor Filipinos, so unamoured, in a word, of the moral law that, to use B. C.'s own language, "It is neither extravagant nor unreasonable to insist that nobody should court her who is not as good as herself." On this last condition it will be the general opinion that not many suitors need be basifal.

I. C. B. U. Athletic Club.

The open meeting of the I. C. B. U. Athletic Club, held in their hall, on King and Jarvis sts., on last Monday evening, was a decided success.

The hall was nicely decorated with the club colors, green and white and on either side of the platform was arranged the handsome banners of the Branch forming a very effective background, whilst a profusion of flags were very tastefully arranged around the walls. "Conspicuously displayed were the silver trophies won by the I. C. B. U. of 1900, to wit, the gold and silver cups, and the medals, which were members under whose direction the decorations were carried out with such pleasing results.

The Chairman in opening the meeting expressed the pleasure it afforded him to welcome such a large number of the friends of the club, and trusted that they would spend a pleasant evening. He stated that the principal object of the evening was the presentation of the prizes won at the annual games and friendly regatta, and that he had the following gentlemen to read seats on the platform: Mr. D. A. Carey, President of St. Mary's Literary and Athletic Club, Mr. O. Leary, representing St. Michael's Literary and Athletic Association, Mr. W. O'Neil, Grand President of the I. C. B. U., Mr. J. J. Flanagan, Grand Secretary I.C.B.U., and Bro. A. McDonald.

A good programme of music, song and dance, then ensued, Bro. J. McNamara singing in duo style, "My Dear Old Irish Home," and in response to repeated cheers sang "Down at the Irishman's Hall." Mr. V. McGuire sang "Off to Philadelphia in the Morning," and then sang "Hooked in the Grapple of the Deep." During the first part of the programme the Chairman called on Mr. D. A. Carey, who on rising to speak was received with loud applause. Mr. Carey in the course of his remarks stated that he was pleased to see a Benevolent Society like the I. C. B. U. adding to its other good features that of an Athletic Club, and spoke words of encouragement and good advice to the members reminding them that at times they would be sure to suffer defeat, yet that they were not to become discouraged but begin again with renewed energy and never rest until victory was theirs.

Throughout his remarks the speaker was listened to with the greatest attention and at the close he received a great ovation.

Between the first and second parts of the programme Bro. A. McDonald presented the prizes to the following successful winners in the various games: 100 yards race, Bro. Wilcox 1, W. Mulvaney 2, O'Brien 3; Putting 10lb shot, Bro. McBride 1, James Burns 2; 220 yards race, Bro. Wilcox 1, Mulvaney 2, O'Brien 3; Hop, step and jump, W. Mulvaney 1, R. McBride 2, G. E. Beahan 3; Pole vaulting, Bro. Wilcox 1, W. Murphy 2; Throwing hammer, O. Burns 1, James Burns 2; 120 yards hurdle race, W. Mulvaney 1, James Burns 2; Standing jump, W. Mulvaney 1, R. McBride 2; mile race, W. Mulvaney 1, R. Wilcox 2, J. McNamara 3; 8 quick jumps, W. Mulvaney 1, O'Brien 2; Five mile bicycle race, F. Corby 1, T. Horan 2, S. Hallett 3; Consolation race, J. Bateman 1, Thomas Burns 2.

Bro. McDonald in presenting the prizes congratulated the winners and pointed out the many advantages to be derived from membership in the club.

Mr. Carey and Mr. O'Leary before leaving extended the freedom of their respective club rooms.

Bro. Wm. O'Neil also gave a short address and intimated his intention of becoming a member, which was loudly applauded.

The second part of the programme was then proceeded with by Bro. John Burns, W. Mulvaney, T. Horan, Wm. Murphy, J. Parker, C. Rodgers, F. Corby and Wm. Gloyne all contributing thereto. Bro. Mulvaney's trombone solo was the hit of the evening, sharing the honors with a duet by Bro. A. Ross and J. Dowling.

The committee in charge of the evening's entertainment, Bro. M. Ross, J. McNamara, T. Burns and W. Mulvaney deserve great credit for the splendid entertainment furnished.

There is no doubt whatever that the future of the I. C. B. U. Athletic Club will be a bright and prosperous one, judging from the enthusiasm of its members and the energy and zeal displayed by its officers.

Special lines in the best grades of carpets are now being offered by John Kay, Son & Co., 38 King street west.

Arrival of the Delegate.

Quebec, Oct. 1.—Mgr. Falconio, the Apostolic Delegate, arrived here after noon at 8 o'clock on board the Dominion Line steamship Vancouver. He was received at the dock by Vicar General Marois, representing the Archbishop of Quebec, Senator Scott, Hon. R. B. Doherty, Hon. E. G. Mansfield, Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick, Mayor, Parent and other prominent citizens, and after a few words of welcome was driven to the Basilica. The great cathedral was crowded. Archbishop Bégin received Mgr. Falconio at the door and conducted him to a side altar where he donned his Bishop's robes. Rev. Mr. Arsenault, the Secretary of Archbishop Bégin, read the Pontifical brief appointing Mgr. Falconio Apostolic Delegate in Canada and defining the extent of his powers. The document was in Latin and in reply to inquiries subsequently, Mgr. Falconio said that he would decide tomorrow whether he would publish a translation of it. The Apostolic Delegate then proceeded up the aisle to the main altar, where he read a brief address, and his benediction pronounced. Somewhat unexpectedly, for those present had already begun to disperse, the Apostolic Delegate made a brief address. He thanked the clergy and people for the fine and most cordial reception which Quebec was widely known from an historical point of view, but it was also well known at Rome for the fidelity of its people. THE CHRISTIAN VIEW OF THE LABOR QUESTION.

REV. J. P. TREACY, D.D., IN LABOR DAY SOUVENIR.

Concluded from last week.

In advocating this view of a fair wage we are not deviating from the beaten track of Christian economy; we are but reaching in a faint whisper the echo of the apostle's words...

Noble words which should make the wage-earner of every creed and clime forever grateful to Leo XIII.

This should be the inalienable ambition of all Christian employers to secure namely to their workmen such a wage as will enable them to support themselves with something akin to human comfort.

Where the man stands alone in the battle of life and endeavours to secure for himself and those dependent upon him a fair compensation for the labor of his hands, he shall find, in many instances, that the right of capital not infrequently determines the rights of labor...

Trade unions and like societies established for the benefit of working classes should receive the hearty cooperation, not only of those for whom they are organized, but also of employers who ought to regard them not as the enemies of capital, but rather as the natural defenders of both labor and capital.

It is striking to be regretted that such an eminent economist should be obliged to hold the labor organizations responsible for some of those unhappy strikes which frequently disturb the peace of the community.

With these considerations in view, let all workingmen's associations meditate seriously and prayerfully before they come to this over violent and often unjust measure of securing redress for wrongs which might more easily be remedied by the equitable rational and useful system of arbitration.

tion. Here is where the state may interfere by establishing Boards of Arbitration, the decisions of which would effectively remove or forestall all the social grievances arising from the conflict between employer and employee.

THE NEGLECT OF THE LITURGY.

The London Weekly Register has the following: It is the fashion in the Church of England to talk of the Book of Common Prayer as "our incomparable liturgy," until some pious person once added "incomparable only so long as the weather is such as to which it is well adapted."

Exhausted, for a brief moment she sinks in a recline. Then rising, feeling better to the Holy Mother's shrine, the church lamp's shimmering crimson light, she gazes at the picture on the wall, and shows the beautiful likeness of Her we look upon.

But the general neglect extends not merely to the Divine Office, but to the Liturgy of the Mass itself. Of course Mass is said or sung and the laity hear it, but the Liturgy is neglected for all that. We do not content the Catholic liberty of every individual to use what devotions appeal to him most.

the same thing, we firmly believe that in neglecting the Liturgy, as we do we are throwing away a priceless heritage, in a healthy condition of affairs, Catholics must naturally have a liturgical spirit; if they have not there is something wrong.

THE PERSEVERENT.

(Written for The Register.) The great Cathedral's lofty space was filled with music grand. The organ began, sounded forth, played by some gifted hand.

She entered, and adown the aisle she quick, softly glided, The sanctuary railing she leans with our stationer's pride.

How dared I live in unbelief, when on Thy altar burned The light of faith celestial? Oh, faith, that I have sinned!

What reparation can I make? I unworthy am I Lord, And Thy poor, hungry child of sin may walk again in grace.

Exhausted, for a brief moment she sinks in a recline. Then rising, feeling better to the Holy Mother's shrine, the church lamp's shimmering crimson light, she gazes at the picture on the wall, and shows the beautiful likeness of Her we look upon.

With unpruned face and outstretched arms, her features strangely calm The peasant says, in tender tones: "Sweet Mother, here I am, my heart is all for thee, my Queen, that they who love thee, and sought Would never be unaided, so my needy self I brought.

SAM KRUGER TO HIS CAPTAINS

(WRITTEN FOR THE REGISTER.)

Said Kruger to his captives, "Boys the game is surely up For they're sending out against us Colonel Hughes. All we try our hand at capturing the Yankee sailing ship For this little plan of war is up the flag. I've a telegram from Lindsay (colloquial) where is that? And he says I'll come to eat you right away. For I've buckled on my belt and I'll clean the verdant world, So pack your kit and trek without delay."

Said Kruger to his captives "now the question is come to this Will you dare this dreadful column to a fight. His voice is wondrous high, and such fire is in his eye He can't see as well in daytime as at night. He's sailing from Toronto with a million men or more, With the heroes of Batouche and the North-west, And they're sure to kill and eat us as they did the sportive Meis, Shall we run or put their valor to the test?"

Said Joubert unto Kruger "Site I wouldn't counsel flight Tho' the crisis is a serious one Indeed. But I've kept some ammunition and 'tis now in prime condition As I've stored it up against the hour of need; It's ostrich eggs I've gathered (if the secret were to be told) And they're laid their primal freshness long ago, If with these the foe we shall—oh he'll never live to tell, For their potency is sure to lay him low."

Then Kruger grinned at Joubert, and Joubert grinned at him, And the captains clapped each other on the back. And they said "the mighty Hughes will be hungry from his cruise, So prepare the eggs and let him have the snack." And when the doughty Colonel sails across the heaving main, In his honor shall the Boers give a ball, Oh they'll sit them down to tea but I fear it won't agree With the stomach of that warrior at all.

IRISH ABBEYS.

BY THE REV. JAMES B. DOLLARD IN THE AVE MARIA.

Dear ruins of the glorious past, I gaze on you with misty eyes,— Your bare walls open to the skies, Your chances ebbing to the blast. Adare and Mellifont and Cong, Dunbrody by the gentle Nore, Within your cloisters now no more Sound matin prayer and vesper song. The ivy clothes you with its green, To hide each cruel rent and scar, O'er lichen-stone and fretted bar It flings alike a shelling screen.

Ah! lone are ye in bright midday When sunlight gladdens court and floor; Where oft they met in times of yore— Dim, shadowy figures come to pray.

And lone are ye when night winds blow, And through your murmuring arches steal; The pale moonlight that half reveals The banished face of tokening woe. Yet preach those walls of steadfast faith; They bridge for us the ages dim; They say: "This race was true to Him— Defying time and pain and death."

"These stones shall crumble and decay; But, like her hills that eye endures, Our Erin's faith, unchanged and pure, Shall live while empires pass away."

SHAMROCK LED COLUMBIA.

New York, Oct. 3.—As the sun set like a ball of fire behind the Nautilus hills, and the sparkling stars came out into the vast night heavens, the biggest crowd of sightseers and yachtsmen which ever gathered down to Sandy Hook to witness the start of a foreign cup hunter to westward from America's yachting capital, were on the water. The start of the Old Ocean had never been so grand and so full of interest as this. The winds from the west and south and the first international series of 1899 between the two greatest racing machines ever produced by England and America degenerated into a drifting match and the start was a far from exciting one. The British line in the time allotted by the rules to avoid wind was occupied by the Shamrock, which took the crew and crew, while the rules provide that it should be a quarter of a mile within and a half hour, the race is declared off. At the end of the time this event was held with the Shamrock leading by something more than a quarter of a mile. The committee officially declared that there had been no race. The yachts were then taken to low by their respective crews and brought back to their anchorage inside Sandy Hook. The Shamrock's crew had sailed out with the Shamrock leading by something more than a quarter of a mile. The committee officially declared that there had been no race. The yachts were then taken to low by their respective crews and brought back to their anchorage inside Sandy Hook.

The day promised wet at first. The sky was overcast and the wind was light. The Shamrock's crew had sailed out with the Shamrock leading by something more than a quarter of a mile. The committee officially declared that there had been no race. The yachts were then taken to low by their respective crews and brought back to their anchorage inside Sandy Hook. The Shamrock's crew had sailed out with the Shamrock leading by something more than a quarter of a mile. The committee officially declared that there had been no race. The yachts were then taken to low by their respective crews and brought back to their anchorage inside Sandy Hook.

By the Shamrock that led the way. Breeze fluky and variable. The race was a high sea race. The Shamrock's crew had sailed out with the Shamrock leading by something more than a quarter of a mile. The committee officially declared that there had been no race. The yachts were then taken to low by their respective crews and brought back to their anchorage inside Sandy Hook.

The feature of the race which pleased everybody was the perfectly clear sky. The Shamrock's crew had sailed out with the Shamrock leading by something more than a quarter of a mile. The committee officially declared that there had been no race. The yachts were then taken to low by their respective crews and brought back to their anchorage inside Sandy Hook.

On the way the Shamrock's crew had sailed out with the Shamrock leading by something more than a quarter of a mile. The committee officially declared that there had been no race. The yachts were then taken to low by their respective crews and brought back to their anchorage inside Sandy Hook.

The Columbia was admirably handled throughout the race. The Shamrock's crew had sailed out with the Shamrock leading by something more than a quarter of a mile. The committee officially declared that there had been no race. The yachts were then taken to low by their respective crews and brought back to their anchorage inside Sandy Hook.

At 11:17 the Columbia's spinnaker blossomed out to port, and she began at once to overhaul the Shamrock. For some reason, Captain Hogarth did not see fit to set the Shamrock's spinnaker until four minutes after the Columbia had set hers. But as soon as it was set the overhauled boat began to hold her own.

At 11:30 the Columbia's starboard quarter, the after mast, and the mainmast, which were unable to hold the wind better, and pulled out fully five lengths ahead of the Columbia. Both yachts were gaining considerably on the westward, and the Shamrock, which had been steadily gaining, was quite an eighth of a mile ahead of the Columbia.

On board the Shamrock, besides the captain, Hogarth and White, there were William Thompson, the steward, and Hugh Kelly, the crew member representing the New York Yacht Club. The Columbia, meanwhile, under jib and mainmast, was reaching out to sea.

On board the Columbia, besides C. Oliver Iselin and Mrs. Iselin, there were Captain Sir Hercules, Mr. Butler, Mr. Duncan, Mr. Woodbury Kane, Herbert Leeds, Newbury Thomas and Hugh Kelly, the crew member representing the New York Yacht Club.

At 11:30 the Shamrock's preparatory signal, a blue peter, was set on board the Shamrock. The Columbia's crew was hoisted on the trapeze at 11:35. At the same time a tug started to log on the course of 15 miles to the westward.

During the interval of 15 minutes between the preparatory signal and the start, the Shamrock's crew had sailed out with the Shamrock leading by something more than a quarter of a mile. The committee officially declared that there had been no race. The yachts were then taken to low by their respective crews and brought back to their anchorage inside Sandy Hook.

WHAT WE HAVE PLANNED IN CARPETS.... For Early Fall Selling.

And for this house to plan is to do. The first season in our new store augurs well for the future. Our many old customers, as well as hundreds of new customers, speak in glowing terms of the excellence of everything within its walls. The store itself, of course, attracts attention. Like the goods we sell, and like our methods, it is distinct of itself away from the ordinary.

The way the goods are displayed and the varied assortment renders it easy to an eye contemplating home-furnishing to make a good selection. The store is big—largeness marks it—and yet it is not a whit too big for the enormous quantity of goods that have been pouring in the last five or six weeks. To emphasize these, we give a short description of some of our "Creations"—goods only to be had in this store:

and, just as the signal was given he gybed the Shamrock again, crossing the line 27 seconds after the signal. Official time, Shamrock, 11:15:37. Columbia, 11:18:20. So the Shamrock had the best of the start by forty-three seconds. The intention of setting the Shamrock to break out her stay sail and balloon jib topsail, the Shamrock broke out her No. 2 jib topsail. At 11:17 the Columbia's spinnaker blossomed out to port, and she began at once to overhaul the Shamrock. For some reason, Captain Hogarth did not see fit to set the Shamrock's spinnaker until four minutes after the Columbia had set hers. But as soon as it was set the overhauled boat began to hold her own.

A Tale of the Sea.

It was in the late sixties that the brig Gazelle sailed from Boston for Sierra Leone, West Coast of Africa. She arrived after a while, and having landed her cargo departed for Bathurst, to the northward. The coast was very rough, and the wind blowing in a gale. Before the Gazelle reached Bathurst the first mate and one of the sailors came with the fever, and in three or four days were dead. The survivors were not permitted to land, but the boats were to be taken away from the vessel to the water of the coast. They were compelled to take the best of the sea in small boats and then return the unfortunate of the town's refusal to permit them to land, saying they had landed men dead of the fever, and the crew had to be taken aboard the Gazelle, fed, and cared for. The quarantine was long, before the Gazelle was allowed to anchor her business at Bathurst, but finally she landed a cat, a dog, and then to look around for men to take the place of the dead mate and sailor. It was for these men that they got out to sea, but at last they did get one native, black, and they they sailed for home.

visions and national instruments, were sent to the Gazelle. The first mate of the arrival brought up from the boat a fourth man, with hollow cheeks and eyes burning with fever. Who was a doctor what had happened. So every thing turned out for the best. The master of the Diana hustled about and got things in order. The crew of the bark had brought in plenty more than enough for both. The brig furnished a sound vessel, which was exactly what the captain of the bark wanted, and the master of the Diana could take the survivors of the Gazelle home, which was all they then asked for.

What she, not good would not be so much, and with heart broke a sob he begged of the good Lord to spare that dear one. He would do anything. He would give his life for the glory of God, if he would only spare his mother. When he returned home the doctor told him that he mother was very ill and that she required a great deal of rest. Night after night he watched by his mother's bed, and many and fervent were the prayers he offered for her recovery, and she did recover, but very slowly, and when she was well enough he desired her to go to him. It was that they should leave the father who was but a nurse to them, and go to Rome.

What will we do with him? demanded the kind donor of her husband. "Who keep him, dear one, we are helpless and have room in our hearts for him." So that it was that little Nino began his life with his first friend in Rome. Years rolled on, and a day he did not give up his search for his mother. He prayed to the good God, who had given him his mother to love, and again he offered his life to him. He was not going to let the priesthood and much of his time was occupied. He was not going to let his life to God, for he was going to instruct those who had never heard of their Maker. All this he did with love and consolation in his thoughts. But, oh! if he could only find his mother.

The Gazelle was marked by fate, scarcely was she ten days out when her captain was taken sick with the deadly fever and soon died. During the master's illness the second mate had taken charge of the brig, but the day of the captain's death he himself came down with the fever and ten days afterwards was buried at sea. His death was followed by that of one of the crew, who was buried the day after the mate. It appeared as if this man had died from the fever, but he had been certain from the beginning that he would take the fever, which surely enough he did. They were all buried in their clothes, as they had died. It was no pleasant task for the survivors to drop these men one by one into the sea, knowing well that after the second mate was gone no one was left who could navigate a vessel. To this was added the horror whether they themselves would not all come down with the fever, and they speculated as to whose body would be left on board, since there was no one left to cast it into the sea.

FROM SUNRISE TO SUNSET. Written for The Register, by Aileen Thealon. The sun was beating down with all his great power, and the heat in the southern part of Italy. The heat had been intense all day, but now the sun was on its way westward, its glare would soon soften and then leave all in peace and undisturbed rest. But little Nino was not in peace, a wild temper was raging in his heart, for he had not been beaten and driven from his home! And for what? You would ask; - protecting his mother, from the cruel blows of his drunken father.

When he was in the front room as usual. He called "Mother! Mother dear, where are you?" A feeble, heart-broken sob reached his ears from the bedroom. "What had happened to his beloved mother? Oh! that brute had struck her so violently that she had fallen insensible on the floor and had been there sobbing and moaning ever since. Tenderly he lifted her poor aching head and placed a pillow underneath it and then sat beside her and thought. He would go for the kind doctor. Yes, he would pay him; for had he not sold oranges on the street for the past month, on the day. So after he had seen the kind doctor and conducted him to the house, he went to his favorite haunt, just a staid little nook by a neighboring stream, for there he was safe for his father knew not of this place.

But how give strength to the weak one, and as it befall that after long efforts three men from the brig succeeded in getting one of their boats into the water, right side in, fortunately, and later on the wretched crew of the Diana, with their clothes provisions and national instruments, were sent to the Gazelle. The first mate of the arrival brought up from the boat a fourth man, with hollow cheeks and eyes burning with fever. over all, 88 inches in diameter in the center, and weighs in its finished state, about 75,000 pounds; as a rough casting it was much heavier, of course, a hole 15 inches in diameter having to be bored in the center. In the four-inch diameter, there are 20 inches in length, leaving a length of some 20 feet between the center, the diameter is 30 inches. The vast proportions characterizing all the other features of this undertaking will be further understood when it is stated that the flywheel weighs 75 tons.

SCATTERING "DEEDS OF KINDNESS." "That's a Canadian idea. I can't take that," said the post-office clerk. The child looked at the rejected coin at a time at the unmetamorphosed perplexity. "Here a dime—ill change with you," said a young woman standing gratefully. "I ran all the way to get mamma's mail in time—and it would have been too late if I had had to go home."

PHILADELPHIA RECORD.—The big exhibition at Niagara Falls will be the occasion of what will doubtless be a brilliant and startling illumination. The idea is to erect a series of tall towers on both the American and Canadian sides of the river. On the top of the lofty spires huge electric searchlights will be placed in such a manner that they may be placed on any part of the falls. The illumination may produce the dazzling effects that will be produced when a score of those powerful instruments of illumination are brought to bear upon the rushing waters as they tumble irresistibly over the rocky ledge into the depths beneath. A constant change of color will be used in the manipulation of the searchlights, so that now the falls will be like molten silver, again a flood of crimson, again as green as old sea weed, and so on through the whole gamut of the painter's pallet. The astonishing effect will be still further brightened by the use of electric arc lights in the cave of the winds, which will give the water as it falls in front of a weird, phosphorescent glow. The power of this record-breaking illumination will be all within easy reach, as Niagara will itself be made to do all the necessary work.

HOUSEHOLD WORDS.—The Turkish authorities have discovered a regular Tom Tiddler's ground at the bottom of the sea. A hundred and thirty years ago next July a famous sea fight took place off Thesme, an Asiatic-Turkish coast, between the Russians and the Turks. Count Alexis Orlov, the Russian admiral, defeated the Turkish fleet there on July 15, 1770. With great losses on both sides, and now the sea gives up its treasures from the bottom of the Aegæan. The divers report that the whole ground about the wreck is covered with a gigantic carpet of silver coins. In view of the immense yield of treasure the operation thus far has been confined to the Russian flag-ship, which lies at a depth of a little over 130 feet. A very large amount of Venetian, Austrian and Russian gold pieces have been brought to light. Besides the coin, bars of gold, gold and silver crosses, medals and religious images, silver and gold services, a Bible bound in silver, and adorned in gems, etc., have been found.
