The privilege of affixing double duty and thereby remedying defects, though a valuable one, is not quite so broad as is sometimes supposed. To be effectual, it should be done as soon as the holder acquires knowledge of the want of stamps, or of the defective stamping in the first instance. Another peculiarity of double stamping is that there is only one regular way of cancelling the stamps, and that is by writing across them the date at which they are affixed, and also the name or initials of the holder. This should be done by the holder r by some one with his authority. To constitute a regular stamping in the first instance it is necessary that stamps of the proper denomination shall be affixed and cancelled by the maker or some one on his behalf at the time the instrument is made. The cancellation in this case may be in any one of several ways. 1st, by writing upon the stamps the signature, or some part of the signature, or the initials of the maker. 2nd, by writing some integral or material part of the instrument so as (as far as practical) to identify each stamp with the instrument to which it is attached. 3rd, by writing or stamping upon the adhesive stamp the date at which it is affixed, which must be done at the time of affixing it. This last is the mode usually adopted, though perhaps not always the most safe one, because the statute further provides that a note shall be considered as improperly stamped if the date on the stamp does not correspond with the date of the note. Hence it seems plain that if a note chance to be unsigned until after the day of its date it cannot by this mode be regularly cancelled at all, since on the one hand it must be cancelled when the instrument is made, and with the date at which it is made; and on the other hand this date must correspond with the date of the instrument. The same objection does not seem to apply to an obiteration by either of the other modes the name or initials of the maker, would appear to be at once the most safe and the most simple. It is, no doubt, annoying to an ordinary man of business to have to keep a constant watch that none of these minutiæ are overlooked, but a knowledge of the require ments of the law in this particular respect once acquired is easily remembered, and habit would soon make it easy to see that they were complied with. When it is remembered that severe penalties are attached to each breach of these laws, in addi tion to the instrument being made void, the risks that are constantly run become evident. It is foolhardy for those, at least, whose business involves a daily handling of negotiable securities, to disregard the forms imposed for the collection of revenue

HATHAM, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1877

It is to be presumed that our lumber anufacturers understand their own business best, vet it may not be amiss for us to give expression to what a good many of them may already know, viz. the United States since 1st July, 1877, that at no time, during the past four or five years, has the necessity for caution n lumber operations been greater than it now appears to be. About the beginning of October there seemed to be a prospect that stocks in the lumber ports of Great Britain would John U. Loggle, Thomas Ve. Alex. G. It much better, therefore, that business should be narrowed down to a minimum, for a year or two, than that large opera tions should be carried on at loss of both > money and business prestige. The Miramichi has always occupied an enviable position as a lumber port. Its George McLeod wood trade, beginning with the export of small quantities of timber, which required the most simple appliances in its preparation, has increased in volume, year by year, for more than three quar ters of a century, calling into existence the great milling establishments of the the commercial enterprise and mechanical skill of the Province. Its lumber parties. manufacturers have, hitherto, conducted their business in such a manner as to place the reputation of the Miramichi on a par with that of St. John and Quebec in the great wood markets abroad—a distinction of which they should be jealous when there are indications that it may be jeopardized. They have equalled, or, speaking relatively, surpassed the lumber merchants of the other great ports in proving their solid business ability and enterprise-now, let them show that they possess also the business caution which the condition of the wood market is calculated to teach, and take the lead in checking the ab normal supply which threatens to render the lumber business worse than unprofitable. We know it will cost much o accomplish the desired end, but it is better that some sacrifices should be made now and the necessary check be voluntarily applied, than that the duty should be enforced by the unpleasant and imperative logic of a series of transactions which may leave nothing behind save magnificent milling estab-

> THE OLDEST EDITOR in the Province is Adam Smith, Esq., of the St. Andrews Standard. He is not satisfied with his experience, as the following shows :-

"You want money, oh yes," he said, "when you go to Glasgow, Greenock, or the other harbor, for you to go home.
Here some money. Pay me back in a letter."

He took out a well-worn leather purse, on the outside of which were large initials worked in gold beads.

"My vife," he said, with a proud smile, "my vife do that—yes. Here some money forr you."

He offered her three Napoleons, which she took. But meanwhile she had quickly undone from round her neck the chain to which was attached a small and pretty silver watch that Nicol Lewis had bought for her in Stornoway.

Both of these—while she was too much into the shop.

It was a strange place. There was no one at all in the front portion of it; and behind, in the gloom, she could see another largeapartment, filled with large to ask for news of glass, and gilded decorations. It seemed hopeless to her to ask for news of Alister Lewis she could not believe now that this city in which she had heard him speak.
But as her eyes got accustomed to the twilight she saw there were two dusky figures coming along through that lumber of window frames and gilded mirrors; and as they came they
