COMMUNICATION.

To the Editor of the Standard.

" I will judge his bouse for ever, for the iniquity which he kneweth; because his sons made them-selves vile, and he restrained them not." Samuel.

For several years it has been my intention

The importance of education is universally parental love and parental carelessness and admitted, better that it were universally felt. Every rational being ought to be aware of the value of the mind, and of the necessity of cultivating it, and how awfully important the charge that devolves upon those to whom the care of an immortal soul is consigned. Parents are uniformly anxious to provide for the bodily wants of their children. Their conscience and the world would upraid them, did they act otherwise. They would view their own conduct with horror, if by neglect or improper treatment they had injured the health of their offspring, or caused deformity in feature or limb. This is right;—but how little do they think of the deformity and depravature or limb. This is right;—but how little do they think of the deformity and depravation of mind in the young, which their neglect occasions. They know, but they do not feel, that the intelligent and immortal spirit excels the sluggish clay, farther than the brightest jewel does the casket that contains it,—that the body however much admired and caressed, must soon moulder in the dust, while the nobler mental principle loosed from the tie that binds it to earth, bursts into a important duty of education, are in general. the tie that binds it to earth, bursts into a important duty of education, are in general new and enlarged sphere of existence where decay and death are unknown,—that all bodily embellishments must perish with the passage.

Amid the multiplicity of their pursuits, which sing moment, but impressions made, and principles implanted in the mind, will be received before the tribunal of Omniscience, most important one of all. They forget, or ceived before the tribunal of Omniscience, and will remain till the countless ages of eternity shall cease to roll.

The parent becomes the object of misery to his child by instilling wrong principles, into its mind, or by carelessly allowing it to imbibe them from others; and when, by such error or neglect, future happiness is endangered the responsibility of the parent is awiul. It is his duty to use all proper means of imparting instruction to his child, and in this way he not only does a positive good, but takes the very best method of preventing a serious evil. Education is the prevention of crime. I mean a moral, and religious as well as an intellectual education. Without it crime must prevail to a fearful extent notwithstanding the most rigid enforcement of penal laws. Leave a child to take any direction in the current of life, which chance may give, and it is scarcely possible for it to escape crimin.

Many attempt to execuse their want of parental care by pretending to let their children choose their own course of life, at an age when their judgement is by no means adequate the children that the children and some good to the young effected.

Yours &c.

DISCIPULUS. Many attempt to execuse their want of prential care by pretending to let their children choose their own course of life, at an age when their judgement is by no means adequate to the task, and perhaps without proper previous mental culture. Such conduct is equally ly criminal and absurd. First the child is neglected till youth is nearly past, and then is nearly past, and then is easily past, and then is a lowed to choose his future course in life with an uncultivated or perverted judgement to assist him in his choice; and when he left the East, is now in the kingston Peneteniary.—American Paper. We have no doubt that a similar or worse to misery and ruin, the parent consolers himself with the reflection that he forewarn, ger when it was too late, instead of seasons ger when it was too late, instead of seasons ger when it was too late, instead of seasons ger when it was too late, instead of seasons ably leading him in a proper course, that would have ensured at least temporal happin. The conscious first adwant of its utility is made, the third was too late, instead of the every laudable experience of fancy articles, the daughter to the store with a large group of her sex, and soon became conscious not only of the presence of her far they with an uncultivated or perverted judgement to assist him in his choice; and when he left the East, is now in the kingston Peneteniary.—American Paper.

How often does it happen that those who, in their anxiety to acquire riches, neglect the instruction of their children, and deprive themselves of rational enjoyments, find their wealth a curse instead of a blessing; and go down to the grave with the bitter reflection that their time has been mispent, and that all the fruits of their care and toil, will soon be squandered by those whom their negligence to publish some thoughts on education, which have been suggested by observation, experience, and reflection on the subject. As yet I have been diverted from my purpose, but now at length I have made a beginning, and I send you this letter, as the first of a series for publication. fection, viz. the happiness of their children I have often wondered at the great degree of The importance of education is universally parental love and parental carelessness an

MY MOTHER'S BIBLE.

BY G. P. MORRIS.

This book is all that's left me now Tears will unbidden start— With faltering lip and throbbing brow, I press it to my heart.

For many generations past,
Here is our family tree;
My mother's hands this Bible clasped— She. dying, gave it me.

Ah well do I remember those Whose names these records bear; Who round the hearth-stone used to close, After the evening prayer,
And speak of what these pages said,
In terms my heart would thrill!
Though they are with the silent dead,

Here are they living still! My father read this holy book To brothers, sisters dear— How calm was my poor mother's look, Who leaned God's word to heart! Her angel face-I see it yet! What thronging memories come! Again that little group is met Within the walls of home!

Thou truest friend man ever knew. Thy constancy I've tried; When all were false, I found thee true, My Councellor and guide. The mines of earth no treasure give That could this volume bny. In teaching me the way to live, It taught me how to die.

WHEN THE SUN SINKS TO REST.

When the sun sinks to rest. And the star of the west Sheds its soft silver light o'er the sea, What sweet thoughts arise, As the dim twilight dies-For then I am thinking of thee! Qh! then crowding fist Come the joys of the past, Through the dimness of days long gone by, Like the stars peeping out, Through the darkness about, From the soft silent depth of the sky.

Grows more lovely and bright,
With the clustering of planet and star, So this darkness of mi Wins a radiance divine From the light that still lingers afar. Then welcome the night, With its soft holy light! In its silence my heart is more free. The rude world to forget,

Where no pleasure I've met
Since the hour that I parted from thee.

Had the waters of Ontario come booming up the Falls, thus appellingly reversing the order of nature, the lover could not have been more completely stupified than he was by this a.

Rate that the times are hard. It is a fact; times are not as they "used to was" in New Or-leans. People are in want of almost everything, and among the most important wants of the day may be classed the following:

There is a pretty general want of hard cash prevalent, and this gives rise to innumerable wants, some of which we are about naming.

Shopkeepers want customers, and customers want the wherewithal for shopping.

Young ladies want lovers, and lovers seem to want to get married in these times for no other reason in the world than because they have nothing else to do.
