Pekin, Feb. 27.—Shih-Siu, former Grand Scoretary, and Hsu-Cheng-Yu, son of the notorious Hsu-Tung, were publicly beheaded yesterday. The street in which the execution took place was guarded by French, German and American troops. The condemned officials were taken to the ground in carts, escorted by a company of Japanese infantry. Chih-Siu met his fate in a dignified manner, walking from the cart calmly and fearlessly. Hsu-Cheng Yu was stupified with optum. John Dillon Makes a Lot of Baseless Charges - Address in Reply to the King Carried.

London, Feb. 27.—During the course of a statement on public business in the House of Commons yesterday. Mr. Bulfour, the Government leader, mentioned the fact that the supplementary estimates for this year would be very heavy, including over £1,000,000 for the navy and £3,000,000 for the army.

"Not since the days of the Romans," said John Dillon (Irish Nationalist), on the resumption of the debate on the address in ceply to the King's speech at the opening of Parliament, 'had an army made a habit of capturing women and children as the British soldiers in South Africa were doing. This,' Mr. Dillon added, "was cruel and cowardly. To put Boer women on half-rations because their husbands had not sucrendered, as was the undensied practice in the reconcentrado camps, was worthy of the worst brigands of Sicily and Greece. This plan of stacving women

Ottawa, Feb. 27.-In the Commons resterday Mr. Costigan gave notice of a resolution of the House protesting saint, and the sacrifice of mass, as they are now used in the Church of Rome, are superstitious and idolatrous. And I do solemnly, in the presence of God, profess, testify and declare that I do make this declaration and each and every part thereof in the plain and erdinary sense of the words read unto me as they are commonly understood by English Protestants, without any evasion, equivocation or mental reservation whatsoever, and without any dispensation now granted me for this purpose by the rope off any such dispensation from any person whatsoever, or without any hope of any such dispensation from any person or authority whatsoever, or without thinking that I am or can be acquitted before God or man, or absolved of this declaration of any part thereof, although the Pope or any other person or persons or power whatsoever should dispense with or annul the same of declaration that it was null and void from the against the King's coronation declaration. He expressed the hope that the Government would accept it as a "friendly" motion, and not as a motion of want of confidence, although he intended to move it on going into supply. But instead of merely indi-cating the scope of the proposed motion, as Sir Wilfrid Laurier suggested, Mr. Costigan read it through, so it stands as a notice in its present form, and must be accepted or rejected by the Government as it reads. Had the mover fallen in with the Premier's suggestion it might have been possible to modify it after consultation, if deemed necessary, in order to ensure its adoption by the administration and House. Mr. Costigan's no tice of motions reads:that it was null and void from the beginning. "That such declaration is most of-

Sad Scenes Around the Mouth of the Pit-Wives and Mothers Wailing f r Lost On s.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Feb. 27.—A special to the Tribune from Kémmerer, Wyo, says:—A disastrous fire in the Diamondville coal mine, No. 1, last evening was attended by serious loss of life and great destruction of property. Some fifty miners were entombed, and all perished but John Anderson, who was working near the mouth of the level. When Anderson relized the mine was on fire he threw a heavy overcoat over his head and shoulders, and with much difficulty pushed his way through the flames and reached the main lead, completely exhausted and terribly burned. All efforts to reach those entombed have failed, as the flames drove the rescuers back. That all have perished is without question. Weeping mothers, wives and sweethearts gathered about the mine. All efforts to calm them proved of no avail. The loss of property will reach an enormous figure. Salt Lake City, Utah, Feb. 27 .- A below Pikeville. Mr. Delmage stated that his translather Taylor, who was also the grandfather of Gilbert J. Taylor, of this city, was well acquainted with the location of the gunboat which lies sunk near Pikeville. The spars of the boat protruded from the water and one day in the early years of the century, Mr. Taylor cut a piece of wood from one of the masts and fashioned a bootjack from the piece of the wreck of one of King George's navy. Cannon ballahave frequently been picked up in the vicinity of Pikevil'e and a history of the boat would be interesting. It may be that the boat was sunk to prevent its falling into the enemy's hands during the war of 1812. History tells us General Proctor sank all his boats somewhere in the Thames.

Goshen, Ind., Feb. 27. - Passenger train No. 9, on the Wabash Railroad from Buffalo-to Chicago, was wrecked two miles west of Millersburg, at 9.35 a. m. yesterday. The accident was caused by a broken rail. The engine passed over the break in safety, but the six cars following left the rails and one of them, the rear Pullmen, rolled over on its side and slid down 25-foot embankment. Of the forty or more passengers in the train, not one escaped injury, twelve being severely hurt, some of whom probably will die. The railroad officials were prompt in securing medical aid, and in a shert time surgeons were murrying to the scene of the wreck on special trains from every available point in Northern Indiana. The Lake Shore officials made up a special train, and also carried doctors to the relief of the injured. The little hotels at Millersburg and Benton, several miles from the scene of the wreck, were turned into hospitals. No deaths are thus far reported, but some of the anjured are in a critical condition. The arew of the train escaped injury. Three Canadians were among the injured, Charles Boxart, of Chatham, Ontario, being one of them. one escaped injury, twelve being Chatham, Ontarix, being one of them. His eye, head and shoulder are thurt.

The Funr y Man in Young's Opera Com pany is a Chatham Boy.

John E. Young, director of the Young Opera Company, which opens an engagement of four nights at the Grand to-night, is a Chatham boy. He has two brothers, Dan and Holly, the former of whom put on an amateur production of Girofli-Girofla here four years ago. Both have many friends in this city, who will be glad to welcome them. He is a very clever young man and has made a great reputation for himself. The Alpena News says concerning him: "Appearing as the merrymaker in five dif-ferent operas, he displays a versatil-ity and originality seldom seen in so varied a repertoire. His make-up is varied a repertoire. His make-up is always extremely humorous and his entrance on the stage the signal for a burst of laughter. Never at a loss to supply original "business," always ready to respond with alacrity to any pun or joke, he keeps the audience convulsed every moment he is in view. His stage presence is that of the accomplished actor, and his monologue of extreme distinctness. In fact, we might without hesitation to in him in the language of the stage, "as smooth a guy as ever came down the pike."

GET RID OF THE SURPLUS TREES.

If by "tree trimming" the council means tree butchering, save us. But if it proposes to have all the surplus trees in the city removed the work cannot be commenced any too soon. The beauty of a maple tree is in its natural growth. Trim or cut it and its natural beauty is spoiled. Actificial decoration can be produced at any time, even by butchering a tree, but the beautiful, natural, spreading growth of a maple can only be obtained by years of care. But we have too many of these trees at least twice over. They are growing so close together they are preventing each other spreading. The city is overspread with them to such an extent that physicians tell us the dampness caused is a menace to health. Consequently, with advantage to ourselves and with improvement to the trees remaining we can spare about half or more of the present total. But it is to be hoped a competent landscape expert will be secured to mark those which must go. The wood in the trees ought to pay for their removal, and the city should be able to afford the expense of a capable expert to do the rest.

CANADIAN NICKEL AND COPPER.

There is an article on the copper and nickel industries of Canada in the February number of the Labor Gazette which gives a lucid statement of the whole business, what it has grown from, and what it may grow to. The production of copper in the last six years in Canada has increased from $739,659 worth in 1894 to $2,655,319 worth in 1899. The amount of fine matte produced at Sudbury has increased from $4,907,430 worth in 1894 to $5,744,000° worth in 1899.

Canada's fine position in regard to nickel is shown by the statement that the world's production in the year 1898 was placed at 6,116 metric tons, to which amount New Caledonia-contributed 3.608 tions, the United States 5. tons, and Ontario 2,503 tons. Ontario's chare is thus 40.8 per cent. of the total. It is British Columbia that is, making big strides in the production of copper, its output increasing in value from $16,234 in 1894 to $1,351,453 in 1899. Ontario, of course, produces the nickel, but New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and British Columbia may be expected to cut a figure in the nickel business ere long. New mines are to production. NOT WORTH PAYING.

We want the Banner-News to distimetly and emphatically understand that its allegation that The Planet | Buffalo is allowed to cross the river and run charged it "with being in the pay of certain 'foreign' contractors " is wholly incorrect, is untrue, to be plain, only real advertising medium in Westwishes for its juvenile contemporary, but it cannot allow itself to be used by the said juvenile contemporary to obtain in the public estimation a fictitious standing.

To say that the Banner-News was in the pay of foreign contractors would be to allege that it had been bought. To admit that it had been bought would be to admit a belief that it was worth buying. The conscience of this journal would never permit such an admission. It too far. We never said couldn't truthfully say, and didn't intend to say, that we believe the B.-N.'s influence has any value intrinsic or otherwise. That is why The Planet objects to the use of the word "pay." By its article our esteemed contemparary would lead the public to beleive that The Planet thought some cute foreign contractor had come in here, recognized the over-whelming importance and superior influence of the B.-N., and at once subsidized it. Foreign contractors, of course, are in the habit of paying for what they can get for nothing. They may have sized up our local cotem and found it could be played for what the boys call a "sucker," but they would hardly be foolish enough to waste money on it. It has done their work just as well without it.

Are we to understand that Mr. Ste phens, by voting with the government on the recent division, signified his opposition to a bonus to the beet sugar industry? If so, he is breaking many pledges he made during the late election campaign to do all he could for the agricultural community. However, the vote was not strictly on the question of a bounty. But the discussion showed that the government had no intention of giving the bonus. Therefore Mr. Stephens is in this peculiar position: He has been sent by Kent to support the Laurier government. If he does so and op-

Still they are probably no worse than the crowd of played out politicians who now frescot what is called the high court bench. It is nearly time we adopted the American system and elected our judges. Then if we selected men of such calibre as now decorate the bench it would be our own fault.

While chatting about the oddities of reportorial life a Philadelphia newspaper man, who spent a day in the city last week, told a queer story of a midnight interview. "It occurred years ago," he said, "when I was holding down my first regular job on the local staff. Like all cubs I had been told at the outset to simply hang around the office within call of the city editor, if he should happen to need me; but, not understanding the necessity of having a reserve of that kind, I chafed terribly under the haction and I chafed terribly under the inaction and thought vaguely that I must be in dis-

and enthusiasing to the desk one night and told hurriedly to go out and get an integriew with a prominent lawyer who was leading a citizens' antivice crusade that had recently been started among the chronic reformers. This lawyer—call him Thompson for convenience—was understood to be planning a bitter attack on the police, and the tip had just come in that he intended to open fire next day. 'It's now nearly midnight,' said the city editor, 'and he's probably been in bed for hours, but I'll depend on you to route him out but I'll depend on you to route him out en's sake, don't let him stand you off! 'I'll get him, sir,' I replied fervently, "if I have to drag him out by the feet. I realized pretty fully what the interview meant not only to the paper, but to my own future prospects, and as I hurried toward the residential section I determined to make Thompson talk or perish in the attempt.

"I found his house without much diffi-"I found his house without much difficulty—it was a dark, gloomy looking mansion in a quiet side street—and was about to pull the bell when the door opened suddenly and a man appeared on the threshold. He had on his hat and overcoat, and, while I had never met the lawyer, his general appearance was about what I had expected. We both started back in surprise, but he was the first to recover himself. 'What do you want?' he asked.
'I'm a reporter for The —,' I replied,
'and I presume you are Mr. Thompson.'
I am,' he said curtly, 'and I ask you again what you want?' That was a bad beginning, and I hastened to tell him briefly the nature of my errand. 'H-m-m,' he grunted, stepping outside and closing the door. 'This is a most unearthly hour to disturb a man for an interview.' 'But to disturb a man for an interview.' 'But you seem about to go out, sir,' I suggest-ed. 'Perhaps you will let me accompany ed. He was brusque and reticent at first, but presently he warmed to the subject and presently he warmed to the subject and began to talk in a way that promised a rattling good article. "The only police protection we have in the city at present,' he said, 'is the protection given to lawbreakers at so much month, and the citizen and taxpayer a month, and the citizen and taxpayer have to look out for themselves. It is mere chance and luck that keep my residence in town from being lobted. If the police made a determined effort to stop burglaries, they would shut off the reveburglaries, they would shut on the help-nue of the very gentlemen who are help-ing to buy them bread and meat and ing to buy them bread on in this vichampagne.' I dashed up the stairs four steps at a time, grabbed a pad of paper and began to write like mad. When the city editor glanced over the first few pages, his eyes stuck out of their sock-ets. 'Why, this is the hottest stuff on record!' he exclaimed. 'I never knew Thompson to turn loose in any such style! Are you sure you are quoting him correctly? 'Dead certain,' I replied. 'I was surprised at him myself and took particular pains to fix his exact expressions on my mind. 'All right, then,' said the city editor, grinning. 'We'll double lead this! It will wake up the town.'

"My story, as nearly as I remember covered about a column, and when I went home after turning in the last sheets I had a pleasant premonition that the night's work would make me peculiarly solid with the paper. I got up in a hap-py frame of mind next morning and went to the office somewhat earlier than usual, so as not to miss any stray congratula-tions on my big hit. To my astonishment I found the managing editor and city editor in excited conference and several strangers standing around, all talking at once. 'Here he is!' yelled the city editor once. 'Here he is!' yelled the city editor as soon as he saw me. 'What in thunder does this mean, sir?' 'What does what mean?' I stammered, scared half out of my wits. 'Why, this fake!' he bawled. 'This blankety blanked fairy story your ran in on us last night!' And he shook the paper under my nose, with my article on the outside fold. 'That is no fake!' I retorted indignantly. 'Mr. Thompson said every word I wrote.' 'The — he did!' he screamed. 'Why, you infernal fakir, here is Mr. Thompson right now, and he says he never saw you in his life!' I stared helplessly at the group, and a I stared helplessly at the group, and a solemn looking gentleman stepped forward. 'One moment, please,' he said to the others. The nests are the harboring places for lice and need overhauling oftenest. Chickens are fond of fime and sand in the proportion commonly used for plastering.

Feeding just enough food to keep, the flock alive affords no material either for growth or eggs. The moderate use of limewater in the food or drink is good for the general bealth of the fowls.

When a series of roosts is so ar. nged that the rear roosts are higher than those in front, the hens will always seek the higher places and crowd each other until they are uncomfortable. Nearly all of the medium sized birds are more active and easier to raise than the larger varieties. The demand in market is also in favor of a carcass of medium size, especially if fat, plump and nicely dressed. Clover contains two elements that are in demand by the hens-nitrogen and lime. It is rich in the elements required for the white (albumen) and the shell, and if plenty of it be provided no better food can be given.

BELL WITH A CUMOUS HISTORY. Plays an Important Part In a Tragedy on the Missouri River.

There hangs in the belfry of the little Christian church in the town of Savan-nah in Andrew county, Mo., a bell which has a most remarkable history. In 1852 there occurred at Lexington the most dis-astrous accident which ever befell a steamboat on the Missouri river, and one attended with the greatest loss of human life. The Saluda, a side wheel steam er with a battery of two boilers, was on its way up the river with a cargo of gen-eral merchandise and its cabin and lower deck crowded with passengers, the most of whom were Mormons.

The river was unusually high, and the current as it came around the point just above the town was extremely strong. To add to these difficulties the river was full of floating ice which had broken loose from a gorge higher up. Captain Francis T. Belt, commander of the boat, had made recently offerts to stem the had made repeated efforts to stem the rapid current, but had as often failed. At last, on the morning of April 9, after waiting several days for the flood to subside, he again ordered steam to be raised for a final effort. He went to the engine room, looked at the steam gauge and ask-ed the engineer how many more pounds of steam it could stand. On being answered that it had already every pound that it could safely carry he gave the comit could safely carry he gave the command, "Fill it up; put on more steam," and remarked to the engineer, with an oath, that he would round the point or blow it up. He then retired to the hurricane roof, rang the bell and gave the final command to "cast loose the lines." The bow of the boat turned gently out into the stream as it was caught by the current. The ensistes made but one revolution. Then tines made but one revolution. Then came the terrible explosion, and all was chaos, darkness and death. The number of those who lost their lives by the explosion was never known. About 100 bodies were recovered, and it was supposed that there were as many more victims whose remains were never found. Nearly all the officers of the boat were killed.

The bell which had just sounded the deathknell of so many unfortunate ones was blown high up on the bank, where it was found uninjured. It was bought, with what remained of the wreck, by old Casper Gruber, who afterward sold it to the Christian church at Savannah, and for nearly half a century it has hung in the belfry there. On any Sabbath morn-ing its clear, silvery meals can be heard as it calls the congregation to the house of God, but it is doubtful if there is on among them who knows aught of the sad trag of connected with its history

This lawyer—call him Thompson for convenience-was understood to be planning a bitter attack on the police, and the tip had just come in that he intended to open fire next day. 'It's now nearly midnight,' said the city editor, 'and he's probably been in bed for hours, and he's probably been in bed for hours, but I'll depend on you to route him out and get some kind of a talk. For heaven's sake blon't let him stand you off!' I'll get him, sir,' I replied fervently, "if I have to drag him out by the feet.' I realized pretty fully what the interview meant not only to the paper, but to my own future prospects, and as I hurried toward the residential section I determined to make Thompson talk or perish mined to make Thompson talk or perish in the attempt.

"I found his house without much difficulty—it was a dark, gloomy looking man-sion in a quiet side street—and was about to pull the bell when the door opened sud-denly and a man appeared on the thresh-old. He had on his hat and overcoat, and, while I had never met the lawyer, his general appearance was about what I had expected. We both started back in surprise, but he was the first to recover himself. 'What do you want?' he asked. I'm a reporter for The ____,' I replied, 'and I presume you are Mr. Thompson.' 'I am,' he said curtly, 'and I ask you again what you want?' That was a bad beginning, and I hastened to tell him briefly the nature of my errand. 'H-m-m,' he grunted, stepping outside and closing the door. This is a most unearthly hour to disturb a man for an interview.' 'But to disturb a man for an interview.' 'But you seem about to go out, sir,' I suggested. 'Perhaps you will let me accompany you a little way and talk as we go.' 'I was going to propose it,' he replied. 'My wife is sick, and I have been sitting up with her. In fact, I was on the point of going out for a short walk and some freeh going out for a short walk and some fresh air when you came.'

"I was overjoyed at this lucky turn of events," continued the story teller, "and as we walked together up the street I proceeded to sound him as to his contemplated onslaught on the police force. He was brusque and reticent at first, but presently he warmed to the subject and began to talk in a way that promised a rattling good article.

"The only police protection we have in the city at present,' he said, 'is the protection given to lawbreakers at so much a month, and the citizen and taxpayer for then mere chance and luck that keep my residence in town from being looted. If the police made a determined effort to stop burglaries, they would shut off the reve nue of the very gentlemen who are helping to buy them bread and meat and champagne.' He rambled on in this vivacious vein, denouncing the chief as a fat headed incompetent and characteriz-ing the detectives as a lot of blackmailing imbeciles until I was really obliged to put on the brakes for fear I would be too

"I thanked him heartily for the interview, which was, in fact, a mere mono-logue, bade him good night on the next corner and sprinted back to the office at the top of my speed. I dashed up the stairs four steps at a time, grabbed a pad of paper and began to write like mad. When the city editor glanced over the first few pages, his eyes stuck out of their sockets. 'Why, this is the hottest stuff on recets. 'Why, this is the hottest stuff on rec-ord!' he exclaimed. 'I never knew Thomp-son to turn loose in any such style! Are you sure you are quoting him correctly? 'Dead certain,' I replied. 'I was surprised at him myself and took particular pains to fix his exact expressions on my mind.' 'All right, then,' said the city editor, grinning. 'We'll double lead this! It will wake up the town.'

"My story, as nearly as I remember covered about a column, and when I went home after turning in the last sheets I had a pleasant premonition that the night's work would make me peculiarly solid with the paper. I got up in a hap-py frame of mind next morning and went to the office somewhat earlier than usual so as not to miss any stray congratulations on my big hit. To my astonishment I found the managing editor and city editor in excited conference and several strangers standing around, all talking at once. 'Here he is!' yelled the city editor as soon as he saw me. 'What in thunder does this mean, sir?' 'What does what mean? I stammered, scared half out of my wits. 'Why. this fake!' he bawled. This blankety blanked fairy story you ran in on us last night! And ee shook ran in on us last night!" And se shook, the paper under my nose, with my article on the outside fold. 'That is no fake!' I retorted indignantly. 'Mr. Thompson said every word. I wrote.' 'The — he did!' he screamed. 'Why, you infernal fakir, here is 'Mr. Thompson right now, and he says he never saw you in his life!' I stared helplessly at the group, and I stared helplessly at the group, and a solemn looking gentleman stepped forward. 'One moment, please,' he said to the others. 'Now, then,' he continued, addressing himself to me, 'will you kindly describe the exact circumstances of that

BELL WITH A CUMOUS HISTORY. Plays an Important Part In a Trage dy on the Missouri River.

There hangs in the belfry of the little Christian church in the town of Savannah in Andrew county, Mo., a bell which has a most remarkable history. In 1852 there occurred at Lexington the most disastrous accident which ever befell a steamboat on the Missouri river, and one attended with the greatest loss of hu-man life. The Saluda, a side wheel steamer with a battery of two boilers, was on its way up the river with a cargo of general merchandise and its cabin and lower deck crowded with passengers, the most of whom were Mormons.

The river was unusually high, and the current as it came around the point just above the town was extremely strong. To add to these difficulties the river was To add to these difficulties the river was full of floating ice which had broken loose from a gorge higher up. Captain Francis T. Belt, commander of the boat, had made repeated efforts to stem the rapid current, but had as often failed. At last, on the morning of April 9, after waiting covered days for the fload to sure waiting several days for the flood to sub side, he again ordered steam to be raised for a final effort. He went to the engine room, looked at the steam gauge and ask ed the engineer how many more pounds of steam it could stand. On being answered that it had already every pound that are more active and easier to raise than the larger varieties. The demand in market is also in favor of a carcass of medium size. especially if carcass of that he would round the point and the remarked to the engineer, with an oath, up. He then retired to the hurricane roof, rang the bell and gave the final command to "cast loose the lines." The bow of the boat turned gently out into the stream as it was caught by the current. The encime the terrible explosion, and all was chaos, darkness and death.

The number of those who lost their lives by the explosion was never known. About 100 bodies were recovered, and it was supposed that there were as many more victims whose remains were never found. Nearly all the officers of the boat were killed. The bell which had just sounded th deathknell of so many unfortunate ones was blown high up on the bank, where it was, found uninjured. It was bought with what remained of the wreck, by old Casper Gruber, who afterward sold it to the Christian church at Savannah, and for nearly half a century it has bung in the belfry there. On any Sabbath morning its clear, silvery peals can be heard as it calls the congregation to the house of God, but it is doubtful if there is one among them who knows aught of the sad trag : connected with its history

The encore, "Murmuring Zephyrs," to the seventh number was also exceedingly chaste and beautiful. In massive work a fine example was the Pilgrim's Chorus, which was played as a closing number. Of all the lessons that humanity has to learn in life's school the hardest is to learn to wait. CHANGE OF PARTNERSHIP.

The well-known firm of George Stephens & Co. have made a change in their business and have added another partner to the firm, which will now be known as George Stephens, Quinn & Douglas.

Donald H. Douglas has been admit-ted as a partner in this well-known concern, and as he has had a long experience in the hardware business, the public will be the gainer by his presence amongst us. Mr. Douglas was a member of the firm of Tait & was a member of the firm of Tait & Douglas, Hardware Merchants, of Campbellio d, Ont., and comes with an experience of more than 15 year in the Hardware Business. He is a nephew of Mr. Wm. Douglas, the Crown Attorney of the County of Kent, and a brother of sur townsman, Mr. G. B. Douglas, solicitor for the Sutherland-Innes Co., of Chatham, and is not altogether a stranger in Chatham. Mr. Douglas is a thosough accountant and will have charge of the office and financial department of the new concern.

Mr. Stephens, the senior member of the firm, who is the originator and founder of this well-known business, will still retain his interest in the company, and when not occupied with his parliamentary duties, will contin-his parliamentary duties, will continue to devote his time and energy to the management of the business, and when not at Ottawa will be found looking after the welfare of the business here.

Mr. Fred. F. Quinn, the other member of the firm, who has had a long experience in the hardware business, whether in the hardware business, whether is a practical tinsmith, sheet:
Par and metal worker, will have

Mr. Merr field had Two in His Own ary Soldier Being so Called.

To The Planet, - This newspaper es makes us old soldiers Every man who shoulders a gun nowadays is classed by the press as a hero. For the credit of the British race and the relief of the English inguage, stop it. We who have taken part in the previous wars know that it is all nonsense. The real hero is the one who, seeing another in a hopeless position, throws himself into that danger in an endeavor to rescue

The great budge of heroism in the British army, viz., the Victoria Cross, is not given to the man who kills the most of Britain's enemies, but to the man who undergoes the greatest risk in rescuing a compade. We all know there is more or less danger every-where on earth, either from the forces of nature or company and the second where on earth, either from the forces of nature or circumstances, but as we do not see the danger we do not realize it. It is something the same in war. You know there is danger, but you seldom really see it. You may see others disappear from your side and you may hear the "szhwit" of bullets as they pass you, (when they don't pass you don't hear it); but you are so busy trying to make a present of lead to the enemy you have no time to notice what is going on close by. It is a case of give if you can, and take if you can't help it.

Take my own experience. I had two brothers. One almost lost his life trying to save another boy, heavier trying to save another boy, heavier then himself, from drowning, at Fior-ence. In the murky water the boy caught him by the hair, yet he still tried to swim to shore with him. I tried to swim to shore with him. I saw my other brother spring into the river at Wardsville and swim around a pole of logs, pull a boy from under the water and swim ashore with him. Then, in Chicago, he jumped into the canil, where there was no chance to land, and held up a drowning man till a boat was brought up from the lake to their rescue. I think those two lads, for they were yet boys, were wo lads, for they were yet boys, were heroes in a true sense.

For myself, I was in the Northern army, and can see no evidence of speside trying to shoot a lot of the en-emy faster than they could shoot us. Then you do not know but that they have enlisted to escape from worse. have enlisted to escape from worse. One soldier asked a comrade why he had enlisted. "Well," he sold, "I have no wife nor friends and, besides, I like war."

The other's reason was, he had a wife, and liked peace.

wife and liked peace.
In my company one of our greatest heroes, that is before we got into our first fight, was always boasting of his intention to personally destroy-a whole squad of Confederates, but when we arrived within five or six miles of that squad be was taken so sick that he was put into the ambulance wagon, where he stayed till the scrap was well over. Another was so heroically (f) excited during the scrap that he had no idea where his rifle pointed when he shot. He fired as soon as he capped the old muzzle loader, no matter which way the thing pointed. The only danger was to his comrades, or the stars. The Southern-comrades, or the stars. The Southerners were too far below his elevated deas to receive any injury. Anothwabbled so he could not er's eyes have seen the moon across the street, have seen the moon across the street, and kept asking where he'd shoot. Then there were others.

There are such heroes (?) in all armies. Then, why class as a hero every man who enlists. What an absurdity to head an article "Our Fenian Ruid Heroes," about men who never fired a shot. No doubt they were as good men as ever enlisted, but their good men as ever enlisted, but their courage was like the Irishman's skill with the violinist in the world, but he had never tried it. And I am sure those never tried it. And I am sure those volunteers, like all old soldiers, feel that this misapplication of the term hero is not only foolish but degrading to those who have shown a true claim to the title. What value would be placed on the Victoria Cross if it were given to every recruit? And should given to every recruit? And should given to every recruit? And should not the term head, by right, be also classed as a distinguishing title? Then, again, if all are heroes, how will we designate one who performs a special deed which, formerly, would have been classed as heroic? We will either have to coin a new word or also either have to coin a new word or else call them-heroines. Yours truly, W. K. MERRIFIELD.

HOW BANNIGAN UNLOADED HIS BLOCK OF RUBBER STOCK.

Transaction That Had All the Ele ments of a Comedy-Drama-Stockwell's Pacific Mail Plunge That Ended In a Financial Tragedy.

Bennigan was an uneducated Irish He began life in a New England rubber factory and conscientiously worked his way up from a wage of $1.50 a day to die worth $5,000,000. He was money. He saved to such good purpose that when the rubber trust was formed he was at the head of one of the biggest factories in the country, located in Providence. His knowledge of the trade was so therough that, despite the fact that he almost invariably used small "i's" in writing a letter, he was made president of the trust, his holdings amounting to about 40,000 shares. When matters had been moving along for some time Range been moving along for some time Bannigan made up his mind that the other men in the trust, the big fellows, were not treating him right and that the best thing he could do was to get out. So he packed his stock certificates in a gripsack, left Providence on the night boat, landed in New York bright and early, had his breakfast and then made a line for a stockbroker's office. He had assured himself in advance that this stockbroker was to be relied upon, and so he told him frankly what he intended

"I want to sell out, bag and baggage," "I want to sell out, bag and baggage," he said. "I want to get rid of every one of my 40,000 shares. Here they are. Put them on the market and sell them." The stockbroker told him that that would never do. If he wanted to realize full value for his holdings, he would have to go about it in a different way, for if he should throw his 40,000 shares into he should throw his 40,000 shares into the market it would knock the bottom out of prices, and he would get little or nothing for his stock. Mr. Bannigan saw the point and asked what he ought to do.

"Buy," said the broker.
"But I don't want to buy. I have got more now than I want." "That is all right; buy anyway; that will make a market for the stock, and you can unload when the time comes.' "How much must I buy?" "Oh, about $250,000 worth!" "But I have not got $250,000 in cash to go and buy rubber stock." "Well, you can borrow it. A man in your position, Mr. Bannigan, will have no difficulty in borrowing $250,000." Much against his will the old man was finally persuaded to do as he was told. About two weeks later the broker wrote to him that he must buy some more-this time $200,000 worth. Mr. Bannigan used rather strong language, but finally yielded as before. He borrowed $200,000 and turned it over. With this additional capital to work on the broker continued to manipulate the market. The insiders soon discovered that some strong party was buying, but they did not know who, Bannigan having carefully kept himself in the background. His broker operated skillfully in the stock, one day buying, the next selling, to keep the stock active. The broker after awhile began to borrow large amounts of the stock. This convinced the insiders that there was a big short interest somewhere, and they got together in order to squeeze the shorts. The inside holders who controlled most of the stock combined to squeeze "the shorts" out. In furtherance of this plan they put the price up to 61, and at about that figure Bannigan's stock was all unloaded. Bannigan now found himself full of money, with his stock. They never awakened to the fact that the president had sold out on them until his shares were dewhile the other fellows

Mr. A. B. Stockwell is a good illustra tion of the truth of this. At one time he was worth many millions of dollars. His start in life was as a purser on a Lake Erie steamboat. His father, it is said, Erie steamboat. His father, it is said, kept a livery stable in Cleveland. Op one of his trips Stockwell was in a position to show considerable attention to Elias Hewe, the inventor of the eye at the top end of the sewing machine needle. Mr. Howe was accompanied by his daughter. Stockwell made himself agreeable to Miss Howe also and with such good effect that he managed to win her affections and soon thereafter married affections and soon thereafter married

When Mr. Howe died. Mrs. Stockwell came into possession of her father's millions. With this nest egg Stockwell started in Wall street, and before any one realized what had happened he was the most talked of man in the district He put all his wife's millions in Pacific Mail stock, secured entire control of the company and elected himself its presi dent. He came into the street as plain Stockwell. Then, as the news of his liberality and good fellowship spread, he became Mr. Stockwell. After he got hold of the Pacific Mail he was Commodore Stockwell by common consent. Everybody bowed and scraped to him, and no man was so high and might him, and was not proud to shake his hand. Stockwell took hold of Pacific Mail at about 40 and sent it up to 107. It was at this period that he was worth on pa-per over $15,000,000. But he found, unfortunately when it was too late to re-treat, that, though Pacific Mail was up to 107, it was not worth that figure when the unloading commenced.

He was landed high and dry with it all, and the street told him he was welcome to it. He tried to sell and found that there was no market. Then came violent demands on him to pay up his numerous call loans, and in order to respond he had to sell regardless of price, and thus a whirlpool was created which finally sent the stock down to the price at which he had begun his original purchase. In this one upset he lost all his paper profits and his wife's millions besides.—Henry Clews in Saturday Evening Post. to 107, it was not worth that figure

RAILROAD TIES.

Made Chiefly of Oak, and Their Average Life Is Five Years. The drummer in railroad supplies handed the drummer in catrona supplies hand-ed the drummer in cotton goods his sil-ver mounted flask as he settled himself comfortably as the train pulled out of Philadelphia for Washington a few days

"The reason why you chaps in the south used to have many years ago so many accidents on your old lines was because pine trees, being so convenient, were used extensively in the making of railroad ties, than which no more impor tant element enters into the makeup of a railroad," he said. "Pine wood will not hold the spikes, is soft and rots quickly and has now been abandoned as upports of the steel rails.

"Whoever thinks of the ties of a road as he speeds along at the rate of 60 miles an hour with scarcely a tremor of the coach in which he is sitting? No one. But railroad men give the closest atten-tion to these wooden ribs.

"Ties are placed at varying distances apart, but the average distance adopted by most trunk lines is one and a half feet from center to center. Give me your pen-cil. There are approximately about 3,500 ties to the mile. These ties are worth, delivered to the road, from 90 cents to $1.10 each, depending upon the point of delivery. In the prairie sections of the west, for instance, ties, owing to distance from the base of supplies, are more expensive than in a region abounding in forests. Placing their value at $1 each, on a double track from New York to Washing-ton, a distance of 221 miles, the ties alone are worth $773,500, while along the sides of the track are piles of ties season-ing easily worth half this sum. There-fore in a road operating 2,000 miles of track its ties alone represent an expenditure of $7,000,000.

"Each tie is carefully inspected by men who make that their business, who look for splits, decayed places, worm look spots and other imperfections. Each piece of wood selected must be up to the standard size in length, width and thickness. If the inspector passes a tie be daubs a round splash of red paint on the end, which shows plainly on the freshly hewn or sawed wood, and that's what all of those little red eyes meant on that pile of new ties we just passed and of which you asked the meaning.

The average life of a tie is about five years, depending upon climatic influences and the character of the roadbed. Ties set in soft, moist soil will of course rot quicker than those placed in rock ballast, which is now the accepted roadbed of all the great lines. The various species of oak are mainly used, though chestnut and one or two other varieties of wood which are tough and of firm, solid grain are

"We don't hear so much about spreadg rails and ensuing accidents as a decade or two ago. One reason for this the closer inspection now given to ties and their renewing.

"Iron ties have been used on some of the roads in Europe, but if they have proved a success there they have not been adopted in this country, and I doubt if they will ever be. Down in Central America in the tropical forests they use ties of solid mahogany, as it is about the only wood which will withstand the climate and the ravages of tropical insects."

The Humor of Defeat. That was the greatest blessing that ever happened to me. That defeat was my greatest success. In 1894 I was a candidate for the mayoralty of my native town, Yonkers. I was born there, you know, in May, 1862. Some of my fellow townsmen thought that I could be of some use to them as mayor. I was highly elated. I could see a great futurecongress, perchance the presidency. But I could not go around and lure voters. I staid at home and made no speeches, and on election day my opponent won by a small majority. In later years, when I saw how I would have been forced to abandon my chosen profession for poli-tics, when I learned that the mayoralty would have taken every moment of my time. I was glad that I had been defeat ed. I might have developed into a second Chauncey M. Depew if I'd been elected." -John Kendrick Bangs in Success.

Trees-The Right Kind to Plant. "It has often been said that a man who plants trees plants for his grandchildren, and of course that is not a very encouraging sort of euterprise. But there are trees and trees, and some species are such mick growers that, unless one starts at the business in old age, he may reap the profit for himself. MAKING EASY MONEY.

THE SLEEPING CAR PORTER TELLS ABOUT HIS TIPS.

Passengers That Even a Man of Experience May Not Judge Aright, Bridal Couples Are Good, but Stateroom Parties Are Not.

"I've tried about all lines, and I'm go ing back to railroading," said Jim. Jim was the big man among the door keepers. He stood outside the old man's door, and none might enter until Jim had passed upon his credentials. Jim bossed the other doorkeepers, the messengers, the minor clerks and almost the assistant manager. He was the diplomat who arranged methods of escape for his supe riors when cranks beset them. He it was who lured an enthusiastic poet bent on reciting some of his productions to the old man into an elevator going up so that the old man might escape in an elevator going down. Jim was a man of great experience, and his decision to go back to railroading was the result of long thought.
"You see," continued Jim, "a hande man has a chance railroading that he don't have in any other business. A good man ought to make $15 a trip on a sleep-I've made $20 and sometimes $30. But $15 is the lowest that any good man should make and that without much work. A porter on a sleeper has the easiest time and makes his money with less work than anybody else in the world. So I'm going back to railroading.

"There's two kinds of porters. One is the kind that works for the pay he gets from the company-that's $20 a month on a sleeper and $25 on a chair car. He is atisfied to take what is coming to him, and he don't make any cracks to draw money from 'em. The other kind is different. They are the porters that are out for the passengers. The passengers like them better. "A porter has a lot of experiences. Now, you take me. I think I can spot a good man as quick as any one. But I've been fooled. I was running on the Pennsylvania's fast Chicago train six years ago. The first people to get around one night staggered me. There was an old man with cowhide boots and a paintbrush beard at the head of a parade of six kids. There was seven berths gone, and I said to my-self, 'Not a cent in sight,' 'Well,' I said to myself, 'you're up against it. Half the car a kindergarten, with a jayhawker for the teacher. I see your finish.' Golly, I

"I took the checks and showed the old man the berths. I made up my mind it wasn't worth while to bother with that outfit, and I didn't. The old man put the nursery to bed and dressed them in the morning. No help did I give! Not me. I vas too busy.

Well, we got into Chicago, and I was brushing my passengers off. The old man got the kids in shape and paid no attention to me. He was kneeling down buttion to me. He was kneeling down but-toning the leggings on one when I went through. I had my brush. 'Will you let me take that broom?' he said. I handed it over. Well, he brushed every one of 'em. I took the brush then and dusted him-not much but just a little. Well the old not much, but just a little. Well, the old man went down in his jeans, and he pulled out a roll, and he knocked me down a fiver. Yes, sir! He was the best man on the train, and there I had been abusing

And then she said: 'Porter, you've been very kind to me. Very kind, you've been very kind to me. Very kind, indeed, porter, and I want to thank you. Now, porter, this is for you,' and she showed a bill to me. Well, I hadn't expected to get anything, and I was glad. When every drink and maybe a quarter. When there's more than one, it's a quarter most surely. A bridal couple! They're the stuff! Say, the bride wants everything. She wants a drink of water. 'Porter,' says, he, 'a glass of water. That's a quarter. He wants to show off. Then the'll county is a proper to the start of the s she'll send a telegram home. 'Porter,' says he, 'a telegraph blank.' That's another quarter, maybe fifty. I know one couple that netted me three-fifty in a day. "Stateroom parties are apt to be no good. They may be folks with a pull or omething like that, and they demand attention. I made a run once and only got a dime out of a crowded stateroom, and the kept me on the jump all the time. "But the ma'n thing is that railroading is the best business. It's easy money. AN EXTRAORDINARY KILLING.

The Story of an Arizona Sheriff and "One of the nerviest shootings that ver came off in the west occurred some ears ago in Arizona," said a Denver was at Tombstone that it happened, but of that I am not certain. It seemed that a certain road agent and all around desperate character had turned up in the town. Of course he was traveling strictly incog, but he was recognized, and the news of his arrival soon reached the ears of the sheriff, who straightway started out to land him. The bad men of the west trevel with their lives in their hands and know it. They are always prepared for the possibility of capture or an at-tempt which may be made to do so, and hey try to take every precaution to render such action abortive. Then, too, as a rule these men prefer death to capture. In most cases capture means that they will ultimately dance the jig of death at the end of the hempen thread after having been duly tried and sentenced. But even when they have nothing worse to face than a term of years in the pen they will put up as stubborn a resistance as if they were wanted for murder, for their love of freedom causes them to prefer death in a fight to being imprisoned for a term of years. The desperado I am telling you of, however, had committed every crime known to the criminal calendar, and there were a dozen rewards of-fered for him, dead or alive.

"Capture with him meant certain and gnominious death, and it was a surety that he would fight to the bitter end and sell his life as dearly as possible. sheriff knew this, but, himself a desperately courageous man, nevertheless re solved on his capture. But he was as areful as possible about it and placed ais man by carefully guarded inquiries in order that the quarry might not take fright and escape him. Finally the sheriff found out that the road agent was in gambling joint and went there after The robber in the meantime had zed the room up carefully, and while not expecting trouble he took what preutions he could to avoid it should it

"The sheriff's most intimate friend, a nan named Driscoll, was playing faro, nd the desperade took the seat beside him, which faced the door. Suddenly that door was flung open with a crash, and the sheriff, a revolver in either hand, appeared in the portal. Men dived for places of safety, tables and chairs were upset, and in the confusion the road agent jumped on Driscoll's back and swung him between him and the sheriff. The robber was the stronger man, but Driscoll put up a good fight, and while he could not shake him off or turn him toward the sheriff he nevertheless could prevent him from drawing his gun, which the road agent was desperately trying to do. Around and around they swung, the sheriff excitedly dancing around the men, afraid to shoot on account of the fear of injuring his friend. "'For the land's sake, Danny, hold still,' he cried, 'till I get a shot at the

"'How can I?' gasped Driscoll. "The spalpeen's stronger than I am.'
"For a few seconds longer the struggle went on, and then Driscoll spread his legs apart in an effort to acquire sufficient purchase with his feet to hold, the road agent still. The sheriff saw his chance and without a second's delay dove base ball fashion through Driscoll's legs. Turning then, he shot upward, and with the ring of the shot the road agent's soul took flight. A more extra took place in the west.".

The Helpless Woman.

There was once a Woman who had Never Learned how to Swim, although she Went in Bathing every day in the Summer. She had a Friend who had Acquired this Art with Some Trouble and was very Proud of her Proficiency in it. "It is Absurd," said this Friend, "to Live near the Water and not Swim. It makes you very Attractive to ers if you can Go Out with them and they do Not Feel that you are Drag on their Pleasures. What would you Do in Case you Fell off the Pier? Now, Watch me!"

With these words she Dived off into he Water and Swam about By Herself. "It is a Good Thing to have a Yoman Swim so Well," said one of the Men near "Now, if any of the Children fall Into the Water she can Rescue them. Just then the Woman who Could Not help Herself uttered a Scream and Fell into the Sea. Instantly Five Men leaped in to Rescue Her and Spent the Rest of the Day Resuscitating her and Inquiring How she Was, leaving the Swimmer to This teaches us that Nothing Succeeds Vas to Capture Jay Gould and Hold Him For Ransom.

"An elaborate plot was once laid to abduct Jay Gould and hold him for ransom," said an old railroad man. "The papers got some inkling of it afterward but the whole story was never told, and the incident is now generally forgotten. The job was put up by a former curbstone broker of New York, who meditated it for several years and finally took a couple of desperate crooks into his confidence.

"Thoir plan was to seize Gould during a visit which he had arranged to pay to a resort in the White mountains and to carry him off to a cabin in a remote and sible part of the forest. Then the ex-broker proposed to go to New York, waik into the millionaire's office and demand the ransom from his son Ger-ge He intended to put the young man on no tice that if he was detained or followed or molested in any manner his father would certainly be murdered, and he relied upon bluff and audacity to carry the scheme through. The ransom decided upon was $100,000, and the scoundreis made very alchorate named the scheme through. made very elaborate preparations, includ ing even the provisioning of the cabin.

"What might have been the outcome what might have been the outcome is hard to say, but a woman who knew of the scheme and had been bally treated by the broker gave the plans away. I've been told by one of the Gould system secret service men, who was in New York at the time, that the old gentleman took it very coolly and remarked that he map out a campaign on the Stock Ex-change that would clean up a good many times the amount of his ransom while he was being held in the woods. I have of ten thought that perhaps the ex-curbstone broker meditated something of the kind himself. Of course if the trick had been turned the Gould securities would have played all kinds of antics for a few days, and a man who knew how the affair was going to eventuate could have made a for-ture.

"For some reason none of the people implicated were arrested, but for a long time afterward special precautions were taken whenever Mr. Gould traveled out of the city. As a matter of fact, he maintained a much stronger bodyguard of detectives than anybody dreamed of, and during the latter years of his active life it would have been practically impossible for a stranger to have approached him unchallenged. It was a well organized system, and Mr. Gould was indebted to it for his singular immunity from annoy-ance by cranks."

SHAKING PALSY. Weakening, Nervous Affection

Which Is Seldom Cured. Shaking palsy, or Paralysis agitans, as it is called by physicians, is a nervous affection in which there is a weakness, almost amounting to actual paralysis at times, combined with a constant and uncontrollable jerking of the muscles. The affection is classed among the diseases of old age, but it is not very rare in younger persons and may occur even in children. As a fule, it begins gradually, the first thing noticed being an unsteadiness of the hands or perhaps a trembling movement of only one finger, generally the thumb. With this there may be moderate pain, which is supposed to be rheumatic.

The trembling movement is often intermittent, at first coming and going with-out apparent cause, but later it becomes permanent and extends to other parts, finally involving both arms and legs. Less frequently the neck muscles participate in the movements, the head then nodding, turning or moving from side to moving from side to side. The muscles of the face and the tongue may also be implicated.

In conjunction with the trembling the muscles are weak and may be almost incapable of voluntary movements, and the patient feels tired and longs for the constant shaking to cease. The trembling does cease during sleep, and it is also less marked when one executes voluntary movements. The onset of the affection, although commonly gradual, as we have said, is in some cases very sudden, following some great mental or physical shock.

In later stages of the disease the mus cles of the body become more or less stiffened, the back is bent, the head is inclined forward and the various segment of the arms and legs are slightly flexed one on the other. The rigidity of the muscles of the face gives to the countenance a fixed expression of sadness, of indifference, or it may be of bad temper. There is a peculiar gait, something like that of a drunken man, who has to walk very fast or even run to overcome his tendency to fall forward. Shaking palsy is seldom cured, but it does not always get worse and may continue for years without apparent change one way or the other. The general condition of the patient is usually below par, and the chief indication of treatment is therefore to improve the nutrition by tonics and a generous diet. Some relief to the constant and ratiguing tremor may be obtained by the patient's making slow voluntary movement or by massage,-Youth's Companion.

WILL SPEND FOUR YEARS IN TRY ING TO REACH THE NORTH POLE.

Toronto, Feb. 27.-Capt. Bernier, the Quebec navigator, who is seeking to coure aid for an expedition in search of the North Pole, is in the city as the guest of the Ontario land surveyors, now holding their annual meeting, and will be the guest of honor at their banquet to-night. To reporter the captain said he wanted a Toronto scientist to be one of his a Toronto scientist to be one of his crew of fourteen men, and has left a vacancy for a Toronto recruit. "My program, in brief," he said, "is to sail from Vancouver or Victoria about May 1 next, along the coast of Siberia, taking the natural course of the waters, and when the ice closes, which is about Sept. 15, I would hope to be within 200 miles of the pole. Nansen, you know, went within 230 miles of it, and since that time the Duke of Abruzki, of Rome, in 1900 cut this down by 19 miles. There is only one, way, and that is nature's way, float in. Perry and Capt. Sverdrup, who are fitting the course of rebe within 200 miles of the pole. drup, who are fitting the course of nature by Greenland, will never get there. I will take four years, and will provision accordingly."

Old age as it comes in the orderly process of Nature is a beautiful and majestic thing. The very shadow of eclipse which threatens it, makes it the more prized. It stands for experthe more prized. It stands for experience, knowledge, wisdom and counsel. That is old age as it should be. But old age as it so often is means nothing but a second childhood of mind and body. What makes the difference? Very largely the care of the stomach. In youth and the full strength of manhood it doesn't seem to matter how we treat the stomach. We abuse it, overwork it, injure it. We abuse it, overwork it, injure it. We don't suffer from it much. But when age comes the stomach is worn out. It can't prepare and distribute needed nourishment to the body, and the body, unnourished, falls into sen-ile decay. De Pierce's Golden Medi-cal Discovery is a wonderful medicine for old people whose stomachs are "weak" and whose digestions are "weak" and whose digestions are "poor." Its invigorating effects are felt by mind as well as body. It takes the sting from old age, and makes old people strong.

AT THE THEATRE.

Mgr. Cairas is shaking hands with him self over the lace that he cancelled a mouth ago the Quaker Male Quartette which was to furnish one of the numbers of his L, ceum Course. He saw a couple of adverse notices from Wisconsin in one of the dramatic parers and promptly cancelled the dompany. They appeared last Friday in Hamilton as a number of the Metropolitan a terrible roasting.

The next number of the Lyceum Course will be the Hammer Ladies Mandolin Orchestra of Detroit under the direction of Arthur Depew, together with the following soloists:—Sam I. Slade, basso; Lewis E. Vicary, entertainer; Florence M. Woolfenden, mandolinist; Daisy Rhines, cellist, and G. Arthur Depew, Pianist.

The Dramatic Mirror correspondents in every city in Michigan where the John E. Young Opera Co. has appeared during the past six weeks have given the company much praise. In many of the cities the company made such a hit that return dates were played and were it not for the smallpox scare, which is ruining business for the time being in Michigas, the company would not be in Chatham at all. The idea of popular prices is Mr. Cairns own and it is to be hoped that it will be appreciated by local theatre-goers.

HANGED AND BURNED HIM.

An Indiana Mob's Vengeance on a Murderous Negro.

He had Killed a S hool Teacher-The Man Was Probably Insane.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 27. - Ida Finklestein, aged 20 years, a school teacher, while walking through a lonely strip of woods late yesterday, on the way from the school house to the inter-urban electric line, three miles east of Terre Haute, was assaulted by a negro, who shot her in the back of the head, and cut her throat, severing the windpipe. After the assault Miss Finklestein ran a short distance to a farm house, with the blood streaming from her wounds, and fell unconscious on the door steps. Late in the evening she George Ward, 27 years of age, a cole ored man, formerly employed in the car works here was arrested, and, according to the police, confessed to having murdered Ida Finklestein. Ward had recently been discharged from an he is demented now. In his confession, ward said Miss Finklestein taunted him about his color, and then struck thim in the face. In a fit of anger the shot her and then cut her throat. F. K. Foster, of Toronto, Provincial manager for the Canadian Fire Insurance Company, spent a day or two this west with J. W. Humphrey, the company's agent in Chatham. Mr. Foster says he is well pleased with the company's business in the Maple City. with the victim. An angry mob surrounded the jail during the absence of the sheriff. His deputies put up a vigorous resistance, and at first appeared to buy es uccessfully beaten off the crowds but on the second onslaught the infuriated mob, variously estimated at 3,000 in number, swept away all obstacles. Ward was dragged from his cell, a rope was placed around his neck and he was dragged down the street to a wagon bridge spanning the Wabash River. On the way to the bridge, three blocks disspanning the Wabash River. On the way to the bridge, three blocks distant, Ward was beaten with clubs, and repeatedly shot at. He was unconscious and in all probability dead when the loose end of the rope was tied to a timber of the bridge and his body swung out over the stream. A strand of the rope suddenly broke, and the leaders, fearing their prey might drop into the river, hastily drew the body back upon the bridge. It was dragged across to the west side. A huge bonfire was quickly built, the body was thrown upon the fire, and in a short time was burned to a crisp.
