Publication of Reports of Crime Under Discussion

White Slave Traffic Also Receives Society's Attention.

Officers Elected and Annual Meeting Brought to Close.

The annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Board of the Methodist Church is over. The afternoon session yesterday was one of the most import ant during the four days they have been in session in this city, owing to a number of the important motions which were brought up in the earlier stages and passed upon at the concluding meeting. The following resolution of the London conference branch was favorably re-"Whereas there has come from numer

"Whereas there has come from numercus quarters appeals that our organization take steps to restrain the publication of the details of crime, court investigations or legal inquiry tending to destroy the sacredness of the home and pollute society by familiarizing the minds of the youth with crime that is robbing it of that modesty needful of character building of the highest type:

"Resolved, that we assure Dr. Chown that any steps he may deem necessary to take to bring about such enactments as may be required to restrain the press from thus breaking down the safeguards of home and society, will have the sympathy and co-operation, as far as possible, of the Women's Missionary Sotiety."

The following was also adopted:

"Resolved, that it is necessary to call upon the members of the society in connection with the auxiliaries, Women's Institutes and all local organizations for women to inform all within their reach of the nature and methods of operation of the white slave traffic. That the auxiliaries be asked to co-operate with the social reform department of the Methodist Church by becoming responsible for the distribution of literature dealing with the traffic."

OTHER RUSINESS

OTHER BUSINESS.

A resolution of appreciation was given Mrs. McKay, who for thirteen years has acted as home secretary, but is new retiring from that office.

It was decided that the Easter thank offering be devoted to the new work in offering be devoted to the new work in China and elsewhere.

Miss Stewart, editor of the Palm Branch, submitted the report of the work of that paper for the year, it being the official organ of mission circles and bands. There were 4,450 subscribers for the past year, which is an increase over the previous year.

Some reference was made to the voluntary service of members of the society. The general opinion was that more service was needed in the women's colleges, as at present such work is not carried on on an extensive basis and the result is that the services of a member of the society is not considered of such value as that of a deaconess or a Y. W. C. A. worker.

A suggestion was made that a travelling committee of two be appointed to make all travelling arrangements for the missionaries of the society, but no definite action was taken.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

It is generally recognize that Miss Dimond's faithfulness and ability are far above-the ordinary. An appropriate address was read by Mrs. Ivor D. Lewis, leader of the choir, and the presentation was made by Mr. J. Springstead. The gifts consisted of two valuable pieces of jewelry. Miss Dimond replied in a few well chosen words. Hearty thanks were voted to the host and lostess for their hospitality.

C. W. BENNETT DIED TO-DAY.

Founder of the Bennett Circuit Got Unexpected Call.

Typhoid Fever Carried Him Off After Short Illness.

Had Just Completed Plans For Vaudeville In Cuba.

Word was received here this morn ing of the death in New York of C. Bennett, formerly head of the Bennett Theatrical Enterprises of Canada, and one of the best known on the road vaudeville magnates in America. Mr. Bennett was taken suddenly ill in New York on September 15, after returning from Montreal, where he had been on a business trip, and the doc ors diagnosed his case as typhoid ever. John G. Appleton, manager of tors diagnosed his case as typhoid fever. John G. Appleton, manager of the Bennett house here, had a letter recently from Mrs. Bennett in which she said her husband, although seriously ill, would likely recover. News of his death came as a great shock to many friends in this city. He is survived by his widow and two young daughters, Fleta and Nepha.

Canadian vaudeville field was rather spectacular. A man of indomitable energy and big ideas he soon organized the Bennett circuit with houses in London, Montreal, Ottawa, Quebec and Hamilton. Coming here from Detroit, where he had been planning a scheme for a Canadian circuit, he started in 1903 to put his ideas into effect. At that time Manager Appleton, on behalf of the Stroud interests, was negotiating for the old London Opera House. Mr. Bennett suddenly announced that he had secured it. # Katharine's Sacrifice

A STATE OF THE STA rheumatism. I knew you would be sorry, Lord Otway, you have such a kind heart, and are always so sympathetic to people in her position of life." She was watching him keenly all the time, though apparently she was occupied in culling for herself a small bouquet of roses from the branches of the creeper that nodded in at the windows.

Ormande said nothing. For the life of him he could not speak.

Katharine was ill, that was all he could think of. Katharine, his beautiful Katharine, the queen of his dreams, the love of his whole heart, ill, ill, and sufering alone, and he must know this and do nothing! It completely unnerved him. Hope had died in his breast during the long night hours. It was crushed down, never to rise again; how could he let it live with the memory of those last words ringing in his ears.

"I cannot love you. I cannot.—I am not free!"

But though hope was dead, his love lived stronger than ever. He had told

Mrs. Trevanion subsided and went away, while Miss Mostyn ordered this and countermanded that, and generally conducted herself in the manner most conducted herself in the manner most annoyed and angry.

"Is she going to spoil all my plans?"
she thought, viciously, and having carefully ascertained that there was no possibility of her contracting any illness seeing Katharine, she minoed away her high heels to that part of the ho in which Miss Brereton was located.

in which Miss Brereton was located. There was no answer to her sharp tap at the door, and turning the handle unceremoniously, Barbara walked in.

Katharife way lying on the pillows, parfectly rigid and still; her beautiful hair was unbound and was thrown in careless luxuriance away from her. She was deathly pale, save for the deep black marks that encircled her closed eyes.

eyes.

In her nervousness and selfishness, Barbara hesitated to approach the bed; it seemed to her as though it was the face of a dead woman she saw. But while she was thinking this, the long, dark eyelashes were raised, and Katharine's eyes met hers. Barbara frowted for a moment. Despite the pallor, the unmistakable marks of suffering, Katharine's face was as supremely lovely as ever; and, knowing this, Barbara's jealous hatred swelled still more in her hereast.

All trace of her brief sympathy and kindliness had disappeared. Katharine, ill as she was, saw that; she felt that she would get no pity from this girl, or receive any friendyl attention.

She struggled to raise her head from the nillow.

She struggrea to the pillow.

"It is nothing much—a cold," she murmured, and the hoarseness in her tones bore testimony to the truth of the last assertion. "I—I shall be better in an hour."

She tried to gather the thick masses of her hair together and push it into one coil, but the effort was too much, she was obliged to desist.
"I am sure I hope so," Miss Mostyn observed, curtty, "for there is a great deal to be done before to-morrow. Really, I think Lady Drummond should have ascertained the condition of your health before engaging you; but Aunt Ellen is always so impetatous."

Katharine drew her breath with something like a sigh.

she said, humbly and weakly. "I had

"Oh, we settled all that yesterday,

"Th, we settled all that yesterday," Barbara said, stretching her thin hips into a semilance of a smile. She was looking about her with sharp, quick eyes to discover anything that might go to strengthen the suspicion that had come into her mind. "If you can't get up, you can't, and so there is an end of the matter. I need not tell you how very inconvenient this is, coming to-day of all days: but I presume you would not be ill if you could help it. I will leave these letters on the table for you to answer if you can, in an bour's time, and please let me know when they are done." in her so much, dear Lord Otway!" In-deed there was quite a flush of excite-ment on Barbara's cheeks. "I want her to make a friend of me, to confide in me. It is strange and sad that one so young as she should look as she does." Ormande felt, he scarcely knew why, uneasy. There was much apparent sympathy and interest in Miss Mostyn's manner, but somehow it did not visue done."

And with that, Barbara walked out of the room, closing the door behind her with a sharp teng, that brought a moan of pain from Katharine's lips, and sent the pulses throbbing in her aching head.

As Miss Mostyn entered the large breakfast-room, she discovered Lord Otway there alone, standing by one of the open windows. His face looked strangely worn and pale; there was an air of missery over it which had completely changed it.

He greeted Barbara with a smile and true in his cars.

He was loyal to his darling.

"You forget that Miss Brereton has been very ill. Her accident was naturally a blow to her nerves, and now about it? She is always so reticent with me." Barbara was feverishly eager to know all he knew. "How did happen?"

Lord Otway looked at her in surprise. "Miss Brereton is the lady whom I

He greeted Barbara with a smale, and then went on to say that a most unfortunate circumstance had occurred to cut short his visit, and oall him back to town.

Barbara's heart stood still for a moment.

"What! Go away before my birthday, Lord Otway? No, no; I cannot allow it?"

Ormande's eyes were fixed on the suntit trees outside.

"I'm afraid I have no choice, Miss Mostyn, I really ought to have been back at work last week. I—I must go now."

"But you only came yesterday, and then you told me you should stay eeveral days. Has anything happened since then?"

Barbara put the question almost innocently. At once she had guessed the truth—symething had occurred between aKtharine and him; and Ormande any sweed her hurrielly:

"Yes, something has happened, Miss Mostyn, and I must go."

"Oh, dear!" Barbara ast down moourn' fully. There is going to be nothing but disappointment, and I did hope it would have been such a pleasant time. Barbara but to find your tennis racket."

Barbara bit her lip suddenly. Remember! Ay, that she did, right well?

So it was Katharine she had to thank all along for her disappointment and lead to the glories of Thane Castle: she who had come forward suddenly to be the barrier in the path that was to lead to the glories of Thane Castle: she who was the cause of all the failure. If Barbara had hated Katharine before, she positively loathed her now; her ears bazzed with the hot blood that rushed into her beauty destroyed—nothing of that pure. Sweet loveliness left; and in that moment she swore may be a pleasant time. # THE OLD STORY

Girl's Pitiful Death Trying to Hide

Died at St. Catharines Hospital From Blood Poisoning.

St. Catharines, Oct. 1.-An inques was begun to-night into the death of Susan Clark, aged 18, of Napanee, who died last night at the hospital.

"I cannot love you. I cannot—I am not free!"
But though hope was dead, his love lived stronger than ever. He had told himself he would bear his disappointment bravely, that he would meet his sorrow as though it had never been; he had preached and taught submission so often, now he would practice what he had preached. In his grief he had confessed sorrowfully to himself that Heaven had punished him rightly: he had grown to dwell too much on Katharine, on her sweet love, and the happiness that might be in the future, that he had neglected his duties, and allowed himself to push aside the claims of others. Henceforth he determined to bury his heart's secret, and go on in the path, he had chosen, no matter how full of briars it might be, and now in the very birth of his brave resolutions came this blow, this news that staggered and unnerved. Only two witnesses were examined outside of the doctors, who performed believed a criminal operation was performed, yet the memories of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Willford, with whom the deceased stopped while in the city, were so uncertain in regard to names and dates that adjournment was made and dates that adjournment was me for three weeks. The assistance for three weeks.

Toronto will be asked for.

Mrs. Willford testified to having first met the Clark girl at Centre Is-land, Toronto, a year ago, when Susan worked as a domestic for Mrs. Mead. She also stated that the dec a sister Florence in Toronto. Withheard nothing further from the heard nothing further from the girl until two weeks ago, when she re-ceived word from Susan that she was coming to pay her a visit. Several days later she arrived from Toronto. After Susan had confided her in-tention of procuring an abortion, Mrs. Willford said she tried to dissuade the girl and only went to the Falls with her last Friday to keep her from committing suicide, as she had threat-ened to do! ber hers. The look of agony on her dear, sweet face as he beheld it last might rushed to his mind once more. If —if only he might be allowed to comfort her, to give her help with this burden of love that was weighing her ned to do! Mrs. Willford admits, however, go ag to a street door of a doctor's of down.

Barbara watched him intently.

"How he loves her!" she said to herself, with bitter mortification and venom. "He thinks her an angel of beauty and purity. I must destroy that conclusion. He shall not go away till be has seen of what clay his idol is made. Then—then"—Barbara picked a rose to pieces with thin, hard fingers—"then he must learn to turn to me for sympathy. He is so simple I think I shall be able to manage him. Now, if everything turns as I have planned, I everything turns as I have planned, I may yet hold the trump card in my hand," and while she was thinking this ened to do!

Mrs. Willford admits, however, going to a street door of a doctor's offie at Niagara Falls, N.Y. Susie went in for five minutes, ame out and said it was all over.

Last Wednesday, Dr. Chapman was called in by Mr. Willford, and on Thursday the girl's case became so serious that she was removed to the hospital, where she died before midnight of septic peritonitis, refusing herself to divulge to Dr. Chapman the name of the doctor who performed the abortion, but admitting that one had taken in Toronto by "whole glassfuls" had failed.

The Crown authorities are anxious to locate the young couple who accompanied the Clark girl to St. Catharines from Toronto, and who stopged at the International Hotel. here, according to Harry Willford's evidence. The couple, he says, were married here the next day by Rev. Manley Benson, and accompanied his wife and the Clark girl to Niagara Falls and there disappeared. Willford speaks of the couple as "Mr. and Mrs. Culture."

Gets Week's Holiday to Go Home But Disappears.

Moneton, N.B., Oct. 1.-The mysille, near Woodstock and Moncton ville, near Woodstock and Moncton, of Rev. R. Gordon Warman, son of W. A. Warman, of the I. C. R., this city, is reported.

He had been preaching on circuit at Oakville, and obtained a week's leave of absence to come to Moncton to visit his parents, with whom he lives with his two-year-old daughter. Since then he has not been heard of, and his parents are very much worried. Telephone messages all over the country have had no result.

He is about 25 years of age and returned last year from Labrador mission. He was married three years ago, his wife dying about a year ago.

at Detroit Dock Attributed to Marine Strikers.

"Her accident! Oh, did she tell you about it? She is always so reticent with me." Barbara was feverishly eager to know all he knew. "How did it happen?"

Lord Otway looked at her in surprise. "Miss Brereton is the lady whom I was fortunate enough to assist one afternoon at Northminster station. You may romanber Miss Mastro. it was the Detroit, Mich., Oct. 1.-Two men believed to be marine strikers, crept upon the deck of the steamer North upon the deck of the steamer Northern Queen, lying at the foot of Randolph street, last night, and picking up William Janich, a deckhand, threw him into the river. Janich cannot swim. His cries for help were heard by other members of the crew on board and he was rescued. While all were in the cabin a few minutes later an attempt was made to cast the steamer adrift by slipping the hawser holding her to the dock, but this was discovered before she had moved more than a few feet. The police have two sailors under arrest on suspicion.

Proprietors of Kingston liquor stores say they have a hard task keeping track of the 100 men on the Indian list, and Magistrate Farrell suggests that they get a group photo of them. Hotelkeepers know them better.

Another Big Lumber Yard at Midland Wiped Out.

Midland, Ont., Oct. 1.-Midland sufered its second great loss by fire within two weeks to-day, when Manley Chew's yard, at Dollartown, was completely wiped out. The fire started in a pile of lumber only a short distance from the mill, and soon got beyond the control of the fire equipment about the mill. The stock was one of the most valuble in town, being, with the excellent 100,000 feet, all clear white pine er, and was considered to be the best ve years. The yard was packed from nd to end.

The fire covered an area of about The fire covered an area of about thirteen acres, and has laid bare a yard that it will take nearly two seasons to re-stock. This is the third large loss the Chews have sustained within a year, and the total loss of lumber alone will reach seventy-five million feet. So far as is known to-day's fire was caused by a spark from the burner being carried by the wind into a pile of dry lumber.

Great Ten-Day Sale of Dress Goods R. McKay & Co. start on Morday a great ten days' sale of dress goods. #### BRITISH MONEY BILLS.

acaulay in detailing the fight en the Lords and Commons over the rish Forfeitures gives us to understand hat at that time over 200 years ago it was well recognized by the Lords that it was no part of their business to medwith money bills. The Lords in that matter were not inclined to approve of the King's course, but they objected to what they held to be the injustices of measure prepared by the Commons. The Commons evidently expected oppo-sition from the Lords, and joined the objectionable measure to a money grant to the Orown, a land tax of two shillings in the pound for the service of next year. This device was called "tacking," and placed the Lords under the necessity as Macaulay says, "of either passing both bills together without the change of a word, or rejecting both together and leaving the public creditor unpaid and the nation defenceless. This "tack" ing" was bitterly resented. "Not only," said the Lords "are we to be deprived of the co-ordinate legislative power to which we are by the constitution of the realm entitled; we are not to be allowed even a suspensive vete. We are not to dare to remonstrate, to offer a reason, to ask for an explanation." They railed and threatened. Better throw out the bill than "consent to be, what we are fast becoming, a bod of no more importance than the Convocation."

The bill was not rejected, but it was "improved" by amending it so as to climinate some objectionable matter which did not at all affect the annulment of the grants of the forfeited estates mmons rejected the amendments without one dissenting voice; demanded a conference, and the conferees "were instructed to say merely that the Upper House had no right to alter a money bill; that the point had long been set tied and was too clear for argument. The Commons did more. They proceeded to pass resolutions as to Privy who profited by the grants in question. The Lords saw that "unless the e of Commons was not merely to exercise a general control over the Go ernment, but to be as in the days of the 'Rump,' itself the whole government that a determined stand should be made." They saw also that to sue ed in such a struggle "the ground must be carefully selected, for a defeat might be fatal." They must choose a more fitting time, when public feeling was not to be inflamed against "the three B's, Bishops, Bastards and Beg. gars." When the counting of proxic eft the motion that the Lords "do adnere to their amendments" a tie, thus negativing it, the Primate's heart failed him and he quitted the House, taking part of his following with him; so that n the motion to accept the Common bill had a majority of five. The Lords have never yet summoned the nerve to flout the popular House or a money bill. They claim the legal (verbal) right to equality of power and privilege in all matters with the Com oners, but constitutional practice for bids them to exercise it. We do not believe that they will dare to force the issue by rejecting or amending Lloyd-George's budget, in spite of all the bluster and bounce of the Unionist press and news bureaus.

WAGES.

The Philadelphia Record has a specia mmissioner over in Great Britain in estigating industrial and social conditions there, and making comparisons between them and those in the United In one of his letters to the naper he details a conversation he had with a Manchester employer. During It he asks this manufacturer if wages are not higher in America than in England. To this the Englishman made inal value, but not as high in purchasing power. But at times, when wage scales are published both here and in scales are published both here and in America, they are not only misleading, but erconeous. Four years ago, for instance, our wages were even nominally, that is, shilling for shilling, dollar for dollar, higher than in America."

"But your protective tariff has nothing to do with your wage scale. If it had, Germany and France, which are had, Germany and France, which are highly protected countries, would have higher wages than England, whereas wages in England have always been higher than in either Germany or France.

"You mean." I asked, "that you can live so cheaply in England that you do not have to exert yourselves?"

"Yes, and not only that, but we can hold the world's markets, generally speaking, even though there are tariffs against us, because we can make the goods so much cheaper. We are living and making money so easily off of the protected countries which handicap themselves, especially Germany and the United States."

We have heard so much lately about the "hopeless, helpless masses" over there that we were beginning to think that the old country must be some vast poorhouse. But this English manufac turer presents the other side of the picor rather holds up to view an irely different picture. As he says, Germany and France have all the protection they want, but living is better ong the workingmen of Britain than among them. At any rate, there is no log or horse diet among the British attention to the fact that "The peace taxes of the present are already heavier in the aggregate than the burden impos ed to carry on any of the great wars of described as "silent, peaceful warfare" now existing among the European nations. Each of them exhausts its strength in arming. As Sir Edward Grey says, "You may call it national insurance that is perfectly true; but it is equally ue of the great countries in Europe is parations to kill each other." A remedy for this wasteful process is much to be desired. The writer of the article to which we have referred, thinks that action should be taken by the United States. He thinks they are in a position to exercise much influence on the Europear nations, being entirely out of their embroilments. He has no faith in congressional debates on the matter; i is one for delicate diplomacy and quiet some action in this direction is indicated by his adding "Perhaps this has already begun through the White house and state department. It would indeed be an accomplishmen

But a difficulty perhaps greater than that to be met with in attempting such a task is the overcoming of United States prejudice against themselves in the affairs of Europe No people so blindly worship a phrase as do our neighbors. If, however could be emancipated from that idolatry they could doubtless be of great benefit to mankind at this juncture.

Some of the "knockers" of city instithe assessors' figures.

As Peary slipped into New York yesterday Cook slipped out. A disastrous collision was probably thus avaoided.

The Hamilton Automobile Club wants to put a stop to reckless driving. That is an attitude that will win friends for the autos. Automobile roughs are an injury to automobiling.

There appears to be a small coterie in the neighborhood of Beamsville eager to east discredit on the town and on local option. Such characters discredit only themselves-if the authorities do their full duty.

The School Board is well advised in continuing the art classes of the old Art School under Mr. Gordon's super vision in the new Technical School. It would hardly have been creditable to Hamilton to drop them.

Some Tory slanderers are circulating the story that "Aylesworth has made a mess of Canada's case in the fisheries dispute" at The Hague. Of course it is to-day. a case of the enterprising fakir with a large imagination and microscopical moral scruples.

The statement of a Methodist Bishop that he "walked by 10,000 hells while in Chicago," is calculated to arouse the suspicion that the Windy City is a somewhat warm place, and the Bishop speaks in round numbers; possibly there are a few more.

R. H. Shepherd, the witness who testified to being promised $200 by the Tories to act as a spy in the Liberal rooms at Peterboro, has been arrested on a charge of perjury, laid by two of the precious quartette, who, he alleges, were concerned in retaining him, and whos "At present they are higher in nom- plot he subsequently gave away. He will come up for hearing to-day.

> The T., H. & B. Railway is not willing to lose the valuable services of Mr. Fisher, who is retiring from the superintendency, and it is probable that after his restoration to health by the rest which he is now about to take he may re-enter the company's service. Mr. Fisher's many friends will hope that relieved of the calls of duty he may soon enjoy perfect health and vigor.

> Yes, a number of the people who regard the growth of Hamilton as shown by the assessors' figures as the reverse of encouraging have no license to grumble. They have devoted themselves to the betrayal of the city, its industries and interests and to "knocking" the men who have done much to build it up. And some of them have done it for a price just like Judas of old!

> Yesterday the new uniform bill of lading authorized by the Dominion Railway Commission went into effect on all the Canadian railways, except the Intercolonial. Doubtless, the Intercolonial, also, will soon adopt it. The principal features of the new bill are outlined in another column, and its adoption gives great satisfaction to the shipping public of the country. Its use will greatly simplify the relations of the railways with those dealing with them.

Readers of a local contemporary will now be able to duly appreciate the villainy of the British Liberals in trying to tempt the Lords to reject the budget sid "interfere with the rights of Parliament." And so recently the Lords were represented as determined to force a dissolution by rejecting that budget! figure, and black-bearder

Goldwin Smith has already erected a memorial that will outlive and out-value anything in the form of brass or stone the people of Toronto can secure; but that is no reason why Toronto should not do its part.

TO MAKE CHANGE. (Buffalo Express,)

The Canadian Federation of Labor wants the Government to coin half-cent pieces, claiming that they would be a boon to poor people, who would appreciate the securing of a half-cent in cases where purchases involved fractional parts of a cent.

FARM PROTECTION.

W. O. Sealey, M. P., for Wentworth, is arguing stremuously for a duty on hog products coming into Caanda. He claims that it is only treating the farmers fairly that a four cent duty be placed upon all such imports. Austria has the shortest sea coast of any of the great powers of Europe and has no over-seas possessions to call for a lot of ships for their defence. If she wants to pay heavily for a navy it must be largely for the sake of being in the fashion, and fashion's slaves need no sympathy. sympathy.

WHO WAS THE MERCHANTS (Ottawa Free Press.)

(Ottawa Free Press.)

Mr. Trade Commissioner Harris, of Yokohama, may not be a diplomat—he may, indeed, lack the first elements of success as a diplomat—but he is a gentleman; and that is more than can be said of a Hamilton business man, who betrayed confidence, published a private letter, and probably ruined a man's career for life. It is a pity that such a man could not be exposed publicly to the contempt of the community which he deserves.

They came to look like raw beefsteak, all red, and no one knows how they itched and burned. They were so swollen that I had to split my drawers open to get them on and could not get my shoes on for a week or more. I used five or six different remedies and got no help, only when applying them the burning was wores and the itching less. One morning I remembered that I had a bit of Cuticura and tried it. From the moment it touched me the itching was gone and I have not felt a bit of it since. The swelling wentdown and in two days I had my shoes on and was about as usual. I only wish I had used the Cuticura Remedies in the first of my troubles. They would have saved me two or three weeks of intense suffering. WOULD RUSH IT THROUGH.

Ald. Cooper—The courts have said they will not override the views of the Council when it acts in good faith. If the majority of the Council favors Hydro power let us have it.

The Mayor—There is no question about it being all right for us to go shead. It is quite trife we do not recognize the bills the company has sent us. Ald. Peregrine—Let us appoint a committee to go to the Cataract and see if it has any suggestions.

Ald. Alian—That is a clear way out of it.

Ald. Morris—I think, proceed from where we left off. I move, seconded by Ald. Anderson, that the City Solicitor be instructed to draw up a resolution as best he may, safeguarding the city's interest so that we may discuss this matter intelligently.

Ald. Anderson pressed for a special Council meeting on Monday night to such the matter. we win? Mr. Waddell—If we win the costs will not be of great moment.

Ald. Cooper—We had a resolution at the last meeting. Must we rescind it if e want to change it?

The Mayor—You can put it in any shape you want to.

Ald. Cooper—What we have met for then is either to pass the resolution or then is either to pass the resolution or amend it.

The Mayor—It was suggested to me by the solicitor after the last meeting that there was danger that if the resolution was not worded differently it might bind us for all contracts with the commission. I did not think that was the intention of the aldermen.

Mr. Waddel!— After that resolution was passed I had a talk with Solicitor—Lobb. He had seen the resolution. I told him the committee did not want to bind itself until it was able to make terms. He stated that in his opinion the commission would either consider the resolution as an application or not consider it at all. He said we should state in it whatever variations we wanted made. I think if the city is going ed made. I think if the city is going to make a contract it should treat the commission the same as a company and get the best possible terms.

COMMISSION HAS SAY.

COMMISSION HAS SAY.

Mr. Waddell referred to section 2. paragraph II., of the act passed last year, which says: "No power shall be supplied by any municipal corporation to any railway corporation, municipal corporation or person, without the written consent of the commission." "That means they are going to regulate the disposal of power," he said.

Ald. Peregrine—Then we cannot sell the power where we like, and it practically voids the resolution we passed because we said we wanted the power for civic and other purposes.

civic and other purposes.

Ald. Cooper said he did not think it was a fair proposition for any municipalwas a fair proposition for any municipal-ity to sell power below cost to a manu-facturing concern, and he thought this clause was inserted to prevent such a thing occurring. It was unreasonable to assume that the commission would act arbitrarily.

The Mayor—You know the statement made in London that they wanted the commission to fix a universal price for power. We would be in nice shape if that happened.

Ald. Allan—These things may not happen and yet they may. arbitrarily.

The Mayor You know the statement

VOTED AMENDMENT DOWN.

Ald. Allan—These things may not happen and yet they may.

Ald. Cooper—I don't think they will,
It would be unbusinesslike.

The Mayor—Is it not likely the western municipalities will stand together for this to bring factories there.

Ald. Cooper said that if Hamilton took the amount of power first spoken of, 15,000 horse power, it would get a big reduction, a lower price than Toronto would ever get, although he admitted that Toronto by taking a large enough amount of power might get it at a lower price than Hamilton.

SUGGESTS PEACE CONFERENCE.

SUGGESTS PEACE CONFERENCE. Ald Peregrine pointed out that the Cataract was sure to fight the case the bitter end, and even carry it as far as the Privy Council. If there was any way of avoiding litigation it should be and left blank the date when the first power was to be taken.

Ald. Morris said he regretted that the amendment was suggested because he would like to support it. The city solicitor, however, said the resolution was not complete and that he had not time to get it in proper shape. The amendment he thought should be withdrawn.

Ald Cooper—Either you misunderstand the solicitor, or I do. The solicitor drew this resolution up this afternoon and he covers the four points mentioned. The Mayor-Whatever is done must be done quickly. I am sick of this.

Ald. Cooper—We sent the question to the people to let them deside. They the people to let them deside. They have spoken.

Ald. Peregrine—Do you think they thoroughly understood it.

Ald. Cooper—I have enough respect for the intelligence of a majority of the electors to believe that they knew what they were doing. Some of them, it is true, may not have understood it. They thought we were going to buy power to run the pumps.

The Mayor—If a universal price for power were fixed it would be a bad thing for Hamilton. As long as we agree not to sell below cost we should have the say of selling our power where we please.

Ald. Cooper—I don't think they intend to interfere.

The Mayor—Let them say so.

The Mayor—Let them say so.

Ald. Morris—What would you sug had not attempted to cover all the points.

The matter of placing meters at all the stations where the city used the rower was insisted on by Ald. Allan and will be included in the application.

Ald. Cooper—We spent many days before trying to get this into shape. We practically agreed upon a resolution. Now you come back and want a thousand amendments. Why the change?

Ald. Peregrine—Like the Methodist pup, you get your eyes opened.

Ald. Morris to the Solicitor—Will you advise delay for a day or so?

The Solicitor—I will not advise delay. Ald. Anderson and Cooper were the only ones to support the amendment, Ald. Morris, Jutten, Allan and Peregrine voting in favor of the motion.

REJECT PEACE SUGGESTION.

Ald. Peregrine then moved another Ald. Morris—What would you suggest?

The Mayor—That we be free to sell power where we like as long as we do not sell below cost.

Replying to Ald. Allan, the solicitor said the commission would be obliged to meet annually to fix the amount paid by the municipalities for power, but nothing was said about fixing the price that power was to be sold at.

Ald. Peregrine—The company is al-

Ald. Allan—I will second an amendment that the solicitor be empowered to confer with the company with a view to relieving the city of liability.

The Mayor—We admit no liability.

Ald. Peregrine—Then fix it to suit vourself.

ourself.
The Mayor-No, I will have nothing The Mayor—No, I will have nothing more to do with it. I would suggest that if you are going to do anything along that line that you have the solicitor see if they have any suggestions to make as to a way out of litigation, and report to the committee.

"We don't mean by that any joke, such as taking their power, but a reasonable suggestion," added his Worship. The amendment was worded as suggested, but was voted down, Ald. Cooper, Morris, Anderson and Jutten opposing it.

It was agreed that the committee should meet on Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock to receive the city application, as drafted by the City Solicitor. BOYS' COUNCIL.

Banquet at Central Methodist Church-Objects Explained.

The Hamilton Boys' Club Council which was recently organized for the purpose of keeping religious and athletic clubs in touch with one another, had a banquet last evening in Central Method ist Church for the purpose of getting the different religious, literary and athletic members together, so that the aim of the organization might be explained to The banquet was a complete su them. The ladies of the Central Church land prepared well laden tables of good things for the boys, and after they had done ample justice to the daintily prepared banquet, an address was given by U. J. Robinson, secretary of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Robinson spoke of the need of such a scheme as the clubs would thus know what one another were doing and would be working together.

A short programme was given, consisting of piano solo, Frank Wright; recitation, Miss Sharp.

The work of the ather than the prompts of the accommittee. These committees would be the athletic committee, literary committee and religious committee. The work of the athletic committee would consist in promoting athletic games and finding suitable places where the games might be played. The literary committee would endeavor to develop and elevate along literary lines the minds of the members by securing talented speakers to give addresses at open meetings. The speeches partly would consist of a series of business talks by business men. The religious committee would arrange for meetings for Bible study and have charge of other features of a religious nature. A small paper would be printed for the purpose of keeping the members in touch with the work. In the paper the notes of the council would printed.

Each club would be entitled to have a representation of three members, the entry fee for each club to be $2. The money so raised would be used to defray expenses. The cards for entrance to the leagues and lectures would cost each person 25 cents. The Advisory Board is to be formed of business men selected by the executive and it will be their duty to watch and consider all questions of an important nature.

ANOTHER HUNT.

Ald. Jutten—A good way send a letter.
Ald. Allan—It is a legal matter let the solicitor go.
Ald. Cooper then presented the amendment which Ald. Anderson seconded that the solicitor draw up a report applying for a thousand horse power.
While Ald. Allan was speaking. Ald. Wright, who is not a member of the Searching For Treasure at Bottom of Tobermoray Bay.

The operations in Tobermory Bay will be carried on with the aid of the most modern and powerful plant. Thus three times the steam power employed by the present syndicate quested him to desist.

Ald. Wright—I can converse with Ald.

The Mayor—Not at a meeting.

Ald. Cooper said all these points had been threshed out before and the matter practically settled before the vote was taken. He saw no need for wrangling now. er employed by the present syndicate will be at the disposal of the searchers. Powerful disposal of the searchers.

BILLS OF LADING.

Something About the New Measure Now in Force.

The new uniform bill of lading, which was authorized by the Board of Railway Commissioners some months ago, went into effect vesterday. The new bill of lading defines terms upon which every shipment is made, and settles the rights of both shipper and carrier. It fixes when the shipper's liability begins and ends, and all matters in regard to claims, and all matters in regard to claims, etc. The bill represents a contract by which the carrier undertakes to convey the goods right to the destination set forth in the bill. The carrier's responsibility, therefore, does not end when the goods are shipped part of the way over another road, as it did under the old system. The shipper or consignee can bring claim for damage against either the initial carrier or the second road. Under the old system he had to bring action against the road upagainst either the initial carrier or the second road. Under the old system he had to bring action against the road upon which the damage was supposed to have been inflicted. In case of such claims the shipper has hitherto had to prove the carrier negligent. Under the hew bill of lading the onus is upon the carrier to prove its freedom from negligence. Under the old system, claims for damage had to be made within thirty-six hours after the receipt of the goods, but under the new bill of lading the claims must be made in writing within four months. The carrier's responsibility continues for forty-eight hours, or, in the case of bonded goods, seventy-two hours, after written notice of the arrival of the goods has been sent or given.

tice of the arrival of the goods has been sent or given.

The new uniform bill of lading is especially valuable to smaller shippers. The larger shippers have been able to look after themselves pretty well, but now the smallest shipper will be in an equal position, the terms of the shipment being clearly set out, and the same in every case. Both parties are agreed upon the new form, and it is thought to be very fair to both sides.

treath century bows stitched flat. The long coat reached nearly to the hem of the skirt and had a trimming of the same kind, with a slightly bloused front attached, fastening at one side below the long waist line. Behind, the coat was semifitting.

Another suit was in a heavy ribbed silk in a dark, dull shade of green. The skirt, was made with long, straight plaits, close fitting over the hips, and the coat was long and on the order of a redingote, with its skirt close fitting over the hips, and closing with large buttons. A rolling collar of the same silk extended down to a point at the front closing, and both sides then sloped off gradually to about knee length and suddenly took a sharp backward curve, emphasizing the nointed abaut like die in in middle a sharp backward curve, emphasizing the pointed, shawl-like dip in the middle

The "balance" or hang of a coat is all have the appearance of straight down, no perceptible sl all have the appearance of hanging straight down, no perceptible slant being visible. The cloth pattern should be ripped apart and pressed and cut away on the seam lines. The suit material had better be laid, folded down the middle, on as long a table as possible, and each piece fost carefully pinned in place before cutting any out. If there is no up and down to the cloth the bottom of one piece can often be fitted into the top of another, in that way effecting a considerable saving on the material.

If broadcloth or any other cloth with a decided nap is used, the pieces all have to be laid one way. Each piece is cut out with the proper seam allowances, and before the pattern is taken off the centire outline must be clearly marked with tailor's chalk. Pieces for the fronts may be cut out of the canvas, letting it extend down the length of the front, across the front to a distance of about two inches under the arm. The interlining of muelin is cut out and each piece basted to its corresponding piece of the suit amterial on the wrong side. Then the canvas is basted together and tried on. Let some one slip the hand inside and turn all the seams towards the front, excepting the long start seam. This should lie towards the length, and see if it fits correctly. If the preliminary work in the old muslin was well done, as well as the subsequent cutting out and basting together of the real coat, no altering will be necessary. All the seams except the underarm and shoulder seams are stitched and finished and if extra canvas seems advisable in front, bust forms all ready to adjust may be bought. These are pinned in place, and can be cut and made smaller or larger as the case may require. In the coat shown, which fastens with two buttons in the front, front facings of the cloth, the coat lengths are cut, and they are five inches in width. This coat, as can be seen, is double breasted and opens far down, which is one of the newest features.

This facing is stitched down the front edge on each side in a seam and then turned to the wrong side and basted in place. The rolling collar is cut with a seam in the middle of back and should first be cut from canvas basted together with the seam on the right side, basted to the coat and tried on. One may wonder why no word all this time has been said about pressing when it constitutes one of the most important parts of the making. It is really worthy of a good many words, but these hints already given here have been more on a general order, assuming that a good many points are already known. For it would be quite impossible in the space given to give detailed directions for each step of the making. For pressing, one should have seam and sleeve boards, as well as a padded form for the shoulders There are dull blues, greys, greens, browns and purples, and black is a promised favorite.

There are two different length short skirts to be worn—one which just clears the ground, and, it must be admitted, is a dust catcher; and the other, which is at least three inches from the ground and cannot fail to be thoroughly clean and comfortable to the wearer.

At an exhibit of suits seen a short time ago was one which would really belong to the three-piece suits. It was made in a beautifully fine navy blue broadeloth, trimmed with black silk braid about one-quarter of an inch wide. The dress was princess, with three-quarter length sleeves, showing bright.

The brim rolls high, either at the feather.

Two rows of stitching should be put around the sleeve near the upper end of the canvas to singulate a cult. And these rows must meet exactly when the sleeve is sewed together. The lining is stitched together in both seams, and the coat and lining sleeve parts are both turned wrong side out, and the outside seams tacked together. Then the lining is turned right side out, over the coat sleeve, and a basting put in several inches from the bottom, as well as another several inches from the top. The sleeve is turned round right side out and the lining hemmed down around the hand, about an inch from the edge of the sleeve. The sleeve lining is basted into the coat, but not the sleeve lining.

The lining is cut like the outside, excepting that there is an inch wide inverted pleat laid down the middle of the back. The seams, excepting the shoulder and underarm, are stitched, then pinned in place in the coat, the seams tacked lightly in place, and all the while taking care that plenty of room is allowed for both the length and width in the lining. If it fits perfectly smooth the outside will surely wrinkle, so that is a point to be guarded against. The fronts are hemmed over the facing, about four inches back of the edge.

The sleeves should be cut so that there is only one inch difference in their width at the elbow. No gathers will be necessary then at that point. The cotton lining is basted to the goods, then the seams are put together and the sleeve tried on. The outside seam is stitched and pressed open, and a piece of canvas on the bias and about four inches wide is basted to the hand end of the sleeve. The lower edge of the canvas comes to the basting, which marks the correct length, and the upper edge should be slightly stretched to make it fit well.

AFTER SIX YEARS OF INDIGESTION

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Made a Permanent Cure.

There are many medicines that will relieve indigestion for a time-there are few that will make a permanent cure. few that will make a permanent cure. But there is one medicine that is a sure cure—that medicine is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They have cured thousands of cases—many of them of years' standing. Cases like that of Mr. John E. Seale, of Montreal, Que., after many other medicines have been tried and found worthless. Mr. Seale says: "For pearly six years I suffered with indigestion. During all that time I was constantly taking medicine for the trouble, but never got more than temporary relief. Finally I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after using them for some time the trouble disappeared and I am now able to eat heartily without the least trace of the suffering I formerly endured. I can, from my awn experience, strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a permanent cure for indigestion."

An excellent way to pack the sum net clothes is to have shelves built in an attack closet or in a room that is little used. These shelves should be lined with blue paper and the clothes neatly folded upon them, if possible, at full length. See that clothes of the same kind are placed together, as all the white linen skirts, lingerie frocks, talored shirtwaists and so on. ## The Crafty Elephant.

The Oratty Elephant.

The government officials while on tour in the Kericho district, eighteen months ago, had their caravan charged by a herd of 200 elephants. In self-defence they had to order their native escort to open fire. The eventually were driven off after a heavy fusillade, with a loss of four killed and many wounded.

A lucky escape was that of a major in the 3rd Hussars (British army) who, for several days, had been following a small herd of elephants through a forests near Mt. Kenia. Finding it impossible to get a clear view of the feeding herd, owing to the very long grass and jungle undergrowth, he climbed some thirty feet into a tree in order to get a good shot at his selected bull. He was armed with a 600-cordite rifle, and when he fired, the force of the explosion was so great that the major was knocked clean out of the tree and remained stunned for several minutes at its foot. The elephant is a crafty animal. A Somall hunter once told me of an incident that happened while he was acting as guide to a German who was shooting elephants near Shirati, on the Anglo-German boundary. One day they chanced on a huge herd. The German gradually got near the herd, selected a big all elephant and fired, wounding it. Maddened with pain and anger, the elephant charged the caravan, choosing a native porter as the object of his wrathhae rapidly gained on the terrified native, who was flying for his life, Overtaking him, the elephant put his trunk

CHILDHOOD AILMENTS

Most of the troubles that affect little ones may be traced to the stomach and bowels, and if these are put right the child will get well and thrive well. Baby's Own Tablets cure all stomach and bowel troubles and all the other minor ailments of babyhood and childhood. The Tablets are easy to take and are guaranteed free from opites. Mrs. H. Matthews, Canfield, Ont., says:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my little girl who had a weak stomach and was badly constipated. Provincial Grant Goes to the Staff Ezclusively.

Dundas, Oct. 2 .- At the last meeting of the Board of Education, it will be re membered, Principal Moore, in his Public School report, sprang a surprise by stating that a grant of $225, made in 1908, and a like grant made this year, by the Department, to be applied exclusively as an addition to teachers' salaries, had not been paid to the teachers, as directed. The matter was somewhat of a mystery to the Board, but communication with the Department has established the fact that these grants must be paid the teachers in accordance with the following schedule:

In towns—If the teacher's total experience in the schools of the Province of Ontario shall have been at least five years on July next the grant shall be: For a Provincial first-class, $30; for a Provincial second-class, $22.50.

If said experience shall have been less than five years on the same date, the grant shall be: For a Provincial first-class, $22.50; for a Provincial second-class, $45. nembered, Principal Moore, in his Publi

The phrase "which is to be applied exdusively as an addition to salaries," is omitted in the regulations for 1908.

A meeting of the Internal Management Committee has been held since the De-partment was heard from, and it was decided to recommend payment of the grants to the teachers as provided for by the Department. The teachers are well pleased with the outcome of the matter, but are somewhat puzzled to know how such a misunderstanding between the Board and the Department could have

THE HAMILTON IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY

In making a protest against the decision come to by the judges of the above society, re flower boxes, back yards, etc. I do not consider I am too hasty in the matter, the official decision not being as yet published; but I am informed by one of the said judges that they have adopted a rule not laid down in what was published for the guidance of those who choose to enter the competitions, namely, that all those whom they style "gentiemen of leisure" should be excluded in the award, notwithstanding the fact their front and back wards were the fact their front and back yards were monthly examined, and nice things said monthly examined, and nice things said about the care taken to beautify the city. No such rule should have been adopted after entries were accepted. I am also given to understand that as Weilington street south is such a beautiful street that no one on it, if affected by this decision, will in future fail to leep up the reputation of the street—in fact, the judges do not consider them entitled to any consideration, but that "England expects every man to do his duty." no matter how shabbily he is treated. The whole matter settled down to the question of whether the Inter-provincial Union was willing to open its ranks to other teams. Ottawa's opinion could not be gathered in the matter, as no repre-sentative of that city was present, but Hamilton, Montreal and the Argos were Hamilton, Montreal and the Argos were in favor of allowing other teams to enter if they showed that they were of the proper strength. The T. A. A. C. and Parkdales, who are the O. R. F. U. clubs most interested, claim that as they are playing senior Rugby only in name they are finding it hard to hold their men. Their best players want to play in senior company, if possible, but as it now exists, the Inter-provincial is closed to them.

The representatives present thought that if the number of teams in the L. P. R. U. were increased to six that it would not prove a paying proposition, as each team would have increased rail way fares and the prospect of poor gaies. # N. Y: Crew May Go to Henley.

New York, Oct. 2.—Things are pretty quiet along the Harlem River these days. Shells are lashed securely on their racks and only a few venturesome oarsmen go out for a spin in the harder gigs each fine Sunday afternoon. There's lots doing in rowing talk, however, and a bit of news came out the other day that will send the public interested in the sculling game sky high in no time. The news is that the New York Athletic Club is thinking of sending its champion senior eight-oared crew, that whipped the best the American continent could produce at the National Regatta in Detroit this summer, to Henley next June for a crack at the Britishers. Officially, the New York A. C. has taken no action or held no discussion on the proposed trip, but a number of wealthy members have promised to dig down deep into their pockets for the expenses of the trip if Coach Gianinni will only say the word that the crew is good enough to do the club proud on the English rowing course. The N. Y. A. C. senior eight went to Travers Island recently and posed for a picture, and it was during this operation that the proposed Henley trip was talked over by those who favor the scheme.

The champion crew is made up as follows: Stroke, Kusche; No. 7, Quinn; No. 6, Boyle; No. 5, Rivas; No. 4, Morrow; No. 3, Hooper; No. 2, Boylan; No. 1, Munn; coxswain, W. W. Swan. Coach Gianinni has told a very close personal friend that he regards this eight as one of the best that ever sat in a N. Y. A. C. shell. Whether "Gene's" opinion is such that he is willing to send hig men against the best in the world at Henley remains to be seen.

NEW YORK YACHT CLUB DODGING CHALLENGE

Sir Thomas Lipton Insists on Change of Rules—Cincinnati Mrn Believes They Are Afraid Lipton Will Lift the Cup.

nanaging editor of the Cincinnati Times-Star, who was among the passengers to arrive on the steamship Mauretania ast night, brought word from Sir Thos. Lipton that he would sail for New York on Oct. 9, to make a tour of the country and to issue a challenge to the New York Yacht Club.

Referring to his plans, Sir Thomas said: "I will race for the Cup if I am permitted to do so on even terms. But I will not engage to sail a marine freak across the ocean to compete against a skimming dish. When the Shamrock crossed the ocean she came within an ace of sinking with all hands, and I shaill never ask another man to subject his life to such useless risks."

Sir Thomas further said he hoped the New York Yacht Club would permit crace under conditions he would suggest. If they did not, he felt that there was but one thing left to do, namely, to leave a sum in his will with directions to his executors to build a yacht to compete for the America's Cup whenever the New York yachting organization would sanction a contest under fair conditions.

Mr. Garretson added that Sir Thomas is representing the yachting spirit of England in his ambition for another challenge.

"More than that," said Mr. Garretson.

England in his amount for knother challenge.
"More than that," said Mr. Garretson,
"King Edward himself is deeply interested in yachting and has been working to restore to Cowes its premier position as a yachting centre just as the Kaiser is working to make Kiel pre-eminent. His renewed efforts have the sufport of King Edward and the aristocratic circles in England and will give him the countenance which it is said they have so far withheld."

It is evident here that if the New York Yacht Club should accept a challenge from Sir Thomas on the conditions he names, it would be a direct violation of the deed of gift by which George L. Schuyler gave the America's Cup to the club. The terms of that agreement provide that all challenges must come from authorized yacht clubs and that the challenging yacht must cross the ocean on her own bottom and under sail.

This provision, Sir Thomas' told Mr. Garretson, protects the Cup from ever being taken from the club. It allows the defender to be designed along the lines of speed only, while the challenger must be a seaworthy craft fit to cross the sea under her own sail and when she arrives here must compete with a racing freely within cavids out the search of the compete with a racing freely within cavids each that teached.

arrives here must compete with a racing freak which could not hold together twenty-four hours in mid-Atlantic. The defenders of recent years have been racing machines, with a great spread of canvas, and depending upon tons of lead on their keels to keep them upright in the water.

Yachtsmen when they learned of the attitude of Sir Thomas expressed doubt that the New York Yacht Club would be able to meet the challenge, because of the provision in the deed of gift.

Mr. Garretson said that if the yacht club refused to yield and insisted on handicapping Sir Thomas out of the race he might enter, the English interest in the America's Cup would die.

"It should be understood that the English yachtsmen are with Lipton in his demand that the race should be fair. If Lipton is kept out of the race, it is doubtful if any other yachtsman will ever challenge for the Cup. They feel Yachtsmen when they learned of the

GRIDIRON GOSSIP

Trainer Sim Vaughan was busy all morning at the Cricket Grounds erecting the tackling dummy which arrived yesterday. A big turnout of the seniors and intermediates will take place this afternoon and one of the hardest practices of the season will be indulged in. The two teams will line up for an hour or so and then try out the dumity.

Signal work. He is one of the best tackles in the Union.

T. A. A. C. had over forty men in uniform, last night. George Mara and Les Croks put in a hard hour's work along with the rest.

Roy McGiffin and "Dade" Burkart are foth formidable and contenders for outside wink on the Crimson team.

The intermediates will hold a practice on Monday night at 8 o'clock and Manager Tom Rose is anxious that all the players be out. The lights are now in working order and aford plenty of illumination for evening work.

Alvin D. Huether, C. E., of Wiarton, Out., and of last year's senior Varsity wing line, 1907-1908, will dou the Argo uniform. He has weight and speed and is a great tackler.

Unless some of the old players can be per-suaded to don uniforms the Dundas line-up will have many new faces.

WHEN LITTLE MEN BEAT BIG ONES

It wasn't so very many years ago that one of the best known sayings in the boxing ring was sprung. This was the remark about a good 165-pound man having a chance with the best of them. This was changed somewhat into the saying that he was big enough to meet anything on two legs, but the wording is not in the old form.

Still, it brings up a point which has been asked lately in some messages by correspondents. This is as to whether there is any definite mark for heavy

This was changed somewhat into the saying that he was big enough to meet anything on two legs, but the wording is not in the old form.

Still, it brings up a point which has been asked lately in some messages by correspondents. This is as to whether there is any definite mark for heavy men in the larger divisions of the ring, so far as regards ability.

One can only answer the queries by saying that some of the most remark able boxers in the ring have been men of medium weight. Bob Fitz-immons was one of the wonders of the day as a middleweight, and, although he was probably over the limits of that class when he defeated Jim Corbett at Carson City, he still was the lighter man. One bout on Sullivan was never able to teat Charley Mitchell, although the latter was by far the lighter man. One bout on Sullivan's record which credits him with having the better of Mitchell in New York, could not be considered decisive, as police quickly stopped the affair, which was originally carded as an exhibition. The bout went three rounds. Many good judges who have been close students of Walcott's work have stated that he was one of the hardest litters in the ring his prime. Jack McKenna one of the Hardest litters in the ring his prime. Jack McKenna founded this larger men. But he always figured that if Walcott was handicapped by his lack of height and his subsequent lack of reach, compared with larger men. # Athletic Peace Was Ratified.

C. A. A. U. Approved of the Agreement.

Toronto, Oct. 2 .- Although the athletic peace has been an assured fact for several weeks, and has already affected local meets, it was not officially completed until last night, when the C. A. A. U. met and approved of it. The peace delegates who attended the conference at Ottawa presented their report to the meeting, and the agreement signed on that occasion was duly ratified. All the organizations concerned have now approved of the settlement, so that it becomes binding. The definition of an amateur, with the exceptions made to the rule. Proved perfectly satisfactory to the C. A. A. U.

As all the provinces which make up the large athletic federation in the Dominion have their own sectional organizations, with the exception of Ontario, it was decided to alter this exception to the rule immediately. A meeting will be called in the course of a few days to form an Ontario section of the C. A. A. U. and officers will be elected for it. This will complete the organization throughout Canada.

The Ontario boxing championships were awarded to the Toronto Rowing Club, and will be held on Nov. 25, 26 and 27. The Manitoba A. A. A. applied for the Dominion wrestling championships, but the application was laid over until the annual meeting.

Five new clubs became affiliated with the C. A. A. U. They were the Coldwart A. A. A., the Brantford Y. M. C. A., the Bradford A. A. A., the Niagara Falls A. C., and the Napanee A. A. A. eti: peace has been an assured fact for several weeks, and has already affected

The Shamrocks Are Fancied.

Montreal, Oct. 2.—There is very little betting on the Shamrock-Montreal game of to-day. What there is is at even money.

The continued rain of the week has The continued rain of the week has left the Mile End field soft and slippery, and as Shamrocks are good in the mud the chances are in their favor, despite the fact that Montreal has twice defeated them this season. The light home of the Montreal team will be up against a difficult proposition in that big Shamrock defence on the slow ground. Montreal will play without any change from last time out. Robinson will probably be dropped and McIlwaine played on the Shamrock home.

MARKETS AND FINANCE

Saturday, O... 2.—The market the morning was not nearly as large as it has been for the past few Saturdays, but the depand was not too great for the supply. Grapes were offered in large quantities, and the highest price they brought was 12 cents. The Longhurst peaches this year are not up to their usual quality, consequently they could be had very cheap, the poorer baskets bringing only 20 cents a basket. Although there is a scarcity at present of oats in the Hamilton market, the local dealers put no faith in the report of the predicted shortage from Chicago, and do not expect much change. Vegetables were selling well and the prices were not excessive. Dairy products were steady in price and good in quality. The prices of all other produce remained unchanged. The ruling prices at 8 a. m. were:

IDEAS OF HADES

question of future punishment terested mankind from the earliest Darwin found many races with-ny idea of a God, but none without a devil.

The ancient Egyptian conception of hell is found in Perm-hru, or Book of the Dead, probably the oldest book in the world. Herein is described the journeys of the damned man to perdition. Snakes, horrid ghosts and nameless terrors beset the path and he found considerably more when he got there. To these discomforts were added fire and sandy desert.

In the old Assyrian hell the spirits of the dead flitted about in the darkness of the underworld and ate dust; those who broke through the guarding drag-ons came back to earth as vampires.

The penal hell of the Hindus is one of the oldest known. Over it presided Yama the Tamer, with large teeth and monsters, insects and other infernal maninery. Red hot charcoal figures large with boiling oil as an incidental tor ly with boiling oil as an incidental torture.

Early Buddhism, with its 450,000,000 followers, had a hell wherein the wicked soul was spread prone upon a bed of blazing embers, with bed clothes of the same kind. When it was hungry it was regaled with balls of red-hot iron.

The Buddhists of China and Ceylon were content with no less than a multiplicity of hells, six of which were preserved for the peculiarly evil.

In the Zoroastrian religion accursed apprits sat forever in a cold, dark lane, surrounded by scorpions.

Future punishment as viewed in the classic ages was vague, and neither Greek nor Roman, it would seem, had any fixed ideas upon the subject. There was another place, Tartarus, equally as vague, except as to locality, which was another place, lartarus, equally as vague, except as to locality, which Hesiod, oldest of Greek poets, placed at two-thirds of a mile below the earth. One had to cross a river to get there. It is noticable that all hells, except the Christian, that have a river in front of

The landscale that all nells, except the Christian, that have a river in front of them. Tartarus seems to have been a penitentiary reserved for those who had offended the gods, and ordinary sinners had no place there.

The hell of the old Hebrews was somewhat extensive. "The land of Egypt," says Gadaliah, "is 400 miles square; that is 1-60 of the size of Ethiopa, which is 1-60 of the size of the earth. The earth is 1-60 of the Garden of Eden but 1-60 of Gohenna," or hell. The Cabalists held that this large tract lay far to the north, and here lodged devils and the souls of departed sinners, together with earth-guakes and thunderstorms. There are five varieties of fire in Gehenna, actording to the Talmud. A hard lot was in store for the soul that was less affected by the sinner while on earth. by the sinner while on earth.

Our Anglo-Saxon forbears, compromising between the two, had a "Heliewite" (whence our English word "hell") which consisted of a pit in which the unfortunate simer suffered alternately a melting heat, and a nipping frost. A hard lot was in store for the soul that was condemned to this Anglo-Saxon hell, for it combined all the horrors of all the others. Besides fire and ice were serpents with fiery tusks gnawing the flesh from the bones of their victims, while pale address, bloody eagles and foul beasts with horns of iron lent variety to the torments.

Descriptions of hell in the Koran of the Mohammedan do not leave much consolation for the wicked Mussulman. Flameless smoke shall envelop them and smokeless flame," says one chapter. Another informs the evidoers that "they shall be dragged into hell by their forlocks and their feet, and there shall be cut out for them garments of fire."

Among barbarians and savages the devil is the chief deity. As was aptly put to a missionary by a Maori chief of New Zealand: "Why should we strive to please your God, who is all good, by prayers and sacrifices! He will do us no harm. It is the Evil one who is foreyer seeking our hurt that we must endeavor to appease. Therefore we of

In most of the islands of the Pacific hell is not reserved for the wicked in our sense of the word; that is, the thief, the murderer, the slanderer, and the selfish man. All these finally reach a state of happiness. But a most unmistakable hell is reserved for those guilty of the only sin known to them, timidity and cowardice.

The hell of the New Guinea native is a womanless region wherein the unfortunate soul wanders forever in search of a mate.

A unique idea of the future state was that of the ancient Peruvians. As the disembodied soul winged its way to eternity it encountered two rocks, upon one of which it must needs rest. The choice was determined by the morality of the life in the flesh. If it rested upon the left-hand rock it was instantly translated to "Po" or oblivion, a state analogous to the Nirvana of the Orient. If, through earthly misdeeds, however, the unhappy spirit was guided to the right-hand rock, it entered into a purgatorial hell, where fiends grated away the flesh from all the bones in was that of the ancient Peruvians. away the flesh from all the bones in succession, after which the skeleton was succession, after which the skeleton was reclothed and sent back to earth for another try. Writing in a bulletin of the American Geographical society, Edwin Swift Balca speaks of the discovery of the coast of thy Antarctic continent by Lieutenant Charles Wilkes, of the United States navy, on January 19, 1840, Dieutenant Charles Wilkes, of the United States navy, on January 19, 1840, as "the greatest geographical discovery of the nneteenth century." Captain R. F. Scott, who led the British 'Discovery expedition of 1901-'04, and is now preparing for another Antarctic journey, tried to discredit the existence of Wilkes Land. He got on the edge of it, failed to see it, and steamed away north on the plea that he was, short of fuel. Scott says that any ship steaming on the 178th meridian nu the month of February could reach the "great barrier" without encountering pack ice. "It is strange to think," he remarks, "that there may be a season of the year when the enterprising tourist steamer may show its passengers the lofty smoke-capped form of Mount Erebus as easily as it now does the fine scenery of Spitzbergen." The same explorer estimated that the Antarctic region was sheathed with an incomment of the content of the same explorer estimated that the Antarctic region was sheathed with an ice cap nine hundredd feet in thickness. Lieutenant Ernest H. Shackleton, who Lieutenant Ernest H. Shackleton, who accompanied Scott, and who later made a record on his own account and now wants to try it again, was accompanied by three others when he made his dash for the South Pole last autumn, and after a sledge journey of 1,708 miles, lasting 126 days, got within 111 statute miles of the southern axis, or 354 miles better than Scott's record. The latitude reached was 88 decrees 23 minutes south future punishment. The happy hunting grounds are reserved for the good; that is, the brave. As to where the wicked go they are silent. The old Icelanders believed of a held of cold and ice. Laplanders of the extreme north, while denying themselves any future life, believed that the souls of bears went to a sort of bear hell, where they were forever tortured. The Hottentots are wholly without belief in any hereafter, though their lives on earth are made miserable by the interference of many devils.

The Basutos believe that the souls of the wicked flutter forever blindly through the jungles of the earth knocking their heads against trunks and walls, swirling into dank marshes and suffering such other casualities and hardships as would naturally befall a sightless flying creature.

On the return, 'the high winds, which were now blowing at our backs,' says Shackleton, 'helped us to travel from twenty to thirty miles daily.' This story of a quick and easy return sounds like the narratives of the two discoveries of the North Pole. How two discoveries of the North Pole. How-ever, an attack of dysentery, due to horse meat, caused the party much suf-fering and kept them in camp eight days. The heavy winds encountered ertions. The heavy winds encountered in the polar vicinity show that the so-so-called "polar calm" is a myth. The atmospheric conditions doubtless constitute the greatest hardship of an attack on the southern axis. WHY PLOW?

WHY PLOW?

Plowing is necessary to the maintaining of soil-depth. Under cultivation, the surface soil slowly but surely wastes, as all will have notived. The proper depth of soil for best results differs, according to the character of the soil, no doubt, but that a certain depth is necessary, will not be disputed by anyone. If the waste of soil goes on, how can depth of loam be maintained, except by bringing up from the subsoil a little occasionally to become incorporated with the layer above?—Farmer's Advocate.

In Plymouth county—the same which contains the large English settlement around Lemars—a farmer found one of his cows dead in the pasture. He thought she had been struck by lightning. The next day several more members of the herd succumbed, and it is stated in the despatches that both horses and mules on the neighboring farms began to die in the same sudden manner. Dr. Miller, one of the assistant State veterinarians, was sent for, and immediately summoned his chief, who pronounced the trouble anthrax. DECADENCE OF SHEEP.

DECADENCE OF SHEEP.

Every one laments the decadence of the sheep breeding industry on small Canadian farms. There are comparatively few small flocks owned in the older parts of Canada, and the West has need to import frozen mutton from New Zealand and Australia, in order that its inhabitants may eat that sort of meat. Versiy there is little encouragement for the Canadian flock master. He gots a mere pittance for his wool, not enough to pay for growing, clipping and marketing it. In Alberta his fleeces will not pay for the keep of the sheep that raise them. His annual increase must bear a part of the cost. The general farmer of the grain-growing West will not keep sheep. His premises are not fitted for them, and, as a rule, he knows little about them and their ways. Successful sheep keeping is an set unto itself—a simple enough one if ways. Successful sheep keeping is an art unto itself—a simple enough one, it are unto itself—a simple enough one, it is true, when it is understood, but still it is a business by itself. IMPROVE SHEEP BREEDING. Eight demonstration flocks of grade sheep, bred and kept for commercial pur-poses, are being established at repre-sentative points in the Province of On-tario, one in Middlesex, one in Huron or Bruce, another in Brant, one near Toonto, one in Simcoe county, one in Voria, and one in the neighborhood Kingston or east. Billy Patterson.

"Who struck Billy Patterson?" is a question that has gone into history. It is asked frequently by persons who have no idea who Billy Patterson was, for it has become a stock expression signifying a mystery.

But now comes T. M. Lake, formerly of Faunuier county Yn, and now a real factor of the pattern of the pattern struck the blow.

Hardly had Payne been taken out a side way to another stridents' lodginghouse when the police arrived, demanding the man "who struck Billy Patterson." All the students were questioned, but each denied tht he had struck Patterson. Though it soon became apparent that Patterson was not dangerously injured, the students kept their vow, Payne preferring to avoid notoriety. Payne afterward became widely known as a physician in Virginia, and attained some note as a magazine writer under the nom de plume of Nicholas Spicer.—Chicago Record.

FALL FAIR AT OAKVILLE

Splendid Lot of Exhibits and Large Crowd of People.

Fully 4,000 Were Present During the Closing Day.

A Lot of New Features Were Appreciated by All.

One of the best fairs of the season, that of the Trafalgar Agricultural Society, held annually at Oakville, closed yesterday after two successful Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather of the opening day Thursday, the entries in all the departments arrived on time and with one or two exceptions, were the largest. Friday was the big day and early in the morning Oakville was well filled with visitors from adjoining places. Although the sky looked threatening large crowds came in from the country and the attendance was estimated at 4,000. The Mississuaga band was recent in military uniform estimated at 4,000. The Mississunge band was present in military uniform and gave an excellent pragramme, which added greatly to the pleasure of the day. A magnificent spectacle took place in the morning when 600 school children marched around the school children marched around the grounds singing patriotic songs, and each one carrying a small flag. After the parade a singing contest was entered upon by the children of the different schools.

The entries in horses were larger than on all former occasions and the line-up of roadsters and carriage horses would have done justice to the Toronto fair from the point of quality. The cattle were all of superior quality and were the attraction for farmers and stockmen. Many prizes were won by F. H. Osler, of Bronte, who had a large showing of Holstein. In swine the entries were good and James Featherston & Son carried off numerous prizes in this class. The showing of flowers was large and beautiful and included some choice palms and gladiolias which added greatly to the decoration of the building. One could not help being struck with the magnificent display of fruit, which included grapes, plums, pears and a large number of apples, and easily surpassed all previous records. The large, juicy pies were enough to make the mouth water, while the cakes and bread was just like mother used to make. The entries in the vegetable display were larger than ever and the judges were at loss to know to whom to award the prizes. In the ladies' work department there were numerous of Holstein. In swine the entries were good and James Featherston & Son to award the prizes. In the lades work department there were numerous exhibits of work done with the needle and the ladies' deserve much credit for the beautiful articles they turned out. There was a large number of excellent oil paintings in the fine arts display this year which also included drawings done by the various schools that showed in no mean way what the

The ground was dotted with boths of various kinds and all helped in their own particular way to make the fair more exciting. The Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian Church had a large tent and did an excellent business in the serving of light lunches. The leading feature of the afternoon was the exhibition of horses given through the kindness of Herbert C. Cox and others. It was one of the

Hunting For Big Game.

Hunting For Big Came.

The Highlands of Ontario is an ideal spot for the sportsaman during the open hunting season for big game. In the Temagami region moose are plentiful and may be killed during the period from October 16th to November 15th. This territory is a forest preestre of vast expanse, and in addition to being the hunter's paradise, its waters abound with game fish of many species. The home of the red deer is located somewhat to the south of Temagami, particularly in the districts known as "Mus-

WHITE SLAVES.

Victim, Aged 13, Tells Story of Herror.

Prosecutor Says Gang Must Go to Penitentiary.

Chicago, Oct. 2.-The testimony of 13year-old May Michaelson in the Englewood Municipal Court vesterday after noon added new details to one of the most shocking cases of white slavery ever known in Chicago. Upon her evidence fourteen men are held.

Her 12-year-old sister Nora also has been a victim, but as yet has not been permited to testify.

Lucy Speers, aged 11, the child of a neighbor, also was enticed into the place, it is said, but was rescued by her mother, upon whose complaint the police raid was made.

A Toronto Man Under Arrest in Rechester. Jerry Trumbley and his wife, Grace, are accused of procuring the little girls for men who are said to have frequented the Trumbley flat, at Fifty-second street and Winchester avenue.

One of the men, Edward Wolf, 6349

Normal avenue, collector for the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance com-pany, already has been held to the grand pany, already has been held to the grand jury on testimony given by the oldest girl. The others, mostly Greeks, have been on trial two days, and with each days details more sensational than told on preceding sessions were disclosed. Yesterday after the oldest girl had given a description of some of her experiences the hearing was continued until to-morrow afternoon.

The men all of whom have been identifications and the service of the se slave evil.

In questioning May Michaelson, Assistant State's Attorney John A. Barnes drew from her a story which, he declared. established a conspiracy on the part of Mrs. Trumbley and will result in penitentiary sentences for the men now accounted.

According to the girl, who was questioned for three hours by the assistant state's attorney and by the attorneys for the defendants, Mrs. Trumbley enticed her and the other girls into her home on Aug. 11 and Aug. 17 and then placed them at the mercy of men whom she had invited to her apartment. She received more from the men in every see and invited to her apartment. She received money from the men in every instance, the girl declared, a part of which she gave to the girls. The latter were provided with new clothing by the women, it is said.

In addition to the orgies which the girl told the court took place at the Trumbly flat during the month of August, Mrs. Trumbly on three different occasions is said to have taken her to a Greek boarding house at 237 Center avenue and compelled her to remain there all day with the lodgers.

When the case first was pointed out to the police by Miss Ella Maley, an efficer of the Juvenile Protective League, the girl was taken to the boarding house and identified the man to whom she had been sold. Six of the lodgers were arrested by Detective John Farrell, of the New City station, and the others were taken into custody later.

"This is the worse case I have ever seen," declared Mr. Barnes. "After hearing the story of the girls over and over again I feel certain that the girls are telling the truth and that they have been peddled out by Mrs. Trumbley, just as they have testifieed. I am going to clean out this nest of corruption and its criginators who are guilty of white slavery on a small scale and I believe the ones under arrest are in a fair way for a term in the penitentiary.

Court was remanded to jail pending an investigation.

During September it is alleged that Schaffer passed four bogus cheques on three local business men for small amounts. All the cheques were drawn on the Bank of Toronto.

The police have received a communication from the chief constable of Toronto to the effect that several bogus cheques have been passed there, and that Schaffer is wanted by the authorities of that city.

Schaffer, who says he lives on James street, Toronto, claims to be a prometer. For a time he sold Cobalt stocks for a Toronto firm, which, it is said, discharged him. It is alleged that he continued to sell stocks for the firm after his discharge, for which he was wanted his discharge, for which he was wanted by the police, but the matter was ad-justed before an arrest was made.

The Perfect and the Imperfect.

"When that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away." But when will the perfect come? Is anything perfect in this world? Paul recognized the imperfection and fragmentariness of the things men boast of most. "We know in part." What a little fragment of the sum total of knowledge does any wan even the wiset possess! Even man, even the wisest, possess! Even if one could acquire the whole of hunan knowledge, he would have only a small part of the knowledge of Him who knows all. As to the higher gifts, they are usually even more limited. To every man is given a measure of the Spirit, so it may be said that the gift of prophesy is universal; but these higher gifts are so partial. but these higher gifts are so partial that it may be reasonably doubted that they exist at all. The Spirit is that they exist at all. The Spirit is given in only small measure to most. But there is one grace that is not given in part. It is whole and perfect where it is found at all. That grace is live. Love may be faint or intense, but it does not grow by parts intense, but it does not grow by parts as knowledge does.

Love is the perfection of faith. It is faith losing itself in that in which it confides. No faith can ever be perfect unless its object is perfect, nor can love make a perfect union unless its object is perfect. But when faith in God opens the heart to receive God's love, then that which is perfect is come. Knowledge gains a little. God's love, then that which is perfect is come. Knowledge gains a little here and a little there, and it strives in vain to build its fragments together into a perfect whole; but love gives all and receives all. Out of the fragmentary things of life it makes a perfect while; and its work will not be done "till we all come to a perfect man, to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."—The Christian Advocate.

In the latency of every soul there lurks, among the things it loves and venerates, some earnest and salient point whence a divine life may begin and radiate, some incipient idea of duty, it may be; some light mist of disinterested love; appearing vague and nebulous and infinitely distant within the mighty void—a broken fringe of holy light, seen only in the spirit's deepest darkness; and therein may be the stirrings of a mystic energy, and the haze may be gathered together and glow within the minding of do. But whenever the within us, be tranger ed together and glow within the mind into a star, a sun, a piercing eye of God. But whenever the Deity dwell-eth within us, he will be unfelt and a stranger to us till we abandon ourselves to the duties and aspirations which we feel to oe his voice, till we renounce ourselves and unhesitatingly precipitate our life on the persuasion of our disinterested affections. While his spirit "bloweth where it listeth." yet certain it is that they only who do his will shall ever feel his power.—James Martineau.

A Shrouded Firmament

A Shrouded Firmament.

((Ry a Banker.)

How fortunate it is that this earth has but one satellite to illuminate the night. For, however striking and beautiful the spectacle might be of six or eight brilliant moons, some large, some small, sometimes occulting each other, sometimes clustered together, sometimes agaattered in various parts of the heavens, and shining with varied degrees of brilliancy; yet had we, like Saturn, tenatellites, or like Jupiter eight, astronomy would be, in great measure, an unomy would be, in great measure, an un-known science; and, except on those ex-tremely rare occasions when the whole of the satellites were clustered in the stremely rare occasions when the whole of the satellites were clustered in the skize of one hemisphere, the glories of the midnight sky would be invisible; the scintillating constellations would scarce ever delight us with their grandeur and their becuty; the planets, except perhaps occasionally the brightest amongst them, would never be seen; comets would come within our range, their lustrous, transplendent magnificence and grandeur veiled from view by the many orbed lunar illuminations; and the brillant displays of "shooting stars" which occasionally provide such a gorgeous and sublime pageant, appearing as though the stars of heaven were falling from their courses, and the stellar universe itself were being wrecked, would neter be visible.

And, too, the many other wonders of the stellar world — the variable stars ever waxing and waning in brilliancy; those other universes sunk deep in the profundities of the abysm of space, almost, but not quite, beyond the revealing power of the eagle eye of the telescopic camera; the numerous burning suns whose fires are tinted in so many varied hues—some carmine, some a brilvaried hues—some carmine, some a bril-liant sapphire or a glowing azure, some a vivid emerald or lustrous aquamarine or some a delicate rose-pink, or a deep orange, with the many other wonders and marvels of the midnight sky—all these bewildering and fascinating splen-dours would be hidden from our view, shrouded and obscured by the ever splendent overpowering light of thos numerous satellites.

splendent overpowering light of those nunerous satellites.

But happily we have but one moon—a lovely orb, which though it so delights us during her varied phases, yet fortunately disappears at regular intervals from view. Surely this is another instance of the solicitude of the Creator in making this favored earth so complete in all that conduces to the welfare and the happiness of its inhabitants. And yet, alas, they are so ungrateful that multitudes not only ignore Him, but even refuse, or neglect, to accept the great explation made by. Him on Golgotha, although for each one of those who supplicates Him for pardon and eternal life, those agonies which, He endured are reckoned as complete satisfaction for their misdeeds. Oh! earth, earth, earth, earth, earth, earth, surely at the Great Day those fatuous dwellers amidst thy beauty who have ignored their Creator will bitterly rue their folly.

I think of a flock with a shepherd, a kingdom with a king, a family with a father. In the flock there are losses, in the kingdom there are disasters, in the family there are births and deaths. But I sing of cradles, and coffins are not in sight, of births not of deaths, of beginnings and no endings, of arrivals and no departures, increase and no decrease, comings and no goings. Angels sing when babes are born, no grave angel is told off for duty to dig the last man's grave, for there is no last man. Man lasts for ever, because he is man, the individual germ lay in the bosom of the Father in the past eternity, when the cradle song begins there is a double vision to those who have eyes to see, an immortal spirit embedden in the human form. It is known that all the stars are in rapid motion. The star which, when the great pyramid was erected, was the polar star, has greatly altered its position; our sun is rushing through space at a speed computed at half a million miles a day; and in fact successive discoveries prove that doubtless the whole of the starry host is also careging onwards at income.

And, beyond our own universe, sunk deep in the dread profundities of the abyss of infinity, those other universes, perhaps as mighty and as myriad starred as our own; with perhaps yet others, engulfed still infinitely more remote in the fathomless abyss of eternal space, doubtless participate in this general circling round the mighty axis of the universes. "Many false and foolish reports about the Dead Seat—hat strange and interest-ing lake—have been circulated," said Abraham S. Abrahams, of Jerusalem and London, who is on a tour of this country. The whole concern is, in fact, in the hands of Jews, who, at a low rate, buy wheat and barley from the Arabs to be delivered on the seashore. From there it is shipped to the Jericho side and carried on donkeys to Jerusalem, where it finds ready sale at a good price. "When adverse winds blow the little craft is in danger of being swamped, for the so-called Dead Sca becomes a living mass of waves. Mgr. Diomede Falconio, the apostolic delegate to this country, who is expected to be made a cardinal at the January sitting of the consistory at Rome, succeeded Mgr. Martinelli at Washington eight years ago. Although he was born and educated in Italy, he came to America as a young man and much of his work was done on this side of the ocean, as an educator at the College of St. Bonaventure, at Albany, as a priest in the Italian colony of New York and among the wild peoples of the Newfoundland coast. In person he is slender, rather under than over the middle height, with gray eyes and white hair. His address is excellent, easy, simple, direct and he speaks English with a very slight accent. LESSON 1.-OCTOBER 3, 1909.

Paul a Prisoner-The Arrest.-Acts

Commentary,—I. Paul confers with the church at Jerusalem (vs. 18-25). The day after their arrival at Jerusalem "the elders and leaders of the church, of whom James, the brother of our of whom James, the brother of our Lord, was chief, met together, and Paulgave them a report of his work. The settlement by vote, eight years before, of the question as to the necessity of keeping the Jewish law, had not changed the opinion of all the Jewish Ohristians." Their friendship at this time was very doubtful. Paul was endeavoring by every possible means to heal the breach between them. 1. The Jerusalem believers were very poor, and Paul had taken a collection for them among the churches. "This is the collection mentioned in 1 Cor. 16: 13; Rom. 15: 25, and more fully in 2 Cor., chapters 8, 2 tioned in 1 Cor. 16: 13; Rom. 15: 25, and more fully in 2 Cor., chapters 8, 9. Its design is revealed in Rom. 16: 31, where Paul actually asks prayers of the Christians in far off Italy that the Perusalem church may accept the gift," evidently hoping that this would help in bringing about a more harmonious state of things. 2. Paul was ready to make concessions, "Vague rumors had gone forth that he taught that not only the Gentiles but that even the Jews need not Keep the law of Moses." To them Paul seemed to be undermining the very foundation of their hopes. In order to refute these slanders the elders requested Paul to openly show to the Paul agreed to pay their expenses, and for a week to live with them in the temple, and then to stand with them while their heads were shaven and while they took their hair to burn it "under the sacrific of the peace-offering" (Num. 6: 18). EAVING of brilliant colors, laughing faces and bright eyes began through Rue les Droits de l'Homme when the late afternoon sun flooded Valetta in orange and gold. The massive, brooding battlements of the Maltese citadel took warmth to their sombre surfaces. Curtains were drawn aside in balcony windows Venders began to cry their wares. The hum of stir ring street life rose in pitch and volume as a temper ing breeze circled through the purple shadows, bringing the city to its real awakening for the day.

The two midshipmen from the American war vessel that had been lying for two weeks past in the harbor below drifted leisurely through the throng. Malta had not ceased to be a source of ever new wonder and delight to them, and as they walked they were alert to note every quaint detail of color, forn

"Why do you bear to the right, Bainbridge?" asked O'Connor, the elder of the two, suddenly, as the other edged into the press. "It is more comfortable to with the procession on this side."

"You forget," said Bainbridge, with a laugh. "I must have the daily boutonnière from 'Neste, my little flower girl-mine, I said, O'Connor." O'Connor but offered no further objection. They tacked through the crowd and reached the outer fringe of the traffic to the right, close to the row of booths, where graceful, dark skinned Maltese maidens offered fruits, flowers, sweets and shells for

They drew up at one of these booths, piled high with rich and fragrant blossoms of the islands, a wild riot of hues and scents. At the side of the stand stood 'Neste, who greeted them gayly, wavin a slim hand at O'Connor and nodding with more familiarity to Bainbridge. Hers was the purest type of Maltes beauty, with soft, pleading Oriental eyes, delicate features and trim figure. With light, caressing touch she began to select their flowers herself, drolling the two young men in her broken phrases of English

'No. Captain," she said, shaking her head decidedly at O'Connor, who sought to do his own selecting without reference to her: "I will give what shall be for you. Perhaps, now, a prickly pear, eh?" I was 'Neste's invariable plan, and not a bad one, to address all naval men as captain. She triumphed with it once more, for O'Connor gave over his clumsy effort with a short laugh.

"Here is for you, Captain Bainbridge," she went on, and held out a single white rosebud twined with a sprig of green.

"But what am I to do with it, 'Neste?" asked the "Carry it in my hands? I boy in mock despair. "Carry it in my must, for I have no skill in wearing it."

It was the daily comedy. He would not hear her protests and so she must leave her booth and fasten the flower in his lapel herself, while he made no disguise of his admiration for her, and her olive cheeks took just the faintest flush. She wove three pansies, almost velvet black, for O'Connor.

"Because you look dark at me," she said, trying to imitate his disapproving mien. But he made no offer that she fasten his flowers into place, and she handed them to him with a little toss. As O'Connor moved away, after paying her, Bainbridge leaned toward the stand and whispered a phrase. Then he hurried after his companion. O'Connor had turned in time to see the incident.

They walked in silence through the city's busiest thoroughfare for some minutes. O'Connor was occuwith thoughts that made his the only serious face in all that bewildering, shifting kaleidoscope, Bainbridge, with a smile upon his lips, paid no atten tion to the other's abstraction, finding employment in amused observation of costumes, houses and the figures of the streets. O'Connor's words came with-

"You've been meeting that girl," he said, and his mouth was set for opposition. The younger man turned to him, quick color sweeping to his handsome 'What's that to you?" he asked sharply, "Nothing to me, so far as she is concerned. But everything, so fan as you are.'

"Explain, please."

"Perhaps you haven't heard that Cochran, the English Secretary, has filed a prior claim," said

"That's all nonsense," returned Bainbridge, im-

O'Connor took him up readily, as one who has planned for his speech. "Now look here, Joe. I'm not going to quarrel with you, but you ought to know the it's common report that Cochran is mixed with this woman in some way. For Heaven's sake don't go and start a flirtation with her. What do you about these people? They're three-quarters Arab and you can't understand them, nor they you chran lives here. If he wants to make a fool of himself over a flower girl he knows how to manage it. Let him. I know you mean no harm, but he won't. You'll have trouble if you go on."

"What business is it of Cochran's, or yours, either?" returned the boy, botly. "And she's not Arab, she's half Italian."

O'Connor could have smiled at the inconsequential defence had the affair not seemed too weighty Meanwhile he was not exactly sure of the grou he stood upon. Joseph Bainbridge was to him as a brother and he meant to give advice whether or not it was asked or desired

"Answer me plainly, Joe. You don't think you're in love with the girl, do you?"

'Well, then, don't you see what a light you're putting yourself in? There's only one construction these people will put upon your actions, and only one Cochran will put upon it. Don't go any further with it, Joe. I don't quite understand myself what Cochran's interest is, but probably it's not much to his credit. It's no place for you, Joe."

"I'm quite capable of attending to my own affairs," said Bainbridge stiffly.

"Oh, very well. If you feel that way there's nothing more to say. I think I'll return to the landing."

The Charm of 'Neste. They parted with salutes and Bainbridge went on alone. The boy was a little uncomfortable. He had met the girl, had strolled among the shops and along the harbor with her. She attracted him and he saw no reason why he could not meet and admire a young woman here on the same footing that he would at a 'Neste had the prettiest face and the neatest ankle in Malta, and if he chose to play sentiment before her, according to the ancient privilege of the mariner, why, what harm and whose affair? He decided that O'Connor was merely presuming on his two years' advantage in age. As for Cochran a thin faced, arrogant person, whom he had met once or twice, he refused to believe that this or any other man had a right to say who should and who should not be the flower girl's admirer. But how had O'Connor learned so much? That puzzled him a little, for, while not ashamed of his attention to 'Neste, he had certainly not advertised it.

An hour after dark he waited for her on one of the narrow, precipitate streets down near the harbor She was a little late, but presently she glided toward him, wrapped in a shawl or mantle of dark shade. He could not quite see her face in the faint light from a lamp over a doorway, but there was an air of uneasiness in her manner and her voice as she answered his gallant welcome. She glanced back over the way she had come.

"One would think you were afraid of some he said, ruffled a little at her preoccupation. She understand her neither did she understand him. She spoke softly and he missed the usual tone of banter. had no conception of his motives.

"And if I am, Captain?"

"Oh, if you are it does not become you." "We cannot meet again here." she began hurriedly. "Even now somebody sees us. Come, there is a house I know. "But why should you be afraid?" he said, surprised and uneasy.

"I tell you, some one comes after me in the street here: I feel him."

He did not relish the situation; it seemed artificial. overstrained, to him. He sought to pass it off. "You are dreaming, 'Neste. Who would follow? Come Let us climb to the Rue les Droits de l'Homme, where the lights are and every one can see us if they want to. Let them look. There's too much mystery about this to suit me." She shrank back in terror when he caught her arm. "No, no. Captain! You do not know. It would be bad, very bad, for me and for you." "What is this all about, 'Neste?" he cried, quite losing his patience. It was strange enough that O'Connor should have seen fit to warn him about the way people would take his firtation. Now the girl herself was acting as if they were engaged in some dark intrigue, eluding watchful and jealous guardians, like the figures in some penny romance. The boy's a tall, thin featured man moved toward them. They healthy mind resented the introduction of such a did not notice him until, in passing, he jostled roughly note into his relations with her,

She was peering at his vexed face intently. She know. Captain, what you have done, coming here, many times," she said, as one stating an evident fact. THE SURGEONS RAN TO HIM.

"What I have done? No, I don't. What barm was there in it?" He had struck the centre of the matter She moved away from him and drew her shawl closer.

"Ah! Then it is true that you are a child," she said, her voice rising scornfully. "Yes, I think so. You not understand. You think 'Neste has not many, many who beg for a smile, a word. Oh no. You think she must be glad only to talk with you, like a child. I tell you some one comes after me, but you not understand. I tell you there are men, not children, who follow 'Neste. You cannot play with her like a boy."

Her fierce, tense words shocked him, revealing an attitude wholly foreign and strange. It was true that he could not understand all. But he saw, dimly, that his position was a false one, that he had taken steps which, to this girl's Eastern mind, meant things he had not dreamed of. It was his error. He knew now what O'Connor had meant.

Ordinarily the boy would have been angered by a taunt as to his youth. But from her it merely served to measure the distance between her point of view and his own. Hers was an atmosphere of intrigue, of mystery, of passions alien to him. He had merely treated her as he would some laughing, friendly, sensible fair one at home. His impulse was to drop the affair instantly. But one thing detained him. If should chance to be true, as she had intimated, that she had run some danger in meeting him in this harmless way he must stand by her. It was absurd, of course, but he must clear that point. Did Not Understand Her.

"You are right, 'Neste," he said, slowly. I was a child, as you mean it. I thought only to pass a pleasant hour with you, nothing more. Still, if there has been a misunderstanding somewhere that may make trouble I will offer all necessary explanations."

"Run away, little child," she said. "It is goodby, then, eh! I think you better go first; there is a big final arrangements on the following day. On the man coming now." And with this last thrust before could detain her she glided away into one of gave him the history of the affair as he understood it. the alleys that opened near at hand. He looked up the street, following her parting gesture. There was that Cochran has been almost out of his senses about a figure moving there. It stopped under a light for a second, then it, too, passed out of sight into an alley.

The officers from the war vessel had purchased seats in the little theatre for the operatic performance the next evening. They were rowed ashore at dusk, resplendent in their glittering, close fitting uniforms, and climbed the endless stone stairs toward the upper town in cnatting groups. Bainbridge was with O'Connor. He had found occasion to restore his old relations with the older man.

O'Connor had welcomed the move, though nothing had passed between them as to the cause of their difference, accepting the other's advances as a tacit admission that he had been right in his interference

They occupied adjoining seats in the theatre and at the close of the first act passed out into the miniature lobby for a breath of air. As they came through the doors a group of men at the left parted suddenly and against Bainbridge. The midshipman looked up quickly and recognized Cochran. He was about to did not answer for some minutes. "It is sure you protest, but the Englishman did not look back. Bainbridge was indignant.

"Did you see him?" he asked O'Connor.

"Yes; but it was probably an accident."

They walked slowly back and forth on the short promenade, falling into a discussion of political affairs at home. They did not see that Cochran was approaching again. Once more the Englishman jostled Bainbridge, thrusting him savagely with his shoulder and spinning the boy half way around. There was no possible explanation for it this time other than deliberate intention. There had been ample space for Cochran's passage. To make his purpose still plainer he stood sneering at Bainbridge openly.

Seasoned for a Scrimmage.

boy, for all his slight weight, was clean muscled. The hard training of the sea had seasoned and toned him, and he was as light on his feet as some lithe wild animal of the woods. Before O'Concould catch his arm he stepped directly in front of Cochran and drove his right fist into the English-Cochran staggered back and fell awkwardly. Bainbridge stood ready to renew the attack when the other should rise, mouth firm set and eves aglow with battle. But O'Connor and others of the officers who had been attracted by the uproar swept upon him and hustled him to one side.

Cochran rose slowly with the assistance of friends who had thronged about him. The crowd in the lobby had parted; some were pressing about one, some about the other of the antagonists. Across the open space toward the Americans presently walked a tall, elderly man of dignified appearance. His mission was obvious and O'Connor, after a few words with Bainbridge, went into the auditorium and returned with Stephen Decatur, who was then a lieutenant Bainbridge had expressed the desire that Decatur act for him in the affair, and after a few words of ex planation with Decatur he consented. He approached the elderly man and bowed. His bow was returned Her laugh was still sharper this time, but it did and the two walked to the street door, where they engaged in conversation.

There was no further disturbance during the evening, and on the way to the landing Decatur informed Bainbridge that he would meet Cochran's second for vessel once more O'Connor drew Decatur aside and

"I've heard from some of the English officers here the girl for months. He keeps a watch upon her at her flower stand, and several men who have been friendly with 'Neste have been warned to keep away. I don't know what the relations are between him and the girl, nor does it matter. But this I do know-Joe quit her last night. I think he saw the truth in what I told him. And from early this morning until late this afternoon Lieutenant, Cochran has been practising with a pistol on the shore east of the harbor." "Is Joe handy with firearms?" asked Decatur.

"Never shot at a mark in his life, sir." "That explains a few things," said Decatur, pacing the deck. "This second of Cochran's put in a subtle suggestion that I fix the distance at twelve paces. Probably Cochran supposed that Joe would challenge him on the spot when he jostled him. That would have left him free to set his own distance, which, as I gather from the wily second, is twelve paces. How did you learn this?"

"Two of the men on shore leave saw him when they walked out in the morning and again in the afternoon."

appointment, at one of the hotels the following after-They exchanged formal greetings and began at once a discussion of the preliminaries.

"My principal will fight with pistols, sir," said "That is satisfactory, Lieutenant. At the usual distance, I suppose." "I hardly know whether you would call it the usual distance, sir, but he will fight at four paces." The other started up in amazement and alarm. "Four paces! Four! Why, my dear sir, that is nothing short of murder. Does your principal knownothing of these affairs? The meeting is to settle a point of honor, I take it, and the purpose is not butchery.' "My principal has been advised in this matter by me," returned Decatur, coldly. "As to the purpose; of the meeting, my principal, as the challenged party, has decided that his own interests demand an opportunity for full satisfaction." "But, my dear Lieutenant, I recognize, of course, that your principal is well within his rights. Still, I must insist that four paces leaves little or nothing to markmanship or skill and everything to mere chance."

"Such is my understanding of it. I am glad to see that your judgment confirms my own. Now, Captain, as to the word of command"—— And Decatur led the irritated Overly on to the remaining clauses of the agreement. It was decided that the duel should take place early the following morning at a certain point on the shore about five miles from Valetta.

First on the Ground.

Bainbridge, with O'Connor, Decatur and a surgeon, left the vesel just at dawn. They were rowed outside the harbor and along the coast to a small bay, where they were able to make a landing. They found them-selves the first on the ground, and during the interval of waiting Decatur talked with his midshipman

"I did the best I could for you, Joe, in the distance,

"I did the best I could for you, Joe, in the distance. If you were further apart he would pick you off and you'd stand not the slightest chance. At four paces you are as good as he is."

"All I want is some kind of a fair chance at him, sir." said Bainbridge. He was cool, and his young, smooth face was set resolutely. Decatur looked him over approvingly.

"You'll do. I might have named cutlasses, but he has inches over you in reach, besides a tougher frame. With your nerve as steady as it is now you can hit him. Here they come."

Cochran appeared overland with Overly and a military surgeon. The group halted near a clump of

As the principals moved toward their marks the members of both parties watched their actions and appearance closely. Cochran's face was its usual dead white, his eyes were steady and his steps deliberate. "A dangerous opponent," was O'Connor's quick comment to Decatur. Bainbridge appeared confident and at ease. His eyes flashed for a moment as they met those of his antagonist, and his friends that he would give a good account of himself.

The weapons were handed to the duellists and the seconds stood aside. Decatur, who had wonthe right by toss, was to give the signal. "Are you ready?" he asked. The sun was just rising and the keen rays cut sharply along the sparse vegetation of the stretch on which they stood, throwing long shadows from each figure. There was no tree to break the simple setting of sea and sky and sweeping hill. A light breeze made its gentle touch felt. Joseph Bainbridge took one swift, comprehensive glance about him. There was no fear in it, only the tribute from youth to life that had been sweet.

"Baady" he said

"Ready," he said. "Ready," echoed Cochran, more loudly. His lips were drawn back a little into the faintest shadow of a smile.

"One—"

"Two"— At the first word both men had brought their pistols to a level. At the second Cochran fired and the heavy report set the gulls to circling far down the shore. Bainbridge did not move.

"Three"—— The weapon of Bainbridge spoke. All eyes were turned upon Cochran, but his smile grew into a laugh on his lips. Both shots had gone wide. The men retained their places while the seconds reloaded, Cochran humming a tune under his breath and pausing to south his eyes malevolently at his and pausing to south his eyes malevolently at his The men retained their places while the seconds relonded, Cochran humming a tune under his breath and pausing to squint his eyes malevolently at his adversary. He still bore the mark of the midshipman's blow on his face. Bainbridge, somehow, felt a relaxation of the tension he had been under and was aware of a sudden increase in confidence. The handling of his pistol and the knowledge that another man as well as he might miss at that distance gave him an ease he had missed before. Once more the weapons were handed to the duellists, who stood so close that each might count the other's breaths. Once more Decatur began.

"Are you ready?"

"Ready," they answered in unison.

"One" — The word was scarcely past his lips when Cochran whipped up his pistol with determined gesture and discharged it. To the watchers it seemed as if Bainbridge must surely be hit. The midshipman felt the bullet scorch across his scalp, cutting a lock. Decatur did not pause.

"Two—three—fire!" Then Bainbridge fred. Cochran threw up both arms, spun violently on his right heel and pitched over backward. The surgeons Bainbridge walked for the last time through Rue les Droits de l'Homme three days later just before the vessel was to leave. He looked for 'Neste, but another girl stood back of her little flower store. He hesitated a moment, then addressed her in English. She shook her head. He tried French with better results.

ARREST IN STRATTON CASE

R. H. Shepherd Charged With Perjury in Election Trial.

Mr. Stratton and Mr. Leary Deny Gates' Story.

Justice MacMahon Places Very Little Faith in Bribery Charges.

Peterboro, Oct. 1.—Developments took place to-night in connection with West Peterboro election trial when R. H. Shepherd, the witness who swore that he was engaged to act as a in the Liberal committee rooms and had misled the Conservatives by false reports as to illegal practices, was arrested on a charge of perjury, Shepherd at the trial stated that he had been promised $200 to Mr. In had been promised $200 by Mr. James Kendry, ex-M. P., J. M. G. Wilson, R. M. Waddell, and W. A. Brundrett to supply them with information. Cer-tain moneys had been paid to him, and these he had turned over to Mr. J. R. Stratton, the sitting member, whom Mr. J. H. Burnham, the un-successful Conservative candidate, is endeavoring to unseat, together with the information he had given to the other side. Shepherd, who lives in Peterboro, was arrested outside the other side. Shepherd, who lives in Peterboro, was arrested outside the police station, shortly after the court rose, on a warrant granted by Police Magistrate D. W. Dumble, on the information of Wilson and Brundrett Subsequently he was released on bail of $500 furnished by Mr. R. R. Hall, ex-M. P., in the form of a marked cheque on the Bank of Ottawa, and he will come up for preliminary hearing at 10 o'elock in the morning. Evidence was concluded to-day before Justices MacMahon and Magee in what are known as the Leary charges. By the petitioner Leary is alleged to have paid $2 each to six Englishmen on election day, Both Mr. J. R. Stratton and Mr. Leary were on the stand to-day, and denied emphatically that any corrupt practices had taken place. The affili set up by Mr. Leary was greatly strengthened by the evidence of Deputy Returning Officer Hunter, who saw him at the North Monaghan polling station at a time when the bribes were said to have been paid by him in the Liberal committee room in Peterboro.

One of the Judges, commenting on the case, appeared to discredit the eviwitnesses for the petitioner that had the money been dence of witnesses for the petitioner by stating that had the money been paid as described it would have at once become known in the crowd, and the committee room would have been stormed. The Judges before the court rose stated that they would dis-pose of the Leary charges in the morn-ing.

DISCREDIT THE EVIDENCE.

MR. STRATTON ON THE STAND Mr. J. R. Stratton was again on the stand this morning for the purpose of cross-examination. He modestly denied that he was a very experienced cam-

"What did you say?"

"I said I had none, and asked Clancy who sent him there, and he said it was a clean, smooth-faced man, and I found that it was one of the detectives paid by Mr. Burnham. James Fairs, one of the detectives, said that he had been employed by Mr. Burnham and sent many men."

"Was he not in your employ?"

"No; he was not."

Mr. Du Vernet—I will prove that he was in Mr. Stratton—That is false; put him the box himself and ask him.

Mr. Stratton insisted that the whole of the evidence should be read, and Mr. Du Vernet remarked: "You say Ashley was working for you?" "No." "Did you tell these men to go to the Conservative committee rooms?"

Judge Magee pointed out that these facts corroborated the witness' previous statement that he had been asked for

"Did any come in by themselves?"
"I think they were all sent in."
"Can't you remember any names?"
"Really, Mr. Du Vernet, you would be surprised at the small amount of interest I have taken in this petition."
"I thought it was one of the most skillfully worked up defences I had ever heard."
"That is to the credit of the profession. When I heard about your man.

"Will you pledge your oath to that?" "I will." "Mr. Stratton, you had better answer the question; this may go further if you make these reckless statements." "They are not reckless; they are

Mr. Du Vernet then went into the Gates and Ashley interviews, when $400 and $300 were asked for false affidavits.

and $300 were asked for false affidavits. Mr. Stratton repeated his former statements in regard to the matter, and also in respect of the other interview.
"Did you tell them the penalty for bribery?" "I did not."

"It was his duty to look after Englishmen?" "Not that I know; I don't think it is the fact."

being a good stenographer, he did a great deal of correspondence. On election day there was a great deal of confusion, and I set him to work with the voters' list to give information."

"If anything had to be done he butted in?" "Yes."

The witness, in answer to further questions said that he had no knowledge of Kingscote being in charge of Englishmen. Mr. Stratton's cross-examination lasted less than three-quarters of an hour.

Mr. Watson then produced evidence given in examination for discovery in of an noir.

Mr. Watson then produced evidence given in examination for discovery in which it was absolutely stated that Mr. Stratton said that men had asked him for money, reading that portion which Mr. Du Vernet refused to read: "Not a five-cent piece was paid to anyone," said Mr. Stratton, in reply to Mr. Watson's question as to whether unfair means had been used to get information, and he also denied that any money had been illegitimately spent as to Leary's absence.

Mr. Watson—There is no doubt you were an active supporter of Mr. Stratton?" "Yes."

"And there is no question that Mr. Stratton knew?" "None at all."
"Were you asked by him to do anything?" "No; I have always taken an thing?"

"On election day what were you doing in the forenoon?" I was looking after sub-polling divisions in Ward 2." "When were you in the committee room in the morning?" "From 10.30 to 12. I made a round of stations and then went out to North Monaghan."

"Did you go to the country again?"

"After lunch."

"After lunch."

"It has been stated by six men that in the afternoon you paid them money—Ashley, Harland, Alsept, Sydney Pope, Butler and Gates. Are these charges true?"

"They are not."

"You went to lunch at 12?"

"Yes, and was back at 1, because I had given instructions for Arthur Morgan to be there."

"How long did you stay in the rooms?"

"I went directly to the polling station

Bab's Lane?"
"Ten or fifteen minutes after 3."
Mr. Watson then took the individual cases of bribery. The witness said that he never saw Ashley, who had sworn he got $2 from Leary at 4.30 on the afternoon of election day, until the 21st September last. There was no foundation for Ashley's story, Cates' acquaintance he made at the same time as Ashley's. He had been told that men would be at Mr. Hall's office that night, and, therefore, he went there.

"What took place?" "We went into a small room of Mr. Hall's so we could hear the conversation that took

Were you there for that purpose?'

"I don't know."
"What happened?"
"Mr. Hall asked us to go in."
Mr. Leary reiterated the conversation and stated that Gates denied having made a statement to W. H. Moore, and

"What did Ashley say?"
"He said that it would not take him long to get out, because he had only one small trunk to pack and could get out at midnight."

"Did they say in your presence that they had received money?"

"No."

"Did Gates say in your presence that Davidson gave him five dollars?"

"No."

"No."
"Ashley says that he had a note to give to you, and gave you in the committee room a receipted bill instead."
"I never saw the man."
"You were in your usual right sensible mind that day?"
"Yes; no one ever saw me any other way; I'm a temperate man."
. "It has been sworn that there were eight or ten men in a row waiting to get into the little room?"

"I never saw anything like that."
Replying to Judge MacMahon, the witness explained that the little room had a spring door that closed itself.

Mr. Leary similarly denied the truth

"I never used it."

Judge MacMahon — I suppose a man is at liberty to use a mild damn.

Mr. Watson —Profamity involves the use of the name of your maker.

Mr. DuVernet —Do you mean that, witness?

"You contradict Morgan, when he says you called at the pootions on the way to Mayes'?'

"I do."
"Were you asked for money?"
"Several times on the street."
The witness was asked about the cardboard box under which the money was alleged to have been placed, and stated that there was not such a thing there. He never placed money on there. He never placed mon-the table for anyone, and never a dollar for legitimate expense

"They never got money from me."

Replying to further questions, Mr.

Leary denied that he endeavored to induce witnesses for the petitioner to leave the district, neither had he heard of such attempts being made. Mr. Watson —Are you prepared to abandon these Leary charges, now?

Mr. DuVernet—No.

James Jordan, the man whom Alseept said told him the money was going, swore that he never spoke to Alsept.

MORE EVIDENCE FOR RESPONDENT

The evidence offered at the afternoon The evidence offered at the afternoon session of the court strengthened considerably the case for the respondent. Hugh Wark and Roland Glover both swore that Harry Butler and Chas, Williams had stated to them that there was nothing in the charges of bribery they had been called to substantiate.

Mr. Thomas M. Hunter, deputy returning officer at Mayes' school, also strengthened the Leary alibib y stating that he saw Mr. Leary at the polling station between 4 and 5 o'clock.

PETITIONER'S REPLY.

PETITIONER'S REPLY.

In reply Mr. DuVernet called George H. May, who said that he did not see Leary, whom he knew, at the school house, although the witness was in and out all day. He would not, however, attempt to contradict a statement made by the deapty returning officers.

by the deputy returning officer.

Mr. DuVernet in summing up the case for the petitioner averred that there had been a series of intimidations. The had been a series of intimidations. The practice had been to go to the witnesses and say, "You are in the same boat as us, and are liable to two years' imprisonment." Never in the history of election trials had there been such a condition. Witness after witness had gone into the box and spoken of from fifty to one hundred declarations having been obtained. "My friend has tried to throw doubt on some witnesses because they are Englishmen. That is a new idea in a court of English justice. I have yet to learn that perjury is the national failing of the English."

Judge MacMahon—We had an example of one who said he would do anything.

thing.
Mr. DuVernet—There are always good and bad in every class. There are men I venture to say, who have lived here longer and consider it an honorable thing not to tell the truth once a bribe has been accepted.

Proceeding, Mr. DuVernet said that the case for the petitioner bristled with circumstantial detail. They also had the fact that Ashley had been employed by Mr. Stratton, must have been friendly to him, and he destroyed valuable documentary evidence after being subpoenaed. The defence had been ingenious, but the methods adopted by the counsel for the reespondent in cross-examination for the reespondent in cross-examination had simply clinched the case for the petitioner. It was clear, however, that unless there were some change in the proceedings election trials would be simply farcical. The question was, did these men go together with the respondent and try and trap witnesses because they thought they had the truth on their side, or was it because they wished to discredit the man they had bribed and destroy damaging evidence?

It was not possible, said Mr. DuVernet, that the newly-arrived Englishmen worked out such a clever scheme as that with which Mr. Leary salved his con-science. Then, commenting on the fact that certain witnesses were not called, he said: "No, they kept to the high class who would stick to their story once they got into the box and not let down the bars."

class who would stick to their story once they got into the box and not let down the bars."

Judge Magee—In the six cases before us only one promise was made, according to your witnesses; in two instances the men had no votes, and one was a man who had already voted.

Proceeding, Mr. DuVernet said: "No doubt, my Lord, there are people sitting in this court who know what was going on in that little room. The truth will come out, and I say that there is not a scintilla of evidence of conspiracy by Butler and Williams.

"I charge here that there has been deliberate conspiracy, a criminal conspiracy, to try and make evidence and tamper with witnesses, and I venture to say that when the whole facts come out that will be demonstrated to an absolute certainty. The more thorough the investigation the better it will be. It is too important a matter to be covered up. If these witnesses have formed a conspiracy they should be punished, and punished with the utmost severity."

With regard to the attempted alibi, he did not consider it signified anything, for it was admitted that Leary was there during the afternoon, and would have had ample opportunity to do these things.

Judge MacMahon—If Leary had paid $2 to six men in that room the

MR. WATSON'S REPLY.

"Mr. Watson, in reply, said that "it would appear as if the court had sat for a week for the purpose only of listening to a long tirade of abuse and slander against respectable, houest citizens. If they did not know that counsel's address was uttered for an ulterior purpose. they must have thought it was uttered as an assassin used his knife. The evidence offered was given by a pitiable exhibition of a lost type of degenerate humanity. Their Lordships had discredited the star witness, and it was apparent that this bunch of Englishmen had been hired to give the evidence and MR. No suggestion had been made that anything improper had been done by Mr. Hall and Mr. Davidson. They had offered no bribe, for such would be a payment, but the petitioner had bribed Gates in order to get the statement upon which his case rested. The whole evil arose from the employment of detectives for the despicable purposes which honorable and decent people would not think of, able purposes which honorable and decent people would not think of who were desirous of making a re-turn for their mener."

Young Man Terribly Injured in Galt Moulding Shop.

Moulding Shop.

Galt, Out., Oct. 1.—Cowan & Company's moulding shop was the scene of a serious accident this afternoon, the victim being a young man named Albert Hubert. The men were getting ready to cast, and two were carrying a ladle of molten metal weighing 150 pounds. One of them tripped and knocked down young Hubert, who was standing nearby, and before the lad could get up the contents of the ladle poured over his back, inflicting terrible burns. There is some hope of his recovery.

The World of Amusement

Present indications are that the Savoy Theatre will be ready for re-opening in two, or at latest, three weeks was always a cozy, homelike place, but patrons will find it more elaborate and beautiful than ever when next it opens its doors. The work is already well advanced. On Monday the decorators will begin their work. Everything will be new in this line, in design and coloring. The prevailing colors will be old ivory and gold. On the sounding board will be a magnificent picture in oils. The lobby will be in ivory, green and gold, also in oils and the entire scheme of decoration will be more elaborate than ever.

Just what line of entertainment the house will be put to for the winter has not been decided upon, but an early announcement is looked for. It is assured, however, that there will be a month or so of pictures, which proved so success ful after the close of the last regular season, and which ran up to the time of

Work on the programmes of the Elgar Choir concerts will begin in earnest next Tuesday evening, when the first rehearsal will be held. From the old members of the choir and those chosold members of the choir and those chosen from the new applicants, Bruce Carey looks forward to having the finest singing organization ever under his baton. It is the intention to hold the concerts early in February, and about the middle of the month the Choir will give a conjunction with the Buffalo, in conjunction with the Buffalo Symphony Orchestra. That was definitely settled last Saturday, on the occasion of the visit of Dr. Goodale, the orchestra's conductor. A season of most substantial work is evidently ahead of the Elgar Choir.

Hissing in playhouses had its origin in Paris in 1680 on the occasion of the presentation of Fontenelle's tragedy, "Aspar." Prior to that time suffering audiences were wont to yawn audiby and fall asleep when the apathy of the actors and performance justified that actors and performances justified that actors and performances justified that course. But on this occasion the indignant audience, driven to desperation by the platitudes of Aspar, voiced their anger by hisses that drove the actors into temporary retirement, according to the testimony of the poet Roi, who alludes to the incident in his "Brevet dela Calotte." Hissing thereafter became fashionable. The first encore noted in the annals of the stage was accorded to Livius Andronicus, a Roman actor. He was popular with the masses and was called back so often to repeat his speeches that he, is self-defence, brought a boy to declaim for him, while he himself applied the gestures. While encores became the rage in subsequent ages, it is known that Adronicus' plan of haling an understudy before him before an audience to share his honors, has not generally been adopted by thespians. But on this occasion the

The practicability of curtain raisers The practicability of curtain raisers has come prominently to the fore in the Shubert offices. As an experiment a dramatization of Poe's "The Telltale Heart" was tried out at Daly's Treatre in connection with the performance of "Billy." It proved unsuitable as a curtain raiser for a faree and will not, therefore, be seen on the road. The Harmonic Society will meet for its first rehearsal of the season next Thursday at 8 o'clock in the recital hall of the Conservatory of Music. The members are requested to bring their music with them as none will be on sale at the rehearsal hall. The numbers chosen for the season's work are of exceptional interest to the choristers, the music all being dramatic in character. "The Crusaders," by Gade will take an hour to perform, the three operatic choruses from "Tannhauser," "Carmen," and Glinka's "Life to the Car," thirty minutes, and the 150th Psalm by Saint Saens, twenty minutes, making an hour Saens, twenty minutes, making an hour fifty minutes entertainment that will please every lover of good vocal and orchestral music, no matter how varied their tastes may be. Lomas, the well-known leader of the orchestra at the Grand, will be responsible for the quality of the orchestra which will be larger than the one engaged last year, having more violins, a harp and organ. The children's chorus of fifty voices, which will assist in the "Carmen" number, will be chosen and trained by Mr. James Johnson, public school singing master. The three soloists for the "Crusaders" will be announced in a few days. The concert will be held in the Grand Opera House, Thursday, Feb. 3.

International School of Peace,

The International School of Peace, which Mr. Ginn would have founded, is intended to provide permanent legal machinery for receiving and disbursing contributions and bequests.

It is Mr. Ginn's idea that there should be a bureau of education, which should attempt to modify the courses of study in schools, colleges and universities, so as to minimize the achievements of war. Another part of his plan is the establishment by the Government of a school for the education of its public servants, and a bureau under the council of a Cabinet officer, whose duty it should be Cabinet officer, whose duty it should be to study broadly international relations.

The Chinese now has an interesting strike on hand strike on hand.

Yee Tang was deeply interested in the Elsie Sigel case, and was outspoken in his convictions that Chinese and American girls are thrown too much together in the Sunday schools. He created consternation by anouncing that he would not permit the Chinese to be taught individually by young women, as had been the case for years in this Sunday school. He grouped the Chinese in lots of six or eight with elderly women or men teachers. The Chinese students then dropped out there being only two in the Sunday school now.

Miss Cummings was called and corroborated this evidence. Miss Laura Gamble, also a nurse, testified to Mrs. Turner taking the Authers baby away from the hospital. She had another baby in a carriage waiting outside, and took the two away together.

Mrs. Louisa Maddeaux, of 193 Booth avenue, with whom Mrs. Authers lived before she went to the hospital, told of the negotiations between Mrs. Authers and Mrs. Turner, which resulted from an advertisement in an evening paper. Mrs. Turner, witness said, arranged to take the baby on its birth for a consideration of $100. She was paid $20 then and gave a receipt. "The lady who answered the door called Mrs. Miller, and to our surprise Mrs. Turner appeared," said witness. Mrs. Maddeaux said her husband asked to see the baby, but Mrs. Turner refused, saying that she had company inside and that the baby was asleep. Mrs. Turner told them the baby was weil except for a cold in its eye. Mrs. Turner came out on the street and walked down toward Yonge street with them. # HAMILTON ASSOCIATION.

Auspicious Opening of This Old Scientific Body.

The inaugural meeting of the Hamil-The inaugural meeting of the Hamilton Association for the season, was held last night in the museum in the Public Library building. The president, Mr. Lyman Lee, B.A., occupied the chair and in his remarks prior to introducing Dr. V. E. Henderson, of Toronto University, the lecturer for the evening, briefly commented on the objects of the association and the results accomplished since its inception 57 years ago. He commented on the excellent work done by Colonel Grant for the propogation of scientific research. The speaker then pointed out that the association had given free lectures to the public by eminent professors on scientific subjects for a number of years. During the coming season 16 years. During the coming season 16 lectures will be given, two a month beginning in October and ending in May. ;The fact that Hamilton was May. The fact that Hamilton was not a university city was a reason why lectures should be given every week and it is within the province of the Hamilton Association to give the citizens the opportunity of hearing an Intellectual treat every week.

In conclusion he said the present membership is 250 and it is the aim of the officers to get 500. He then introduced Dr. Henderson, Professor of Pharmacology, Toronto University, who lectured on the development of structural principles in European architecture. The lecture was illustrated to the processing of the control of th structural principles in European architecture. The lecture was illustrated by about 100 lantern slides. It described the development of Grecian architecture showing how it led to the Roman; how its use in arts influenced and altered the possibilities of buildings and their structure. He structural principles architecture. The lec fluenced and altered the possibilities of buildings and their structure. He then went into a fuller description of the development of the arch in the form of the dome as seen in the Byzantine style of architecture, after which, he spoke on the development

Following that he showed how the round Roman arch led to the growth of the pointed or Gothic arch, which showed the possibilities of Gothic chitecture. In conclusion he pointed out how

In conclusion he pointed out how change of form in arches added strength to withstand great weights and the full possibilities they can be put to in modern architecture.

A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Dr. Henderson.

During the evening 50 new members were enrolled.

The next lecture will be given on Oct. 15 and will be fully announced later.

MILITARY.

Fine Parades of the Thirteenth and Service Corps.

The 13th parade last night was an mprovement on that of last week improvement on that of last week in that the attendance was larger. In the course of a few weeks it is expected that the parades will have assumed their regular proportions.

After a short march out battalion drill was practised in the armories. The parade state was as follows: Lieut.-Col. Moore, Majors Mewburn and Ross; Adjutant, Captain Domville; Paymaster, Major Herring; Surgeon, Captain Carter: Quartermaster, Major Lester; Chaplain, Major Forneret; staff sergts, 11; A 29, B 50, C 34, D 45, E 41, F 30, G 30, H 50, making with bands, etc., a total of 426.

The Army Service Corps had their first parade last evening in the Drill Halll and it was well attended. Captain Lawson was in charge and altogether 50 men were present, which is a remarkable showing for the first of the season. A number of recruits paraded for the first time last night and others will appear for the next, so that the corps has been strengthened considerable.

To-day the officers and sergeants had their annual rifle shoot at the rifle ranges and some good prizes were offered. The competition was very keen as the men have been practicing steadily for the event and were in fine form.

The officers and non-commissioned officers of the Army Service Corps will take part in the Thanksgiving Day exercises.

The Bowling Alleys are now in full swing.
