"ECHOES of the Past;

The Recompense of Love!"

CHAPTER XVIII.

Clive walked quickly back to his rooms. What an idiot he was; of course, he should find a letter from Mina explaining their sudden and unexpected departure! He turned over the envelopes with feverish impatience and presently came upon one in a stiff, unformed hand. He tore it open, with a smile of reassurance. The envelope contained his own letter to Mina and nothing else.

He stood motionless, staring at the letter, his heart turned to lead within him, for what could it mean but that she had rejected him? She had been too timid, too frightened, to tell him that she did not love him; her insistence that he should wait for her answer until he was well had been an innocent subterfuge, had been caused by her natural reluctance to give him pain. She had regarded him as a friend, a benefactor; but had shrunk from his love. After all, it was only natural, she was so young, so unspoiled she must have been afflicted by his passionate avowal; she had seized on any pretext for putting him off.

He sank into a chair and tried to laugh, but the mockery of a laugh died on his lips and he covered his face with his hands.

CHAPTER XIX.

The House was very full for a morning sitting, there was not a member's seat vacant, and the places allotted to strangers and visitors were all occupied; there was, moreover, that indefinable stir of unrest and suppressed excitement which indicates that something of more than usual interest is actually taking place or threatening.

The session had opened with anything but its usual quietude, for during the recess the Tory government had—at least, so said the Liberal opposition—muddled and mismanaged the affairs of the country, and the electorate—so the opposition declared—was already tired of and disgusted with the party they had put in power, and the opposition were on the alert, hoping that the government would soon make some false step which would bring about their overthrow, and, in consequence, the elevation of the Liberals to place and power.

In a word, it was thought that the time had come when the political pendulum should, in the ordinary course of things, swing back and sweep the Tories from office. So the Liberals were full of energy, waiting for the auspicious moment in which they might smite their foes hip and thigh.

The feeling of excitement, expectation, spread even to the lobbies, through which a stream of persons flowed to and fro, or stood in detached groups eagerly discussing the position of the respective parties and the likelihood of the change which the political barometer seemed to prognosticate.

In one of these groups stood Lord Chesterleigh and one or two other prominent men of their own side. They were all full of hope and in the best of spirits, and every now and then the conversation was punctuated by little jokes and laughter.

"Yes; they'll come to a smash, mark my words!" Lord Chesterleigh said. "They haven't passed half the measures they promised, and those they have passed they have spoiled. It's always their way. Look at the Housing of the Poor Bill. We told them when we accepted it that it was only a half-measure, that it wouldn't wash, and that when we got in we should have to lick it into shape."

"Talking of the Housing of the Poor Bill," cut in Lord Standon, who was one of the group, "has any one seen anything of Clive Harvey? He left before the prorogation and has not come back, and no one has seen or heard anything of him—at least, I haven't."

"No! Where is Harvey? He ought to be here," cried another man.

Lord Chesterleigh was silent for a moment, then he said quietly and rather gravely:

"Harvey was knocked up—and no wonder! He has been working as hard as a nigger. He looked, and was worn out. And the death of his father. It was I who advised him to go away. He has been abroad traveling. Where? I don't know. Australia and the other colonies, I believe. I've not heard from him."

"He ought to be here," said the man who had spoken before. "We want a rally in force, and Harvey is invaluable, a host in himself. I shouldn't have thought he would have been so knocked up, he looks so strong."

"He was overworked," repeated Lord Chesterleigh. "But I agree with you; he ought to be here; we want every man, and, as you say, he is a host in himself."

Almost as he spoke, a tall figure made its way through the restless crowd and approached the group, and Lord Standon, who was the first to catch sight of it, exclaimed:

"By George! The man himself! My dear Harvey, delighted to see you; we were just talking of you!"

Lord Chesterleigh swung round and, grasping Clive's hand, scanned his face earnestly, and, as he did so, his own face grew grave. Clive had changed very much; he was thinner in face and form; there were streaks of gray at his temples; he looked worse than tired—restless, ill-content; his eyes were cold, his lips stern. There was little of his old geniality, none of the strenuous youthfulness in his response to the eager, enthusiastic greetings of the group. Lord Chesterleigh waited until Clive had exchanged some words with the others, then he drew him aside.

"I'm precious glad you've come back, Harvey," he said, "we want you very badly! But you don't look much the better for your change, my dear boy. Where have you been?"

Clive shrugged his shoulders. "I've been just moving about," he replied; and his voice sounded cold and indifferent. "I should have reached London the day before yesterday, but I lost the boat. Is there anything toward?"

"You're asking the question shows how far, and how much, you have been out of the world," replied Chesterleigh. "A great deal has happened while you have been away. If I am not mistaken, the Tories are coming to the end of their tether. Devereux keeps on smiling, but I think he sees the storm ahead. We should turn them out before the session's over. That ought to be good news for you; for, if we come in, there will be a place for you, and a good one."

"Do you think so?" asked Clive, with a forced show of interest.

"Of course there will be," rejoined

Lord Chesterleigh. "My dear fellow, we couldn't leave you out if we wanted to. Look what you've done for us! Besides, you are one of the indispensable. What will you take?" he laughed, "The Home Office, the Colonies?"

Clive echoed the laugh; but there was little gaily in his.

"I'm not particular," he said. "What does Graham think?"

"Graham thinks with me, that we are sure to come in very shortly. He was speaking of you last night. You know how high you stand with him. But tell me about yourself, my dear boy? Why have you not written? Edith and I—you are a great friend of hers, you know—have been anxious about you."

"I am sorry," said Clive. "I hope Lady Edith is well. I did not write because there was nothing to write about. I have been traveling, shooting and fishing, and so on."

Chesterleigh eyed him somewhat curiously and anxiously. "Nothing the matter, I hope," he said. "Your father's death—we all felt that, but he was an old man, older than any of us thought him."

Clive nodded. "Yes. I felt his death very keenly," he said gravely, as if that would explain the change in him. "I think I will go into the House."

"They will be delighted to see you," said Chesterleigh. "You will look up as soon as you can? Edith will be glad to see you."

Clive thanked him and passed into the House. As he made his way to his seat and his fellow members caught sight of him, a murmur arose that peculiar sound which denotes the entrance of a popular member who has been absent some time; Mr. Graham, his leader, turned in his seat and extended his hand, and ever Mr. Devereux, his political foe, nodded and smiled. Clive sank into his seat modestly, and, as he looked round the House, something of his listlessness and indifference melted under the warmth of his reception.

Not one in that crowded assembly guessed how much he had suffered and how the change in him, which every eye noticed, had been caused. As Clive had told Lord Chesterleigh, he had been traveling, shooting and fishing, striving to forget the girl whom he had loved with all his heart, the sweet, innocent girl, who had cast him off; had shrunk, at the last moment, from marrying him.

Love is still lord of all even in these mercenary practical days of ours, and love had made its lordship felt in Clive; it predominated over ambition and all else. He had accepted the decision which he thought she had conveyed to him by the return of his letter, and had tried to accept it manfully, but his love for her still burned in his breast; he still wanted her as he had never wanted anything in his life. But Clive was not the man to sacrifice his career to a misplaced attachment. He knew that there were other things worth having besides love. And yet were there any other things? he asked himself, as he listened to an honorable member droning, through his speech, and from him glanced at the yawning, sleepy men around him. It seemed to Clive that life in a cottage with Mina —always with Mina—would be better, far better, than this.

But we are the slaves of circumstances, and presently he got interested—well, scarcely interested, in the full sense of the word—but interested enough to concentrate his attention on the speech and note the weak points in the speaker's armor. He had not intended to address the House, but he caught the Speaker's eye and rose. His rising was receiving with cheers, and he started.

Clive spoke at first slowly, almost languidly, but presently he woke up, his voice grew louder, quicker; he made point after point and tore the former speaker's speech to rags and tatters. The opposition was in ecstasies of delight, the House rang with their cheers, and when Clive had finished and sat down, a shout of admiration and triumph broke from them. Mr. Devereux rose to reply—this, again, was flattering to Clive—but though Mr. Devereux smilingly strove to stultify Clive's points, he succeeded only partially, and the success remained with Clive.

He got up immediately after Mr. Devereux's speech and left the House. He knew that he had, as of old, made his mark, but the knowledge brought him no gratification. He strolled into Palace Yard and looked about him aimlessly, after the manner of a man who has nothing to do, nowhere to go. Lord Chesterleigh came out and laid a hand on his shoulder.

"Splendid, my dear fellow, splendid!" he exclaimed. "That speech of yours routed them completely. If they pass the bill at all, they will do so by only a narrow majority. Where are you going? Come home with me; I've heaps to talk about."

Clive thought, "as well there as anywhere else," and got into the carriage. All the way to Grosvenor Square, Chesterleigh talked politics and expatiated on the prospects of their party, and Clive listened with his new indifference and listlessness again creeping over him; for now that he had made his speech, the reaction was setting in, the conviction that there was nothing worth living for returned.

"Edith is in her room, I suppose," said Lord Chesterleigh, as he looked into the empty drawing-room. "We'll go up there. She will be glad to see you."

They went up the stairs to Lady Edith's room. She was sitting on a couch with a book in her hand, and she replied listlessly enough to her father's voice, but as she saw Clive her manner changed, the book dropped from her hand and she rose, almost sprang, to her feet, her face flushing.

"Oh, you are back, Mr. Harvey!" she said, as she gave him her hand. "We thought you had disappeared forever. Come and sit down and tell me about your wanderings."

Clive seated himself beside her and looked at her. He could not be ignorant of the fact that she was glad to see him. He had been traveling for months alone, solitary, roughing it as men like to rough it now and then—for a change. The beautiful room with its atmosphere of luxury, wealth, refinement, had its effect upon him. He noted—how could he avoid doing so?—the coming and going of the color in her face, the sudden pleasure in his presence moved him more than his reception by the House had done. Lord Chesterleigh moved about the room, addressing a disjointed word or two to one or both of them, then went out, leaving them alone.

Your Boys and Girls:

The very biggest and sunniest room in the house should be chosen for the nursery. If the children are to sleep there care should be taken that it is thoroughly aired at every opportunity; during meals and when the children are out for their airing. The furniture should be white enameled. Iron white enameled beds or cribs should be used and all furniture should be painted with white enamel. This is not only from an artistic point of view but because of sanitation, as white enamel is easy to keep clean. Hangings and bed coverings should be of the lightest material procurable, and washable, cretonnes with figures are good for upholstering, and window curtains can be made of any light, airy wash goods that can be purchased for a few cents a yard.

A Reply to "Newfoundlander."

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Your correspondent "Newfoundlander," in Saturday's issue, asks five questions.

His first question deals with the matter of revenue; I think that as the majority of our leading business men have put their hands down deep into their pockets and provided the necessary funds to make prohibition possible, and that the citizens generally are giving the same kind of support that they believe the revenue will "come back" even in greater proportion than before.

I would refer all "Newfoundlanders" to the editorials in the Evening Telegram under date October 11th and 12th and which have had a wonderful effect in St. John's. These editorials showed the economic effect of prohibition in Russia during the first eleven months of war. The government savings banks showed an increase in deposits of 610 million roubles as compared with an average increase of 48 million roubles for the past decade, in other words the Russian people carried sufficient cash to pay their way, including war taxes and war prices, with millions of soldiers at the front and over a million disabled, and had to spare and placed in the savings banks nearly thirteen times as much money as they did during the previous year of peace and alcohol.

The Russian finance minister stated when presenting his report, "this is what a sober Russian people means." I ask, is it unreasonable to argue that a proportionate amount of prosperity will come to us and more revenue raised when the 1½ million dollars which we now spend per year in alcohol is spent in other duty paying goods, chiefly goods which pay the higher rate of duty, viz. 25 to 40 p.c., such as boots, clothing, and other household necessities, the smallest portion of the amount will be carried in foods which pay the lowest rate of duty as under present conditions the people who are "hardest hit" by the liquor traffic manage to obtain sufficient food to "exist" on, either through their own earnings or from charity.

The next portion of his first question refers to the shebeen and smuggling which, he says, may be carried on. This suggestion presupposes that our people are lawless and uncontrollable and is altogether at variance with the facts as shown by the history of our people. Our Penitentiary records prove on the authority of the Supt., that 70 p.c. of the 62 men who inhabit that institution are there directly through drink and that a large number of the balance are there indirectly through the same cause. Much of the petty thieving going on is the result of liquor, robbing the home of the necessities of life, and the children stealing in consequence. This proves that without liquor our people would maintain a high standard of lawfulness. Of course a few "dead beats" and "soakers" would use whatever brains they may have left to try and circumvent the law; but with a fifty dollar fine staring them in the face and public sentiment backing up the police and judges in imposing the fine, I believe that the quantity smuggled in would be very small indeed; and the few cases or jars of liquor would have no relation to the present public menace of the open saloon.

"Newfoundlander" can rest assured that an "army of police" will be needed, but that the history of Carbonara before and after local option will be repeated, viz.: Before local option 7 policemen were kept busy handling the products of the saloon. Since local option was enforced one policeman spends his time wondering when he will have something to do.

2. Re Confederation. I trust the arguments used so far dispense of the necessity for confederation, I would also point out that one or two of the temperance advocates are confederates, the great majority of the business men and others who are backing prohibition are the strongest anti-confederates we have in Newfoundland.

As this letter is long enough for this issue I will close here and will endeavour to reply to the other questions asked in to-morrow's issue, viz.: "Substitute for Alcohol" etc. I am, Yours, etc., REASON.

Hr. Grace Navy Man on Furlough.

SAW FOURTEEN MONTHS OF ACTIVE SERVICE.

Amongst the passengers who came on the S. S. Florizel from Halifax last night was a Royal Navy man. He proved to be Samuel P. Crocker, belonging to Harbor Grace, who has been given leave for ten days. Ever since August 1914 he has been in active service. Altogether he was fourteen months Hun chasing on the water, spent all that time in the Dardanelles and North Sea and has many thrilling experiences. Last winter he was engaged patrolling in the North Sea and quite recently while engaged in a bombardment in the Dardanelles. The ship he was on captured a German ship and sent her to bottom, after taking off the crew.

Mr. Crocker, R. N., went out by this morning's train to his native town where he will spend his well earned vacation with his friends.

INTERESTING LECTURE.—The Grenfell Hall was filled to its utmost capacity last night and everyone in the audience was delighted with the interesting lecture on "The Italian Frontier," given by Mr. W. H. Jones. As the learned lecturer described the historical points of the Italian nation, many appropriate and splendid views were shown. Particularly interesting were the pictures of the passages through the Alps. At the conclusion of the discourse, the Italian Consul, who was present, expressed himself as greatly impressed both from an educational and historical viewpoint.

Messages Received Previous to 9 A.M.

OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Oct. 16.

Russia reports that near Tarnopol the enemy were thrown back on the Strypa with heavy losses.

BONAR LAW.

KITCHENER'S CALL.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.
A cable to the New York Times, dated Saturday, says that the Birmingham Post has received the following from Lord Kitchener: "To the people of Birmingham: With reference to the recruiting campaign in that city, I need more men, and still more men, if the armies now in the field and the armies which will, in their turn, proceed abroad, are to be kept at proper strength. I appeal to all men, who are able-bodied and can be spared, to respond to the call, unless they are satisfied to allow the many lives given by their fellow-townsmen to have been given in vain. I can only do my duty by the country if you do yours by me. We must have more men at once."

RUSSIAN AND ITALIAN MINISTERS LEAVE GREECE.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 17.
According to a despatch from Athens to the Cologne Gazette, the Ministers of Russia and Italy are preparing to leave Greece. The families of the Diplomats, the message adds, probably will leave Greece to-day on a ship bound for Italy.

SUGGESTS FORCE.

LONDON, Oct. 17.
Holding that the time has arrived to demand that Greece put an end to all doubts regarding her attitude, the London Standard suggests that Greece put an end to all doubts regarding her attitude, the London Evening Standard suggests that Greece should be open to arguments, presented with forcible tact by the British fleet in the shape of a blockade.

LORD READING'S STATEMENT.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.
Lord Reading, Chairman of the Anglo-French Loan Commission, and two of his associates, Sir Henry Smith and Sir Edward Holden, sailed for Liverpool to-day on the American liner St. Louis. Although contracts for the five hundred million loan to be floated in this country were signed yesterday, virtually completing the work of the commission, the two French members will remain in this country to attend to any necessary details in connection with the actual placing of the loan. In measured words, carefully chosen, and slowly spoken, so that all the interviewers might record them, Lord Reading asserted that the British nation would accept no other ending to the present struggle in Europe than victory. Whatever happens, he said, nothing can change the attitude of Britain and her Allies. To this war, for them, there can be only one end, and until that end is reached, and we have a decisive victory, there can be no end to the struggle for us. The people of Britain are prepared to make any sacrifice to attain that end. Nothing that can be done will be omitted. Lord Reading's statement was made on the steamer.

THREE MILLION MEN WANTED.

LONDON, Oct. 17.
Britain needs three million more men by the spring. This declaration was made to-day by Brigadier-General Eric Swayne, director of recruiting in the northern command. In a speech at Hull he said that he estimates that Germany still has between nine and ten million men from the ages of 18 to 45; that therefore, it is useless to talk about wearing Germany out. In the spring, said he, Germany would lose more men than the Allies, which would balance the number of the Allies and the Central Powers, but if Britain raises 3,000,000 additional, Germany probably would recognize that it would be fruitless to continue. Britain, he added, did not want compulsion, but unless 3,000,000 more men were recruited by the spring, the military authorities could not be responsible for the war.

BELGIAN OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Oct. 17.
At night and morning a calm, feeble cannonade on both sides occurred south of Neuport, near Dixmude and Ste Enstrats. No infantry action.

FRENCH SUCCESSES.

PARIS, Oct. 17.
Successes for the French in Artois district and Lorraine are reported in the official statement by the War office, also southeast of Neuville St. Vaast. In the former region strong barricades were seized and held against counter-attacks. In Lorraine a hundred metres of trenches were captured north of Reillon.

ST. PIERRE BULLETIN.

PARIS, via St. Pierre, Oct. 17.
In Artois we have completely repulsed a new German attack in the wood, En Hache, and on the west slope of the valley of Souchez. Fighting from trench to trench accompanied by reciprocated cannonading, conducted south of the Somme in the region of Liéons and Du Suesnoy. At Santerre the enemy renewed bombardment of the regions back of our front of Champagne, with the use of lachrymogeneous shells. Our artillery replied on the batteries, and on the enemy's trenches. Grenade and bomb fighting in the Argonne, north of La Nouette as well as at Vauquois. In the Vosges a vigorous counter-attack enabled us to recapture all our lost positions on the top of Hartmannswillerkopf, and also to capture a small fort previously occupied by the enemy and making about 50 prisoners. A group of aviators bombarded a railway station and a moving train which had to stop; a junction was blown up again. In Artois we captured last night a strong barricade southeast of Neuville St. Vaast, and in Lorraine we have again advanced, gaining 100 metres of trenches after furious and renewed attacks. In the Dardanelles the first fortnight was calm. The Turks capture a small fort previously occupied by the enemy and making about 50 prisoners. Turkish artillery has been active, but without success, thanks to our superior artillery. Our aviators daily bombard successfully several camps and Turkish establishments.

AROUND DVNSK.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 17.
With the exception of Dvinsk, the northern end of the Russian front, where heavy artillery fighting continues, the Germans appear to be on the defensive along the entire eastern front. Russian military officials say they have obtained information that the German armies have been ordered to take Dvinsk at any cost. German attacks at this point have been made with the utmost impetuosity under cover of terrific artillery fire, but so far they have been unable to break down the Russian defence. German losses are reported to have been extremely heavy.

GERMANS REPULSED.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 17.
Official. The Germans crossed the river east of Mitau, but a counter-attack drove them back. German attempts to cross the Misa near Mihat, were repulsed by artillery fire. South of Dvinsk region the position is stationary. On the Stry river the Germans opened an offensive, but were forced to abandon it.

MARTIAL LAW IN MOSCOW.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 17.
An Imperial decree has been issued proclaiming a state of war in Moscow and Moscow district.

BOMBARDS BELGIAN COAST.

FLUSHING, Oct. 17.
During the whole of this afternoon, continuous heavy gun fire south is audible here. It is thought probable there was a bombardment of the Belgian coast. Owing to fog it is impossible to make observations.

THE BULGARIAN BATTLEFIELD.

ATHENS, Oct. 17.
Forty thousand Bulgarian troops with artillery, are reported to have begun an attack on Itardia bridge, between Val and Ovo, on the railroad running from Salonika into Serbia and Hovone, the point of attack, about 20 miles north of the Greek border. The Bulgarians apparently are attempting to cut railway communication and prevent the Allies from forwarding troops and supplies for the assistance of the Serbians.

FRANCE DECLARES WAR ON BULGARIA.

PARIS, Oct. 17.
The Council of Ministers has announced that a state of war has existed between France and Bulgaria dating from six a.m. on October 15th.

IN BESSARABIA.

PARIS, Oct. 17.
A Zurich despatch says the Russians are perpetually attacking the German positions on the frontier of Bessarabia. Their artillery is active. Enormous masses of troops are trying desperately to take the positions by assault.

SERBIAN SUCCESSES.

LONDON, Oct. 17.
Fierce fighting at Delran, near the Greek frontier, between Serbians and Bulgarians, has taken a turn in favor of the Serbians, according to an Athens despatch.

ITALIAN OFFICIAL.

ROME, Oct. 17.
No event of particular military importance beyond small offensive movements at the head of the Assa valley, along the Carnia frontier, and on the Carso front.

AUSTRIAN OFFICIAL.

VIENNA, Oct. 17.
Austro-Hungarian troops are pursuing the Serbians southeast of Belgrade, and have reached the Avala fortifications. They have captured strong positions south of Vinca. The Bulgarians forced the frontier mountains between Negotin and Stroumitza and captured the eastern forts at Seajecar.

BRITISH INTERESTS IN BULGARIA.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.
The British Ambassador notified Secretary Lansing to-day that a state of war exists between Britain and Bulgaria. At Britain's request, British interests in Bulgaria will be looked after by the States.

BATTLE AT GHEVGHELL.

LONDON, Oct. 17.
French troops encountered a Bulgarian army at Ghevghell, according to a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Athens.

ALLIES ADVANCING TO GHEVGHELL.

LONDON, Oct. 17.
Ghevghell, or Gievghell, is on the Nish-Salonika railway line in Serbia, about nine miles north of the Greek border. A despatch from Athens to the London News Agency, last night, said that the railway administration at Salonika has been ordered to prepare seven trains for the transport of Allied troops to Ghevghell. Another news agency despatch to London from Athens, said that the allied troops had left Salonika on Saturday for the Serbian-Bulgarian frontier.

THE ALLIES WELCOMED.

PARIS, Oct. 17.
A Nish despatch of Thursday evening, says that all Austro-German attacks have been repulsed. The enemy sustained serious losses. The German army which attempted to turn the right wing of the Serbians at Semendria, were driven back into the marsh. At Godomine, on the right bank of the Danube, near the fortress of Semendria, a Bavarian battalion was thrown into the swamps along this entire front. All is quiet to-day. Nish and other Serbian cities are preparing solemn receptions for the Anglo-French troops.

GREECE AND ROMANIA RESTLESS.

ATHENS, Oct. 17.
The energetic action of the Entente Allies, and the opening of actual hostilities between Bulgaria and Serbia, are apparently modifying the attitude of the Greek anti-war party. There is creditable authority for the statement that King Constantine is preparing to go to Salonika in the near future. It is said in circles well informed that Greece will abandon her attitude of neutrality as soon as the concentration of troops is completed, and army arrangements perfected. The impression prevails here that Roumania will shortly ally herself with the Entente Powers.

FRENCH FIGHT BULGARIANS.

ATHENS, Oct. 17.
The French troops in Macedonia have received their baptism of fire near the railway bridge of Hudov Vilandovo, where they were attacked by forty thousand Bulgarians. Fighting continues.

GERMAN TRANSPORTS SUNK.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 17.
British submarines operating in the Baltic have sunk five German transports, and forced another ashore, according to an official statement.

Light on A Dangerous Habit

Prominent periodicals everywhere are daily exposing the harmful effects of the drug, caffeine, in tea and coffee.

Physicians, food experts, medical writers and editors largely agree that the cumulative effect of the 1 1/2 to 3 grains of caffeine in the average cup of tea or coffee is responsible for the many troubles, such as sleeplessness, nervous prostration, heart palpitation, indigestion, etc., that subtly beset most regular tea and coffee drinkers.

Some people seemingly hold up under regular tea and coffee drinking without serious results, but modern thinkers, with respect for the fundamentals of health and longevity, are daily changing to

POSTUM

It is a pure food-drink made from wheat and a little wholesome molasses—contains no caffeine or other injurious drug.

When properly made, Postum has a flavour so delicious and so snappy that one is inclined to forget tea and coffee within a very short time.

Postum comes in two forms: The original, Postum Cereal, requires thorough boiling, 15c and 25c packages; Instant Postum, the soluble form, is made in the cup with boiling water, 30c and 50c tins. Both kinds are equally delicious and the cost per cup is about the same.

Better appetite, steadier nerves, brighter days are scheduled for those who quit tea and coffee. A 10 days' trial shows.

440th Day of the War TO-DAY'S Messages.

OCCUPY BULGARIAN TOWN.

LONDON, To-day. Strumitza in Bulgaria has been occupied by the Allied armies of Great Britain, France and Serbia, according to official advices from Saloniki. Various points dominating the railway from Saloniki to the interior have been occupied by the Allied troops, the correspondent says, and the protection of the line is regarded as assured. The occupation of Strumitza is confirmed by a despatch from Athens. The despatch adds the Allied armies are advancing and a number of Allied warships are cruising in the Aegean Sea off the Bulgarian port of Dedesghack.

SEVENTY-ONE LIVES LOST.

PARIS, To-day. Seventy-one persons lost their lives when the French steamship Admiral Hamelin was torpedoed and sunk by a submarine. A despatch from Marseilles which brings this news does not specify whether the victims were passengers or members of crew.

REMOVED CUTTING OF LINE.

PARIS, To-day. A despatch from Saloniki says that persistent rumors are current here that the Bulgarians have reached Vranje and succeeded in cutting the railway between Saloniki and Nish.

BULGARIAN COAST BLOCKADED.

PARIS, To-day. The British blockade of the Bulgarian coast says a despatch from Athens is the prelude to combined land and sea operations. Italy will be represented by a naval squadron and a number of transports.

GERMANS ATTACK BELGIAN LINE.

LAPANNE, Belgium, To-day. The Belgische Standard published here, says a terrible bombardment was in progress along the Yser front on Saturday and Sunday nights. The firing was especially violent near Dixmude and Ypres. This bombardment was a prelude to an attempt by Germans to break the Belgium lines. The Belgian artillery returned the fire, shelling the enemy communications and trenches and scattering his infantry as they leaped from the trenches. A second attack on a smaller scale was also repulsed. This offensive took place in Dixmude region at a spot known as "Deaths' Highway" which has been stubbornly disputed by both sides. Although mowed down in rows the Belgians have not yielded an inch of ground.

A MIXED LOT.

PARIS, To-day. According to the Havas News Agency, a despatch from Geneva, says the German troops, bearing the brunt of an attack by the French along the Champagne front, are "homogeneous force and their condition and equipment are far from being up to the standard. These assertions the despatch states are based on information gathered by Coltriller, a Swiss military writer, from persons who have been at the front. It is added that the forces on the German side in Champagne are made up of 56 regiments hastily formed and scattered units of many other regiments and various corps, complete lists of these is given showing the heterogeneous assembly of regulars, landwehr, reservists and guards, some of whom had just arrived from the Russian front, guards going directly from their trains to the firing line.

SIR WILLIAM TYRRELL.

LONDON, To-day. Sir William Tyrrell, Private Secretary to Sir Edward Grey, obliged some time ago to give up work because of ill health, according to a statement issued by the Foreign Office recently, it is added that he has been able to undertake special work at the home office in connection with war. It is announced that Hon. Eric Drummond succeeds Sir William as private secretary.

PARIS, To-day.

The Petrograd correspondent of Petit Parisien declares that the Russian Minister of War stated that during the last month German offensive has been checked along the whole front and that every step in advance has been costing the enemy more than did every step during August, while at many important points the Russian army is progressing. The Minister stated that the state of equilibrium has thus been broken slightly in favor of the Russians whose progress, he said, could only go on improving.

ATHENS, To-day.

According to information from a diplomatic source here the army of General Von Linsingen which was originally intended to be thrown by Teutonic allies into the Serbian theatre of war, was forced to return to the Eastern field of operations to face the successful advance of the Russians.

LORD NORTHCLEFFE ON THE WAR.

LONDON, To-day. In reply to a cable request for an expression of his views on the European situation at this time, Lord Northcliffe, owner of the London Times and London Daily Mail, cabled to-day. The new war situation is particularly interesting. The German after colossal losses have abandoned their attempt to reach Calais and their more recently expressed intention of breaking through the line at Arras and cutting off the whole British Army. My own correspondent tells me that the German losses during the last fortnight in front of the British lines have been immense, though the censor does not permit us to say so here. I am hoping that he will allow me to get the facts through cable that the Germans have fought with magnificent courage against our men. The Germans were mowed down last week exactly as they were mowed down in the first battle of Ypres. Held off everywhere in the west they are now making for the east, and by crushing little Serbia, hope to seize the Suez Canal and hold up the British Empire for an immense indemnity. My absolute conviction is that, just as they have been beaten in an attempt to get to Calais and Paris so they will eventually, after immense further losses of life on the part of our armies and theirs, fall in the east as they have fallen in the west. I still hold the opinion expressed at the beginning of the war that the world is now in for a long upheaval of a nature it does not at present foresee.

Presentation to Mr. LeMessurier.

At yesterday's exercises of St. Thomas's Church Sunday School Mr. H. W. LeMessurier, who has done faithful and valuable work in connection with the parish for nearly a half century, was presented with an address and handsome ebony walking stick neatly inscribed. Rev. W. E. H. Cracknell then addressed the scholars and spoke in felicitous terms of the good work rendered by Mr. LeMessurier as did also Mr. Mott. The address was then presented as follows:

ADDRESS.

H. W. LeMessurier, Esq., Dear Sir,—At the close of long and active association with the Sunday schools of St. Thomas's Parish, and in a small way to mark the appreciation of those now engaged in the work, we ask your acceptance of the accompanying token of our fellowship and friendship.

The records of the Parish testify that for forty-five years your valued services have been given to the Sunday schools; and that for the past twenty-six years you have been Superintendent of the Lower school. Such a period of service is not often permitted since the ordinary frailties of life so frequently intervene; but we rejoice that the evening of your life, if we may so speak, still finds you in the enjoyment of vigorous health, a continuation of which for long time we all hope and pray will be yours.

May we hope that as the years go by, the walking stick tendered shall be a source of assistance and strength to you, as our assurance is, that associated with it, will ever be the gratitude and best wishes of those who remain in the work. On behalf of the School.

That was the farthest place north visited and the Nascopic left to come south, calling at Charlton Island, York Harbour. From there she went to Fort Chimo in Ungava Bay, thence coming to St. John's direct, the run being made in four days. The Nascopic reports having fine weather during the trip, though when leaving Ungava winter was beginning to set in.

Rev. Mr. Fleming, who was doing missionary work at Baffin's Land, came up on the ship and is en route to Toronto. There also arrived a geologist party consisting of Mr. O'Flaherty, sr., Mr. O'Flaherty, jr., Mr. O'Flaherty, jr., and Miss Thurston.

It will be remembered this party engaged the schr. Laddie a couple of years ago to go to the Arctic regions on an exploration trip. The Laddie left here about fourteen months ago for Belcher's Island in charge of Capt. H. Bartlett with a two years' stock of provisions on board. The party travelled over land from Cochrane, Ontario, en route to meet the schr. Laddie, but circumstances were such that they had to abandon the journey and came on to Fort Chimo, where they joined the Nascopic.

A large congregation was present. At the evening service the Rector preached another of his eloquent sermons from the words, "The Way of the Highway" to an overflowing congregation. The Putter Day.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"I've had the loveliest day, today," said my neighbor.
"What have you been doing?"
"Nothing a and everything. It's been a putter day."
"What a t might that be?"
"A day when I do all the little putter jobs that I've been meaning to get at for months and months, and always putting off until 'some day.' I managed to get most of my routine work out of the way so that I had the day free, and I got up early and began to putter right after breakfast and putter-ed steadily all day.
"What did I do? Well, in the first place I went up in the attic and sorted out the pieces in my piece box, rearranged them so that I could find them, and put aside a big batch for Aunt May to use in her patchwork.
Gathering The Flower Seeds.
"Then I went outdoors and gathered my flower seeds and put some in the box in the attic window to dry, and some in envelopes to send away.
"Then—let me see—oh, yes, the next thing I did was to make out a fresh telephone card. You know you need one every once in a while; your old one gets clogged with names you don't use and muddled up with changed numbers, and scribbled over with casual numbers that the family will persist in jotting down on the edges.
"Next I reorganized my bookcases. With a big family and a big family's friends using the books, and with new books being added, the cases will get out of order. You simply have to take stock now and then to know how to find anything.
"Then I looked over my wardrobe, picked out what I could give away and put it in the charity bag.
Sorting Out The Year's Letters.
"That took me until the middle of the afternoon, and left me just time enough for the last job on my list—I always write them down and then cross them off, it gives you such a good feeling. That job was to sort out the year's letters, burn those I didn't want to keep, and file those I did, I finished that just in time to bathe and dress before dinner.
"Nothing and everything," finished my neighbor with a smile. "It's been a lovely day. I love putter days."
And so fascinating was her picture that I remembered that I also loved them and appointed one for next week.
Does it fascinate you, too, reader, friend?
Questions and Answers.
What do you think of a man that, having married a young girl not yet seventeen years old, will not let her visit her old girl friends and will not let her make a visit to her parents or to go to the depot to meet her mother without some kind of insult or threat? If you were her mother would you continue to visit her?
Answer—I should say from the evidence that you submit that the man was insanely jealous. Can't she get some unprejudiced friend of both to reason with him? If I were her mother I certainly shouldn't desert her in her troubles. If she wants you to visit her, would you let such a minor thing as his unwillingness to have her come to the depot deter you? Don't foster the disagreements between them, be tactful and as agreeable to him as possible, but don't desert your daughter.

The Archbishop at Trepassey.

Trepassey Parish was on fete from the night of the 7th to the evening of the 10th October. His Grace the Archbishop, Fathers McDermott and McGrath arrived at one a.m. and were most enthusiastically received and were hauled to the Presbytery amidst cheers and guns. The celebrations began in Portugal Cove where there were illuminations and bon fires which were continued at Biscay Bay. From the Trepassey Station to the Presbytery the road was lined with strings of flags. All sections of the Harbour were represented by beautifully designed arches adorned with suitable mottoes. The School, Church and Convent grounds were a forest of flags. The facade of the church formed a triple arch on the top of which surmounted by flags was the inscription: "Long Live Archbishop Roche," in the centre a large transparency of the Archiepiscopal Insignia—the Cross, the Crosier and the Mitre, on the right his coat of arms, and on the left his Cathedral; this with the centre transparency was the work of one of the pupils of the Superior School, who took the prize for drawing this year in the Preliminary Grade. His Grace greatly admired it.
Friday night the Archbishop in the presence of an immense congregation from all parts of the parish, blessed the Statue of the Bleeding Heart of Jesus and erected the Stations of the Cross, donated by members of the Parish, after which he spoke in the most impressive manner of the Passion of Our Lord and urged the people to practice the "Way of the Cross."
Saturday His Grace celebrated Mass in the Church, assisted by the Pastor, Father Renout, after which he proceeded to the Convent where he received into the religious life Miss Lee. The young lady assumed the name of Sr. Teresa. His Grace spoke most earnestly of the duties of the religious life and exhorted the young novice to live up to her high ideals. After the reception His Grace and visiting priests were entertained at luncheon by the good Sisters.
An Opera was also performed in his honor by the school children which was beautifully rendered and reflected great credit on the Nuns. Miss Nettie Murphy read the address. A remarkable feature of the performance was the baby drill and song by little tots of four years, and dancing by the younger children. His Grace expressed his great pleasure by showering ecclunions on all the performers in his reply to the address. Though all were good we must make special mention of Miss Nettie Murphy and Miss Alice Ryan.

Saturday night about 700 people, men, women and children, notwithstanding the unpropitious weather, gathered in the Presbytery grounds and formed a torch light procession. His Grace, Father Renout and visiting priests having entered carriages, willing hands hauled them through the settlement preceded by the parish band and the officers of the T. A. Society walking on either side as a guard of honour; Presbytery, Church, School, Convent, Hall and all houses were artistically illuminated. From the time he left the Presbytery until his return there was unceasing cheering and volleys of musketry.
Sunday at 10.30 the Archbishop went from the sacristy in procession to the church under an arch of flags held by 226 children, candidates for Confirmation. At the church door he was met by the Parish Priest in surplice and cope who with the usual ceremonies conducted him to the throne, whilst the choir sang the "Ecce Sacerdos." A Missa Cantata was then sung by Father McGrath. After Mass His Grace unveiled three beautiful stained glass windows erected by the people to the memory of the late Dean Born. The church was dedicated to Our Holy Redeemer, the windows are representations of the Passion, in the centre the Crucifixion and on either side the Scourging at the Pillar and the Agony in the Garden.
The address from the people was then read by Magistrate Giovenette. In replying to the address His Grace alluded in the most touching terms to the late Dean Born, saying that he needed no memorial as his memory still lives in the hearts of the people, as shown by the holiness of their lives and their magnificent faith, but that the windows would remind them every time they entered to say a prayer for his holy soul.
The Sacrament of Confirmation was then conferred on 226 children and His Grace gave them instructions suitable for the occasion.
After dinner the people again assembled in the Presbytery grounds, headed by the parish band and a procession of 226 children bearing flags, hauled His Grace and clergy to the station where he again thanked the people for their warm-hearted and magnificent reception and left amidst cheers, volleys of guns, for Renewes.

Acids in Stomach Sour the Food and Cause Indigestion

"Pape's Diapepsin" fixes sour, gassy, upset stomachs in five minutes.
If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach, headache, you can surely get relief in five minutes. Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will understand why dyspeptic troubles of all kinds must go, and why it relieves sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. "Pape's Diapepsin" is harmless; tastes like candy, though each dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.
This city will have many "Pape's Diapepsin" cranks as some people will call them, but you will be enthusiastic about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever take it for indigestion, gases, heartburn, sourness, dyspepsia, or any stomach misery.
Get some now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach misery and indigestion in five minutes.
When boiling bones for soup or stock, remember that you haven't extracted all the goodness from them until they are full of little holes. You can boil them again and again. Fish bones and trimmings make nourishing stock, and should never be wasted.

ADDRESS
To His Grace Most Reverend E. P. Roche, D. D., Archbishop of St. John's.

May it please Your Grace,—
On behalf of the people of Trepassey, we beg to tender to Your Grace a hearty welcome, and to assure Your Grace of our loyalty and devotion. On the Feast of St. Peter and St. Paul, in common with all your spiritual children, we rejoiced that Your Grace, so revered and beloved, was raised to the Metropolitan See.
Scarcely a year ago when your illustrious predecessor, full of years and merit, laid down his charge, great indeed was our sorrow, for he had given us many proofs of his zeal and affection, but Our Holy Father in choosing you, his able Administrator and painstaking, zealous Vicar General, gave us a guide than whom no better could be found.
To Your Grace we shall always turn for counsel and guidance, and in us you will find eager listeners and earnest doers.
Your Grace will kindly allow us to give expression to our admiration of your zeal and care for your people, manifested by the numerous visitations of the past few months.
We gladly embrace this opportunity of offering our warm and sincere congratulations.
We beg Almighty God may strengthen and spare you for many years to govern the Archdiocese and that He may bless you abundantly.
Signed on behalf of the Parish,
L. G. GIOVANETTE, M.D.
PATRICK CURTIS,
THOMAS SUTTON, OF GEO.
MATTHEW KENNEDY.

The Hygiene of Gas Lighting.
Incandescent gas is the ideal form of illumination for a living room. The soft yet brilliant light given off floods the room, and is restful both to the eyes and to the senses, preventing homelessness or sewing from being a source of eyestrain.
It has, moreover, been scientifically determined that the strong uprush of heated products of combustion from gas burners draws up the emanations from the skin and lungs of the occupants of the room, chills and sterilizes any accompanying germs, and, reaching the ceiling, diffuses through the plaster so rapidly as to draw fresh air from the windows and other openings.

"It beats me," said the curious wife—

"It's been a puzzle all my life

To figure out how it can be

That men, who get small salary,

Have homes the finest in the land,

With furniture that's truly grand."

Her hubby, who was feeling blue,

Spoke up and said, "Why you could do

The same as they if you would buy

From CALLAHAN, GLASS. The reason why

Others have nicer homes than we

Is just because you do not see

That with less money you could buy

Upholstered Goods that please the eye

If to the BIG Store you would go;

But, like some others, you're too slow."
