CHAPTER XXIX.
WICKED LORD STOLEY.

She bent towards him with perfect grace, and placed her hand upon his arm.

A thrill of amazement and curiosity ran through the room, and those near the two fell back. The set was formed, and Lord Cecil found himself standing at one of the sides, with a young girl for a partner.

"What a delightful man to have for an uncle," she said, with a smile.

"Yes, yes," he replied, absently, his eyes fixed on the thin, white face.

The music commenced, the dance began, and the marquis, with a grace which reminded those of his old friends of the days when Wicked Lord Stoley was in the prime of his youth—and his wickedness—led Lady Grace to the centre. A crowd had collected round the set; all eyes were fixed upon him and the lovely woman who bore her triumph with such queenly self-possession, when suddenly a cry—a shudder, rather—of alarm ran from lip to lip; for the erect, stately figure was seen to swerve and rock, and then stand still, as if rooted to the spot with its arms held above its head, and its starting eyes fixed strangely on vacancy.

"Great Heaven! It's a fit! He's dying!" said someone.

Cecil sprang forward, and, just in time, caught him in his arms.

Someone silenced the band, and the whole assemblage became instantly mute.

Lord Cecil raised the motionless form in his arms—it seemed to weigh nothing to him, so thin—and emaciated was it—and, through a lane of horrified spectators, carried him up the broad stairs and into his bedroom.

Three persons followed him—Lady

Grace, Spenser Churchill, and the marquis's valet—and entered the room with him.

Lord Cecil laid his frail burden on the bed, and the valet quickly unfastened the old-fashioned cravat.

"It is a fit, my lord!" he murmured, agitatedly. "I expected it! I have been watching him from one of the doorways. His face was so white, and—and strained—like—"

"Go for a doctor," said Lord Cecil, quietly. "Grace, go down and get rid of these people."

"Oh! come with me, Cecil!" she said, brokenly. "I—I shall break down."

"Yes, go with her," said Spenser Churchill. "You need not be more than a few minutes, and I'll stay here with him."

Reluctantly Cecil drew his arm within hers, and left Spenser Churchill alone with the unconscious man.

He waited until Lady Grace, and Lord Cecil had left the room; then, scarcely looking at the white, distorted face, he searched the pockets of the helpless man, and with a suppressed cry of satisfaction, darted to the cabinet, got the keys, and opened the safe.

Taking out two deeds engrossed "The last will and testament of the Marquis de Stoley," he thrust one in the breast-pocket of his coat and replaced the other in the safe, and locked it and returned the keys to the cabinet.

Scarcely had he done so, and taken his place at the bedside, than Lord Cecil and the valet hurried in with a doctor, who had been one of the guests.

He bent over the unconscious marquis and made his examination.

"Is he—oh, don't say that my dear friend is dead!" exclaimed Spenser Churchill, with a sob.

Lord Cecil waited for the answer in silent horror.

"No, no, he is not dead! Open that window!" said the doctor. "It is a fit produced by sudden excitement."

"Thank Heaven!" murmured Spenser Churchill, devoutly. "And will he recover, doctor?"

The doctor looked grave.

"I cannot say. If he should—" He hesitated, and looked at Lord Cecil. "It is a very serious case, my lord; a sudden collapse. The unusual excitement has been too much for his lordship. He may recover; but if he should—he stopped, and touched his forehead—"I fear it will be a bodily and not mental recovery."

Spenser Churchill drew back and covered his face with his hands.

"My poor friend!" he sobbed, and if he gave expression to his thoughts, he would have added, "will not be able to make a fresh will!"

CHAPTER XXX.
IN THE TOILS.

The great marquis recovered consciousness by midday, but he lay very weak and silent, the keen, hard face looking like a mask carved in old ivory. Cecil Neville scarcely left his side, and though the marquis did not attempt to speak, he turned his eyes upon him now and again with a curious expression in them. Mr. Spenser Churchill was, as became so well-known and tender-hearted a philanthropist, most attentive and sympathetic, and he hovered about the bedside and shed the light of his benevolent countenance upon the patient, as if he were the marquis's brother. And him, too, the sick man regarded with an expression of thoughtful watchfulness.

Mr. Spenser Churchill waited four days, then, hearing from the doctors that the marquis might possibly remain in his present condition for weeks, or even months, he thought that he had better attend to the other threads of his plot. It was time that Percy Levant secured Doris. Everything in England was working wonderfully well for Mr. Spenser Churchill, and, in anticipation, he could almost see the accomplishment of his object and the reward of all his scheming and toiling.

"It cuts me to the heart to leave the dear patient, Cecil," he said; "but I have most urgent business on the Continent, connected with one of our great charitable societies, and I really must go. I have the consolation, however, of reflecting that I leave my dear old friend in such loving hands as yours and dear Lady Grace's. He will, I know receive every attention that affectionate hearts can suggest."

"Yes," said Cecil, rather grimly. "We shall neither starve nor neglect him; don't remain a moment longer than you like. You had better leave your address."

"Yes," said Spenser Churchill. "Dear me, I scarcely know what address to give you. I shall be moving about so much for the first few weeks; but perhaps you had better write to Meuriguys, at Paris. You will telegraph to me, of course. I shall be back as soon as possible. And when I come," he added, mentally, as he wrung Cecil's hand, "perhaps I may have the satisfaction of dealing you a slight shock, my self-sufficient young friend."

He started for Italy that same evening, and three days later appeared in the garden of the Villa Rimini to find that Doris had consented to be Percy Levant's wife.

There was something so complete in the success of his plans that Mr. Spenser Churchill was almost startled. The marquis lying bereft of reason and helpless away in England, and Doris Marlowe engaged to Percy Levant! It was little short of marvellous!

"Now, if I could only see them married," he murmured, as he lay on the lawn smoking a cigarette, and blinking placidly up at the blue sky; "if I could only see them married, and the dear marquis would kindly remove himself from this troublesome world, I should be ten thousand pounds richer in pocket, and be able to repay my dear Lord Cecil for the many, the very many snubs he has bestowed upon me. Ah! here comes Percy. How the young man hates me! And yet I have been the means of giving him a beautiful wife and a large fortune. Strange how deeply ingratitude is engrained in the human heart! Well, Percy," he purred, "and how is dear Miss Marlowe now? It was nothing serious, I trust! Only the heat, my dear Percy? I noticed that the room was hot and the air quite heavy with flowers. I'm not sure that too many flowers are wholesome; to some ultra-refined sensibilities, like those of our dear Miss Doris, for instance, their perfume is overwhelming. How is she?"

Percy Levant stood with folded arms looking thoughtfully into vacancy, his handsome face grave and sombre.

"Miss Marlowe has gone to her own room," he said, in a low voice. "Yes, it may have been the heat and the scent of the flowers." As he spoke, he took the society journal from his pocket and opened it. "What was it Lady Deppard was reading when—when Miss Marlowe fainting, Churchill?" and he bent his dark eyes keenly upon the Spenser Churchill touched his white smooth forehead with his forefinger.

"Really, my dear Percy, I forgot! Wasn't it something about that floral fete to the Amalgamated Charity Children? Or was it the account of Lady Brabazon's ball? Miss Marlowe's sudden and alarming indisposition so startled me that it drove the matter out of my head."

Percy Levant looked at his fixedly, then opened the paper, and scanned it carefully; then his eyes flashed as he came across the paragraph respecting Lord Cecil's engagement, and he read it aloud.

"That was it, was it not?"

"No, I don't think so; but I really can't be sure. To tell you the truth, I wasn't paying much attention. You see, I'd read the paper coming across."

"It was this, and you know it," said Percy Levant, in a low voice.

"Was it? I daresay. But what has that to do with Miss Marlowe's swoon?" enquired Spenser Churchill, with a patient smile.

Percy Levant paced up and down, his head sunk upon his breast.

"I don't know," he muttered, inaudibly; "but I will know!"

"Don't look so distressed, my dear Percy!" purred Spenser Churchill, leaning his head on his elbow, and watching him through half-closed eyes. "I trust there is nothing to be really anxious about. Miss Doris will be well and honour us with her presence at lunch, or at dinner, at latest. Of course, I can understand your anxiety; but don't give way to it, my dear Percy. Will you come and sit down? I want to talk to you for a few moments."

Percy Levant stopped short in his pacing to and fro, and looked down at him.

"Well?" he said, impatiently.

"I want to speak to you about the marriage," said Spenser Churchill.

"What marriage?" demanded Percy Levant, with a frown.

Spenser Churchill opened his eyes and laughed softly.

"Why, your marriage, my dear fellow," he returned; "yours and Miss Doris's. I don't know whether you agree with me; but I am, on principle, strongly opposed to long engagements. When two young hearts are yearning for each other—Percy, this marriage must take place at once," he broke off with a sharp and sudden change of voice.

Percy Levant watched him closely and in silence for a moment.

"Why?" he asked.

Spenser Churchill smiled blandly.

"For several reasons; one, and not the least, being my anxiety to see two young people in whom I am deeply interested, made happy; another, if I may be candid, is because I am anxious to complete our contract, and destroy the bond," and he touched his breast-pocket.

A strange expression came into Percy Levant's face—came and passed like a flash.

"You want your money?" he said.

"Naturally, and you want your bride. So that we are of one mind, my dear Percy."

"And what if I say I will go no further in this vile business; if I say that I will no longer be a party in this conspiracy against a helpless girl?" said Percy Levant in a low voice, and with a sudden crimson rising to his face.

Spenser Churchill smiled blandly.

"But you won't say any such nonsense, my dear fellow," he retorted, blowing a thin wreath of smoke from his complacent lips; "and it would be nonsense, sheer nonsense, for you would, because, my dear Percy, you are so completely and madly in love with her!"

Percy Levant grew pale, and he clenched his hands.

"You fend!" he muttered.

Spenser Churchill laughed softly.

despatches declare that all the British Canadian and Japanese troops have been withdrawn from Vladivostok, and that in the Kherson region the forces of General Denekine are retiring in disorder. It points out that the retirement is important to the Bolsheviks, because it strengthens the defence of Kiev from the south.

Hon. A. B. Morine Returns.

WAS CORDIALLY RECEIVED. IS CONFIDENT OF BEING RETURNED.

The Hon. Mr. Morine returned on Saturday, by train, from a visit to parts of Bonavista Bay. To the Telegram he said that he had been there for the purpose chiefly of informing himself as to the need of public improvements requested by the people, and to arrange for them where desirable. He had not gone with any intention of holding meetings, as the season for speeches had not arrived. At Bonavista town he found the fishermen very busily engaged in catching fish, and doing well at it, but working from early morn until far into the night. There and elsewhere he had been most cordially received, and from observation and report he was convinced that he and his colleagues would be elected when the day of the contest came. The respective candidates had not been publicly named, but it was expected by many that Mr. Cosker would head the Opposition ticket. Far from fearing that, he welcomed it, as a guarantee that the interest which would be aroused would make the contest a stirring one, worth fighting. Unionism was not dead, far from it, but Coskerism was an outcome of it which Convinced Unionists regretted, and they intended to draw a line against the latter.

His attention being drawn to published statements, that he had not addressed public meetings in the district because he feared to, Mr. Morine said, he had expected that very natural misrepresentation. But, he said, that sort of falsehood really did him good in the district, where the truth was known. He was not in the habit of wasting his ammunition, he said, and it would be sheer waste to make speeches until the fishermen were home, their work done, and they ready to listen. His opponents, he added, had been snapping at him for months, and were obviously exhausted. They had nothing new to offer a jaded public appetite.

Very little was heard by him in the district, Mr. Morine said, about the Squires Opposition Party. That little, however, indicated curiosity rather than any other sentiment, curiosity as to the nature of the bargain with Cosker which most people believed had been made. Their coalition had not strengthened either.

Wants Close Season Extended.

Editor Evening Telegram.
 Dear Sir.—You will doubtless allow me space in the Telegram—the only newspaper—to try and wake up the Game Board. Now that the opening season for Rabbits is drawing near, cannot the Board forbid the snaring of these animals until, say, Oct. 10th?

As every man in the Game Board knows, (or is expected to know) the second litter of rabbits are no larger than kittens on Sept. 20th. And every year hundreds of these midgets are snared and thrown away as unfit for use, the first week the Season opens. I have been told by several old timers around here, that it is a common sight to see (and smell) as many as ten of these "rats" lying around rotting after the snare are cleared each trip. The Board has had several letters complaining of this, during the past few years, so its about time they were "hove out," and its up to the Telegram to do it. Let the shooting season open on Sept. 20th, but prohibit snaring until about Oct. 10th. No man will waste a load of shot on a thing not worth the price of the powder he is using. One reads in your paper every day about the now famous Road-hog. Let the "Powers that be" come to their senses and stop the carrying of guns on Sundays by these Rogs, and shooting partridge along the Brigus-Whitbourne Road. It's happened 3 Sundays during the present month, and although one never sees him, there is supposed to be a warden around here though of obsolete type. Trusting I have not taken up too much space and that you will keep after this "sleepy" bunch until things are as they should be.

I remain Yours etc.

The Hun People and the War.

The Weimer Assembly, Germany's new parliament, has appointed a commission to place responsibility for the war. Noting this fact a Halifax paper says that the commission's task should be easy as "it has many of the culprits and the documents right at hand" and "the rest are in Holland." But is the case exactly as the paper puts it? The world has become accustomed to speak of the former Kaiser and his Prussian favorites as responsible for the war. Wilhelm Hohenzollern and the military caste of Germany and the country's industrial and commercial barons desired war; there is no doubt of the truth of that statement. They had become drunken with personal ambition and lust for world supremacy in arms and in trade. They desired a war which they were mistakenly confident of winning and they schemed with devilish persistence to bring it about. But, though they were the directing force, did responsibility for the war begin and end with them? Perhaps the world has been too ready to exonerate the German people of blame by putting upon high-placed men all the responsibility for the enormous wrong which Germany has done the world. Baron von dem Busche-Hadenhausen, formerly German minister to the Argentine Republic, places the responsibility upon the German people. "Behind the Kaiser," he said in a recent interview, "stood solidly the German people who, in consequence, is the only party responsible for the acts of war." The baron, no doubt, is one of the Germans who are still loyal to the former emperor and would eave him from trial and punishment; but he touches the point which some people are too apt to forget when he speaks of the German people as standing solidly behind the throne. The German people took the very course which the baron says they took. Despatches from Germany in the early days of the war showed that the mass of the people paraded the streets of their cities and towns singing and cheering when word had come that war was actually let loose. In later days the civilian population of the country upheld the soldiers and sailors in all their acts of outrage and wanton cruelty. The civilians "stood solidly" behind the war leaders. Not until it was manifest that Germany's cause was lost beyond all hope of question did the people's attitude change. The Kaiser and his advisers, then, desired war and the people, joyously accepting the German doctrine of the righteousness of might, approved the desire and supported every step which that desire animated. It is well to bring the former Kaiser and his leading aides to trial; their deserts must be meted out to them in full measure; but it is not well to forget that responsibility for Germany's crime in forcing war and for the manifold crimes which Germany committed in the conflict must be shared by the German people. The belief that once was more or less current that the Teutons were a decent people badly misled by criminal leaders did them too much credit. The virus of evil was not in aristocratic veins alone. These are truths which it will be wise to keep in mind when there is German whining that the peace terms bear too harshly upon an "innocent people."—Sydney Record.

Civic Pride.

One of the first things that strike the visitor to the City of New York is the sign, "New Yorkers, Be Proud of Your City!" He is not long in the city before he discovers that the citizens there ARE proud of New York and do everything possible to make its appearance as presentable as can be and to keep it clean and tidy.

They are not commanded to do such and such a thing. A law is not rammed down their throats and themselves forced to obey. Instead, they are REQUESTED to co-operate in keeping the city clean.

Here, on the other hand, we have neither. We are neither commanded nor requested to keep the city clean. Our pride is not appealed to. Our sentiments are not aroused. For that reason we take no pride in our city and do not co-operate in any way in improving its appearance.

Paper and rubbish are deposited on the streets. Bale-boxes and packing-cases are stored on side-walks. Fences facing Water Street, the most important and most frequented of our streets, are allowed to fall down and rot before they are repaired. Vacant lots containing rubbish and dump heaps are allowed to front on the main street. Posters and bill-boards are set about everywhere. The side-walk paving is allowed to remain cracked and torn and the cobble stones in the centre of the street are dirty and filthy and evil-smelling.

We have one city in the country and even the one street of that is not kept in a respectable condition. When it rains the water roars down the streets and lanes onto Water Street, bringing barrells of sand and stones. This is not prevented and the deposits brought down are not even removed.

What is wrong with the city, anyway? Are we so dead, so apathetic, so unenterprising, so shameless and devoid of civic pride that we can permit this condition of things remain?

What is the Municipal Council doing?

Why Boots Are Expensive.

There is a great shortage of leather in the United States and boots and all other footwear are abnormally expensive. Thus, we hear that boots are now selling in New York for $20 a pair and that the next consignment to reach Newfoundland from there will be considerably higher in price.

The reason for the advancement of the price, we are told, is the shortage of leather, and we do not doubt the statement. The shortage of transport facilities with which to bring the hides from South America deprives the manufacturers of that supply. In Russia some millions of hides are rotting, the Allied blockade precluding their reaching the markets.

This last fact constitutes still another reason why the blockade should be lifted and the exiled soldiers allowed to return to civilization and peace.

When America found that the representations and requests for intervention in Russia had been made by men who represented themselves only, the Americans soon withdrew their troops.

Why cannot the British do likewise?

Keep to the Left.

The Inspector General of Police has not yet taken any apparent steps to obviate street confusion, and we still have to tolerate a condition that would not be permitted in any other respectable city for one moment.

What is the difficulty? Why has nothing been done? Surely it is not believed to be impossible to have pedestrians keep to their left when walking on the public street? The only thing necessary is to ask the co-operation of the public, give the constables instructions to enforce the regulation (and very little enforcing would be necessary) and, perhaps, to nail a few board signs to some telegraph poles, containing the words, "Keep to your left!" Nothing difficult in that, surely? The expense is not prohibitive, is it? But the result would be worth having, would it not?

Then why the delay?

Paper Town Team Arrives.

The Grand Falls' baseball team arrived by yesterday's express, and was met at the station by Hon. W. J. Higgins and Mr. Mark Chaplin (the Inter-town Baseball trustees) and the officers of the League, and a large number of the city players, and taken in motor cars to their hotels. After to-night's game the Grand Falls team will finish the evening in a tour of the countryside by motor subsequently arriving at the Blue Puttee where they will be entertained by the management. After the game on Tuesday, by invitation of Mr. Toby Jackson they will form a theatre party at the Star Theatre to hear Madame Timmons and Mr. Eddie and on Wednesday at 6.30 they will be the guests of the Inter-town Trustees at a complimentary supper at Wood's West End Restaurant, after which, at the request of the C.C.C. Band they will be their guests at their big dance in the C.C.C. Hall.

Should be Fixed.

From parties who visit the city's excellent look-out—Signal Hill—we learn that there is a very heavy stone block of the old powder magazine to the east of the Tower hanging very loosely over the window and in such a manner that, if it fell, the one who happened to be underneath at the time would receive a nasty blow if not worse. As a large number of people visits the old magazine Sundays and holidays the authorities should see that the stone is either removed or safely fixed.

Ball Team Makes Presentation.

The city Baseball team made a presentation of a leopard-wood walking stick suitably engraved to Lieut-Col. Montgomerie who sailed Saturday for St. John, N.E., where he will take up duty as assistant manager for the Furness Withy Company in the maritime Provinces.

Another Child Knocked Down.

Another motor accident was added to the altogether too big list on Saturday evening, when a young child was knocked down by a Ford Car at the junction of New Gover and Springdale Streets.

Unusual Catch.

Mr. A. Hearn, of Bay Bulls, took in a large catch of codfish on his trap on Saturday, when some twenty qts. were realized. For such a late season this was a most unusual catch. Mr. Hearn intends letting his trap remain in the water for a while longer.

Country Cottage Destroyed by Fire.

Firemen Quickly On Hand—Ricketts, V.C., as Firefighter—Much Furniture Saved. Crowds From Town There to Witness Fire.

The double Cottage on the Waterford Bridge Road just inside Syme's Bridge owned by Mr. Cyril Tessier and occupied by Mr. McKean, the Tannery owner, and Mr. Prunty, manager of the local branch of the Standard Oil Co. of New York, was burned to the ground on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. O'Rourke, who happened to be passing, noticed flames issuing from a top-flat, side window, near the apex of the roof (which was V shaped) and running in first to warn Mrs. McKean, went to a nearby house and phoned in an alarm to the Fire Hall. Mr. McKean was also notified and was soon after on the scene. Meanwhile a few passers-by, among whom were T. R. Ricketts, V.C. and the Telegram reporter, seeing the flames ran into the house and began to save the furniture. All the ground floor of Mrs. McKean's house was cleared out, when the next flat was begun. By the time a bed and some other articles had been cleared the fire was breaking the ceiling overhead and the party abandoned this house and began on Mr. Prunty's adjoining. Nearly every wall and certain articles of the second. Among the more valued articles saved was a sword of Mr. Prunty's presented to him by soldiers of the Regiment, found by the Telegram representative and handed over to its owner. Mr. Prunty thought much of the gift and was very pleased that it was saved.

The firemen were quickly on the scene but were handicapped by the difficulty in securing a good flow of water, the nearest hydrant being more than a quarter of a mile away. A chemical engine was brought to Waterford River, nearby, and used to pump water from it. From the first, however, despite the heroic efforts of the fire-fighters, it was seen that the house was doomed. Nearly every wall, as were the walls, and the flames simply melted them. Large crowds came from the town and stood by watching the burning house. The Inspector General with a party of police motored out to the scene and remained until all was clear. The house was practically demolished, only a portion of the walls and the two chimneys remaining.

It is not rightly known how the blaze originated, but it is thought that it may have been caused by the overheating of a funnel leading from the hall stove, in which Mrs. McKean was burning some paper. The fire started in the top storey and burned down to the dwelling was covered by insurance but Mr. Prunty's furniture was covered for only a quarter of its value, and Mr. McKean's, which was about to be sold at auction as Mr. and Mrs. McKean are going to Nova Scotia to reside in future, was insured with Mr. Percle Johnson for little more than a third of its value.

Insure your property with SQUIRES & WINTER, Bank of Nova Scotia Building, St. John's, Agents for Globe & Rutgers Fire Insurance Co. of New York, United British Insurance Company, Ltd., of London.

Personal Mention.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES COLDS, Etc.

A Narrow Escape.

A youngster near the Ropewalk came very near to losing his life on Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, when automobile number 272 came within a couple of feet of him. The young boy was walking across the road and the car was proceeding slowly under brakes. The boy then turned around again to return to the same side he had left. The driver of the car applied the emergency brake and brought her to within a couple of feet. In this instance, it seems, the car driver was not at fault.

Motorists Fined.

For offences ranging around failing to have proper sufficient lights, four motorists appeared in the Police Court this morning. They were Albert Simmonds, Hugh Bishop, Maxwell Legrow and W. H. Lawrence. It is good to see that the Police Force is bringing in offenders at last. Speeding's day is done. The road-hog must go.

New local potatoes are selling at 40 and 50 cents a gallon. This, we suppose, must result from the high cost of manure—or perhaps it is because there is no war?

PLAIGARISED AND OTHERWISE.

TO-NIGHT!

Play ball!
And though the earth shall quake,
The mountains crumble, cyclones
The comet streak the sky with red,
And rivers overflow their bed,
The ball descend like fire from
The stars!
The three and four make six not seven.
The Nature's plan gives 'way entire,
And heat makes cold and cold makes fire—
What matter if the sky fall in provided that our boys win?
Play ball!
And let the world stand still;
Let rivers flow up, not down hill.
Let stocks go hang, let prices rise
And incomes shrink to half their size;
Let world be born, and others shrink,
Let critics mourn the drama's fall,
Let age attract and youth appal,
Let women have two votes or three—
But let our team have victory.

It is costing the A.N.D.Co. a matter of five thousand bones to send their diamond artists to St. John's in an endeavor to lift the little piece of silverware presented by Mr. H. D. Reid for the Inter-Town championship. You have often heard of "the lucky seventh." Well, this is their seventh attempt, and the Grand Falls party (some forty strong) which arrived by yesterday's express regard this as their lucky one. They are most anxious to have the cup to show Lord Rothermere, who is shortly due there, how they put it all over poor St. John's in the series for the championship of Newfoundland.

In view of the fact that it is likely to be dark this afternoon the game will start promptly at 8 o'clock. As it will not finish until 9 o'clock, everyone will have an opportunity of witnessing it. The gate admission is 10 cents, while numbered reserved seats for the grandstand will be on sale at the Grounds to-night at 25 cents each.

The teams will likely line up as follows:—

GRAND FALLS:	CITY
Manager.	Manager.
Mm. Morse	T. V. Hartnett.
Shel Foran	Pitcher.
Cohen	Calahan.
Catcher.
1st base.	Hiltz.
2nd base.	Murphy.
3rd base.	Callahan.
Shortstop.	Orr.
Right Field.	Munn.
Left Field.	Kielly.
Centre Field.	Gosse.
Spare	Phalen.
Coach.	O'Donnell.
Scorer	Thomas.
Umpire	Channing.
Chapleigh	Chapman.

The visitors had their work-out this morning to take the kinks out of their system after their train ride, and those who saw them in action declare they are class and full of pep. Owing to the rush of work in which he was engaged up to the last minute, "Red" McVane had the misfortune to lose his passage. Mr. Thos. F. Judge, the General Superintendent at Grand Falls, wired President Hawvermale that McVane would be here for the series, so that Manager Morse of the visiting team is expecting him on today's express.

To-night after the game, the Grand Falls team will finish the evening in a tour of the countryside by motor, subsequently arriving at the "Blue Puttee" where they will be entertained by the management in the Palm Parlor. In this connection we are asked to state by Manager Hartnett that those who have promised cars will kindly be at the Institute at 9 o'clock.

After Tuesday night's game, by invitation of Mr. Toby Jackson, they will form a theatre party at the Star Theatre to hear Madam Timmons and Mr. Eddie perform.

On Wednesday night at 8:30 they will be the guests of the inter-town Cup trustees—Hon. W. J. Higgins, Messrs. Mark Chaplin and J. O. Hawvermale—at a complimentary Supper at Wood's West End Restaurant, after which, at the kind request of the C.C.C. Band, they will be their guests at their big dance in the C.C.C. Hall.

The following players and supporters arrived by yesterday's express from Grand Falls:—

Rev. W. C. Morrison (Secretary), Manager Wm. Morse, Trainer Mike

Shallow, Scorer Butt, Umpire Chapleigh, McHenry, Quick, Fortier, Foran (2), Cohen, Shaw, Chancey, House, Slocum, Pitcher, Searles, Lockyer, Braine, Crawley, Lemise, War, Spurrell, Sparks, Kelly, Ledrew, Ball, Constance, Simpson, Postelwalte, Basha, Raynes, Murphy, Gosse, Saunders, Walsh, Bond, Douglas, Waugh, Andrews, Goodyear and Mesdames J. H. Judge, St. James, McHenry, Goodyear, Fortier, Slocum; Misses. Slocum, Rowe (2), O'Driscoll; Masters Petrie and St. James.

It is likely that the Reid Newfoundland Company will run a special train from Grand Falls on Thursday morning at 8 o'clock to bring back the visitors and taking the City baseball team. This will mean an all day run, thus permitting both clubs to have a full night's rest which would not be if they have to travel by the express which is scheduled to reach the inland town about daylight.

THE WEATHER PROPHECY.

"They're sure to play a game to-night," the eager rooter said. "Because the wind is from the South and the sun shines overhead. I mind one year there was a drought that lasted clear till Fall. The wind that year stayed in the south and didn't switch at all. They've got a corking thriller on; I'm going up to-night; I never got a chance before to see the Grand Falls' fight."

"Well, I dunno," the player said, "They look like rainclouds overhead."

"I'd like to bet it will rain," the eager rooter cried, "I want too Teddy Braine just give that pill one ride! He sure can bang 'em that young lad, the high ones and the low; this is the first night off I've had since quite a while ago."

"The sun looks bright up overhead," "Look at them clouds," the player said. "Well, it won't rain, it musn't rain," exclaimed the rooter wild, "the sun keeps growing brighter and the breeze is soft and mild, I've studied weather all my life and never get it wrong. I guess I'll go and tell the wife to bring the kid along."

City players are reminded of the fact that they are to be on the grounds to-night at 8:30 in full uniform in order to get a workout.

DAN KIELLY,

The Slugger of the Home-team.

The catcher is worried; the fielders are hurried. They're running like mad to get back to the fence. The coaches are howling, the shortstop is scowling, the infield trio are sad looking gents. Bill Slocum is shaking and inwardly quaking; in fact, the poor fellow is feeling quite ill. The whole gang is staring; they know trouble's brewing. They fear they'll lose sight of that little roan! Oh! what makes 'em mutter and tremble and stutter; what makes 'em cry out at their sad, cruel fate? "Canst ship me the answer?" you ask. Sure I can, sir. It's this:—"Dan Kielly's approaching the plate." Ah, yes, gentle reader, this extra base breeder is there in the offing, his bat in his hands.

The poor twirler, quaking, knows Dan is just itching to slam the ball into the far western stands. He knows Dan the Smiler most always feels brighter if he can arrive with three men on the sacks; for then on the pitcher the joke will be richer, and Kielly enjoys all these jokes that he cracks. Dan's very droll kidding starts pitchers a-skidding. They simply can't figure out Dan and his fun. Three base sacrifices are one of his vices, or, just for a josh he may bunt a home-run.

So don't blame these fellows for letting out bellows, for shaking and quaking or getting real hot. When Kielly starts swinging his bat for some binging, they know he may lift the pill out the lot.

BOTHA'S OBITUARIES.

LONDON, Aug. 31.
Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.—Pages of obituary notices, special articles, photographs, and incidents in his career, testify to the importance of the position held by Premier Botha in the eyes of the British public. Experts who analyze the work and character of the deceased emphasize less his astonishing military career than his work as an empire statesman, recalling his efforts to obtain full recognition of political status, his stand in favor of the maintenance of the South African Union, and his difficulties with the Nationalists, in regard to the Peace Conference.

At the recent congress of the South African party in Bloemfontein he appealed for an honest reunion of the Dutch elements, based on recognition of the act of union, and the hope is expressed that this appeal of the great statesman may effect a reconciliation, which was one of the great objects of his life. A telegram issued by Mr. Asquith reads: "The death of Premier Botha is, in my judgment, as great a personal loss to the empire as it could have sustained. His talents as a commander in the field were of the highest order. In the sphere of statesmanship he showed qualities equally as great and even more rare. He will always be remembered as entitled to the main credit for the success of the most splendid demonstration in our history of leading a unifying power for freedom and full self-government. For years I enjoyed and prized his friendship and I deeply deplore his death."

A vivid picture of Premier Botha at the Peace Conference knowing that his health was precarious and yet struggling against the possibility of death is drawn by a writer in the "Daily News," who states that at the Conference "Everyone hung on to his words, and his influence was constantly felt behind the scenes on questions such as mandates, Poland, reparations, etc. He was always for moderation and his weight on the British Empire delegation was decisive."

A writer in the Morning Post says that it was the suggestion of Premier Botha that Premier Lloyd George met Hertzog, the South African Nationalist leader. "Lloyd George's address," states this writer, "obviously bears the marks of Botha's statesmanship." It is learned that Premier Botha left England a worn-out man and suffered a bad heart attack when between Plymouth and Maderia from which he never recovered. The news of Botha's death was received with the greatest regret at Foreign Office.

NEW ZEALAND RATIFYING PEACE TREATY.

WELLINGTON, Aug. 29.
(Reuter Despatch).—At the opening of the New Zealand Parliament to-day, the Governor General stated that the status accorded the British Dominions by the Allies marked a new era in their national history. He then referred to the naval reports of Admiral Sir John Jellicoe, and stated that he hoped they would ensure naval defense of the dominions and protection of British interests in the Pacific. The Parliament would be requested to ratify the Peace Treaty, and to vote further supplies to enable the country to fulfill its obligations to the members of the New Zealand army and the relatives of those killed in the war. Steps would be taken to develop the coal industry, in addition to other measures.

AUSTRALIAN SEAMEN'S STRIKE ENDS.

MELBOURNE, Aug. 29.
(Reuter's Ottawa Agency).—Great relief is felt at the termination of the Seamen's Strike, which has lasted 14 weeks, and entailed a loss in wages of £2,500,000. The public will feel the immediate benefit, as restrictions on the use of coal, electricity and gas are being removed in a few days, and full tram services are being resumed. LeCorun, President of the Seamen's Union, has informed Mr. Millen, the Federal Minister of Reparations, that the ships will be manned at once in all states of the Commonwealth. Mr. Millen is convening a round table conference to settle disputed matters. Any questions settled will be filed and any questions not settled will be waited. This course is being followed because the men still refuse to refer the disputed points to an arbitration court and have asked Mr. Millen to take the chair at the round table, given assurance that union men will not be asked to work with non-unionists.

AMERICA'S WELCOME TO THE PRINCE.

LONDON, Aug. 30.
(Reuter's Special).—The Daily Chronicle, in its leading editorial to-day, says: "Everyone in this country who appreciates the value of Anglo-American friendship will be glad to learn that the Prince of Wales has been offered and has consented to accept the freedom of the City of New York in the course of his approaching visit to the United States. Is there any other foreign country but the United States which has it in its power to pay the visitor such a characteristic British-cool compliment? Is there any other visitor to whom America could offer it with such imposing significance? Just as President Wilson is the first chief of the American Republic to be made a free man, not only of London, but of any other British cities, so is the Prince of Wales the first member of the British Royal Family to be offered the freedom of the principal cities in America. The Prince of Wales is the first member of his family whom Americans have decided to welcome, as they would say, with both hands. It will be a great event, not only for the Prince, but also for Britain and America. Of such incidents is international friendship compounded."

SCOTLAND HAS SELF-DETERMINATION.

BOSTON, Aug. 31.
A telegram, asserting that Scotland does not require to appeal for self-determination, as she already has it, was sent to Senator Lodge, Chairman of the Senate, from the office of Thos. Gibbs, Royal Secretary of the Order of Scottish Clans, yesterday. It was signed by A. G. Finlay of Portland, Ore., Royal Chief, and the other officers of the Royal Clan comprising the Royal Executive Council.

DOCK CONGESTION.

LONDON, Aug. 30.
(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency).—Sir Arthur Hill, Chairman of the Port and Transit Executive Committee which was formed with the object of maintaining the flow of traffic from the ports, in the course of an interview to-day, said that the Committee had not controlled the clearing since the armistice shipping had increased far more rapidly than the countries inland distributing power, and a point was now reached where fifteen large ships were waiting berths in London and fifty large ships in Liverpool, that he said, was an absolute waste of ship carrying power. The committee, Sir Arthur Hill stated, was submitting proposals for increasing road transport facilities. A mobile fleet of lorries was already established, and a number of battalions of transport workers had been placed at the Committee's disposal. The latter were not competing with civilian labor. On the contrary, labor and employers cordially supported them. Another cause of congestion, he said, was the maintenance of pre-war railway rates and until that had been adjusted it would be impossible to return to normal conditions of distribution and the railways were blocked because everybody was being bribed to use them.

PERSHING RECEIVES MEDAL.

PARIS, Aug. 30.
General Pershing will leave Paris for Brest on Sunday evening, sailing on the Leviathan on September 1. The Panama peace delegation in behalf of the President of Panama has presented the General Pershing with a gold medal in appreciation of his efforts in the allied cause.

BOLSHEVIK'S RECOVER TOWN.

ARCHANGLE, Aug. 30.
With the Russians themselves conducting operations, aided by two hundred Australians from the British forces, a stern fight is proceeding along the railway front. A British airplane opened hostilities by bombing the town of Emtsa, the infantry then attacked, supported by heavy gun fire, and pierced the enemy's front positions, capturing Emtsa with 350 prisoners, including four commissars. The Bolsheviki counter attacked, employing three armored trains and re-entered Emtsa. An artillery duel is under way. Airplanes are bombing the town and the Russian infantry.

DEBBS NOMINATED.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.
A candidate for President will not be named at the National Socialist Convention which opens yesterday. Resolution to this effect was adopted after J. Louis Engday, of Chicago, had proposed Eugene V. Debbs who is serving a prison sentence for violation of the espionage law for the nomination.

THE PRINCESS'S RECEPTION IN CANADA.

LONDON, Aug. 31.
(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency).—The Observer says to-day, editorially: "Even Londoners with memories still fresh of their own moving demonstrations of affection towards their sovereign and his house must be stirred by the wonderful greeting which Canada is giving the Prince of Wales. What does it all mean, this enthusiasm? What sort of asset is it for our imperial future? First and foremost, it is a tribute to the qualities of the Prince himself—to his happy blend of freshness and earnestness, his simplicity and sincerity. He had been an undergraduate among undergraduates. He became a soldier among soldiers. To-day he is a Canadian among Canadians. In all the phases of his varied life he has displayed the royal gifts of simplicity and insight, and by them has won hearts. He has done it all so easily and naturally that it is hard to appreciate the real difficulty of his achievement, but let us bear in mind that this young man, who is daily adding to the ties of personal comradeship which already bind him to millions, is heir to the most exalted position in the world. A man with such a future awaiting his mat-and it harder to become a remote inaccessible being, obscured by the glitter and parade of ceremonial; yet our Prince knows how to make all he does warm and spontaneous. His days in Canada have been few, and his daily official engagements numerous, but in those few days he has triumphed over formal programmes and given Canada an impression of him that is entirely personal and intimate. The following editorial appears in the Weekly Despatch: "The success of the Prince of Wales' Canadian tour has surpassed anticipations at home. His Royal Highness, in a few months established himself as a general favorite. Without effort he gained a reputation for saying the right word and doing the right thing. This peculiar felicity has not deserted him. On the other side of the Atlantic he has caught the Transatlantic atmosphere and adapted himself to new and strange conditions. We are confident that these popular demonstrations are no passing manifestations of transient emotions. They must needs have enduring results. Not only has the Prince increased the good will, loyalty and affection of our Canadian brethren to the Royal House. He has also succeeded, by the deep personal devotion which he has aroused, in immensely strengthening the bonds of the Empire."

LLOYD GEORGE AND TITTONI TO MEET.
PARIS, Aug. 30.
The Italian Foreign Minister, Signor Tittoni, and the British Prime Minister, David Lloyd George, meet Sunday near Deauville. They will discuss the solution of the Fiume problem and they are looking to making Fiume an Italian city and Hinterland being leased to the League of Nations.

REPATRIATING GERMAN PRISONERS.
LONDON, Aug. 31.
Pursuant to the decision of the Supreme Council at Paris, orders have been issued for the repatriation immediately of German prisoners held by Great Britain in France. The first batch, numbering 1,000, left there to-day. The repatriation of prisoners to England depends upon the sea transport, which the Peace Treaty provides Germany must arrange.

DISEASED GUMS AND TEETH.

Of all the poisons taken into the blood, the germs and pus contributed by the diseased gums and teeth are the most destructive to the human system. If every red blood cell is forced to fight against numbers of germs to the cell, the blood cannot attend to the building up of the body, and if allowed to continue the system is bound to break down and eventually you are an invalid. Kidney, stomach, heart trouble, rheumatism and many other diseases are brought on by diseased gums and teeth.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

DO NOT POLLUTE THE MORNING.

The morning to which all the house mates bring serene and pleasant thoughts, by corruption and groans.

I was staying recently at the home of a friend who is the mother of a lovely family of five children of assorted ages. She has, besides two helpers for the household, a helper who looks after most of the children's needs, but there are certain things she never lets anyone but herself do for her children when she is at home. And one of these things is to wake the older ones (no one needs to wake the younger, as any mother can well testify) in the morning.

It makes the Day Taste Better. She always goes to their rooms, herself puts up the blinds and wakes them with a kiss and a happy "Good morning, Dear."

"My mother," she explains, "always did that for me and it seemed to make the day taste so much better. I missed that more than anything when I went away to college."

Don't you think that is a sweet idea?

Of course, it's only a little thing. But it's one of those big little things that, like the bit of heaven, leavens the whole loaf.

People are coming to realize more and more the psychological importance of the mood in which we wake and face the day.

How Cross That Always Made Me. The old expression, "You got out of bed on the wrong side," (how indignant it always made me when my mother explained some naughtiness that way) is coming to have real significance.

"The first few hours will largely determine the line of action for the whole day," writes one of our foremost psychologists. "Vexation at an unmanageable collar, sad news in the morning, an angry word or a tone of criticism from a friend, may furnish the subjective background for a bad day."

Once upon a time I was awakened suddenly by a maid with the information that a telegram had come with bad news in it. For years afterwards I was never awakened quickly by any one without going down for an instant into the black gulf into which I entered that dreadful day. And the effect on the whole day when I was thus awakened, would be marked.

A Fine Awakening. I love the story that the great French philosopher, Henri St. Simon, gave orders to his valet to awaken him every morning with the words "Remember, Monsieur le Comte, that you have great things to do today."

Of course, a pleasant awakening is only the first step. A pleasant breakfast table—the sort to which "all the housemates bring serene and pleasant thoughts" and which is polluted neither by complaints of a bad night nor of the inability to find a collar button or a school book, nor by any manifestation of irritation or temper—is a further help one ought to give one's children, and oneself, toward happy and well-poised days.

Mr. Carnegie's Epitaph.

(From the London Chronicle.)

There is already-made epitaph for the tomb of Mr. Andrew Carnegie, whose death is recorded today. It was chosen by the multi-millionaire himself and reads:—"That's damned white of Andy." Moreover, Mr. Carnegie insisted that the "damned" should appear without a dash. It was coined by Mr. John McLuckie, an acquaintance of Mr. Carnegie when the two were struggling hard for a livelihood.

When Mr. Carnegie came into his own, a mutual friend was empowered to tell Mr. McLuckie that "he could have anything he wanted," whereupon the lucky Mac gave vent to the expression which Mr. Carnegie said he would like on his tomb.

HIGH COST.

It's hard to salt a nickel, to save a penny; I have to buy a pie, and then the figures such things cost me upset my apple cart; they stagger and exhaust me, and make me sick at heart. All men are profiteering, it surely seems to me, when shopward I go steering, to buy a pound of tea; or a hat; and money mad carousers are doubtless getting fat. We men who work for wages are shy of all recourse; we fly in futile rage, and clamor till we're hoarse; but still the profiteering goes forward with a will, and daily we are nearing the poorhouse on the hill. But let's be calm and steady, and can our wild remarks; our Uncle's getting ready to swat the robber sharks. Our Uncle's slow as blazes, but take this to your heart: All kinds of smoke he raises, when once he makes a start. And we who toil and suffer may yet survive to see the profiteering duffer suspended from a tree. Or, if that fate's not his'n, as being too severe, no doubt he'll go to prison, and stay, year after year. The profiteer and hoarders and other scoundrels will be the nation's boarders in some foul scented pen. Our Uncle Sam moves slowly, but he has giant teeth; his wrath is hot

Ambassadorial Privileges.

(New York Sun.)

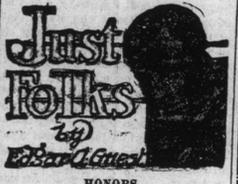

Ambassadors have curious privileges. Most people know that they and their households are immune from arrest, an Embassy being considered a geographical part of the Ambassador's own country. But there are many privileges less well known. The Ambassador is the only person about a court who has the right to turn his back on the sovereign or ruler at the conclusion of an audience. And, curiously enough, he always exercises this right, turning to bow after walking three paces. This, of course, refers only to State occasions. This worked badly in Queen Victoria's time. To turn to retire backward would be to resign a privilege, so the Ambassadors always toward the edging, sideways toward the door like a crab.

Another privilege of Ambassadors is the right of having both leaves of the folding doors thrown open when being ushered into the ruler's presence. No one else can claim this privilege.

Another highly prized privilege of the Ambassador—one that sovereigns must often regret—is that of being able to demand an interview whenever he chooses, at any hour of the day or night.

The sword is the Ambassador's emblem of honor. It is a long rapier with a blunted point. One great diplomatist, Lord Dufferin, used to say that the only practical use he ever found for it was to poke fires with it and file bills on.

HONORS.

Wear them simply, gentlemen! Wear the laurel and the bay

Not as signs of pomp and pride, or as jewels for display; Lend no boastful tongue to them—he who does the best he can, though men fail to honor him, passes by no less a man.

You who know the smile of fame and are favored by the throng; Take what men are pleased to give; honors fall where they belong. But they tarnish and they fade and the glory that is dim dies

When men flout them vulgarly before their fellow-workers' eyes.

Honors do not change the man—they're but raiment to be worn; Kings, with all their pomp and pride, may still be creatures fit for scorn.

Were you gentle? Were you kind? Now has honor come your way? You have not been changed one bit—you should still be kind today.

Wear them simply, gentlemen! Prize your medals if you will; Take what men are pleased to give, but be meek and humble still. Lend no boastful tongue to fame; This was true since life began—He who has no crown to wear, still may be a nobler man.

St. Isidore, P.Q. Aug. 18, 1894. Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Gentlemen—I have frequently used MINARD'S LINIMENT and also prescribe it for my patients always with the most gratifying results, and I consider it the best all-round Liniment extant.

Yours truly, DR. JOS. AUG. SIROIS.

Laughs in the Law Courts.

Judge and Counsel do not Always Have the Best of it in Mirthful Sallies.

"Suffer anything, endure anything, rather than go to law," once remarked that eminent lawyer, Sir Edward Clarke, to me. It was impressive advice coming from such a source, and not lightly to be disregarded. But it would be a sorry day for the Temple and the Inns of Court in general if it were followed. However, there is not the least likelihood of such a thing happening. Counsel and solicitors, judges, plaintiffs and defendants, will ever be with us, in as great numbers as ever they have been. And so will the bill of costs. Undoubtedly it is a great deal more amusing to be present at the Law Courts as a disinterested listener than it is to be there as a plaintiff or defendant, or even as a witness on subpoena.

I had once a pleasing little passage with the late Witt, K.C. It was in King's Bench Court, No. 8—a court in which Mr. Justice Darling frequently presides.

The case was one of libel. I was plaintiff. Witt was for the defence. I bear no grudge, but Witt was scarcely what his name would seem to indicate. "And of course, you did not make those remarks the defendant alleges?" he asked. "No! of course not!" "You were not abusive? You had not been dining?" "No." "But you had something to drink?" "Yes, I had." "He had had something to drink?"

trials to opposing counsel. They are experts called in to give technical evidence, and may generally be said to know all the ins and outs of their subject. They are dangerous to counsel when annoyed, but are usually so extremely sure of themselves that their good temper is not easy to ruffle. Many experts make most of their professional income in the Law Courts as highly-paid witnesses.

"You are well paid for this," a rash barrister asked one of them, with a sneer.

"Yes, I am," retorted the witness. "Perhaps better than you."

"Never mind me," said the barrister.

"I don't," responded the witness, with a satisfied smile.

Judges have not always a light and airy humor. Some have even been savage, and many have a wit that bites like acid. Of that kind was the late Sir Balliol Brett, Master of the Rolls, who martyred both his learned brethren on the Bench and counsel practising before him. He had also a singularly disagreeable habit when annoyed of removing his false teeth in public and replacing them.

On one occasion an action was being tried in his court in which a bill of sale on furniture was concerned. The leading counsel on one side was Osmund, who had written the textbook on bills of sale. It was his hobby, so to speak, and he spoke long, and, to the judge, wearily.

"Do not you think, Mr. Osmund," said the Master, "that you have argued the points sufficiently?"

"No, m'lord," said Osmund. "There are one or two more."

The speech went on and on, the judge looking now and then at the clock, and everyone in the court yawning and bored to extinction.

"Really, Mr. Osmund!" exclaimed the judge, after another half hour.

"I have now finished the arguments," said Osmund, "so far as the technical points of law are concerned, and I will now address myself to the furniture."

That was the judge's opportunity. "Mr. Osmund," said he, with severity, "you have been doing so for the last hour!" And he took out and replaced his teeth with an angry clasp.

Where Are Our Sundays?

Is there or is there not anything Divine in the institution of Sunday as a day of rest? If it is of Divine origin the mandates respecting it ought to be observed as a moral obligation. If it is a definitely human institution by legal enactment it ought to be observed out of respect to the law. Time was when Sunday was indeed a day of rest and of sacred reading. All this has now passed away, at least in the cities where there is a tendency to ignore the Sabbath altogether. Only during the past week we read a number of advertisements telling the reader how to go and spend Sunday and be happy. One of these wants the reader to bring his wife and children and dine on one of the lower streets at for 60 cents each. The suggestive part is that "an orchestra will play ragtime pieces at meal hours." Excursions by steamer and motor are advertised to places outside the city, the whole group of ads being well calculated to draw the people away from the churches and make the Sabbath a meaningless term. These things are to be regretted. Christianity DOES mean something and this is a Christian country. Religiously, morally, mentally and physically man needs the day of rest and without it both the nation and the individual will perish. The trend of the times is towards a crude materialism and the world has before it the terrible example of Germany as a warning of what nations may become that completely bow down to the powers of material paganism. This emptying of the churches and augmenting the picnic parties are bad enough on the present adult generation, but what is to become of our children who are growing up amid this desecration of the Holy Day? Seeing their parents ignore it what in the world is to become of their moral and religious training? Will the seashore or the "ragtime" dinners compensate for this? Not by any means. Children have marvellous imitative faculties and will unerringly do what they see done by their elders, and the present Sunday desecration is certainly teaching a terrible lesson. The "good old-fashioned Sunday" has often been jeered at and ridiculed, but it served to bring up in the past men and women of the strongest moral fibre and most energetic of character. A Sundayless people are certain to become a Godless people, and if righteousness gives strength to a nation, the lack of it is certain to give weakness to the nation and ultimately national downfall. Let us reform our plan ere it be too late. Spare the Sabbath that He who ordained it may spare ourselves and our children to the latest generation. A deserted church means a paganized population.—Acadian Recorder, July 22nd.

Impressively to the jury. "It would be interesting to know what you tell the Court?"

"Yes, I will. It was tea."

"Ah!"—disappointed. "It was tea. And you were polite—you always are?"

"Yes, Mr. Witt—even to K.C.'s."

"Thank you! You may stand down."

There was, of course, laughter at this. The retort was legitimate enough, but at the same time it might have been dangerous. Had the examination lasted it would not have been policy to give counsel another fall. The Court—that is to say, the judge—appreciated this one; but much more would have created a prejudice, for the reason that lawyers do not like their profession to be scored off by an outsider.

Of course, jokes and quips in a court of law need not be very good to succeed in winning a laugh. The smallest witticism will do that, for the reason that legal proceedings are usually so dull that the slightest relief is a welcome.

Mr. Justice Darling is the recognized jocular judge. His humor is generally of the dry variety. I will give an instance—not, I think, reported. It was during an action brought against a provision firm.

Damages were sought by plaintiff, who alleged that he had suffered from ptomaine poisoning after eating tinned salmon. He admitted that he had almost recovered, but still suffered a little. He would, for instance, burst into tears on reading the newspapers.

"This interested the judge. "Perhaps," said he, "he reads the reports of Parliament. They are enough to make angels weep."

The Father of the Railway.

It was at the beginning of September, 1804, that C. Blackett, of Wylam, applied to Richard Trevithick, to make him an engine for Wylam Wagon-way. The latter replied that he was unable to do so, but would send him plans to work from. The engine was built at the Pipewellgate Foundry, Gateshead, but when completed, it failed to meet the purpose required, and never left the yard. After this, cast iron rails were laid down on Wylam Wagon-way, which enabled the work to be done by horses. They shelled the locomotive for five or six years. Another engine was made in 1812, by Tommy Waters. This also failed and was removed. Blackett then undertook to make his own engines, and adopted the return flue, which proved a great improvement, and, on the whole, the locomotive and railways owe much to Blackett. But it is to Stephenson, in designing the "Rocket" (by chance or otherwise) we owe the true secrets of locomotive success, namely the multitubular boiler, separate fire-box, direct connection with piston and cranks, blast pipe, etc. When Blackett took up the locomotive as his adopted child, it was woefully imperfect, and was never intended for any higher speed than to drag coils along a colliery wagon-way at something like a walking pace, but George Stephenson gave to the locomotive the elements of speed and power which fitted it for the higher mission which it now performs, and fulfilling his famed prophecy, namely:—

"The day will come when railways will supersede all other models of conveyance in this country, and when mail coaches will go by railway, and when railways will become the great highway for the King and all his subjects, and when working-men will find it cheaper to travel by railway than to walk on foot." This was a remarkable statement, and its fulfilment fully justifies the title of Stephenson to being considered the "Father of Railways."

A Fool Printer and a Shoe String.

Orangeville Sun:—In the Seventies and eighties there was a perfect mania for starting newspapers. All it required to establish a great family journal was a fool printer and a shoe string. Ministers of the Gospel, hedged in by two-by-four pulpits, heard the call of the editorial siren and blossomed forth as editors. Disappointed at the financial recompense and chagrined at the patent fact that their highly moral editorials failed to pry over the world, they soon returned to their pulpits, sadder, wiser, more experienced and better preachers.

(By CHAS. T. KING.)

It is the cleverest men in Parliament who laugh the best. I never came in contact with a man who was really great or clever who was not very ready to laugh.

Mr. Lloyd George laughs with his eyes. Nothing makes him laugh in Parliament with quite so much relish as an attack upon him by some large-looking nobody. When he sees a joke, it hits him all of a sudden, and his eyes light up and his shoulders and ribs seem to bunch up with sudden laughter, and it always reminds me, whenever I see Mr. Lloyd George laugh, of that American expression, "tickled to death."

Some Individual Smiles

You almost imagine that someone is pushing a long feather or tickler against the Prime Minister's side, that he is drawing away from it, and at the same time laughing with great enjoyment like a tickled child.

If the sunniest laugh in the House is that of the Prime Minister, the most charming smile I ever see at Westminster is the winning, gracious, intellectual smile that plays lightly and gracefully, like fitful sunshine, over the features of that brilliant ex-Prime Minister, Mr. Balfour. Of a different kind, but full of enjoyment, is the laughter of Mr. Winston Churchill. His is still boyish. He gazes, laughing round the House, with remarkably bright eyes from a pale face, and he turns the corners of his mouth up and gives one of those inward kind of laughs.

Mr. Asquith, always a good, human man as well as a great statesman, has the laugh of real English enjoyment, and it steals happily over his mobile and often rosy-tinted face. Sir Eric Geddes and his brother Sir Auckland Geddes, two men suddenly brought into Parliament by the war, both have a quiet little laugh, full of calm enjoyment; and I have seen Sir Eric give a pink-faced smile of extreme delight when some small person on the other side of the House has been trying to scold him for his alleged desire to capture all the power in the country by means of his Transport Bill.

Jokes for M.P.'s Only.

Talking of ticklers, I have rarely seen a laugh on the good-humoured and good-looking face of Mr. Tickler, M.P.

What is it that makes Parliament laugh? It would pass the wit of man to cause a smile on the faces of the outside public at many of the things that make the House of Commons roar, bubble, or ripple with laughter.

Sometimes I have seen them in the middle of the night, lying back on the green benches, a simple series of rows of long lines of men with mouths like round O's, and the whole place abandoned to laughter; and if I set down in cold print what the phrase, or speech, or situation was, you would wonder why they laughed at it. This is because the self-contained circumstances and things that are in the minds of the M.P.'s shut up in the

Engineer Gives Out the Facts About Trouble

Is Able to Eat Hearty Meal For First Time in Years.

"For the first time in many years I am able to sit down and eat a square meal without suffering afterwards, and it is all because my troubles have been completely overcome by taking a few bottles of Tanlac," said J. T. Gilroy, a well known Stationary engineer who lives at 11 North Clifton street, Halifax, the other day.

"There has been many times during the past seven years," continued Mr. Gilroy, "when I would have gladly given twenty-five dollars for a bottle of medicine that would give me the relief that Tanlac has. I had about come to the conclusion that no medicine would ever do me any good, and until I commenced taking Tanlac, I had not been able to find anything that would even give me temporary relief from my sufferings. In a few minutes after eating I would have terrible cramping spells, and very often the pain was so bad that it would almost kill me. I was constipated all the time, and had a dull headache every day. I hardly ever got a good night's sleep on account of being nervous, and I just seemed to lose all my strength and energy, and finally got so weak and rundown I could hardly get about."

"Then I heard about Tanlac through a friend of mine who had used it and had been greatly benefited by it, and I thought I would give it a trial. Well, sir, Tanlac just simply put me on my feet in little or no time, and my health is as good in every way now as it has been in a long time. In fact, my troubles have been completely overcome and I never have a sign of stomach trouble or indigestion now. I have a good appetite and eat anything I want and everything I eat agrees with me all right. I have gotten rid of that constipation and haven't had a headache since soon after I began taking Tanlac. I have as steady nerves as anybody now and sleep like a log every night. I am more than glad to recommend Tanlac, and will never lose an opportunity to praise it for the good it has done me."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative.—adv.

"All-night sittings are a middle-aged lark," said Lord Robert Cecil one night. Many opened their eyes and laughed.

Once, when Mr. Asquith was Prime Minister, Mr. Winston Churchill, then Home Secretary, had been much photographed in the Sydney Street battle. Small men tried to get up a cavil about this, but Mr. Asquith turned it all off with the smiling remark, "My Right Honourable and picturesque friend, the Home Secretary, attracts more cameras than most of us, and he can't help it!"

Mr. Churchill laughed. The House laughed. And the attackers retired in confusion.

Uncle and Stepmother in One. It was Mr. Aubrey Herbert who quite recently got out a little mixed metaphor which was something like a bull:

"The Ulster Volunteer body is the uncle of Sinn-Fein, and the stepmother of trouble all over the Empire."

It was a good bi-sexual mixture. No one laughed.

If you have seen the pictures of Mr. Turveydrop in the early editions of Dickens, you have a fair caricature of Mr. Illingworth, the Postmaster General. He said the other day, "Some of the language used by some telephone subscribers to the girls is such as to make them—reply."

Mr. Illingworth's dramatic pause, and the silent picture of the spitfire answers made the House laugh hugely. He looked severely round the House gave the smiling M. P.'s a cold glance of his eyes, and added:

"I should like the members to know that there is a human being at both ends of the phone."

This seemed to suggest that M. P.'s were human as well as the "Hello" girls!

I notice that the Woman question does not arouse such hilarity as it used to. I well remember Sir John Rees triumphantly talking out the first Women Suffrage Bill, and amid laughter, shouting:

"Anything I say now, so long as it wastes time, will be of service to the State."

Flying Upside Down.

Capt. Alcock's reported statement that for some time in the fog the Vickers-Vimy was flying upside down brought forth an interesting recital of his own similar experience from former Lieut. G. H. Payne, U.S.N., a member of the Aero Club of America, who saw submarine patrol services during the war at stations all the way from Pensacola to Chatham.

"Patrolling in an R-6 from the Bay Shore Naval Air Station," said Lieut. Payne, "I saw the fog drifting in and hurried to beat it back. I had not started soon enough, however, and soon found myself in the thick of it. Every landmark, and even the ocean, were blotted out."

"Fog is the great enemy of the airman as it is of the sailor. I shut off my motor, thinking to plane down to where I could get sight of the water. I was watching the compass and the altimeter at the same time, and thought it was odd that the latter instrument showed no marked change in altitude, but wasn't especially concerned because they have been known to get out of order."

"But presently I came out of the fog and got the scare of my life. Apparently far below me as I looked over the edge of the fuselage was the sky, and overhead, not so far away, was the Atlantic Ocean. There was no peculiar physical sensation, but it was a tremendous mental shock."

"It took me a few seconds to realize what had happened. Then came the understanding that in trying to plane down through the fog I had turned completely over and was flying upside down. I tried to start the motor, but the gasoline refused to feed, so I went into a steep dip, got right side up again, and lost no time in getting to the surface of the water. I hit it inside of five minutes and taxied home."

The Athenian Habit. One of the keenest journalists that ever visited Athens wrote that "all the Athenians and strangers who were there spent their time in nothing else but either to tell or to hear some new thing."

This journalist, Doctor Luke by name, was himself a Greek, and he recorded his impressions in the seventeenth chapter of the Book of Acts, where they may still be read.

Supplementing this ancient comment is the remark made a few weeks ago by a diplomat in Athens. His view of the Greek habit of much talking which amounts to the same view that was held by Doctor Luke, was expressed as follows:

"The trouble with these Greeks is their cafe habit. They spend too much time sitting in the cafes talking, talking, talking about all sorts of trivialities, mostly political. That breeds intrigue and schism. They are talkers and not doers, and so are never content with whatever order may be existent."

Thus the first Century and the twentieth coincide in their judgment of the Athenians, comment Dr. William T. Ellis, writing from Athens to the New York Herald.

Shortest Distance Across North Atlantic. The shortest track across the Atlantic from Newfoundland to Ireland is from Cape Freels, Newfoundland, to Achill Head, Ireland, 1,610 nautical miles, 1,854 statute miles. This is the shortest distance computed along the Great Circle.

The coast at Cape Freels is low and rocky. The sea freezes there between January 1 and February 1, ice remaining there until May and sometimes as late as June. Foreign vessels enter only between June and December.

The next shortest track is from Cape Bonavista, Newfoundland, to Achill Head, 1,611 nautical miles or 1,855 statute miles. Same conditions as at Cape Freels.

The third track is from Cape Spear, Newfoundland, to Dunmore Head, Ireland, 1,631 nautical miles or 1,873 statute miles. Cape Spear is close to St. John's.

Sunkist Orange Marmalade.

Sunkist Orange Marmalade is a so-called sweet marmalade, but distinctively individual in its sweetness. It provides the flavor that most people who nourish a sweet-tooth probably will prefer.

The citric acid of the orange tempers the sweetness and imparts the tang that distinguishes real marmalade from the usual preserves and other marmalades.

Everyone who likes preserves of any kind will be delighted with this luscious marmalade.

Sunkist Grapefruit Marmalade.

For the lovers of "bitter" marmalade our Scotch connoisseur-cook makes a limited quantity of Sunkist Grapefruit Marmalade after a special recipe which she brought from Scotland.

Sunkist Grapefruit Marmalade has that piquant tang that the connoisseur always seeks in marmalade.

Sunkist Orange Jelly.

Sunkist Orange Jelly is distinguished from ordinary jelly by a very delicate tang combined with the full flavor of fresh-picked oranges.

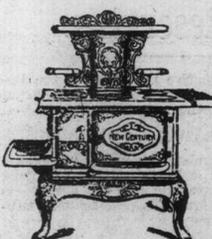

It is a stiff, clear jelly of beautiful, natural color. It contains oranges, lemons, water and pure sugar. Nothing else is added.

This jelly is also characterized by the real "home taste." You will want to serve it often.

The Power of the Vote.

A suffragette lecturer once brought down the house with the following argument: "I have no vote, but my groom has. I have a great respect for that man in the stables, but I am sure if I were to go to him and say, 'John, will you exercise the franchise,' he would reply, 'Please mum, which horse be that?'"

Something the Matter.

(Montreal Gazette.) Any man who could not make money during the war must have something wrong with him. So declared a successful manufacturer before the Cost of Living Committee of the Commons. By his standard there are a good many hundreds of thousands of honest Canadian citizens who are ailing. They did their duty in the troubled period by faithfully performing their allotted tasks and making all the sacrifices required. But they emerged without wealth and are to-day finding it hard to make both ends meet. So there must be something the matter with them!

A June day in 1930. The air, mellow from Brisbane came swooping down Hounslow. A returned exile from the Gilbert Islands alighted, and looked for his friend.

"Hi, Smith! Hallo, Dagnall! Welcome home! Where's your baggage?"

"There's a local 'bus just riding on!'"

"They crossed the great aerodrome to take dozens of express or suburban buses with silent engines were arriving or departing. They boarded one which was lettered 'Hitchin, Peterborough, Lynn, Cromer.'" They skimmed over London, glittering and radiantly blue. In fifteen minutes they were over green Hertfordshire. Sometimes the plane landed, and laconic passengers, women returning from afternoon tea, satelched children going home from school, entered or alighted.

"I used to live here," said Smith, Hitchin, "but I've moved further afield to Cromer. The children like the place, and I can get to the office in the 'bus in just over an hour."

The Man Who Came Home.

"Cromer a suburb!" exclaimed the man from the Gilbert Islands. "This world of yours is all a dream to me. I never saw an aeroplane until you buried alive since I left home in 1919. I was glad to go then! The new world wasn't made. We hadn't even begun to reconstruct. Peace seemed to gaze our rulers, and none of them appeared to be able to give us a lead, nobody knew where they stood. Nobody dared commit themselves to contacts. Nobody knew what raw materials would cost, or what labour would cost. There were masses of unemployed. Think of it, unemployed at the end of the great five years' stoppage, with every road crying out for repairs and vehicles, every house crying for paint, every railway crying for shunting-stock and locomotives! And here was a house famine!"

His friend, for answer, pointed to a land below them, dotted with cottages and sparkling with little garden cities.

"And there was a food problem—"

His friend pointed to endless parterres of intensive crops, to scattered balconies of shining glass cloches in the allotments of little towns.

"Hardly any goods were being made, and we were exporting next to nothing in payment of our debts."

Well-Nigh Paupers.

Once more his friend pointed at a factory town, embowered in trees and public gardens.

"That's Stevenage," he said. "A village of 10,000 people."

Ten Years Hence.

(By Twells Brev.)
A June day in 1930. The air mail ship Brisbane came swooping down from London. A returned exile from the Gilbert Islands alighted, and looked for his friend.
"Hullo, Dagnall! Welcome home! Where's your baggage?"
"None on! There's a local 'bus just waiting."
They crossed the great aerodrome to where dozens of express or suburban cars with silent engines were arriving or departing. They boarded one which was lettered "Hitchin, Peterborough, Lynn, Cromer." They skimmed the London, glittering and radiantly white. In fifteen minutes they were in green Hertfordshire. Sometimes the plane landed, and laconic passengers, women returning from afternoon walks, watched children going home from school, entered or alighted.
"I used to live here," said Smith.
"Hitchin, but I've moved further out," Cromer. The children like the car, and I can get to the office in the car in just over an hour."

The Man Who Came Home.
"Cromer a suburb!" exclaimed the man from the Gilbert Islands. "This new world of yours is all a dream to me. I never saw an aeroplane until the steamer came into Brisbane. I've been buried alive since I left home in 1919. I was glad to go then! The new world wasn't made. We hadn't even begun to reconstruct. Peace seemed to fade our rulers, and none of them appeared to be able to give us a lead. Nobody knew where they stood. Nobody dared commit themselves to contracts. Nobody knew what raw materials would cost, or what labour would cost. There were masses of unemployed. Think of it, unemployed at the end of the great five years' stoppage, with every road crying out for repairs and vehicles, every house crying for paint, every railway crying for rolling-stock and locomotives! And there was a house famine!"
His friend, for answer, pointed to the land below them, dotted with little hamlets and sparkling with little garden cities.
"And there was a food problem?"
His friend pointed to endless parterres of intensive crops, to varied balconies of shining glass cloches in the allotments of little towns.
"Hardly any goods were being made, and we were exporting next to nothing in payment of our debts."
Well-Nigh Paupers.
Once more his friend pointed at a grim factory town, embowered in trees and public gardens.
"That's Stevenage," he said. "A village in 1919, and now one of scores of model factory towns that have risen all over the country."

"It's a new world to me," repeated the exile. "I only heard echoes of it in the Gilbert Islands. No friend was kind enough to send me the 'Overseas Daily Mail.' Few people wrote to me. But how has it all been done—out of chaos?"
"The chaos became worse before we turned the corner," replied his friend. "When you left England we were still living in a fool's paradise. Do you remember the jazz dance craze of 1919? Why, our whole life was a jazz life! We thought that we were wealthy; we were really nigh being paupers. We thought that the country was full of money; it was full of paper pretence of money. And we were all limp or hectic, according to our temperaments, with universal nerve reaction after the stress and dreariness of the war years."
"Money had no value. Every man charged for his work or his commodities as much as he liked. When, six months after the Armistice, our rulers were spending almost as much money as during the war, the country had so lost the money sense that there was scarcely a protest from a nation who, not many years before, talked of the end of the world if only a few pence were clapped on their income tax. Heavens, what an orgy of squandering it was! Remember one instance of it, the big motors we noticed all over London on the day I saw you off for the Antipodes. Six-seater cars, driven by uniformed Army women, for young staff officers to go to their luncheons! And all over the country, in every Government department, the same wild jazz with the nation's money was going on."

"And higher and higher went wages, and higher and higher went prices. Life became a nightmare for people who could not prosper. Those who had to break up their homes could not find smaller houses. Those who had worn their clothes out could scarcely reclothe themselves and their children. The paradox arose that a married man earning five pounds a week was nigh a pauper. And then the crash came; prices became too high, even for inflated wages. We had strikes, revolt, paralysis—"

When England Woke Up.
"And then?"
"The country woke to sanity. The iron laws of economics asserted themselves. The fantastic prices' boom broke, and the equally fantastic wages' boom broke with it. We scattered our battering bureaucracy, and we sifted out our parasite Civil Service, and we all turned to work. Think, man, of what could be done when forty million people realised that man can only earn his bread by the sweat of his brow, and rolled up their sleeves for work!"
"But what of the old class jealousies and envies?" asked the man from the Gilbert Islands. "Have they been ended?"
"Yes, or we could never have made this new world. They were ended in the only way that they ever could be ended—by the abolition of the ancient rotten fetish that the man who works with his brains is any better socially than the man who works with his hands. That the tradesman is on a lower scale than the professional man or the artist, or that the mechanic is on a lower social scale than any of them. We are all equals in the new England, Dagnall. Why did we struggle? Why crush each other like juggernauts? Why did we tear each other down, or seek to keep each other from rising? Why did we envy? Why did men Bolshevise? Was it for equalisation of the share of money—simply as money? Never! The struggle was for social position."

Work Only Counts.
"Money, and money alone, cuts no social ice to-day. Nowadays our only grades of social honour are for work well done, whether by hand or brain. Our new nobility were given their proud titles for work, and for work only, and they were given them by the vote of the people, and not by politicians. They are founders of great industries, great inventors, scientific discoverers, great artists, splendid humanitarians in medicine or surgery. Yes, I know that many of the old leisure class and nobility gained their titles by the same roads. But they did not, and many of them had never toiled or spun. And there was the rub."

He broke off.
"Look! Cromer! Cornfields, poppies, and that glorious area of sea! How's Cromer for a suburb?"
The aeroplane landed. They jumped into a little electric omnibus.
"Hullo, Spicer," cried the exile's friend, to the conductor. "How's the garden after all the rain?"
"Hullo, Smith!" cried the conductor. "I'm bringing a friend round to your place this evening. He's come to stay with me for a holiday. Lord St. Peter, the fellow who invented the self-feeding fire grate."
"Good!" replied Smith. "I've got a Rip Van Winkle here from the Pacific, who will talk to him of coral islands and sharks."—Answers.

Quebec Again Vindicated.

The visit of the Prince of Wales to Quebec has given the people of that Province an opportunity to show where their hearts are, and they have taken full advantage of it. Nowhere in Canada has the Prince received, nowhere can he or will he receive, a more loyal and enthusiastic reception than that of his fellow-Canadians of Quebec.
The Prince's statement, that he regards himself as a Canadian, and wishes to be considered as such, is no idle compliment or empty figure of speech. The heir to the British Throne, is, in reality, as much a citizen of one of the Nations of the British Commonwealth as of another. The accident of his birth in England in no sense limits his nationality. Had he first seen the light in Scotland, as he might quite conceivably and properly have done, that would not have constituted him exclusively a Scot. Had he been born in Canada, as might also conceivably and properly have happened, he would have been no more a Canadian than he now feels and declares himself to be. He is a Briton, and, as such, a citizen of every part of the British Commonwealth over which, we all fondly hope, he is destined some day to reign.—St. John Telegraph.

The Green-Eyed Monster.

New York Herald.—Most of the tragedies of history have been the result of jealousy. Men and Women have bartered their souls because of jealousy. Thrones have been shaken and empires destroyed because of jealousy. The soil of Europe has been soaked with the blood of millions and millions because of human jealousy. Shakespeare speaks of "a savage jealousy," and he knew what he was talking about. The only antidote for jealousy is the cultivation of the will power to play one's part and to run one's own race. In all life's activities there is no victory for the man who stops to envy the other fellow or lags to indulge in jealousy. Rewards come only to those who make the most of the talents they possess, realizing that he who appears the richest and most successful is often the poorest and the most conspicuous failure.

The Kaiser Trial.

Poor old Kaiser Trial. It's getting into an awfully bad way. Nobody in particular seems to want it. Everybody is beginning to get a bit nervous about it. All sorts of things have a horrid habit of coming out at trials, and a good many European statesmen must be wondering uneasily whether it would be only German dirty linen that would get itself seen by the world at large. Probably the Allies could produce quite enough evidence to hang the Kaiser; but possibly also the Kaiser could produce enough evidence to — It's an unpleasant thought for those who ruled Europe in 1914.—London Daily
