GILLETT'S LYE

Comparatively few people realize to what extent Gillett's Lye can be used to advantage in every home. For instance, with one can of Gillett's Lye and five and a half pounds of lard or grease, ten pounds of good hard soap can be made. Use one tablespoon Gillett's Lye in gallon of water for cleaning and disinfecting refrigerators, sinks, garbage cans, tiled floors, baths and toilets.

Useful for over 500 purposes.

The Heir of Bayneham

—AND—
Lady Hutton's Ward.

CHAPTER XIII.

"I am jealous of those flowers," said Claude impatiently as he removed them. "I want all your attention for once, and for a few minutes. Hilda, do you remember that May morning in Brynmar woods?"

"I remember it well," replied a faint, half-frightened voice.

"Do you know?" said Claude eagerly. "I loved you then! It was the fairest, sweetest picture my eyes ever fell upon, as you stood in the woods, with the blue-bells in your hand. I could hardly tear myself away. I longed there and then to kneel at your feet and offer you, as I do now, my life and my love. I have never thought of anything or any one since I saw you. Until I found you again my life was one long dream of misery. Hilda, there never was a love so strong, so deep, so true as mine. Is there any hope for me?"

There were a few minutes of unbroken silence, then a gentle, half-sad voice replied.

"How could you care for me when you were pledged to marry Miss Earle?"

He told her the whole story, how from childhood they had been trained to understand that at some future time they were to be married—how he always liked Barbara in a calm, kind, brotherly way, and when his mother suggested the time for the marriage had arrived, he had "no objection."

"I had not seen you then, Hilda," he continued. "When I did so, my heart awoke suddenly. I was like a man who had been buried in a deep sleep. I awoke to find myself passionately loving you, yet pledged to marry Barbara Earle. I was half mad for some time, but I had no idea of being myself. I thought I must bear my fate, and trample you out of my heart. But, Hilda, Barbara has dismissed me; she says our engagement was a foolish mistake, for which I shall not suffer. She refuses even to mention it again, and I am free—free" to lay my heart at the feet of the only one I ever can love. Have you no word for me, Hilda?"

"Is she—Barbara unhappy?" she asked gently.

"Do not let that shadow stand between us," cried Lord Bayneham. "Hilda, if I was to pray as man has never prayed before, Miss Earle would not deign to listen to me. If she were here, she would plead for me. Oh, Hilda can it be that I am mistaken? That you do not care for me?"

She turned her face to him, and he read his answer there.

While the fair flowers bloomed around them, sending a thousand sweet and fragrant messages, he told her that same sweet story that the world has heard so long, and never wearied of—the same story of love, and youth, and hope; of love that was to be eternal, all-enduring, stronger than death. The words rang to the same familiar, ever-beautiful chime. Their music was new to the young girl who listened, and thought she must be in Fairyland.

"I do not think, Hilda," he said—his voice trembled with eagerness—"that I could bear my life without you. I could endure all things with you by my side; without you, life would be one long, dreary blank."

The time came when Lord Bayneham remembered those words as a death-knell. One such hour comes in every life; perfect in its love and happiness, without cloud, shade, or fear; it came to them, and when the mellow light of the conservatory grew dim, and the fragrant blossoms shone but faintly in the evening gloaming, Hilda had promised to be Lord Bayneham's wife.

"Your life shall be just as bright as the life of one of these flowers," said Claude; "no shadow, no storm shall come near you. I shall have but one care, and that will be your happiness; and in return for all my devotion, will you give me a little love, Hilda?"

"A little," she said, wondering if he knew how much that meant.

"You will be happy at Bayneham," he continued. "My mother is sure to love you very dearly, Hilda—she loves me so much. I have won my treasure now, and I am impatient to call it mine. When shall I see Lady Hutton. Before the spring blossoms come again, promise to be my wife, darling."

But that Hilda would not do. In her gentle, child-like heart there was a gracious dignity—all her own. He had won enough; she would promise no more. He loved her but the more for the pretty, coy words that fell so softly from her lips.

"I shall come to see Lady Hutton, to-morrow," he said inquiringly.

"Not to-morrow," she replied, "mamma will be busy with the agent. Let me have that one day to realize my happiness and to dream."

"It shall be so," replied Claude.

In after years Hilda wondered what her fate would have been if he had seen Lady Hutton as he wished.

"Now, before I go," said Lord Bayneham, "grant me one favor. You gave me a blue-bell that May morning; give me now one of those white lilies. I shall know then in the morning that my happiness is real, not a dream."

She gave him what he asked, and the time came when those two withered flowers were more precious to the young earl than all the world besides. As he was leaving the house he heard a bell ring violently, and half-wondered who it could be ringing in such hot haste.

"Tell Lord Bayneham as soon as he returns that I wish to see him particularly. I shall be in my own rooms."

So said Lady Bayneham in her coldest voice, intended for Barbara's benefit. She had not vouchsafed one word

"WHAT YOUR HUSBAND NEEDS"

"One night my husband came home looking so ill and worn out that I thought he would faint. I knew there had been something wrong with him for some time, but I could not get him to tell me what it was. Finally he confessed he was tired and sore all over. I made him go to bed. Next morning he insisted upon going to work although he was anything but well. I knew that his trouble was partly due to worry because for some months before he had been out of work. This put us so heavily in debt that the grocer and butcher refused to give us more credit. It was being out of work that worried my husband. He wouldn't eat because he was afraid there would not be enough food for the children. We were so poor that we had to keep the children from school because they had no clothes. I knew that I could only get my husband strong and well again everything would be all right. He is a carpenter by trade and when in good health earns good wages and he is always sober and industrious. But I knew that it was impossible for any man to do good work when he was ill and worried. I decided to speak to our old family doctor, who had retired from practice. When I explained how we were situated he gladly offered to do all he could to help us, although he didn't like to interfere with the new doctor's practice. Finally he said, 'What your husband needs is a good tonic and I have nothing better than Carnol.' I thought that if our old family doctor recommends Carnol it must be all right. On my way home I got a bottle and before the first bottle had been used, my husband was a changed man. After he had taken four bottles his appetite returned, he had more energy, that tired look in his eyes disappeared and what is most important his wages have been more than doubled and he is now superintendent of the wood working shop in which he formerly worked as a carpenter. Thanks to Carnol our troubles are over and we are once more a happy and contented family."

Carnol is sold by your druggist, and if you can conscientiously say, after you have tried it, that it hasn't done you any good, return the empty bottle to him and he will refund your money.

Break Down of Premier's Conference.

British Cabinet Refused to Agree With French Proposal -- Bonar Law Will Explain in Commons -- Prohibition in United States a Failure.

MAIN WILL NOT CO-OPERATE.
LONDON, Dec. 11. The Premier's present Conference with the British refusal formalized the contention of the French project for the partial occupation of Ruhr industries. The British Cabinet this afternoon and registered its refusal to co-operate with France in its measures.

CONFERENCE BREAKS DOWN.
LONDON, Dec. 11. The Conference of Allied Premiers, held to arrange a basis for the Allied Financial and Reparations Conference to be held in Brussels has broken down, it was announced today. The Premier has taken an adjournment until January 2 at Paris. The adjournment, Premier Poincaré said "is finished." It was stated in an authoritative quarter this afternoon that the chief hope of bringing the British and French together during the period then imminent to the adjournment, rested with the United States. It was said by this authority that Great Britain will probably ask the United States Government, if it is willing to cancel the French debt to the United States, providing Great Britain, in turn cancels the French debt to Great Britain, and at the time enters upon a definite agreement with the United States Government to ultimately pay the British debt to the United States. This suggestion was made informally last evening to a certain important American now in London and will probably be presented to Mr. Hughes, United States Secretary of State, in the course of the present week.

FORCE VS. FORESIGHT.
LONDON, Dec. 11. Mr. Bonar Law, who has remained a sphinx throughout the three day's convention between the Allied Premiers, is not expected to reveal his lips until he appears in the House of Commons on Thursday to speak of the foreign policy in general; but the British official circles do not express optimistic views regarding the breakdown of the conference. Mr. Lloyd George will speak after the Premier. Throughout the conference, the policy of force clashed with that of foresight and the reparations issue, according to the British, with the result 1922 will end with almost as great an Allied discord as did 1921. It is pointed out that the French attitude has considerably altered since the summer: they no longer expect to exact six billion six hundred million pounds sterling, as set by the first reparations plan, but there is still wide difference regarding the methods of obtaining a third of this sum that is now considered possible to obtain. There is said to be hope of further concessions on the part of France before the continuation of the conversations at Paris, otherwise there appears no certainty that the British and French can accommodate their viewpoints. A wider branch than now exists has been prevented by the recent hardening of the British attitude toward Germany. The Germans, in the British opinion, continue their worst enmities. Violations of agreements, outrages against Allied officers and various pin pricking measures against foreigners in Germany, have so irritated the British that should the French insist upon carrying out coercive measures and occupying Ruhr it is declared there will be no pro-

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT FAILS IN U.S.A.

New York, Dec. 11. Following President Harding's statement that the Prohibition enforcement machinery in the United States had broken down, the Tribune this morning announced the result of a survey it has made of the conditions in the principal cities and states. The newspaper says in introduction: "virtually all reports from enforcement centres show the Volstead Act is openly and flagrantly violated. California alone reports no change for the better or worse. The investigation reveals a picture of some cities, such as Boston officially flouting the whole idea of prohibition, with saloons running wide open and in full blast."

FRANCO-CANADIAN TRADE AGREEMENT.

PARIS, Dec. 11. Canada gets all the commercial advantages possessed by the United States in the new trade agreement which has been negotiated by Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, and Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, for Canada, and M. Diot, French Minister of commerce, the Canadian Press was informed today. The agreement will probably be signed tomorrow. The Dominion also gets additional benefits in connection with the exportation of pulp, farm implements and asbestos.

WILL BUILD TWO NEW BATTLESHIPS.

LONDON, Dec. 11. Premier Bonar Law announced in the House of Commons today that the government had decided to begin the construction of two new battleships allowed under the Washington Navy Treaty.

NON-AGGRESSION PACT AGREED TO.

MOSCOW, Dec. 11. The Non-Aggression Pact, providing for an arbitration board, has been fully agreed upon by the Limitation of Armaments Conference here, attended by delegates of Russia and the Border states of Russia.

SHIP ON FIRE.

ST. VINCENT, Cape Verde Islands, Dec. 11.—The United States steamer, Eastern Glade, from New York, for Table Bay, Cape Colony, is on fire at sea, according to a wireless despatch from the liner Almazora, which picked up a wireless from the burning ship. The fire is reported to be gaining rapidly. The Glade registers 3521 tons net, and has a general cargo.

A colored pastor announced to his congregation the following subject: "Brethren and sisters, I've gwine to preach a powerful sermon dis mornin'. I've gwine to define the undefinable, I've gwine to explain the unexplainable, and I've gwine to unscure the unscurable."

YOUR GOAL.

"There is no goal that is as near as it appears to the hopeful or as remote as it seems to the timid," says Lloyd George. But, always, there is a goal, if we but hope. The goal is on the road of hope, just over some hill, and while we keep going, it draws nearer. Keep going!

Europe's Toy States.

THEY HAVE MINIATURE ARMIES AND STAND VERY MUCH ON THEIR DIGNITY.

Do you know which are the four smallest States of Europe? Probably you would include Montenegro and Luxemburg in the list, yet their countries, small though they are, seem large and powerful in comparison with the following States.

The smallest of all is the Principality of Monaco, with an area of eight square miles. It has also the world's smallest army, consisting of seventy-five guards, seventy-five carabineers, and about forty firemen—quite a formidable force for such a small territory.

The Principality includes the beautiful towns of La Condamine, Monaco, the capital, and the world-famed Monte Carlo. A handsome revenue is derived yearly from the visitors to the latter town, and taxes are not heavy in consequence. Palms, olives, oranges, and other tropical and semi-tropical plants flourish in the pleasant climate.

Another of Europe's pigmy States, and the smallest independent Republic in the world, is San Marino, in Northern Italy, surrounded by the Appennine Mountains. The area of the entire Republic is just thirty-eight square miles, and this area supports a contented population of 11,500 persons.

The capital, San Marino, boasts of 1,700 inhabitants, and there is a national army of 1,000 men, commanded by a marshal.

Still another tiny State is the Republic of Andorra, in the Pyrenees. It has been independent since A.D. 790, since when it has never owed allegiance either to France or Spain, between which it lies. Its area is 154 square miles, and the total population is about 12,000.

Finally, there is the little Principality of Liechtenstein, situated in the Tyrol between Vorarberg and the Upper Rhine. The Prince of Liechtenstein rules over some sixty-five square miles of territory, and his capital is the town of Vaduz. The population of this queer little State numbers 9,500, the smallest population of any country in Europe.

All these little countries are naturally enthusiastic supporters of the rights of small nations, and are intensely proud of their independence which they have all enjoyed for so many years. They have the advantage of being so small that they are never likely to be the cause of any European war, which is more than can be said for Luxemburg or Albania.

Cub Cigarettes are appreciated, not only by the smoker but by those in his company.

If we carried a lot of insurance on our life, here are some of the gifts we would make: For the Butcher, whose head we have bought time and time again. A scale with enough electricity charging through it to knock him on his ear every time he as much as put a finger on it. For the Milkman, a pair of wings, so we wouldn't have to listen to his horse-like foot falls coming up the back stairs in the wee hours of the morn. For the Janitor, a pocket Radio outfit, so we could locate him once in a while. For the family upstairs, a steam trip-hammer to enable them to shake the foundations of the building in more efficient style. For our neighbor's cat, an unhealthy dose of Chloroform. It sleeps all day and warbles all night with nary a let-up. And last but not least, for friend wife, Maxim Silencer, to be put on at regular intervals so that she could come up for air once in a while.

Watch the Man

See the changes one week brings

Millions of women know this new way of teeth cleaning. And the pretty teeth seen everywhere now show what it means to them.

If the man doesn't use it, get this 10-Day Tube for him. Then watch the results. See what changes will come in a week.

That dingy film
Most people who brush teeth in old ways have film-coated teeth. A viscous film clings to the teeth, cures crevices and stays. That film becomes discolored, particularly with men who smoke. Then it forms dingy coats. Tartar is based on film.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It leads the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed in millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

No old-type tooth paste can effectively fight film. So all these troubles were constantly increasing, and beautiful teeth were seen less often than today.

New discoveries
Dental science, after long research, has found two ways to fight that film. One acts to curdle it, one to remove it, and without any harmful scouring.

Many careful tests proved these methods efficient. Then authorities endorsed them, and dentists everywhere began to advise their use.

Not film alone
But Pepsodent brings other great results which research proves essential. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to constantly neutralize the acids which cause decay.

It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits on teeth which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

Those are Nature's great tooth-protecting forces in the mouth. Every use of Pepsodent gives them manifold power.

THE DIFFICULT AGE.

There is a certain class of women for whom I have a great sympathy. I refer to mothers of girls in the difficult age. It starts at 15 or 16 and lasts until the girl begins to suspect that maybe her mother did know what she was talking about after all—a stage that is reached at different ages according to the individual.

I don't know whether this same estrangement of viewpoint comes between fathers and sons when the latter put on long trousers (do you remember when we used to speak of a girl going into long dresses—that phrase has fallen completely into disuse, but it looks as if we might have reason to pick it up again.) I have an idea it isn't so marked. It seems as if boys turned to their fathers more easily at that age, but perhaps the men folks would tell me different.

Almost Pitiful!

But daughters! Sometimes it is almost pitiful to see a mother trying to keep her daughter's confidence and companionship at that age. Recently I played tennis with such a mother and her 16 year old daughter. They have always been unusually good chums, the daughter has admired and adored the mother who is a charming, accomplished woman than the daughter bids fair to be. One would say that even the danger age would not make any trouble here. I had not seen them together for a year and I was astounded at the change in attitude. There was something almost depressing in the mother's manner—the air one often sees in a wife who is a little uncertain of her husband's affection.

There was some uncertainty about a point in the play and we stopped a minute to discuss it. "Oh, come on," called the daughter in the rudest manner, "don't stand there talking. I want to play."

Afraid She Wouldn't Play.

Did her mother reprove her for that as you would naturally expect. Not at all. Instead she obeyed her. Broke off the discussion and hurried into her corner to play. It was plain that she feared her daughter's interest would lag if she did not, and that she would say she did not care to play with mother and her friends.

Again I noticed that the mother, who is a very fine tennis player, did not put the ball strength into her serve when serving to her daughter, but tried to make it possible for the latter to get her service. Evidently afraid she wouldn't play if she didn't.

Doesn't that seem almost pitiful to you? I know another mother who has completely given up trying to understand or influence her 23 year old daughter. "She may come back to me sometime," she says. "But now everything I say works the wrong way so I'm trying to let her alone." A wise mother truly for there are times when that, the hardest thing one can do, seems the wisest thing.

The Third Mother.

And still another mother—my Swedish washerwoman—told me that she had had a frightfully hard summer. She usually does about ten washings a week in the summer so I thought she might with reason refer to that. No, it wasn't the washing. It was just that her two girls had reached the saucy age and she, who had ruled them with a rod of iron, could do nothing with them. "I hope they marry soon," she said, "I think that's best thing."

So tact and compassion and severity all seem to be of no avail when the difficult age comes. What way is there to deal with it? Can some successful mother give a hint through this column to those who may need it?

Always Get Their Men.

A TRADITION OF THE RIDERS OF THE PLAINS.

OTTAWA, Ont. (Canadian Press)—The R.C.M.P. always get their man no matter what the chase may lead or what time it may take to achieve their end, and an illustration of the well-known fact is furnished in the recent trip taken by Sgt. Fred Syms of this city, who travelled 1,500 miles to bring to justice a man who was believed to have been responsible for the death of an Indian in the James Bay District, through selling him bad liquor. R. C. M. P. headquarters recently received information that an Indian trapper, William Diamond by name, had died in August last as the result of drinking liquor, which was alleged to have been supplied to the Indians by a French Canadian trapper known as James Lamarche. Armed with a description of the wanted man, Sgt. Syms set out to bring him in and after travelling over the Transcontinental Railway to Amos Township, in the James Bay District, he found that his man had left, also that the Indian witnesses he needed had gone to their trapping grounds. Proceeding a canoe and dog, Sgt. Syms traveled nearly one hundred miles by stream and over lengthy portages until he found the Indians and obtained their story. Conducting his investigation further he found that while the trapper had sold some home brewed beer in buckets to the Indians, Diamond, according to Coroner Biguer, had not died as a direct result of alcoholic poisoning, but through the taking of a heavy meal on the night before his death, coupled with a quantity of the liquor, which was villainous stuff. Sgt. Syms then set out in chase of Lamarche, and had to cross in to Northern Ontario, where he found his man working in a lumber camp, placed him under arrest, and had him convicted on two charges of selling liquor.

ANOTHER HE-MAN

WALT MARCH

Jake Reuben plows his stony acres, but not because he likes that toll; he looks upon all men as takers who boost the joys of tilling soil. He'd like to be a famed attorney and bet his with his peers in court; but up the furrow he must journey or feel himself a tinhorn sport. He'd like to be a leading banker, with bonds and money as his tools; but vainly does he yearn and hanker—he still must drive his claybank mules. He has his dreams of high endeavor, but as he toils he knows full well his dreams will find fulfillment never—he must have corn and hay to sell. His hands are strewn with corns and blisters from mowing in his rocky hills; he must support his ailing sisters, who'd try each day new brands of pills. Without his pills they'd have no resources, and to the poorhouse they must go; so he pursues his humdrum courses and shoves his mule team to and fro. When toiling with his plows and lithe he has a weary, tragic mien, but when he's with his aching sisters his face is bright, his smile serene. So all his days he'll go on sweating, a humble he-man, known to few, but never for an hour forgetting the dreams that never could come true.

Just Folks.

THE STORM.

Winter's hammering at the door, banging in the window pane Seeking to get in at us, but it howls and beats in vain; Here the logs upon the hearth blaze and chuckle gleefully. It's a stormy night outside, but we're safe as safe can be.

Out of doors the tree tops moan and a dirge the wires sing. Now and then a shutter bangs like a bruised and beaten thing. But indoors the children play all unmindful of the storm. Here we have no care to dread, here are happy hearts and warm.

So before the fire I sit, thinking as the storm goes by Filled with bitterness the world, but contented here am I. Now the North wind howls along, and the snow is drifting deep, But serene the house remains by the blazing fire I keep.

So our faith is like the fire glowing brightly in the grate. Keeping warm the heart inside when descend the storms of fate. Bitterly the winds may blow round the place where we abide, But our faith shall keep us safe 'till the tempest shall subside.

The Extreme Penalty.

Under the Irish government of the Free State men are executed for carrying weapons. Erskine Childers paid with his life for carrying a revolver in his pocket. He may have committed murder, but that was not proved against him. He was not even charged with such a crime. But because he was found with the possession of arsenals he was shot. A dozen others paid the same penalty for a similar offence. Mild protests have been made against the severity of the punishment by a few Irishmen, but in the main the course of the government has been approved by the Irish themselves.

The British authorities were much more lenient. They did not execute men for carrying revolvers. If they had Women Jurors.

DELICATE QUESTIONS OF TRIAL.

(Canadian Press).—A delicate question with reference to women jurors came up in a recent trial at the King's Bench Division here. The action was for damages for assault and there were three women on the jury when the case called for trial. The counsel for the plaintiff said it was a case that was desirable that women should not hear if they did not wish to and he and the counsel for the defendant had agreed that the women should be discharged from the jury. Justice McCord, in the presiding Judge, said that a question of principle had been raised as to whether women were to be jurors when a case was pleasant. Counsel for the plaintiff said he did not think the women could claim to be as a right, but if the parties were agreed it was desirable that the presiding Judge should be could be excused as a matter of grace. Addressing the three women of the jury, the Judge said: "The question at issue in this case involves relations between two men. It will involve sexual points to the gravest delicacy—questions which men would even hesitate to discuss among themselves. If the ladies of the jury, or any one of them, desires to remain in that body so be it, but if the ladies prefer that their places be taken by men I will assent to their request."

TWO WOMEN REMAINED.

One woman at once left the jury box, but the other two remained. His Lordship remarked: "I have a very high respect for the courage of these two ladies." The Court then showed the two women portions of the pleadings in the case that he had marked in pencil, and one of them remarked: "We think that if we are called at all we ought to sit whatever the case is." Judge McCord: "I shall not express a view either way. I know it raises a very serious question, not only as to the privilege but as to the duty of a juror. On the other hand, there is a question as to how far it is wise to maintain the ideal of many men that women are purer and more dignified in the eyes of men if they are ignorant of the grim facts to which I have referred." Then again addressing the two women jurors, his Lordship said: "If you desire to remain do not think that I wish you to do otherwise than as your conscience dictates. Do you both desire to remain, whatever the consequence?" One of the two replied, "Yes, my Lord." Thereupon the Judge remarked that there were other women in court, and they would have gathered that the case was of an extremely unpleasant character. Those who did not wish to remain were free to leave. "If they see it is their duty to remain," he said, "they will do so without any disapproval." There were three women in court. Two of them left, but one remained. Then the trial began.

How Fur is This Skin Game Going?

They used to peel the polar bears, when women took to fur. And Walrus, seals and buffalos gave up their hides for her. The birthday suit of husky brutes adorned the blushing bride. No beast was deemed too large and rough to furnish forth its hide.

The fashion spread, the years rolled on, the husky brutes grew few, and furs derived from smaller game, dawned then on woman's view. The fox and skunk were swiftly peeled, and leopards, wolves, and apes Gave up their hides to drape and deck mere mortal women's shapes.

The fever grew, the fashion spread. Fur coats had still the call. There were no skunks and leopards left for men had killed them all. And so on squirrels and on the moles the direful fashion fell, And even rats and cats were scalped to furnish garments swell.

I wonder where the thing will end, unless there comes a change? Will smaller brutes and smaller still soon come within its range? Pray will they skin the little mice, the cockroach, flea and bug, And garments rich and chaste evolve to keep the ladies snug?

Oh well, I do not greatly care if woman stops at that. But if she takes to human fur I'll beat it. That is flat. No dame shall wear my lifeless pelt. Quite firm on that am I. If such her mood she'll simply have to skin some other guy. —FRECKLES.

The Tragic Building of The Tay Bridge.

The brilliant success which has crowned the greatest industrial undertakings has often only been achieved against overwhelming obstacles which constantly threatened disaster and ruin. That magnificent structure, the Tay Bridge, would never have been finished if its promoters had not been men of indomitable will power. No less than four failures occurred, each marked heavily with ruin and death. It took two years to sink the foundations alone, and by the end of another year two under managers had committed suicide, and eight workmen had lost their lives. In the first six months a great flood swept away the work into the sea, with its cost of nearly £200,000. Only another month elapsed before a strike threatened to end the job, and just as this was smoothed over by an excellent piece of management, a fearful gale and record tide swept nearly all the work away again. A year later a flash of lightning destroyed £70,000 of ironwork, and killed six men. Doggedly the job proceeded, however, when another flood swept away twenty workmen's cottages, and ten men were drowned. Every kind of bad luck dogged the undertaking—bursting boilers, sickness and drought, and when the bridge was completed it had cost £1,000,000 sterling. Then came the memorable night of December 12, 1879, when a frightful gale blew the whole structure into the river while an express train was passing over it, with a loss of 75 lives. There was talk of forbidding the rebuilding, but after great difficulties, an improved bridge was raised, and this to-day stands as one of the wonders of Scotland.

Hostile to Britain.

In the December issue of "Our World" Magazine, the rise and influence of the Italian political organization known as Fascismo (Fascisti) is discussed editorially and in a contributed article by Ethel Mather Bagg. Both writers are agreed that Benito Mussolini, the Fascist Premier of Italy, is hostile to Britain.

Another editorial on this same subject of the Near East, gives Mussolini's views on England even more frankly. "For four whole years, since the Armistice, England has been perpetuating the greatest political mystification imaginable—to the detriment of Europe and of the world."

Magistrate's Court. A laborer of the East End, drunk and accosting a 16 year old girl on the public street last night, was fined $5 or 20 days imprisonment.

CONTEMPT FOR PEACE-MAKERS. The announcement that Minister Schanzer had sent a Note to London and Paris, inviting England and France to meet the Greeks and Turks in Venice sounded to us like another assassin's deed.

Without even the consolation of applause from the assembly of "austere meddlers," who are meeting these days in Geneva. The Note went into the wastepaper basket, the olive branch into the ashbin.

AN ATTACK ON ENGLAND. Another editorial on this same subject of the Near East, gives Mussolini's views on England even more frankly.

For four whole years, since the Armistice, England has been perpetuating the greatest political mystification imaginable—to the detriment of Europe and of the world.

While Kemal was crushing the last remnants of the Greek Army in Anatolia and the Turkish advance guards had reached the Sea of Marmora, England suddenly realized, in the face of manifestations in the Islamic world, from India to Mesopotamia, that it is no longer a question of the Straits, but of the British Empire's prestige and existence.

Italy has been a vassal of Austria since the days of the League of Nations. "The austere meddlers of Geneva." He does not like the former allies of Italy. His bete noir was Lloyd George. Forever cursing the Anglo-Saxons, he has only kind words for the Turk.

Mussolini does not like Signor Schanzer and he seems to have an especial grudge against the word "humanitarian."

Co-Operative Marketing.

A. B. Morine, K.C., Addresses Board of Trade.

A lecture of more than ordinary importance was delivered before a representative gathering of merchants and business men at the Board of Trade rooms yesterday afternoon by Mr. A. B. Morine, K.C., his subject being "Co-Operative Marketing." As explained by the lecturer the time for change in the present system of marketing our fish appears to be not far distant, so that a thorough study of the best methods to adopt becomes necessary if the country is not to be subjected to a system which may be based upon unworkable or lacking in some essential features. He noted this in view of the fact that Mr. Coaker had announced at the recent convention that nationalization of fish would be a plank in the next political platform of that gentleman. The lecture, derived from manuscript, was punctuated here and there by short explanations and the speaker, who was listened to with closest attention, was warmly applauded at the conclusion. The President of the Board of Trade, Mr. A. E. Hickman presided and explained that being approached by a number of people to request Mr. Morine to give his views on a more satisfactory system of marketing our fish produce than at present exists, the "Council" had induced him to lecture on Co-Operative Marketing. Apparently the meeting was unanimous that the time for some definite action had arrived, and on this point Mr. Walter Morine who proposed a vote of thanks to the lecturer was perhaps the most spoken exponent. He said that prominent exporters had within a very brief period submitted various plans for the betterment of the fish business, especially in the one essential point—competition amongst ourselves in the foreign market—but he had very confidence that the suggestions made by Mr. Morine were far ahead of any he had heard so far. He urged the trade to sink all petty differences and work for the common good in spirit clear of the ruinous competition and even if it took all winter to discuss plans he considered the time would be well spent. He saw many changes in the scheme as outlined by the lecturer and he felt sure that it would be largely supported by the fish who produce. For his own part he would give his endorsement although its adoption would mean a direct loss to him in that he was the agent for Mendez Lima & Co., a job that would cease under Co-Operative Marketing. The scheme, he thought, was very feasible, and could be worked out if all pulled together. Such a plan, he considered, added a dollar more to the value of our fish. Mr. Morine was heartily applauded. In responding the vote of thanks, Mr. J. H. Hepburn asked that the subject be given very careful consideration. The scheme appeared on first consideration to be too elaborate, but this opinion could be surmounted if all pulled together to simplify it. His opinion was that most of the present difficulties would disappear if they went back to the old system of nationalization and regulated shipments.

Mr. W. G. Gosling spoke at some length on the subject, and suggested that the lecture should be published in pamphlet form, so that it could be read in detail, for, as he said, there was a great deal more in it than could be intelligently commented upon after the manner of our present marketing system. He had compared the present system to that of some other countries, and he believed, he had compared the prices of our produce for the past few years with other commodity prices and he found that they followed the lines of general movement throughout the world. The cause of a great deal of the present mood is because people do not understand what makes values what makes prices. He had his own opinion that it would be advisable to change the present system, as it is by a change in marketing that the future or safety lies. What was needed was to create a greater demand for our produce.

Mr. Brian Dunfield also took part in the discussion and requested Mr. Morine to be kind enough to furnish information which he possessed on the methods adopted by the California Fruit Growers Association, which he thought was analogous to the plan that Mr. Morine had placed before them. He offered to furnish some information of a Danish scheme also analogous, with all available data by which the discussions of the subject to follow, would be greatly helped. Before the Chairman brought the meeting to a close Mr. Morine answered some of the points that had been raised by various speakers. He urged the trade to look past him and seek more expert knowledge of the system from such men as Sapino and others. The system of Co-Operative Marketing has been long established, and though there was no difference in principle there were immense differences in details. In Co-Operative Marketing the law of supply and demand meet. Supply is not allowed to overtop demand, and vice versa. The system has spread everywhere. It is to be seen in the Standard Oil Co., The United Steel Co., and other large industrial plants. In New Zealand the cheese making industry is handled in this way. In California oranges, raisins, etc. In Nova Scotia apples and in Virginia the tobacco leaf raisers. The latter, growing Burley leaf have succeeded by Co-Operative effort in raising the price from 20 cents to 30 per pound within a short period.

Before the vote was put, President Hickman said that all the people were interested in the marketing of our produce. He said that every man was an inventor, and everyone had some new idea. He believed that what was needed in Newfoundland was a strict standardization of our fish and he believed that our produce could be marketed just as readily as the Canadian flour. Now every exporter had a standard of his own. Last year in Italy together with the Italian buyer he viewed a cask of fish which had been shipped from here, and the contents ranged from fish eight inches long to 22 inches. With a condition of affairs like this we would find it difficult to get our buyers to pay cash against documents. He was very pleased to see Mr. Morine take the matter up and he hoped some good would come of it.

Mr. L. C. Outerbridge also supported the vote of thanks to Mr. Morine and he was glad that a starting point had been made. He, however, said we must stand four square in this matter of co-operation, as we had all our eggs in the one basket, and if we fell, all went down together. The motion was then put to the meeting and heartily accorded.

MR. MORINE'S ADDRESS.
Mr. President & Gentlemen:—This address was given before the Board of Trade on December 11, 1922. It is a summary of the views of the speaker on the subject of co-operative marketing, and is intended to be a starting point for discussion and action.

Let me here state certain principles which I regard as fundamental in good fish marketing.

Secretary of this Board an hour when I could attend. I was told that a general meeting of the Board, to hear me, had been decided upon, and that imposed upon me, I thought, the duty of preparing some sort of address, instead of merely taking part in the free and easy discussion I had expected, for the matter I am to speak upon is of great complexity, and one would not care to publish unconsidered words. But the time for preparation has been brief, and I am compelled to ask in advance your pardon for the deficiencies I am sure will appear. Treat me as your guest, and be gracious unto me. In fancy, I hear somebody say "he doesn't know a codfish from a sculpin, why should he talk of fish marketing," and I am compelled to admit, that with regard to the practical questions of culling, packing, shipping and selling fish, the gibe is approximately true. But, sir, I would remind you that economic principles are the same in marketing one commodity as another, whether it be fish or brains, and that just as real business is often done by men who know nothing of those principles, so fish marketing may be intelligently discussed by those who know little, practically, of fish or fish selling. I speak to-day as a student of economic principles, not as a practical dealer in fish and make suggestions only, as my contribution to the consideration of a very important subject.

UNSYSTEMATIC MARKETING.
It is almost universally admitted—that the unsystematic marketing of our fish products abroad is seriously detrimental to the Colony, creating undue competition amongst our own exporters glutting some markets and starving others, and frequently causing our exporters to be victimized by dishonest or inefficient agents, and that the marketing, by fishermen in our home markets is equally unsatisfactory, causing a glut some times, and scarcity at others, and chilling and killing the ambition and enterprise of many who might otherwise make good.

As now conducted, exporting is a gamble, and fishing is a hopeless enterprise. It is untrue that exporters only are injured by our bad marketing abroad. Loss by sales abroad is a corporate loss to the whole Colony. Loss by sales at home is primarily an individual loss, though by indirection, the results of a bad system of marketing locally, by discouraging fishermen, may become a menace to the welfare of the whole Colony.

There is on all sides a cry for reform, and unless that cry is heeded, and a considered remedy applied, some quack proposal may be imposed upon us, destroying vested interests, launching the Colony upon dangerous experiments, and resulting in widespread loss and suffering. Signal recognition of the fact that great loss occurs by bad marketing abroad has been made by concerted attempts at a cure—

(1) Attempts by voluntary agreement.
(2) The attempt in 1920 by Statute and Regulation.

CHIEF CAUSE OF FAILURE.
One chief cause of their failure was the fact that they were not based on a pooling of interests. You cannot have divergent interests and harmonious control at the same time. How could exporters be expected to work harmoniously to regulate shipments when their relative profits depended upon their competition with each other? How could a system of regulation endure which deferred one shipment to another when the opportunity of getting first to market meant profit, perhaps, and to be late meant loss, when the members of the controlling authority were competitors with exporters not within the charmed circle, and when even the members of the authority were competitors with each other.

FUNDAMENTALS.
Let me here state certain principles which I regard as fundamental in good fish marketing.

Sale Prices

FOR XMAS TRADE.

FIRST—Fish, being perishable, must be marketed yearly, and also because old fish kills a new market. That means you cannot profitably withhold sale waiting for a fixed price. If you do, competitors will take your place your fish will accumulate, and knowledge of the accumulation will depress the markets. That is what happened in 1920.

SECOND—Because you cannot withhold, you must seek markets, not wait for customers to come to you. If you do wait, others will not, and while you are waiting, others will steal your customers. That also happened in 1920. We have not yet got all our customers back, and perhaps never shall. Contrary to much that has recently appeared, "consignment," not "outright sale," is the right policy to pursue. Hear the experience of California stated in these words:—

"Twenty years ago, when the rapidly increasing citrus fruit crop was left in the hands of individual buyers, either local or distant, the marketing collapsed because the buyers could not take a risk when the crop was large and the distribution not co-ordinate. The industry's problem was met only when the producers systematized the distribution of their own fruit, eliminated speculation from their purchase and distribution, established their own sales offices and sold their products to the wholesale trade in the territory where the fruit was to be consumed. The diversified system of selling replaced the speculative, f.o.b. method of sale, which had brought the industry to a state of bankruptcy, and, with the speculative element at the point of production eliminated, the growers have been able to keep the markets of the country evenly supplied." What we need to do about exports is not to sell outright here, not to stop consignments, but to consign all our fish to our own bonded agents, renegeing from selling in competition with each other.

prices at home, by regulation, for exported fish. They must be fixed in view of demand and supply, at the place of demand, where the would be seller and would be buyer meet. With regard to the competition of outsiders, and the most that an agent in any market could do in consultation with the organization, would be to so control the supply in our markets as to prevent Newfoundland fish so competing with other Newfoundland fish as to reduce prices. ANITA STEWART SEEN IN SUPERIOR FILM OFFERING.

Almost everything that makes a picture attractive has been injected into "Anita and the Piper," popular story, logical plot development, highly dramatic moments, touches of the spectacular and a sprinkling of fine humor give the picture an effect of being well rounded out.

The analogy between the Pied Piper of Hamelin whose music lured children away from home, and the modern free-lovers has been cleverly drawn. Greenwich Village has been used as the garden of temptation; a fake wedding as the piper's fatal melody and a girl's dishonour as the piper's toll. Anita Stewart gives a performance that for real sympathy and vividness has been seldom, if ever, equaled in her career. She passes through the stages of innocence, disillusionment, hope, temptation and moral victory with art. She is shown in a number of charming close-ups. The sets are elaborate, the costumes rich, and the beauty of the whole has been enhanced by fine photography.

Slapping The U.S.

Georges Clemenceau, ex-Premier of France, has been telling the American people to their faces that they have a duty to perform in Europe, and that they ought to get at it without delay. He says truly that the United States, more than any other of the Allied Powers, is responsible for the state of that continent. And, having brought it about, they should stay with the Allies until the task is completed. The American-made Treaty of Versailles is not being carried out by Germany, but that does not give the President of the Republic any concern. It was his predecessor who made it, and he feels at liberty to wash his hands of it.

The people of the United States don't like to listen to the frank exposition of the situation by the Tiger of France. They have not been accustomed to that kind of thing. All the nations of the world—and notably Great Britain—are guilty of gross flattery in dealing with the Americans. They have been taken at their own estimate so long that they have come to believe they cannot be wrong in anything. So the plain truth told to them, as to their duties and responsibilities in the enormous task of restoring the world to normalcy, grates upon their ears. Senators and congressmen who have replied to the Tiger have exhibited a degree of anger that probably reflects the sentiments of the American people at the moment, but if Clemenceau keeps at it, in all probability he will produce a change of sentiment, and that because he is right. As much as Great Britain and France, and more than any other nation in the world, the United States, is responsible for the state of Europe. While that is the case, the President and legislators of the country, as a deliberate act of policy, withhold all help in the settlement of the continent. Such action cannot be defended upon any but purely selfish grounds. That is what Clemenceau is forcing upon the attention of the Republic. It is the only thing left to do. All other means have failed.

The United States is a great nation, they are awakened to the facts, and and its people are great also. Once they see their own relation thereto they will do their part. But that state of mind will not be induced by the accustomed flattery. Rather, it will be brought about by a statement of the case that will at first come like a slap in the face. Clemenceau seems to have their measure. He has been metaphorically slapping the face of the United States in all the principal cities. First there is a wild cry of protest; then there will be a heart-searching; and, finally, let us hope, a recognition of their failure to finish the task they took up in 1817. If, and when, the great American people come to a realization that they have been playing the part of quitters—as they undoubtedly have—they will again take their place with the Allies, and lend the enormous influence of the nation to the readjustment of the conditions under which Europe groans to-day.—The Sentinel.

A Poser.

A dear old lady once visited the Zoological Gardens. After wandering about for some time, she went up to a keeper and tapped him on the shoulder with her umbrella.

"I want to ask you," she said, "which of the animals in the Zoo you consider the most remarkable?"

The keeper scratched his head for a while. "Well, mum," he said at length, "after careful consideration, as you might say, I've come to the conclusion as the biscuit goes to the laughing hyena."

"Indeed!" said the old lady. "And why do you consider the laughing hyena so remarkable?"

"Well, mum," the keeper replied, "he only has a sleep once a month, an' he only has a drink once a year, so what's he's got to laugh about is a bloomin' mystery to me!"

Big Re-Union at Grand Falls.

PAPERMAKERS ENJOY BANQUET ON THURSDAY LAST. Of course everyone knows that a paper mill and its subsidiaries draw their raw materials from a large expanse of territory. Not only that, but in a country like Newfoundland the disposal of the product of the industry is of necessity almost entirely by export, so that the entire process from the tree in the forests of the interior to the finished roll of paper in the ship's hold on the sea coast entails the employment of a very large force of men, and this force is distributed over hundreds of square miles of country. The complexity of manufacture of pulp and paper, the tremendous consumption of raw materials and supplies of all kinds and the necessity of ensuring the continuity of operation and the certainty of maximum production, all demand the unceasing attention of the whole personnel of the staff of management and operation. Consequently, rarely if ever, all departments have an opportunity of meeting together and making that personal acquaintance which so materially helps the success of any enterprise. With the view of bringing together as many as possible of those whose point of contact is chiefly, and in some cases altogether, by means of the telephone, a gathering of the clans was organized, and on December 7th it materialized in the Town Hall at Grand Falls. This took the form of a dinner at seven-thirty in the evening, followed by a dance. Since the evening function in October 1909, when the mill was formally put into commission by our late and lamented Chief Viscount Northcliffe, no affair of such magnitude had been attempted. Several conventions of similar kind had been held during the war, but they were naturally not of such wide scope, as the extent of the Anglo-Newfoundland Company's operations has broadened and the scope of the industry has grown to a degree that few had thought from the early promise of the venture. This family reunion was not an official act of the management, but sprang from the spontaneous desire of the various staffs. The enthusiasm with which they took hold of the idea was the most striking evidence of their appreciation, and even if there were no other results, this in itself constituted a bond that would weave the component parts into a united fabric.

Pale and Thin

Many feel unequal to the daily task. They are prone to frequent colds or coughs, or are pale and thin. What is needed is rich, nourishing Scott's Emulsion of pure vitamins-bearing cod-liver oil, to help strengthen and build up the vital forces of the body. Build up resistances daily with Scott's Emulsion!

considered that the facilities for catering to about two hundred people were inadequate, and all the other difficulties that seem to arise from nowhere, the wonder is that the affair went off with such regularity and proved such a success. He is to be congratulated on this, the biggest undertaking that has occurred here for ten years. In conclusion a word of commendation to the hard-working Committee would not be out of place. Each one did his part, and there is no doubt that the splendid result that was so much in evidence was the secret of the smooth running of the whole venture. It is the hope that this will be an annual affair, and if a repetition next year will testify to the sincerity of opinion this year, the Committee feel that their work has produced good fruit. Following is the Committee, elected from the different departments:— Chairman—Mr. H. C. Hanson. Sec.-Treas.—Mr. D. A. O'Flynn. Committee—Messrs. L. R. Cooper, R. M. B. Philip, F. W. Willis, W. W. Morse, G. E. Sanders. D. A. O'FLYNN, Secretary. Grand Falls, Dec. 9, 1922.

Up To The Management

AN EXPLANATION IN ORDER. After Evening Telegram. Dear Sir—The Mac Edwards Company have come in for quite a lot of adverse comment since the opening of their engagement here, but about the worst that ever put over on St. John's audience was perpetrated by that company last evening. The show was fairly well attended, but because of a promise made Thursday night that the same "Gallagher Show" which made such a hit, would appear Monday night with the various musical series sent in by St. John's colleagues. When the management of that theatre last evening, the stars of the show in question was proposed till Wednesday and Thursday night.

THE ENTERTAINMENT.

The dinner was presided over by Mr. H. C. Hanson as Chairman, the only guests being the Directors, Messrs. A. E. Harris, G. F. Laycock and J. D. Gilmour. This was the first occasion either of these gentlemen had an opportunity of addressing a representative gathering, and in their opinion it was a pleasure of which they were glad to avail. Their presence as well as their expressions of appreciation were a source of gratification to the assembly, and there could be no doubt that the pleasure was mutual. The speeches were of a high order throughout, and the most favourable feature was that they were unmissably imbued with those very sentiments that were the objects of the promoters. It would be impossible to deal at length with the subject matter, much as the writer would wish, but the Toast List is as follows:— THE KING. Introductory remarks by the Chairman. THE ANGLO-NEW DEVELOPMENT CO., LTD. Proposed by Mr. F. W. Willis. Response by Mr. A. E. Harris, Director; Mr. G. F. Laycock, Director. LOGGING AND SHIPPING DEPARTMENTS. Proposed by Mr. L. R. Cooper. Hanson, Chairman. DANCING TAKES PLACE. After the foregoing had been honoured in the most approved style the floor was prepared for dancing and the flying hours were chased with winged feet as never before. It was three o'clock before "Home Sweet Home" brought the curtain down on what was perhaps the most enjoyable entertainment that has been attended. During the dinner a number of popular melodies were sung in chorus, and under the direction of Mr. A. J. Martin, and with the aid of Miss G. Joy at the piano, proved a large addition to the merriment. The dance music was presided over by Mrs. W. F. Little and of course was of the best. Visitors to Grand Falls know what this is, giving the city would convey no impression to those who have not yet been visitors. Mr. Richard Hiscock catered for the dinner, and when it is

Ore Output at Bell Island.

ONE MILLION TONS EXPORTED. It is learned on good authority that the ore output at Bell Island up to the end of the present month will be the largest amount shipped in any one season known in the Company's history. During the rush, some forty steamers, ranging in tonnage from 6,000 to 12,000 tons, were engaged in the ore trade, running to the various ports in Germany and Holland. While some ships made only a single trip, others made as high as four across the Atlantic. The ships are still being loaded and rushed across before the shipping season closes. Some 300,000 tons of ore will be exported to Sydney before the end of the year. The Daghild and Wascana are now taking ore to that port at the rate of 17,000 tons weekly.

was raging in New York not long ago, oranges reached a great price, and dropped $5. a case in one hour with news of an abatement in the disease. One shipment of fish arriving at a market diminishes the selling price of all the fish there at the time, if the supply is already sufficient for the demand. The happenings of an hour may increase or decrease the value of a commodity in a particular market, and to sell, the price must be fixed by the shipper in communication with the agent in charge on the spot. One third of all U.S.A. markets by auctions, to test the price obtainable in the market for them. Under the price-fixing of 1920, there were no sales of our fish "outright" except when our prices were lower than those of competitors. Who would buy from us "outright and unseen" at prices fixed by us, except when he made a better bargain than others offered him?

THE CALIFORNIA SYSTEM.

As I proceed to explain the California system of Co-operative Marketing, and seek to indicate how it could be applied here, let me say that I claim no share in initiating it or even to have first mentioned it here. I had been giving some attention to it when my interest was refreshed by the publication by the "Advocate" newspaper of speeches by Aaron Sapiro, the best known exponent of the system, and since I read these speeches I have made enquiries, read considerably about the subject, and given it some study. I only seek to pass on to you a portion of what I have thus acquired.

Under the California System, modified to suit conditions and applied here, local associations would be formed in various places or by contiguous places. District Exchanges would be formed, where convenient, of delegates from neighboring association. The Central Exchange would consist of delegates from all district exchanges. All associations and exchanges would have boards of directors. The directors of the Council would include at least one fisherman from each district, and representation would be complete.

THE OPEN DOOR TO SQUARE DEAL.

A co-operative organization should have an open door policy, by which every person who will conform to the policies of the organization, who will abide by the rules and regulations, and who will assume his share of its responsibilities may be admitted to membership.

In California, membership of a fruit association is confined to growers, for each grower has a recognized orchard, but here the fishermen gather their produce from the sea, and, therefore, membership should be open to every man who undertook during a stated period to deliver to the Association he had caught any fish he might catch or collect, and inasmuch as all the export should be confined to the Co-operative authority, the "right to membership should be also entirely universal, so that not even the shadow of monopoly should exist. The poorest fisherman should exist. The same right to have his fish exported and to a proportionate share of the profits, as the greatest merchant. He might belong to any association, or, where he had fish in various places, to more than one association. But membership of an association should not be obligatory. The same universal freedom should exist as at present. A fisherman should be free to sell directly to a merchant, or contribute as a member to an association.

LOCAL ASSOCIATION.

Local associations would collect, grade, prepare for shipment, brand the package fish and identify their bulk shipments.

DISTRICT EXCHANGES.

District Exchanges would consider matters common to the whole of the Associations they represent. They would arrange, for instance, for shipments and act as clearing houses between the local associations and the Central Exchange. In this Colony they would be especially useful in dealing with the divergent interests of East and West, and of the Labrador. They would ensure the Western fishery interests that consideration which they are wont to say that have not always received here. A Labrador Exchange would have important and peculiar functions to discharge.

CENTRAL EXCHANGE.

The Central Exchange would charter all vessels for carrying fish to market. It would appoint the agents abroad and at home for the associations. It would receive all proceeds of sales, collect all data, and distribute proceeds and data through district exchanges to the associations. It would conduct all litigation over sales, do all advertising, develop new markets, conduct scientific investigations, and provide for supplies of salt, packages, etc.

SCOPE OF CENTRAL WORK.

Imagine for yourselves the scope of this centralized work, and the benefits of centralization. Freight would be lower, and more uniform. Agents would be experts, because good salaries or commissions could be paid. The field of each would be adequate and permanent, and they would not conflict as Consigners often do. Statistical and other information, so much needed, could be gathered and disseminated. "To sue the Devil and hold the Court in Hell" is the apt description of a suit against a foreigner in his own country, under existing conditions, where each exporter has to fight singlehanded.

A Central agency, conducting all litigation could employ Counsel, and press or defend claims with an efficiency impossible to individual shippers. No development of new markets is possible for individual effort, but by combination could be effectively carried on. Scientific investigation into fishery problems is now unheard of here, but would be constant under careful auspices. Every year we hear of salt scarcity, but this would disappear if supplies were looked out for by a central agency.

FISH POOLING.

The fish collected by associations would be posted, periodically, and the period might be weekly, monthly, yearly or even for a shipment as might be arranged at the time.

It should be understood that not all fish, or even all fish of the same kind, is pooled together. A member in Grand Bank, for instance, would not be pooled with a member in Twillingate, but members in the same association, having fish of the same kind, turned in during the same period, would be in the same pool and would share proportionately with the members of the same pool.

CULLING OR GRADING.

I have mentioned that grading and branding (or culling, as we call it) is done in local associations. The grading is done under standard rules, common to the whole organization, and it is marked under the general brand of the whole organization, and the special brand of the shipping association "Sunkist" Oranges and "Sun Maid" Raisins you are familiar with, and "Sun-Dried" fish might become as well known as Newfoundland fish. But as various localities produce various qualities of oranges or raisins, the produce of each locality is sold under a local mark also. For instance "Grand Bank," "Fogo," Labrador, as the case might be could be branded on exported packages to indicate the locality where shipped, just as "Sun-Dried" would mean "Newfoundland." Thus each locality would reap the due reward of its virtues or vices. No community can become known in the markets, especially to consumers, unless its product is cured, graded and packed under standard rules, and sold under recognized brands to identify the quality. The wholesaler will buy on the strength of the local brand, to supply the wants of his customers. The consumer will buy on the strength of the general trademark, "Sun-Dried," knowing it means "Newfoundland."

No problem concerning fish has proved more difficult than that of Cull. All rules have been disregarded. Who hears now of the 1920 standardisation. I am persuaded that the chief cause of the difficulty has been this, that the fisherman has had no direct interest in the fate of the fish exported from the Colony. Once sold to the merchant, it concerned him no more. The exporter, in turn, not shipping under any general trademark, and hence not under independent inspection, and frequently not having even a personal brand, has been careless. Under a Co-operative organization, all this would be changed. The Central would prescribe standards, and appoint all inspectors and no fish would be received by any association except it had been celled by an authorized inspector. Inspectors, experienced men, should also be schooled by Central into the matter of standards, so that uniformity would exist. They should not be a haphazard lot, dependent on exporters for employment, but a trained, well paid, permanent staff having only the Central as a master. The value of our fish exports would increase under such a system.

Great Expectations.

FROM NUMBER PROJECT-PRIME MINISTER TELLS IN CANADA HOW MONEY IS TO BE RAISED.

(Sydney Post, Dec. 8.)
The Post announced some days ago that an 18,000,000 paper plant would be erected on the Humber River, Bay of Islands, Newfoundland, the cost of which was to be equally borne by the Colony and the British Treasury. At present gangs of men under the direction of English engineers are clearing the site on which the mills will be erected, and surveying for a short branch of railway from the works to tide-water.

Mr. Coaker, Minister of Marine in the Newfoundland Government, states that 10,000 men will be employed in and about the mills.

It is proposed to develop sufficient power at the Humber plant to operate Copper mines at Little Bay and Gull Pond, where there are ore deposits that can be successfully operated with the aid of electricity.

It is also suggested that the Reid Newfoundland Railway from Port aux Basques to St. John's be electrified. The project is looked upon by the people as one of the largest and most beneficial branches for the good of the country since its founding, and no doubt is expressed but that the legislature will give practically unanimous support to the proposal.

A despatch to The Post from Montreal says that Sir Richard Squires, Premier, is in that city en route home. During the course of an interview he said that a mammoth newspaper plant, capable of producing approximately four hundred tons of newspaper daily in perpetuity, which will cost about eighteen million dollars, has been promoted for the Humber. Should this scheme be adopted, declared Sir Richard, it will revolutionize the industrial life of Newfoundland. He explained that half the capital necessary for the construction of the mills had been promised by the Imperial Government, and the balance is to be raised by two issues of 25 year bonds, either in Great Britain or the United States.

At present, he said, 250,000 horse power is lying idle in the water resources. Of this, it is planned to utilize 80,000 to 100,000 for the newspaper plant, while the remainder will be devoted to other industries, one of which will be ore smelting.

Providing the island legislature approves the plan, Sir W. G. Armstrong Whitworth, head of a British construction firm, will attend to the hydro-electrical development and to the construction of the mills, the output of which, Sir Richard added, "can be sold either to England or to the United States without the slightest trouble."

"Newfoundland," declared the Premier, "is particularly adapted to the production of newspaper by reason of its prodigious timber forests of young spruce."

Poultry Association.

NEW MEMBERS JOIN.
The monthly meeting of the Newfoundland Poultry Association took place last night in the Board of Trade rooms. The reports of the Committees in charge of the 10th Annual Show and the Lottery were received. Some 2,500 persons visited the show, which was a big increase on former attendances. The Committee reversed the award made on the White Rock special cup given for local bred pullets and cockerels and the winner was Mr. Walter Reid. President Williams acknowledged the receipt of the Illustrations lantern just received from New York for use this winter and the Association will be glad to have invitations from nearby outposts to give free lectures on Poultry Culture—applications to be sent Secretary W. D. McCarter, Royal Bank Building. The next meeting in January will be the annual meeting and it will be devoted to bringing in new rules and conditions for the 1923 show. Last night showed greater enthusiasm than ever and the following new members joined—Mr. R. Hiscock of Grand Falls, and Mr. John King of Klondyck Farm.

The Little Brown Sail Boat.

There's a goodly number of little craft owned by fishermen with "barked" sails, or brown sails, to whom those few lines are dedicated. Some of those craft are smart to sail, and are constructed in a stalwart manner.

Among the list which Neptune, upholds sailings o'er the foam, There is a craft which rides the waves beside our island home, And she is a craft, though humble, yet she's worthy of much note, 'Tis dear old Terra Nova's little brown sail boat.

When seas are tossing roughly, and when the wind is high, And breakers roar close by the shore, and threatening, looks the sky, Then sturdy stands the fisherman in his oil pants and coat While bounding o'er the billows in his little brown sail boat.

For sailing she's a dandy, they can handle her like fun, In a race up from the "Nor'ard" many a craft she has outdone. She's the pride of Cape St. Mary's, where there's many a one afloat, Where the men go a-fishing in a little brown sail boat.

Now out on the broad Atlantic many monarchs of the deep, Propelled by steam, dash o'er its heaving bosom sweep, But the courage of their Captains none I'll have you all to note, Is no greater than the skipper of a little brown sail boat.

There's no gold lace on his coat sleeves, 'tis a rugged garb you'll scan, But I'll have you to remember 'tisn't clothes that makes the man. He's a thousand times more noble than those praised by seer or poet Though he's toiling on the ocean in his little brown sail boat.

All who love old Terra Nova, now with me they will agree, That among the many vessels there's a craft which skims the sea, And though humble of construction yet she's worthy of much note May fortune ever guard her, she's a little brown sail boat.

Daring Robbers at Champneys, T.B.

BURGLAR CAPTURED BY DETECTIVE LEE.

Last week a very serious robbery occurred at Champneys's T.B., when the store of the Union Trading Company was broken into, and goods to the value of some hundreds of dollars stolen. As soon as the proper authorities were acquainted of the matter, Detective Lee left for the scene, and having a good clue to work on, arrested a young man belonging to a nearby settlement, where a large quantity of the stolen goods was found in his possession. Upon being arraigned before the Magistrate at King's Cove, the culprit was sentenced to six months, with hard labor. The prisoner will be brought on here by the next S.S. Prospero in charge of Head Con. Ryan.

"Wild Honey" With Pricilla Dean.

MAKES BIG HIT.

The popular Star are advertising this week as their banner week, and starting last night with Pricilla Dean in "Wild Honey," they have in the language of the race track, got away to a good start. Leaving the story alone, direction, photograph and other elements out, the acting alone in "Wild Honey" is of an exceptional class, every performer playing his part up to the minute. "Wild Honey" is truly a picture everyone should see. Miss Major, in her violin solo, again demonstrated she is a master of this instrument. Her Spanish dance won for her big applause. For tomorrow night popular William Duncan, will be seen in "The Elbow Vow," a picture full of thrills, excitement and stirring action of the northwest. With Duncan in this production is his co-star Beth Johnson, and as both are well known to the patrons of this theatre, there is no necessity to make any further references. Needless to say they will draw, as they have in the past, large audiences.

Ten Year Electric Clock.

Many attempts have been made to introduce electric clocks into popular favor, in supposition of the ordinary spring or weight-driven forms. The latest is that of the British Horo-Electric, Limited, who offers the attraction that their clock will go for ten years without attention.
Current is provided by a single cell of the Leclanche type. The pendulum bob consists of an electric-magnet, swinging concentrically round a curved permanent magnet, having its north pole in the centre.

The electro-magnet is energised for about a quarter of its complete swing by means of a projecting pin fixed in the upper part of the pendulum, which makes rolling contact with a rock-ing piece. Motion is transmitted by a pawl to a horizontal ratchet wheel, and thence by a worm-screw to the minute-hand.

The impulse is derived from the repulsion of the north pole of the electro-magnet from the north pole of the permanent magnet.

Mr. F. F. Moore, M.H.A., who has been confined to his home for the past week, is considerably improved and will be about in a few days.

Word has been received from Santa Claus that he will arrive in St. John's on Thursday next and will be present at the Kirk Christmas Fair. He hopes that all the children in town will make an effort to be present, so that he may renew acquaintanceship.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

GERMANY CAN PAY.
ROME, Dec. 12.

Corrado Gini, Professor of Statistics in the University of Padua, to whom was entrusted an inquiry as to whether Germany can pay reparations and how much and in what form, has decided the first question in the affirmative, and suggests a compulsory service, similar to Germany's pre-war military service, binding youths for one or two years to service in devastated or Allied countries.

AUTHORESS DEAD.
NORTHAMPTON, Dec. 12.

Mrs. Irene Osgoode, authoress, died at her home here to-day after a month's illness. She was born in United States, and wrote several novels, plays and volumes of poetry.

PUBLIC FUNERAL.
CORK, Dec. 12.

The body of Sean Hales, Free State
Deputy, assassinated in Dublin last week, arrived here to-day aboard a steamer. It was immediately transported to the cathedral to await the funeral to-morrow.

PARENTS OF O'CONNOR ABHOR
REPRISALS.
DUBLIN, Dec. 12.

The parents of Rory O'Connor, executed by the Free State government last week, wrote the newspapers as follows: "We abhor anything in the nature of reprisals. Our grief is not softened by the thought of the sufferings of others. In his last letter, written to his younger brother on the morning of his execution the following passage occurs: 'I could not continue with my former comrades. I am to meet death at their hands. I forgive them all. The will of God be done, and may the honor of Ireland be preserved.'"

WANAMAKER DEAD.
PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 12.

John Wanamaker, world famous merchant and former postmaster general, passed away at his home here this morning. He had been ill for several weeks, with a severe cold, and died at the age of eighty-four years.

Makes Record Time.

PLANE DAMAGED IN LANDING.

Making a record trip from Botwood
the new Martinside aeroplane, piloted by Major Cotton, met with a slight mishap whilst landing at Quidi Vidi.
One of the skids being out of place
the machine tipped as it approached the ice, and fell forward. Fortunately no serious damage was done to the machine, and the pilot escaped without injury. The machine left Botwood at about 11.55 and made the landing in 1 hour and 40 minutes. It is assumed that one of the skids got out of position shortly after taking the air at Botwood.

Germans to Build Marine Crane in England

WILHELMHAVEN, Germany.—Too cumbersome for safe transport abroad, Wilhelmshaven's huge floating crane, the largest in the world, will remain here despite the original stipulations of the Versailles peace treaty. Instead of moving it, the Entente has decided that Germany must build an exact duplicate in England at German expense. The mammoth apparatus is 84 meters high and can lift 250 tons to a height of 85 meters. An entire torpedo boat can be dangled from its great iron claws.

South Africa

MAY PRODUCE MUCH COTTON.

JOHANNESBURG.—The cotton industry in South Africa is rapidly coming to the notice of the world, and already it is supplying a visible percentage of the cotton used in cloth manufactured in England. Experts estimate that there are four million acres of good soil available in the Transvaal, Swaziland and Zululand for cotton growing which could be made to yield a crop worth $15,000,000 annually, and at the same time solve the unemployment problem of the country. The possibilities of cotton growing are evidenced by the fact that in 1909 the crop totalled 12,000 pounds of lint, while in 1921 it was estimated at 2,000,000 pounds. Practically all of the crop is being shipped to England, where it finds a ready market because of its fine texture.

A Bout For Carpenter.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—An offer for Georges Carpentier to meet British heavyweight fighter Arthur Townley, in April, at Prague, Czecho-Slovakia, has been accepted by Descamps, Carpentier's manager, according to the Herald.

The newspaper adds that Carpentier says, while he is training for this bout he will be glad to give Siki a "try out."

Dempsey is Ready.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 8.—Jack Dempsey arrived here yesterday, and declared he was "dodging nobody's challenge." "I am ready to meet anyone in the world right now or any time suitable. As for Jess Willard, I would like nothing better than to take him on, but where is the promoter who will stage it? It's only a question of the right promoter and the right offer."

Carpentier's Latest Offer.

PARIS, ec. 7.—Carpentier believes that the best place to settle the controversy over his recent bout with Siki is in the ring. He says: "Here is what I propose to Siki. Notwithstanding his disqualification and the disqualification I might incur, I offer to meet him at any time he likes, in public or private. Should he be ready to put up a stake I bind myself to pay to charity that stake, or purse, if one is offered. I am absolutely certain that I would finish Siki this time in less than three rounds."
