Nerves So Bad That She Would Sit and Cry

Mrs. Mary Hocking, Madoc, Ont., writes—
"Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me a wonderful lot of good. I suffered from general weakness and was so run down and my heart and nerves were in such bad shape that I would sit down and cry and not know what I was crying about. I also used to have weak spells. Thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, however, I am real well now. I shall always keep a box of the Nerve Food in the house, and recommend them to my friends; they are a wonderful medicine."
(Mr. J. W. Vince, Druggist, of Madoc, Ont., says: "I have sold Mrs. Hocking your Nerve Food, and the medicine has done her much good.")

CHAPTER XIV.

"Queen!" She laughed, with a scorn of the title.

"Anyhow," he said, "you must not do it." He paused a moment, his breath coming fast, his hand gripping hers; then he went on hurriedly, earnestly. "You are wondering why I should talk like this to you—why I said it is my turn now. I'll tell you: it is because I love you, Madge."

She stopped, and he felt her hand quiver. For one brief moment her eyes were lifted to his face, then were hidden again under their long lashes. She said not a word, but she swayed a little away from him and tried to draw away her hand, but he held it firmly.

"I love you, Madge!" he repeated, with youth's hot passion, bending down to her and looking into her face—into the downcast eyes. "Are you angry? You can't be surprised. How could I help loving you? Do you know how beautiful you are, Madge? No, I suppose not. And you are so gentle and good and—yes, I love you, dear, dear Madge!"

She could not speak; it seemed to her that she had lost both sight and speech, as if they were swept away by the ineffable joy which flooded her soul.

He loved her! This hero, king, god of hers, actually loved her! She must be dreaming, as she had often dreamed in the silence of the night. It could not—could not be true. She raised her head and looked round and up at the sky, studded with its stars, her lips apart, a wonderful light in her lovely eyes, and for a moment or two drank in the draught of happiness. Then she seemed to awake, and with a slight shudder drew her shawl round her so that it hid her face, and shook her head.

"No, no!" she panted.
"But it's yes," he said, drawing her nearer to him. "I love you, Madge. I must have loved you, I think, for a long time; but I didn't know it—realize it until to-night when I saw that man touch you. Dear Madge, won't you believe me? It's the truth. Do you love me, Madge? Won't you try?"

"No," she panted, looking to right and left, as if for some way of escape. "I can not—I will not. You don't know what you say."

"Oh, yes, I do," he responded. "I know what I'm saying, and I mean it with all my heart and soul. Don't shrink away from me, Madge; don't be afraid."

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The best cough medicine you ever used. A family remedy easy and quick to make. Saves about 50¢.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it's pure and good. Four 3/4 ounces of Pinex in a 16-oz. bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make 16 ounces—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly breaks the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma. Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the respiratory system. Do not be disappointed, ask your druggist for "3/4 ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Write for free literature to Dr. Chase, 200 West 21st St., New York, N. Y.

angry. Tell me you love me and will be my wife."

"Your wife?" The words left her lips unconsciously. "Your wife?" The color flew to her face, then left it pale again.

"Yes," he said, tenderly, passionately. "Are you afraid?"

"Afraid?" she echoed the word.
"Yes. Do you think I shouldn't make a good husband, that I shall ill-treat you?" he laughed, with a passionate thrill in his laugh. "Think, dearest, think how happy we shall be. My wife! My Madge! The loveliest, sweetest, goodest girl in all the world. Speak to me just a little. I'm a good-for-nothing scamp, dear, but I'll try and make you happy. I will, indeed, Madge."

He drew her to him to press her against his heart, but she held off her hands clasping his arms.

"No, no!" she faltered, the agony of renouncing her exquisite bliss trembling in her voice. "You—you forget. You forget what you are, and what I am—a common gypsy, a vagabond; while you—Ah, I must not let you forget!"

"I forget nothing," he said, his face flushing, his eyes bent with passionate love upon her upturned face; her eyes melting with mingled love and pain, hope, trust, and—yes, despair. "I know all you mean, but it amounts to nothing, if I were a king upon a throne, instead of being what I am—an outcast, disowned by his own people—I should say the same. You see, I can't help it. A man can't help loving, Madge; and the man who loves as I love you and doesn't speak out is a cur and a coward, and doesn't deserve to get what he wants. See, dearest? Don't hold off from me, Madge, unless—his face paled suddenly—"unless you don't care for me."

Her breath came and went, and she dropped her head, that he might not read in her eyes the love—the all-absorbing, passionate love that filled her heart to overflowing.

"In that case, Madge," he said, and his voice grew husky, "I'll—I'll say good-bye and clear out of your way; for I couldn't stop in the camp and see you, perhaps—perhaps—falling in love—with some one else. I couldn't do that. Tell me, Madge—speak to me, dearest, dearest!"

"What shall I do? What shall I do?" broke from her quivering lips. "Let me go. Ah, let me go! It is wrong—all wrong! Must I speak—must I tell you? Then, then—she paused as if on the verge of a great effort, then raised her eyes to his—"I do not love you!" she faltered.

The next moment she was on his breast, her face hidden, her whole frame shaking with sobs.

She had tried to do her duty and—failed.

Royce uttered a low cry and pressed her to him, took her face in his hands and raised it, and kissed the lovely eyes and trembling lips.

"Madge, Madge!" he murmured, brokenly. "My darling! my darling! And you said you did not love me. Which is true? Whisper, dearest. No, give me one kiss—one kiss from your heart, and then I shall know."

With her face hidden, she slowly put her arms round his neck and drew his head down, and then with that surrender of self of which only a girl in the throes of her first passion can be capable, she put her lips to his.

Behind them were the glare and the din of the fair, above them the starry night; the horses neighed restlessly close by, a camp-fire shot up luridly in the darkness. It was a fitting scene for Madge's betrothal, and one that she will not forget until the hour comes when Death wipes away with the sweep of his fleshless hand all earthly scenes, sad or joyous.

He put his arms round her lovingly, protectingly, and unconsciously they wandered away from the fair, with its discordant music and garish lights.

He could feel her heart throbbing wildly against his side, her breath stirred his hair, and as he bent to kiss her now and again and murmured, "I love you, Madge, my darling, my dearest," he knew that, though her lips were silent, her heart gave back the refrain.

All unconsciously, occupied with the dream which is the sweetest to us all, they drew near the camp-fire, and Madge, waking with a start, stopped shriekingly.

He had turned to lead her away, and was drawing the shawl round her with the newly born, protecting tenderness of possession, when her same struck on their ears.

Mechanically they stopped and listened absently.

Neither of them at first recognized the voice, but presently both knew that it was Steve's.

"It must be put an end to," he was saying. "D'ya hear, all of you? I say it must be put an end to. It's Madge's fault as well as his, but he's the worst. Who's he, that he should bring disgrace on us?"

"Disgrace!" cried Mother Kate. "Who's going to bring disgrace on us, I should like to know?"

"Who?" he retorted, with an oath. "This fine gentleman that's sneaked in among us; this Mr. Jack, as you call him. I tell you she's clean gone on him. Wasn't some of you there when she wouldn't let him go on the platform? Wasn't that enough to show you what was happening? I tell you if it ain't stopped, that Madge will bring ruin on herself and disgrace on us all."

Madge drew herself upright, and her eyes turned with a flush toward the fire; then suddenly the passionate indignation seemed to flicker, but she sank on Royce's breast, panting hard.

"Hush, hush, Madge!" he said, through his clinched teeth. "What does it matter what they say? They don't know any better. We'll show them—!" he stopped, thought a moment, then bent till his lips touched her hair, and whispered long and hurriedly.

She started, her breath seemed to cease as she listened, but though with a kind of shiver she panted, "No, no!" and hid her face still more completely, she still clung to him in loving and tender.

CHAPTER XV.

Two nights after Royce had told Madge Lee, the gypsy, that he loved her, and had asked her to be his wife, there was a dinner-party at Monk Towers. A dinner-party at the Towers was an event. It was the principal house in the country; the countess was admittedly the first lady in the district, and the function was one at which every person of standing in the place was proud to assist.

The cook, though not a French chef, was an admirable artist, the cellars were famous, and there was a "tone"—a refined, patrician atmosphere surrounding the event which made it distinguished and exclusive.

The guests numbered twenty, and were representative. The Earl and Countess of Balfarraz, a neighboring baronet, his wife and two daughters; four or five squires and their wives; a couple of officers from the garrison town, the rector and his wife and son, and a celebrated author who was staying in them.

All of them knew of the disgrace of Royce, the countess' second son, and his virtual dismissal from the army, and some of them did not know the countess were rather surprised at her giving a dinner-party just at this time; but they who were intimate with her quite understood.

"It is just what she would do," said the rector's wife. "She has no heart, no feeling—nothing but pride. If Royce—poor boy, I rather liked him!—had committed a murder, she would have given a ball. And yet you would think she must suffer. Such a disgrace for her and for the earl! He must feel it. I am sure; he is such an excellent young man. They tell me that he does an immense amount of good in London."

The rector, too wise and experienced to contradict his good lady, coughed discreetly. He had more than "rather liked" the scape-grace Royce, and rather doubted the earl's saintliness.

Exactly at eight o'clock the countess entered the drawing-room in readiness to receive her guests.

She was dressed in black satin, wore priceless lace and a part of the Landon diamonds.

Her handsome face was almost without a wrinkle, and the dark eyes shone clear and moon-like, and, like the moon, impressive and emotionless.

If her favorite son, Royce, had just been gazzeted colonel or general, she could not have looked more at ease or brightly content as she received her guests, and talked in her slow, measured tones with one and the other.

Seymour appeared on the scene next, and went about with a smile, sleek and benevolent, upon his fair face. He was dressed with the utmost care, and yet had contrived to give to his appearance the air of a man who cares nothing for his clothes.

Woman Tea-Shop Manager

MADE A FREEMAN OF LONDON.

London, March 8. (A.P.)—Among the names of England's most illustrious men which are inscribed on the roll of Freemen of the City of London now appears that of Miss J. D. Banbridge, who is only a tea-shop manageress.

This honor has been conferred on Miss Banbridge because she has served as a waitress and manageress in London tea-stalls for thirty-eight years, and because she is known to everyone who amounts to anything in the city as the most efficient, pleasant and kindly manageress in the city. She is a gray-haired, middle-aged woman and gave a motherly smile to the Lord Mayor as she accepted the usual card containing the scroll.

Miss Banbridge has seen many changes in tea shop life since she first became a waitress.

"I think the most striking is the disappearance of the 'bun and glass of milk' lunch," she said. "Girl clerks now sit down to a square meal of meat and vegetables at midday."

State Solicits Help of Elderly Indians

IN BOUNDARY DISPUTE.

Austin, Texas, March 21. (A.P.)—In the dimmed memories of nine aged Indians and Mexicans, last reminders of the pioneer west, the state of New Mexico has sought the solution of a boundary dispute with Texas, involving 20,000 acres of rich land.

The line between the two states where they meet near the northern boundary of old Mexico was established along the channel of the Rio Grande river in 1850. Since then, however, the channel of the river has shifted, carrying out of New Mexico 20,000 acres of land and placing it in Texas, according to contentions of the former state.

In the days before the fifties, Indians and Mexicans traveled back and forth from Mexico to the United States, using the trails that followed the meandering river. A number of these Indians and Mexicans, who were then boys, are still living, and the state of New Mexico has sought their aid to establish the old channel of the river, which the state alleges is 3,000 feet east of the present channel. Testimony of these men has been used in a suit brought by New Mexico, pending in the United States Supreme Court.

Travelling back along the paths of memory almost four score years, the old men have attempted to trace for the New Mexico engineers the course of the fickle Rio Grande as it existed in 1850. On the banks of the river these Indians and Mexicans fished and hunted and followed

London Bus and Tram Strike Settled

Attorney General Daughery Resigns--24 Killed in a Mine Explosion in Virginia--Poincare's New Ministry to Meet Today

STRIKE SETTLED.

LONDON, March 29. The strike of London's bus workers and tramway employees was brought to a close to-day through successful negotiations between the workers' representatives and employers. Direct negotiations were initiated through the effort of Premier MacDonald, who succeeded in bringing both sides together after a number of other attempts to end the strike failed. The Premier impressed upon both workers and tramway and bus companies the necessity of immediate agreement. The men left their posts at midnight Sunday and all this week thousands of Londoners were put to much inconvenience getting to and from places of employment. For a time the strike threatened to involve workers in the subway and surface lines and other industries.

DAUGHERTY RESIGNS.

WASHINGTON, March 29. Attorney General Daughery, who has been the centre of stormy scenes in United States Cabinet circles during the past several months, resigned to-day. Surrounded by an ever-growing flood of criticism and under pressure of many of his ranking party leaders, he consented to follow Secretary of the Navy, Denby, into retirement. His resignation was promptly accepted by President Coolidge and cleared the administration of the last of the cabinet members who have been objects of suspicion in the oil scandals.

THE LOST IDEA.

He had the thought he could improve upon the working method they had followed long. An easier way in which it might be done. Yet he was timid, fearing to be wrong.

He'd thought it out. "It ought to work," said he. "I wonder what they'd say should I suggest it? I wonder if they'd think enough of me To pay attention to it or to test it."

Still in his breast he kept his secret hid. Thinking and fearing there was nothing to it. Until one day another came who did. "This work is just the way he'd thought to do it."

Lost was his chance. Had he but spoken when The thought was born, then his had been the glory; But life will seldom wait for timid men. The bold rise high, and that's another story.

The moral's plain and clearly understood. There's none, I think, to-day who will deny it: A good idea isn't any good Unless you also have the pluck to try it.

Airplane Safety Device

PERFECTED IN AUSTRALIA.

Sydney, N.S.W., March 29. (A.P.)—At the aerial research laboratory recently established at Randwick, near Sydney, New South Wales, one of the first experiments is centred in the construction of a four-seater flying boat, assigned by Squadron-leader L. J. Wackett. A unique feature of the new boat is that the engine cover takes the form of a small dinghy which, in case of emergency can be removed and used for rowing ashore. During his service with the Australian air force in France Wackett perfected an anti-air craft sight for Lewis and machine guns. The invention was adopted by the British army in all theatres of war.

At the battle of Hamel, when machine guns were supplied with ammunition dropped from airplanes, the parachutes were released by a device invented by Wackett. It is not inappropriate, therefore, that this ingenious aviator should be engaged at the Australian research laboratory where he has been appointed to supervise the experimental work.

Bumper Show at Crescent Last Night

DAN DELMAR INTRODUCES NEW NOVELTIES.

The usual Friday night Amateur performance took place in the Crescent Theatre last night before a large and very enthusiastic audience. As an extra attraction Dan Delmar added some very interesting musical and novelty items. His number with "The Great Alone" tells the story of a half-breed who is sent to college by a friend of his father and later by the same guardian entrusted with a difficult secret mission in Alaska. At college his prowess became the envy of team mates who sought to bring him into ridicule. A girl wins his undying gratitude by championing him and bearing his tormentors. In the fur country he has opportunity to repay that debt at a double peril of his life, and a girl who loves him seeks to restrain him. How he fulfills his duty to his conscience and his employers and wipes out his debt to the girl provides the thrilling—for it is thrilling—action of the picture.

Amusing Stories of Kaiser

NOW GOOD COPY IN GERMANY.

Berlin, March 5 (A.P.)—Certain German newspapers never tire of publishing amusing stories about the former Kaiser, one of the latest being his experience at the Vatican in October, 1888, when the former ruler was received by Pope Leo XIII and caused a ripple of laughter among those present by his awkwardness.

"William began the performance by dropping the valuable 'tabatiere' he carried as a gift to the Pope," writes Ernest Smith in a book of his 40 years' experience as a British Journalist in Rome and other European capitals. Smith's account of the Kaiser's audience with the Pope has been reproduced in numerous German newspapers, some of them even publishing the article in the columns devoted to comment by their humorists.

"As William stooped to recover the 'tabatiere,' before a courier dashed forward to recover it for him, he let his helmet fall, and, to add to his confusion, a seam in her garments collapsed audibly as he bent down," writes Mr. Smith. "When William recovered he could scarcely stammer out several incoherent words, and a witness of the scene told me that the Kaiser was trembling like a leaf all the time."

Wild Depredations

SOUND DEATH WARRANT OF HORSES.

Clinton, B.C., March 22 (A.P.)—Scouts are out locating the haunts of each band in a horde of several thousand wild horses that has laid waste the rich Cariboo grazing district in the north part of the Province of British Columbia. This reconnaissance is preparatory to a roundup to be held in the spring.

In the roundup all these animals for which sale can be found at $5 a head on the hoof are to be captured. The rest are to be slain. Every Cariboo cowboy is being mustered for the roundup.

Like the cayuses turned out by Indians on the Yakima Reservation in the State of Washington, south of here, the horses of the Cariboo thrive too well, and have become a burden on the country that ranchers have pronounced intolerable. Provincial officials have lent their aid for the spring cleaning of the Cariboo.

Provincial participation resulted when the British Columbia Government was informed that many roundups in the past had fallen short of exterminating the evil. Ranchers complained to Victoria, capital of British Columbia, that the horses, besides denuding the Cariboo of grass, enticed domesticated animals off to retreats in the hills.

Prohibition Fever

AMERICAN SCIENTISTS' FIGHT TO BAN TEA AND COFFEE.

An effort to prohibit tea and coffee as well as liquor in America is being made, according to the following Reuter message from Trenton, New Jersey:

Mr. Hudson Maxim, a scientist and inventor, of Lake Ronkonong, announced recently that he intended to take action under the eighteenth amendment against restaurants, hotels and other places selling tea and coffee.

He now states he has engaged counsel, and intends to proceed with the matter.

A prominent hotel in Newark or New York City, Mr. Maxim asserted, would be selected for the first raid.

The eighteenth amendment, declares Mr. Maxim, prohibits intoxicating liquors, and, therefore, applies to all drugs and other preparations which produce intoxication in any degree.

Dictionary definitions, he says, will be sufficient to bring tea and coffee within the Prohibition law.

Irish Boundary Line

CAUSES RAILWAY EMBARRASMENTS.

DUBLIN, Mar. 7 (A.P.)—The recent meeting of the Great Northern Railway revealed some conspicuous embarrassments caused by the partition of Ireland, which the chairman said is now two countries. Sixty per cent. of the railway is in Northern Ireland and forty per cent. in the Free State. The line crosses the border 14 times, and at each of these points there is a customs barrier delaying travellers.

The company is also embarrassed by the question of double income tax, and it requires a tedious readjustment before the shareholders get their returns. It is urged that a friendly modus vivendi between the two Governments in such a matter which affect both parts of Ireland is of more importance than a readjustment of the boundary.

George St. Church Missionary Anniversary.—Special arrangements have been made for this occasion. The President of Conference, Rev. S. Bennett of Grand Falls will be the preacher in the morning. At the evening service Mr. F. Angel will preside and addresses will be given by Rev. S. Bennett and Mr. W. Peters.

St. Thomas's—To-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock the annual distribution of prizes to the Sunday School scholars will take place. The prizes will be presented by the Rector, who will also deliver an address to the gathering. At the evening service Canon Earp will deliver his farewell sermon, the subject being "The Inimitable Love of God." Following an all too short pastorate, Canon Earp has felt obliged to sever his connection with the Parish of St. Thomas's and the city where his broad Christian citizenship, his unfailing interest in all measures that make for righteousness and his forceful, pitiful messages, have singled him out as "a Brother Beloved." To his new sphere of labor in the Canadian North West, he will carry the earnest hopes of citizens generally, that the future may be fully freighted with happiness, health and prosperity as his life's work proceeds.

CHAMPIONSHIP BILLIARD TOURNAMENT.

Seventeen Players Will Clash For Championship Honors.

The Newfoundland Billiard Association held a meeting in the G.W.V.A. rooms last night and finalized arrangements in connection with the Amateur Billiard Championship which commences in the Star rooms on Monday night next. Although the proposed tournament was only open for a few days, some seventeen competitors entered, apparently all cue artists of no mean ability. Owing to the large number of entries received, and the short time left at their disposal to run the games off, the Committee found it necessary to draw a first round, which will be competed under the knock-out system, 300 billiards up. The qualifying round will be played as follows:—

- (a)—J. Fawell vs. D. French.
- (b)—N. Wadden vs. R. Power.
- (c)—E. J. Johnson vs. J. Edwards.
- (d)—J. Carberry vs. G. Flynn.
- (e)—R. Davis vs. A. Moakler.
- (f)—J. Hickey vs. W. Newbury.
- (g)—G. Freeman vs. G. Rabbits.
- (h)—C. J. Merner vs. W. Skinner.

T. Ryan, bye.

The above games will be played, commencing Monday night, at 8 o'clock, when (a), (b), (c) sets will try conclusions. Tuesday night (d), (e) (f), and Wednesday afternoon (g) and (h).

Public Opinion in Jail.

"Public opinion had not until recently been in jail. The relaxation of prison rules, however, has altered that, and we sometimes get expressions of collective opinion at lectures and meetings within the prisons which are surprising and interesting," writes "X," a Prison Visitor, in the Daily Herald.

"At the close of one of my lectures a convict rose and asked me if I would try to see two youngsters, aged 16, who had been admitted to the jail."

"It's a shame," said he, "to bring kids like that here."

"The audience agreed and it passed a unanimous resolution of protest against the magistrates' action in committing kids to prison."

"I do not know whether the magistrates in question ever received the resolution, but it seems to me that if they did they should have been impressed—for it was the opinion of pecuniarily experienced men!"

Relief Came After using Two Boxes

Mrs. John McKee is Very Satisfied With Dodd's Kidney Pills.

She Had Suffered for Three Years and Found Relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Grand Pabos, Que., March 28.—(Special)—From all parts of Canada come the same glad tidings, telling the same glad story of sufferers that suffer no longer, of the weak being made strong and healthy, and of the good work that is being done by Dodd's Kidney Pills. People are now learning the importance of keeping the kidneys in shape, of watching for the least symptoms of kidney trouble, and they turn at once to Dodd's Kidney Pills, because they know they have a remedy that they can rely on, a remedy that never fails. Right here in Grand Pabos, Mrs. John McKee, a much respected resident, comes forward with a statement that adds to the long list of grateful letters. She says:

"I have suffered from my kidneys for three years. I sent for some Dodd's Kidney Pills. They have helped me so much that I intend taking them again any time my kidneys pain me. I only used two boxes, and I have not been troubled since."

Bible Printed in 1610 Found on West Coast

OWNER BELIEVES IT WAS PROPERTY OF QUAKERS WHO CAME ON MAYFLOWER.

LOS ANGELES, March 8.—What is believed to be the only Bible of its kind in the world has recently been discovered in Los Angeles. It is illustrated, printed in English, and was published in 1610.

The translators and compilers of the book probably will never be known, since the title page gives no other information than the name of the printer, Robert Barker.

"That the Bible is not a King James version is evident from the fact that it was printed a year before the King James version came out in 1611. Neither is it believed to be a Coverdale, nor a Bishop's Bible because of an even more marked discrepancy in the dates of publishing.

The old Bible is printed on rag paper, with a profusion of illustrations, which include a picture of the Ark of the Covenant, one of Solomon's temple and an outline of the Garden of Eden.

The title page of the Book of "Psalms" reads: "The Books of Psalms, collected into English Metre by Thomas Sternhold, John Hopkins and Thomas; conferred with the Hebrew, with apt notes to sing them withal. Set forth and allowed to be sung in all churches, or all the people together, before and after morning and evening prayer, as also before and after sermons; and moreover, in private houses, for their godly solace and comfort, laying apart all ungodly songs and ballads which tend only to the nourishment of vice and corruption of youth."

Re War Taxes

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Your correspondent, Mr. T. E. Collett, deserves our thanks for his pertinent questions in yesterday's Telegram on the public scandals, more particularly do I agree with him in that portion of his letter concerning the Income War Tax Act and the stamp taxes on cheques and receipts. The latter has become known as nuisance taxes in the United States, as they should be here. So too should that greater nuisance imposition, the Income Tax, be wiped out for Mr. Collett says it was only intended as a war measure. As such it has been honourably adhered to, I believe, by the most of us, though it was absolutely avoided by men in high positions as Mr. Assessor O'Reilly did implicitly admit when he refused to deny my allegation to that effect in a former communication I sent you. Now Mr. O'Reilly is hard on our heels again this spring straddling an unusual imperative necessity of digging into our pockets as deep as ever under the stress of the severest penalties. In the face of the public scandals, and in view of the dissipation of our taxes, via the "slovenly" methods of the Poor Commissioner's office, are we going to submit ourselves to be again pistolled off our honest earnings and compelled to throw them into the hands of politicians who would have the power to repeat the process of using them as "slush funds" in another election? Before doing so let us try "wait and see" if we can't sit tight upon our rights as the present Government seem to be sitting in a determination to ignore public opinion so that most of them can do just as they please again in future.

Yours truly,

TORTURED TAXPAYER.

Teaching History the Right Way

"There is a special sense in which the importance of the right teaching of history should be emphasized, apart from the obvious general importance in all teaching of a general right method, and this sense proceeds from the effect of bad historical teaching upon the Commonwealth," writes Mr. Hillaire Belloc in the Teachers' World.

"You may teach almost any other subject badly, and the only effect will be that the taught will get an imperfect result. But in the case of history they get a contradictory result. If you teach arithmetic badly the pupil may be a bad worker of sums for life, or may gradually improve with practice. But if you teach a wrong view of history to young people they will get a definitely false idea of the past, which only one in a thousand (who may happen to take up history as an expert) will ever get rid of.

"Now there is a practical consequence attaching to this importance of right teaching in the special case of history, which is, that history forms the object-lesson of politics.

"That there should be a right method of teaching history, a standard method as it were, roughly accepted throughout the educational system of the country, has not only the value of creating unity within the Commonwealth, and the value of informing all general political action, but it has a very special value for the individual.

"How utterly different, for example, must be the attitude of the individual towards religion when he knows the history of religion and has it justly put before him in terms, no matter how elementary and brief, from his attitude when that history is concealed from him or falsified. The mind approaches the whole affair of man rationally in the one case, irrationally in the other. I say, then, that the right teaching of history is of capital importance."

A Dastardly Perversion of Facts.

The following deliberately misleading article on the Report of Mr. T. Hollis Walker, K.C., has been issued to-day—through the columns of the Weekly Advocate, a journal, which as its headline states, is published in the interests of the Fishermen's Protective Union, and whose circulation is almost exclusively confined to the outports.

Unseen and unnoticed in the city, it steals away to preach a false gospel, to sow the seed of suspicion, and to tarnish the reputation of a gentleman sent out by the British Government to conduct the investigation.

We are unable, owing to the fact that our attention was called to this disreputable article just before press hour, to deal with it fully. For the moment, however, it is sufficient to say that the Findings of the Commissioner were not opinions, but were founded on facts substantiated by evidence obtained under cross examination.

As to his ignorance of climatic and geographical conditions, the Report distinctly shows that he took them fully into consideration, and in condemning the methods adopted to relieve destitution he deliberately allowed considerable latitude on that account.

Nowhere in the Report is there anything to warrant the assertion that "not a shadow of dishonesty rests upon a single member of the present Government." On the contrary Mr. Walker has been scathingly outspoken in condemning in unmistakable terms the laxity and profligacy exhibited by those who were responsible for the handling of public funds both in the Pit Prop transactions and in the distribution of Relief.

The attempt to give political colour to the criticisms which have been made of the gravest affair which has ever happened in Newfoundland deserves public condemnation. Why pervert the fishermen? Why the need to throw dust in their eyes? We have not been influenced by politics; we have none. The Truth has been told.

Great is Truth and must prevail. The Editorial referred to reads thus:

THE WALKER REPORT.

(From the Weekly Advocate.) Our last Weekly Advocate contained the findings of Commissioner T. Hollis Walker.

As far as the Government as at present constituted is concerned, the Walker report absolutely exonerates them from all suspicions of dishonesty and malpractice, despite the many charges levied against them by intriguing politicians seeking power.

When the allegations against the ex-Prime Minister, Sir Richard Squires, and the Hon. Dr. Campbell were made, the present Government promised an enquiry into public matters and they kept that promise. Indeed, departments which were not connected in any way with the original allegations were, by the Government's fearless action, laid open to enquiry and, as far as the members of the present Government were concerned, no stone was left unturned that might reveal any matters reflecting upon the personal honor of Government members. Government members were not spared during the enquiry, and all of the numerous transactions which were necessitated during the years of depression were keenly scrutinized under the full light of enquiry.

Honest men have nothing to fear, and in each and every case where explanation was required it was forthcoming. The general result was, therefore, not only a practical exoneration of the present Government but a revelation of the fearful period of distress which was passed, largely because of the Government's determination that none of the common people of this country should succumb to starvation. It would be unreasonable to suppose that Commissioner Walker (although it is a fact that 293,000,000 pounds sterling have been spent in Britain on relief measures) should realise exactly the conditions obtaining in this country. A lack of knowledge of winter conditions, communications and the general geographical circumstances of Newfoundland, on his part, prevented him from grasping to the fullest the hardships through which the people passed, and his opinion in a few instances—must therefore be discounted by those who know and by the people themselves.

Nevertheless, it is a fact that at the door of not even a single member of the present Government was there found to be traced one shadow of dishonesty. The political strife-mongers of the Opposition, some of whom became millionaires whilst in power, are disappointed men to-day, as they realise the Government is as solid a unit as at any time since 1919. It is regrettable that the enquiry did not extend sufficiently to include some of the worst political Tory hypocrites, but the Advocate ventures to say they will at a future date, eat more crow than they did when Commissioner Walker's report was published.

As for the Commissioner's dealing with the allegations which led to the retirement of Sir Richard Squires from the Premiership, the Advocate refrains from comment, realising that it is not a matter for present discussion, but one with which the future must deal. The Weekly Advocate sincerely congratulates Sir Wm. Coaker on his complete exoneration from the dirty political insinuations of his maddened opponents, who are not able to appreciate honesty in any public man.

Greenspond Men

REACH HOME SAFELY.

According to a message received yesterday from the Magistrate at Greenspond, the four men who were adrift near Gooseberry Island, landed on Deer Island. The men, who were out in an open boat since Wednesday last, are O.K., according to a message received to-day, although they suffered much from exposure. They arrived at their homes this forenoon. S.S. Daisy, which has been out in search of the men, is returning, and passed Cape Bonavista at 10 a.m.

Petition for the Release of Captain Jesse Winsor

Largely signed petitions praying for the release of Capt. Jesse Winsor from the penitentiary have been received in the city from Westville and other sections of Bonavista Bay and forwarded to His Excellency the Governor. A petition to the same effect is being circulated in the city. The petitions point out to His Excellency hitherto excellent reputation and however just the sentence may be, it is his opinion that his action was impulsive rather than with criminal intent, and that the good done by the original sentence will not be increased by keeping him in prison, but on the contrary it is prevented from going to the fishery hardship will devolve on others depending on him.

SEALING NEWS

TERRA NOVA HAS PANNED 12,000.

Up to press hour the only news of an encouraging nature received from the sealing fleet on the northern front is a message from the Terra Nova to Bowring Bros., stating that the crew killed and panned 6,900 since 11 o'clock yesterday. The message stated further that the ship got caught in heavy rafted ice early this morning, 40 tons of which rafted in on the deck and carried away 30 feet of bulwarks. The ship stood the strain splendidly, and the men worked like trojans to clear the decks, which was successfully accomplished by 11 a.m. The other ships are still jammed with nothing new to report. The following messages have been received:—

BOWRING BROS.

Viking—20 miles south Deadman's Island, jammed.

Eagle—Fifteen miles south east by south Harbour Deep, wind south and west, too thick to see far; jammed.

Saguna—Ten miles north east of Patridge Point, jammed, too thick to see far. Large sheets difficult to get through. Sighted Terra Nova and scattered whitecoats.

There was no report from the Terra Nova.

BAINE JOHNSTON & CO.

Seal—Position three miles west south west of Western Horse Islands. Heavy easterly winds last night thick snow, jammed. Hoping for change to-night.

LATEST!

Terra Nova—(10 a.m.)—Placed men on ice 11 a.m. yesterday, killed and panned 6,500. Ice stripping, got caught in heavy rafted, 40 tons ice came on deck, 30 feet bulwarks carried away. Ship stood it splendidly. Men worked nobly and everything was cleared away by 11 a.m.

Schooners Swept From Moorings

AT BAY ROBERTS.

Last night Hon. W. H. Cave received a telegram from Bay Roberts stating that six schooners, which had been lying up there, broke from their moorings and were drifting out the harbor with the ice. The schooners are:—Romana, owned by Capt. Ah. Parsons; Victor, owned by Mr. Ed. Snow; Rosabel, owned by Mr. Ed. Snow; Change, owned by Mr. A. W. Picotti; Helen, owned by Mr. R. Churchill; and Billow, owned by Mr. John Morgan.

Mr. Cave, as soon as he received the information, arranged that two tugs proceed to the scene to intercept the vessels. Accordingly the Hugh D. and John Green left port this morning, but before noon the John Green returned, owing to ice conditions. Mr. Cave also got in touch with Bell Island and Cape St. Francis. From the former place the Mary is being dispatched and an effort will be made to intercept the Daisy, now on her way here, and instruct her to try and secure the vessels. A message from Bay Roberts this forenoon states that the schrs. Change and Helen caught in the harbor and have been secured. The other vessels have gone out in the Bay, but there was no sign of them either from Bell Isle or the Cape.

Relief Work Ceases To-Day

According to instructions issued by the Government all relief work in the city closes to-day. The rock sheds were closed a week or more ago and since the men have been snow shovelling on the country roads. It is apparently the intention not to have any more work this season at the rock sheds as the wiring, windows and equipment in the buildings have been removed and stored away.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES

BUS AND TRAM STRIKERS' DEMANDS CONCEDED.

LONDON, March 28. London's transport strike was settled late to-night after a day of long negotiations between the tramway and bus workers and the employers on a basis conceding to the workers an immediate advance of six shillings with the remaining two shillings demanded by the men fluctuating according to the cost of living index. Thus the men get nearly all they originally demanded. There is no doubt this ending of a difficult crisis was almost entirely due to the intervention of Premier MacDonald, who has been untiring in devoting himself to securing a settlement. Late to-night the Premier, looking pale and exhausted, left Downing Street for a week-end rest at Chequers Court, his country residence.

At Santa Fe a train was wrecked and about thirty boxcars were lifted from the tracks. Several farm homes and barns were destroyed near Crisfield, Kansas. At Vernon, Texas, four persons were injured and severe property damage was done by wind storm. The wind storm swept the Panhandle section of Texas with heavy rain from Amarillo to Childress. Wire communication was disrupted to-night in many sections of the Southwest.

IN COLLISION WITH ROY BRUCE!

In reference to the loss of the schooner Roy Bruce, Mr. T. H. Carter, ship's broker, writes some time ago to the head office of the Canadian Merchant Marine at Montreal asking for particulars of a collision which the captain of the S.S. Canadian Commander had reported. By last mail he received the following reply under date March 21st:

Referring to your letter of March 10, we can add very little to our telegram of 7th inst., with the exception that our master reports that our vessel was struck by unknown schooner on January 16th, 1924, at 12.55 a.m. in or about latitude 45.13 N. longitude 57.13 W., and that after the collision the schooner passing astern was seen to come up in the wind to the northward apparently all right and although our steamer remained stopped for over an hour and signalled with the "Morse" no request was made for assistance, nor were any signals of distress made by the schooner.

Yours truly, Canadian Government Merchant Marine. Per R. B. Teakle, Gen. Manager.

Our Montreal Letter.

(From Our Own Correspondent)
AVARICIOUS LANDLORDS HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR DISEASE.

The housing conditions in many parts of this big city is wretchedly bad. The "Herald" has started a campaign against such conditions. "It is not the poor and the hand-capped people of the city who are hard to educate in regard to sanitary conditions and proper modes of living; it is the landlords who are responsible for the living abodes," stated a public health nurse to a representative of the Herald when asked about housing conditions in Montreal. "It is, of course, the love of money and the greed for quick gain that is at the root of the trouble."

"In the central and older parts of the city there are many houses that are in bad repair. They were built before the development of efficient plumbing and scientific methods of building and perhaps their proprietors were ignorant of the real value of air and sunlight; their age is an excuse for the dilapidated conditions in which they may be found, but what is the discouraging part, in the fight against disease and misery is the fact that houses that will be much better in a very few years are being built to-day—more wooden frames, veneered, as it were with a coating of brick to make them look respectable. They are so cold in the winter time that the family dare not open a door or a window in case of letting escape some of the warmth that may be created inside. One old lady living on St. Dominique Street had to stuff the vent pipe of her lavatory, which was in the kitchen, in order to keep out the cold. In summer time these houses especially the lower ones, are damp and humid; in many of them the plumbing is very poor, which is a bad condition considering that we are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars in this province in a fight against the White Plague," stated this nurse who knows conditions well.

"In the older parts of the city there are some flats or houses that are cheap, three or four rooms for $10.00 and $12.00 a month (one dilapidated house was even found at a rental of $5.00) but in sections where houses have been built within the last ten or fifteen years, they rent anywhere from $18.00 to $35.00 a month, which is not cheap for a badly constructed, poorly lighted and much crowded house of perhaps three or four rooms. Most of the $35.00 houses have cheap baths, which are the pride of the tenants, and which, of course, are a decided advantage."

"It can hardly be said to be the fault of the by-laws of the city, the laws are there, calling for lighting, ventilating, proper plumbing, the mending of leaks in roofs; proper attention to sanpape and refuse, but it seems to be altogether too easy to get away from these laws. In any case," stated this nurse, "this law is not being adhered to and the consequence is that although the city of Montreal is not supposed to have any stums, it has many places where disease has every chance of breeding and the pale-faced delicate looking children in some of these hovels show but small promise for the future."

"The people, as a whole, seem to be becoming educated to the necessity of proper living conditions as a means towards a healthy competent generation, but the landlords seems to be constantly sidestepping their obligations in the desire for gain, was the view expressed.

DELPHIC CLUB MUSIC WEEK.
The Delphic Study Club "Music Week" was a great success. Free concerts were given at the Windsor, Mt. Royal and the Ritz Carlton Hotels, and in several halls throughout the city by leading vocalists and instrumentalists as well as by some of the best string orchestras. Thousands attended the different events, and were highly pleased with the fine concerts.

ST. PATRICK'S TAG DAY A SUCCESS.

The tag day for St. Patrick's Orphanage netted the sum of $14,972. It is expected that when some regular subscribers are heard from that the objective, $15,000 will be realized. Father McShane, in commenting on the spirit manifested, expressed his admiration of the co-operation shown by all classes and denominations stating that when it is considered that tag days are becoming unpopular in Montreal on account of their multiplicity, that money is tight and trade is dull, fourteen thousand dollars in a street collection is really a liberal and generous response and shows a very kindly feeling towards the well known institution.

Splendid tribute was also paid by Father McShane to the workers in the cause, from the organizers and captains to the small lads and lassos who thoroughly enjoyed their work. Tag-days of late, in this city, have become a nuisance, and the people are sick and tired of them. One had feature of them is, the large number of young boys and girls engaged in such work. Not a few of them have learned to be dishonest at their work and either lost or kept the contents of their boxes for their own use.

One clergyman bitterly denounced the "begging" system, and thought the English-speaking parishes, four-year in number, should be able to maintain the 200 orphans at St. Patrick's Home without begging on the public streets. The Alverna Catholic Association got permission to hold a tag day for their work in connection with a Boys' Camp, but owing to the adverse criticism by the clergyman of their boxes for their own use.

THE NEW ENGLISH HOSPITAL.
A campaign for funds for the new Catholic hospital for English-speaking patients has been launched. The objective is $1,000,000. Meetings have been held in several of the parishes, but the attendance at some of them was very slim, and the prospects are not very encouraging. Certainly, unless more united action is shown, the affair will be doomed to failure.

A LARGE NUMBER OF UNEMPLOYED.

The number of unemployed still remains in the thousands. Potentially the winter was not a severe one, and the "unfortunate ones" were not subject to such great hardships and misery as other winters. The slogan, "it's hard to find a job" is very true. Yes, it is hard to find a job, and it was hard during the winter when able-bodied men, mechanics, office hands, and others had to shovel snow for the corporation. A short time ago I was attending a meeting at the Grey Nunnery when I noticed a number of young men entering the place. I was informed, by the Sister in charge, that they were out of employment, and they were looking for something to eat. In a room near the entrance, I noticed a table filled with lunches, and according as each one called, the Sister passed him a lunch. In three hours, over three hundred had called. This charity had been extended every day during the winter, not only at the Grey Nunnery, but at a score of other institutions throughout the city, Sunday being the "rush" day of the week.

Six Reels of the Biggest Story you ever witnessed.

WATCH FOR Monday's Great Show

IF WE ONLY KNEW THEIR TROUBLES.

"When trouble you have hit, Laugh, laugh a little bit. When the world is looking blue, And you don't know what to do, Things will come alright to you When you laugh, laugh a little bit."

There are hundreds of people with whom we come in contact every day, that have troubles galore, in the family circle and outside of it, yet no exterior signs portray such difficulties. They keep the cheerful front and "the smile that never fails." A writer says:

If you knew the inner life of many of the people you work with and do business, and meet socially in the common days, you would be very gentle with them. You would excuse their peculiarities and their absent-mindedness at times. Grief makes life hard for many people. If you knew all the secret burdens and the heart wounds which many carry hidden beneath their smiling faces, you would wonder how they can be as genial and loving as they are in view of the burdens that crush them.

SOME FUNNY INCIDENTS.

R. F. Kibler of Hermosa Beach, Cal., presented an excuse in speeder's court in Los Angeles, that Justice Wood considered entitled him to a suspended sentence. "Gully," Kibler said when he heard the charge that he had driven his car forty-two miles an hour. "But I didn't know I was going so fast. You see, Judge, I had my sweet-heart with me and had just asked her whether it was going to be 'yes' or 'no.' She said 'Yes.'"

The sentence of $40 or forty days was suspended.

One of the most sensational robberies of recent years was the result of a turn of chance. A race course sharp was in a fashionable London hotel when he spilt some ink on his hands. He went to the lavatory to wash out the stains, and on his way he saw a maidervant lock a bed-room door and put the key under the mat. Having washed his hands, the man, seeing nobody about, recovered the key, opened the door, and to his astonishment saw a wonderful array of jewels belonging to a South African mining magnate, and he promptly put them in his pocket. They were worth no less than $58,000.

The thief was caught soon afterward in a clumsy attempt to sell one of the least expensive gems. It was his first theft, and his arrest was due to the fact that he had no knowledge of receivers of stolen property.

After pleading guilty to the charge of drunkenness, Gaspar Messier of Attleboro, Md., was advised by Judge Haggerty to have himself photographed as soon as he left the court and to hang the photograph where he might see it every day.

Messier appeared in court with his face battered and his clothing badly torn. "If you could have a portrait before you as you look now, you would never take another drink in your life," said Judge Haggerty.

One whiff of the "nicest smelling perfume" cost Mrs. Rose Kucharick of Cleveland $2,750, the life savings of herself and her husband.

The perfume clinched a deal in which Mrs. Kucharick was sold part interest in a box of "gold bricks" by a "gold miner," a "real estate agent" and a "jeweler."

She learned the sad truth when she had the box of gold assayed. It was a box of brass lumps worth perhaps 25 cents.

Kucharick now suspects the "perfume" was not all that it was labeled. Police have told him it probably was a drug which the confidence men had given his wife to smell.

A stranger offered to buy the Kucharick restaurant for $2,000. They were ready to sell, so that their eight children would have a good start in life.

Then in walked another man, who announced that he was a gold miner from Canada, and that he had a box of gold bricks to sell. The stranger called the third man, who he declared was a jeweler, to assay the gold. The jeweler applied acid test and pronounced the "gold" pure.

The jeweler offered $5,000. It was accepted. He produced $1,000 and borrowed $500 from the stranger. Kucharick was willing to help but his wife had the money and was unwilling to part with it.

"Here, isn't this nice cologne?" one of the men asked, giving the wife a bottle to smell. One whiff was enough.

"Here's the money," she said. "Take anything you want, if you are sure the gold is real." So they took the money and left the "gold bricks" for security. So far, they haven't come back.

It is related as a good instance of spontaneous Irish wit that during the performance of FAUST in a Dublin theatre something went wrong with the trap that should have let Mephistopheles down to the lower regions. He stuck half-way, and all the efforts of the stage carpenters failing to move him down to the underworld, the curtain was lowered. A voice from the gallery shouted, "Hurrah, boys! Hell's full!"

SCHOOL TROUBLES STILL CONTINUE.

The various school troubles are still in the tapis. The Protestant School Board gave its ultimatum, that it could not help in any way the financial difficulties of the Verdun Protestant schools. The Quebec Legislature has made provisions that next year the Protestant Board will be obliged to take over the Verdun schools. The Montreal Herald under the caption of "Jews and Schools", has the following:

Arising out of the recent discussion of the school question in the Legislature, doubt has arisen as to the constitutionality of the Act of 1903 declaring Jews to be Protestants for all school purposes in this Province and enjoying the same rights and privileges as the Protestants themselves.

If national schools were in vogue in Quebec the question, of course, would not arise. But we have to face facts, and the facts in this case are that the constitution provides for a system of sectarian schools and recognizes only the Catholic and Protestant religions. There is no likelihood of any change in this principle. Therefore, as we do not possess a national school system, and as there is not the slightest indication that we shall do so, we must strive to do justice all round under the system that we have.

The Quebec Chronicle puts the matter in a nutshell when it says: "Regardless of any friction that may have arisen in Montreal we consider it to be of the utmost importance to test the constitutionality of the Act in question for, whatever legal frictions may assume, the plain fact is that Jews are not Protestants and have become so numerous in the Province of Quebec that the system of the past twenty years, framed when their numbers were relatively negligible, is no longer workable—in Montreal at any rate."

"Needless to say, while protecting the constitutional position of Protestantism it is essential that some means shall be found of giving full justice and satisfaction to the Jewish population in our midst and this ought to present no insuperable obstacle if only they consent to adapt themselves to the limitations of the British North American Act and do not insist upon a legal status that the Province never intended to contract them into and which it has no power to confer upon them."

"A Child for Sale" Attacks High Rents

LAST SHOWING AT THE NICKEL TO-NIGHT.

The attraction at the Nickel Theatre last night was the appealing motion picture "A Child For Sale."

Ivan Abramson, who made the picture, always likes to feel that his work is really worth while and pointing a moral. He has written the story and directed the picture with a great deal of sincerity and the result is a film which makes a wide appeal and should be enjoyed by all who see it. Through the story runs a vein of pathos which is feelingly brought out by the players who interpret the roles, and some of the dramatic situations are full of suspense. Bobby Connelly and Little Ruth Sullivan who play the roles of the small children who suffer through poverty make a particular appeal and help wonders toward making the film agreeable.

For particulars regarding the showing of "The Eternal Light," watch Monday's papers.

Our Political Problems

And How to Solve Them.

(By ANALYST.)

"Men of the North! beneath your very eyes, by hearth and home, your real danger lies. Still day by day some hold of freedom falls. Through home-bred traitors fed within its walls,— Men whom yourselves with vote and purse sustain. At posts of honour, influence and gain."
St. John's, or any other important city, is always alive with political gossip, at least ninety per cent. of which has no basis of fact whatever. That is one reason why inquiries into the Pitt Prop, Model Farm, Crown Lands, and other notorious scandals were so slow in coming to a head; for although the gossip about these scandals had been current ever since the election last year, few politicians even, not to speak of statesmen, could be brought to believe in the extent and enormity of the depredations committed. Now people, public opinion was not so important as it is to-day, when the leaders are more dependent for achievement upon the will of the people.

The financial outlook, "abroad as well as at home, is far from encouraging. Ever since the great war the money has been in the hands of a few, profiteers who made a fortune out of the misfortunes of their fellow-sufferers of wartime, men who, clever enough to continue business in spite of all the restrictions put upon it, have reaped large profits from their illicit traffic, for the honest conduct of affairs has become almost impossible under existing conditions. Certain people, having got rich quickly—no matter how!—throw their money about at pleasure resorts and all kinds of amusements, while the man in the street lacks ordinary comforts.

What we badly need in this community just now is a good healthy public sentiment—a sentiment that will make itself felt all over the country. The people look to the press for a purification of the political atmosphere—not to the mercenary and time-serving section of it, but to the honest, independent press. Its power is all-sufficient when properly directed. As James Russell Lowell says:—"See what a pulp it the editor mounts daily, sometimes with a congregation of fifty thousand within reach of his voice, and never so much as a nodder, even, among them! And from a Bible can he choose his text—A Bible which needs no translation, and which no priesthood can shut and clasp from the laity—the open volume of the world, upon which, with a pen of sunshine or destroying fire, the inspired Present is even now writing the the annals of God! Methinks the editor who should understand his calling and be equal thereto, would truly deserve the title which Homer bestows upon Princes. He would be the Moses of our own country; and whereas the old Sinai, silent now, is but the common mountain stared at by the elegant tourist and crawled over by the hammering geologist, he must find his tables of the new law here and among factories and cities in this Wilderness of Sin called Progress and Civilization and be the Captain of our Exodus into the Canaan of a truer political and social order.

In giving his opinion of the other "gentleman of the fourth estate," he (Lowell) observes:—"For which reason I would derive the name Efflor from the verb to effloresce, that being the peculiar profession to which he esteems himself called. He blows up the flames of political discord for no other occasion than that he may thereby handily boll his own pot. I believe there are two thousand of these mutton-loving shepherds in the United States, and of these how many have even the dimmest perception of their immense power, and the duties consequent thereon? Here and there, haply, one. Nine hundred and ninety-nine labor to impress upon the people the great principles of Tweedledum—and other nine hundred and ninety-nine preach with equal earnestness the gospel according to Tweedledee."

But, seriously speaking, upon the safety of a democracy depends the intelligent decision of the masses, a fact which causes the journalism of a country to take on a new and special sphere of activity. It is certainly not too much to say that a country's security, its prosperity, and its welfare, depends in large part upon the quality of its press, so largely does the press constitute the mental food of the people. As the poet puts it:—"True to yourselves, feed freedom's altar-flame With what you have; let others do the same. Spare timid doubters; set like flint your face Against the self-sold knaves of gain and place; Pity the weak, but with unsparring hand Cast out the grafters who infest the land,— From bar, press, pulpit, cast them everywhere. By dint of fasting, if you fall by prayer. And in their place bring men of antique mould Like the grave fathers of the days of old,— Statesmen like those who sought the primal fount Of righteous law, the Sermon on the Mount. So shall your power, with a wise prudence used, Strong but forbearing, firm but not abused, In kindly keeping with the good of all, The nobler maxims of the past recall."

Obviously, then, to rightly form the opinion of the average man, and even the press itself, two kinds of journalism are essential: one which speaks in the language of the street to the man in the street, and one which leads the leaders or forms the basis of world-wide information for the editors, the speakers, the educators, and the executives; in a word, all the leaders of thought. Since the average man is too apt to be interested only in those things which come within his own experience, he is for the most part satisfied with the local news and with the popular magazines. Gradually, and only gradually, the scope of his vision can be enlarged and broadened. However,

"The time demands strong minds, Great hearts, true faith and willing hands; Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog In public duty and in private thinking."
Many and poorly-drawn laws are a prolific source of disputes which overburden our tribunals. As the late Judge Piusant once remarked to me:—"The making of too many laws breeds contempt for all law." Combined with this is a firm belief on the part of Newfoundlanders in the efficacy of all the restrictions put upon reform or to effect any panacea or cure-all. Fewer laws and less faith in the potency of law, co-ordination, and obedience to the laws that are made, would go far to make native ingenuity as effective in matters of government as it has been in the mechanical invention and device. Anyway, it is heartening to know that lawyers recognize the this to-day. Twenty years ago the proceedings of bar associations were filled with ecstasies on the common law and the infallibility of legal decisions. The declarations of bar associations and law institutes to-day evince a promising belief that certain great improvements are imperative, and a determination to realize orderly progress through fewer laws but better and more binding.

Defining vocations in too narrow terms has resulted in the failure of labor unions in this country to produce the able and wise leaders they so much need. The contrast between England and the Overseas Dominions in this respect is striking. Many of the men now at the head of the British Government came from the ranks of labor. Overseas Unionism is not producing able leaders, and their opportunity of service is evident in such an exception to this rule as the last general election here furnishes.

However, desire for "the white-collar job" still rules among our Colonial youth, in spite of high wages prevailing in the trades. The cult of the white-collar has been fostered by mistaken attitudes. The Unions have sought to limit the number of craftsmen available in industry. This policy may have done something to keep wages high, but it has also kept living costs high. Such a policy goes counter to the economic law that work at reasonable rates creates more work.
But to return to those public scandals. It is useless to prophesy, but it is to be hoped that as much as possible of the Government property may be recovered, and the principals punished; that a wise and permanent policy relative to the management of public affairs may be determined upon and established; and that we put an end to the shameless waste, extravagance and corruption which permeates our Government from turret to foundation-stone, from the country village to the capital itself. When I say extravagance and corruption I am not exaggerating the turpitude of the guilty parties. There is very little difference to the taxpayer and the citizen between extravagance in public affairs and corruption in public offices. They both result in the dissipation of public property and the exploitation of the citizen. It all results at last in the impoverishment of the people and the undermining of our institutions.

However, if the corruption which has been exposed by the Commission of Enquiry results in removing the cancerous growth of public prodigality and if men in public places are called to answer for the waste of public funds, then there will be compensation for this sordid, venal revelation. But if nothing permanent is accomplished in the way of raising the standard of public service of establishing decency in our Newfoundland politics, except the recovery of a little property, afterwards to be dissipated, or the punishment of a few individuals while the Treasury raiders are still at large, then the revelation will be largely in vain!

Bain of the land, its canker and its moth! These modern Esaus, bartering truth for broth! Taxing our people with their double claim, As fools for pity, and as knaves for blame; Who, urged by party, sect, or trade within The fell embrace of bribery's sphere of sin, And lose thenceforth from their perverted sight, The eternal difference twixt wrong and right.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

HOW YOU CAN GET YOUR WAY.

We were planning an entertainment for one of those miscellaneous groups who are so hard to entertain. We had thought of several simple games of the kind that anyone can join in without too much instruction. "But if we play those Lucille will be terribly bored," objected a member of the committee. "Well, she is only one out of a dozen. I think most of the rest will like it."

"Yes, but she's so critical." "But the party isn't for her. It's mostly for the other people and they will love it."

Lucille Spells The Party. "Well, I just dread to have her dislike it. I know just how she will act. She will make all the rest of them feel as if the games were silly."

thing of the sort," persisted the courageous one. "Let's go ahead and plan it just as if she weren't going to be there."

So we went ahead. But the fears were justified. Lucille's derision of the simple games made itself inescapably felt and affected the party as such an aura always does.

I know just how she does it. Sharp little comments half under her breath. A little superior smile. The trick of mockery. It's easier than falling off a log, if you want to do it. And so efficacious. It makes people careful to plan the things you like to do when you are going to be present, because they know it's safer.

Walters and Clerks and Club Presidents.

And of course it's not only in the matter of entertainment that the Lucille's of the world receive special consideration. It's in everything.

The waiters at the hotels give them the preference over the more good natured patrons. The clerks in the shops wait on them with extra alacrity. In the club they are put on the kind of committee that they prefer and only with the people they enjoy. "You know Lucille can't bear Mrs. M., she says her voice gives her a headache; we'd better not have them together."

In short if you will be sufficiently sharp tongued, sufficiently outspoken when you aren't pleased, sufficiently critical, sufficiently aloof and supercilious, a great many people will be afraid of you and will try to please you and stand well with you.

Why Doesn't Everyone Do It?

Strange, isn't it, that everyone doesn't try to get his way when it can be done so easily.

Unless by any chance it can be that some people prefer love to fear, and their own respect for themselves as reasonably amiable human beings, ready to take their share of things they don't like, to the satisfaction of special consideration.

Afghan Difficulties Approach Their End

SAYS INDIAN VICEROY.

Delhi, Feb. 18. (A.P.)—The strained relations between India and Afghanistan were discussed by the Viceroy, Lord Reading, in opening the second session of the Indian legislature here, and at the same time he expressed anxiety for the future of the Indian reforms.

Alluding to the rumors of the alleged intentions of the British Government toward Afghanistan, and of the latter in relation to the situation, the Viceroy declared them to be without foundation. "Certain questions have, however, been under discussion between the two governments," Lord Reading said.

"Those discussions are now nearing a satisfactory solution. The discussions owe their origin to outrages, notably those at Barshore and Spinilla, committed on our frontier by Wazirs domiciled in Afghanistan. They were complicated by the execution of these outrages from a base in Afghanistan and by the removal of loot to Afghan territory. In some cases also the perpetrators were deserters from the British Indian military units who had found employment in Afghanistan."

subjects murdered two unarmed British officers near Landi Kotal and fled to Afghanistan where they were arrested by order of the government, but later escaped from custody. Meanwhile, the members of the Kohat gang who were not Afghan subjects, the men who had murdered Mrs. Ellis and abducted her daughter, made good their escape to Afghan territory.

"The outrages to which I have made allusion were completely liquidated during the present month; as delicate negotiations were in progress, you will realize that it was not possible to make a statement about these developments at an earlier date.

"I cannot conceal from you that the political situation in its constitutional aspects causes me some anxiety for the future of the reforms. I still wonder what purpose beneficial this session of the legislature, and may thus carry India further forward to the fulfillment of her legitimate aims and aspirations."

"It is of the greatest moment to India at this juncture that her elected representatives of their present position should make a wise choice as regards the course they will pursue. I earnestly pray that calm judgment and a desire for mutual understanding and goodwill may characterize this session of the legislature, and may thus carry India further forward to the fulfillment of her legitimate aims and aspirations."

RHEUMATISM.

With costly salves I rub my calves, my fetlocks and my toes; as I anoint a chafevered joint I talk of human woes. The rheumatism has been in his biz since Adam went his ways: It racked the limbs of Sunless Jims in prehistoric days. It spoiled the lives of ancient wies who lived in caves or trees; old wies still wail and doctors fail to heal this dread disease. The learned men say from day to day achievements are quite grand; they talk of germs in stately terms we cannot understand. They isolate and then abate the germ of itch or mumps; the microbes bold that cause a cold are forced to bump the bumps. But rheumatism! The worst there is among the standard ills, still racks the frames of gents and dames, defying purple pills. The ancient doc who used to walk beneath primeval trees was just as wise as modern gres; confronting this disease, He boiled up snakes to cure the aches rheumatic patients knew, prescribed a peck and charged like heck for his unholy brew. And doctor men have not since then advanced along the road; they cry, "Gee whis," to Rheumatism, "you have us buffaloed!"

Ellis Island Order

Second Class to Undergo Ordeal Like Steerage Passengers—Widespread Protest.

New York.—Commissioner Henry Curran, of Ellis Island, issued an order recently that all aliens arriving second class will have to pass through Ellis Island the same as steerage passengers instead of landing at the pier with first-class as heretofore.

In addition the Commissioner has informed the steamship companies that no aliens travelling by first class will be examined at the quarantine station after 7.30 in the evening, thus necessitating the detention of vessels at quarantine until the morning after their arrival.

Steamship, hotel and railroad companies are appealing against the order. They declare that it will have the certain effect of ruining the tourist trade by diverting travellers to Canadian ports.

British shipping offices in London yesterday were amazed at the decision of the American Commissioner of Immigration.

According to the latest official statistics, the second-class passengers from England to America represent the largest section of the traffic. They exceed the first-class passengers by 50 per cent, and the steerage passengers by a smaller percentage.

It is stated (says the Central News) that the new order will not affect bona-fide tourists or business visitors to the United States.

Some emigrants, thinking to avoid the existing regulations, have booked second class passage accommodation, and the new order is merely to prevent this subterfuge.

Many doctors and nurses recommend Musterole not only for colds but in cases of bronchitis, sore throat, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, grip, neuralgia and congestion. Taken in time it may prevent pneumonia. There is nothing just like Musterole or nearly so good for any of the above ailments.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM WHITEWOOD, 1740-1763.

In the year 1740 there was born to Captain John Whitehead and his spouse Mary, in the seaboard village of Lime Regis in Dorset, England, their first boy.

It was a very happy day in the Whitehead family when Mrs. Whitehead was well enough to take the baby to church for baptism.

There was nothing in particular to distinguish Master William as he grew up, from any ordinary intelligent boy.

Captain John Whitehead, as commander of the brig "Swallow," was one of the best known captains in Twillingate, early in the eighteenth century for he was in the employ of John Slade of Poole who carried on a business in Twillingate at the time.

When William Whitehead was sixteen years of age, he was taken from school and apprenticed to this firm of John Slade, under the guidance of his father, and on board the brig "Swallow," to learn the practical duties of seamanship.

Thus in the year 1756—just as the celebrated seven years war had begun—he made his first acquaintance with Newfoundland, when at the close of her maiden voyage across the Atlantic, the "Swallow" dropped anchor off the well equipped premises of John Slade.

After several voyages every year for three years between Poole and Twillingate, Captain Whitehead was chartered by Benjamin Lester & Co. of Poole, to take a cargo of general merchandise to their overseas establishment at Trinity, Newfoundland.

This meant a pleasant change of scenery after the monotony of the past years; and introduced him to a new batch of friends, who, like those at Twillingate, were more than kind to him.

Here, in Trinity, in addition to other descendants of Dorset and Hants, he met a family of Taverners whose forebears had been old friends of his in Poole. The Taverners were among the oldest, and most highly respected people in Trinity in those days; and the fact that Amy Taverner, one of Jacob Taverner's sisters, was married to John Garland who was then in charge of the Lester interests in Trinity, gave Captain Whitehead and his crew many privileges which they thoroughly enjoyed during their stay.

The captain's son, William, became a general favorite, and, with his father's permission, he spent his evenings on shore and usually at the house of Jacob and Catherine Taverner.

William's chief attraction, however, was Betsy, one of Jacob's daughters, who was about his own age. Whilst the captain, and Mr. and Mrs. Taverner were deeply interested in recalling the old Dorset days, and recounting history to date; the young people had fallen seriously in love with each other and ignoring the past, they were outlining the history of the next four years, so far as they were concerned.

There were no concrete sidewalks in those days from Lester's premises, Trinity, "around the point" and along the cliffs to Taverner's Point; and the many nasty falls over the ragged edges of the stones, and the scrambling through the woods in the darkness of night after night, made their many marks on William's—best courtin' suit. Betsy had not overlooked this, and with all his clothes carefully got, he had to be careful.

The old dog came to the edge of the bank and disputed his right to go any further. A word or two from William notified the pass-word; the old dog knew his voice, and together they went to-wards the house. It was a moment of suspense to William. He rapped, and in response Betsy opened the door, and like the old dog she knew his voice.

It was early morning when William got back to the vessel. During those quiet hours that intervened, he and Betsy had much to talk about, re the past, present, and future. Feeling quite sure that within a year from the present, with Mr. Garland's influence, he would be in Trinity again, and in charge of his own vessel, they reiterated their plans of three years before—so he married her.

There are three other entries in the same old Registers, viz. 1763. Interred. Robert Thomas, servant to Capt. Whitehead. All that I know about them is what I have gathered from the events of their lives as given in the old Church Registers, and endorsed by local traditions, and the headstones in the old churchyard.

AN OUTLINE HISTORY OF THE SWEET FAMILIES, 1740-1822.

I have been asked by one, who like myself, is interested in the past, to give him some information about the Sweet families of a hundred and fifty years ago.

Then in the fall of 1763 the "Polly" dropped anchor between Lester's wharf and Taverner's Point, Trinity; and as soon as William's work was done (remembering the ruggedness of the path along the shore) he got into the ship's boat, and dropped quietly around the point to the beach at Taverner's Back Cove.

Then of the other William Sweet Sr., who died in Trinity, I find the following entries:— 1773. Married, William Sweet Sr., planter in Trinity, and Sarah Taverner.

1775. Married, Thomas Dampier and Ann Sweet. 1807. Interred, Mrs. Ann Dampier, daughter of William and Sarah Sweet.

1814. Interred, Sarah, wife of William Sweet. 1822. Interred, William Sweet Sr. aged 78 years.

There are some other entries re John and Mary Sweet. They were married before the Marriage Register was begun. Hence though there is no record of their marriage, a son to John and Mary Sweet named Andrew is recorded as having died in 1763; and another son John who died in 1777; while John Sweet, the father of those two boys, died in 1767, and his widow, Mary Sweet, died in 1785.

How to Prevent Biliousness. Doctors warn against remedies containing powerful drugs and alcohol.

habitant of this Harbour." On that of John Sweet, whose age is given as 44, the first two lines of the epitaph are: "Death's sudden stroke on me was very sore, Just as I turned the age of forty-four."

William Sweet Sr. once owned the meadow now belonging to Mr. Hussey, on the north side of St. Paul's Church, Trinity. When the Road Commission of 1825 gave to Mr. Garland that piece of land between Mr. Sweet's meadow and the church Road, in lieu of all the land that Mr. Garland had given for public roads; it was stipulated that a right of way be presented from the Church Road to Mr. Sweet's meadow.

Don't Say— "Just a Sore Throat"

IN a few days, you know, "just a sore throat" may be something much more serious. For science has proved that the throat is not only the first spot reached by infectious germs, but also forms the ideal soil for them to multiply on.

Throat protection, therefore, means germ destruction and is a duty that you owe your health. It is easily achieved by the regular use of Formamint—the germ-killing throat tablet.

Formamint (which is endorsed by over 5,000 American physicians) is the scientific way of disinfecting the mouth and the throat. Handy to have with you—pleasing in taste—it frees an efficient germicide that mixes with the saliva and so reaches where gargles cannot go.

And a tablet taken occasionally during the day not only brings grateful and immediate relief from "sore throat"—but affords protection against even more distressing ailments that so often follow infection of the throat linings. At all druggists.

Fertilizer Must Be Smelly

Odorless fertilizer is now produced in great quantity, but the farmers will have none of it, so the makers have to "sweeten" it with strong-smelling material, so that it will be considered effective. Says an editorial writer in Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering:

There is an ancient tradition that might be phrased, "All good fertilizer has a bad odor." It is a tradition that has in it more of antiquity than truth. When the early farmers realized that the addition of manure to the soil brought better crops, this now white-haired tradition was born a lusty babe of questionable parentage, and through the centuries it has survived. Before this scientific Chemistry was born, tradition passed upon fertilizer and said good or bad after taking one smell. Now we talk in terms of per cent. potash, phosphorus and nitrogen and forget about the old days, but tradition is not yet dead.

During a recent inspection of a modern fertilizer plant in which the process and layout attracted our attention, we idly picked up a handful of the product and sniffed it, noting that there was no odor. Observing the gesture, the superintendent inquired if we would really like to smell something, and offered for our consideration a product of powerful and penetrating odor. It had personality and verve. Unmistakably it was fertilizer!

This, the superintendent explained, is used to "sweeten" the product of the plant. A small percentage only is necessary and it is added because the farmer really feels that he is being cheated if he cannot smell fertilizer. So in addition to putting in a small quantity for flavoring, a few sherrils are placed at the door of the freight-car so that the farmer will smell it as soon as he opens the door. Almost invariably he picks up a handful, smells it and pronounces it good fertilizer. The ruse does no harm, because the offensive material has the same fertilizer value as the odorless product of the plant. Thus does tradition persist in exerting its influence even in the shadow of technical operation and control.

Pilgrims Visit Daily

MEMORIAL TO WIFE ERECTED BY PREMIER.

London, March 5. (A.P.)—The achievement of Ramsay MacDonald in rising from an envelope-licking clerk to the highest political position in Great Britain is tinged with tragedy in the thought that his wife, who labored with him in his struggles to improve the position of the poor, died before great honors came to him.

A memorial erected by Mr. MacDonald and her friends to Mrs. MacDonald in front of their former home in Lincoln's Inn Fields has, with Labor's advent to power, changed from an unsung marble group and wooden bench to a center of public pilgrimage. Daily hundreds leave the rumbling traffic of Fleet Street and the Strand to stroll through the quiet little park near which the memorial—with the woman's arms outstretched to welcome a host of little children—identifies itself thus: "This seat was placed here in memory of Margaret Ethel MacDonald, who spent her life in helping others."

Mrs. MacDonald died in 1911, leaving five children, none of them grown at the time, to the care of their father. Her death must have saddened many other children, for all her life she had devoted time, thought and work to improving the lot of little ones in poverty. As a school girl she worked at a small boys' club in Kensington, and later education claimed her keen interest. To the grown-up poor, as well as their offspring, she lent a hand of help, one of her principal aims being to improve the working conditions of housewives and charwomen. Mrs. MacDonald's interests were political as well as humanitarian, but perhaps the former was but a means of attaining her ambitions in the latter respect. She was the daughter of Dr. J. H. Gladstone, a scientist of some repute, and she first met Mr. MacDonald in 1895. Later, for years, their home was crowded, once every three weeks, with men and women busy in the service of the Labor Party. But her home was not a political salon, as are the drawing-rooms of many of the wealthy wives of politicians. Mostly it was a place where friends were always welcome.
