Studebaker

STUDEBAKER "35" Touring Car. $1,650 F.O.B. Victoria.

Notice first that this is a six-passenger car. Instead of the usual five-passenger touring car, we have chosen this new but far more convenient and logical plan, of making the "35" a six-passenger car, with two seats of the disappearing, collapsible type. The body is long and handsome. The upholstery is rich, and the cushions so deep and comfortable that it seems incredible that they can be placed on a $1,650 car. With the 116-inch wheel base, the STUDEBAKER "35" really enters the big car class. Yet we shall build 25,000 of this type during the coming year, and the price is much lower than any other big car which approaches it. Two other models, the Studebaker "25" and six, have the same pleasing lines and finish. Look into these cars before you purchase. We can show you the reason why people are buying Studebakers.

SEATTLE

One of the very few interesting affairs of the past few weeks was the ceremony uniting in marriage Miss Julia Kirkendall Loose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. U. K. Loose, and Mr. Edward Bradley Ballinger, which was performed at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening, July 30th, by Rev. M. A. Matthews in the First Presbyterian Church.

To the strains of the processional music, modulating into the wedding march, which was played by Dr. Bruce Gordon Kingsley, the bridal party came down the aisle, marked with white satin ribbons and clusters of sweet peas which topped the pews and took their stand at the altar which was banked with palms, starred with white lillies.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was robed in white ivory charmeuse, pearl trimmed, with lace bodice, her long veil caught up with orange blossoms. She carried a shower of white bridal roses.

Miss Ella Wowms, the maid of honor, was in a white embroidered net gown with pale green sash and green Juliette cap, carrying a shower bouquet of white sweet peas knotted with pale green ribbons. The bridesmaids wore white embroidered lingerie frocks, with sashes, short tulle veils and shower ribbons of delicate hues. Miss Frances Hubbell of Ellensburg and Miss Harriet Rowley of Billings, Mont., with pale blue, Miss Ada Wick of Warren, O., Miss Marion Bradley of Middleton, Conn., with pale pink, and Miss Elizabeth Sanden and Miss Margaret Panton with pale lavender.

The groom was attended by Mr. William Hill as best man. The ushers were Mr. Lauron Hanford, Mr. Gerald Shannon, Mr. Edmund Bowden, Jr., Mr. Francis Fitch, Mr. Albert Pierce and Mr. Benjamin Hershey.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents, 1411 Madison Street, followed the ceremony.

Baskets of pink roses and sweet peas gave a bridal effect to the rooms, the serving table being centered by a mound of pink roses, over which pink shaded candles cast a rosy glow. Mrs. M. E. Downs and Mrs. William Rankin Ballard dispensed hospitality at the coffee urns, while Mrs. Frank Fretwell presided at the punch bowl, assisted by Miss Kathleen and Miss Marguerite Gaffney and Miss Beatrice Clapp.

Judge and Mrs. Richard A. Ballinger received with the bride's parents. Mrs. Loose was in a white satin gown trimmed with duchesse lace. Mrs. Ballinger was in white brocaded charmeuse trimmed with black jetted lace and black velvet girdle. Mrs. Downs wore a pink and lavender crepe de chine trimmed with maribou and turquoise velvet; Mrs. Ballard, a green charmeuse with light over-drape; Mrs. Fretwell, a lace-trimmed white charmeuse; Miss Kathleen Gaffney, pink charmeuse, bead overdrape; Miss Marguerite Gaffney, white lace; Miss Beatrice Clapp, bead-trimmed pink charmeuse.

Assisting in the receiving were: Mrs. Harry F. Sharpless, in white charmeuse, trimmed with black lace and beads; Mrs. William Gaffney, in white brocaded charmeuse; Mrs. Samuel Weston French imported frock; Mrs. M. A. Matthews blue with black robe; Mrs. Bradley, pale gray under black robe.

Miss Frances Hubbell of Ellensburg, caught the bride's bouquet. Mr. Gerald Shannon obtained the ring.

Mr. and Mrs. Ballinger left the same night for a motoring trip. Their return they will be at home after September 15 at 3811 Howell Street.

Miss Helen Austin of St. Paul has been staying the past month with Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt Shaw, 515 Boylston Avenue North.

Miss Lea and Miss Ruth Gazzam entertained with a dance Saturday, August 2nd, at their summer home at Crystal Springs, a special steamboat carrying the young people over.

President and Mrs. Thomas Kane entertained about 150 students of the state summer school Tuesday evening at an informal dance. Flowers, foliage and pennants made the scene a gay one.

Mrs. Elwood Newlin, of Los Angeles, and Miss Emma Hadley, Whittier, Cal., were the guests on Friday, August 1st, of their country cousin, Elbridge A. Stuart, of Capitol Hill, spending Sunday, August 3rd, with Mr. Addison Stuart and his family at their country home at Gilberton on the Sound.

The party included Miss Julia Sully, Miss Caroline Day, Miss Josephine M. McLaughlin, Miss Vincent Pierpont, Mr. Harold Horton, Mr. Charles Hemrich, and Mrs. T. A. Thomas, chaperons.

Several hundred guests including many from out of town, were present Friday evening, August 15th, at the Tennis Ball, the summer annual dance given in connection with the Tennis Tournament, in which Seattle society never failingly is interested.

It was a brilliant event. Christensen's Hall, where the ball place, was thronged with beautifully gowned women and their escorts. Besides the large number of club members and tennis devotees present, the fashionable set was there. The presence too, of many maids yet too young to make their debut; and youths, young in years but experienced in wielding the racket, and in executing the latest of the many new dances, added zest to the evening.

With few exceptions, all taking part in the tournament were amateurs. The hall was simply but effectively decorated with hanging baskets of pink gladioli and Shasta daisies. Ropes of smilax were suspended from the chandelier to the corners of the hall.

A program of two-steps and waltzes, in which the tango was occasionally introduced, was enthusiastically danced to the strains of Curtis' orchestra.

Another pleasing feature of the evening was the elegant collation which was served at mid-night in the banquet hall adjoining. Set tables were used, each having an attractive epergne of summer flowers.

The dance was preceded by several smart dinners, the largest of which was that at which Mr. and Mrs. George Hurd of New York, were hosts.

The committee arranging the details this year consisted of Nathaniel Paschall, Mr. Stuart B. Maxwell, Mr. H. K. D. Pease and Mr. Harvey C. Carr.

The Patronesses were Mrs. Charles H. Rollins, Mrs. William Pitt Trimble, Mrs. Montgomery Russel, Mrs. Carleton Huisken, Mrs. E. A. The enterprise shown by Miss Hetriek, in opening an importing millinery parlor, in Victoria, B. C., and which is without doubt the finest millinery establishment in the west, is to be commended. There is no doubt that the La Beau Monde of Victoria, as in other cities, want the latest in head dress, and a glimpse of the many exclusive French models shown at Belmont House will convince them it is useless to go elsewhere for a more chic creation.

Mrs. Frank Adams and her mother, Mrs. E. B. Marvin, of Angeles, held a reception in the afternoon of July 31st, at the residence of the former, Fernwood, Gorge Road. Between fifty and sixty people were present, and the gathering passed off most enjoyably. The house was charmingly decorated with heliotrope, sweet peas and gypsophila. Miss Marvin and Miss Vera Adams assisted in receiving and Mrs. Walter Adams poured tea, while the Misses Adams served the guests.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at Christ Church Cathedral Thursday, August 14th, when Very Rev. Dean Doull united in marriage Mr. William Kennedy Hooper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hooper of Winnipeg, and Mabel Lillian, eldest daughter of Mr. Robert Grant, former M. P. P. for Comox, and now residing at 33 Vancouver Street, Dr. James Grant, brother of the bride, was best man, and Mrs. James Grant was matron of honor. The bride looked charming in a tailored suit of creme French serge with a large white chiffon hat trimmed with handsome plumes, while she carried a sheaf of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. After the ceremony, the immediate friends of the happy pair sat down to a dainty repast at the home of the bride's parents, the table being beautifully decorated with festoons of smilax and pink sweet peas descending from the chandeliers to a handsome white and gold pillar at either side of the table, the decorative scheme having been carried out by Mrs. T. Legge. A number of beautiful wedding presents testified to the popularity of the happy pair, who are spending their honeymoon on Campbell River. The bride traveled in a brown costume.

The marriage of Mr. Henry Greenshields Lockwood, of Vancouver, and Miss Margaret Foster, sister of Mr. W. W. Foster, Deputy Minister of Public Works, Victoria, took place August 14th, in St. Paul's Church, Vancouver. The rector, Rev. F. A. Chadwick officiated, and the bride, who was given away by her brother, wore white charmeuse, over a kilted underskirt, veiled in beautiful Brussels point lace, the gift of her grandmother. The slightly low cut bodice and sleeves were also trimmed with the same lace, and the gown was completed with a long pointed train. With this she wore a fillet of orange blossoms, with pendant ends and a tulle veil edged with seed pearls and carried a bouquet of white roses and maiden hair ferns, Mrs. Francis Jones, of Victoria, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and the two bridesmaids were Miss Graeme Lockwood, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Grace Simpson, of Victoria, while little Miss Ruth Foster, the bride's niece was flower girl. Mrs. Jones wore pale mauve satin made slightly in panier effect and relieved with rose pink, and a shepherdess hat of black shirred tulle trimmed with pink and mauve plumes and pink roses. Miss Lockwood wore a creme colored Mechlin lace dress and a helmet-shaped hat trimmed with black ribbon velvet streamers and mercury wings, and Miss Simpson was attired in wild rose pink satin veiled in ninon, her pink hat trimmed with buckles of tiny pink for-get-me-nots. All carried bouquets of sweet peas. Little Miss Foster wore a simple frock of white ninon, with a quaker bonnet of white silk relieved with guipure lace and roses, and carried a basket of sweet peas. Mr. Harold Ferguson was best man and Messrs. L. Toole, Herbert Green and R. L. Maitland acted as ushers. A reception was afterwards held at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. F. W. Foster, 1441 Thurlow Street, Mrs. W. W. Foster, of Victoria, being among those helping to receive the many guests. Later on Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood left for Shawnigan Lake where they spent their honeymoon, the bride traveling in a tailor-made brown cloth costume with a white hat trimmed with a mount of brown ostrich feathers. They will make their future home in Vancouver.

The members of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club reserve great credit for the splendid hospitality they are extending to visiting yachtsmen and for the tremendous amount of work they are putting forth to make every event a success.

There were about one hundred and fifty couples present, many being visitors from the mainland and Seattle.

During the past month yachting cruises have been a most enjoyable form of entertainment, in fact there is no place where a person can have so much enjoyment, at this time of the year, as on the water.

Mr. John Arbuthnot together with his wife and Miss Rose Arbuthnot, entertained friends from the mainland on their palatial cruiser "Colleen" the latter part of August. The party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. J. Y. Griffin of Vancouver, Miss Zeta Myers of Winnipeg, Miss Aileen Allen of Vancouver, Mrs. J. S. Kendall, Mr. Abe Kendall and Mr. W. McKay.

The trip took them around the east coast of Vancouver island and over to the mainland of British Columbia where the scenery is unrivalled anywhere in the world.

On page 19 we show a picture of the "Colleen" rounding the outer harbor of Victoria.

The most distinguished and cosmopolitan gathering of scientific men that ever assembled in the City of Victoria was seen in the Alexandra Club Tuesday afternoon, August 26th, when, under the aegis of the Provincial Government, the two parties of the Geological Congress joined with one local men in making a splendid aggregation.

The great hall of the club was practically filled with the men of all nations, there being about 200 in all present. Acting-Premier er occupied the chair, and with him were seated Professor [unclear], the president of the congress, and Hon. Louis Coderre, Minister of Mines. Ranged along the leading table were a number of distinguished scientists from all over the world, and throughout the hall names were frequently called that have often been heard of in the great works of scientific research.

His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Paterson was a prominent representative of Province affairs, as were also the Hon. Dr. Young, Minister of Education, Hon. W. R. Ross, Minister of Lands, Hon. Taylor, Minister of Public Works; Hon. Price Ellison, Minister of Finance and Agriculture; Hon. D. M. Eberts, Speaker of the House; Chief Justice Macdonald, Mr. H. B. Thomson, P., and others. There were also present Lord Prevost Stevenson of Glasgow, Senator Macdonald, Mayor Morley, Col. Roy and A. E. Smith, United States Consul.

The function was rendered memorable as well as enjoyable by a series of brief speeches from the several leaders of the congress. In this connection it should be said that to many of them the chief charm lay in the fact that the foreign delegates spoke to the audience in their native tongue. While the speaking was in progress ladies entered the gallery, and were participants in the latter part of the program. Excellent music was provided throughout the luncheon festivities; as the representative of each national rose to deliver his thanks, the orchestra struck up the national air of the country in question. In this sense the function was an object lesson in national anthems and imperial hymns, which appeared to be greatly enjoyed.

Miss Butchart entertained at a smart luncheon last month at her beautiful home at Tod Inlet, in honor of Miss Phyllis Mason. Among the guests were Mrs. J. Rithet, Mrs. B. Heisterman, Mrs. Melbourne, Mrs. G. Johnston, Mrs. Ritchie, Mrs. T. O. McKay, Miss Mara, Miss Muriel Dunsmuir, Miss Combe, Miss Bodwell, Miss Pitts and Miss Garrett (Seattle).

The tennis tournament has been well patronized by La Beau monde of Victoria, throughout the past month. Among the well-known people present were recognized Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Roper, Mrs. Walter Langley, Mrs. Victor Eliot, Mrs. Charles Gore, (Vancouver), Hon. D. M. Eberts, Miss Eberts, Miss Mabel Eberts, Mr. and Mrs. Foulkes, Mrs. Wilmot, Mrs. Norman Rant, Mrs. Chator Paine, Miss Blackwood, Mrs. Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Garrett, Dr. Hudson, Miss Hudson, Miss Marion Dunsmuir, Mrs. Cecil, Mrs. J. J. Shallcross, Miss Devereaux, Judge and Mrs. Lapman, Captain Harker, Mr. and Mrs. William Blake, Mrs. J. C. Donald, Miss Ethel Bruce, Mrs. Basil Prior, Miss Agnes McKay, Mrs. Garnett Hughes, Rev. J. W. Flinton, Miss Sweet, Mr. A. D. B. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Inglis, Miss Perkins, Mr. H. M. Guernsey, Mrs. Wolfenden, Miss Madge Wolfenden, Mr. W. P. D. Dixon, Mrs. Gordon, Miss Cotsworth, Miss Marie Camsusa, Mrs. L. A. Genge, Miss Callingham, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Matterson, Mr. Betz, Mr. H. Pocock, Mr. McCallum, Mr. Palethorpe, Mr. Boyce Coombe, Mrs. Love, the Messrs. Forrest, Mrs. J. A. Kinloch, Miss Dumbleton, Mr. Harrison, Mr. W. W. Boulton, Miss Pegg, Mrs. George Howell and others.

Mrs. Scriven returned to Victoria in August after having spent a number of months in California for the benefit of her health. She was accompanied back to Victoria by Mrs. Praeger, who is the guest of Mrs. E. A. Duncan, Cadboro bay Road. Mrs. Scriven, who, with the Archdeacon, is staying at the Dallas Hotel, is receiving the warmest of welcomes back to Victoria from her host of friends in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Angus Campbell have just returned from an extended buying trip to Europe occupying the past three months. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell have visited many of Europe's celebrated fashion centres, including London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna and Switzerland, returning by way of New York, Montreal, Toronto and Chicago.

The Daughters of the Empire achieved one of their greatest triumphs in the magnificent ball held last evening at the Empress Hotel, under their auspices, to welcome Captain Halsey and officers of H. M. S., New Zealand. Justly famed as Victoria has always been for the success of her social gatherings, it is possible that no more noteworthy assemblage of fair women and brave men, to quote the old Byronic phrase, has ever been seen in this city, and the ladies who worked so indefatigably for the success of the function deserve every credit.

The guests assembled in the lounge in the new wing of the hotel, which had been turned into a drawing-room, for with this as well as the rest of the apartments, Manager Jackson had spared no pains in assisting the members of the order to make the undertaking a success. The deep blue of the upholstering made an admirable background for the many lovely costumes displayed. The guests were played into the ballroom by the pipers' band.

As the last strains of the bagpipes died away the 88th Fusiliers band, with Mr. Heaton at the piano, burst forth into the strains of the National anthem. This was followed by the singing of two verses of "Rule Britannia" by Mrs. J. Macdonald Fahey. Surrounded by soldiers and sailors, and wearing the striking robes in which she appeared at the recent Kermess, Mrs. Fahey made a splendid and striking figure, and it is unlikely that her beautiful voice had ever been heard to greater advantage as it rang through the room.

Dancing commenced with a set of Lancers, although it was noteworthy that only the official set remained faithful to the programme, the remainder of the dancers preferred the more modern two-step.

The ballroom was exquisitely decorated with Empire wreaths of deep pink roses and gypsophila, which showed to great advantage against the white walls, the beautiful glass chandeliers being also covered with roses. The flags of England, Canada and New Zealand were also displayed, the scarlet uniforms of the bandsmen adding an effective finishing touch.

Supper was served at midnight in the palmroom and in the large diningroom. His Honor took in Mrs. Henry Croft, Regent of the Camosun Chapter, and Admiral Reynolds brought Mrs. Paterson. A delicious menu was served, the cards bearing the English and New Zealand flags. Dancing was afterward resumed and continued until late in the morning, the dancers seeming loathe to leave the brilliant scene.

The Bishop of Columbia and Very Rev. the Dean of Columbia were among the spectators.

Many beautiful gowns, gracefully worn, by Victoria's most charming hostesses and fairest daughters, added to the beauty of the picture. Mrs. Paterson was gowned in white satin, with gold lace in panel effect; Lady McBride wore grey brocaded satin with purple velvet ceinture; Mrs. Gordon Hunter, mauve brocaded satin; Mrs. W. J. Bowser, who was accompanied by the Attorney-General, pale blue with white lace overdress; Mrs. A. E. McPhillips looked very handsome in pink brocaded satin with lace; Mrs. Henry Croft wore deep purple chiffon with a back panel in velvet forming a train; Mrs. Hasell wore black velvet, with beautiful old lace; Mrs. Eberts, cream satin; Miss Eberts, royal blue chiffon over satin; Miss Mabel Eberts, pale blue brocaded satin and lace.

With the chic and beautiful Kitty Gordon in the title role, "The Enchantress," one of the liveliest and most successful musical comedies ever written by the prolific and versatile Victor Herbert, will have its beauties unravelled by Jos. M. Gaites remarkable production at the Moore Theatre, four nights and Wednesday matinee, starting Sept. 28th. This engagement, since it was first announced, is the most talked about attraction of the current season, and the fact that the entertainment will introduce Miss Gordon for the first time here, the interest is doubly manifest. For five months this attraction caused Broadway to do considerable talking owing to its splendors, and since the New York production is positively surrounding Miss Gordon, the richness of the engagement can be estimated at first thought.

With the aid of divers beautiful gowns, her well known stately and charming presence, and especially some splendid musical numbers, which Victor Herbert composed, Miss Gordon will attempt to continue the spread of the fame of "The Enchantress," among the local theatregoers. It is a genuine light opera, brimming with delightful humor and woven around a charming love story of a mythical kingdom on the Danube. Its romance is of the "Prisoner of Zenda," and "Graustark," order, full of plot, and counterplot in which the regent endeavors to steal the throne from the youthful crown prince through the sirenic wiles of the opera singer, Vivien Savery, the character taken by Miss Gordon. Climaxes of a remarkable loveable nature develop through the first act while in the second act the prince just as he is relinquishing his throne for Vivien, finds that she is a princess by birth, thereby ending the story very happily.

There's always something about Victor Herbert's opera that's a little better than the work of other modern composers. One leaves the theatre with the feeling that he has heard wholesome music, and as usual, when Herbert music is played, there's one song that stands out—a sort of haunting melody, "Come little Fishes," "Rose, Lucky Rose," "All Your Own Am I," "Art is Calling Me," (I want to be a Prima Donna) and "The Land of My Own Romance," contains melodies that will be remembered for a long time. Mr. Gaites positively surrounds Miss Gordon with the same $60,000 production which amazed the patrons of the New York Theatre when the piece received its premiere. Unless all signs fail, this engagement will be the banner number of the current season.

OFFICER 666

If the surest test of a good farce lie in the laughter which follows in its wake, there can be no doubt that "Officer 666" has qualified among the season's elect in its class. Moreover, it has placed the name of Mr. Augustine MacHugh, its author, in the list of lucky playwrights to whom fortune, if not great fame, has come almost overnight. Although its foundation is no more substantial than a variant of the time honored expedient of mistaken identity, it is, nevertheless, light in movement, so incessant in incidents and so plentifully bed with surprises that audiences must be always on the alert to pace with it.

The succession of absurd adventures takes place in a Fifth Avenue drawing room during the lapse of only a few hours. Travers Gladwin, a rich young amateur art collector, who has travelled the earth with his friend, Whitney Barnes, in search of a new sensation, re- unexpectedly to find it waiting him, ready-made, at home. With the help of a dishonest valet, a notorious picture thief, Alfred Wilson, who has assumed Gladwin's name, taken possession of the premises and is waiting ready to despoil the art collection of its treasures. The real Gladwin had also won the affection of a too trustful young girl, Helen Burton, and is preparing to elope with her that very night. Earlier in the afternoon, the real Gladwin has seen Helen in a restaurant and her pretty face has made an impression on his susceptible heart. He comes face to face with her a few hours later in the drawing room of his own house, where she has gone to arrange the final details of the elopement. How to rescue Helen and at the same time save his pictures, becomes the problem which confronts Gladwin. With his friend Barnes, who is quite too thick-witted to be of much assistance, he sets about the task. Uppermost in his mind is a desire to protect the girl from unseemly notoriety.

Gladwin bribes a convenient policeman to lend him his uniform and other insignia of authority, and returns to his house to surprise Wilson in the act of cutting the most valuable pictures from their frames. As Helen has not yet arrived, there is nothing to do but warn and warn her of her peril. Meanwhile Gladwin gets some astonishing information from Wilson, who is an art connoisseur as well as a thief, regarding the worthlessness of several of the canvases for which he has paid extravagant amounts; and to keep up the deception he is practicing, he finds himself compelled to aid the thief in pilfering the collection.

At the appointed hour Helen arrives to keep her engagement, and the real Gladwin gives the alarm to the policeman who has been hiding in the house. This minion, Officer 666 of the title, has, meanwhile, grown resentful against Gladwin for having kept his uniform so long and subjected him to the risk of discipline. The cool picture thief proves equal to the emergency and succeeds in convincing the policeman that the real Gladwin is the impostor and that he Wilson is the actual owner of the property. Even Helen, who has at first heeded the warning of Gladwin, begins to grow dubious and presently the society knight errant finds himself arrested as a thief.

Opportunely, however, Gladwin's Japanese servant has called in other policemen. The tangle of identities is about to be straightened out when Whitney Barnes turns up and by his blundering identifies the real Gladwin as the impostor. The Culprit is on the point of making off with his plunder when a detective arrives with a warrant for Gladwin's arrest on the charge of abduction—Helen's aunt having gotten wind of the intended elopement. This plain-clothes officer recognizes Wilson—the bogus Gladwin—as an old offender and promptly puts him under arrest.

Gladwin's effort is now to aid Wilson to escape, in order to shield Helen's reputation. The lights are suddenly put out; the prisoner bolts and there is a lively chase which ends in Officer 666 again being brought into service. Wilson dodges his pursuers, chloroforms the luckless policeman, dumps him into a chest, puts on his uniform and nonchalantly walks out of the front door to make a successful getaway in the automobile he intended to use for his elopement.

After Gladwin's exciting adventures for Helen's sake, it is of course inevitable that the young lady should reward her rescuer by giving him her heart.

SLOOP SPIRIT I. WINS CUP RACE

The wind was as light as it had been heavy the day before, consequently the officials of the Yacht Club, anchored off the site of the new breakwater. The great event of the month in sailing circles, the match for the Lipton Cup, brought out a dozen yachts. The winning sloop in the light and patchy airs gained a considerable lead the farther she went, and ran home about three-quarters of an hour ahead of the next four boats. Myth, Onoma, Gwendolyn and Ortona, which another considerable interval separated from the remainder of the fleet. The course was over the old Victoria course, a distance of 13 sea miles. The first boats to finish were:

- 1.—Messrs. Cliff and R. Coa's Spirit I.
- 2.—Mr. Reaney's Myth.
- 3.—Mr. MacDonald's Oroma.
- 4.—Mr. Conolly's Gwendolyn.
- 5.—Mr. Larsen's Ortona.

Other entries were: Natoose, Bonita, Madeleine, Truant, Ailsa, and Ivanhoe.

Spirit I is the work of Ted Geary, of Seattle, and is a sloop with an international rating of 29 feet. She sets about 1,150 square feet of canvas in her two big sails, and though her forte is sailing in light breezes, her owner, Mr. Cliff Cao, finds her a weatherly craft in her storm sails, and is willing, he says, to race whenever it is possible for others to do so. She is raced by a crew of six, has no engine and no auxiliary power. Her greatest rivals in Vancouver are the Alexandria and the Spirit II, a boat from the same designer, intended to beat Spirit I. This, however, Mr. Cao says, she has not been able to do as yet. On page 18 we publish a photograph of the Spirit I, the winner and another entry, the Truant, owned by Mr. Walter Adams, Victoria. The photographs were very kindly supplied the "De Luxe" by Mr. F. M. Kelly, an ardent yachtsman of Victoria.

Naomi stood on the balcony overlooking the moonlit garden. She had just escaped from the ball room to have a few moments to herself and her thoughts. The soft, silvery light fell upon her lovely face, with its halo of golden curls, the dark luminous eyes, and the rich satin frock with its priceless lace and jewels. This was her last day of freedom—tomorrow was her wedding day.

It was two years since she had left the caravan, and one could hardly recognize in this elegant society lady, the Naomi of the caravan. She had changed greatly in those two years. She was no longer the gentle, loving girl of the old days, but a cold, calculating woman of society—her mother had seen to that. The Contessa was not the mother of Naomi had imagined, but a shallow narrow-minded woman, selfish to the core, who cared neither for her husband nor children. In her youth she had been a society beauty, but had now fallen back on art. Naomi's beauty was a great deal of an-

...ce to her, it seemed to mock her, and say that she was growing The Comte was a drunkard and a great roulette player. He up to his neck in debt, the castle was deeply mortgaged, and oked to Naomi to help clear it. Naomi had plenty of suitors xious to marry her, but she heard tales of their wild midnight and debauches, and greatly to her father's disappointment, ed them all. It was true that Francisco had said, it was a sham, he would not own it to herself. These men were so different er ideal. The Comtessa however, lost her temper, and poured her such a current of wrath and insults, that Naomi had been pletely cowed.

When the Baron Muriccio had asked for her hand in marriage, ad been received with open arms. He was one of the richest es in Italy, and a friend of the king. Naomi had never seen the on. He had called to see her father when she was away on sit. Her father had given his consent without consulting her.
nor said that he was hopelessly mad. He scarcely ever went ourt, and more seldom to balls, or society functions—but dwelt in and year out in his great castle on the hills. This was y a promising outlook for Naomi who had been for the last used to a succession of gaities.

One could not say that he was not generous, for every day ents of rich jewels, rare hot house flowers, and fruit came for from the Baron.

Perhaps he was not such an orge after all. She did not care, she wanted was money and position. Money so that she could e all she craved for—rich dresses and jewels—position, so that could make other women jealous, and show off to better advantage great beauty.

Out in the moonlight, hidden by the dense shrubbery, a stray sician was playing some sweet strain. It sounded like some bird ich was captive in a cage, and was crying out for the freedom the woods.

She stopped in the midst of her brooding to listen. It was such ad sweet strain, with a note of gladness running through it. It d a tale of the mountains and valleys, of a life where one was e from care and worry.

She knew only one man who could make the violin speak like is—and that was Francisco. He must be in the shrubbery and as playing for her.

What did she want to hear about the hills and mountains for; e wanted to hear of the court, its riches and splendour—the coming endship of the king—of the conquests she was to make—and the ay lovely life she was to lead.

She stepped away from the balcony to reenter the house, and o back to the ball room. The violin brought back memories and enes which she wanted to forget.

Again the violin arrested her, the tune was changed. A s ghter strain, she caught her breath and her heart began to quickly.

Francisco loved her, he was telling her so. She listened intently, he voice was soft and pleading. He had no wealth and possessions o offer her, only himself and his great love.

She who was to become a baroness on the morrow, leave luxury and wealth, to go back to the old life of the caravan? Never, he wanted to enter the house, but could not; she was curious to hear what would come next.

She liked Francisco very much, but she loved wealth and position more.

Once more the violin played, and now she listened entranced.
She saw herself in the old days. Mother Therese in her snowy —a tear crept slowly down her cheek. How happy she had been those days so long ago. She saw the old caravan and she was again with her old companions.

Next came the carnival at Florence. Then, her father coming claiming her, her pleasure and excitement, and the new life opening before her. The whirl of pleasure and excitement.

The tune changed—a little discordant note crept in—she was happy—she saw her husband, an old man—she hated him, and he did not care for her. She was very unhappy—the music was sad and discordant.

All pleasure had fled—she was growing old, and her beauty was fading—now she was alone.

The music moved her, why did she stay and listen. She wanted to go and leave this man to his violin and mad music.

The rope of pearls around her neck was choking her, she undid the clasp.

The violin was playing again, it was calling her to come to him. She would have this life with all its shame and unrealities, and go with him, he would never leave her.

He would care for her just the same, when she was old and her beauty faded.

She thought of the man she was to marry, and whom she had never seen. Did not even know what he was like, and people said that he was mad.

The violin was calling now with a sob. He was disappointed in her; he had thought her mistaken. She left the balcony and hurried down the marble steps.

"Francisco," she sobbed, "I am not what you think me. I am coming. The violin called her on. Presently she came into a little opening and saw Francisco, leaning against a tree, the violin lightly in his hand. She stood in the full light, while he was in the shadow. The pale light fell upon her, showing up more clearly her exquisite beauty.

"Francisco," she cried, "you wanted me?"

He laughed lightly, and laid the violin on the grass at his feet.

"Well, Naomi, it is a long time since we met."

How well he looked, so tall and manly, not one of the men she knew could bear comparison with him.

She twisted and untwisted nervously the rope of pearls around her neck.

"I am going to be married tomorrow," she said at last.

"So I hear, to some great nobleman. You will be very happy," he replied.

"I do not know. I have never seen him, Francisco.

"Never seen him? It is indeed a strange wooing, never to see the man you are to marry, with whom you have to live the remainder of your life." He laughed scornfully.

"My mother wishes it."

"And, of course, you, like a dutiful daughter, obey." He again laughed harshly.

"You do not understand." His laugh goaded her. She was a great lady, and yet here was a gipsy, poorer than her own servants, daring to speak to her so. He seemed to read her thoughts. "Come, Naomi," he said gently, "Let us talk this over. Remember, I am your brother. We loved each other in the old days, and had no secrets from each other."

The hand he laid upon her arm was very white and thin; it had not been so in the old days. She looked at him keenly; dark shadows were under his eyes.

"Francisco have you been ill?" she said anxiously.

"Yes, I have been very ill." His tone was weary and tired.

different from the gay, happy leader of the old days. Softly put her two hands into his, and drew him toward her.

"Francisco, forgive me," she whispered.

He drew her towards him, and kissed her gently upon her forehead. His arms were around her. What did she care for wealth and position.

"Francisco, take me with you," she murmured.

"But the Baron?" he replied.

She shuddered at the thought of the morrow. How could she have been so mad as to think that she could have married that man.

"I shall never marry the Baron. I love only you."

He drew her towards him and kissed her passionately.

"You will come back with me to the old life again? Give up these jewels and your gay life? Wander back with me, only a spy, to the old caravan?"

"It is the only life I want," she replied.

She tore the rope of pearls from her neck and crushed them upon the grass with her feet.

Take me now with you, Francisco. Tomorrow will be too late. I must go before they miss me."

He drew her to him and covered her upturned face with kisses.

"You come with me, Naomi, because you love me," he said.

"You know I love you, and always have, but I have been blind," Naomi answered.

Through the shrubberies came a man, his voice raised loudly calling her. It was her father. His face was flushed and angry-looking.

"Do you know that the King is here?" he cried. He stopped short as he observed Francisco.

"Who is this man," he said insolently.

Naomi shrank nearer to Francisco.

"Help me, Francisco," she whispered, anxiously.

"What do you want, Conte Phillippo," Francisco asked.

The Conte stared for a moment, then bowed.

"Pardon, Baron, I did not know that it was you. I saw Naomi from the castle, and as the King had arrived, I was anxious that she should be there to receive him. Will you not return to the castle?" He was all bows and apologies now.

"I shall return," Francisco said; "lead the way."

"Francisco, are you mad? He will fling you out when he finds out his mistake," Naomi said, anxiously.

"Nay, my sweet, I am really the Baron," Francisco replied.

"I often grew tired of the Court, and the idle life I led, so I wandered about the country in a caravan to lead the life I loved best. One day I happened to find you and mother Therese. Since that day I have loved you and determined to make you my wife. Madam," he made a low bow, "behold your future husband, the Baron."

Naomi stood still a moment, hardly believing the words he uttered, but her heart filled with a great happiness.

"The King awaits to see my future bride," Francisco said. He took her gently by the arm, and together they entered the castle to meet the King. (THE END.)

"Oh, lots of times," replied the offender. "You see, I used to be in better circumstances, and ran my own motor-car."
