

IMAGE EVALUATION
TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic
Sciences
Corporation

CIHM/ICMH Microfiche Series.

CIHM/ICMH Collection de microfiches.

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadien de microreproductions historiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique. which may alter any of the imeges in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.

Coloured covers/
Couverture de couleur

Covers damaged/
Couverture endommagée
Covers restored and/or laminated/
Couverture restaurée et/ou pelliculéeCovar title missing/
Le titre de couverture manqueColoured maps/
Cartes géographiques en couleur

Coloursd ink (i.e. other than blue or black)/
Encre de couleur (i.e. autre que bleue ou noire)
Coloured plates and/or illustrations/
Planches et/ou illustrations en couleur

Bound with other material/
Relié avec d'autres documents

Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion along interior margin/
La re liure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la distortion le long de la marge interieure

Blank leaves added during restoration may appear within the text. Whenr 'er possibie, these have been omitted from filmi, // Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutes lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans ie texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas été filmées.

L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-ôtre uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

Coloured pages/
Pages de couleur Pages damaged/
Pages endommagées
Pages restored and/or laminated/
Pages restaurées at/ou pelliculées
Pages discoloured, stained or foxed/
Pages décolorées, tachetées ou piquées Pages detached/Pages détachées
Showthrough/
Transparence
Quality of print varies/
Qualité inégale de l'impressionIncludes supplementary material/
Comprend du matériel supplémentaire
Only edition available/
Seule édition disponible

Pages wholly or partially obscured by errata slips, tissues, etc., have been refilmed to ensure the best possible image/ Les pages totalement ou partiellement obscurcies par un feuillat d'errata, une pelure. etc., ont été filméas é nouvesu de façon è obtenir la meilleure image possible.

This item is filmed at the reduction ratio checked below/
Ce document est filmé au taux de réduction indiqué ci-dessous.

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

University of AlbertaEdmonton

The Images appearing here are the best quality pessible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract apecifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or Illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. Ail other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol $\rightarrow$ (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol $\nabla$ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The foliowing diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

University of Alberta  Edmonton

Les images suivantes ont dté reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition ot de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmb, et en conformite avec les conditions du crintrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat ot en terminant soit par la derniére page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second piat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmes en commençant par la premidre page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la derniére page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symbolea suivants apparaitra sur la dernibre image de chaque microfiche, seion le cas: le symbole $\rightarrow$ signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole $\nabla$ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour atre reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite. ot de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nd́cessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent le méthode.

all rodnd the world

AN LLLUSTHATED RECORD

Orvoyages, travels and adventuresIN ALL PdiR'S OF THE VORLD.(HDTTED BY W. F. ALASWORTLI, F.R.G.S., F.S.A., N゙c.

> FOLGME IV.

1.0 N1OON:

London:

I N D E A.

A TRIP TO NORWAY.

 -Silmon and Lobsters-The Nurwerpinn Capital, Christiania-lreuliar Climate of Norway-'Tho Natiomal Vebiele, the Corride-A State Carriage 11,- Vishing on the Drammen mid Longen-Kompsherg and its Silvur Mines-The Telemark or TellemarkenSirters or Chatets of Norway-Mometain Mestelry-The Vest Fiortalen-Rinkan Foss or "Reeking Finl"-Laxpend of Mary's Stone thin Lie or Lidtiek-Viale of Flathut - Nordgarden-i-Sillejort-The Heart of Telemark - ('asth: of' Silence
 - Hardimper Custme-A Hear IUunt-The Norl Fioril-skien ...

 strack Wamed-Will Dreary Moonland

 Field-Mary of Optun-The Wiater Fill...
 Bumber-Sternstlyn-Former Eistension of (ilaciers - Mepast of Whortherries-At the Hut ugain-frem Christiana to Thromilhem or Denthem

 Sulumen stamms..

 Chureh-The Itighost Finl in kineme

 Itritivh Imbacity

 bergen

 'Tripuli by tho Aralis-latus 'Tree and the latuphingi

 Sayli's Danghter-1 bath of Ilanet the drent

1II.-Corn Nagazines-Morish tiardens-The Date 'lree-Ohive Groves-Life in the Ilarem-Story of Lillat

 An:m Trimmpal Areli-Arelas over the Strects-Consul's Stret-

 Ceremonits $\qquad$

russia.

A Visit to St. Petershugin.
 Sprinar-Easter Vestivitics-Chureh Masia-

 Turrots of the Citale-Seme unon the Liver-leter the Creat's Cottuge-lisechange-Custume of the Merchants Palace-: tathe of D'fer the (ireat-Alexamder Columb-A A ademies of science and Art-Academy of Mines reveivel from a visit to this lemarkable charity

 Haths-Ifestaurauts
 The "Savage Genthemun "-A Youal Contest

 nik or l'oliceman-'Lhe lswishtelih or Drosk-Driver

FHOM RHYRUT TO THE CEDALS OF LEBANON.

1.-Deyrut, the Port of Syria-The herothalior Du'al heroth of the Ilelrews and herytus of the Romans-

 his Fnmily

III-The Tripla Town of Tyrimes, Sidonians, mal Aradims-Xripoli still consins of Three Separate TownsVulley of Ladisha-Groteo Convent if st. Authony - Kimahin, the Feclesiastical ('ajital of the Muronites-A Mownern Eiden-Cumelite Convent-Arrive at the Cedars of Ledanen

 Travellers

OVEI LEBANON ANO BACK IN THE SNOW
THE Dhtises of muUnt lebinNun.
Mount Lelmom South of the Cidars-Monutains and Valleys of the Druses-D'endiar Seenery-Varions

 Eaglish Consul-Religion and hadits aml Nhaners of the Druses

MEXI'O ANL THE MENICANS.

With an Accolvt of Aspeats of the Peats of Potocatepetl arib Ohzaya.
I.-Vera Cruz and San Inan de Ihun-llunses and Juhabitmis-Romes to the Interier-Itegion of Palm Forests-Savamahs or I'rariss-Ruins of' Oklen 'Time-Region of Forests - Alpune or Ilightund

PREFACE

Oun kind readers will，we hope，he pleased with the progress made in the present volume of＂All Rousd the Wext Inmes，Guana，Pasama，and Mextoo，in the New World；of the Lemanos and of Theole in the East ；and of New Calmonia，Thamt，and the Mamemas，in the lacife ；have matially helped to sive completeness to our labours．

The firriprealing dominions of the Can are in the present day in a transitory state．The progress leaven of a semi－Oriental barlarism and corruption，which，it is to be lugeel，that time will eflate without the mulleringe and agonies of intestine hroils．

While depineting the mondern spmone of the City tinmed ly Peter the fireat on a marsh，and the pieturespe medierval ：anct of the when metrophis of the Mascovitus，we took eare to phaco side ly side

 ＂xisting social system．Rusivi unfortmately posserses mo distinet ritizen class，which by its cheation and pusitinn in soriety might have introntued that muncipal and eorporate spirit，those honomable and prond sontiments，which hase contributed so melh，fiom the Didde Ases downards，to the develoment and cultavation of the tierman and Ramanie mations．

Nomsay，the comutry uf equality，pur excellener，presents as ditlerent an aspect politically to Russia

 Nature and the grotespre in Art，anl of simplicity in maners and honesty in deed．

There are tirths and fiows to be seen in Bughan，gheiess in Switzeriand，salmon－h：ips in Irelam， aml kirks in Sentand；but the fiords ：und lakes of Norway ate peruliar，and the Hardinger，Sighe，and bear hanting amb Ileer－stalking pieces he fimm－only there cat the phenomena of ghaciers In studied to tho loges，of carmel wom，rival the chithets of Inevectia，and the kirks in churehes surpass these of mont other momutain lamla in pinualen grotespueness．

The＂＂Mank＂or＂country＂of the Daves presents a less inposing aspect than that of the Northenen， and yet its lowely ishands，with wools of heedh and oak，vales，small lakes and genth hills；its mble comatry－

 arable，but its major part vandy or marshy and mutertile；yet，tike，the ishuls，doted with reminisences－ legendary or monumental－of the luroic ages of seamdinavia，as atso with the evidmees of that indivilual skill and aulacity whid，mited to sreat national prolence and nergy，hawe so hong preserwed the inde－ pembene of a State of limited resoures．It must not be ouitten to mitier，in writing for bughish readers， that the genius of our mational bard has invested the olden amals of Desmank with a ghery which has made itself alnost gromally felt in the cometry itwlf，and we have added our mite towards rending the veil of obsemity which has bero impartent by time to the legendary IItandet．

Pontegan is a delightial and pieturesque comatry，alumuting throughout its lengh and brealth with more of natural heanty than perlaps any other of similar extent in burppe．Insteal of the momo－
 ly monatans riehly clothed，numerons fine rivers upon which its large towns are situated（Oporto wh the Donro，Coimbru on the Mombero，and Liskon on the＇Iagns），romatie detiles un the wildest ghens．The climate is delieions，possessed of all the milduess of more sonthem regioms，withont that chilling atmo－ sphere so peeuliar to the table－limuls of Leon aud Castile．Portugal is，moreover，essentially a country of Art， that the do the do they in Art. onnected 1 vigour, 1 care to ut of the tion-its d juople of their tathome lected as war and reotylied oiling fir chipelats, n as woll lane that so (as in ree black a altiords e miturai vait vhow ticeller of barrathats chas mot tins to be $y$ of the mertals t purings soures of - Atlimtic "icaragma, 1.1, and of mil, alld a seriike the a gencral ct. : of the:

ILLUSTRATI0NS

Tine Priest's Towfis, Opunto

Fishrimpomen of dionto

Towner of lifi.F.M

MaFin

'luF: I'LBETン

Tremble or Winoless Victohis
Tine l'antithinos. Atuens
'THE Acolls of Atiofins
Mes! 'THEstine of IIEhodes
Mobel:N Atheniaxs
SHEPHERDS NEAl: AthE: s
Frotival at \thens

THE WE1:MTDAS

Jont of spals. Tonsmbs!
Wateler.slif, is lit fans.
bay ol l'uNivia
C'ANTLE OF I'J,OEN iN MHLSTEIS Kikit

Oimense, ('iritai of f'csen -

Suremphe;

Exchange at Colrenimgen St. Savorats (nomon. Istand of Amik liorso 'lowne, lomenimages
Castie of Klowhulis, on the Soend
Chatmat of Rosenhohe
Casties of l'bebehesmade
Tunea-l'astle or Fhedemesebag

INDEX.

III.-Ascent of the Popoentupetl : Smoke Mountan-Previous Ascents-Gate of San Autonio-Counl of Chaleo and Valley of Mexico-t'urious Rite-Beautiful Aztee Gurdens-Natural Ohelisks-Chaleo Cotton Factory-Town of Amemmen-Menbers of the Scientific Mission-Hacienda or Furm of Tomaceeo IV,-Aseent of tho Mounfain-Thar Ranho of Thmaens-Crneifix at the Lino of perpetuad Snow-Fiticess of rolles, or Smoke llo's-Respiraderos, or lets of Water mad liagor-Suhhur beposits-A Night in the Puneratepet!
V.-Aseents of the Voleno (rizava, the Loftient of the Andes in Mexieo ...

NEW CALEDONIA.

Fhench Possibsions in the Pacific:

 nes-Churacter med Apearance of the Natives-Procedings of the Fronch at Various P'oints of the I Aand-Foundation of Port de France-la Cone ption, a Missionary betablishment
 Inad-The Tahitians-I'rojected Line of Circmanavization by the Frendh-The Chinese Colony ut Tahiti-The French in the Marowisas-Chatacter of the Mhders-Nukahiva-lrogected Abandmment of the F'rench l'rotectorate

TOUR IN PORTCGAL.

 River Minho-C'minhan mid its 'Traveltol Crucitix-Nupier's bipploits Romans at the Liver of Oblivion- Baredhe- ('ostume of the Pbants- Braga- Ladies and Lattices-

HI.-'The Dine of Soult's Letreat before the liritish-start Barly tirs samoonde-Aseend :he Carsalhod'EstoTowre of Jumh zo-I'ull up, ut St. Jean's fur hefreshment- Varions Scenery of the Jinad-Recollections of our tinide-I'onte Sova: Dreadful shughter of the Freneh 'Troops-The Misereha

 Bridgr-Fomptuins-t onwent of san hente das lireirns-Localities of Ditierent Trades-l'rucas, or

 ings- Burial of the Dead-l Psima, or Visit of Condendene

 Style of hargaining-Ditlirent Kinds ot Vehicles
X.-The Lrightom of Opurto-The Miraculeas lmage of Matozinhos-Momastery of Leea do Jaito-Vilha do thathat Defence of tombra in the Thirteenth Century-The Quinta dus Laprimus and Jonua luea de Cantro-Camil des Amores-Siman Cruz-'The Mondero

 Thomar-Its Wonderfud Convent-Church ot San Jom Laptista-Cotton Factory-san Cregorio

 - T'enta V'erde-The Sitanes-'The Liock of Liblon-Palace and ('onvent of' Malia-The Torres Vedras

A VISIT TO ATHENS.

1.-The l'inans-Acropolis of Munyehin-Other Relies ol Antiquity-Modern Athens-Public luildingsAthens as it was in the 'Hime of the 'Turk-lts. First Insurrection-Turks take refuge in the Aeroperis - Capitalation nud Massacre of the Tur - - surpation of Odysseus

234
11.-The Egyptians oceny the Morea-Siege io Blesulonghi-Athens invested by the Turks ünder Reshiid raise (he Sicge-Fibvier reinforess the Acrojotis-State of tireece during the Winter ef 1826-7 of Dundmad) - Etection of (upmbistrins us l'resident of Greece-Nuval Expedition under Captain of the city

 in Greece-Establishment of the liavaian bymsty ...
V.-IIarmony between Athenian Architecture and the Suil mul Climate-The Aeropolis-The Propylaen or Portieoes-Temple of the Wingless Vietory-'fho Pirthenon, "The Virgin's IIonso"-Colcssal Statue of the Virgin Godless - Wis it contained within the Buidling, or did it stand out above it?
VI.-The Freeltheinm-Lecends of Ereelitheus-Fomulation of the Ereelitheinm-Statue of Athena lromachus -Temple of Artemis and of Rone und Augustus-The Areopagis - The l'uyx-l'upit of Demosthenes -The Hill of the Nymphs-Nenument of Thrasyllas-The Musie Theatre - Cave of Apollo und l'anThe Smet anry of Aglauris VII.-The 'Temple of Thesens-The Temple of Zeus Oympins-The Temple of the Winds-The Lantern of Demosthenes-Arch of ifadrian-Oriental Character of the (ireeks-Athenian Seciety-Appearanee and Dress-The Agora, or Market-plaee-Life in Athens-The Carnival

THE BERMUDAS, WEST JNDIES, BRITISH GUIANA, AND ISTHMUS OF PANAMA.

J.-The lermudas-'The l'oet's I shads-Whate Fisherg- 1 Cural Reet-Story of a hamp of AmbergrisCulonisation by the Virginin Company-Number of Ishands-'Town of st. George's-Fortifieations of Ircland-Convicts-Supineness of the tolonists
1I. West Indian Jshads-A semi-cirenar Voleane licef—lays between Two Voleanes-Isulated Volemic Peaks-Virgin Ishands-Saint Thomas-l'entral Royal Mail laeket Station-Notly Population
111.-Leeward Islamls-Sinint Christopher-Neris-Antigni-Curbbem Ishamls-Guadaloupe-Martimigue-Dominien-Suint Lucia-Saint Vincent-Gremadines-Grenada .
IV.-Barbados, "a Respeetnble Little lshaml"- Bridgetown-Lee-honses-IIotels mad their Landhadies-Nigrow, lians, or Crodes-Sugar Plantations and Fietories

 - liteh Lake

Butisif Guiasa.

Inthane of Pisama.
VII.-Charres-The Ancrican Town and the Town of the Natives-Mowine toloured Iopulation-Castle of San Perin :und Chili
...

A TRIP TO DENMARK.

 Residence of Count Mothe-ltypard-A legendary Tramblu*
 St. Kumb-The Traitor Ishake-Fumeral of Christima Whak-The lady who bunced Iterself to Death

 ('hristian N. - Nicholas Juel-Portroits on' the ILonse of Ohdeuherg

 and Statesman-Ruyal lombsat Soro

V'--Copenhagen-slagheck, the Ifarler Arehbishop-Sigbrit, the Mantrese Mere-Eiheation of Christian II.-

 -The Exchange

 Alchymist - The cironlandzade

 Hidhersma hersilia the silver hions of bomark

 Grevin home Anerdute of a stork bach, the Arveprinils - Death of tewen dulitu-Norwerim Amphithentres-The Mell-horso - Burom, its Convent and lake

 stal-Destruetion of the Paduen of 'rederiksborg ly bire

EDITED RY W. F. AINSW0RTII, F.R.G.s, FS.A.

A TRIP TO NORWAI.

MA.

inn at golkfisjo.

I.

'he Coast ofr Chmatiansand and Abendat - linkiss Islands and fint forests-Cotmenhomi and Sande. forb-Salimon and Loheters-The Nohwhan C'apital, Chmsthiva-i'ecchab Chmate of Nobway-The Na. tional Vehicie, the Cahmole-a State Cabhiagr.
Arten leing tossedrahont all night in the turbulent waters of the Skngur hack, I awoke no moming in the more phacid Fjord or Fiord of Claristiania.
I was in Norway, The sentence inplies mome than at first sight appears. I had lomged tor a comside mble tan e back to dee the lamb of Fiorls und Suow-fiehls, of benr and reindeer coverts, of salmon lenps mad lofty falls, of carrioles nud soters, of the picturesplue in urts and mature, and of simplieity wid hunesty in manmers. There aro firths or fiords to he seen in Ehgland, gheiers in Switaerlumb, saluon lemps in Irelaml, and kirks in Seatloul; hat the timples nit lakes of Norway are peenliur and the Hardanger, Sogne amd Dove finh is ate murivalled in certain paims-only there could the fore-gromals of 'Tiwheman and timbes bear-lumting mul deerstalking pieces lee hamad; only there, Protessor dames Forbes would tell ns, tan the phenomenn of glaciass be stadied to the name adrantuge. The cmrrioles are as primitive as the juyle, tho soters or huts, whether of stume, or logss, on carved weod, rival the chalets of Helvetin, and the kirls or ehurehes surpass thoso of most uther monntain-lands in pimacled grotesiqueness.

It was therwhere with no slight interest that I had first contemphated the suntherin coist of Semadinavia as sighted atoot C'loristimsinal and Arembal. The impression derime was at the onset mather me of disappointment. The chameter of the const was remarkably mumonons. Hills of a thousume feet high or less, deveid of holdues, nul with hut few mul nurrow intervening valleys, form the mainhaul-whilst a multitude of'small ishods, whieh nange along the eonst, were modistinguishable from it when viesoel from the sea, owing to the want of any decided relief or variety of character.
The shomy weather :ulded, no lonbt, to the monotomy of the seene ; and one distance from the shore lwing greater than at tirst appared, leal me to moderrate the clevation of the limil. If was only ly mbserving how sowly objects seemed disphared by the motion of the vessel, that I bucane aware of the real satale of the country which I now saw for the tinst time; and on closit unservation, 1 perceivel that the low, roundel, and rocky hills, which I at first believed to be hare, were almost everywhere covered, or at least motteis over, with wooks of pine, which, descending ahmest to the shore, gave a pecaliarity of chamater to the seenery, at the sane time that it aflurderl it seale hy which to estimate its magnitude.

These forests distinguish this part of Norway from those of the Hebrides, which it in other rexpucts reresembles. The gueiss istands of Tirer and Coll occurrel to my mind the moment that I saw the Norwegim coast, which is less than a degree and athalf of latitude farther mith, and doubtless the same canses have produced the similarity of character, weting in like crecunstances. Both belong to that great gncis, tomation so prevalent in Norway, and ilso in Scotland, with which few rocks ean compure in their resistance to atmospheric action and mechamical force. In both cases they have lieen subjectel fir ages to the actiou of the most tremendous sens which wash any part of Europe, and they have probally heen abrated by mechanical torces of anther kind, which have given the rumaded outlines to even the bigher hills, but the exact nature of which is yet subject tu great iluabt.

The sime wooded and undulating chanacter prevails all the way to Christiania. Tha लutrame to the Christiania fiord is marked by a lighthonse on the ishand of Fieder, which singularly resembles Inchkeith in the Firth of Forth. The beauty of the fiord has probably been overated. The montony of the forms, the continuity of the wombs, the alsence of almost the smallest seat-clitl or sumdy hiy, weary the eyc, even thengh the seene is continually elanging, and the hores ever verdat. An exception most he made, however, in fawner of the immediate ensirons of Christiania, where the consts are ste" lere and, nt the mane time, varied liy the aspert of cultisation and of herilums treces: where numerons detached honses aliven the law gromeds, mul the more distant hills have a brider chanacter.

Whan aproaehing the Nupweginn eapital from Coperhagen, the steamer theches at two phaces-datbentrays and samdeliori. Of these towns a lively diseiple of Walton-and they are among the mont numbrous tonrists in Nonway-writes: At both of these sen-ports prisscupers are lamdol tumi others taken up. The same crowding and watlinating odoms drive the lavers of pure air on thok, Nothing can exceed thar luat ami combination of villamons smelly which issue from the hower regions. How the natives stame suble un atunuphere smpasses comprehension. The haiek hoh of Calentta manst have bean an iee-well in compurimen. The town of Gothenberg is heile on the tiond or arm of the sea, into wheh the River Gothat empurs itselli: dinthontury is one of the prineipal sea prit towns of swedm, but is not in so flourishing a romition at fomerly. The passengers have tumphe time to land and stretela thicir legs, ind we recommend | any of the brotherhood who may fice inclined to follow in our steps, to fro on shure, were it rimly to enjoy the lusury of a bath, as there is an excellent establinhment of this kind in the town, as well ins to imhluge in a gossip with the worthy Mrs. Told, whose husbam is the umbented proprietor wif the hest hatel in Gothenlarg. This obliging landlaly will hroil a salmot ented for a costomer scientitically sum expentitiously, and hes. bobster-sane is mimperebiable-an impurtant firt well worthy of heng horne it mind hy the corious in such matters. The doth mores minter has a Scmulinavian reputation; but, to a Lumbuer who indulges in such heavy potations, we should say it would scarcely pass muster. It is a hrown and frothy liguid, but has no more body than the living skeleton. The salmon ane Iobsters in this said town of Gothenbory are magniticent creations, and the piscivorous gourmet ought to visit this place, werc it only to revel in the inxury of these joint productions of the sea inul river. Billingsgate and Hungertord, hite your diminished hrads! The Gotha river, and the rocky ford of Gothenhors, beat the stale commolities bruight to tho markets on the Thames from Sentland and the Channel ont of the fiell. Fresh and thalis were the slices of sahmon, full and Heshy wis the lobster, crimsoned with its hascions comal, as it burst upon our enraptured sight in 18-, in juxtapusition with our tavomite tish, beth dressed to perfection by our ittentive hostens, Mrs. Tiohl. We hold her and her culinary whill in deep aflection, and long may she live to ghallen the hearts (ame stomachs) of our brother piscators on their way to tho Norwegiant rivers. There is another hathl in the town. the Gotha Kjellar; but Mrs. Tinh's inimitable cuisine prevented our julging of its merits. In the true spirit of gool fellowship, therefine, we aivise all the eratt who may be choice in theif feceling, th patronise the amiable Mrs. Toold, or Tohly, as the matives will persist in cailins her. Better fire, or a more civil and obligring hustess, no piscator need lesire.

But, hark : the pasengers are llocking to the phace of embarkation, and the rush of stemen from the silfecyvalse sound the note of prepmation for departure, sio we must tem muselves away from "Tohly" and her ineomparaline firse.

On arriving at the month of the firm, or arm of ther sea, which rems i! to Christiania (it might, withont any great stretel of inagimation, he called a gull), tho :xtmathent rams in, whe muder the little town of Sumberorl. The pasengers do not land here, allhumed lowever, is nit sulject fir regret, as there is not much to interest the taveller within the walls of this lithe: sea-port. "The steamer is muter orders to wait for tha' Lowat from Christiamia wh her way to Hergen, wh which the mail hafs from the Copahag a stemmer ure tramsferver. 'fhe nasual hour of arrival ofl' Samdediond is cleven at night, so that the vessel domes not get fiairly off fir Christiania matil alont six in the morning. Bhit lither rest ean be obtained if the stemoner reaches Sambefiond at night ; fing, following the example of the emptain, matess and reamen, the prasengers crowl int deek in astato of feverish exeitement, laking out fir the Christimia stemure, :ulding ly their presemer to the confusion which prevala from one chll of the vessel to the oflerr.

If our piseator should have waried himself in gazin! on the lights in the town of sumdefierd, wo alvise him to pick out a soft plank und coil himself up in his

ned to follow to emjoy the estahlishnent imdulge in :t husiman is el in Gothensalmot enthet Msly, and her tant liart well rious in such Scemdinavian ulges in sueh scarcely pass d, but has nu co salmon ami atare magnilimet ought to lie iluxury al wr Billingsnisher heads! f Cothenhor:s, he markets on nel out of the f salmon, tull $\mathrm{itl}_{2}$ its luseions sight in $18-$ 1, beth dressed lrs. Tould. We: allection, and (and stomarelis) the Norwegtian he town. the aititblo cuisine o the true spirit all the cratio patronise the natives will more civil mulne to the plate rom the satiety 1 departure so odily" and lur rid, or arm of might, without Heal a gult'), thu litthe town of lare, akhough ht homs. 'This, re is not muly Is of this little: to wat lio tha rgin, to which ancr are 1r:46Sumblebrol is s mot get failly - morning. lint camer reachos example of tha nisur crowd int anking out for rib presinere to ail of the ressel inaself in gazinf we mivise him sself up in his

Ireadnumbt, where, with one of Bemson's humting Havanmahes, abl at likon of "cold withont," he will enjoy empan:ative compowne until the dawn; but th, ye gods! at the day breaks, and the sun risus above ther eaxteru hills, what a sucions panaman awaits him. It is innussible to conerive anything gramer in mature than this diversibend view; indech, the seemery the whote of the distame between Sumdetod and Christimin is surpassingly beatilinl. and thaix or seven homrs oeen pied in the transit will hase ded mberded-at lanst we julgu ber awn exprience-while contemplating the ever-chameng and comenting pieturs. The finale th the voyace will leave an inhelihle daptorsion on the tovellers mind, on wo are muel mistalsen.
 by dengers the more prominent of the himblage in Christimus, will apןear in sight; and, as a wintupte this phentamatle rogure the whito lemsens of the town, hateked live an :mphitheatse of hitls, present a but "acito emotions ut a mont envinble kime. The that the latel of promise has lwom mesthed, aded in no shigh demer the the perime exsitement wheln the south, amd home it is -ren for indsunture tram tha at mee the find and the areator part of the town, has by memas of imman malole villas, luilt, usmally, in eomb-aspert of the town, aml mombling mechory, which is remimis him of whe of the hisher athe wedt-wnoded cantons of suitantand, to which . An varied antline of da diord-which may semparo, in irecotarity, with would peobethly he (whe is mally the thet) that he is here in the latinule of thar she liam Istands, warly in watl. Some tumist, in a moturnt of when, has elowen to draw a rompraisen betwern the combly fown of Orkney and the capital of Sorway, in licome at the limmer ; but the combrinon is tom absuri to le ro-

 Imidhers), baing quite intapahlo of concenting tha manilint informerty in evers wher guality of beanty, gremeness of chemes, granted hy matime or attaned by art.

Livery one maturally refers what he sees in oblem
cematrits the the standard of home, and the contrast of southern Norway to the extrene nurthern purts of Grat Britain, comes upan the tuweller perpetually, and with a force which athe great zest to the seenery of the comintry.
Shethanl, theoles and hatr, covered for the most part when morasse, aml ahounting in inaccessiol elitio, is envelopeal, oven in smmmer, by treaturt fogs. imel rarely enjorsm entire dis of smabine; in winter, on the other land, it buastis of a dimate ats mild as that of $A$ vignom, and little colden in the month of Janumy than Florence, which is $17^{7}$ Couthere south-mits capital littlo bretter than a hishiur villatr, with one street, which at sarisuo (did enriatos exist) could with dilliculty traverse.

 which Cluistimit is pheng, virdant with suburabumdant forests, mot m! y of sumee and pine, han with nearly all the ondinaty trees of an lenglish domenethe flame and suanore, the inh and ehm, and even (thongh mone ramely) the ine ed and rak, owning to a full stature, and hamiant in foliuse, beviden all com-and even $j^{n}$ alds and apricots ripu in the open air, and Howniner shous, suchas lilat, whid yi hl in lusmrianco amd colum to nome in Fagland. Then, hinis summer, is Ny fir weoks turether inchond d, with : temperatme whompursive and in wintope clear and constant cohl, motel in any jurt of hertan, and smotimes apponehing that of Cinssia.

We leve tind, also, a city of at least linty thonsand inhabitants, with whine ami retangenlaly binh treets, (undortunately fowewer, with a pawement ar way Miesior los that in liakwall, and far haterim to that ut Lawick) ; is sat of government, with : royal town, is uf : size quite "fand to the oemmion; the Sorthing Ilal!, of llouse wi Commons: is ereat ant Homivhing masersity, with excellent masemm, library, to it, and rockoning anmerg is protessoms math" in the Nomergitn pustom: and in whatery divectan we chowse to walk tron the town. we moet with coltivat tion or with sheltor, witl wowhinul xernary, or with nenly very high gromed wombling the fird.

 ditions of elimate and situation, now toteralsly well sumpise, even when the manes are known, nul tho wealthy, mot polisherl socicties as characterive the Sumprgin citios of 'laristiantir and bergen on the 60", Qivilistion, which are mut to he fomel nt the stme distance firom the equator in any part al the gho.

 Vakkin, on the woul fiom tho eapital (a Mokle, athut eighty miles of the there humimed and thinty limglish milos that lay hetwon the two las - that is, letween tha eapital and I'hroudhjem-are perbormed by stumers on the Lakes Miosen ind Losm, Lut still,

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

whether proceeding ly the north mails, in westerly to the Drammen, anil tho Jigh Telemark, or Tellemarken, and the Hardanger, the usuad and imlispensable converamee in Nowsily is the kieriole, or as it is usually wrimen liy linglishmen, carriole. This is a sort of gig, with romu, genevally, for only a single passenger, mil divid (usinilly) of springs. Their place is, in some masure, applised by long diastic woden shafts, supported hehimi on the acletres, and in front on a small salille, the mumal heing harnessul exceedingly far finwarl, whist the seat is also advanced considerably, ar: is th wive the traveller the hemefit of the Insticity of' the shatts. The horse has, ther five, a consingerable purtion of the divect weight of his burthen pressing on hia shomhers ; for the smatl beard behind, on which the lugute is strapleet, is so mandy abow the axle as to athind a very trilling counterpoise. The traveller strotches ont his fiet right in frome of him, intor a natrow trught prepared to receive them, heyom which is as spash-buand to which in attachen a leathern apron, and he is so elosely titten into his vehicle all roma, that the rain dues not tasily insimute itsilf. The nwor or his hoy acempanies the carrige, and usually
 I carrion san be prowased, in Christiama, with harness and luntrome comphte. fin from vight to nine pmomes, and fin the -portsman this is the hest proceding. Duses ane changol at stages varying from six tutwor Buglish miles.

In the empital of Norway there are state carrages as well an the mational whiche-the carride, as a lively taveller, Mr. Frameis M. Wymdha, found to his "xpense.
Noxt morning after his arrival at Cluristimin, he relates, I interminell 'os sally out into the town in miler to redain the hagga which bat been sent romal las trom liargen to the eare of ane of the ruthonk it Christimia: also to art what letters there minht low watis: for me at the flotel Vircomia mul the pust-oflien, to take my lient in the shamer fin Englame, and to go, th it fere shope of which I had the allilressen,

In mider to get thongh all this as quickly as posibile, the liest plan sormerl to tre th take a veliele of some deariparin. Vagurly impuasul with the inea of having sen in sume nuile hask that the calos of Christimiat were called droskky, I reppested the waiter of the butel to calla drosky fir me. My wish was immediately complial with, and 1 wated in the comer-gard romul which the lutel was huilt, expectine in a few machine, make its aycarame. Time thew on and 1.0thing ariver, and heoming impationt, as conomy of time was the solo onjeet of taking a conveyme, : inguired of the waiter whol the drostky was roming. To all my inpuiries sect, strax (tont-x-Cherre oryleich), manaing any indelinite time you glease, was the insariable reple of the imperturhilhe waiters, A fill hour hand arraing elapisel, hint prisently the rumble of whels wals heard in the streets; amd, in ansther minute, it smart hit-kn, drawn hy a pair of very fin mery horses, with mi impertant looking emoloman in lisery upwn the hos, hwo through the purte cochere, mul dwe up in a staterly mame betore the dow of the hotel. The
 In uttur antonishmeit, I lowked tirst nt the waiter, mind
 streds. In this prineely equipage, 1 , dressed in a well-worn shooting suit, raggel knickerbockers, leather giaters, and nailed boots, was to drive, alung with Shot, all through the eapital of Norway.
The gentlemen sitting in the verambats romed the court haid down their eigars and ceased sipling their coffer, to gaze at me in mate astoninhment. Aretreat wonld now have been ignominions, amb, fothowed by Shut, I jumpeal in, anl otl we drove; tirst to the Hotel Vietoria, whener, as the campingo drew nu at the door, the waiters eame tlocking ont hy scores. Again we started, and, having seenred a herth in the Scomelinarien, drove to the post-oflice, then to the consul's, and listly to the shopis, and soon we rombled proully into the courtyard of the hotel, where, desermbing in state, I remmerated the roathmanaerorlingly:
lietime concluding with omr description of the rough, rude, andunsweial national velicle-thecarinle-itmust be admittel that it is ahumst the mbly one aliphal to Norwegian reads; and further, that the Norwrgian punies know what they have to do, and usnatly do their work well. It is neensary to have a Forbuls man or erout-
 'The expenses are moderatc. with one's awn arriole, about thisten pence halfung for every seven miles.

II.

Fishing on the Dravaen and Loetien- Vongenmag and

 -'lus Vert fyondades-Rithin Foss ule "lielbinti Fall"-Legent of Itany'g $loNe.
The dificulty in Norway is the start. If a sportsman, the preparations inchate a spat variety and number of renomees. won th brand, fin that of the pasalus in mut patather ; but il merrely in seareh of the pieturesplue, armed with his reb-hound hamelhanols, he neel be muder nu appechensions, and rught certainly to have ns the inembmanes in possible, if a sportsman, the first fuustion la will ask on his arrival at Cherstiam will be which is the 1 earest silnwn river He will he teld the hammen. What is thar distaner? will he the noxt infuiry. Answer, abwot thirty miles. It our hather of the rout, therefore, ber na impationt as we muselves were, on our dint trip, ho will restive uxm trimu his akill on this water, are he depmets fin "Throulhjem, to tish the Ginul, the Nill, and, subeeguently, the Namane. As there are two hotels, tho Hotel il'Angletome and the Botel ds Smalinavie, at Da:mmen, there is !ub ucasion to lay in a stoek of provisions lin this trip.

We hase assumel that our hrother of the craft will send on his baggage-surt, mal that his servant will follow him in a himed emriole. 'The lirst station or powt-of a Norwerim mik, or six or six-mal-n-lmalf Englis/t miles. If the forbadham, who has been dis, ateched the prereling las, has abstaned from purtaking too frovely of that tiery, ne aholie rompomen known ly tho mame of" "links" (a prinee of silf denial, by the way, soldou pratised by thes fumetionarins), wir sulmultisher will timl his homen realy at Asker, the mext station, our ind a guarter Norwagim, or cight binglish milen fron: S.a...nek. The stago trom Ankre to (ijolleberk is an sasy ome- mly seven-eights of a Norwegian milc, on six Euglish miles. The next and last, from (ijellabeek to Drammen, is mather longer, being one- יg with Shot, Is rume the sipling their A retreat , followed by first to tho e drew up at it hy scores. herth in the then to the a we rumbled 1, where, dedman aceoril-of ther rough, riole-it nunst lipdel to Norweyialt 1"unies (t) their work nim ur avantwelues homes. ww carriuld. s'ven miles.

Bngebrbe and
 hain Hombing on " lemhisti

If a morts. $t$ varicty aml ir thint of the $r$ in searels of hand hamdlunek, mght certainly
If a portslis mrival at sahuon river? th.o dist:men? It thinty milas. x impritis.nt as re will resolve riv le depurts id, and, subsewo hotels, tha Fmatimavie, at iu a stuek of f the craft will s servant will vantior or ${ }^{\text {most }}$ three-gumesers a-huld thaglish TII dis, astehed prortaking too kinewn liy tho 1, by the way, , our salumenker, the mext cinght Juglish skir to (ijellefa Norwegian :and hes, firm ir, heing one-dighth Norwegian, or somewhat over eight Euglish miles.

If ume pisator be an carly riser-and all true fishermen should be-he will have left Christimuia at six in the morning, and, giviug him half-ath-lour to swallow some capitai collec, with undeniable ervan, and some eggs (we will say nothing of breal, which, if he be wise, he will take with hime) he will find himself comfortably honsed at the Ltotel l'Angleterre, at Drammen, betwe 1 twelve and one relock-(equo volente) :and the "short tommy " having been duly administeren. The land ind of the Hotel dingleterre is a most eivit linguist. Hespalks Furneh and bi dish thently, and will allimb exry hatomation as to he river, the hest methon of reaching the seremal tishing stations, and do all in his prower to asist tho Lheglinh vivilur in fint hering his wishes.
Drammen is at fombishing and prosperons litule town. It carries ont ary extensive trade in timber, 'Trate is brisk; the mishlants and tradespophe are entermising and induntrions ; all is hasthe and netivity can -ly: into futurity, Dlammen will, one of thesi dias, thak ligh manugst the commercial towns of Norway.

Anthe mevice will he :mxions to try his skill on the Drammen, we will tell him how throed. Liko all well tran and dixiples of the roul, he will preecel to the hishese gund on stame on the river. This is at I Fongshat, ahout tom mites from the town of Demmen, and the tixhing commeners in the prod immediately bulow the fros, ill fall. which finms :un insurmountathe up the rimer fort then are still lath fifteen mikes of water from the laths towards we ses, ou firiol. big starture ber valy in the morning, the aughe wif hane time to matikist at the ntation before lae connfiftern p"mals-allhough the have heen taken in mets, thity. In remmmentige a trial of the Thamane we ly suin mems wish it to he maderstend as one of the best :ivers in Norwas, lout its contiguity to Cheis thanian and the Geility athomen the the Jomay New-ne (1) wot his line for the first the in in Nowe strim, pomber it desimhe spot for a coup dessat. On the firt owstime of ond rifiting Norway we triad it, and ind rey gond wort. There are phenty of sathon in the river, and hy presenting a trilling doncene to thase of the inhahitants whose bund aljoins tho wath, and :hwe ath, sharing the fish with them (ime this is the grand socret and the magieal key which on the nugher in the prosecution of his sport. The stranger hasiug killed a doand or sat of fish will return to Dramben, and having reconated his melventures os the obsepuivus handlord of his hotel, will rest himself for a hay, mond make preparations for a second ernsade ont the hanks of the Longen. The forbodman must he dexpatcheal the day before in a haggageent, with the ronts, portmantem, a small kes of biscuits, a la wiled ham, nula a tonges, some bacom, anila fiew bothes of wian und hramly. It these ereature eomforts he not athembed on, the truvelher will fire hot badly. Ther printed forms mast be fillow upad delivered to the firbin'man, who will preede the fisherman some finn-anl-twenty homes, in orde that no delay may vecur on the road. The distance from Drammen to Lanrvig-a neat little fishing town at the menth of the Lomgen (it is, in fiet, sitmated on the liord, or :um of the sea) is abont sisty miles, mat our comatryman will have to change his horso seven times.

The accommodations at the im, or hotel at Lanrig, are very gool inded, the beds elemu and combintable. The store of eataldes need but be eneroached mon here, but they will be repuired at the several stations up the river. 'The l.ongen rum through the ternitory of the Comutess We.rlel Jirlsherg, who can easily be whecelled into sivily permission for a stranger to fish on her proprety, This amialle lady is the widuw of the late vicery, whose uniform kindness and umbeviating hompitality to thow of our countryman who had the honour of beins introduced to him, will never he forgotten. Permis-im once obtained firom leer ladyship, ind an aniesible :arrangement havine been ontered into with the awners on renters of the severat slips of hand bordering on the river, the Waltonim may indulge himself to the ty of his bent, and the bent on bend if his rom. A very trilling sum to the pormer tenants will secure minterrupted fishing for the whole "xtent of water, which may be computed at not less thin furty miles! A very pretty hange, it must he almitterd.
 (iptain $\mathrm{l}^{\prime}$ ipun, and other soold men and true, have done wonders in this water ; mol we might ahl, it the biscatocial potesesor would permit us, that a certan muttre de dinse', who is well known within a humben miles of Liverpun, has made the sibhoon cut whes "xtrandimary eapers in the langen. If rejunt anaks truly, one of his pulpils (salmon we memu) weished tintynine pmonds. We wouler wherther his line was mate: of tidheotrings? We hape, hawerer, as masto the weight of his catuture, that he dinl wot , Iraw the homs bow. At all urents, such a tish must have thled his kit. The tishing commences (fin the :mgher mut in "phavis) exactly serom miles from Lanvis. ant he will de well to procerol, from station to station, in his cartiole, and not fingut the commisamiat ant. And here will hergin the "roughing" "purt of the |mainess, a thasiast to the prisations he win have to mature on his way morthwats. 'lite treds-if' surh ther can ise callen-ary toletallo it solne of the stations, and rxecrabla in others. Frent meat and pualtry are not to be had ; the with time salm n, ham, thone, eges and hatom, wathed down with wo m threw glasses of groul shertrs, and a jormo or two of " cohl withunt," we think the amateme may be vontent. Although we have deeried the ton prevahent system of carring a superahndater of lugrage, we think that :s satal cantern that will huth cruekery, chters, and jlates find twe, an indispenable aljunct to the trivelhers comfort. Only go to Nowsiy, ginel piscentor, and post it to Thromilh jem, and you will kunw what we metim. Juat ansk fur a kuife, fink, and soon, at a pant-honse, mand seo what you will get as sulntithite. Plamgh: the very recohbetion sickenss us.
The fish in the Lougen rum larger and ner more abme tant that. in the Drammen. This call only be accomited ber, we presume, ly the dher anes having asertainal, lyy experivene, that the passige upwats in barrol agninst them within a short distane from the sea in the hatere rivele. Ba this ats it may, the many glorinns days hatw we gassed on it hamke.

Vist aremmations of timber limel the rond at we loft hramourn for Komestarg. Brammen is one of masy rampathim wish him, uther mas lim. It is truly monataineor dixplat of trinlorts.

 Lay subleme them. They demk when they lita, atme dates to prosess it luatry hamb!

 romb ofmed umb the valley of the Lamen, whele untidebel at ante liot like a giant soppent, a darke chand shnser retoting the primatio red of a metting sum, whinh supplise the worke with motim prwer. The mpibs, atal hus saw and oflow mills that it turn:

 revillu:

 nime-that at the IIntil the Mines-we bhtained :t

 timher whind is maly to lue som in Sorway mal ins itarise athl thll, athl when the berefors akly in for anat we fimed that t?

 Wrye It wis a vast womber mansion, with a low

 a littae bosmation.

Tromark, of 'Tellomarkin, son interesting to lar ducllines amb the cotumes al the juphe it: rapital away thene to the wat. This reginen, aldhumeh the and romls and andmambation, but bandy visited ly tatwollera or tomrist:

Komgher, ion indern, the last civilised station in a of the Fibmarl rise "ן, thence to tamm in baks owe 川!n! mother, ulthately rise u! in the west in

ALI ROUND TIE WORLD．

＂pewer．The inluse wer tha． that it furns． a Nowny，am？ The silver he whole state

Which haw，liks． wifl，al Frenth －we ohtained： lassint tiveror it protioniol a！ Xurwiy and in the wator，athl y the emoshed （rila lemitons． amburel still of refinc，：mil？ an relour，and
 M！！：いい！K：い！小－ sul 1 lu minus． ：and rivility： her mines wil ＂Mollali： heme thath whi wondy listincos． ：mal the ：amme hothed taik． －listil：at I．con！－ IIn：mader tha． dark，：anl at

 ${\text { as ambl．} w_{1}}^{2}$ Combletol ：o aly，werbogt， din 1 wa coll． mow a－time it mantit hhanket］the Lathon：Fios， matablale lus－ －with：fors Tans tior tlar rusm for hall－

Natituc tor the is pirturospmo 1f，it calsital rons latios amd ：mald fo stated allamuh the ［am］क1 all the＂ the watet ot ly visited by

1）station in a

 he rude rock： （1m．in lakre aml，piling ithe west inthat great harrior of show－elan $\mathrm{Al}^{\prime \prime}$ known as the Hardanger lizeld．

There arr，howewer，many rands aross the outlying hills，and we looknd more tio the pictumstre than to Kongrlorer at fome in the monnine，we followed the valloy of the Sagam，obstructed hy lallen timber，till it expanded into at line mealow kiuwn as tine Suter of Moser．＇The sutere of Norway is mome ar las inher－ lical with the chalel al switarlianl，the yailala of the： ＇Inrks and＇Jukomans，and the whas of the Kindes athl Chaldean monntaineers．＇ilne word is saind to imply simply absence of cultivation，for，if a farn， pastures aromed，bate it is more gemomaly a lat or cabin，and smmetimes wern a lonkly hit if mombtain pasture to which a solitary girl hatly her lawk te rend in durine the latiel summire anmbines．＇The people at this，the first seter we came to，were civil and hos－ ［it：abln．
＇I＇lu＇roul，such as it was，ineromber］from hence by
 and roitul for centuries．Afor lithe mome that an lomar and a half of rule jolting，wo arrived at lablen－ jo，a tmmatain vilage＂if ahout ten or twelve houses of snme ：antiguity，and deeply inpmesam with the ari－ ginal ：Map of the wh Norwrugim garals．The luntelry was inland truly eharatmistic．Wir give an ilhastra－ tion of its interior at pr．I．It was painted with rad ：and blak ambesphe，hrowned by the lajee of time Irman the dhar to the coiling．There were two reasses with hode purwhel on high，and shelves decorated with nurnil of lite hen umasils ot＂oper and esen of silver， than the talnatanee，and be wombl mather eat a spare dmere on a vilver plate than a hearty meal ompertery． The fimily flate was of all dates，sizes，amb styles，and Whe thane painted like the panchs of the rom，and tith his of hireh，completed the seene．Whist the hamon ind reres were frying in this combiortable hos－

 up hesond to the snowy summit of the Gansta．This siren in mbindied in the illustration at jage 9.

The mad had heen bal emongh uj tar Polkesjo，hut ！he＇lowernt was worser ：at one moment we wero buriced in lank forste，at another carried along a predjitoms ledge two ur three humbed feet above tha lake lelow， sult the rond was always encumbered with rocks on pine－tronio（）ther littlo lakes glittored through the firest，all baried in deeps silence．＇There were no lumses ur huts，mo life or animation．It is sometime hefore the thateller neeustoms himself to the solitudes ＂it the Nusp mountains．At Vik，however＂we fomme
 ＇This was at the lewel of the bake，ame the tidde were meparated by roughly constrmeten goteways，which the skydskul br boy om the board holimed hail to wet down －ver and amom and pern．It is porhageswing to this cictunstame that the hamellook sitys earmioles have，in this ronte，to be left loblinel at Bulkesjo．

A last momatain bariar opmed ai Kopslame upon migniticent mendows，watored by the Matu Eils，which Hows from the Mios Varl ur laki，a fine shent of water which receives its supply from the Ilarlanger friedd， mat ponts its overlow hy the Man Elv into the bisin of the＇Tind sio，und thence into the sea at skrin．

The uppre valley of the Mam lidv，better known as 16），：und ：bome the thivel of its leneth the ervat de－ presion is ：uy with which gives ongin to the limkan topples over a clif tow liest umaso the sum，is hifher， and the fills if the lilomaner at Konsvinger surpass it in volume，but the lamkan rajus dacerved rolebrity alike fin the imposins moss of its waters，mal the pro－ from which they procipitato thmaslves．It is onn lake in late pmpting itself into ：amother．

The lower valley hetwen lake＇lime and lake

 the mentows wero spanglel with blas enconian and the waters of the bake mbled aloughearine grabl tress along with it as if they hanl lanen mine lugs．Nt honeth rioles and all－atross the farrent．＇Tla＂spob was manked by the litts．white chamel of drandhowed， gicturesplibly built un the hanks of the stroma．He－
 Tind，where all further progwos by lamd reacal，aml where the lake poured wer rocks inte the lower． villey in which we wro appoaching it．At this guint was alsen the hambe w＇Tinmant，where a lwat and twat－ nen are whtaimen－with the use of alitule of that virtue which is so uneommon with tomrists，pationce：－1＂natvi grite the lakn．In Nowney，the ranskide on water

 Har jolt of the carrithe fire the reemaninat vase of the Sorwogian lark；add tuthis the lake itwelf：cmbersmeral in wouls and mombains ：OU0 feet high，was rednlent of picturesifu beaty，atul it was alusht with at tovime of regret that wo landed at Hakenoes anl ixchanged its tranuil losom lir the carriole，alter partaking of a slpurr of höres（lake salmon）at mine lame＇s of flakrmes．It was not in reality，lownorr，till we reached the lit the ehurch of Noel（Aland hirke．）that we attained the Vestiondal or upher valley of the Xatu lilv，and we phemeded on font，a beantital wabla aloner

 Vestfordal amil the Tremmork．

Hopes aro envily altained here with whide to pra－ real up the Vemfiorial to the great fally of labkin． hat we prefirmed from old habit to stroll along this vale of gorgeons semery．An excellent idea may be ohfaned of it from thi illustration at 1,16 ．A + wa fromerend the valley heran to natrow，min at the sutere of Mgolishamb commenees a rocky useent，from wheluce a spondid view is oltaimed of the vast timbs of the （Amata，celelazatel hir the herend of the petrition IIM，ials，aml where all the viotims are sham in．to the lamily dug and eat，all alike conserted into stome．

The lows line of a falling streans rolling from mek w rok like an enormoms serpant，was sen extomling dawn firom the very top of the now erest of the （iansta so distinctly，that the eye searedy lowes sight of the builing torrent for a moment；even when bast in a far away meky $\mathrm{l}_{\text {asin }}$ it is as meessuntly realduring． ＇Thiy monintain forvent passes under it pinturespue woralen bridge，mad turns a suw－mill letore joining thu Mitan．

Below this hridge is the special pathway to the Riukan, a kind of narrow staireave leading over very insecure looking rocks. It is devignated as a horseway, which may be alminted by those who have seen the Norwegian ponies hesend the eighteen handred steps alhagside the Voring Fons or Falls of Matclinger. We congratulated maselves, however, ujon being on loot; the superior sense of security is, in such a position, remarkably gratifyiug. After three-quarters of an hour's toil, we began to perceivo the fall through the rocks, mad at length, after the usual amount of struggling, which experience has taught us accompanies almost all watertiall-seecing upon a gramel scale, we reached al nurrow path upon the brink ot the precipies, and we begran to perceive this particular fall hat a seusation in sture from above as that of Nagara

COSTUMES OF TELLEMARKEN.
has from below. This pathway is called Mari Stein | tears and prayers prevailed upen her lover to fly, to (ur Mary's Stone, and has a legend attached to it escape the plot formed by a treacherous rival against which is thus related by Miss Frederica Bremer, in Ler Strife and Peace; or Seenes in Norvay, p. 17 :--
It was hy this path that the benutiful Mary of Westfiordalon went, with light mad frarless step, to meet the friend of her chilhhood, Eistein Mulfvordsen; but the avariee of her father sepertated then, und Mary's his life. Years passed, and Mary was firm in her constancy. Her father died; Eistein had, by his valour and nobleness, made his former enomy his friend; and, witer their long sepuration, the lovers were to meet again, never to be seprasited. Eistein hastened by the shortest way, the Mari-Stein, to meet his heloved.

Long had she watehed fir him. She save him coming, and his mame lurst from her with a joyful ery. Ha saw, and rusheel to meet her, hot fell, and the Jinkm whirted him into its fimming depths. For many years after this, a pale tom, in whose bentifill eyes a quict madnes spoke, wanderen daily in the Mari-Stein, and serdmed to talk with sime one in the athes below. There she went till a mercifin voice summoned her to jos and rest in the arms of her heloved.
©The torrible Man comes at this point from the di-tant 1 Iardauger to tumble down a slope, distorted ly the roeks that oplnise it, till it reachers the spor where it waters reparate hefore they take their final slome into the depths blow. it aplours as tine and tleeey. Everest remats in his Norway. 1 . 30 , an white woml or cottom ; mul thomgh the viponr , wsectres "verything mear it, yet, in lowking over the cifll, shonts of fomm can he diserned at the botom like rockets of water matiating in erery direction. A low sound and vibration uppers to come from lencatl one's feet. As 1 hung, half gidlys, on the steep, and turned my eve opposite th the montain mas that brenstal ma, its bhack sides, sermingly within a ton's throw, and its showy head far in the clomhs alowe my thonghts involutiarily turned to the womberful seene, which memed like the end of the werld. It atill thats lefine bur like a drem.

111.

 Cashas or shexce.
The return from the Rewking Fall is more ugreable than the progress there. It is true that expectation sontenge the tuil but it wats not the less amarduons: cace of elimbing; it is alsun tria that a firm hold of a provilential hirch-tree gave a certain ferling of securty :Hainst tha fite of listim. ${ }^{1}$ But still the whole secuie was oll so terrifie a sealo, that it was impossible, after grat ifying the senses, nut to feel a pleasime at being at it distane from it. The constint comemplation of so anwfil a spetale would, we susuet, be ensugh to prodner many poor Marys. Then thain, Ole Torgensen, and his beautiful daughter A:sta, were waiting for us at Dal. They had propareal an execellent repast wherewith to reverit our cexhmated emergis, and this secomplished, we inspected the havellers' book with less disgnst than what was felt ly a menterpising French tourist at finding the manes of only $t$ wo of his countrymell as visiters to this remote spot. All spoke in terms of almimation of the host, and still more so of his duyghter-a perfect themarkian type. Like most memutainects, she hat also some filagree silver-work athe enriositics in copper fur sale. She also exlibited hor own private stack of trinkets, but when pressed to part with ","peeimen, she civilly declined. "They are my own," she suid; "I jut them on on Sundays to go to Mow Kirke, and eannot part with them."
${ }^{1}$ The letter $j$ has in this name, as also in that of fjed and fjorid, heen, thlowing the excellent example of Prof exsor James Furbes, written as $i$, as moro comformahle to English usage, althourgh pronsunced as 4 , and the $\hbar j$ has nearly the samo sound. $A a$ has, it may also be observed, the poover of o in eold.

The carriole carried us merrily back to Mod ; a lied of birel had been provided in the came, am Lake Timu was traversed in sleep. A rule sluck awoke us at four in the morning. It was the boat bumping against the pine-trees at Tinoset. Alter what onr exc. llent neightemrs describe as an extrmporised and smmmary toilette in tho lake, lint which we should simply designate as an immersion in its blue waters, we wers on une way to Ifterdal.
The tirst pwint attained was Bamble, and beyond this was Ilitterital, with its remarkable chareh, yme of the nate work in momments of the thirteenth eminner atill exintiug in Ninway. It is a kind of pyramid of timber, with tive or six storics, superposed bike a Burmese pagula. The walls are protected by tiles of wood, laid on like the seales of a fish, and the roofs are conered with little seulptural phanks. a covered gallery runs romin the editioe to shelter the people. A senputured proh gives almission to the emetery, whilst, on the "Inusite sile, the clock-tower stands :mmilst the tress of tha panstegieh or prexhytery. The inurior has lately berom restered, and uncomfortable forms liavesuplanited the ohl seuptured benches, but the silver gilt eruss of Byantine style, and the old binjuit, with its sighs of the zouliac, have wisely buen alhowed to remain. Hitterdal kirke is, with the celehratel eryp of samet Mikael, on the Nord-fiord, nemSkien, one of the most pimitive mumments of its kind in the comery.
Not ouly does the valley clange its name, but also the river. It is called Hjeridads or Hirrobls elv in the hamblook. The chweh at Litterdal is ulso described in the same indiapeusthle companion as one of the oldest in Norway, and ax of the same perioul amd style as that at Borgumb, on the liergen roal, anl, like that, it is said to be incluted in l'rofessor Badll's work on the ancient Norwegian churebes.

Mr. Ferguson, in his Illustrated Minellook of Architecture, p. !33, after regretting the destruction of the worelen churehes of Sixon and Norman times, says: The largest if these now in Nowsay is that of Ilitterdal. It is, cighty-tume feet hong hy fifty-sevenacross. Its, plan is that usual in chmernes of the are, exeept that it has a sallery all armud on the outside. Its external alpuanace is wry remarkalle. It is moro like a Chinese pasela, ur sone strange creation of the South Sea landers, than the soler production of the same people, whin lioild the buhl and masive round (Gothic editiees of the same age. Mr. Ferguson suggests that the panels may onee have been adorned ly hanie carring, whielh, as they decayed, have been replaced by phin timbers, detracting much of cemese from its original appearance.
The wad wats earried hence, by tho fore of ciremmstances, west ward, up the valley of the llitterelv, withthe lofty Gunst fiedd to the north, aud the Lie or Lidf field, still more remakable fir its contrasted contiguration, to the south. Thu valley is, strictly speaking, the Hitterdal or iate, but mountaineers are always profuse of local names, and they divide it into three, Iliterdal, Laurdal, and Hierthal. Half way up the valley, at a place called Sanland, was mother picturesque old clured, but it is saill to be crumbling, and about to be replaced by an edifice of a more simple chametes. This ILiertilal or Hitterdal dill not want in animation. There wero smelting furnaces and other works ly the road-side, mid being tho seakon for anumul exercise, soldiers were cueamped on its plains. k awoko us at lomping lint our exhrised and wo shonld flne waters,

mil bevond

 trelh, wise of nth century -pyramid of like a Burles of woorl, e roofs ino A covered people. A cemetery, /wer stamis beslytery. uncomfortrull benches, - illil the old wissly been ith the cele-(l-fionl, neal nents of itsne, lint also ls elv in the so deseribed one of the od and style 11]. like that, hil's work on

ok of Archi etion of the times, says: of llittorilal. across. Its. except that 1te external moro like a of the South of the same umel (Gothie rgerests that l by lamie eni rypaced ree from itse of circumelv, withthe ur lid tield, miguation, reaking, the vays proftso , Hitterdal, valloy, at a aresquo olel about to be character. 1 animation, orks ly the ml exercise, Arrived at Miertal we were obligend, perfinere, to turn ofl mal aseend the flanks of the die on Lid-fiell, where they are leant abrinit, to gain the valley of the Flandals elv or river, which expamals letween the Lic-fiell and the suow-wind Mome Scorve, into a small lake called Fla, or Flan, : and lower down into the more "materable hacustrine expmase of the Sillajora. The besuty of the sechery amply mpail the toil.

 dencent; to the right was the endacial sorore, with the serraterl paks of the Thens Nintem, the tramath main of lake Flad gittering in the hollow helow, while to the laft the rye eould follow the windines of the sillesituated at the extremity of this maguifirent Plimbla the distriet of Sillajorl, chanditht with green meatows, and doted with well-to-th firms.

It was with no suall ammint of phanere that, after sur hne day's work, we ranlme the village known as not wor. The gratel was wheded. There was : preshytery, the lamlama's honse, anil two or the

 to our of the best lowking hatitations, with a portion! an front, and a greenswail slining lown th the wattors and ushered our ahashel prems into at spacions apartment, in which wats a pisum, Hanked by two lofy our trepidation tid mot cenar till the same alemme domenti- atme to ushor ni ul stairs to one bed-rom. where tat awaiterl us. Fatiguc, atal the inmosibility profered lumpitality with out an inguiry. Noxt lay, ant ir giving the servant a present, the homes heing ? strpped chererily into the carmbe, and ju-t is it was driving :way, we eaught the sombl of "a woll-known melody coming trom the pians. Sur first inmonse was to jump out and retrace ,., in stels, to return thanks in person to the elatelaine of the mast he of silemer. Bum a moment's reflection tohl ins of the ineonveniente of such a procereling. The noble nower was probrably away, and in his absence the laly, if she could mot cheretain nis in furson, still did not aroline to extend to us her luspitality. Such ic Norvegian civility.
The Nomdetarden i Sillujord is eonsidered ats the heart of 'telemark. The women of this district, sats Pilliott, in his Letters fiom the Nurth of Eerope. wear a real jacket, a haek skirt, trimmed at the hotem with gellonf, and a short wist, fastenel ly a ceinture where the jacket ends, and haugins in lonse phaits for some incless below: I colonsel handkerehief, fied wome the hevel, floats in the air helhind. The siles of the stockings are prettily worked, and the show are onat mented with lange buckles, ur star-shapeal piewe off leather. The costmue of the men is something like that in which Charto X1I. is drawn, or that if the combatants in spanish luall fights-a short jacket of some deciled colvur; a waistoont, strijeel, amb very gaudy; dark breeches, with a streak of red ruming down hoth sides and neross the fromt; worstel stuckings, well worked ; broad emblnoidered gaiters; large knee-buckles, and shoes cmbroidered like the woments, Hoth sexes wear a profusion of silver lace and trinkets upon their persons. (See p. R.) There is a rocky and momutanous peninsula of some ten in twelve mile: in extent to eross at this point, hutwen the Sillognd ant the Baulak, on Pand:ass varl, man of the mont picturessue and best tishing and shoution districts in ad Norway. Thu ascent, at first surpomuded ly precipitoms reweks. A sheet in water fell from this matural cirmas, which is enterel into by a vast buel, and formed athe lake below. The ascent is comtinneal leymit this, before the erest is griumb, mand then, turninis sumbenly romul, the descent comberees into the horg valley of the banlags. It was a repetition of the sume magnibieent sechery as on the ciement from the Lis-fied. Lasuminat meadows, ready for the seythe, the rumbile collivened by dhwering simus waters of the Bamhens at our ties. Wrathove up at Moen to a giarl, or hotel, of promising aspect. The hast, in spect:ales, was sumbing a pipe on tha the thold, lirection. Hareremed us atil with cortiality, amd the binstle mal amimation of this place, with the chatorto transurted into another comity.

15.

 -shiex.
Wi: were luck mongh to he gioked min the stemuer suent ohat, which phies in we Bunlug Jakes at Alnstän, the port of Men, nent with it praceederi fiememembans, to lahn, at its further extronits. Tha obly place tomelnel at was lamedal. where at trout in which beatiful but sechrded apot there is a goudly lonse in the hemet of a grove of pines. Tha strean inviting spot.

The hamlet of Daten consists of somb five or six honses, lying in a mamy mealow at the luad if the lake, and at the toutom ut Dambar walles. On portmantemu was conseged to a womben han. which the boathan designated is as ipeise kortor, in restererant is la carte; but it wats a mere seter 'n peasiat's hat. and the earte comsisted of the elasicul hiore and of putatues, which eonstitute a firt-whes repast in Norway. Whilst this was getting realy we started on frot to visit, the famons lavnedjuret or havine of havens, which is renowned in the tradition: of Telemark for casting lack, ly the bure fore of the dread winds that how inwo it, evervelime that is left there. The anount of savage st rifity that this racisy glen presentel to the eye can therefori be ratily imagined from the lucal tralition that at tackes a 0 it. It eost us two long hom: of scrambling alones the wooded Eidshorgekleven to reach it. lisuing fion the dark pine torest, a demp fissure pevented itself with a momitain-torrent wolling along at its lasio, and it was casy to menderstand how the west wind should acemmulate into an inveristible hurricane in this narrow pent-up ravine. Possibly, lowever, its name may be derived from the rawens finding there on minuls slentroyed by the storm, mad borne along by the stream, ur it may have been a thym ${ }^{\text {hace }}$ of punishment, like the havnagia of Jeelimul. Whether or not, the liavnedjupet, like the Riakan-foss, is a site exerptiomally picturespor, and tho view amply mpaid the tatigue of rearling it.

Ither a mightes reat at Matho, where the homeses spoher limelish, abst filly expereded in tu stay und fish hat regular in their mowemente: they go from itlang present themselver, hase bu covered reok, merrly a contral calin with a talho, and they stow away pasaints for is that, tarting the the tome al the lakes om the Mom-

 cont masts of the fandseape-t he momitainsorntemphated mh,mtagemis a position, in orry change ai form and journes is thit.

 his almele with his playful progeng. When Drs. Wivullam was at samd is, on the wostem side ut the
 "f: a hat in the mothtmoring montatam, In the tinur of which hat han kill al anly a wo ihys previously.

 Whith every man, whe was alola, would be expereted to

 -
 mone distance, it was fombed to lo ahselately neetosiary

It almat six in the wening we fombl matelles on right ar nime miles distant. For the first two miles from sumbis thore was a tolorate romb, ending, however, in : h lure tratk, which led time of all neross the river on stoping-stomes, and then ascended the step rouky gromid lying ats a larrier directly meross the valley. On reaching the mommit of this ridge, from whence the water rall batwards and westwards, we at the viow which extembed owe Sambier and aeross the 1 andinger Fiord till it was hounded by the mom-tains on the fint here nide af' the whter. 'Inminn atway we while down the narrow girgo conld he tyared the famm-thone of at mall bake at our tert. Apmrently there wav ine withet to the lake, me prexipitomaly did ther berks shores, a martow elotit bermon visible, thowed which the wator, lowing ealmly ont, rollol alonge in a motherly - limetion to lhe Matmo liand.

'I': shaw haw litte gemeral mupes cin la' trusterl, "品tinn of the Ants Kinte-is hern connpletely at southwarls firn this print, into the Matre Fiand. the map eontimes to dirert it dhe emst till it dis hatores its libits, fiom the high ridger which here rinns romplitely actons 1 be valle $y$.

 the chile $\therefore$ suitarlanil. They wem miseralile commondition, anil conserpuntly amother similar hailding was reptiren fir thw milk. I tiow solitary cows, watherins abont wior the aljoining pastarase, were the only living reatures to bee sum. Thraminis ons way hhangh the thick lirushworal hy the later side, we track along the burthern side of the valley. Sow the path worling the torrent, which at was thate diaboet with a lond ban wer the obtruling rows, white at anothor its dauk waters were howhed in stillowe in sume watring hireh womle, clothing the siders of the valley in areat jpofision, and enhatheing the secme with their bright prown foliage. "hore more descombing, we the lorewtinas une.

Crossing at strean, which fell headlong down from the meks, wo next concountered a samble af no ordi predinde all finether advance; but thanks to a lew cancks amd indyabitics, we were mahled to sain fust sulticiont fumbohl to make the prasing pravetirable. tilad we were whon it was passed ; fir : talne -top or an by allinge into the cold water levow.

At the top wat aterep rocky aseont wo linend a sumall was seamely apmrent; lut very pmably it might he atter tainarsinis a comparatively li.vel trate of rokly flesecht bought us, at len octock, to the farm ai Itjonneluil.
'Thu extalsishment monsistel of several buthinge emstracted entirely of wool, two of which wre "pln") priated to the inhabitamts, while entile amd sherg tomal shelter in the others, the lofts being well tilled with haty ant other artiches of farm use. The sitnation of liformebol wis extremely beatifal : the lmildings necupied some that srassy lam nem the shores of tho lake, which here expanded into a wide shet of water.
ning:away wo Ml limalmal the distanow ; Coll (las linm-- alture rusitis , its waters in arently thow dids ther rueks randed bor the hrouzh whicl! in 11 montwoly
"1a frosterl, winl thue ex'ompdetely at of the rima, w F'ind ther disedauges its sic:al imu"nsi

stane atroun resimuling to we miserahk. alonjuge ate wimilar luinlmilitary cows, sturace, wore hameting ond lak" sidfe, we low wh a soush $\therefore$ Now the thate dianherl ck:, while at Ilners in :ame k hol throms the salley in (1) wish there ssornding, we urempine than down fichn le of 110 orali at $\therefore$ wermed to ky tos a luw tor gain just - praticable. hir - tep or ath dly fillowel folmal : sluad い!いoll, recion, - it might he ombl. Somm :uet of rocky ; aurl it longs the firm af

Mildisur contWrre iploto
 Il tilled with - situation of lmiklings ofhores of the vet of water.
 river burst in a time caxemhe, over $n$ wall wh rock, and fiell with a houl roar into tho lake bejow. Thes luight af the lall was inconsidemble, hat fully conupensaterl by the great volnme of water, and the pirctures, in whirl it lashod over the rocks. on tha ormosite: sides of the lake ntomin ot her finm- bitildiugs, of the same deseription in those of Ifommol.

Entering the main binding we limal that the in-fumantes ate dressed cupally by night as ley dity, sumue perinurel the extrene hospitality of the Nownerians;

 welcomerl :as gurats.

 dress was al the satne datk-bhar cloth, emheridered in frout with haght roll ; it was withont shouvers, hat heve white lien on one comorasted very pretily with thes diak Quitting ther ran lio a moment, How weml wife returned with a bowl of warm milk - matintmately ahla flators.
('onsoration now turned on the avents of' the comines day, in the remoe of which wre lemmed that we hithl still is comidarable disanee to go batore ratehing the

 comersation, I amused myself by lowking momet at the armugements of the room. linough light still cutered thromgh the winlow tuallow of an inlistinet virw ot the interior, which was alse partindy lighted bey the thickering rombers that lay in the finge triandindarshaped tireplaces. Three ar four heds stesed rommel the room against the wall, all of which were will temanted, sumbe being ocenpied by as mathy ats three or thint persils.
 tained the nadience with a song ; altor whirlh, on inguiring where we eonld pass the hight, we were slawn into the inljoinines buidding, in the princigal rown of which there were three beds-two of them, fortunately, mocempied. Thu bed of a Norwegian jexami, which is always retremely wort, vary much resemblas a large woulen bux on finir whort lege; a quantity of lay limens the mattress, and over this is had a canvas sheet and a blamket. The other bed in the room was alrealy necupied 1 y two men, but, being constructed in an expunsive principle, it conld still contain two mone. In beds if this construction, two of the prosts-a heral and a font one-are attachal to a movable set of loards, which, when the prosts are drawn ont, form the botton th the new part ; a hearl and feot-boand also slide in and ont with tho rest of the expanding part, so that a perfect bed is formed of donble the size of the original one.

In this enlarged receptacle, the two peasants who accompanied us took up their quarters for the night. A rooin aljoining wis equally well stocked with men, who had come hither on the same errand. Jlouse-room was to ins ruite an unexpected luxury, and having surprise.

By alaybak bext morning wo were all awabe; Int what was cotle distlpuninhocnt when, on looking out, we liomel that man was litling in thounts. In brines that later in the day the wather might imporan. wr deternined to dili.e our rant line an hour or two. lint live, six, unt sevell biolock pussed away, null still the min continued. Su, altor a sumatantial broaklist ol raw sumberl salmon wnil liremb, which wo hat will mared of the latar.

Onr path continnol up the walluy, mal by the kidn of ruek, wer which llar rivar foll into llo lalke, wo

 in its natowe al:1mbel.

 mone dillicult fommi ; and ly this time the lavel walking land entirely exand, for the sindes at the valley mote than ordinary catition.

 denty luen lune unternated. At this spont, where the bomboot of sambis ly a ditlerent trat, juin-il our passed : cow much torn abd licerated ly tho bear, from whose mbrares the poor animal somed with a ake, from kaysacks, purneding their thirst with water mixed with sone riveneal, which, theye nsider, remlers the drink more whidesome.

I ham ahmot expectul that there wonle have heen a genemal assembly of lumters, but it semond is ot the nations of each villag. ware to batit in the country manest to their homes. 'L's our prity, consisting "f twolve men, was apporionm the northern side of the vally ; another baul from Sandvig taking the south sidn. Sum, two of the fuasants, quitting us, ascended the north side of the valley, so as to command the summit of the ridue. Inmodiately upon the report of their tire-am- amouncing to us that they had gained their josition, we also set oft.

Fion or five stenans, rushing down from the heights t. join the river, ham hare to be forded, but, being searedy above our knees, they were passed withont diftienlty. Xuw we seramblad along. keeping a vigilant watel, and firing onr guns to rouse the bear from its larking-place, and also as signals to other jeasants on the oplosite side of the valley. Consilering the wide patent of ground which we covered, it was striking that mo birt, ather harge or sumbl, were soen.

The wempus of our paty were of varions deserpe-which he hat lately titted a new. hat very ruke, stock; amother was armod with a large howse pistol; while an axe formed the compurne of it thim. The :hymratus used hy the pasants for lemding their whus was comtaninge bullete, suspembal from the ned ly it cormet , pamtity lobut asertained he oberving how powide lugitg added it it did mot stand high emmagh. A pice of tow was mest rammed down and well hammered atter which fillowed the forming hate if the patince, ath attembed with the probalility of the ram-womd bedr?

Untirtuntaly waw notaine of Bruin : hat that the "plomitu side of the river. Whike the ther two were denth: meither hat hem in the has desomeal, and stank of tionel.

 when the sun at intervin hroking thengh the dark the grem hireders, limt the timst waw of all wals ols. Gainal from a lidd roch-the linuit of our mather. Alout two mites from this - gat at eramal wall of rowls almuly wruinated the valluy ; wor this the river, of sublime molitule.

 rout of the man hewels, where the raw smakd shanis who areompanimb wore but slighty acpuanted with hat been aluont dry on the forions armime were of tha puople badouging to the llardaner district, strugly huilt. Their itress, that peembar tor the whote of the Iherenstift, or provine of Chergen, emsisted of a romul jacket of hue cloth, with trousere and wointent of the samo material, the butcons being of silver;

while a flat-erowned ghazed lat was wom on the hemi.
Afur an walk of :blut thirty miles, in me almost incessant min, it wats a great delight to timd ourselves once mare mber the rewt ot our herpitable triend at Smuls.
Tu return, hwever, to our own humbe jorealings, not withistambing our wan of sheerss in lagging plantigrades, the the, manly, chererth, and haspitable clatacwhich was not always strengthered in the vales below. Wre do not, however, men in this agpeial and immediate instance, for, descemding firmu Iloeghand tu Elaforss, at the fill of water that tums soremal mills, we milht of the luxurios :and :ypliances of the mont perfece civilis"' ion, mut nine milo from a region over whith the bear still roves: Xormay is, from its permiar coulizuation, a "omutry of remarkable contrate in this meper. Ihic was on the shores of the cathime lampkils also plying on the lake itecti: Skien of Themark, :ma we fancied tha mere busimes wats dinur that at the furner plate. The town is ate mally of :n whin cathalie claipm.

V.

 Kine Chathe XV. wis abnot to make the satme exand tim! of phets and :udroteres-a manardo, in crary shase of the wand made fie his comatry. We tirst met the bemareh in the sarden of the miversity.

 the :rrivit of the students whe hath bern umen a fatmonine expelition th the ir follow laminh and

 It is man mirceselly shmitted, that the raphin strides than Numath hats mate in wealth nud butnlation since abmbant lenpes tor the "uture. 'The kiug was alout determinul tor fullow in lia wake. It wrind give us
 I"pmbation assembled and, at dibettant members of the Bibuolugisal sacioty, of stadying their dypers and costulues.

The finther ditte delay thes mitained was turned to ndvantage in making firther merpaintance with the timel ourselves ble triend at c ;-wocerlings, muging plantiitahle chatac-小י impression, - vales bolow. fial and immeHhatlo tur. ctal mills, wo Med into the the moat perrexion over is, from it natkahbe conshores of the "atcre, at whome and and lows itcchd: Nkien nir the timher busimess wats wol is at thally consersumed. is me of the sh $h$, th th thi. "l ichat": atave lat ruins 11.18-1hac.nRs.

maication exa returned to ar a const trib Homent when (her sumb ex1st :HIt :urive. $k$ :mel sincorr. muntirelt, in (antutry W lu' miversity. 10 to echebrate l.,nish and Timitat. 'Jhat aliolls of joy. 1:31, 1 strinles pulation sine sh yoks, give ung wis nlont lays, allil wo roblid give 11 . (e) matsies ot rumers of the types mul wis turned la nee with the locekes, as they call the villas in the emvirons of Christiania. It is just as if" we said "luck," the term positively signifying the illight, phasme, or folly of the particular tenant or proprieter. Thas, since nobinty has been demolished, the lamded proprietors, timber merchants, miners, graziers, and the civil and military authurities, constitute the aristoracy of the eomutry, amb each has his homelor, to which he adils his own mane. At one point of the Aker Mommatans is the laecke of al. Thorvald, in the siwiss style ; unar it, the loneke of M. Thomas, in the Italian; :mel, on the borders of the Gult; the modest locelke of Hme. de L ——— while, on the opposite shore, is themenshll, the royal loceke-a litilocanlle, with tumets in madioval style, much athected by the late king, the son ut Bornadote. Tiedemand, the Ciremze of the North, has mianted the history of the Nowerian peasint from his hirth to his death, on the pands, and Wahl, Frick, and Gule, have illustrated the most batutitul seenes of A visit to thearshatl is thms, in licet, a visit to Nowny, in miniature.

Thanks to foblowing suite to a monarel, ame first relay in quitting Christiamia was beneath the grnas of the pretty fortress of Osearsborg, ramely visited by tomrists, and which stimds on its rocky islet like an Built in the shapre of a semicirele, and domatated by a "romblated "awer, Osearsberg is moment with sixtythre sums. Its there batteries command the pasige, which, at that point, hats a widih not exceroling l, tion leet. The construetions aro of granite and purfectly solis. Wra presontal oumelves hetere the commandiant in order to obtain the neessany nermission to visit the fortress. Wir tand him surbumbed hy mobes than eleven children, ill in monming for their mother, and the sight of this fimily, moler the sole gumelianship ot at retroan, isolated upon at rock, hemmed in ly granite walls and the applianese of war, hat in it something that was perviarly tumehing. The dest maghtere aramenlly proment us with $n$ ghass of wine and the hrave commandat did the homour of the tiset himseli. An atillery oflier joined the party, and when visiting tho latterios that woreat the level of the sem, propmed a bath, a pookesithom which was joyously atecopiem, Te himsitf set the example lystripling in anoment. His propurtions were indeed tomly hereulean, and his calves wrive of tromembans calibre. Ite must decidedy hawe hunted harss lin a javenile reereation. He adhed to these alvantuses another speeialty-he wore no linen; he allawed himselfa talse collar only on lestival diys. Ifter onr military inspection, whituh hasted :t siond home, he insistal upen whe purtaking of hospitality at his quarters, where his frimols were assombled to colehate his hivilutay. As every one insisted "pen driuking with the isiturs, the trinl was mother more than we had comberl ifen, and we wero but too glat to luat ar retrat l core it was too bate to dos so without a lose of persomal dignity. The eapital of Nomway hais a wholo atherelago of little forified islets besides Osearsorge, as mamal and artitional detemes to its ance an contemplated in the setting sum.

Fortitieations, formitahbe as they are by art, e!ill givo an idea of hammity, alloeit by no memas muler its must inviting asperts; and the emotrast was not the lese when, exchanging 1 isarshorg for the gray and barren roeks of the Languamad. Wut even here we could, hy the help of the ghas, distimgnish little vases of vorlure, haply and sechded valleys, belted with wood and carpeted with greenswand, in which picturespue wooldy houses recmed to proclaim the case and confort of their temants. It was one sutecession ot rocky islands, and we were halpy when we east andhor at the tishing town ot Kingero, which is tomimated hy astupemduns rock that verms as if chelt in two by the thmuter, ind where we intulged in the oysters amd hosters, for whieh the place is celebated far :mal wide. (See 1, 24.)

On leaving this latter tishing-town, wo were no som, and its unchlateny mot funs soon becan to tell upon and dismpremed down helos. Comversation becano rather tored anome the wentlemen, and Mt: 'Thom, a phetoraphie artist who wats of the puty, lanked as hatack as his wwa datk ehamber. hackity, we mon attaned isemal, where the king was to dine, and the liring of gratitguns, mingled with tho shout of tho we minged one ardamations to those which preeded the l'eler-ther sessel whiel hare his Norwegian mage'sty.

Aromal, proclamed by scme to he the Venioo of the North, is certainly a ehaming eity. It: homses, stretehine along ther shome hawe rxtomed till they lawe
 A.del with orehards and finest trees. Emband, the s peote lined at catal cowered with wessels ot divers ations. 'The inhabitanto of the phev, satid to mmber with to honatu thoir somerign. In julse by the hill of fars, it might have heen siven at firediwid, for fish pedominated latoly; hut the procerting were somewhat more boistrous thath wre crer withessed at the "Pratalsar" we "Sceptre" The chair was talien hy a white hairal old gent leman, who gave the tuats, and hamralls. athl twolve elaps of the hamk, hate with at precisinn that sulficiontly testified that they wew well practised in the pertomance. When the healh to be almak wats that af some expecial fitworite, the there hurahs were given over agati, with the (werice claps of the batul reperted. dill, in the commation, we lont a previse mentory of the momber.

The mext lay's jombey tomk ns to Christimsiani, and which ramke tis the lourth city of Norwat: It is
 It was fommed hy Christian IV.: amb its hathour is one ot the besi in Norway: The eatherhath is at fine buildins of gray stome, and mank next to those of 'Throndhjem and stavamer. Whe situation of the town "pon the 'Toputhe tion with the romersiving aromed it on the land side of the get hatisht, is strikinesty pio-and the 'lourivilal edr, which presentat sume grod tishing, erters the fiod chaso mbon the sast side of the town. Thae is a time bridge wer the river leading to Odilenas chmeh, a building of some antiguit!. In the limio stome, supposed to bo as ohd as the middle of the eleventh century.

thor photogriphic artist, in his ardour to oltain a gool inpression of a pine-tree in the churehyard, so renowned for its age that it enjoys a placo in the city arms, veutured into a house opposite. He was met on the stairease by 4 young and good looking lady in a white dressing-gown, and who with the utmost simplicity replied to his request to that effect by showing the way to the window of her own bedroom. A canine pet alone exhibited signs of petalance at the intrusion from between the bed eurtains. Before the operation was over the good lady of the house reappeared, bearing a eup of coffee and dressed in a thming coloured silk with a cap well laden with red flowers and followed by her amiable spouse, who buried his vexation in clouds of smoke. Our pliotographer declares that she did not look half so pretty as when he first met her on the staircase, notwithstanding the cup of coffee so politely tendered. In order to recover a proper frame of mind, he was reduced to putting up his machinery in a less remarkable spot, and consigning his eollection to the pesthouse and lazaretto of Christiansand, the latter perched ujon a solitary aud precipitous rock looking as forbidding as the plagne-struck patients for whose benefit it was supposed to be reserved. There was a dinner as usual at Chvistiansand, followed by a ball, at which there were present a whole bery of fair hadies. All were happy, and our photographer partieularly so, for, as he afterwords dechared, he took particular credit to himself for having diseovered one of the prettiest and most retired ladies in the room-a widow in her ## costumes at hitterdal.

weeds-and of luving brought out her eharms to the not a hail urrangement, as we thereby avoided the delight of overy one present by exhibiting her in in idvantageous polkn. Artists are certainly the most self-denying persons in the world; they never think of anything but in an artistic point of view, and our photographer did not think so mench of admiring his fuir purtuer himself as ho did of rendering her charms perceptible to the community at large.

VI,

A Rotal Prooress - Nouthempry Temminaton of tas Seandinatian Mountaing - Beavtirul Seeseny - A stape-btavek lambel-Wild hibary moomland.
Himing eaeh of us a eurriole at Christiansand, wo started thence in the train of royalty for Stavanger, worst part of the const. His Majesty, who latd adopoted the national costume, was everywhere saluted with the most lively acchamations on his progress, and as we formed part of the procession wo came in for our fragmentary slume of the ovation. The camvan consisted altogether of some tifteen carrioles, and a greup of about thirty mountel peasants gathered romid the one in which the king travelled to torm n kind of eseort. llut as in Norway the rond is often very nurrow this was not always easy to enrry into eflect, somo had to go before, nome to drop behind, not without un oecasional ruh; and some were not unfrequently tumbled over the side of the roeky shelf which did duty as a highway, In no country is cquality so much talked of as in France, and in no commery is it so great a reality as in Norway. Yom postillion looks upon his tare as not an iota better than himself; tho peasant rather looks down than up to his govermment, for as a proprictor of the soil he stands in his own estination, and that of his cuuntrymen, higher than any civil or military oflicer of whatever rank. It is hence almost impossible to make a good servant out of a Norwegian. Now, as the mounted farmers formed on this occasion a voluntary and an extemporised guard of honour, laving like the Bashi-Baznks no head, it was natural that they should resent sometimes the inconveniences which they were put to in performing their rouchsafel service. Not only did the skydskirl come in for his share of abuse, but sundry cholerie words must have reached the ears of royalty itself, ind in one or two of the worst dilemmas we really expeeted tho king and his skydskarl would have cone to blows with the guarl of honour. It was, however, a source of infinite merriment to those who were following, according to the best of their abilities, and those of their enduring little ponies, behind.

The country that we were thaversing was not less rocky and mountainous than the rest of Norway. A ford of some two ami-a-half miles wide ocempied the bottom of the Molama, a valley in which corn is said to ripen earlier than anywhere else in tho country. After terrifying the salmon and trout that had come up the Bogue river in expectation of meeting English anglers, by dashing through its rippling waters, and after having been ferried over the Trys Fiord, wo stopped to dime at Mandal, a small town of little note except as a lurbour of refuge, and though the centre of which $a$ trout stream finds its way to the sea.

At this point the great Scandinavian elain of mountains dips into tho sea, and the rond is carried aeross it, erossing the valleys and ringes at right angles. As the hills are very rocky, the valleys much interspersed with lakes and arms of the sea, and as the abundant wood is of a more varied character, owing to the milder climate, than is common in theso northern regions, and as all the features of the hantsenpe are upon a moderate scale, there is an endless variety of the most pleasing oljecta, and the truvellev passes tor seventy or eighty miles throngh a series of the most charming seenes of roek, wool, and water, which sweep, before his eyes with a rapidity of stecession and prodigality of beanty that would perhaps be difienlt to match ia Enrope.

Passing the night at the presbytery of Lyndgal, we next hay crossed the Lyughdal's river, and procecded ? ${ }^{\prime}$ the pieturesina valley to wher the waters expanded intu the Lyng. Vand, whieh was lont in the horizon of bho mountains. Thenee we hat to ascomil and desecmi over tho propetual hills till we reached the deep and marrow inlet of Fenh, where the Winna dows into the liord, and where we hat to cross the waters hemaed in hy precipitons rocks in a ferry-lont. We met on the opposite side a lospitable merelanatN. Thensen, by mune-who, chated at laving , fust received royalty, insisted upon extending his hospitality to our amble selves. The good man wept tears of joy intu his jurt as he imbibed in ghass to ont health. The king hidd slanken him twice by the hand. 1le pointed to the solin whero his majesty had deigned to sit. That piece of furniture, ho said, loclonged for the future to history!

We arrived at noon at Flekkefiotd, is small town
eontaining at ordinary times about 3,000 inhabitants, and the hirbour being good earrying on a considerable trule. We were under obligations for a home at a private house, for the only inn in the place was crowded with guests who had cone from tho eountry to partako of the banguet that was to be given to tho king. The zeal of the lalies had manifested itself in a particular direction; they were not to partake of the banquet, but they had all put on white aprons in order to he allowed to be present as attendats. They were assisted in this by their sons, who also volnuteered is waiters. The banquet over, a procession was organised to parade the town; an aide-de-camp gave his arm to a fat minister of the church, another preferred tendering his to a pretty young person, a native of Bergen, who had been sent by her family to Ftekke fiord, in the hope of detaching her from a passionate devotion to the drama. The theatrical aspect of the little town, generally so peacenble-the flags, music and flowers, the brilliunt uniforms of the court, and the honour done to lier by the king's aide-de-camp, aroused, however, all the dormant artistic instinets of tho young girl, and she mingled with the procession with gleaming eye and shouts of joy, as she leant upon her tall military supporter.

The road that led from Flokkefiord to the little town of Ekersund, where we plassed the night, lay for the first part along the borders of tho take of Lundesvand, of charming aspeet, and bordered with mountains, which in the varied loliage of the acelivities bore as much of a Swiss as of a Norwegian elaracter; and after having turned tho end of the lake we were perfeetly buried in a wooded valley, where silence was only interrupted by the somul of talling waters. Now and then, as in the neighbourhool of Eide, tho silver of a mountain torrent was disclosed to view; but beyond this, the aspect of the country changed to that of a more or less monotonons morass that seemed like a petrified sen, or the former bed of the ocean strewn with great boulders and rocky masses demuded of evory frigment of vegetation, and which stretched away beyond the limits of tho horizon. It is said that this wild dreary moor, the roal over which abont Haar is actually taken over tho sea-beach below the level of the high tides, was once cultivated and cortainly wooded, for the peat bogs contain the trunks of great trees that testify to the olilen vegetation of these now maked plains. Devastated ly King Harald Haardfiger in the year 1700, this region is said never to have reganed its ancient fertility. It was not without a feeling ni pleasmre that suddenly aml at an abrupt turn of the raad, we found the calm and blue expanse of the weenn beliore us, and that fire the rest of the diyy we kept along its sandy shores. As wo approncheal Stavanger wo met with more enltivation, hat no trees, and here and there our curiosity was rivetted by one of those batia or upright stones which have given so much ocenpation to antifuries.

VII.

Ahmer at Sthanoru-Its Cathemal-Tue MardanorrFiom - Castle of Rosespal. - Asck. T of the Fologe fond-('ostemes of the Peasants-Festifithes at Ul. lessyang-liab Weather on the Flond.
'Tiue urbun guard of volunteers of' Stavanger, preceded by a lat and respectable banker, who did dnty as. drummer to tho regiment, received the juince at the inhabitants, considerable a home at a was crowiled mintry to pargiven to the sted itself in to partake of ite aprons in whuts. They o voluntecred ion was orgn:mip gave his ther preferred n, a native of ly to Flekke i a passionate aspect of the flags, music the court, and aide-de-camp, ic instinets of the procession he leant npon to the little night, lay for ke of Lundesd with mouncelivities bore himacter ; and we were pere silence was waters. Now iide, the silver to view ; but namged to that at seemed liko ocean strewn puded of every retehel away waid that this about Haar is w the level of and certuinly ranks of great of these now farald Haardsaid never to is not without f at an abrupt blue expminse est of tho day e a hat no trees, vitted by one have given so e llardanorrof the rozarOF TIE
WHES AT Ul-
episcopal palaee. Theclergy were, however, assembled at the entrance of tho cathedral, ant, as we happened to arrive first, we eansed a momentary perturbation in the holy group, which, however, soon prassed over, aml the dem, wisling to reserve his erudition for royalty, naintained a dignified silence, until his arrival. The catheiral of Stnvanger is considerol, with the exceprtion of that of Throndlyjem, to be the most perfect specimen of the architecturo of the Mitdle Ages in Norway. One writer describes it as lalf Gothic and half Byantine, while another says, that it is remarkablo that the Gothic of the thirteenth contury in Norway is of the army English chmacter. The choir is lighted up hy a rich roso of old painted glass, but the pulpit and henches, of beantiful carved oak, were disguised with white paint.

Stavanger is luilt on the north-east side of a largo promontary in Stunvinger fiord, and commands beantifill views ower tho fiom, and the range of momatains in the distance, to the east ant north-east, extending un to the lardanger range. A small islamd in front of tho town renders the liarbour one of tho most securo on the conast. We were mabled to obitain a delightinl view of tho town, and of the environs, from the top of a ligh tower, smmonnted by a lastern, where a look-out is kept for tires, is at Constantinople. The struets are murrow and torthoms, mind the 12,000 to 20,000 inhahitants are tor the mont part engaged in the herring-tishery, the ammal enteh of which a verages between 300, th0 0 and 490,000 tharrels, and whide are exported to Finmes, Engham, aml other eountries.
 acording to a late retom, 97 , bido toms entered in one yent, and 31,408 toms departed.

W, left Stavanger by moonlight, and awoke next morning in the renowned Lawlinuru timol, justly considered to be one of the most pictureque in Norway. Untortmately it was raining at tho time, and the glatiens of the Fotgramben only presinted their peaks ,ust abovo the elouds, We linil, however, alterwards, full time to contemplate then at onv leismers. The first print multe was the pretty lay of Krindherved fiom, with its choreh and easilu ot Rosendal, an ancient baromial residenur, edebrated throughout all this comstry fire its :mmitions midast mone of the stermest ami wildest senomy of Norway. The hamial residence is curions, as heing one of the few mamomial homses now lett in Norwny. 'The churcl, elose by, is of steme, nt early the bamons of Rosemdial. The present awner is their lineal descerndant, laut lowars no title, siner the abolitiom of all tithes in 181.1.
The shome was eovered with peasant-women all in the most mitiom gath, a black head-lyess, of a pronliav shapn, shirt-owlan's and neek-eloth, like man, blatek juekets, and searlet waisteonts. They lowked like a regimont of soldiers. (sice lb. 21.) I'he gardens at Rosemblal tave an idea of the mildness of the climate: nuts and apricots ripened in the upen air: The weat ther luekily cheared up tom, amd allowed us to myoy the beandy of the scenery, which presented swmething new to contemplate at eviry angle of the gult, which resembled atore a swiss lako than a Norwegrian ford, Majostio monnlaius roso leland Rosendal, mul extemd in an irverghar chain towards the north-enst, finming the well-known range of the bolgetonden; but the be notual suow, from which they take their mane (tomen), searcely יןmears from below, as it hes on their flat summits, or is concealed by nearer heights. We did not ascend theso stupendous heights, but Professor Furbes elin, and we extract an necomet of theso remarkable snow-fields, from his interesting work, premising that hestarted from Oevrehus, at the very top of the Mornanger fiord.

One difficalty connected with travelling in Norway is this, tlat the great variations in weather, aud the frequent necessity of sitting manny hours in an open boat, makes it. absolutely necessary to carry it large stoek of warm clothing, which becomes most hurdensome whon strictly pedestrian excursions intervenc. Here thero was no help. Our whole luggage minst be earried across the snow-field. Our host, with his son and danghter, undertook it. Wo thought that the girl hatl nore than her share, whilst tho liny, who was younger, was rather spared. Swale himself carried a heary burden, considering the toilsome ascont. They all nsed in rope, with a wooden rumner upon it, wheh as they amploy for collecting and carrying great bumlles of hiay. As all the arrangements were made with great deliberation and gavity, on the part of the fimily, it was half-past six a.m. before we were realy to start.

The little valley of Oevrehnus, which eontinurs the dipression of the Mormger fiorl, is short amd steep; but the lower part is remarkably verdant, and heautifully diversificil by rock and wood. As we wound with our little train along the stecp footpath, amongst the dewy meadows, we met plenty of peasants intent, like those of Bondhus, on securing their ammal harvest of hary. At length the way hecame very steep indeed, though a kind of track might be traced up all the way up to the borders of the snow, which is frequented by tho few travellers who pass this way, and by sonn" goatherds, who wero already beline us with their tlocks on the hill sides. The chief depression of the vallyy winds towards the south, but wo kept right onwinds in a perfectly straight line, east of the hambet which we haul lett, whieh, with the fiorl heyond, seemed, on looking back, still ahmost muler our feet, wher wo had ben laborionsly ascending for three hums. Wie were obliged to matrh slowly, on account of our havilyladen attendints, and it was half-past ten when we reached the low of the snow. The ancond hometer - Which I had examined wry frequently during tho iscont-scemed still to act correctly; and trom its indieation I whained a height, of 3,700 tiont above tho hamlet of Oevrehuns, which is but little chevated (perhipse from 100 to 200 ficet) above the sea. Wo rested a goorl while hefore ritering on the "fomb," or snowtichl, and und guides elined on their nsual homely fare of flue brod and butter. We shonh have done well to follow their axample, font I had much under-estimated the extent of our marel orer the snow, ant the inconvoniane of halting the"re. In ficet, julging firom the map of Munch (anl, I believe, every other), it would aprar an if Odde, an Sor tiard, whither we were boumel, lay precisely opposite to the Moranger fiotd, on the ather side of the Folge fond. Had this been the ense, we should only have had to cross the "fomd" in its narrownst dimension, which is not great ; hat tho ase in widhly ditlorent-the track to be pursmed rimes parallel to the chain along its highest ridge tor a long way, On gaining the top of the neclivity, which wo hat had in our viow from the moment of leaving Ocrehmens, we entered, all at oneo, upon the table-land of the Folgetomb, one sheet of bright nenrly level were packed l. I sutliered less inured to $\dot{f}$, and having nad about us, pret, and his mit, that I inhe provisions Mr. (iillon's my fricmel nte of the energy to tall bofore the sumw, mid the village of was too verand weary, we anst ebaracterand laughter; reded to prer ut themselves ir respectahioof' Tin'kbein. amid be altoa mather rudely they un!ues. hat on presive with various C'luisition, aml ily very mulike me prionsly, al in a bent io Bustritun, for dings: it was - in thwir hast e of the water, ming: secene of picture spluely lhere a turrent. surin: of casambet groupel H1, allid whase untaily: We It the peasants of rude suathe water of the - it. level. It. rivulit, which mals ! ". $\%$ hours - till he seres: (hins of : : comsfish.

usvang, whose
 I pentsunts and cil together to a a crowd there :anl the girls, tumk ap peaturo is juted among thenselves for priority. It was thus that we were cmabled to obtain so eapital a representation of tho cap of the Harelanger pensint, which is of thick blue cloth, emiroidered, and rises like a sort of that lionseshoo above the hend, the eloth being stretehed over a frame of some sort to give it that figure. The aress is of the same material, very neatly combroidered with red and white on the breast, arms, and waist. (See 1. 32.)

The old men, with scarlet waistcoats deconatel with great silver buttens and their jackets withont sloeves, reminded us of the costume of the age of Lonis XIV. We were enabled to seeure a portrait which might do for that of John Bondhums, Firbers's guide owre the Folgefind, and whom he deseribes as a mont picturespuo figmer, very tall and oner museular, hut still erect, and with a commanding, yet mild and sombre, expression of cmutename. (Sre 29.)

A violin was called into play, and soon the villagers, who were joined by a whole bevy of young halins in white dresses, logran to dance upon the greensward in frome of the fursbytery. The dinghters of the ministers minglow here in this hance with the peavante, and the gran trame in br mountains was quite Idyllic. The king, ielighted with tho simets and with the people, hairl also, in store for them an unexperted pleasure. Ite proposul t." the ministers and to their tamilies, as well as to the more imbluential inhabitants, to spembltecrming on haurd the stemur, thes Fibher, a promsul which they neweptem with whthosliasm. The glahhens was miversal, mul the hadies, havius secured their shawls, hurviel away to the showe and, coubarking in lmats, the st:amer puit oll' to the somad uf military musie. The air luing tresh, perminim (1) damer wat ghationsly siven, and :as soon availat oft, whilnt the chlerly prople partonk of tumblers of purch. The king, wha hall in his cabin some towers from Chris. tiania, gallantly offered them in exchange to the gomes laties for tlowers of Ullenswang. At length, ather is stroll amid these lake mal mountain beanties of som two or three hours' daration, night having come on, the festivities were brought to a close by a diselargo of lire-works, to the intinite delight of the peasants, who had never witnessed anything of the kind, and the expression of whase physingnomies, when lit up by hlue fires and roman cundles, was most amsing to ecintemplate. The parishioners of Uliensrang will long remomber the pleasures of that ev ening.

The same seches witnessed under different appeets, various cirenmstanes, or even peenliar frumes af mind, may produce very diflerent impressions. Dts,

NOMEN OF ROSENDAL.

Wyudham navigated the Inarlanger fiod under untoward ciremastances of bal weather, and premising that he returned to the splendid country at the heal of the firm atter visiting Bergen, and explored tho wonder of the Voring Foss at the same time, we will join company, muter somewhat singular circumstances, with the hast-named travelier at Sindvig, from whence he had procended to his first hear hunt.
The rain next morning was still falling in torrents, nud the wind blew such a gale as to preelude all possitility of venturing upon the fiorl. This was a great mortifieation, as we had intendel starting early in a boat up the fiord. The hoatmen assured us that $t_{1}$, attempt to leave in sueh wather would he perfect malness; and, as the only winas of travelling was by water, on neernant of the precipituns sides of the fircl, we were doomed to spoul the greater part of the day in looking out of the window at the min and the magpies on the appletrees.
Towards the aitemoon the wind, slightly ahating, gave us some hype: and we determined, it possible, to start without fiuther detay. But onr plans hand now beem changed, on :ucoment of the b:ad weather, and we rumber, instema of visiting the Folgetiond at Bundeluns, and other pheees of interest on the fiord, coneluding with the Voring Foss, the highest watertiall but one in Eu-rupe-tre gis striaght to the cud of the tiond, and thence with ath speed to the uppre parts of the Sogne tiund, where we boped to rearh a drier climate.
But it was very ditienlt to fimel buatmen to areompany us; tor they all stailily refised to geatany prir: At hast, however, we were fortunate enough to secure the services of two mell as far us the Eite, at the heoll of a hanoh inlet, ealled the Gravens fiord. Late in the afternom we walked down to the limulingplace, and, binding fiarewell to our kind friends, kay down on the hay at the bottom of the buat. Wraped in , mur makintosh coats, and with a large india-rubber sheet-seven feet loarg by time broad-drawn wer us, we prepared to defy the torrents of rain. In another instant the sail was rum up and the boab was dashing alhis over the waves.

Nowecgian boats are peculiarly built; they are: almost that-lwithmul, low amidships, but rixing high at stem and stern in a sharp eurve, both being cxaetly similat: 'The rudder is curved to fit the stern, and very niurow ; but the want of breadth is compensated hy the depth to which it descends ints, the water: in a transerse direetion, through a hole in the top of it, is tixed ene end of a dlat piece of wood nbout a foot long, to the other end of whicha stick, of about a gard in length, is attached by a couple of iron loops or staples. This stick the coxswain hollw in his haud, muder his arm, steering the boat by merely moving the stiek longitulinally isuchwards and forwards. The ordinary molo of stecring with a tiller would ho impractieable, the steersman's seat being placel rather far forwarl ; so that the und of the tiller would be often fiur beyond the side of the boat and quite out of reach. One alvantage of the Norwegian plan is that tho coswain need never move his body in the smathent degree. whatever may be the position of the ruller.
The wind, though lesis violent than it had meen in the forenoon, was still blowing harl ; and, even liefure leavine the comparatively calm waters of the hay, two or the" sharp squalls rushed upon us-a foretante only of what we should experience on the open tiorit. Beyond the peint of the ishand could be seen whitecrested waves rolling angrily along. The atpeet of the weather was very threatenins, aurl, in reality, we would ghally have returned to sametrig.
lwa entiately on leaving the shedter of the island, up went the bows of the boat-then followet a lurch, and a wave dashing against the sile, though cleverly avoidel by the cosswain, show red a drenchins spray over ti, lithe craft. Ther wind, fortmately, was fivourable fir the direction in which we were going ; and, the main and firesal being well filled, the loat homel 1 rapilly over the waves.

Th ${ }_{1}$. Inties of the wailors were mo sinecures, the frequent - envence of spualls requiring grat watchfitness. One man steerel ant managed the main sheet; while tar vether, sitting by the mast, hedd, in one hand, the peak halliaeds (or rope tion hoisting the sail), and, in the oth r , a rope at tachet tothe prak by which it would be low rel at any instant. Nu nutur was a squall ob-served-weyping over the waves, tham the mainsail was haulet :apidly down, and held tirmly till the gust had rushed piat and all inmediat dinger was over.

The fuasants were fine danutless tellows, aul worked well and decisively tugether as they whistled and sang despite of the stora. Ont it these was the man who had ace mpanied me on the previons day, and from him we gainel some information abont the ressult of the bear-hat. bruin haul ant beon seen hy any one, having he remarked, probaldy tiken atarm at the gmo which the preople of the surters hand been winstintly tiring inth by day ame night, and lecannen to more praceable valliys.
liy the shore in some phats, at the menths of rimen, we saw: high seadionts werhanging the timel : on thes. when the salmon begin to ascend the river-, a masani takes lhis pasition, watching is net below, which he draw- suchandy ip as the tish pase aser. Three or four large ducks, at whe time, came sailiug wer the boat within easy shot ; hut the sums behes will ensered up ant motected from the bain, the birds baseed liy uиhur".
As vening drew on, the stom semed rather to increa - and some territic upalls tried the wow and vigilauer on' the luat men to the fillest extmin ; nul, wo theatoming was the angeet of the sky, that it was determinel at me to make for lamb, aid rim the hat ashore at the first habitation that conld hee serns. Alout an hour atterwats we laudel at a small jotty, nene a neat little eottise, whence a man, on seming gur aproach, eatme ont mail kindly as*isted ns in cartying the laysuge up firm the Lum.

What is delight it wast to beonce more sate on dry land after tour hours on the boisterone ford. Fater ing the entage, we were shown into a large room, renalered insulpuntably hat by a close stove. At a loone a woman was sitting at work, busily employed in weaving the thick colourml blamkets usel as bed-covers, and ilso in the boats. Weaving being one of the clicet in-toor oceunations of the Norwegtian pasint women, scarcely a cottage or firm-house is to be met with which the not ${ }^{\text {nissesss a }}$ a lorm.

Altheugh we latd brought with us all our laggnge, we had not yet inguired whether we conhl be acommodated fin the night, laving hitherth been so much neerpied in getting under shelter. However, no ditheulty was made, and we were at once shown into an minhabited rom on the gromed floor.
In one conner of the aprement storal a boll. Besiless this was a clest of drawers and thrce large wooden bexes, painted haw and rell, on which were inveribed the: names of the persoms moler whose ambpiens they hand heen huilt, aud alse the dite of structure. In these trunks, which ine sumetimes :hmont three feet high, three brom, inn tive long, the prasimts stow away their valuable gouds aul chattels: and the construction of one of these receptacles is prolnaly an event in a peasant's lite. Lurne emmer stool a pile of flat-brod (literally that breal), the food of the country. It is made of fiue barley meal, not of oatincal, still less comse oatmeal. 1 uever even saw oatmat in Norway, though I often asked for it ; and way allways whl, without exeeption, that flal-hrom was male of harly meat. Flad-hrox is baked in thin cireular eakes of ahout two feet in diameter; and, as it will keep fir a great leneth of time, there is usually a large quantity in stock, kept in store-houses, or, failing them, in any largo unecenpied room. Wheaten hreal, "xoppting in the chief towns, such as Chistianis or bergh, is wer met with; but the peasants make re brem, whill they bake in small loaves, or rather liuger rolls, and dixtinguish them by the mane of hase-brin, or aike liteal.
Supger was onr finst considetation attur intalling ouselves in our new quatters. Wheaten hreme and a piece of baton from our provision hox. plawh upon enamelled iron plates, were lait out on onle of th.- lisg loxes; and tea laving latill mate in the lithe teapot belonsing t. our eanp-kethe, which routnine hesides plates, eups, kniver, torks, and sjomas, wo wat dww cherertully to ind meal.
After sulpre we drew lot: for the lod, which foll to an' ; lat the inamatos of the eotetge happened just then th entor, and finding, to tharir great nstomishment, that we were preparing another sheping place unm tho thon. most gool-naturelly whildid us with another mattress.

Next morning, to our great joy, the hiom was quite calm, and we hastily preparal tor a stath. In return fir the nidht's lodiging we grive the cottagus halti :
 :turb before lating, 1 prurchased one of the coloured Whakets fir tour dhars, of about 1Ns. of Buglislr mony: The houmen, on hearing the price, uravely -howk thuid henns, leaving me to supposio that I had been areatly iupused upon: hat I fomul that the usual value had conty been excerled ly lalf a dollat, whieh was not liy any mans regrettel, as the blanket atterwath proved of asential use.
'Tlar wind thound it hail greatly abated, firtumately still conthued to low from the sma plarter; and we glided maphilly upt the sombre tiond. But the weather iord. Enter . largo room, c, At a loom syet in weavof the clief lsiut women, be met with our linggnge, lid be accombeen so muels ever, iw, ditlilown into :n a bect. Bethree large which wire or whe athe-- uiftructure. :llmont three ceasinto stow aul the coinprobably an tooul a pile of the rountry. nral, still less I in Norway, ys toll, withmarl.y meal. of about two Groit lengtl a stock, kept aryo unoenin the chief 4 never met - which they 4 , mul listinake hreal. or it-talling l hrexul and a pheal monn are of thi. ling lic litthe teadh remtaineal rorli, wo sat which foll to red juent then shanent, that (x) unn tho vith mother ml was quita
In menurn tagers halit : atly phasent: the colenred of Fhylisht rico, gravely ethat I had nat tho usual lollatr, which lanket niter-

, firtunately

 ter; and we tho weatlerwas fir from settled, for soon after our departure the min begin again to fall. At intervals the sma, breaking through the dense mass of overhayging cloud, inparted to the semery a more cheerfin assuct than it had hitherto worn; lat still the mists flonted along the tops of the elifls, apparently resolved that the beanties of the fierel should not le diselosed. On the whole I must contess that the finds of Norway did not fulfil my expectations; for though excectingly benutiful, they become, after a time, very monotomins.
'The great abundance of water in this district was very striking, reminding one of the Pyrences : fomming cascalles poured down the roeks in all directions; some were of very considerablo siza, giving audilde intimattions of their presence ; while others, discernible only ly a white streak, which, frequently reaching in one mubroken line from the summit of the clitlis to tha green waves of the finrel, bore more resemblance to a lones thread then a strean of water.
On nearing the ${ }^{\text {moint }}$ where the fiorl scparates into two branches, one of which leals to Eith, near Graven, full the other to Uthe, the sme broks through the clouls aud seconel to promise better weather. For a moment we hesitated whether we should take the right-hand branch to Utne, and prosecute our ohl plan of visiting the Voring Foss; lont, on more alcliberate consideration, we again abambened that exemrsion and continued one come towards tho Gravens fiond. The wind, by this time, had alnost subsidel, and wo were obligel to lower the mast and get out the oars. The tide ruming out enused a strong current, and, the boat being leatw, the remaining six miles were but slowly accomplished.
This part of the fiord was much grander than any that we had hitherto seen; and the roeks, rising perpendicularly to au immense height, were partly coverel with beantiful bireh trees, Numerous wea-gulls, wimming over tho calm tiond, contrasted, as they suareel gaily in the air, with the solemn grandeur of the seene. At last, amivel at Eile, at tho end of the Gravens fiorl, we disombarked; and as som as the bagcage had lieen removed from the boat, we paid the loatmen, receiving in return the customary shake of the hand, Shaking hamls after receiving payment is the invariable custom of the Norwogion prasant ; it indicates a kindly feeding, and is ts much as to say that the receiver hats hat a tivour conferes upun him in lacing "mployed. fir which as well as tur the money he wishe to thath the giver.

V111.

City or Bhegen-Ttz helations witit Eqgland-han-

 Actors-brbary fabmans Aopthis-ilobse haddere.
Nexr day, ly sumise, we were at Dergen, and we landed at the 'Yyke lanhure, a very paint and ariginal ynarter of the city in which most if the hanses have very lofty and narrow feinted gables that are painted in white, imb sive to it the nplparance of a cump. Our most obliging emsul, Mr. Alexamber Greig, prowerel beals fin us at is wealthy fish merchant's, and when, the nest moming, after a delightful night's rest, we got down to the parlour of our hast, an old bachelor whose donestic arrangements were superintember by a homselenenr, he introbued us to a table covered with cold puittry, boteles, yul hasama eigars, of which he refursted us to partake cel hilitum. The lousekerper afterwarls showed us the interior, not omitting the stures, which inchuded a mountain of dry conl, the purtume from which penetrated into every part of the domicile. Looking out from the pointed gable at the top of the house, I obtained my first genem! glimpe of the city. It seemed like a Dutch town buried amilst swiss $\mathrm{Al}_{1} w$, with a population of some 30,000 inhlabitunts, all more or less involved in the fisheries-merechants of cool, herring, salmon, or lobsters. Cluse to our wou house wass a set-going tishing eraft, which in leusth and proportions reminded one, lut erronemasly, of the "ulbarkations of tho Vikings, who nsed in former diys to treat the eoosts of Europe with as little ceremony as they now to the isshing banks of the north scas. In spring and zutumn, when the fishine luats return from their expeditions laden with the fingy tribe, the merchants vie with one another as to who shall do the most to put the purchasers in a generons mool, ind to make the fi-liemen torget their cuils aurl privations. This is the equech of piscatory Noturnalia.

The city of limeren was foumbed in the year 1069 or 1070, ly King Olaf Kyrre, who made it the second city in his flominions. Shortly after its foundation, in consecpucnce of the alvantageons position of its harbour, and the privileges given to the merehants of the Hanseatie Leagne. who had crected a fictory there, it breame tho first city in the kinglom. This jre-eminence it mantained down to the last few years; its trade is even now grater than that of Christiania; but as that eapital, since the seluation from Denmark, has becomo the seat of givernment, and also of the university, it hats mindly increased in trule aud importance, while Bergen has remained ilmost stationary.

Previous to the Calmar mion, Dergen was the theatro of seseral remarkalle cents, In the yene 1135. King Maguns was taken prisoner in this city, and his "ye put ont ly Harald Gill", me of the competitors tin the throne, who the year following was murdered in the wame pace. In the year 1164, King Magmus Erlingen was crownel here by the papal legate, and in the century following, King Hakon and lis sun were likrwise enthronel hore. The plague, which wate such fearful ravages in Norway, tirst mate its apluature in this enty: In the years 1600.1618 , 1629, and 1637, bergen was agun visited by this hetwen Eugland and Hollimil, the Eum of Sumwich bursued the Dutel maler the command of the renowned Ritter, into the harbour of Bergen, but was whiged th retire, the Dutch being protected by tha fortitications of the town. Several of the shots fired by the Engli.h are still to be seen in the walls of the forturs, of the cathemeal, and other places.

The Euglish were the first who traled with Bergen: in the yat 191: King lakon concluded a traty of commere with Englani. This treaty is the more remamakle as it is the first compet of the kind which Pugland entered into with any foreign matinu. I paloney of athe compate extenls among some wen to the present day. The Euglish ematinued to pursue the thale until ine year 1430, when they were driven trom berwen, and a monopoly granted to the llanseatic Lague, who formed a large istablishument here, and carried on a very prosprons trate until the midille of the last century, when the monopoly wats abolished, and the port thewn open to all fireigners. In the year 1763 , the last buildings belonging to the Hanseatie League were sold, and from that period the trade, leing unfettered, has considerably inereased.

The principle trade of Bergen consists in the export of stoek fish (dried cod), and of oil obtained from the livers of eod and hertings. The take of fish on the west coast of Norway may be julged of by the fret that Bergen alone annually exports about $2,000,000$ specie dollars' worth of stock fish, and 20.000 barrels of cod fish oil, divided into first, seeond, and third qualities; and from 400,000 to 600,000 barrels of herrings, which are ehiefly piekled. The stock fish mostly goes to the forts of the Mediterranean; the herrings to the Baltic; and the cod fish oil to all parts of Europe. The cod are usually very fat when eanght; they are immediately gratted, and the livers thrown into barrels, the oil whieh gradually rises to the suriaee is then skimmed oft ; this is of the tirst and purest quality, and called "blane," it is used for lamp oil and dressing and eurrying leather, as well as medicinally for consumpition and scrofulous cases; the second and third qualities, brown blane and brown, are obtained by boiling the refuse, and used exclusively for dressing and eurrying leatlier. In the months of Mareh and April, when the large square rigged yachts (joegts) laden with fish from Loffoden anil Finmark arive, the town presents a busy and animated appearance; the harbour is frequently crowded with from 600 to 700 vessela of 70 to 200 tons lurthen, besides larger foreign vessels waiting to receive their cargoes from them. There are two great arrivals of these joegts in Bergen, one in spring, another later in the summer, or in autunn, when 100 or more come in at a time.

The fish-market, which is held in the harbonr on Wednesdays mul Fridays, is a great point of attraction to strangers. The salesmen remain in their boats, which are drawn 11 , alongside the quay, and the latter is lined with hayers, the fish-wives lieing hy far the greatest in number, As there is thus some little dis. tance between the dealer and the jurehaser, and sevemil island of kragero.

of the latter generally present themsedves at one boat, buxiness is carricel on in a lond voice, which as the ansicty for bidding increases, heeones more and more vociferoms, till at last a scene of turmoil ensues that is not a little amusing. The ilhustration on the next pago will give some idea of the spectacle presentei upon thase weasions.

The fortress of Bergen-hums, which commands the entrame to the harbour, is irrigularly construeted. It consists of three bastions and a ravelin towards the town, and three bastions and two batteries towards the sear; it was erected by Olaf Kyrre, the founder of the eity, and previous to the union with Denmark was the residence of the Norwegian kings, who made Bergen their cappital. There is also a strong fort on the opposite side of the harbour.

Bergen eontainel in olden times no less than thirtytwo churehes and convents, but the Reformation swept away the superfluity, leaving but five, the Cathedral, Cross Church (Korskirken), New Church (Nyekirken), the Mospital C'hurch, and the German or St. Mary's Chureh; this last is the must ancient, and is spoken of by suorro as existing in the year 1181. It is situated near the entrance gate on the north side of the port, and is distinguished from the others ly its laving two towers. The altar pieee is of ligh antiquity, and a very elaberate and tine specimen of the carving of the period at which it was executed. It is supposed to bo of Dutch workmanship. The font is a flying angel, carved and coloured the size of life, the lasin held in the extended hands. This figure is lowered from the roof immediately in front of the altar.

Bergen enjoys, ly its picturesque position, the originality of its constructions, and the manners and appearance of its inhabitants, a very deciled loeal charater, but this is detraeted from in the eyes of some finstidious persons by the existence of an hospital for the leprous. This terrible attliction still exists in the country, and is said to be hereditary in certain families, although it may not appear for generations.
third qualities, by boiling the and currying 1 April, when den with fish town presents arbour is frevessela of 70 orvign vessels them. There " Bergen, one or in antuan, e harbour on t of attraction 11 their boats, and the hatter ug by far the ome little dis. er, aud several or St. Mary's d is spoken of It is situated of the prort, ts laving two tiquity, and a arving of the apposed to be flying angel, hasin licld in red from the ion, the origirs and njpearwal charater, ome fantidious $r$ the leprous. ountry, and is , althongh it

There are several sehools and charities and seientific ber fatherless infant, and when they at length sailed institutions, besides museums and galleries in the town. In the chief museum a most claborately and bentutifillycarved onk hedstead is preservel, which is said to have been brought to Bergeris upwards of two centuries ago hy a young English couple, just married. They nettled luere. The hasband was unfortunate in trade, and soon after died, lenving his widow mud an only child. Norwegim hearts warmed to the young mourner and fur Enghand the widow gave this only and valued relic of her lupper days to a family here who had shown her the greatest kiminess. Their deseendants presented it to the muscum, where it remains a token of British gratitude for Norwegian gencrosity. How mueh more gratifying a speetacle than the trophies of war, whieh so often adorn the' museums of comentries that boast of the highest amount of civilisation?

FISH-MARKET AT BERGEN.

The houses in Bergen are mestly timher-built, painted red and white, each with its watereask at the door for use in ease of fire, from which Bergen, like other woolen towns, has several times suffered grievonsly. In 1488 eleven parish churches and the greater part of the town was consumed. One humdred und eighty honses were burnt down in 1855 in the west quartur of the town; and nothing, humanely spenking, saved the rest of the eity but the broml marketplace, beyond which the flames were prevented from spruading.
Tho fishing lwats are very quaint and pieturesque, and are readily distinguished by their high prows. So prejudiced are the people who buidd and muvigate these vessels, that they wilh not even arail themselves of the use of the windliss, and the lage square sail therefore still requires the same power to hanl it to the masthend as it did 1,200 years since. They are elinkerbuil' and with great brendth of lream, but are said to be best adapted for sailing in smooth water. The form of these vessels is undoubtedly of great antiquity, but it is erronems to suppose that these joegts are metels of those used by the old Norsemen in their piratieal voyages. The drage and the orm of the Vikings or Vikingrs wore long galleys with the or more banks of oars.

The luge row of warehouses on the north side of the harbent, in one of which we were heated, suremal stories high and romning far baek, and and ahment all filled with stock-fish, once belonged th thic Manseatic merchants. They are very old and emions. Many deseendants of these old Gemans still live in Bersen, keeping $川$, the lamgange anl enstoms of the fitherland as mueh as possible to this day. They have also their own elurel. They, however, intermary with the Norwegians, and a French tourist was ungallant enongh to intinate that the race was not improwed by intermixture, and that the citizenesses are not so pretty as the women of the people. Some of the waternen about Bergen have likewise peculiar Iresses and enstoms, and form a elass by thenselves, like the Cladlagh fisiermen of Galway and the fish-wives of Ponlogne, Catais, and elsewhere. Here they are known as "Streels."

The watehmen in lergen are armed with a most formidable weapon eallow "the morning star;" a weapom which obtained an mpleasant notoricty in this country from the Marquis of Waterford having been manly killed in bis younger days by a low on the heal from one of these peace-preservers. 'They are ghbers of hrows about the siz: of an orange in which are fixed numerons spikes of ir a, and attaehed to a hamille.

Many of the villas ahout Bergens are beantifully situated, eommanding lovely and exfuisite views ; and the walks in the momentains which surrouml the town are charming. Some of these momanais, of which there are seven, lie quite near the eity. Withont sletraeting from Christiania, says a tourist, Bergen, that has neither Greek palaces, nor pseudo lyzantine churebes, seen from the heights to the south, has all the imposing appearance of a eapital, and it is with an involuntary feeling of respect for the antifue commercial metroprolis of the north, that it is ayproached along the avenue of ash trees, which give an almost regal access to it.

The wealthy eity of Bergen had voted a sum of 120,000 frames in order to worthily entertain its king; twenty-eight gigantio dishes figured at the ofliciat dinner, representing the produce of all the elief states of the earth. The repast was followed by theatrieal representations, which were the more remarkable, as the aetors were all Norwegians, a circamstance of which the matives were not a little promd, as it was the first time such a thing had oecurred; the histrionie line having heen hitherto regarden as incompatible with the rongl and uneouth charneter of the Nopwegian, aud having been keft in the hands of the more polishel lomes. The result semed to comatenance the local tratition, and laft strung lounts in the minds of the spectitors, if the actors wouh not have been monat home in their joegts, or on their momintains.
Our hest proposed that we should drive out to his country house. The voal lay ley the fine of the momatans Ulika ant Bamm, through a very agrecoble comitry, and in about an hours time we arrived at a pretty cottage, which overboked a plain mon whieh the king was engaged in mancenvring his troops. The festival was further ectelimted by several couples being dowried and united, the same evening, in holy matrimony, ly the king's bomnty. A Bergen peasant on farmer's wedling is a highly pieturewigue mad entertaining seene. The bride wears a crown, and no end of trinkets, and she remuins tressed in the said trown and ormaments luring all tho merry-making that follows. For, immediately that the ecremony is over, the honse is thrown open to all friends and ncighbours, and feasting and dancing are kept up, for several days. Each gnest hrings a present. The bride's crown is so constructed, that, by withulrawing a pin, it opens and falls from the head, and the gay doings of the wedling are at length brought to a close, by the bride daneing the crown ofl. Immodiately she does so, the masie is hushed, and the guests depmrt.

As we were returaing from the mountains we wero overtaken by a terrible shower, which seemed to ho taken by the company as a matter of coume. "Oh!" said our host, olserving that we were not quite so $\mathrm{p}^{\text {hititosoph }}$ hical muler the visitation as the rest of the party, "we are acentomed to this kind of thing. Surromiled as Bergen is by mountains, two thasamd feet high, out of the 365 days in the year, it rains two hundred, and it is lueky for us that it is so, for the bed of soil that nature has provided for us is so shallow that if we are, ly misfortune, left a fow day in sumacr without ,ain, everything drics up and perishes in our garlens." The harhour of Bergen, although on the same parallel as Cape Farewell in Gremland, never freezes, and its water communieations are never interrugtel, thanks to the Gulf Stream, whieh finally exhausts itself upon the eoast of Norway at or about this puint. On the other haml, the roads are excerable, and in winter impracticable. The safest way of adventuring hence into the mometains is on horsebaek. Tho Norwegian horse or pony, as we shall soon see, has acyuired, from long practice, an incredible ament of agility and audaeity; he will carry you safely over a phank hrown aewoss at torrent, aloug a roeky shelf, over preejpiees thousand of feet in depth, may, he will jerform femtes more worthy of a hippolrome thim of the open conutry, tor he will Larry you down sterps that are otherwise inpossible, 1 y nems of woxten ladiders constructed for the purpuse. The guile, holding on all the time ly the tail, and steading the balamee of his tour-forted frivent.

IX.

The Segst Ftord-Fmimiofs Safa-Cutreif op Vanosnaes -A Nozweolas Intemon-Aseent of the Sogne-Field -Mary of Opten--Tife Watea Fale.
Tuere is a road, if it ean be so called, from Bergen north to Sogue fiond, just as there is sonth to Stavanger, and both athike are hall by land and hali by water, that is to say there is nearly the same anome on anace to be buatenl achoss fiods as there in to be traversed by land; lut this is an understool thing in Norway, and the "Skydskatler" is as responsible a provider of boats at certain relays, as the Ciestgiveren in of lomses at the kydstiftet on the reecipt of a forbud. Bh, the jleasimtest way of proceeding is by stamboat, for the sen is so hemmed it: by ishands all along this eonst, that little or nu inconvenicnce is exprieneal trom the motion of the ressel. The enomons inlet known as the Sogne fiord, cuns upward of one hundred aud twenty
s. The festival comples being in holy matrigen preasant or e and entertain. , and no end of the stitil erown $y$-nuking that remony is over, and meighboms, or several days. crown is so conojens and falls he wedling are ite duncing the , the music is ntaius wo wero seemed to ho oume. "Olı" e nut quite so the rest of the of thing. Surtwo thinsimed ar, it rains two it is so, for the 11 is so shallow clay: in summer perishes in our te same parallel freezes, und it rupted, thanks sitselt ujon the On the other winter imprac; lence into the regian horse or ired, from long and andacity; Irriwn across a dices thousan! ts more worthy try, tor ho will ise in!possible, ed for the purme ly the tail, ad titurl.
mof Vanosnass E Soone-Fieid
, from Bergen I to Stavanger, by water, that ut of space to - tatrensed by 1 Norway, ant wiler of boats $t$ horses at the Bt. the pleaat, for the sea his const, that from the moknown as tho d and twenty

English miles inhand. It shores are less favoured by naturo than those of tho Hardanger fiorl, and yet are quite as picturesque; but the momitains are less woorled and of more anstere anpect, and the inhabitants bear the stamp, of the country they live in, and aro of a more sturly frame and weather-worn picturesureness. Every turn of the gulf opens n new horizon, although always noorc or less linited and framed in by rocky precipices that reflect themselves in the blue waters below, whilst above all towers the summits of tho Justedals Bitaen, covered with eternal snow.

This rudo and rocky region is intebted to pootry for an imperishable name; it has leven sung by Thoner, the modern hurd of Sweden. We are in the comitry of Fritliof aud of Ingehorg, whense legendary history has furnished the poet with a theme for his nohlest epic. The history of tho betrothed monntaineers reminels one at starting of Paul nind Virginin. It was upon these wild peaks that Frithiof ventured in pursuit of the eaglets that he presented to lngeborg; it is across these fiusious torrents that he bore her in his lusty irm.:- it is in theso alark forests that he went to combat the lear that devastated the thecks of his beloverl. It is hero nt Framunes thist was moored the frail Bhich, the bark that earried Frithint to the other side of the" guif; where Ingehorg's fither dwelt, near the chmed of lhridur, in which the yomg ginl was confined in order to separate her from her lover.
 we reacheel the chureh of Vaupsies, a modest chapel whose timbers are now gray and worm-eatern, and to which the mumur ot the Qininde-fons holds the place of orgim. Its interior is cheorated with tigntes of animals and carred matestinus of considerablo antiquity, and mot a little interesting in an melarolegind puint of virw, The simplicity of this chapel, its small proportions, and the semi-ohsionity of its interior, lave something in it more tourling than many a more inposing editien. Close by are several timmuli, whiel menory of whim, as well as their manes, are lost to the exjeting thoughtless generation.

At Normas, $u$ little village of fishemen at the botton of tho siom, we three gigantic Batat Dolmens, or uright stones, one of which, abent thirty-fom feet in height and fome feet in width, homls like io pine tree before the monntain hilast. As we wore examining thene so called tidtie or 1)ruilic momments, but whieh, there is every rason to believe, are of s more remote Oriental uricin, a yound gid made her appatance from among the ruins, she was thinly clabl, aul we soon perceiven, to mor great qrictf, that whe wats a victim to one of the sorest attlictions of the comitry, the heprosy. Happily the ehilits mother informen we that she had obtained a homer for here in the lluspital of st. teorge.

It was not till the following day that we attatimet Kanganger in the Dystre tiord, whose boters were more womed thon those of the Unter sume tiond, the seme of " Firitheoss Siast," and aho better purnted. There were many villas seattered on the hily sibles, and when we disembarked the inlahitants setmed to be more eivil and refined. "May yon he woleone! I Heaven bless you!" they said, as this stepped limwart, kising the reverse of their hands hefore shaking unts, The beer of Kmpanger is of such potent quality that it is dispensed in golbets and not in tumblers. A phasint stroll led us to the lieigum-fos:', : pioturesque liall divided into two, having together :ibout 690 teet of olevation. In spring time, at the melting of the snow, the two form but one, anm it must present at such times a most impersing xpectacle.

Arrived at the extremity of tho Dystre fiord, wo had to equip onnelves in our costomes of momataincer s high boots and winter paletots, and to disembark our cantens. We hail to follow the king on an excursion to the glaciers, and the worst was that following in the train of royalty wo tomm all the hotes forestalled at the station at Eide. We wero lneky enough, however, niter a brief dehyy, to obtain a mount from tho gool peasunts, who wear a peculiar costume at this place; men and women alike being clan in blae jackets, with luns buttons, the men wearing the red Phurgian eap, the women an extensive white cap. l'rovided with efficient guides wo started in grool spirits for tho ulventurous heights of the Sugne fielid.

Batore starting, however, we rany as wall introduce Mr. Wyndhan's exprienees of Fanpmager, as they contain an annsing description of the habits and mannurs of a Norwegian comatry house.

At elewnocloek at night we reached the landingplace of Katupanger on the north sitle of the Sugne fiord. To a Norwegrian gentleman here we had letters of introduction from my kind frients at Bergen; but the umensonable hour of win arrival mate us doubt whether we shoulal now present ourselves at the houso or not rather procerd to the little village of Amblo on the other site of the by of Kmmanger: Still the moertainty of the means of trivelling in Norway leaves much romn for exensi' ; and, emboldened hy this, anl by the sight of lights yet burning in the honse, wo walked m, tron the landing-pier, aml, aecompanied by the three boatmen bearine our baggage, enterel the ganden in front of the buibling.

A tlight of steps led up to the entranee iloor, through which, as it was of glass, we lowked into a remol where eanlles were still lumbins. The furniture showed it to be the drawing-rom, hat no whe was in it, and our knocking was eonsequently undeard. Wo beden to despar of attracting the attention of the inmates of the lomse, when, shortly atter one of the boatmen liad gone round, is a last resourte, to the back premines, hatyand two gent lanem passed through the romm, to ow di-may acempinited by Slat, wha was strutting thent amil wageing lis tail with delight at his mow thequintances, Fievolving all the elances of the possibility of having eome to the wrong humse, of our arival being miknown, amd in dreal of an explamation, we waited almitrance to the honse in denbtful ansiety. But our fears ware som proved to be gromudless, for the dune prowently "pened, and so wamly whe we velemed that all misgivings were at onee di-pelled.
Suppre was immediately ordered for us, and soon alter the party houke up.

Areorling to the invariable enstom in Norway, at abont six nest momine a servant horght us a enj of cotlen aml voms bisunte, reminding me of the similar habit prevailing in mome parts of Germany. But this diul not preelude an excellent breakfast, at nine o'doek, consisting of endel meat cut in slices, tea, coilee, with thal and kate-hrod in plenty ; while, on in plato umbera bell-glas wero pheed a few pieers of strongsurbling ginmel wi, or old elieese.

In Norwergian humes, the kitehen invarially adjoins the dining-roon ; mul, consitering that the tea and codice alvays remain in the kitchen, it is certainly a convenient plan for the lady of the house, who' there filling the culs, brings them into the diningroom, taking them lack hervelf to he replenishor when wanted. Onr new acquintanees were eviremely sociable, and the breakfast phassed oft most ilensantly.

Fion after returning to the drawing toom, the lady of the hoase letic ns in order to superintend, in person, the cowing of the dimer and other honsehoh arrangements. The formoon was agreeably spent, in the society of the party assembled, in converwation and music-the laty of the house playing very well upm the pimotiorte. Onr host himself was absent, hat amongst the persons whose acpuaintanee I hal here the good fortme of making, was the agrecable anthor of a selection of Norse tales, which have luen translated into English by Mr. Davent ; also a German gentleman, in whoso pleasant wociety I afterwards passed the greater bart of my time in Norway, and a young officer in the Norweyian army. Inting the course of the forenoon, wine and liscuits were brought into the drawing-rom, when each purson, filling his ghass, drank to the health of all present. Wine in Norway is very grool, which may hir partly attributed to the lowness of the impurt duty.

At about two relock the laty of the honse announcel dimuer by saying, "You so wil-spise" (the so good as to come to dimer); upen whith the guests enterel the dining-romm indiseriminately-the ladies hy themstres, and the semblemen tollowing. At a large dimer party, where some degree of furmality is observel, the wine is passed round the talle, and cach person fills his gliss; cevery one han lu, wa anl driuks to the health of every one che, empteting his ghaso at one dranght-tho negfect of which is considered as a want of respect to the mater of the honse, and of courtesy to the compray in gemenal: lout after the firat ghass, wine is drank at jheanme. This ceremony comchated, the dishos are prosech rome the table from whe pereon to another, and sump and incelt, buing remowed from the table, are penerally replaced bev an excellent pulding, the making of which appors to he woll unterstood by the Norwegin !ablise and hy a lares dish of fruit, eaten in sump phateo with in abmalame of milk. In this high latitude the profurion of rasp berries, the fruit thus served up, much astonished me, till Ifomd in what ahmame they srew wild.

As each persom concludes his dimer, ho earetinly folds up his napkin, and, laying it on the table, placers his phate יponit. Every one lawing su thon the wine is again passed romul the table, and the ulasees beine all repleninhed, tho sane corrmony which premeded dinmer is observed in conrlusion, The move fir the parture from table is now made ly one of the gueste, agentleman, who, bowing t" the hot, say., "Thak fou Maden" (Thanks for the foul); and the whole party then rises, and ache person replaces his chair against the wall-an aceomplishment reguiring some little practice beline one can nut enly pertorm it quickly, but also aveid making a great creaking "umen the pritished floors, A generat sluk ing of hamel immeliately fillows, cacli ferson saying as he dous so, "Tak for Minlen."

Al! the compmy then proevel to the inawing. romm, with the exception of the haly of the house, who remains in the dining-room, to see the dimer removen. Cotiee then follows, and in the evening, at ubont nine oclock, mexeellent sulpur-minch like the break that, though more sulstantinl. Such, then, is the rontine, naid such are the customs, of a Norwegian houre.

After dimner, the German gentleman acoompaniel me to the hills behind the house in seareh of game. The hill-side was stecp, and covered with forests ot Seoteh tir and tangled thickets of junipur and other Invshwool. From a commanding height we obtainel a fine view of the fiord, and by this only, and our pleassutt walk, was our toil repaid, for a sulitary woodcock, which we conld not hoot for the thickness of the cover, was the only living thing that came across our path.
liears here, as elsewhere in Norway, aro ocensiomally vo be met with ; and. inderel, two had been shot in the neighbourhoon hys sume hunters but a few weeks before my arrival. One of these peasuts appeared to be a fine, hold fellow; and a stury was tolid of him that he mee canne suldenly pon a bar in the wools, but having just liselarged his rith at wome other object, ha was wholly umprepured for an attack. Whether man or beast first commened the oflensive I cannot recollect, int the result of the fight that ensued was, that the man was knocked lown and nearly killoed by the bear. "What were your thoughts," '. A trients asked him on his return home, "when the bear had you down on the gromul, and was alnost kitling you ?" "I thunght to mysilf" was the reply of the undiunted hunter, "what a great pltasure it would be to meet with tha luar once more when my ritle was londel."

Next lity was Sumblay, lint not mulerstanding the language, we did not wo to church, which was afterwards a matter of regret, as I sulsepunently had no opprotunity of attending the servine. The religion of the comutry is Latheran, an! the interiors of the churelews mueh resemble those of the Latherans in Germany In 1s.t. religions linety was granted to all Christians, and Jows were recominet in [8,5]. As in the Jlighlames of Scotlam, the population is much seatered, and the perpdre are frepuently abliged to $\mathrm{g}^{\prime \prime}$ long distances ta church.
('lurixtimity tirst gainel a footing in A.d. 938, under Haen king of Ninway, who had reveivel a Christian cilamtion in Euchand, :mal hy whon the great heathen fast of Ciale was camsed to fall on Christmas thys. Rigntous measures in home of Christimity were cinfuronl ty Olave in 101:; but his subjents, hecoming discontented, called in C'ante of Demmark and Enigland, who, we brimgius Norway under the Danish rule, greatly liuthered the spread of Christimity. St. Olave having lieen slain, aud afterwnds camonised, wats thenederth ennsidered patron saint of Norway.

After dimmer wer sat, as usmal, at the top of the flight of st"p heading from the garken, siphing our entide and chaning the proveret. The lay of Kupanger, comnected with the man find by a emparatiwly marrow passige, is amromuded, on all sides, by high ranks clad with Seotel tir. I'erpendicular clits beyond the wide expune of water tower high above the fiom ; on some parts of which patehes of snow plittered in the luright smanhine. Numerons boats well filled with peasant* gaily chad in their hulday elothes enlivened the scene; some, propelleal liy sturdy marsmen, were laving the seeluded bay, and making for thu open nord; some were merrly rowing to nul fro, while others were erossing to the littlo village of Amble on the "ymenite side of the hay.

At one time it stremm of water, sponting pp into the nir, betokenel the presence of a whale, mil, in mothor instant, purt of his huge, dark form for a moment showed itelf above the surfice. Iornwes at intervals an accompanied searel of game. with forests ot niper mid other chit we obtained s ouly, and our a solitary woodthickness of the came across our are oceasionally been shot in the iow weeks before peared to $l_{a}$ of him that he the wornds, but other objeet, hir Whether man e 1 canot rerat ensurd was, d nearly killal its," 1.2 triemls n the bear hat st killing you?" * the undannted whed lne to meet was lomdel." lerstanding the iele was atterntly han no ope religion of the of the churelies as in Germany all Christians, s in the llighsattered, and long distancos A. D. 938 , uncler ved a Christiau - great heathen Christhas day. anity were circot z, heeoming mark and Engrhe Danish ruhe; nity. St. Olave anoniserd, was Vorway. pl wh the tight ug our cotlee of Kıupanger, comparatively aides, hy high nlar editls be. high above the of show glit. us bonts well oliday elothes s sturdy ours1 making for ig tor and fro, tle villuge of

Ig ip into the id, ill anothor a moment is at intervals
would roll along on the water, purfing and suorting as they raised their hends; white two or there large engles soared high overhead, and Royston crows and magpies flew from tree to tree.

The enormons penks of the Skoldion lay direetly beforo us, whilo the roul curved along the wild and rocky valloy of Forthum. One moment the horse-track ascended the acelivity of a mountain with bruwling streans to eross and a precipied to the right, into which a felse step of the vigilant littlo Nomse home would havo inevitably precipitated us for ever. At another it led down the opposite acelivity no less rude and rocky, only the iletuched masses wou' 1 be larger and so eumulated as to leave murow, devious, nud to. tuons passuges, to theintinite dinger of one's knees: while additional insecurity was given to the footing on the stomes lolow by the meisture that seems to be ever proolating from the sides of these glacier bearing mountains.
The last place at the heal of the valley was Opthum, or Optun, mid three firmilies constituted the whole of its population. 'rlie ruyal cortége havl olitained lorses here with which to pass the: mountain, lenee we laml to stay till the next diny. Whilst dimner was being preprared we took a rough sketel of this picturesque site, "tirmehouse on a rocky table, and the yard nuiusited with horses, guides, and pritsunts. Mary, our host's daughter, watelied the progress of the work most patiently, and while doing so, we conversed with her as well as lay in our jower, as to her daties, her resonures, athl her amusoments, She complained havily of the long wistors spat in spiminis, "hid did not disguse lue wish to lise in more fisomed climes.
"I should like to so with you," she exchamerl, in tho simplicity of her henrt; "I shomld like to visit the sem-shore!"
"But what for ?" wo said.
"Because I couk ombark thence tu Amerien," she said. "I have been told (some tomrist land done this) that dowers and fruit grow there all tho yenr romal, mud that everybuly beeomes rich and happy " "

We did our hest to disillasionise her of these youthful fincies, und to reconcile her with the spot in which it hal plensed Providence to phate her. After some time she admitted the justice of our argument, nud rose in better spirits to slow the way to the fall closo by. 'Tho roeks wero abeminably slipuery, but sho went over them like n kid, and we had no sumall dilliculty in keeping up with our young guide. Wo wero gratified by a view of a torrent throwing itself furionsly over a rute muss of misshupen rocks, lut umenlivencil by the most tritling vegetution ; there was not a blate of grass, nor a single thower in that corner of the world to which fitt had attached the fortumes of the fiil Mary. She was rewarded for her attention, howerer, by having her portrait consigned to puper by the side of the fill.

The elevated and inlabited region that extends hotween the episcopacies of Bergen und Akershos, comprises a tableland of some 150 leagues in length hy twenty-tive $i_{11}$ widtli, intersected liy mumerous and deep ravines, and with it mean elevation of from 1,400 to 1,500 yards, under the 60 th parallel of latitucle. The Sugne-field is, as it were, a kind of pedestal to the loftiest ylneier in Northern Europe, the Justedals Braen, whilst tho Dovre-tield, with its enlminating point, Sneelattan, constitutes another vast eontrefort to the north. To the north-west the tableland sinks down to the sea-level by the beatiful vale of liomsdal, but to the south $i$; is prolonged by the Fillatied and Mardanger, with its great oflset, tho Folge fond. 'The warm and moint air of the sat, and its dopp indentations, are rondensed into zast permanent lields of now unn the surface of the great ti blelamb, and then press down in the ravines in the shape ot great frezen rivers or ghacters, earying with them luge misses of rock or momines, while above rive latre rocky peakn, which impart to the whole secre a formidable asperet that at hims makes the heant shubleder to look at it.

Vet it is in thase mountain reesses that that moble sperimer of the dore tribr, the reindeer, most :ble mols, mind as it was to these very mombtains, and more puriculialy rome ther (ijomin lake, that a more mbenturoms tritveller them ourselves, Mr. Francis M. Wyndham, tirmeted his steps in the pursuit of "wild lite," and the giant anthered deer, wo shall extract at this oprortme moment some of tho experiences to be gained in tho pursuit of this noblo temant of these Alpine solitnders.

S.

 Reindibir-Sthinsflyen - bobmer Eitension of Cla.

 Cooreuy - Reinorer lluntra's Life - Aybishos of Peasaste to Ungalied Ifutien-Thoup Fisming.
I'us: sun rose liright, in n eloudlesis sky, on my first diay of roimleer lumting, mal, with hoynut spirits, we humicil nit to brathe the fresh, cool air o. maly morn. 'The iey water of the river whs very refieshing, nul prepured one for the toils of the day, at the same timo giving a kerner edge to our nypetites. The hay, tho hammoeks, and rugs, having heen all transtemed to the hoat-homse, the fire was lit, and the irom pot and coffeckettle put on to lail. Presently those who hath gone out in the boat to takeup the night-lines returned with several tine trout, which were som luing eooked tir breakfast : and most exedlent they proved, heing redfleshed, and having mueh the flawour of satmon.

Brakfast concluded, we startel on our day's wor:- ; leaving Shot, however, on aceomit of his conspichons colour, imprisuned in the lint. Soon after passing the lake, Leirungs Vand, where the nets were set, wo seprated into two parties: my comphnion, l'eter, and 1 contimuing straight on southwards, while the nthers struck away in :in easterly direction. Presently we reached a vast plain, doted here and there with dwarf willows; heather I never saw during my stay in the momanans. Here we found a gomb may willowgronse, whieh renderes mowe hopefin our propects of olltaining fool, and one of these I shot through the head with my rifle as it sat on a stome.
 to a niver of athont fifty yards in wilth. As it rollend swiftly aloug, dashing with a woar against the ofrowing roeks, it presented byomeans an inviting apparanee; but, as no bridge existed the finding was mavaidable. Atter some little prepration (taking the indippens:hhle precmution to ford with mur lonots inf) we entered the turent, which, coming diret from a glacier but a fow miles distant, was iey cohl. The stremm ram strong, and the bod of the river luing extromely rough and broken, rendered the pasage a mattor of nosmall dithcolty. As the midille of the stream wats grimed the water grew derper and deper, and the combent flowe past with increasel vehemonce; :nul we now felt that the least faltere would have us at the meres of the turrent, from which na ssan" without serious hurt would havo hem imposihle. Howver, the "pusite lomk was gained in sutiots, and nothing eomblave been pleasanter than the brisk reaction which fillowed the immersim in the icy watre.

In about another han we reached the entranu to beirungadal, where in a slultered nowk among the rowks, stood the stone hut if a mountain cowherd, who was in charge of a mumber of oxen tatteniug fir the Christiania market. The nempine of the lout was not at home, hut we fortmately finmel the oljeet of cur contry-n haw of pon milk, a "phat dragit of which we ali indughen in, and, laving a few shillings in the iton pot, we quitted the hat aul contimem (nur way ap the wher.

A most maguitanent view, momed dombly beatifal
 upon us, Immeilately in from, an immerse ghacier, hascending in a laval swep from the wemsen an row abore, sermed al at entively to Whe il the vallay. Thehe' it towered dirh walle of rock, shating "j wit of the fell of ica, in luge perpudiculu masses, whose sum, me hues eontrasted grambly with the bright diazaling I'she from the emmons ghemer. The smensting its rays umon the worthern site of the valley therew these nighty wally info lank shate, eausing their ontlines to stand out in prominent reline againet the undimmed transparemey of a mertlow oky. From the font of the ghace the river that we had formod pured its miny stram, whieh hashed along at the foot of the massive rocks indosing the valley on the southern silte. Conspichons amongst these rose one luge mountain, whose level furts wers derply covered with sumw, while aloth rock above rock towered in rugged and preipitous masses.
Here we halted for a few mimutes to inspect with tho teleseope some maks uma the snow ; that they were the tracks of the rondeer the nakerl eye coulif diseern, but we were anxiens to learn whether they were recent or not. The ghass soon showel them to be some chars old, and so we pursued une conrse towards the shacier. At intervals we halten to survey the dark rocks ami the revesses of the ghacier. But nothing coulld we see, and my friend and Peter reverted, in comparison io the present iliy, tor the better fortum that hat befallen them on other wecasioms. Two heass I'eter had oneo seen here together, walking quirtly on the opmosite side of the river ; but unfirtunatrly neither he nor his companion habl been able to approach within shot. In this valley alsin it was that, the nutumn lefore, my ficiend hal watched a herid If' :thnt five humdred minderer, to which, lowever, to his great mortification. the mature of the gromed hat not thlowed him to get sunai: Womald thet wo mily lawe had the greal fortune to have wer a and her!
Having aseculed the rilgo of rock, roming fiom the morth side of the valley to the elaeier, we sat hown, and prolucing bread anl meat from our ${ }^{n}$ wekets, commencel 1 wir mid-lay meal, quenching on thist with the icy water which thowed in all divectime over the roeks. We wero now, at a considerable height alove whence we ganed a full view of the extensive ice-tiehl, and wren abo able to se:m its inmemast reeses among the rocks. Now that we were in tho very hourt of these wild mometiins and glittring ien-fichld the scenery was still more grim. and impressive than in the lower part of the valley. We sermed to ho in a little word separate tirm the rest of the carth, and one forgot, for the time, the busy hames of man, is, wrapt in emten_plation, one gazel in awe-stricken wonder and sileat admitation at the sublime seenery.

The walking; had now loceme exerssively ardoous, fin large stumes and masses of rock lay heaped one pipon amother to an muknown depth, revdering great caution requisite, lest, slipping down lwetween the roeks, ono shoud break unces leg or "therwise serimsly lart oneself; : mid sman if tha stones tipping wer to one side when stepned upun made it wery ditioult to retain. (1ne's halames:

We now procedent very Nowly, as at any manent
 Wr duscombed to a small lake boumled on ono side by the sterep iee-clitis of the ghaciers; the sand by the water was literally trodle'l down ly reindeep, and some of the tratk, apheating to be fresh, inspined us with incromed hopes, and we pmshed visoronsly on m the shlne beyond, and over snow and ures fas thesio layers of stmies are talled), hut still nos reimeer could wi. diseover. Jint the sum already moving romed to the westem homens raminded nas that we mast netmen homewathe, and though we greatly longon to advane turther, wo felt that it was necessary for us to metraco our surp.
Gurmehing the fant of the ridine of the roek, divaling the vally into upher and lower part, wo nommenced the ascent of the morthern side, in omby that wo might return home oser the high gromul, where it was still juxwihn that we might fall in with reinder. I few jtanmigan basking on the warm hill-side flew away

1 precipitaus

to inspect with now ; that they akell eye conlit whether they howed them to al nur course talten to survey a ghiciers. But and Peter re$y$, to the better ther oceasims. gether, walking r; ; but untirhall leen athe ey :llso it was watched a herel h, linvever, to he wroun 1 hal the we Sela ruwing ftown ; wir sith down, - prekerts, com. ur' thirst with times over tile Wheight alwove litt talle-leluut, nsive ice-fichl, reenses thong vary heart of ice-fichls the "ssive than in ned tu loo in a lie eurth, and is of man, as, awe-stricken ime sechery. ively arthous, quil me mon great caution to rocks, nile rinusly hurt wher to one culd to retain

Iny mument I" t. Wheland one site by sand liy the cinuleer, and , inspirvel us roulty ou " res bis thess indery conld ns rouml to must returin tu alvance is to retrazo

ck, lividiug

 eommencel at wo might it wus still ul: A fow , How avaywith a kent cronking, which re-echoch among the recessex of this silcnit valley.
Haviug gainel the summit of the stecp slope we continued our way over the interminalio nes of the Stechisly, tor we were maw upon what :uprears to have been mistikiku lir a fjell, viz, a 1 ly. The 'tese.sflya most appropriate name, fir it was very stony-was a perfectly leycl tract with serree a rise f pon it. I'resently we retelhed a ghacier, which lay to the left of our courss, purt tially inchsoel ly a mighity amphitheatre rcsort of reindecr, which frequent the shelterel parts of the momintains, where there are usually a tiew iathes of grass to be mot with. Here was again a most magnificent seene, thoumyl, on a somewhat smaller seale thail Leirumgsilil.' We approachent emutiously, hut again dismploint ment was our lot: for, althuyd there were fresh tracks upon the snow, mit a single dere was visilhe ; aud the tracks, leading up to the lighler roeks, atthen ted hes mo hopers of tilling in with the reindeer that hat been at this glawier. Wie thereftive rettriceld ourr steps to the puint whener wo hand diverged, an: continuel mur toil neve the mes.
The immense plyatity of bomsac rocks and stonew which cunstitute these ures is inderel very rumarkithe. A sreat propmortion may be traced to the decomposition of the rocks, hut it is difiticult to helieve that this can lee the sole canse. 'The urigin of these ures may le esasier expdainect if we concur in the" "prinion that Norway was ontee nuarly covered with show and iee, of which there is certainly much promblibility. This lavt-mentimnel ghacier hay on an allunst that bed, and immediat thy hetore it stretehed a wide lewed lly. Now sulpusing tliat this ghacier once extended beyond its present limit, it must haw firmed moraines, the delmis of rock which a glaterier pushess on hefore it ; :und, if to this cuusi we attrihate the presence on the nres imme. diately berfore it, many we not comjecture that the ures leyond ther reach of this partieular glacier are due to ther action of slaciers, which have since disappeared $\}$ Here we conce in tireetly to an argment in fivour of the furmer extension of glaciess and the depression of the suow hine, within which Professur f:anes Forlues timates that one-fourth of the surfice of Nurway woild te phacel by adiminution of only $4^{\circ}$ in the tenJ" ature if the summer montlis.
Stom we came upon the slot of seycral reinder, which hast evidently passed in the fure part of the disy. It was extremely tantalising to see so many proots of the pmene of dear in these parts, and yot to he nuable to tall in with any. Ifowever, they graw us hopnes of hutter luek on atuother day.
 biace of the same, which haid been thewed ty the warm rays, was mew reerzine puite hard again; and we fixqumely cuiperel long lidus down the shyles ut sumw, which malle a pheasisut variation from the enntinual herphing trom rock bur rock. Sum we began to quit. theser sumery timbla and to make cur way down to the phain below. The dhecernt was long and stewl, for the elevation which we had heft was very considerables. At almut sexen oeloek we magtinem the reginns of regetation, and, to our great jay, vilue mun a spint conered with whertetery phants, We wero all in a hanf tamishliug state, mit haviug taken ruite sulficient fiverl with us, thad, with one neeord. fill ravenumbly unne the herries; and, thongh we pickecl them in handtuls, we couldnot gather them fixk chungh to salisfly our humger:

But a limitel halt ouly conld we make, as the luts were yet distant, and we were soon once more on the march ; but now we proceedel with greater ease, und it was quite surprising that tho berrics could have affirrled so much relicf to the paugs of hunger. On our way to the rivur we fell in with a peassant, who had the care of a large herd of' cattle. A dreary life indeel these nen must leal, prassing the whole of the sumuer in almont pertect solitule upon the mountains; yut this good tellow seenell checrful enough and yuite contented, as fir as one coull judge from a passiug conversation.
The re-fording of the river was by no means a pleassut undertikiug, tor the sun had nuw sumk belind the western hills, iud a frusty chill pervading the air caused us to feel very kenily the iey colld of the witer. Niun welluck found us onee more at the huts; but to our surprise aur disimpointment (fire we had lownel to tiud a gout supyer awaiting us) Olaf and the Prowist's som had not yet returned. Huwever we set th) work with a right good will, and som the fire was burning with a cheertiul blaze, and, coflee cooked, we refireshed ourselves with a cup of that ristonative, and then prepared the more sulstantial fart of the meal.
In another hour an excellent sonpl, matale of whole willow-gronse, was set npon the rude bearad torming our table, ame just at that moment the other party mate their appearance, and fortumately for then"; for atier the harel wilk of thirteen hours, our apyrtites would protably ouly have been limited ling the disappearance of the sony. They alo haill returned without any reindeer; for, althungh they lmel seen a herd of about twenty, they had not bech able to get within range. But their long alsence was accenuted for, not by the distance they had gone, but by their having lain dow and slept quietly tor several hours.
Untivourable wmens ushered in tho following day: the mountains were covered with thick mists, and the sum slowed no signs of breaking through the overhauging elonus. A hie project, therefore, of ann ther experdition to the felds was alwandonel; ; tin, it we did go there would be no possililitity of sceing reimber.
Sol having nothing to press us we sat down to a quict break fast of troutt, mul aftervards lekla a consultation as to the means of uviaining a firesh supfly of breal, euffie, sugar, and candles.
A village calleal 1ijolstand, in Hedil, aloont five and thirty Euglish miles to the nurth eexit, was the nearest phace from which these articles could the juricured. First we applinel to the ohd fishlirnum at the liuts, but, he making a moot murensonable demmen, his services were at once rethesed. Biat lay soull tuek there layhei realily conssuterd to undrettuke the expedition. Having told him that we shomid provile the pack-puny, we reviuirel of lim to state his own price. Gue dollar (1s. bill), was ther reply, tull with this offer we immediately elvied; it heing very reasomalle, emsidering that ilar whole distance there and lyek was no loss than seeventy miles, which could not he acemplishered unler thre diys. After reeciving the instretetions in writing, he ernsed the river with our grides, null proceetenf in search of the ponies, which wee wandering It liknty wrer the liells; but, som fiv, ting them, he starrecel without inday fir Bjolstand.

The suphly of milis and cremm was how also at a low ellb; ind, there being no hopes of deer-stalking, Peter, the Provost's son, and I set off to Resse suters, they carcying the tin comp-kettle fire the milk and a couple of black hottles for the cream, while I tork my gun to pick up some game on the way. But few biris conld be fomm ; and, having shot three grouse. I wals mot sorry to lenve the wet birela trees aul juniper bushes, mad hurry on atter the others to take nelter in the sater trom the torrents of rain now filling. Here we regaled ourselves with a common seter dish called romme-kolle, which is merely the thick layer of sour cremm that rises to tho surface of milk after it has stood fir a few days. The kelle, or flat wooden vessel in which the milk is "set," being placed on the talle, we commenced skimming ofl the romme, or sour eream, with the short woolen spums used by the peavints, eating some very gool thad-broul along with it. I bre cane quite tond of this romme-kolle, atal fonnd it :m excellent dish to ask fin at seters, or firms where cows are kepr, being always fortheoniug in a very short time.
It was Saturdiy, and Marit was very husy with but-ter-making, and scrubling up the emptied kolle, in orler that all might be clenu and tilly for the next day: A little girl of ahont thirteen wals Marit's help. mitr, to whom was allonted the duty of chuming. The churn in this soeter was a till, ennicioshapeel, wowien machine, the buttor heing mande by working up and down a long stick. with a thick purforated piece of wood at the emb. Mueh to the ammsement of Manit,

I also trien my hand at the churning. but found that it repuired coisidermbe sill and patioe th give the pinten the proper spiat turn, and als, to present the cremm limm spurting ont at the top: : Bnder theso eircumstauen I sperdily relinumined the Jonter-making to the more experiencel hamls of the litthe gind.
leaving Marit's secter, wr mat paid a visit to am adjoining one, mater the catre of a bulder mamed Sigori; she was ma ohder bersin than Marit, but, like all the women of Nowny, sumarkubly chereffil and gomil-hmmured. With, siguri ulso we had onerned commercinl transations, and lotween the two sutas we dis iled oin patronage, groting mill, butter, Se., sometimes from we and sommethas from the wher

At hast we set out or our return home, well haden with the prombe of the surter. On reaching the summit of the hill overlonking the river, win atention out up, the gramel hy the lant-. What conld they by holding nif to us the leand of a rembere with its himeling anthes, mul we kise at one that these things ugen the gromel wome the fremh skins of three minders. Stager to barn whew, and ly whom, the mind, pullin, aternse ther rime, hastelied inp to the huts.

Oht Joh, arempmided by the twe meenguts of the other huts, haml proweeded on the prestoms day to the firther end if the tipmblin-socn on a tishing expediti m. Their rith's wore, of course, tukn with them; mud, with it. I lunand found it in or firms where gin a wery short $y$ husy with butmipitiel kolle, in dy for the mext :as Marit's help$f$ charuing. Thu: Whyel, womben working up :ans rfirated pince of ement of Marit, thinking it just possible (hant they might meet with reindeer, they hid elimbel the precipice overhanging the lake. No suoner hand they gained the high sromul abo than they disevered three minder, amb, in whert stalh bringing them within range, a tine buck till to each rifle. This morning as soom as they hat hroment the deer dhwn from the biehls and phaced them in the lanats, they returned home to, the lhets, and wire now very buy eutting up the renism; Joh stuwing away his share in satting-tubs in the lavat-honse, while the others were making preparations for an eary depmortur on the morrow.
"What are you looking fir sis casefully in your reinders, Joh ?" sitil my eonapmion.
"Do not yan remembry vour civing me a bullet on" "lay last autmon !"
"Yiss. I do; lout what of that?"
"Wint, you know I wit! that the mext mindeer I whot wholl tall hy that very bullet-ithe oo it ha:s: an! I will now shaw it to you, as as pron that I have not hrok(י) my winl."
 grat gles, and give it to my friome.
The artival of the renivon wa mom aceptable to us; for, although ath ahmulane of featherom game might alway be eqsily premed. vime tume abstantind fool was very witcome. Pum shot, tno, as the aply wa mly batily rine for our consmption, reaching the r, wir :utention 11 thingan intul la:t could they (al the mystry imber with its here that time slins of threw hy whom. the ,wn the sterl, in, to the hatts. cupauts of the Mils day to the inge "xpecliti ". In them; nend, dark-perhaps at aceritienl moment in some eookins opreation. Diareh trees grew here in abombance, but, heing at an altitude of 3,046 E. leet above the sha, wo were alove the limit of tia trens. The limit, of the bird might be estimated at abonit 300 feet ilsove the (ijembin, and the show line at mathor more than 2 , 0 ono fiet. Trout, with fried minderes liver :s the piece the résistroce, timmed ond eveming meal.

Next day heing Simblay, the forenom was sent at home. Athough the orthodex Sumblay dimererf roast berf amd plan phleling was beyomb our means, we fuped nevertheless to protul the festive hoad with mo elepgicablo hampuet; and twameds mid-hay at large lump of yonism, together with phaty of fint. was put. into the irom put. The conkinet of the vonisom ongation eomsiderallde attention, and erinstant cmplogment was allinded to ome person in hasting aml turning over the meat. When hearly done a pathtity of cream was ? ? med over it to infrove it, and to sale to the richfess of the grayy.

It is muel in this way that the Cussacks of Siberia cook their game, acoming to one great Niberian trat voller, Mr. Atkinson. 'Ihe birds are pliteed whoke, together with anl abmbane of fat, intosathons pont, which is then covernl ofer with a closely fitting lid: and the joining ot the lid leeines smeared rommi with and in aloont twenty minntes the gane is cooked to fertection; and this preparel, Mr. Atkinson says sume is preterable to that enoked by may other methon.

Cereanly our renison was most pexellent, and I never remember to have tasted cither ved or fillowWeer venison that could complue with it. Veimble vonism more nearly resembles redeleer than fillow. deor venison, lint it is more juicy an: tenter: During the feast Marit and Sigeri arived on their Sumday visit, aceording to the custom of tha country, lunt they declined one invitation to join us at dimer: Old Joh, however, who made his alplentance just then, did not refuso a good ofter, sad sitting down with us, did ample justice to the renison, which ho elechared to be excellent, and when lie himl finished, retmod us "Mange tak for maden" (many thanks for food). Fors thantely we were not under the obligation of invitimg the two men who had leen Joh's compminus at tho shecessful hant, for they hial left the samm momiog fin their homes in lledial, ndont forty milos distant, taking with them their ponies laden with the remadeer v-nison.
'The sole wheret of the pensints of Norway in shoot. ing is te prowila thenselves with firod fir the winter.
 With a suplly of perisions, starto ofl th the momberins, Where lee reanans for a werl or : forthight till lue has killed one, or pussibly, it lat las met with good luck, two reindeer. W'ithnut hoss of thme tha venison is paeked in the klovsiulel, mal the hanter returns to his home in the valley, and immediatcely an movining consigus the whole nt tho meat te the saltingetul), Then, if there be nothing to eletain him in the valley, ho starts afresh to the fields on another experition, ree turning home ns mun as he hats heon again sucecositul in the hunt.

Norwegian panames have a great predile tion line salt meat, and, rather than eat finh, Hesh, ur fowl, in a fresh state, they consign it, if the mems he at hame, to the sulting tul, ;and, if after the lapee of sume months it comes but in a semi-putrid statu, it is most highly prized. They have an insuperalhle aversion to unsalted hintere, anil wond rather go withont it altogether than eat it masaltel.
The deprature of the two men with their venison was ly mo means regretted : fur, to hegin with, wo did sut cxaetly like their apparmee, aml they also anderd considmably to the dennlition of cur powivions, laving a cumning labit of invarially baying us a vait what enflec was going om, whieh, nat of mere rivility, we were obliged to oflive them; and, comilering that to promure it cost a walk of seventy milec, it may he intarimed how great was its valne.

Atter dinuer we walked to the liesse sorters, and ecturnal the visits of Marit and Nismi. The walk there and back, lucing only six mites, was morely comsileted as inn afternomis stroll. Wn war roturn to the hats, we found : men having lately arived from the fu:ther end of the Ajometin. 'They were all fishing in the river in a most "hthasiastic mimner. (tne or two were standing in the midille of the streath, almost up to their waists in water: but, with all theiv ardenn, they tid not appear tulue mure suceessfill than their loss exeited bret'ren whon contented thmesmes with tishing from the riverlomk. We also tries war skill, as we were in wath of wh fon very latge tront.

Early in the evening we retired to rest, in order that we might be realy (1) start in gonal time next morning: for the weather was promising, and the men, who had come firm the further cand of the Giondin, had reen several rimber ascend tho elifts about thene: miles from the lake.

N.

A beacthel Morning-Rede Jtut-splemdid Panorama-dlaciers-a mocgh semamble-Ghand AmbitheatrrRoimino hants of iibinderil-Not dell op Sight-Wile xur rross lluman boorsteps-Comb Suddesify epon
 -Ny ancienf Mifle-Moltebegr-Endehance of old Join.
Tus: exprectations whieh we had formed from the alpwaner of the evening sky were lully reulised, and, ently in the moming, all was life and bustle to get the Inveiktiast cookel, aud then to stant for the fichls. Soon nfter six, Puter and I embarked in the beat, on oor expedition in sarch of tho reindeer which hand mposing the sermery, and making asketeh of the lake. The muruing was hematilul ; not at rloul was visihle, and the char blac sky remed almost to vio in depth wi' transmueney with that of a sonthern cline. 'I'te sun shone briofht and clear, amb, striking with the full the green waters of the lake, and the glittering snowrlad jeaks in the distaner, rembered the serne one of suprob magnificence.

line ubout :un lour, Ieter and I pulled cheerfulty along over the calin Waters of Gjemin, and, just after !nesxing the rocks over wheh the river from Lainngselal falls into the lake, ran the loont ashore, mad, makiug it tist to the rockin, climbed up, the mossy slope from the water's edge. Here stood a small stome hut of Peter's cunsiruction ; it wity sometimes used us a shooting-box, atts, it is most de averxion to itlant it alto-their veniron 1 with, wo did res also added ivious, liaving a viait whats ( rivility, we lering that io es, it may loo se serteres, am 14. The wallk is murely eon-- retima to the soeidty, several her cind of the 'iver in a most rsturling in thrir waists in dil not inpear cited bretliren from the riverare in watht of catehing thres: rest, in order oul time mext 5 , and the men, t the Gjondin, itls abont thee
(1) PanoramaDe:il t'lowers-minitheathrof Sight.-Will dodmente raton orasce of old med from the y realiserl, ami, istle to get tha" fior the fields. in the boat, on er which hatel ing lectrr for TIn of the Inat $\cdot l_{1}$ of the lake. wat visilile, - vie in tlepth elimes The s with the full solunn rlilk, ittering showsectre one of led cheerfully und, just after me Leirungselal nd, makiug it slope firom the luit ol' Peter's shooting-loox, athl was firmisherl with the bew requirements of at collice-mill were safe in the lat, as we puposed takine it hack with us.

Leatrine this calin, wo emmmenced tha aseent of the watem rile of the valley, through which tho rivere fion lecirmssatate rolled ripully atong. The monntains rose very aboutly in a sterp precipues of unswive rock, lemving lut anc valy of ancess to the hemplese ahove. (byer lioken locks mul dippery watherombes, we cemmblal ap, and som hal left all wetation, except amos ame monses. tu heneath has. I'resently we peached dear, evidumbly of thase that the mum hat seren on the ;nevions dis.

 the berte of the fi-heman, the wiuthere hanter, we the numbain heplorel. diove the "plosite promice of
 of the cemery, armine to be smonth ami gently unduhtime was ifplymently chothed with it rich, mubrokern the chlour was: hut an expmisitely are the tints blembed dert it wat inumasible to arrive at the comelnsion of whether it whes wed or yollow. Hare and there

 Peyond this asion line monntain besan on lift their evetemled in widnexpanse ont of the very highest pate -f the momutams. Wht of the ghatioss shot shap and inered peaks, which, stertehing in a wite enven liom aztumas.

fint time wenk mat gernit as to linger, and we wo promendol, in witreh of reinderes. Vot, stops!-wlat siden of rack ahant haif a mile diatant, they slame quents cropllint the somty grass. Sinking slowly , fown to ehme nommation we survered the gromil bintime us and monstiterd as to the wiy in which wo shouk stalk the reen. The exterme stillows of the air was our elishenhty,-met a dreath comblat belt, renmined immovahba.

To diseover the dirve ton of the wime was impossible: and, dereding to stalk as the eroumel hest fivoured us, wo began to move alowly and enntionsly towards the -her. Whtehing all their thovements ond eyes remaimel tixed mpon then-lum they raise their leacols nod lowk armul-stop! not a muscle must move-agatin they commence teding, und once more we eren l entutionsly on. The gromme riting stemlily and heing much broken, there wes mo ditionlty in contecaling outselves from view. We b:ad atroudy apmokehed to within thres lumblred yards, but now we could sce only one raimlecr; but the of hers might have mosel amil heromu- hidden by intervening rocks, and wre dounted not but that they worestill thore. The srombl now rose rapidly, :mol we fomal that, hy making aldight eivenit, wo slamil he ablo to thrive whin it short dismee ot the were. silently and enntionsly we erapt alom:s, in momutary droul if': loose stom" rolling from mader out feet and abmang the dere by the chaters.

It lenegh the eritical moment arrived, - the desired pot was methed, -amereathens with excitement, our ritles remly in our hamls, we slowly miseal om leads ahowe the rocks.
But the rimber !-they are son- - the ham meks are ats desulate and hewoid of liti- as ever. Wits it :os. sible that we combld have seen four remberor atanding on that very wol? m, was it a meam! all is sibace! all is desolite: nothius but batren gray rooky and prakling snow greet the eye as it wamke andinnty aromml. Can my livingereathre exist on sulan drasy teact! Tint no-it wis not it drean; lot there were fresh truks upon the swaty mose, aml stalks of the reindeer phant (Larenendus gluchelis) inad just been nipped of their flowers. The rocks, the smow. the wherem which lay whith half a mile, were survered; but, ahas, in vain, nothing living comble be se. th,

On gatining the spot where the deer hate stourl, a fresh brees blew in wit lites, maly setvinis binctease the mystery. Bat :t very short experivace wi herstalking amones such loty bonntatins ennines on: $\boldsymbol{f f}$ the extmordinary changes of ilirection to which the wind is liable. A mement lufore it hul pumibly blown wint" of ths to the eleer, which would be duice smitient to put then to rapind tlight. So conniletely hiblent tion thair sight hat we heen, that thas muly comil we anconat be lett on the ham :mil hateen rocks, ath wo conli gain ne she ats to the direction the heer hal takern.

Still, incited by the bare porihility of their hawing gone but a short distance, we pushedon up the hill, and on rewehing the summit, hooked down al [n'tpen licular it gheier which we had patsed on uill heot dity's experlition. From this commambing position we eonhl sure far and wide wor thakJos roeks mol sumw: hat nor reimere were in sisha. Thutoughly lisaproninted wo turnal baekime struck away to the live to ramine the glaciop lying neme to when the deet hat bern standiner. Vitelosed on two sides be high perpendientar walls of rock, and it plict, shattered aphe it was at turnoly moved away for chang of pastruater, it was hore that wo entertainerl tho hope of timtines them. It aghin we were diappointel, for now thees of amber wern visibis, and wo now nu lamer doubted but that the deop, having "got the wind" of "1s, had tht onco gillhellud off, amd by this time might be six or eight miles chatinnt.

l'artially to onsole omselves, we sat down itmon the rocks, ant commeneal our dinner, which we earrod in our poekets: for, aldhongh it was still maty, the Jones row anil walk hat considerably shmpened one appetites. A fresh, lroiled reinuleer's tongue eonstituted my repast, and most excellent it was．Thw air was delightinlly coold and refireshing，and so invigerating that，after onv meal，we felt as though we comld nudergo any amount of cexertion ；and so warm whe the rass of the sum that，althongh the altitude was probably wer d，000 Eert．We did not feel the slightest ehilliness．

On rixing up from dimer we made for the lower end of the glacier which lay before us and crossed a lateral moraine，or pile of debris brought down ly the ghacior ； it was much beyond the present limit of the glacier， Wit 1 am sorry to say that．I did not make more de－ tailed nemerations．The rocks just here are of a slaty nature，and I was struck by the great deeomposition which was wearing them away，We mow clamberel along the side of the mominain，which，at this point， If ft only a comparatively marnw trate betwern its parpondicular fice and the precipice overhanging the lake．In some places the water，which triekled over the roeks，had been congealed by the last night＇s frost， rendering the walking hoth diflicult and hangerous； for，athough a fall would not have been attended by a further desecnt into the lake，it was yuite possible to sustain merious injury by falling upon the sharp rocks from a height of ouly a few fiet．

At tenusth，after a long amb ardnons semambe，our rimps being otmg behiminur backs to leave both hands at libsty，we rounded the momenain，and in a sloort
 The sput was one of most striking and prenliar gramberr：：an owal amphitheatre of perpendicular rock enelosel a large convex－shaped ghacier which entirely thed the hollow；and at the fine of the iece－fich the litte tarn，or kjurn，fed a turent which，dashing its impetnous stram over the edge of the precipiec，fill leadong into the Gjentins som hetow．The only en－ tranee to this noble amphitheate was from the now －1＇the Gigndin side，hy which way we had come．I grome and awful seene it was－so still，wo calun ；whe Feened to lave been tramporim to a region wholly uncomected with an inhahitel word．
Such at sheltered spot was a very probable place of vent for wimleer，wepecially as am abmander of grass Erew on the slope of rock between the perpendicular cliffs and the fich of ice．Cimbs and the flowers of the reinderep pant constitnte the fool of rember during the summer months，hut while the ground is cosered with －now their maly food is the greenish－ycllaw liehen called reinter－most，which they procure by semping away the show with their feck and the short，palmated lams，which froject down their fice hetween their eyer．Whare this moss abounds the dere congregate＂ in vart herds，amomang sonctimes to as many as two thonsand．But in the summer time they are seldom tw he finund in latrger herds than twenty or thirty： while there or four is the nanal number which rom about together．

In the summer time，provided the weather be fine， they frempent the mometains at abont the lowe of the －now line，which，in this purt of Norway，is mather abow is，000 English fert abow the sian．Here they rom bont in mulisputen pussession of the bommeness fiek．，serking the hollows formed lyy the rooks，and ＂ther sheltered innts，in quest of grass，which is usuilly mow abundant in such platees；mul then they may senerally be fomucl during the middle of the day， guictly duxing in the warm sunshine．Though not migratory animals，us has been said，which my own ex－ perience and the information derived from the peawants would tend to eonfute，thry are eunstantly on the move， always travelling against the wiml ；so much so that a systematic reinder－hunter wonkl，if the wind con－ tinned to how from one quarter for any length of time， muse ofl＇aganst the wiml and take up his chanters in those parts of the monatains，to which he wond con－ cluto that the reinder had betaken themedses．

In winter and in stormy weather the derer descend from the higher regions to the mure sheltered and genial districts，though never bulow the lew of biveh trees．At all times they are extremely wary and dilli－ cult of apmach，but cyivelally when they are lying down；for then，their attention hing undistraeted， their cyes，ears，：mbl noses，arre fully on the akert to apprise them of langer．Should the hunter meet with them when lying down on matiantable gromm， har may oftem he obiliged to wait pationtly till the hour of feciling，whidh is either early in the moming，at mid－lay，or at about five in the＂rming；for then the deer rise up to graze．
The Author of Scomelinatien A／centures remarks that the reinder is dull of sight；were this the can⿻上丨 experimed hunters would le less cautions abour ap－ proaching them whon lying down：：mel the abow aththor hases his cmelusion on the fant of minders， when shot at，roming away for a short distance， ：mul then turning romed to stare at the phae whene the report procecded．The reldeer does precisely the same，and tho hahits of this animal are too well biown for duhase of sight whe inmented to With rein． deer as woll as with ret－d leer the cathe of their stoplying to look rom is sometimes bucre cominity，but hore often is that they may see their may in oriter to know in which directina to rou fin ratiety．Bant there is this dillionser：the rember．inhaliting as it dow aren－tomen to the sight of man，and may，perlay， stop buther long to lomk at his antigomist：whild the rod－deer，knowing full woll that mam in hin dearly enmy，makes ofl the monemt he eatelno sight of him． heinder appears to lave a encat ircal of crossing luman footmarks．A few winters ago Peter and another mam，as they were beturning from the tiches， silw a here it ratidery going in such a ditection an would lead them directly ：evess thair lim of fromarlis in the now ：stendily they cominued maward，but of a suldan they semed to be alamed－they had e＂n the tracks－and，whorling abruply romed，hey tartud off in full gallop back in the direction whenee they land come．
For stalkin！s reindeer it is neensary to walk very slowly when the revation at which reindeer may be fomad has been attained；fir the gromul heings ar much lyoken，it is more than probable that a last walker，coming suddenly unan wer，will be mable to sop or sink dawn som cunngh t＂aroid detection． Great dillienty in stalking is often oecasiamed by the impossibility of making a cirenit，as，owing to jreci－ pices and clifl＇s of rock，there is frequently ouly whe way or apmanhing the dere．
Un maching kjernhallet we crept along the step shope on the eastorn side of the ghacier，when suddenly t：e bueks，starting up from anong the roeks betime nis， made off at a brink eanter．Their movements were the very image of unacefnluess，as，with heads areet and necks almont bending beneath the great weight of their hanching antlers，they bounded over the roeks． A low whithe from l＇eter，exciting their cariosity，
tly on the move, (1) much so that the wind con$y$ lengst of time, his quarters in the woild conemselies.
hr deer descend e sheltered :und e level of bixeh ; wary suct ditlithey are lyines In mastracteil, on the alert to he hunter mect ontiolle gramul, tly till the hour he murning, at g ; for then tha enteres remarks e this the cawe, tions about apand the abine fiet of reinderr, short distimes, te place whence us precisely the too well kiown it. With reils. of their stompine finits, but home cmy in orter to ity. lant there biting ins it dees fintint 1 may, perlup", tagomint: white tain is his deally (4s sight of hini. real of crossinu ago leter and frome the tickes, It a divection an ine of frotmarlis mavarde, lit of -they hat mul, they stand d whenee they had
y to walk very reindecr may lie round loing an whe that a last will lie mable to a woid detection. casimed by the owing to preciaently ouly whe along the stemp when suddenly rocks letiow us, novements werr ith leads erect great weight of over tho rocks. their euriosity, eansed the deer to make a momentary halt. Arealy they were uearly two lumdred yards distant, and, with the lasty aim which was necessary, we entertained but small hopes of suecess.

The report of both rifles re-echoel throughout the atuphitheatre of roeks; but, alas! without ciliect; num the deer in another iound were hidden by the masses of rock on the broken slope. Quickly rimming down atmother cartridge, I cried "ferdig!" (realy): "Tag op prit Breen!" (tuke up on to the ghacer,) rephed Decter, aml rushing headlong down the roeky slope, I chambered wer tho hiteral morane and wine the surfice of the glacint. By this manceave we shouht be able to cut ofl the deer, if, as wils probable, they should attempt to cross the ghacier it the mpur end, so is to make their oseape back to the northern or upen end by gatleping romed the other side of the ice.

Therning romm, in the hopes of secing the deer, I found that I was almost hinded to everything ofl the ice, and nothing renatined but to hury on with all speed to the finther end of the glacier: But was it sulfo to rush headhus over the glacier! might not a erevassc, or tissure, lidden by an monso:und envering of snow, ringult' one? but such misgivings were quirkly dispulled by the excitement, and hoping for the bout, I started ofl at a rapial pace. Firtmately mot a crevasse came in my way, and at late I reathed at commanding paition nare the upheremion of the shacier.

But the reins er shomblaw ber appratheling, and I ran my eye cugerly over the rows hif the site of the glamere Ntill Hoy came not; they had not crossend the ice: and where conld they hitwe gone to Tho :lsenul the perpendicular clifls secmed an utter imposilility: At last I rilught ight of lerter, standin! fier back upon an rminence of rock; in another instant lur misel his rithe, is bright thash followed, and a dult report rexomulad throush the liollow. But still, where were the reinder ? Peter had puinted his rifle upwaris, and I eagerly seamed the towneng elitts. Thue reinden were cantering stadily up the precipice, their little white tails bubling ap and down is they leaped upwards from rock to roek. I stwod winuler-stricken; to aseend thase walls of rock appeared to be a perfect impossibility even for a man, still more so for a harge animal like a reindere. Higher and higher they went, never slackening their pace; and at length the smmuit was gained, and we siaw tho last of these reimber as they disappeared agninst the sky-line.

Sueh aro the fortuns of reinder-lameng-a most mucertain, lout at the satme time a most exciting and interesting sport. For who can fail to enjoy wateling these noble animals among their grand and savage launts? No one who hiss experieneed it can theny the extrene plensure of wandering over untrodlen regions of undivalled heauty, and grining an iasight into the halhits of such an interesting animal, living in a state wholly minflueneed by any inromls of civilisation.

Descending from the glacier I seramblad back over the rocks to whero leter was standing, anxious to learn how the decr had succeded in making their estalue. For a short distance the reinleer hand skirted the elise of the glivier, but seeing me upn the iee, though 1 was prevented by tho intense glare from disecruing them, they hat turned to the leit and commenced the aseent of the precipice. Peter, detained by the intricate process of loading lis riffe, had not been able to keep pace with the deer, wo as to canse then to tako to the ghacier, where I wats stationed; and th this may be attributed wur fixilue.

With the exception of the peasiuts of Gullbramsdalon having reached the refincuent of using a meisure for powler, the loading of at ritle is alnost as eomplicated here as in the Hurdanger district. Smme of these powder menstres, in shape like a eylindrical needle-citc, mo made, as Joh's was, of solid sitver, but mone umally of reindeer horn, and are frepuently wery prety little articlas. i Ninwegian peasant's ritle in a long and pomlerous weaton, ustally carrying a ball of about twenty-five to the prund; it is poly-grooved, and with a manid twist, the growes making sometimes fwo or thes. whole turns in the barrel. Such :tu one was Peteris intiquatel weapon, which, however, wan nut his own property, tor he suremed to so slartes in it with another persant. The date upon it was 17li, nutwithstimuling which it shat woll, but it wats maly mlapted for short rauges.
The alsmeal hour of the diay wonld not athew of our procedius firther : and atter disipppintments, wo retraced bur step romul the tice of the monutain, wer the sliplery water-eoneses, and down the gully in the rocks, and at last reached the ejot were tha boat was moored.
Heve our departure was delayed liy the pleasimt discovery of : quatity of whortleberries anil in few moltebees. Tho moltedieer (Rubus chamemores) arows at the emid of an upright stalk shooting ont from the centre of the plimit, whose gracefiel leaves, not mulike those of the strawberry, spread themselves in a compact circle upon the rocky gromed. The berry itsidi, which is abont the size of a raspherry, in structure much resembles the mulliery: the colom is a ver: pale oramge, and the beer (lurry) has a poculiar flavonf, something similar to that of a rotton medlar. The flower is white, and slaped like an anemoms, and is developed from is round and tight bud of ahout the size of the firnit. In the northern parts of Norway these berries grom in great abmudance, and are sent down to the south in barrels. I have shisn seen them in the highlauls of Scothind, but ouly to a very limited extent. Baten ma, with plenty of milk, they ferm an excellent disl.

ALL ROUND TIE：WORLD．

The declaing sum at beigth warmeal no of the fast ＂hpord of ewomes and，quitting the refreshing liuit mun tho mossy hank by the witer－side，wo redin－ barked in the hoat，and pulled away down the hake to－ wad－the louls．As we reached then，it rosecolumal geam fiom tha wotern havens was siedrling a sotic licht upou the smay peaks，and the ealm waters of Gijouin wer oflterins in the last brisht mys of the Wanibs ： 11
lhrins silpur the exploits of the variots purties Were mecesivel recounted．Ohd Joh has ateom panted my＂rmbinion to dedmmedal，hut they hat］ met with a like wat of raceens as hal chaneterised sterps stan ot the ghacier，they had explowe the inmer most recersen of the iceredal rocks．＂Iher strength，ent flamace，at at perence of mind，at ritices moment of the pirt？

 retived to ma liammocks and conche＇s of hay－romeh resting pates indorel，but mone the less weleme after the exertions of ile das．

N1．

 a Bear Iftyebl：－I hate hetem－Pmomene lemedies hembefl－－h hifiechit stalf－hidiva the theer－Rus「sio－li！

Firily in the mornime the mim had fallen in torments， amb the s！oms，whish still hug orev the monnain rember：Howerm，it was mather pleasant to sit down lemerely to wir beculfant of tront，fresh from the lake，am marrow thou the log－tiones of the rein－ thers．
There hing nu partienlar oujow in view to entico us out．wa rather preterred momining at home，and devoted ourselves to the dmestio＂perations of gun－ cleming and colloctint titrownd ；whin the guides fomb ample becturation in memeing their buta．Ala Norweginu ］namate are their own hormakers and tailors，and never think of soing on such an expelifion as this withom thir implements of cobiling．and a surply of arare leathes．Writinsmy formal formed part of m：ceccupation on a thy like this，at which ohl doh semed buth amsed，and wombered how I conhl wrive be fiet；for，though he comble real with prfect fincily．writing was not het of his acem－ Wishment－
Aloh was a man of considerable talent in his own way，and amve all was a most jugthints workman； the hat in which we were living，as also the boat－honse aul every artifle of furniture，was of his own hambi－ work：in surt，le made almost everything he repuired． His riftes wer of his own mambicture，hat he still retained the mil lint－and－stecl lueks，hohlins the per－ cussion system in ereat contempt ；and even if a ritle were given hin be would immediately alter the locks tu the old plim．
Five chasentive yentr，lonth winter and summer，be hat onro passed in this litth hut，and，imberl，it seemert fo be a jut resitence of his． 11 i comstant hroal wats lest the flour or walls of his hat shandal he soiled os in－ jumed in any was ：and，when he vas present，we sere ntensil upon the thom：An ane ofote mefrring to this pecularity was told me by the other peasant：．A friend of his，who was nnee staying with him in his hat，happening，while orempied in cmoking to take tho prot off the dire，placed it，יןon the ！low，and a blate inark wav left．whem it hal stand．The ohd hanter whs mull dindeased，but，withont sarimes a word，he si－ paired to the boat－honse，ant，fetchian ：phane，shaved ofle the blackened pirt of the woul．When ant thines wats siled，in preferener tor washing or sembbimg，Joh iwariahly had monuse te his 子小an．

Sotwithatmoling all his whins，he wis a chaming

 their uwn gropury，they meve ham it to stmeners on the ementary，thes always depmedito what is thatio ＂ws．Wha le li me hay，retirving to me，romarkel
－What da you think Vingelskames tivents wombl suy if they knew that he was lisines in such a salati！ what a detestahn lithe hovel mine is．＂＇This 1 stomis deaicd，telliner him that I shombl suy．on the contrare to meet with，and how I haml hut，and he smided ant ackmowledermint of the eno． pliment．

It wals ammien tulisten to the emwersation of the poasants，as they worked away at theje shose（）：＂r at them would make at momak ar ask at puation，and the person ：uldressed womb inmmediately answer，in ohl Nome，＂Unad sat nu！＂（spedled acoorlime to sumbi）－ （What say you ？）．The remank would then be repeatern by the tirst speaker，whr，in his tmm，womld ask，＂（！mel sai on ？＂obliging the what to repeat lis sucw＂．＂fhus remark，being wineated．Gutal sai om，proben quickly， sonnte exactly like the mane of kinssuth，the Ilma－ Gurian ；and hea ing，as I thondt，his natue so uftom

 the pleasures of in－han life．Nither hy day ber by hight is the Nomeryian perastat withont his＂ynill，＂
 paid of waterpoof mipurs a sine que hos，hay he hetter inugined than described．In such is sumblij hot this hathit wan mi intolerable misam＂e，anl mevenn－ panton and I sucerednd，thong with math ditlienty， in juttins somu check 1 ןun the practios．

A walk to besse secters for a thesh supply ot mille and croan passed the attermon；：mbl，the the way there， 1 shat seven willow－grase．Onr home－dairy Was a small hariont in the river mate of stomes，and there the milk ean and enembothles were inmersed， and their contents knipt gool hy the icy－cold water whieh ilower mat of the tijumen．

To our great disulpuinthent min was falling heavily next morning，filling us with dex ponding thoughts，and， abowe all，lutugins ledore us visions at mother day＇s shoemaking in the lint．However，townerls noom，tho wather elemed upsuliciently to warmut an expelition mlecel, it seemerl stant dread was [He soilen] os inmesingt, we sere ace the wroking veferring to this י peasants. 1 ith him in his :inse to trke the A. and a black coll himeter was a word, he j:phate, shased When aththins scrmblines, toh wis a chamminy mid and homest. great coteem liw $t$ to stramur ; c what in "thent the. pemarked (thlis wombl wiy sueh a mhin! (1) will tell thern This I stomit on the comtrus: ty sood fortheie y vigurn there. is praised his at of the emht crsition of that shoc: () ime nt unstion. and thr: maswer, in old 11s to sombll) wht le repenterl thlask, "! mand sanswey: Thus II, inswer, or proken quickly, nth, the lhasmane so uftert 1 butarusseal the ing, which prone:max enhanuees ly day nor ly ut his "quill," they mender : more, may ch :1 matif hat and ms combnuch ditliculty; surply of hailk 1, on the way ur home-dairy of stones, and vere immersod, iey-eohl water filling heavily thomghts, and, ' another clay's ards noon, the mu expedition to the fields: : and, crossing the river, wo commoneed

As we were tuiling יI the steep rock: the thro Norsemen der 1 , in emversation, two dark forms, num the moks aloove, suddenly eaumht my eye A ghaner suthed to show them to be reindeer, ami the chather of the aatives was puidly silenced. The deer, after looking over the precipice for a moment, turned awny and vanishere as sudelenly ati they had apmarel. Tho wind, howing from the sornth, left lint little doulht ats to the course to be pursuch, and, in another instant, we were hurrying on fownds the thrther side of the mountain, in order that, on reaching the smmmit of the elith, we" might proceed "up wind" to the spot where the deer has heen seen.

Kecpug the wind in our fices, when the high gomend was gamed, we mate our way wer the barren rocks. San we wre earefally desecming a stop slope, which shelved iway towards where the fleer wonld probably br ; when, by a simultaneons impulse, wo all samk slowly to the gromal. At about two hamdred yards' distance the two lucks were walking quietly one behinel the other. Fut as quiekly ats our hopes hat been minerl were they dispelled; for the reinderr, in another instant, appeared to eateh sipht of n s, and, turning shat romal, made ofl at a conter towards the bumulless hades behime. Onf cintne of suecess yot remaincl, lant that was a small ome. Ifowever, away we went, rushing hemblong down the hrokn slope at the imminent risk of lireaking one legs, :und, reachime the gully lolow, ran along it as fist as possible in lemes of cuttingoll the deer. But all was in vain; when we reached the desired point the deev hat gone past, and cuuld nowhere be seen.

Once more then we experioned the fiequent disappointments attendant on reindeer-stalkins; hat hope carried us on, and we soon startml afresli. We now sepmuted, Peter and 1 descending to the outlet of the Bes Vmal. or Vatn as the peasints call water ; while: the others pursued their waty aloner the ridge of rock werlooking the Gjendin Soen. On reaching the extremity of the bes Vand, wo forded the straim by whide the lake discharges its trinsparent waters, and then continued northwards over the rocks, lut without seeing any reindeer ; and the only living things that came acrons bur $1^{\text {ath }} \mathrm{l}_{1}$ were one or two ptarmigan, and a tlock of birds, with long fointed wings, which were unknown to me; but the name which leter gave then, commencing with fied, showed them to be natives of the lofty lecights.

No traeks, no freshly-eropeed reinder-flowers, or other signs of deer frequenting these parts, were seen; and a heasy hat-stom coming on ewntimed our hatfmate rexdie of retmong lome. The hail, Iriven ly the swerpury hlast, beat ham againat ome tiade, giving us a foretate of tho inclemency of the wintry wonther on these lotty momatains; and the desulate expanse of the survomding licks asmmed, under the datkenins sky, a still more imhospitable aspect. The lics Vimbl, whose soft clear waters reposed calmly in its shelving bed of rock, was the sole object upon which to fix ome's gize, und till for a tinne into semi-ublirion of the chenty waste aromb. Fie-fording the torrent we commenced a descent from the fithlis, and soon regained the regions of vegetation; and, in a short time, were once mure on the hanks of the Sjo Elv.

During our absence my compamion had ben well employed in replenishing the larder with tront and willow groltar Towamb dirk a tachaculons tidl of fart of the night, cansed us mate little "pyrnention; hat, fortmatel!, the mot prowel ta ber suthiciently well constructed to binjo wht the wet, and ond sumbers were undisturloed.

Nest moming the mountan peats me lomger shot up in dink masar, for at sparkling garl, of simw hat wereprend their ammits. 'lhis was the first smow of the satson (lst Gepermber), anl it showed that we harl ahrouly biden turewell to the sumame, and that bul wather miogh now be expueted. The folds bore a findiddins theret, and wark ominuts clome disclosed mot so moch ins a spocel of hlue sler.

The afternow, then, fimal wo strome towamts the secters in "thent of a livela suly wi milk ame exana.
'This times Marit muld wis a peculiar kimh of portige called: s. It was amde with milh am barlec-uteal, porridge. Harit aid that he hand asen it wimdeer swim across the lake dhring the formon, which: showed that the batheses of the weather han cansed at disturbance anomg the dees. As wr wote lowking one of the sutel a lomg tile we men an! pack-homen appewed in the distince, slowly making towards ti, suter:. Sull a novel sight caned all eyes to be lixal "pon the catm:nn. As they :ppmathed, the exeit". mont lacathe intone, and many were the spendations inmlinged in. It list, to our dismay, we made out that blaker, the sen of the proprictor of one of the Sumatal soctors, rode at tho head of the party. If only le shmbli be coming to stay here, how shall we supply hin with tiond and house-room?

Nothing eould have excerded our relief when, after is short conversation, Blaker turned his horse's head towarls the lake, and the whole trom, of attendants followed; suon we could see them fording the Sjo Elv, aml in a slort timo they were lost in the distance, it they pursued their way to Christiani: on matters of business. This woull le our last visit to the sœeters, and so we settled accounts with Mirit and Sigeri; then bidding it last farewell we returned to the shores of the Gjendin.
Much doult as to the phans of the day were caused next morning by the unsettled state of the weather. But at hast mive companion, Peter, and I. set out for a valley, called Sikkilhal, some miles to the east-it part of the comntry which we had not yet visited. Many willow-gronse rose befre us as we wanderd through the lireh wouds by the banks of the Sipe Elv, but, armed only with rifles, we left them in satety.

For a moment we wero starthed by the ilyeatace of a lewed of guadrupeds in the distanes. As we drew nower we fimm that blay were ponise, which were wandering at lawe ove the momatans. So tame wer: they that they allowed us to apromel quite elose, and even to pat them; ly the hamds we jererivel that their owners lived at Lillehnmer-a lave town on the Chistianit and Throndhem roud, and distant alout sixty or sewenty miles.

On reaching am eminener, a short distance beyom, we boked down upon the sikkillah, wimling far into the heat of the mumatias. Thiel fir wonis clothed the sterp sides, while a harrow lake wound a serpenthe enurse along the vale. 'ITese wonts were muth frepuented ly bears, and in this very date ohd Joh had wased succussful warture against them, and one evening had billed two lirge bears.

Unfortunately, hriving sturms of sum and hail rolled, in quick suecessiom, wer the momitains, debarring us firm uscenling to the more lofty fields. Long and anxiously did we wateh the angry skies, loping that the dense chouds might eventually pass anway and give phace to a clear smishine. But no, the mists only grew thicker, aul storm after storm swept the dreary field. Returnins lome, therefre, we devoted ourselves to the mor" homely pursuits of fishing and willow-grouse nhouting mueh to thi joy of Shot, who was always imprismed in the hut when wo wero away after reindeer. Two lance amb a half of willow-grouse having falloll to the gran, we were in nu lack of fool for a good surper:

The two others had not retumed when we sat down to wur willow-grouse sonp, and as evening drew on, and still they appeared not, we beetme rather anxions fir their satety on aceome of the stominess of the weather. Ten o'elock camo and still they had not yet retumed; lout, as we were in total iguorance of the direction they had taken, we were quite mable to be of any use to then; and conserguently retired to rest, hoping that it might be the death of a reindeer whiel had detained them. At length, however, at eleven selock the door opened and thing hoth entered tho hat: the cause of their delay was realily explained, when - harned that the provost's son had sprained his ankle very sevelely, so much so that it was ouly with great hor-ungerne mountains.

difticulty that he had bern able to dray himself home, Thry also had not met with any sport, having only seen a reindeer calf; but they had been nure furtmate in the weather, which with thell had heen very toleralle. They were much surprised at the news of our intended departure on the morrow, a move which though contemplated for som time previonsly, had only been hastily deternined upon.

During the night our medicinal resources were put to the test, for my frieml was suddenly seized with violent spasms. Ifot applieations in the shaje of iron plates, heated by a firr hastily kindled, were resorted to, and fortunately with success; and a cup of cold water was suggesterl as an militional restorative. Opening the door, 1 stole down to the river sile; the night was leautifully still, and not a sound greeted my cars sate the rush of the iey river as it hurried along over its rocky hed. Happily all went well after the draught of coll water, which was an intense relicf to me; ins, in a region so remote from all help, an illuess would have berin a wary serious matter.

The smin was shining brightly when we rose next murning, ind l'eter and I at once commeneed preparatious for departure. I was now to bid my last farewell to my good friend, who, at so nuach inconvenience to himself, laud altered his plams in order to cen we sat down ening drew on, - rather anxiuns orminess of the tey had not yet fnorance of the to unable to le retired to rest. reindecer which ever, at eleven :atered the hat: xplained, when raincl his anklo only with great orative. Openide ; the nightit rected my ears rien along over cer the dranght f to we; in, in 'ss would have wo rose next hamenced pre(3) hid my last mach inconas in order to accompany me to the firlits. Thronghout the whole or two of Euglish ganpowiler and a small telescop time that we had travelleal tagether 1 had fomed him all of which he appeared to value highly. a mont delightial emmpruim, always ehecrinl and Dy lurse wo resolved to send back to Som, it being hapne ; aml to his kindness I felt myself entirely indebtel for this hatem part of my tom, with whieh my mont vivid and pleasant meolloctions are associated. It will nut, therefine he ourprising that I should take leave of him with freding of deep regret, especially as this was our hinal parting: firr, white I was to brmain on tho mementain with L'tory, he was to return to Lom, whence he intembed tw travel direct to Christiamia, asil thence to fiermany.
To old Joh we owed :a debt of gratitude for so kindy accommolating us in his hut; for this he retheel to acept the smallest payment, but luckily we were able to make him a ferw trifling presents, such ats a pound

III intention to make straight for the Christiania road whenever I shonld quit the mountains; and so I left my lageage to be conveyel, together with shot, to the Pindion socters, and there deposited to a wait my arrival. The way to wur finture quarters lending over most ditlicult gromul, our equipment was very small, and consisted only of our knapsiack well stocked with fladbrot, mys ust-a yellow soat's clicese-a pise of raw hacon, some sugar, coflee, and one or two lits of tallow candle. Besides this we eath of us carried a rifle, and thus prepared we walkel down to the river, over which olid Joh firrien us in the little boat.
On reaching the summit we walked alongs over the rough stone by the elgo of a preipice overhanging the lake of Gijentin. Imalually the wedge of tablehand, boumled to the swath by the precipices of the (ijombin, and those of the Des Vand to the north, conthactent to a marrow point called Beesgen. Beture is, as we stood at the angle of the welge, the slan ${ }^{\text {an }}$ side hambed feet, till it rached a dhat strip of grassy hand; on cither side a perpemlienlar precipice descendinl into the Gjendin Soon and Bes faul respectively. To climb down the egyen, or enge, was the only means of attaining this grassy plot, from whence one couhl ascend to the rocks on the oplposite side. The shather of ruek was just sufficiently broken nul iuclined to render a descent practicaile, and, slinging our ritte., behind our backs, we begran to damber down the pasen. A precipice yawnd on either sile of us, amd in front it was but little less abrupt, sin that a slip of the toot, or a loss of balanee, must inevitibly have precipitated us many humbred teet below. At list we stow on the marrow grassy isthmus-

SIS FIORD.

> "The tambimark to the double tide, That prorpthing rolls on either side."

On the north side, ann mearly at the same level, was tretehed the calme expause of Bes Viand, while on the north, a thoussum feet below, the waters of Gjendin owned the stern boundary of rock. So marrow was the isthmens, ethe so perpendicular the precipiee of the Gjendin, that, stamling midway on the grassy plot lictween the two lakes, one could throw a stono into either.

Curionsly chough, there was mit the trace of : elamel through which the lies Pital hand at ruy time, however remote, proured its waters into the Gjendinthe matlet of the lake being four or tive miles distime in the orposite dinection. Here we sat down to ons frugal meal of breal. cheese, and buttere carried in the cral wooten bexes made for the purpase.

Atter a shert delay we serambled on mp the roels beyond. aud prevently reached a ridge oveldoking a large sheherem hollow. To the lelt lay a small tam, while to the right the massive benho hegan to rear his giant form. Nitting down we samed with eager eye the ervund betore ns, and presently canght sing of three reinder unu at jath in grass hetwen onselves and the tern. Gutatretefed ingun the rock we perad ower the ridge at the malle ammats, considering how mifirm swerp, foll towards them, and the dimetion of the wimb romberd it neensary that we should cruss the lame track immediatoly hofore us, as the precipices of the Gjemdin to inve left, and the lando to our right, prevented all possibility of making any cirenit.
For abont am hor we waited in hapen of the dere shifting their quarters; lome, finding them motionless, we remolven tor rum the rink of detection and stalk at ones. Wan tying un pockets of ewerthing which could rattle, wo heram to wom ourselses fown the hare wocks.
 guite dat, homedt us to a large rows, whed prowed to loe the limit of our alvanes: Here 1 fomm the fill oceasions. By this time it was past live besenck, and the deer wero all standing up feeding. Sindenty the shary crack of the rithes lroke the dend sitmen, and the dere trotud gently all: for a moment makine wis fear that both our shots had missed. Bitt they hat not rum mowe than a hundred ravis when one of then dropped gracetully on its kuees and rolled over on its side.
A hoarve eroak firem anong the craggs of Deshin tohn us that we had not been the maly witnesses of the ruindeer's death, and presently a harge maven was wheeling wer our heals scremuing and croaking with intense delight. Withont delay l'eter's tol-knise, the short Sheath-knifi wom by the peassuts of Norwas, was at work, and the heantiful, thiek skin was quiekly stripped from the deer. Seizing tho animal by the lige I now drew it ofl the skin, vemarking to leter that it was a pity to allow it to be suiled by the blood. Bint this whe contmary to the costenn if minder-hnoters, amb Poter ruplaced the wer umon the kin; amb, when I insinted on its heing otherwisw, he emedumed, as he then slat! we lay the deer?" "Upon the "Eromed." was the -imple answer : lut the pusilitity of so donne merer semed to bawe oecurred to leder, and it was with great mactune that ho ace ded to my wishes.

The heal cat ntt und the decrensered in two across bie loins, wir mat mare was to siack a pheer where the whison might be conveniently humben henath the rums and stoms, Fortumaly me wose lay favered the work, and the buisen was samt indusited in a hodlow fomand ley removing the large stomes. It was then eatronly cosered over widn a lares pite of heavy stones, till seaterly a vestise of it contd he diseowerd, as we were sure that the wilh nuinuls would hake muthempt to get at it.
The tongen was then tukn hom the heon, mud ulso the bruins, at which feter expressed great surfuise, addiug that her would mot eat hains for anything in the world. The skin was then tied in a roil to l'eter's mack, and the hent, tongu, dee, having been put intu : pucket-handkercliect, for want of : better substitute, we started on the remaning bart of une jomey.
betore long we rached the hink of a prepitons dill overhoking a deep valley, in the more "pun part of" which, to our right. lay a long, murrow, lake, by wlase wetern shores stood the bittle hat whore we were to pass the night. 'The sterp side of the valley desecmided, a with walk of about talt' an hour ahong the dald bomelte us to the lake. 'Then keepling the water on mur right hand, we skirten the shore amd chandered aleng the precigitnos sides of a lofty momtain. which, fire some di, tanes, heft only a narrow pratetimale path hetween it aut the lake. It was uhwast dark whan we rathed a wall torrent, whind balling with a houd rowe from the racks above, hatemed tio mingle its ic ated watom with thene of the lake Fording thes strem we stexd in another minnte at the dene of it small stome liut.
Sir ensempend was it amones the rocks of the hiti-xid. that it was only a near nypmoch that combld detect its existemes. Opening the little wemen door, tha only woolwork about tha exterine, ame bembing almost double as we crossal the threshahl, we fomil onselves in the intering of a thmintive pome it appearane was mot sugqeotive of emonert, but tior that we cared lifthe so long tis thato was a rond above 14 . 'The inve gromid eompuned the flow of the eabis, which might measure abome right fent spuare. In obe comer was the usual angular fire-phace of rough stome, and along the wall opyusite to the door stnod : beneh of threc planks, resting upon stono stilluits; nul this suplied the place of talle, chair, nul bedstend. An irou pot, a wishlen bow, and two harge woulen spoons: completed the arrangement.

It was already nemly dark, ame there was not :t moment to lowe in collecting a suphly of tivewood; : deprositing the riffer and kumpack in the hut, wo hastened out agnin. But we were nbove tho limit even of bivel-trees, and jnuiper and a fow dwart hiredus were the only shrmis to lo met with. Im? ewen then grew not in linxuriant havkes, but, ns though to sheltel themselves from the pirecing blasts of winter, they crept humbly along the gronal, eoncealing their writhing stems along the stones and moses. It wna no ems, matter therefore to fiml the bunipur in the dark, and it was sobue time before suilicient fied to last thoughant the wight had heme erflected.
It is mast lintuate lin the reintion hunter that jumijur, the miny worl in tha momathins which hurns when grean, atuins to a higher limit than : 1 y other Hernh; simple as it may sem, howeres, it is rapisite to know the rinht way of laying it an the time in order to make it burn. The simes of the juniner grow urward from then luand, and, thugh it seems ta he the matual way to lay it upom the dire vith the spinew downwards that they may eateh the lame, juniner thus phene will anly smoulder; liut whan haid as it grows, with tha splues mpards, it huste firth into a hige.

A grond tire having heen kimelled by mome of smas matches from my olfong hass has, we bethought wir sotwes of eroking sume reinder-manat fin supher, But: great obstatele hay in our way: the iron pol was contend Buth inside and out with at thiek hayer of rust-whet was to le domed Peter was pady at oner, amb, filling the pot with water, he lung it over the fire, mel then

- anything in the roil to l'eter's - beon put into at etter sulstitute, w jommey.
af : 1 precipitous more open jart turow, lake, by - hut where we le of the valley I an hond alonis ho keving tha the shore and ot : il lolty mountya narow prate. It was ahmost it, which, fallings wre, lastomed to He lake. Fending nt the eloor of it s of tho hiil-wide at cobld deteet malent deor, the ; :und bemeling ashull, we tommi ative room. It ort, lut for that a rout nbove 11 -. the cubin, which In une cormer ough stone, aml trad :s bench of ports; mat this hodstend. An acorton spoons here wai not : of firt wood ; : 1. "the hat, wo e tho limit even v dwart hirelus - 1m: evern then honugly to shelter of winter, they y their withinis It whes no catsy the dank, and it last throughomit now lumter that IIs which hums that! :Hyy other $r$, it is cmpuisite "rive in orter to 1. grow Mownd (1) lice the matural bes downwards, Clins platenl will crows, with the lime.
Heymes of smma bethought win' pot was ematol - of rast-wlut 1世"ゃ, 11 ml , tilling o tire, and thes sat clown, sayiug, very calmy, " Iy tu-ntorrow moming it will be fit to use."

Biat the Norwegian peasants have a proverb that ":an Englishman must have meat every day;" ner was I, after our long wall, inclined to belie this one mational lailing, and so I suggested that the pot shomhe be senned out with samil.
"No," said leter, "lyy to-morrow moming it will be quite elean: wo will leate it over the fire."
"I'ome, leter, we cin lut try ; so brits the pot down to the lake, where porsilhy we maty lind some samel."

Leter was still vory dombtful, Int, alter I had set the example, he worked away intoorl carnest. Presunty his cotntentmee brightemok up-10 his surgiso the inst wats allealy yieleing-amb suon, with great delight, he hewed me that it was clem.

It wats quito astomishing low I mow rase in Poter's estimation. and he seremed to look upon me as cuite a sherion beines: int hat this exploit whin the rusty pot was an era in by follolite with Peter.

A fiew slices of rinderes liser were soon liying in the pat, and we male an excollent suppre of heral, we preprom for the night's rent, but the prospeets of a comfertadon deep were very remote. A slight shower of min, havins fillen towatds croning, hat wetted the moss antliciendy to render it maviatahlo for tho furperers of le ledting.

Nothing remained bit tufake up our quarters upun the ther phanks, I eter taking ene of these resterl it on than stonse, and lay down "pon it with his fict agatiot the amath-stonts. Tin me wore left the whor tu"phanks, amel, lying town wh thess. I covered luyedi with the fer-h reindere shin $l_{11}$ ehont a emple of homs I whe woke by the cold, when [ comme that not only was the lite almust extimushed, but that the vetr-kkin was rate wel, the anitual havine tallen down in a small -tream of water. I'eter was puickly ronsed, amil hy our mated ellonts the firo was ebue more urged Joter, and l:y thwn on the single plank ly the fire, lont mot withont great mprehensions of stiden? rolling wit "ןon the thoor.
lint our best wat not melisturhed; forb as the fire grese low, the cold dimety air pumbel down the wide channey mol romsed us from sterp. With what detight at has was hailed the mist of duwning hay us if f corel down the rudn dhamey; and with what emperness was it watehed an, endually inemaning in hrighthes,

A more litural ase of the fiel was now alhewed, amb lagent nfter bipgot was luaper ubun the primitive henrth; und, ine the tirst time aftere the cold and tedions night, we bugut thed a mal ghow of wamel

Nil.

Choss the hohel vamune Modexaisa - Curnen of lun-thanh to thenmben on brontmian.

Thts nights we so clene in stmmer tinte itt the parathols lentwen the Nogno-fiod whe Thrompem, that Unfortanatuly, upon the traverse we lat uw vintered

Hph, there reme no rouds mul only trachs known to the gelides. We fombl outsolses liy sum-rise in the reqions ot prpethat show, the lotty peaks at the llerUngense were gildal by the rising san to the right, with the still more lantastic-lonking pinmeles of the skagstols 'lind to the sonth. Close by at twremt of icy water preeipiatarl itselt iato the valley heneath. The sernery from the smmat of the pass wan of the mandest I! pine rhameter: Seer dinge tw Everest tinn that these Ihor-Ungerne montiatins wer the wh: spring of an incestmous marima and thererore elanger to stone. The n:mu in the Notwic tonane imbientes the misermbet of the mother. (s, pase fo.)

Alhe form mortal homs of wambling own the tablo lame of the Hor-Ungerne :mb of the Finomstablinder, by htuments lakes and farms, and thonget voek and show, and where the predominent revelation was rein-forline mommen torronts or erosing the rane hy homes' fert atm no halustath, wo were ateremhly ant on the show. This wats a latply itlea of one of tha party, whan had reat on gribies in adsumer to hare hreaktant in ramliness at the midelle of the piass. The tent had inem struck on a tahlo lath. kown inded at Mid dields, between two matll hountain !aker, ant in liont of the Fornemakn, whose grean and ervasest Gheiers rival in bennty aml magitmde the monmed that it was imprsible to holl a persil itt the hasers.
 that moment.
 into a marow valley chelosel hy malk walls. mil at the bottom of which the berbit-suen and enk at the ghacios it thowed from-rollen over its stomy bed. It espunded helow, however, in the baks dinnen ats the

 the redilish late of the dwart wathe. 'ils. path at the sume time improved so much that wormbite into mont. Tha impression of human fict were eonsely mavid in the plamks at the fort of the leed, amb Livis.

 Hose symbols. Whate abribe fork jossession of the there the impression of her forst. 'Jlhis young firl hat momakably gowl leatures, atul hev proty face was of the comatry: A delichous repast, consint inge of tresh tront, most rindere and hot miced wine, lust nothing by bemerg meved up ly hos.

Cuext day we nvaited onsedves of the lompitality of Whe ;resby iery of lam, where the king liat shopt the nipht presinnsly, and where we likewise mesivel a cordial whenme trom the worthy mastor am his fimily, The prinee lai merived at this point wearied mal humy with the lomy and andmous paseige of the mombiains, hat lie was not promitted lo sempe the right to make a spech to myalty in the presence of $\mid$ his enngregation.

"In my yluility of pastor of this chureh," he said, adlressing the langry monareh, "I return thanks to haven fir having permitted the inhahitants of my parish to contemphate the fitee of their sovereign. As a man, I :m halpy in areing my king, iml 1 thank tho King of kings. An an ohd man, I call the hessings of ( God unnu your angnat head; and, lastly, as presibing over the entertamment, I pray yon, sime, to acept of what small things we hate to offer,"

The suech was neit :und hrief, but still the hast sentence agyeared, to the royal travellat, to be the mist rlopucit.
The churd of hom is a vere remarkable structure, fuilt of woul, like all the old Norwegian chmelnes; it is in better kerping than the genemality, ann it is in deltent to this to its worthy pintor, who is at member of the diet. and by his "hoplume hat won from that anstero body the finds wherewith to keep it in order anas wool repair:

The remainder of the diey was phised, partly in carriola wer high mblank, parily in lunts on the Wiant Gand, which we thatly quited torarise at a bate hom at Limmaral, a station on the Liver Latarn, umat where it is joinel he the soter har. The hridge at this phace in said to be one thonsand bughish fret thowe tha sem, and the highest puint passind on the mext stige lawewer. "onsideably tu the chureh it Dovere which is wot mene than one thousand tise handred.

 which it wan aught to reclaim. A laned slip had miles of valley anl available pathong. It was maw a was full of conmere perply, whan thecken in from all gate tore the kine. The men hat in whe like the Chin rnate, which "er, wallow tailed, or, as the Fremsh womblall it, it lambaise. The wometh wom haen andly trated hack to the eprela when the ir enthowed with grom fisatures, and light and well math Mers. This is, bu domit, what aptivated at sombs ans tish, hat who, while setcling tront, hat himself buen canght hy the charms of our of these fair peasaints, and had marriol and setthed nt lamraand, where he eninged protiet halymess. (For a skothot'in by and sill of burgmari, see p. in,

'Iln valley of the hagen narrows inte "step and than Lumgard, nud in what is insignated as limbhamasalater. 'This was the seme of the massare of Sinelair and histionelf fallowers. In 1611, during the mised fin the serve of Swedern. The Dathes were, at that time, in possersion of dothentary ; and from Ghtmar, in the Hahtic, to the North Cane, the whold coast was oceppried by the subjeets of 'lluintian IV, The scoteh, therefine, decided was the buid phate of lamling in Norway, and fighting their way aeross it to Sweden. A purtion landed at Throndhiom, and tho rest, nine humdred stroug, commanded hy Iolenel (heorge Siuchair, landed in Romstiden, from whenes they marehed towards the valley, tavaging the country in their may, Acoording to the tratitions of the country, a peasant, secmed by combl, was mand. to act as quide, but, arrived in the chadmansialen, ho suceeded in cthecting his escape, and ahmed tha emmery. 'This is not likely, as hire as the litter part is concernol ; the comntry wouh soon have heen alamed, and it is mone certain that they hal time to collect in a small baud of some three hundred men, nud to sidet a pass which was most tavemahbe for at conflict but ween as suall mumber of mon and a harger hooly. Tranditions wats coldonted as a blower of row-harns, or alpine emmets, as they hawe been perctically designated, was stationed at such a point that she conlly give a tirst signal when the colnum should enter the detife, man a second when it had mathased. Almee, the imbush hat luen prepared, and luge plantities of roeke, stomes, and phared hat all could at once her hand hed yom the roand toneath. The alvanced guarl was allowed to pass, tha seotel sthpling only amoment tolisten to the derpand sinister sond of the larin, hat the hag pibe were ordered to strike upand drown all such mutimely signals, Whon, pared for them, it was sent whift from aluwe, and the mandity of the Senteh were crunded th hath or -wiph into the river and drowned; the pesasint- then ru-low down umb the wombled and the stragelere : an! d... patchell them. "f the whole finere minly two wit the Souch are said to have survived. Lhet acomma dillion num huna this paint ; whe heing that sixty pinnters wern taken and atterwands slatughtorod in cobld hant.

 paned him om his hazandome oxpedition, was pamel is with on lumdrel and thirty fime Someh, into the hamls of the pitilowe peosate. Tradition alsur relates libations with which they endolnated it, they oblimein the untiotumate widow to danee with emblo of hew whe they were mand targets of, with the :"erption in rightesn, wher wree sent th the King of Domank, Laing, in his Noraty, rehtes as follows: Sinchar's lady is satil to have acempanied him, mud it is admet that a yonth who menat to fuin the persants in the attack was pinevented hy a youms laly, to whom he was whe marricd the next day: She, minaring that ons of her own sex was with the Sentel, sent her lower (1) her protection; Mrs. Sinclair, mistaking his obpect, shot him dam. 'The dite of this massacres wat the 24 hi Augnt 1612.

It is silid that some armen and wher trophies takens ly the peasantry from the scoth her prevereal in a homser near the phace of slaughter.' A small just with an inseription, but others say a stame is alas said 11 mank the "xact spot where Colond Sinelair fell. His Indy was hurien withont the precinets of the ecmetery

1 We suw a slome, says l'rofessor Aumes torbes, marking the gpot where Sinetuir fill, mal some not munteresting refiets of the tight, in a meightowing cottape.
ny across it to hjem, and the d by 1 'ohnalel from whenes is the eountry litions of the was matule to lyansdalen, he alarmed tha Clatter part is been al:amed, a to colleet in a and to melect :a mallict between ly. Traulition illar-Gmi, who tros. or alpint losighaterl, wil nhll give : lime a detile, amu . ha: imbush han! ks, strules, an mutain, and I uron the roin End to priss, llus on theremand whre ordom ignals. Wherlo, avaluche jow alowe. alll the leath of -w"pl| ta then m-lne for: anll d:m IV $t$ wo at ther aceomuts lither vixy pimble in colld hlaoet, ifi, whonecom Warsparml ally womble t, hiloul she foll, otelh, into the all alser mblat Wure so ly Any ohlimen the $h^{6}$ it how Hur prisoners - verptiont ut a1 Whmark. ows: Sillelair mid is indent masints ill the , whonn ho wids ariug that ons 1 her lower to tig his whieet satere was the "Mphies takin neserverl in : hall ןunst with is also satid (1) hair foll. Iliv f the eemetery of $\mathfrak{k i}$ ram, the peasants having refused to grant lion a Christian burial, and on his tomb is suid to he incribed, " Here lies collonel Sinelair, who fell at Kringless in 1612, with nine humbed Scotehmen, who were smashed like - many earthen vessels by thowe lumbed Norw gian pusants, commanded hy lertom Suchetat, of Tiagbor.
Ther rest of the Nouteh, with some Jutel, were com pletrly necesstill in thoir ohject. They wore eomhamben ly Cohnel Momichotin, landed north of I'homelhjen, marehed mon Stuckholm, which they aided in relinving from the Danish forees most opportumels, and rablied the Swerlish monard soon atterwarl' 1 " eonchude mivantageons terms of pente. - hereners Ilistoire de Suède.

The tiver Latgell flows into the Miosen lake, and all tomrids, from Jh: Charke to Barrow, have nareal that the hanks of this lako and its feeding river, fin at di-tance of 170 English miles from 'lolte in GinlInambiallon, athinal a series of the finest limtseanes in th. world, and that it is dumbtind whether any nhes river satn show Alli) : eomatimt sheces. sion of lenatifal seenery. Nuthing intwed rinn יxrend the gramerne of the figeot-miad momutians whin ramber ther riel amb chaminis valley of Which the river wimd its impettoms cormbers. 'This latr wombroms lnamtimb athey, to which (1) & al sur interst attemel- 18f to the finet at the lhespe tied.l, athotst 1-1: learlish miles. I'lue hials pasil timon Chris low- thin line ot eonntry.

 t. S Lith hammer, thang (imiftamblat, and oser the buve didd. When we hevn - slognes, med genetally eovered with pine limests in the ulper pats. Were amb there the valley widens fire a Nhen diatanes, but mow whe tor greater extent than sis ur eson linglish miles, Besend this we have the sume cland table lands, the wheder pressed maines, and the at mi recky pimmales ot the Downe liad semated fiy wimider, bears, fiesus, and wolves.

Nill.

 Mocataliss of Beambinula.

Thexse Lampuatd the rond is vely hilly, ne nemal, phan heing in Nomay the exeeption, hill the ruk;
the semery is, as a meonpense, grand in thr extreme, athl keeps increasing in wilthess. The laltient momn-tains-thove of the IEalamean tieh- lie to the west, In one prate the road is candictl wer the shomber ol it mombanin, called hasten, at a great height alonve the level of the river, which foams through a narrow wocky gorge to the right. As we appromeled the villate vit Dosw, with its pretty chureh, mmbers of small tarms showed themselves up, the siles of the momatains, and lelown vast forents of pinc. Leaving Dovere to the right, mal keeping abong the bamk of the nprev Latigen, and gradually inormbing, we arrived at loftemoen, so cathel from its pronintor, Mr: Tolte, who, ablect reputed very walthy, dims mut dishain to follow the plond, and profissing extrome democratie ideas, elains at the same time desent in a direet line form King Jiambl Ibarfiger. These contralictions in the mane person may he met with, hewever, withont travelling to suth remote phaes as the acelivitie of the Dove liehl. Mr. Tofte lanl a weaknes for horses, Werl-huilt amimal of at collee columr, with the nsuml loure hack mats from mane th tail, ambl Which he said hat worl the last rave: but olut of the gumbes lime the , rinolte twinsimate that it hail only one ollymut, and that Mr: Tout had lnoun $\because$, libure! as to volumtere tw drive tha lattro-unt a hall hint 1. 1"H1, \% limit ot אentrlatir in tha Hastre tind is alomit

 $t$ highror '11.0-tatimb aro zow mat.in! luitus), man (u)-calleal stathan ut . I kimh, watly remown-inse are deerated with hiv $\quad$ os, athl his parvinis in Whether fine grame seemers, yntims, of contiont, thi phater in all Nopway, at which to linger at least bin : fow dass. A man nameal frer lives in tho vidints.

 Has sumbettor. In the Dovre fied, it is to be rem matken, alk me met with as well as reimeder, hat they we vare. l'tamigan we plentifnl.

Shembettan misy be nsemded in an may day from dorkinel ; it is thee or fome homes riding th the hase of the muntain, ami from thenee about an lanir and al hilt"s walking th the thy most of it owe that peenliar kind of show-ine whirh is net with on the highoset

whiel he pos－ in the Seottish rs，this absence it the preculian se universality gular features －interminabla ：arelieved by where we ：ure at libuety to $\because$ of ehntele ens they seem is a very rate om Berwen t＂

I think wi arney by lame hey are alust n，luees s＇em n，and whet $i$ dited，or with the moighlount I（wintry，the tor vomul tha mal amel pats． Enctial mather＂ h switzollanl， ler a continual not：ן＂川nlons

Hent spurinern try imbs．It di－tiane from is ：slau some d part of the －Valain aneos－ －so in lan inn that ond host －リ，い14（f）tho a－tance of the ntime that at Henl road in lotter to

1 was boht －donu＂；lut 1 Wht il specta！ my leiter．：ll whinde andtus
falm рития， etinly in the lamilit．Wo already re－ to Itrkime blown－lidil lanly attained ascent disy－ we here tilit， als the norid （11）to Moldis， lakio at the： 10 winh，and is It issutes from fh the waters folth Ne：t at caso with the

Oita Five the othor great branch of the Latigen， alreuly refered to，which receives water from the Priedtals vanl，from which a stream likewise rums into the stor－find，on the west corst．On the whole， the Lessimedal，alove＇Tolta，is the most remarkable in－ dentition in a mematain range to be olserved any－ where in Nomeay．It affords a direct and easy com－ muniation from the heart of the peninsula to tho North Sa，whing，as it were，the luity monntains which it diviles；－smoment in all directions with poripotual saows，yet not itself rising to the upper limit of the pine．At Lie we parted with regret with a youms Nomperian un his way to Mohde，through Momstal，who spoke English，and whom we met ods boand the steatary．With the eustomary politencss of his colntremen，he assisted us in making out win formed puers thas for，and iu moking all arrangemonts un the jomusy．On bomel the sume stemere 1 was akfremed by gentleman from the weat of Norway， entively miknown to me，wh，after some cenvepstion， invited me to vinit him there，and gave me usetisl lixal intormation．I afterwards experiencel the full benefit of his hospitality．

Se we ascemed tho Dovre tield to Fogstuen，we were intarester in olserving the well－defined limits of growth，fres of the spruce，then of the pine，and tinally w＇the bireh．＇The hifls here are very genorally wooled Hi，the height where these several trees can grow． It the limit at the seoteh fir，the aneroid barometer lhonging to nhe if my゙ rompanions stoon at 27.11 － 1he tempresture of the air was at $\mathbf{3} 3 \mathrm{~B}$＇．＇lhis may cor－
 ustimated that the common birch reahea a height 400 fore grater．We toucher granite in sith belwe rach－ ing Fingtuen，which，however，verngies but a limited fumgh from home，wem in tine weather in winter or －huing stomms it mus le wihl imberl．It is at tallh． It al of tu averate height of 3,000 teet，or mathe mone alowe the seat，from whiel pine momataina，attaining， in the＂Las of sueehattan，and possibly one or twon ＂thers，an chation of above 7,000 fert；hat the seater part are tar inferins to this and of such wherdued has pirturespur etlect than ans mometain ＇hain of the same magnitule with which I am are patanted．Fivensmehatian is not a commandingotypet， and the table lamel rises so ermblally to the hed of its immediat＂lan that the eve is singhlady decoived as wits rend dhanes，and eonemuonty its real clovation， bothote which are greaty underment．＇the tavility with which the bure tichl is grimed would alone diminish its cellient，if it had any ；bun，heing entirely devo id of the chatache ut：b harice，and consisting of undabating suritues of homdrods of miles in extent，ani ravely athaning the show lime，it has a chane ter of mediocrity Which must disappoint ahoost every travelhr：

The thive from fogstuen（a single finm－honse）to Jerkind is memty lesel，over the table fand ot the bove fiohl．It resembles the moorland seemery of sombe extensive wastes in the Highlands of Sootland． ＇Ilow inequalities of tho surtace are tilled with swangis and wilh taras；the drier spots are interspersed with stmated hrushwood，Dno lake of moderate sizo is skirted by the roal for a comsidemalde distanee：it hits ahaost a pioturesquo eharacter，from an measional clitl of wrerhaging rock，which is here hornblendir slate or gueiss，with oecasional bireh，The level grounds
ure nearly covered hy rocky debris，but I did not observe angular bheks of any umsual size；timuness of ontline is the on ！$y$ olamoteristic．After passing two lakes，whose waters man eastwarls into the Glommen－the greatest river in Norway－the roal rather deseends for a considerable listance．At leugth the station of Jerkind comes in sight，towards which tho roul rises majilly．Were better pasture appears， and the surface nssumes armenerand less inhospitable ippearance．The station is，howeror，in a very ex－ prosed prosition on the last iseent of the Dosyrefield， and at a height uot interior to that of Pogstnen，or at sut ： 3,100 English teet nloove the sea．It is a sub－ stantial firm－house，with apmendiges，amo hat long been possesised by persuns ot mbstance，$l_{11}$ onler to acommorlate travellers，who very tiramently pass the night here，a somatate baiding has lnen ewectad on the opprosite sid of tha rosd for thenir menjomer．There are not，howeror，mate than tive bals，ind we fomma the management of the house less goonl than we ex－ preted from the hish eharacter it has ustally borme． I am atimill something is to he attributed bare an－Me－ where，to the rewnt influs of Enslish visitms，whe ushally pass the night at Jerkind，ind mbnetimes remain fir a time in pasait of game．Wi profernd， in this replect，some of the ims on the rowd has known， and ofrerinis homeliuv aceommorlation．Nuip ean I let this oplortunty bass at expresing sumarly a hope， telt ly all， 1 helicve，whon have travelled in Norway， that our conutrenen will take a lesson from the eflects visible on the continemal thromghines，of too frempent in the malimited puwers of gold ami that they will dixplay，in this compratively new eomatry，a hegro of considerate moderation in their expetations and the ive netans which mat peserve to Great Britan the pee－ tige of attachment and regitil commmoly foumd ammast all ramks of this frees，intelligent，and there layted perople．

Whe prepured for the aseent of swehestam int the following day，which was the the July．

The distaner of tho has of sucehettim fom Jer－ lind is reckoned at two Ninweginn，m finmeen of the Notwendan fehts－menty tracklen；tha wa－ veller，or，mather，his saraciont jub，mast mphom his Way through swan！and hesthembilluget linke and werst of all，owel humerons athl wide pateles of－till momeded show，treathermis even fin the foot of man，

 ＇Where wats little of pincturespio interest to rederm the twil at this sermmble of fown homs＇lamation．Suce． hattan itseff was the only whent at all remakialle in omtline，and it rase hefore us in a manmer sen grathal， that it swomed as if we shonhl never reach it．
＇The changing aspere of the seanty veretation of this whderness was the ehief evidence that we were really aseembing．Som after leaving dorkime，the common or white biveh is left behind ；the willows， mom ne lews stumterl，suceced，with junipr．Unth thes phants chase together，and the ereeping dwart bireh，a vory pratty spemding undergrowth searcely sis inches high，with reindeer moss，ure nealy the anly semenally－spreal plants：but we saw the remurabus ghacialis in flower：At length，even theso somity trmes of lite almost dixapueared，and tracks of loose shingle，

ALL ROUND THE WORLD

freshly uncovered by snow, and steeperl in cold moisture, afforded a slippery and uncertain footing to the weary horses. The beds of snow having become so frequent as nearly to cover the plain, we left our horsos in charge of a boy on a space covered with slaty debris and triekling with melting snow, affording a most comfortless bivonac. The level here appeared by the ancroid barometer to be about 1,900 English feet above Jerkind, or almost exsectly 5,000 above the sea.

It gives a correct iden of the flatness of the fieh, that we had only erept up these 1,000 feet in the course of a ride, probably not overrated at fourtoen miles.

We proceeted on foot with our elder guide to the ascent of the mountain, which rises with sudden steepness from near the point where we left our horses. At this still early period of summer it was covered with snow, except where the winds had drifted it from the blocks of miea slate which strew its slopes. It was

FIORD OF GUDVANGE:t.
now noom, nud the heat of the sun (though not very great), hail softened the snow, through which wo struggled with great fatigue, often sinking quite to the waist, until wo gained the firmer slopes. The ascent was both disagreeable and dangerous, the foot sinking at every step anongst the interstices of the bloeks alrcady mentioned, threntening dislecation or hrokea bones. After "tedious and fitiguing serumble, we gainel harler feoting as we approached the sumuit, where the walk76 ing was comparatively eav; but the wind, from which we had been sheltered by the momatain during the ascent, blew ehilly in our faces, and rendered it inspossible to remain for any time exposed to it when we renohed the top, which was about three ochoek. Wo then saw elearly that the form of the mometain is a ridgo ruming nearly east nnd west, inecipitonsly brokeu towarls the sonth, nad sloping sieeply in other direetions. The chasm on the south has been compared to a erater-the mountain ridse bending partly round it like the clitf of Monte Somma, with which in steepness it may compure; whilst the elevation is much greater. It has been stated that a lake exists in the hollow, but at this time it was no doubt frozen, and concenled ly beds of snow; and, according to M. Durocher, a smail glacier is lodged under the clifts of Snechaettan. This also was, of course, concealed by the abundance of the remaining snow. The ridge itself is wihly sermetel, imel, like the entire mountain, is composed of : mather fitiable mica slate. The part on which we stood was a cone of pure snow, cleft vertically on the sithe of the precipice; one point $n$ little to the westward appeared to be a few feet higher, and to this one of our party promecied, by making a considerahle circuit, whilst I in vain attemptel to inflame a spirit of wine thunice for taking the temperature of lailing water, for the wind blew rather strongly from the west, and felt bitterly cold-the temprature being $34^{\circ}$. The anmial hameter stood at $2.5 \%$ incles, The cold compelled us soon to quit our position, lant not mutil we lad carefolly survered the panomar of mometains, which fin the most part were firtunately still clear, athough tha gathering clouls towards the north bretokened it "hange of weather, which soon followed.

Snelhertam, lior a very ling period considered to he the lighest momain in Norway, attains, aceording to the hust ulservations, a heisht of ahont 7,400 likenish wive a height of 2,600 Euslish feet alove the station at the fint, or 4,500 above derkind, and 7,600 alove the sea: at renamkable coincidente, considering the somewhat mativonrable circumstances in which the obsernatims wore made, and that the thermometric enrection of the instrment itself is not taken into accomit. It was first aseenden in the last years of the eighternth century ly Profssor Esmank, who astimated its height ahont ani beet too grent. Not may years after, it hy a few hmitreal feet loy the Store Galdhopiggen, In longing to the Yime fiche, in the direction of the Sunge hand. the dithemee is not sutficient to give : cummanding appearame to that range. Some of the fims are, however, pioturespe, expelally the striking sumbits if the Rimatar or Rombe momentains, to tio sunthernt, which apmach 7,000 feet, and the extensive sum-fieds, to the sonth, comnected with the membans at Lom and the Fimes-lield. I believe that I saw distinetly the stare Gidhlhepiggen, and the Glitturtind, attlowigh the srat distanee, and the number of entier ragge not much its inferior in height, diminish rratly the pieturesigue "flect. Of comrse, from this fhevation the phatenn of the Dovre field is seen in all its vastues and desolation. As we are unable to ser to the buttom of any of the valloys, the eye com only ramge from its level to that of the summits beyoni. This agsin comributes to lessen the apparent height of the mumations. The ridge to which Surehattan belongs runs cast and west for an considerable extent. It is well seen from Fogstuen as has leen stateal, and the impression I then lad, that the mountain immediately to the westward, ealled Skrenhog, is little infurior in heisht to Suechirettin, is contirmed lyy what I find in Namman's lournal-that geologist having purtially explored the almost mutroblen wilderness in that direction, where the level of the table-liull of Dovre is higher than in any other part, and several summits bulouging to the same clumin are, in the estimation of that writer, not more than 500 or 600 feet lower than Suceharttan.

NIV.

Valdife of Romsdal-The stor Fiord-largend of the Witcif Peaks-Sis Fiond-Town of Molde-Eiden-down Islands - Curibtiansuxd - Or'a photooripuer in Thouble again-a fat Menichal.
THe scenery imesented by the magnificent valley of Romstal, which leats to the ford of the samo name, having npon it tho town of Molde, to the west of the: Dovre fiehd, is admittedly amongst the suadest and most pieturesque of any in Norway. The valley of Romsilal, one of the most picturespue in the world, distinguishes itself from will others that I am nequainted with by the number of its cascalles and the abundane of their werthow, by the wremess of its sward, by the transparent colour of the river that tlows aloug its base, the Rom, and which it said to have its origin in the Lessoe vand, which supplies the (iuldbrandsial, or laagen, at the other coul, at rars phenomenom in hydrography; nud, lastly, hy tice hrold ontline of its monntains. ${ }^{1}$

Tha' hatter are indeed most remarkable fir their tite outline, and the whole route aflords sulgects of ther lest description for the landseape painter. The tributary streams, falling into the Rom, we very mumerons, and their fiels and cascades are hishly picturesque. In this land of waterfills, those in liomstitlen rank anong the first for number and bemty, althongh none of then are of any grent height. The river ites lt nbumds in exeellent trout and salnon, and the shoning is described as good. Reinder and hears atre found in the mount ${ }^{-}$-s, and red deer in the islituls ofl the const; lares, wingol game, and water fowl are also abundant. Before coming to the station of Nysturn, a hore-path on the left leals to Ster fiotd in the: roud to Aalesumd. The seenery of the showertal range of the langg fied munutains upen the stor fiond is but little known; what is known of it, loweres, attests to its bring of the gramest desuripiom. The chtline of the monntains is more pieturesplae tham in most other parts of Norway, nud full of variety ; and the Stor fiord, and its mumerons tributary stromis, piss sess equalateractions for the sportsman and ther angler: At Nystren, the range of the lhoste tield begin in their left, and from hence the road rapidly desennts: tho seenery inereasing in grandour and pieturesp ple outline, and the Rom still fuming ulong its rocky lind, close on the left all the way. Ormen, the mext atation presents excellent quarters for salmon tishing, the riven making a licturesque fill, beyond which the salnon camust pass.

From Ormen to Fladmark the valley is dmicions with freshness, the banks of the Rom wre fertik : inl well cultivatel, the momutains are still ruphete with granteur, :and to the right is the lobty-curved peak of the" limmblals-horn, which owes its natne to its peculiar form: : hom, spotted with sinow, that rises up Notwithstanding Professor Forben's authority, which is haeked ly Forself's mud other napls, there secms to be sone doubt num this pwint. '" nppears in K'cilhau's Amts Karter, that there are in reality threo smull lakes, nll ealled Lesge, or hessoe, and that the Lesjevoerks, or Lesje dernvoerk Vind, trom whence the ftom has its origin, is at an elevation of 2,078 feet above the sea, 511 feet lower tham the lexje, or Lessoe, Viand, from which tho Jatagen Hows.

-Lbarnd of ties LDE-EMDER-DOW lotoobarner in rificent villey of the samo name, the west of thl" he wandest :and 'The valley of e in the world, that I :mm accassendes and the fremmess of its f the riser that which is said t" lich supplia's the ther emil, at ratre istly, hy the beli ble fin their the? sulgieets of the. tintur. 'The tri 17, are very mo. are highly licon in liomsiliten beanty, althonefh 'The river itselt' , :and the shont$y$ and learis ate in the islathls ont ater-fowl are also tion of Nystuen, tor tiord in the $t^{\prime}$ the snowerlail on the stor tium l of it, howerer. essriptinn. Thes turesple than in of variesy ; and ary streatus, !"s. b umb the angles. b tiehl bergin in apidly deacumb: anll picturesithe ng its rocky berl, the next station tinhing, the rimy fich the salmon dley is a lunons a we fertile anl ill rphete with fty-curved peak its munu to its ow, that rises up uthority, whiel is ns to lee some tonbt Aints Karter. that ed Lergie, or Liessoe, Vnul, trom whence noml, trom whence cois feet above the Y, Vis feet atove them which almost to the heatyons, and serves as a landmark lar ofl in the North Seat. The IIandlook silyz 2,188 fuet high ; M. de Saint Blaise says 1,300 metres, that is alout $t, 000$ Englinh feet alove tho valley alone. To the lett we the peaks of Trold-tinterne, on Witeh peaks, that rise up like a erenelated wall, at tho evest of which stand so many regal statues. The legend is, that these fintastic rocks are so many evil being., who, wishing to prevent Snint Olaf penetrating into the valley to convert the inhabitants to Christinnity, they were turned into stone by the pions monach. This seeluded vale was inded, at one time, quite an Olympus to the Semdinavian deities, aud they con-Aned to hohe their gromed here a long time after the glad tilings of the gospel had been disseminated overthe more southerly regions.
At length the glorions Rom falls into the Sis form, a brameh of the Romsdal tiond, at a platee with the me conth mame of Teblungnoeset, but which is a capital phace for head-guarters while fishing, shooting, or sktching up this splendid strom and valley, and whel cind at this print. Threo beurs were laillen in one day her atumer mear this in Jume, 1817 . Nemr here is :dons the firm where Culonel Sinclair landed with his remiment, previons to their alestraction by the atriticial :wabarche of the Guldbramistalen.

A vast mass ot prolen, betus, teeth and glaciers, of the most varied and contristed forms, seem to hem in the linumblal ford. Sonne of these momatans rise jerpraticulaty from the lach of the sei, up to the region of perpenal snow. Weknow ol few other seones that will compate with this fontastie horizon, which seens sleteh taken wt Ni, tiond, at the hend of the gitf, and from the station of Vellungencest, will give sume Hen of the lyollhess of the sechery (see pr. Il).

Wis tuok boat won this spmemid gralf for Monde, an! arrivel at that town the same alternown. We fomal it to consist of one long, stayding strect, ext"uding along the mome of the tiond, fust as Kirkcalely dose atong a lay ot the Firth of Fiurth. Theme are, however, stereal hathome villas in the neighomehom, and the environs are with justice considered anmorg the most picturevque ant beantifnl in Norway. Fierest, makherg of this place, remanks that it commands a view of the snowy Alpes that line the whole of its soith sible, and ame the north-west bommary of the Dover tind. I do not pemember sueh a longextembed range of peaks and pinmades and shathered riblges, exeept. prohiths, in the Lottivens. And here one rank peeps out from behinh another, matil they are lust in tho distance, and as they mix with the white clonds, we timey them like hamering cities or castles in the ait. Among then Liomstals lwom appears conpienous.
The little trate which exists at Muhle is, as nsual, ehietly contined to lish. The stemmers cant here regnlarly evory week, in passing "p, and down the eoast, and wo were thas enabled to proced by sea, hence to Christhmsmel. The ishmh in this short pase.ge were renumbaho fin abomeling in Eider-thek, which is found all along this eorst. The hathits of this bird are simgular. The nest is made on tha ground, composed of marine plinits, and lined with down of expuisite tineness, which the femate phacks fiom hev own boty. Tho eges are usually fomr, of a pale olive-green. They allow theri nests to be robbed of the egrgs and flown three tiuses; after that, if further molented, the lirds desert the phace. . So avinciont ol progeny is this duck, that, when plundered of her own, she will sometimes stenl the eggs amel young of others. When the female has stripper herself of all her down, the make comes in aid-his is white. In the Storthing of 1847, a law was passed foe the protection of game, wild-fuwl, &c., mul sinee then the islands along the eonst fretuented by these ducks have liecome a valuable juroperty. Each nest, during the breedins, produces abont half a prond of down, but which, when picked and clamed, is roduced to a puater. So tirm and elastic is this beatiful down, that the same quantity which can he conpressed between the two hants will serve to stufl a quilt or coverlet, and, whilst its weight is scaredy prepeptible, it has more wanth than the finest blanket.

A short journoy, unluekily accompanied iny a goorl deal of min, took us to Chrintiansumd, a town built upun three islands, and which forms ahmost a circle: rouml its heautiful land-beked harbom: In wintering from the sea mut a vestige of a lonse was to lee seen until the narow bissago between the inlanls was turned, when the town, nomewhat irregularly dispmed, "ןens at onee as if by magio.
The three islants are maned Kirkeland, Nurdland, and Inland, and so inegnlat is the gromal upen them, that searecly any two homses stand exatetly on the simulevel. They are all of wood, ant, an ustal, covered with red vohre. The popalation is about 4,000. The trade of the town is tiat rising in importance. It consists chielly of stoek-tish expurted to sjain and Italy. It is curious that Norway is a protestant country, yet, what would it do if it were no for the fist: , iecreed hy the Roman Catholic Church? It is to he deared that a genemal conversion to Protestantion, and to disregiad of tisla deet, would leave the whole lengily of the coast of Norway without husines..

A Frenel tomist declares, howevar, that the Andilusian sailors are as much attracted here by the blaek eyes and nent ligures of the Chisistiansumb whe as by the stock-tish. Considering the proverbial beaty of the swarthy maids of the long valley ot the Guablalquiver, it is hardly likely that the tast. aif its mariners should be more in firour of the paler lowers of the north. Onv artist hasied himself in olbtaning likenosses, but we regret that, what betwen th: trieks eommon to that: apparatus, or tur some other eanse, the purtraits we hatve to present at pare i6, of two girls of Chissiansund, are not nuly not thatteriugs, but by no means do them justiee. Their heulderssem-ists of a batek or violet coloured cap. covered by a red thawl or lierchict. M. Thom, the photographer, got into his enstomary ditheulties here. Ater hawing lamded with his apmatatus, we explowed the dillement sterets, and insended the lills of the town, and atter a long and Weary har's perambulation, we tomm one that iomimated town an! port. The situation was, indeed, excellent, ame all that was wanting was a house adapted for our purposes. This was not sheh an ensy matter to find, for the population hat gone in a mass to welcome thoir monarel, and all the doors were closed. At length we tomul a fisherman's hat with the door open. Penetrating inte the interior, we fotind the wile in bed with a nowly-bon inlint. The ammahle simplicity and infinite conlidence of the muth minife. 'd itselt, however, on this as in other instances, by the most kindly reception. Whilst M. Jhem was making his artuggenents, we amused tho lady of the house with an nccount of the enthusiasm with which the young monareh hati been received. This so excited her. Norwegian blood, that she determinel upon getting $u$ and going to see the scene herself, leaving ins misten of the house. I, on my part, took a stroll in the neighbourhood. M. Thom, in the meantime, drew the curtains of the now vacint leed, aud elosing the shinters got up an efficient dark chaniber. Just at that moment, as misfortune would have it, the husband came back, and seeing everything thus dark and closed up, he legan to conceive the most dreadful apprehensions regarding his wife, who he had not left well, and who he now fancied must be dead. Hasteuing with tremulous steps to the door, he was met by a blast of collodion that at once convineed him that his worst fears were but too true. Stepping forward, however; he found hinself in presence only ot the photographer, who not a little emburmsserl by his presence, and but slightly eonversant with the language of the country, exhausted himself in etliorts to make the real condition of thinge moderstond. This was not :n easy matter, for without any intention on the purts of any one of the actors in this little quid pro quo, the position of all hiud become as equivocal as in the most ingenions drama of the Scribe sehod. At length, having boinel the elamorons fisherman and agitated artist, aml helped to explein away matters, and being luckily not in a country where we should have been marched off by a gendarme and chargel with felony for halt as much, the honest Norse tisherman recovered himself, his wife returned, sat for her portrait and that of her child, and wo parted such excellent friends that the harly sailor insisted upon presenting the artist with a box of matches, so that he might not be caught in the clark another time!

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

The city of Christiansumi presented a banquet to the king which wats held at the honse of one of the municijials, who did thi greatest honom to the lody. It is a perfect mistake to imugine that the great men of the city of London monopolise all the good things of the wirld to themselves, or, at all ivents, the results $p^{\prime \prime}$ pularly supponed to acerue from indulgence in the same. Never, heforr or since, have we seen a person ot' suel dimensions. Chest, shonders, and abdomen were rollal into one common ball; but, as is often to be ohserved in persons similarly circmustaced, his fine anm intelligent liead ros" ahwe his body, as a thing set apart from it - like the well-known mandarin toys. There are up, this, as mon many wother mattors, extrente of oppinion entertainud which want cormeting. Obesity may be both hereditary and constitutional, as is well-known in some of our uoble families. In neither coses may it atlect the intelligence of the individual. Again, sbesity may be the result of gormandising, and the result may he-a pis. But then, again, obesity, cominy in the train of a hill!ey encrons, and intollectuad turn of mind, may arise also from the combination of the very happiest yualities, tempered off by participation in the amenities of social life. When wir se obsuity in such a person, we feel inelined to say that what he las taken has dome him gool, which cannot always be satid of the envious and ascetic tribes, who mity yot, in their time have partaken of the good things of the world quite as much as the fat man. Pablie opinion, which is almost unerringly in the right, does justice in these matters. Our great national huril has, in that instance, eorroborated the opinion of the public. It is not beconse a man is fat that he must necessarily be a pig. It is not neeessanily becouse ulnan is thin that he must he a wise-aere. But if a thin man eats amd clrinks like a fit man. we should, with Shakspere, say to the latter that he is too thin for us.

The avenue of the spot where the banguet was givell was adomed with thags, gidlands, and pretty women, and we read the following device of the gooil citizins of Christiansumd : "Fidelity, strong as the rock upu which we build our houses."

Royal movements are proverbially rapid. It seems as if they feared that the brilliancy of the thing would be dimmed by being prolonged. Peophe might even weary of fireworks that were earried on liom night to morring. Then, again, royulty may have a feeling that a prolonged stay may only entail inerensed expense. When will royalty find itself at home with the peopld? Wo have linil, in our own tines, the example of a citizen king on the other side of the Channel, hut the results were eortainly not encouraging for other priner to follow the example.

XV.

Timondisem on Drontmfin-Nidaros of the Vikisg.Aspect of the City-The Sea ling Saist Ciaf-The C'atheirat-Our Laif's Cifarel-Silmine of saini Ch.al
 Dungron or Meskholy-Leen Foseen on Fati:-Pasai. l.el Roads.

Huaried off the very same night, as humbie individuals in the train of royalty, from Christiansume, w. may be excused these involuntary reflections. W: could have slept very eomfortably at the stock tiol town, and enjoyed the cilerveseent hopitality of it: good jeople, withont the hope of putting them to numb expense, and eartainly with great comfort tw our persuns. albeit not given to ohesity: Fate, howevr, milerad it otherwise, and by daybeak we found ourwelves in the Thromilhjem tord, whieh, ats we first pereived in, seemed to be combayed in a beantifil framework of vinu.t. colomed mountains, all the more distiactly reverded. from the pertect dearness of the atmombera. It was there that lay the actual eity of Thromblifem. the Nideros of the vikings of ohl, inel it is in its cathedtal that their sucessors must still he clowned. We ruget the perversitias of modern momendature in this irestance as in many others. The city in quostion las party has it Throulligati, the Ilanellow ha it Tiondhjem. We have followed, in this instance. tha party of the learned fhilolorists; but, as a rube, whet a certain version of a name has beem long acerpterl and almitted, we also mlopt it. It is whly wherea less known name has tu be leatt with, that we viguromsty alopt a cormet orthography as tare as it is possihhe.

The asprect of the city, as tirst comtemplited in the early moming, was deciledly imposing. linilt in an amphitheatre, on the bordar of the sem, and at the mouth of the Nid; it detaches itself from its matural timmework to spread over bonutiful green hills, whilst a chain of mountains gave to it a splemblid hack-grombel.

Thurondlijen was founded a.m. 997 , hy king olat' 'I'rygvason. The alventures of this king arr amons the most romantic of all the sovereigns of Norwny. Born n prinee, his mother only savel his life from the usurper of his rights liy guitting the comntry ; they wore taken by piates, separated and sold as slaves. At an early "go, Olaf' was discovered and redeenerl not necessarily le it wise-acre. te a fint man. we atter that he is nquet was given pretty women, he good citizens sthe rock upu

ipid. It seems as thing would be night even weary a night to morna feeling that a creased exprense. with the people? he example ot a Chamel, lout the ; for other prinewof que Vikise- SANT (IAF-JE, mine of shate "Lin je of tile City Non Fati=-Palat

, as humbie intiChrist imsumbl, wo rethectins: Wi, at the stoek ti-h loopitality ot its ing them t" mueh fint twour persums, owerer, milered it al enrelves in the erceived it. seelued nework of vioh. listinctly revailed. rensilure. It was Throbllhiem. tho is in its eatheminal whed. Wrrwert lature in this is. y in 'fucotion las Ilamillmeh has it this instance: the at, as a plule, whou long acepterl :and ohly where: a loss hat we riguroms! : it is pussible: ateluphated in tha Fing. Whilt in :in os sa, and at the If from its natuml qeen hills, whilst it Futid hack-gremul. 97, ly King Olat * king mw umons reigns of Norway. d his life from the the country; they and sold us shaves. red and redeemel by a relative, hreame a distingnished vea-king, or leader of piratical experlitions, married an Irish prineess, cmbutaced ('iristianity, and ultimately fought his way to the thrue of Norway in 901. Ho then becane a most zalons and unompromising missionary in proprgating the firith, is Muhammite did Islamism, with the sword; Weath or Clnistianity was tho only altermative he allowed his abjects. In 998 he destroyed the celcbrated Nillares, tomple of Thor and Olin, with the ildols of theme ginls which existed there, hut were held in the highest veneration. This temple was a short distance trom the present city, and upon its site the chureh of Flates was hailt.
Thromilhjout wis the royal residence and seat of wherment, and remainel the eapital of Norway hown to the time of its mion with Deamark, when Cluristimiat was made the apital. Its propulation, be the ponmel it lisy, on the -mith sithe of the tiond. It hass rejuatedly sutfered trom tire most no the hotrace dailus fingmety ot wher." The last wan in olpil, 1s.t. when int lwetlings that atl thit homser reimith :no meonding to law, ui lutizk or thate. Thu strents alle begubir will paciont-with lit1"g.
 - their introsertions. The arehitere ume ot the hornomiv it the platuent deriptions, and hemee, atemengh batomberlly. amity . 1 me eombint have lamalattainctlotill givalem to the purniat the -ane chatacer ut - mininaliy that is powametal leg linverot ;all that retuain of the pisturesplue, vat some of the public buiblines, are the magazine- built on piles on the borders of the limel. ant which, foming together, form so mayy op'll sallerien to tha serin.
The eatheinal is the great oliject of attraction. What remaion of it remimels one, by its chamming Wetails, of that of lionem, which is agiug a goom demb fir it. The choir is esperially elegant, both in its ponnocions and the beanty of its details; surrommed by gallorius and volumms of mishle, it is separated from the nave leg a portico ot three agives ot ahbirable lightinens. Firguson. in his Illestruted IIunelbook of Achifatere, relates of this builing that Nt. Olat Imilt a church om the siot letween the yars 1016 and 1030 . IEe was buried a little th the sontlo of his own chureh, where the high altar of the eatherlat of St. Clomont's bow is. Brtween the yones lubis and 10.17 , Magmes the Good raised an shatl worden chapel owe St. Olat"s grave; and suon atter Harahd Hatardrate boilt a stene charels, dediented to Uur Larly, to the westward.

This groun ot three churehes stood in this state in tho tronbled perion that ensted. [11 1160, Arehbishop Eystern commenced the great transept west of "Our Laly's" chapwi. During the next sixty or seventy years the whilh of the eastern part of the enthertral was rebuilt, the tomb-honse or shrine being joined on to the apse of the Lady chureh. In 1245 AreliBishop Sigurd commened the nave; it is not certain whether it was wer completed. In 132 s , the churel was danaged by tire: it must have been atter this accident that the internal range of colunn- in the Elwards.

A courding to Mr. Laing, the west end, now in ruins, century the whole structure must have stom in all its splenions: The extreme length has bevo :3 f: feet ; its brealth, st; but the west eme, which comaimed the grand entatace, hat a chapel at each conner, making the limenth of that front $1+10$ teot. The whole of this went enil was highly lecorated, particnimly the entranee, which hand three doors over whiel wore twenty delieately cut niche in which stathes were flaced, and juthing ly the mutilated remains, they were of ronsiderable merit.

The shrine of saint Olat wiss hecoritel with the greatest misniticenco, and lomg is finumite phee of pilgrimaze, hot wily for the Scaminavianc, lut for pilgrim from all parts of Enrope, turd in such vinerat mon was he helal, thaterves at Constimtinople a church was erected to his memury.

The body of thesaint was tombl incorrupt in 1098, and also in 15H1, when the Latherins phambered the slivine of its gold and jewels to an immenso amount. 'The whip which earried the greater part-of this, plander away fimmburd at vea on its way to Denmark, and the rest, it is averred, as in many other cases of the spebliation ot veligines places, was seizel her robbers on lamb. Notwithtamling these monkish jegend-, it is certain that the Lathermas treated the bode of the salut with resuet. In lots it was remoned trom the shrine and buridel in the eathedral.

King Olat; sint as ho was, was mot, as we have Pretore seen, without the frailties of mortals. Atter being raised to the throne upon tho exprese pledede that he would not disturb tho poople in their civil rights, or intertere with their religion, he subse fuently fored Christianity upon them by the swom. His tymuny and atrovions eondlet at length drove his suljects into veledlion, and he was compelled to quit the conntry upon its invasion lis Counte tho Great, who was therempen proclaimed king, A.D. 102S. Aided by forces raised in Swerlen, Olaf subsequently attempted to recover the throne of Norway, lint was met at a place called Stiklestad by the army of Cannte, and atter fighting with great bravery, was shain, with most of his kinsmon and followers. Such was the conduct and fate of the man whose remains, when canonised, are stated to have performed all sorts of miracles, and to whose shriue at Throndlyem pilgrims Hocked for centuries from all parts of Eurojel A cross marks the place where Olaf' fell, mul the Antiquarian Society laive aks, erected a pillar there.

Tradition and history alike recount low often the enthedral at 'Throndlyjem has sutliered from tiro ; and in varions pate of the editice tincly anved stomes have bern limitt into massivo walls, inetokening bat little regard to architectmal beaty ur unithomity in repaiting the ravages of the divouring element. The transept and east end are the only parts now roofed in and hasd tor divine wervere.

Even the "pres parts of these have probably bem rebuilt at varions and comparatively recent priorls, at leant all alowe the first arches, or those springing from the gromad. Mr. Laing conceives that all this higher patit has origimally luen only of wood, and that where the wordwork has- been consumed by fire at different perionls, the stones of the trisles and arehes within the Joll now remaining of the west end, have been imphyed to biill up, the present walls of the transept and inther pats which were orisinally of wood. Thus, ho milk we may account for the paltry taste athl excentinn of all the "phir part of the structure, that for the inmertion of cut stame monldings of arches where an ateln cond never have heen intended; but the stones thas luilt in haw evidently been brought trom wther plates, while all that is leelow, and conld pusibly hase hern injured by any conflagration, is origimal, anl from its antiguity, stile, and execution, very interesting. Thw rommel areh with the zigzag thamonts, which we call saxon, is employed in all this shld part, amd also in St. Whent's chapel.

The prosent "ntmance in the north trinsept is a fine specimen of botl, but this simple massive strle is mised with light pointed arches, and adhoned with eroterdue heals, Howem, and all the variaty of ornaments whinla we unully emsidered perediar to a much later $]$ "rinel of tothie architecture, han hime the two stykes are evidently coeval. It thatie the theory of the Saxon and Nomma, the romblan pantel inch having been nsal exdusively in pardeular and diblerent centuries, and ablording gromal to detemmine the comparatise sutipuity of fothie editions. The Nomman mreh, in its must florind style, is ennmected with the Saron, in its mont simple ant hato-ive farm, in at balding where the known hate of the 1 ention contanimg this adnisture is more ancient what the nseertained date of thase Eumble wliders firm waich the theny is terived.

Ujom the left, om entering at the moth ioner, a laren and heamitul romul areh, highly heomated with ther
 arefully latidnen, 'The general efinet ot the interios of the catherdral is mined liy the high [uwn Ju-fow, as wed as those inctosed in the gatleries an Promeln tomint oh. serves upun thes, that ther have fimbished the walls of the tempho with a multituln of ! the boxes in worsh, with varionly moloural silk curtahis, wash make the phee look like a theatre). The elooir is octagomal, strmomed by a dome of motern constrnction. The high altat is strrounded by light pillass and onets arches extending to the roof The whole of the ching is most dalomately and beantifilly decomited; wer the altar is placed a fine cast of 'Thorwallsen's noble stathe of tho Suviour. On either side of it ary canten of statues of the twelve apostles, whieh atr, however. very inferior as works of art.

The mixture of round and pointed arches which wo have before remarked mon, Mr, Laing observes, is viry remarkible. 'The uper row of trebes are itl roniml; hat in the lower rows only the outer ones, while the inner ones on ench side next the chois ary fine fall-pointed arches. The satue poenlinerity, lie adds, may to seen in Christehtureh eathedral, in Dublin.
Considemble suns have been axpenten within these few years in repriting this fine eathedral. The Nor. worgians take much pride and interest in it preservation; but it is evident that none of the anthoritif: possess either will or taste fir (wothice welituecturo, fors it has been fearfilly "churehwardened! :" the rivicet and most elahorate tracery bebir: carcully dhoked n! with coats of a lead-eoloned wash. Srenmelinge to Protessor . lames Forbes, the cathambal is buite of hhins-grey ehlorito sehist, hasing somur resemblatee of pot stone, which appears to he nasily fastioned mal to havden on exposmre. The same competrat thavelles remarks, that the tracery of the octaginal stone sceren survonding the attar has a jeroliar ant ploasing il pearamee. But sush is tho rflect of di-molition and rough rasting withont, and of whitewash and hourding within, that it is only piecempal, as it were, that wh can see the one imprasing ethect which it matiot hat had. The archifecture, ther petessur alse ohsinvest has a general resmblance to st. Magans: enthental an Kirkwall, The hatter is inemparahly hatterpueserved but has a more severe and shomy vhitarter.

Some ramains of the royal pidace of ohl still axis sonth of the oatherbial, and on the laft hank eif tire River Nid, and which are buw oceupiod :ns a militat! and naval arsenal. The throne of tha Norvk kius also preserved here. Thare is a musenth with at eapita! collection of birds of the country, ans also at theatre: : 12 , to mention that, near the Unstom-hense, is accorlime to the opiniom of antipumies, the whot where the amerenf wrothing on asemblage of the peophe for thas putt of Nubway wan lield.
 towns of Norway, contined tos its eppurts of dried :nd mines of honats: : and to itaporting wines, grocerse :and other artieles of lorech problaces for suphlyt. it: own :1s well as the wants of the ucighburing dis triet- Oi late years, Throudhigem has taken a wres hat in hip Thililins atml has Wecome celelmated fors turning ont vary fast sating vessels; lout they are sotil to be exeedingly wet. 'l'he streets are widn', rogul: :and woll kept (though the pewement is romah), and the houses are sulstantinh, rbeerdil, with mumerons wib dows, and sermplonsly eleath. The rewtis are ver sembially of at wed colur. The shops are like other homses, but with a mame alove the dows, and in wery at Chastiania, all persons wot only take ofl the hat, but, moman meovered whilst dealing in a shop. There is a great air of confort and well-lwitg anonget the ir is octicounal struction．The dlass and onen ole of the chrin mitel；wer the nis noble statur it ：n en ensts of am，however， welues which wo ing whserves，is wreses are all the onter ones， xt the choir are fcealiarity，he eathedral，in lat within these 1r：3．＇Thre Nor＇ ？ 11 it preserve the ：mbliorities arditectures．fir d ：＂the richeot finlly choked up Areording of latl is luilt an （－resedmblane to tashione⿻日土 and to Indent thatweller nat atone siment ：m4 phoing a A Remostition ：mis shomd Imardin！ it ware，that wo h it mant hinw alsi，whenvers，has－ cis－caltherlat at 10．＋tw preserved atacter of ohd still＂xins eft latuls of the ind ：1s a milital！ 14．Norsk kimes rum whth at eapit：？ SO a thatatre： 11 It 4put where the re prople for this like other enas： ortu of drixd and ROp电 tront the wines，grocerie fir－uplyit－ novghoming dis． as taken a sume －endumateil for lont they are soit re wide．regular． （ rowsh），and the numerons win． romets are ros s：we like wthe door，mal at vers nlows．Ilere，： lake ofl the hat， 11 a Nhop．Thare ing monget the people generally，and all classes are celebrated for theid grodl looks．
Opposite tho eity；in the centro of the fiord，stands tho small island－rock of Mrihhshm，wher＂Cmote the Great fommed a monastery of Benedictines，in A．D． 1028 ， the tirst of that order established in Norwiy．A low round tower is nll that remains of it，and that is within the walls of the fortress．It was in a smoti，glosony chamber in this tower that the minister of Christian $V^{\circ}$ of Demmark，Graf von Greitlenfeh，was immured from 1680 to 1698 ．It is said the he hate worn is deep chandel in the pavement loy walking＂p and down， nud indented the stone table where he hail rested his hant in passing it．Great expense has been inentred by the government in strongthening the defences of this fortress，but the phaee is still the dark，solitary rock which Vietor Hugo has deseribed in his Hens of Iceland，looking more like a prison－house than at liortress．

The eliet oljucet of interest in the environs，alter the Mumkholm，is the Leer foss，a fino waterfall on the River Nid，and whiclt，in reality，consists of two，the upter one being ninety nine binglish feet light hy fom hundred and thirteen feet wide，according to br． Clarke；and the lower tall，which is a thonsand gards distant，being righty－two fert high and one humbed and twenty two feet in breath．＇Ther ulper fitl is the most pieturesque，fat sithon fishing is best at the lower．

Prolissor dames Forbes says，that his attention was， for the dirst time in Norway，forcibly arrested by the remarkahle series of hatural levele or temaces which streted，at intervals，liow a great way up the course of the River Nid．Such termeres，he ahls，maty be traced at intervals along most of the wentern coast．They are concisely，but aceurately，heseribed by that admir－ able observer，Leopolid won buel，mat，in later yems particularly，have been examinet，and then again dis rolsed，by Mossis．Durocher and limatais，by Mr． Chambers，mul many other whitors．I otter here no opinion，the l＇rutesser continues，＂川nn the origin of the terraces of the＇Thronthjens tional in particular ；but they are among the hest detined I have over seen，and in our instance were nut manaturally mistaken by me for militury outworks，as a tielh，which inchules severab of them，pertectly griess－grown，is surmomited by a powiler magataine．

Though the vak has eeased to grow in the neigh－ bourhood of＇Thromdhjem，and few kinits of fruit eome to any degree of perfection，the a－pect of the enomiry is，in shmmer and tourist time，flite the reverse of bleak，but，on tho eontriay，eheerful，habitable，and flourishing．Very considerable firming establinh－ ments exist in the neighbomboorl，ant the love of Howers，so chanateristic ot Norway and its prople，is here in the highest perfection．Searerly a homeresions in＇Ihrondhiem which has not its windows literally filled with tlowering planto，temded by the owners； and so prevalent is this tante，that in all our jumenes in stemmbats，we were rarly without padkiges of thowers in pots，undergoing transpurt from one purt tor anther． The view wrot the dind is saried and pieturestue． The hills，though not densely woonled，are by no meins bare，and thongh，I believe，some distant hills were suow－covered when I suw them，yet，probally，no elevation of one thousand feet are visible firon the shore at Throndhjem．The character，once arain，re－ sembles that of our Scottish hightands，where the sea so frequently blows into the land between hills， forming inlets，whieh，in propertion to the size of the comatry，wre as long ami harow as the thonds of Nor－ way．That of＇Throndhajem extends thirty－five Einglish miles before it raches the wem to the westwarl，and it runs inlant to the noth－east at least as litu．

XVI．

Cimp at Stordhlen－Mocstaneer Theticz－Solders （asy
 Heao＇s＂llans of Icemanib＂－ine qeet．of salion Stueams．

Tine triops of Throndlijem were encamped in the vale of Stordal，also written Siurdal，the largest of the lateral valleys on the cast site of the Throndhem fiord．It runs about 60 English miles up the rountry， and its beantiful strean abounts in trout．There were about two thonsand men eneamped here，mono zealous than well dirilled，and the mountains that hemmed in the valley were particalarly well adapted for the tatetie of Nurwegitu tronps，of which a Freweh wurist re marked with some degree of mürete，that they exist nore fin the detence of the enontry than tor the in－ vasion of others．If there was any morality in princes ant people there could lee no want of invision，and it the wruggtulaess of invasion wits inlaitted，ube could bo no neeessity tin armies of defence：

The gouthfil monath，whe hat put on his uniform， gave his soldiers the example of privations endured with gaiety，mad although he kept thent at work almont
 by all，excepotius a few septhaschary tieh ulievors，who were upset by hion activity and emdurater．I petty warfare in the momutains gave us a partuento ophor－ tunity of witnessing the＂streme arility of these mome taineer rifle－men，who semed then tu le，in their true element；＇fuick and indefistiguht，they climb the steepest mines with the ativity of wihl e：th．

The amusements indulged in ly the mbibery bure a stamp of originality evon more ank a than their monntainerer tatetics in watr．Thain dan cos were esper chally ention－The su－callod hallinsalan can only be exwented by eonsmmmate antists：it consists of a while sories of fiats of arility，whish draanh as much strength as atetivity．Thy atre ：wempurded by a ablier，whe plays ipun a violin with dight strings； while another hulds $u_{1}^{\prime}$ a forming eap at tho estremity of his sword in the air：the dimers inpuad with the mont burlestue attitulas，turn momit orveral times slowly，amb then suldenly bomal up into the are，like some wild beant of the forent amd try to knoek the cap ofl with their feet．Nust of the ir amisemente pintak of the sathe chatacter：mone or less bullesque，and yet athhetic atte，mpts to initate the aetivity of wild amimal． soldiers on interlaco！as to resemble a timtatic phan－ ruper，which changed its less every time it tumbled oser．Thear gatmes of the Norwegian ableliery the reprernted at page 4 ．
＇The Stendals els is crossed by a terry at Melta，and we procected thenee by Randfarhas，where Colunel Nonnichoten lambed with his Seoteh and butch ansi－ lianies in l6］：．at the same eporh that the less tortu－ nate Nimclan lambed with his regiment in the liomsdal． Henee wo proceded to levanger，bitit at the very extronity of the Thrombligem fiverd，or thther mon ot．
of its extreme prolongations lesignated as the Vordals fiord. The harbour of Levanger is the most sheltered of all the inlets in the eastern const of the fiord, and is consequently a great place of resort for fishing vessels, num it constitutes a surt of commercial outpurt for the trade of Throndhjem. The Swedes, too, come across the "tield" in great numlers, when the snow has set in and made the transport of heary gools practicable in sledges. This tionti aftionts, in reality, hy far the realiest communication with the sea for aill the northern parts of Sweden as well an Norway. In ad lition to being cuite as near as the (inlf of Dothmia, the fiord is nurer impeded by ice, aud is consergucenty mavigable at all seations.

Two large fairs are held yearly at Ievanger, we in December, the wther in Mareh; ;iml so filly aware are the Norsemen of the great impurtance of this situation for conmercial purnowes, that several of the mereantile companies at Thromulhjem have establinliments here. Nuthing, says Lains, could le more interesting than to witness me of there faires. hell on the very extreme fronticr of the civilised world-to see the Liplanders and the natives of Fimmark, fiom their unfrequented monntain homes, come hither t" exchange the produce of tho chase for the fow luxaries of civilimed life, of which they know the nee or value. There is a high way from Levanger to Ostersumb on Lake Stovsion in Sweden, ami others thence to Hernusimel an! Storkholm.
The homes are remarkablygonl and clem: the little parlonis, 1her kitchens and poutries, are like those of an Englinh maritime town, but the streets are unpaveti, and frightfully dirty; horses and calmiolets are su gemeral momis the country peiple, that the comfint of the perlestrian is little attended to. We were entrirtained here at the house of a local magistrate, who hat only recesved his appointment two sems hefire. His wifecomplained bitterly of her exile, as she termed it, ind she was backed in her complaints by her father, who, whin bu deliared that it was always cold in Levanger, joinel in, "Yes, ses, my poor child must return to the' sonth, that in to say, to Christiania."
The south, wo thought, is like wher thims, a relative idea, nnd seeing that the lu-haud was hurt, mud was trying to change the conversation, wre came to his nid and expatiated upon the protty houst, nice garden, nud magnificent hadseupe heyoul.
:That garden, exclained the dissatisfied dimur, protheres no fruit bat whito clarriex, mud my thowere are front-hitten in August !
Yet is Levanger an truly luautiful site. It reminds ono in sumaner, by its verdure, its woodd hills mal general outline, of tho Swiss Chaton of Friburg. And th the north is a vast samly phain where 30,000 meu might manenvro at their ease. Not far oft, om the rither mide of the Vorra Elv, is the village of Stiklestand, where Saint Ohf fell fighting Cunuto. The ehureh at Stiklestad is of stone, und very moient. The entronee fite is a round saxm arch with peculiar fillet ormaments similiar to those in the transept of the cathedral at Thronlhjem. The late King Beruadote visitel this place in 1835. What must have been the feelings, of this momareh, as he stool on the very spot on which, at the same hour of the day of the month ( 3, p.in., 31st August), eight humlred and tive years beiore King Olat' was slain by his subjects.

Our must northerly point was the Namsen; we could net turn our bueks upon the comery, although getting willer and wilder at every step, without a peep at tho queen of salmon rivers, aul having teasted our eyes upone a real live Laplander with his reindeer. The Shatran-vand cheered us on our way. It is a most beantitul hake, situated in a hilly country, and embosomed in wast furests of splemilid pine trees. Few leetsons who havo rad Vietor Hugo's Hans of Icelend, would indeed be disposed to leave this lake uncisited. Not tar beyond we came t.1 Namos on the Samsen fiord, and into which the renowned Namsen cmptiex itselt, and enastiag stemmers touch occasimanly at this remote station.

girls of Christiansund.

NVIl.

Retern Sorth phom TifrondrsemChoss the borre liend dy its thgilest Pass-Tile Vaarstigh: and its Olacien MirkinosMantreance of Rimatis in Norisar -Pbasantiry of tie bovre Field
We left, on our way back from Throudhem, by the well-cultivated and undulating ligh-land of Oust, from the thps of which a scene of vust oxtent and great beanty presente itself; looking buck. In the foregromid are the remains of some ollo tortiticutions -beneath, the cily and its nample rondstend spread int liko a milp, and heyond was the immense extent if tho fioril, hounded by mominaina in tlue distance. Tiv the leitt, on the hamks of the fiurd, is neen a small hill, cillled swerrolerg, where the renowned sea-king Swero is said to have lived in the latere end of the twelfth century. Heyom! thix, the church of Mechums constitnted a very pieturesque ohjocet. It is heautifinlly placel on the erown of a suall hill, with the fir-clad monntains towering nlowo emeh other, broken gromen, highly eultivated, in front, and the valley windius away in the fire distance to the lett. Henee, the mail folliweml the plewant valley of the Oula. It is highly cultivated and hops are extensively grown, lat there are some had hills to puss. Behow Vollan the strame exprands into a shall lake. At Saknens is a station ting anglirs on the (inla or Gunl, which lure winds its rupiol comse through a dark ravine; tho momatains on tither side, and in the distmeo, clothed with pim: mat tir to their summits.

Leaving the valley of the Guln, the rond ran aneng high ground hy Hov, through rich pustures for some distanee, mul with numbres of small finms in all directions, mat the same mountain pastures and park-like secmery continued past Garlid, whero eapital carrions can be [urchased for egghteon tollars, to Dierkager, uliar fillet ornaof the cathedral madotte visited been the feelings y spot on which, month (3, p.in., ive years before e Namsen: we omery, allhough step, without a ars, anl having plander with his ins on our way. i a hilly country, lendid pine trees. Hugo's Mans oj to lenve this lake ti. Nimor on the enowned Namsen ouch oce:tsionally

II

on Tifronditsen ri: Firid af its -Tlie Vaarstige 1sh Mankinge Ridada in Nonway - the Dovie Field

Ir way back fron - the wellenlt ting ligh-land of tops of which a xtent and great itseli, looking remomul ne the olil tortificutions ity sum its ample I ont like a mill, the inmmase exril, homeded hy e distance. Ju e Danks of the small hill, called re the renowned is said to lave twelftlı century. is comstituted it autifilly placel te tir-clind moutbroken grommd, valley winding Hence, the wanl ala. It is highly grown, but there ollan the stream is is in station tin here winds its ; the momntains lothed with pine rond ran nlong astines for some umos in all diree es and park-like capital carrioles s, to Bierkager, where is much scrob, birch and fir. Next came a steep deseent to tho Orkla or Orkel Fly, with extensive and splendid views; the river was crossed, and then came a long ascent to Sundsteth, well-known shootingquarters, heantifully situated above a ravine of enormous depth, and at an elevation of 1,578 feet, with morntains pilcd above each other all round, coverd with a sen of dirk pino and fir.

Starting hesce ap through a thick pine forest, we reached a hilly upland, with much lirch and serul, and passing tho stations of Stren and Ovne, descended into the broad valley of the Vinstra Elv, amd reached thence Driostuen, a capital farm, with gool necommolation at the northern foot of the Dovre field. The latter part of the road in ascending to this print had been throngh a narrow and pieturespue rivine, and wo found ourselves, at the end of our joumey, at an elevation of 2,157 feat above the level of tho sea.

The roal hence to Kongsvold exhibited astriking piece of enginerring. It is carried all the way up the valley by the side of the Driva, being, in many plates, quaried out of the face of the rock. This was done to avoid the fearful hill of Vaarstige by whith the roul was finmerly earried,
A stererasent led us from this last station to the highest puint of the Dovre field roat, 4,100 feet above the sea. IIigh poles were fixal on cach sible of the roud to mark the way during snow, Mr. Laing patssed this way in Pobmay. Ifo says: $A$ smothering snow dritt came on, and it was scaredy possible to see tron pule to poln. I asked the hoy who drove the baggace sledige it he was sure we werr mon the road, He said they always. lett that to the homes, on this stage, when the path could not be discemend; that they would not go wrong it not put out of their pace, bnit lutt to take carn of themselves. The jomrutying on this elevated plain, envelopeal in a cloud of snow, as lense aloost as that in which you are driving, makes a sublinue inuression on the mind. Vou seem travelling in the sky. What you vee and tonch of the earth is searecly funbe substantial than the show that is whirling roumd and above you, It scems all one clement, and you thene in the midst of it. And sucle is, no donbt, the: ase. In such is paralled, at such an chivation, and in such a climate, the elouils of hearen and the monmain mplatis meet, aud yon are travelling on show, in a show-filled sky.

The lint station on this route, on the north side of Donte lithl, was Kongsvold; the last station on the south side was Jerkind, and here we joined our ohd route where we hat left it to proceed to Romasial and Molle on one mbance. If we had rason to be pleased with the kiminess and hospitality of the goorl proplont this wall-knwon shouting station on our tirst arrival thre, this pleasire was deabled when we rethrued for a socond times, and with all the feelings monn suel a trying junnes, of being oll friems.

AVIIT.

Ofele the soone lieid and the Sonne Fhemd - Excello Filde filid, irs Hets and cosicues-Piss of find. nelles - biciciaiks op tins Juaredil-Abistonellacy of Meauty and hescemt amono the peabants of noomeUlinaes Chubct - Norroens or ficbuanden FiombBakige Cutuch-ition Hiuhest Fall in Eugorf.
We desemded from the Dove tioh to Largand, previously described, whence we took the lanali-kond by the Vaage vand or lake, from whence horse-traeks lead across the nowntains of the Sogne field. Passing Blaker, the path lay down the valley of the Baver elv; hy Kvandesvold and Soeteren Boovelthenn to Optun, where we once nore arrived at our old yitarters. The places mentioned are mero soters or mountain clairies, where it is esscutial to halt for the refreshment of the ponies and guides, and the journey was aliko long and fatiguing enough, The chiet relief afforded was a beautitul waterfall in tho course of the Baver elv. It was not till we reached Fortun that the road became tolerably good, and we were enabled to get on at a better puce to Skiolden, at the head of the Lysterfiord, which is the extreme north-east hanch of the Sogne fiord-the sceuery around being alike grand and sombre.

Here we wero enalled to take water, a great relicf at all times, to Lurvial of the map, and Luirdatsora ot tho Hendbook. 'The latter part of the journey had, however, to he gerformerl on homshack. Soon aftrw leaving Skiolden we suw the magnitient Feigum foss, a fine waturtall, saill to be two handred feet high, and the same stroum is said to make mother till of seven hundred feet higher up in the nountains. The scenery was. at every $\mathrm{l}^{\text {oinint, }}$ sn amme as to approach to the sublime. It inchurled the skiastolls Tind, which, secording to Forsell's may, is neven thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven feet above the sea, being one hundred and sixty-three fect higher than Sneelaettan, which was long supposerl to be the highest.

Lormal is a small town, whero boats, carrioles, and all kinds of provisions ean the obtained, especially for mountain ascents and shonting on tishing exeursions, and hence it is much frequentenh. We, on mur sido, after duly riffeshing the imner man, made this n ${ }^{\text {ninint }}$ from whence to deviate to the southwand to lhigumi, on the highway to Clristiamia, tor see its churdh, which is one of the oldest huidings in Norway. 'I'be peasants' cottiges, on this littleexeusion, struck us as purtioularly picturespue. They are hinilt of solid trees, on fommhtinns of ruek, gen mally one story high; when more than that, a gallery is made outside. The roofs are constructed with planks, overlaid with hiroh lark, and then covered all over with turf. The vegetation upon these roofs is very luxuriant, bied and alder are commouly seen growing "!nu thent; atul they are tavourit. browsing spots for the goats.

The valley descending fiom the Fillo tield presents a most remarkable specinen of Norworinn engineering skill. It is carmed by excellent stane masumy, smppurtend by iron fistonings, uhong the loft side of a leep picturespue ghon, down whieh the lamidals elv tommits alons. Whele upersary: ntome hriages mul viadnets lawe sipmeseled the dingerous wonlen bridges of ohden time. In whan pliners tho roml is a grayt distane "hown tho lewd of the torrent below, and it is semerly prsilhe to say too much of the graminur of the seenery, From Inaisthen, where the skulls ot lnems, miled "p, wer the door, give evilence of the akill of the Norsk sportsmen, the rond leceps along the hanks of the Ther Lareving, throunh a most manitiont pass; enotmour masses of rock, in many pheres tillen from the mountains above, mill to the territise grmale of sechery, int presents one of tho wililest sights in Nomby. There is niso a time waterliall at tho ntation ot Heng.

The tinther we desecnel, the mowe mow the valley begomes, till arminge at the bottom ol's kind of funcel, horse-tracks field. Passing $f$ the Baver elv thun to Optun, quarters. Tho omintain dairies, refreshment of ney was alike relief atforded a of the Baver in that the road nbled to get on d of the Lester ; brameh of the alike grand and or, a great relicf I Leirelalsora of he journey had, ck. Suon aftur It Feigum fiss, 1 feet high, and er fill of seven The scenery approach to the: inti, which, tuthousand eight o the sea, being her than Snet the highest. sarrioles, and al , especially for ing excursions, $V \mathrm{Ve}$, on our sith. ule this i ן uint $^{\text {unt }}$ and to lingrumel, s ehurelt, whieh 'Tleo preasints' sas purticularly ces, on foumdiwhem more than roofs nte confireh lark, and regetation II Mon ahler atre comwy are tavourila

1) tied prownents int engheering masemry, silpvile of a deep lals elv houmds * mul viadnets ritiges of ohlen yrinit distanse 14. it is searvely - of the recenery. nem, miled ip If of the Simplis hanks of the milicent ${ }^{\text {mass }}$; es tillen from fis: grambeur of hlest sights in at lhe station row the vally kiad of funaci,
a little expanse covered with green sward and dotted with flowers presents itsclf, and in this cheerful mountain recess stands the dark ontline of the chureh, We were about to say, the pargora of Borgund. We are not iware if Mr. Holmbic, who has published it very learued work upou the traces of Budlhism in Norway, has satisfactorily established any positive rehation between this vencmble edifice of worl and the temples of the further East. But certain it is, that the pointed roof, the senlptured water-sponts, and the grotespue omameats of the Borgund kirke, have a deciled Burmese or Chinese physingnomy. Smaller than the chureh of ILitterdal, this edilice appears also to be more ancient, and a covered gallery, with colamens hackened ly time, runs all aromel it. The porehes are covered with rule carvings of lions and dugs, buried in arabespues in relief. The chureh being little used has escaped the Vandalisms and restorations that have been phactised at Hitterdal, ant the frescoes, somewhat landel it is true, ean still be seen upon the walls with the eypher of the Virgin (S. M.) interhacel with real and lue armbesques. Great silver lamps, pussibly of Wuteh origin, are suspended from the roos, and every thing breathes that venerable perfume of times lang gone hy, amd of which the traces are every day disappearing more and more.

This most singular and interostinge culifice was huilt, aceordine to the alepts in such matters, in the cleventh or twelith eentury, which is rather a wiel rane ; for the ardes and the anse are semi-cirenlar, and it has all the chamenter's of the style of a small Gemman lomatuespoe chareh, so tar as it condil be imitated in woul, "hae have measures hut thirty-nine feet, the cirenda tose fiteen he fify-bom, "The beltry is of muth move reent date, amb stimes sme distame Mrurt.

We conld not help, on quittiny this eurinity of art, almost wishing that the sume firte was in stor for it that lefel its comoterpart near Loevelah, which was bonght by the King of l'russia and removel into Silesia, but what would this dank valley lon withent it! licturning by the almirnhly comstructed series of zugzits which hive superseled the whem rom, so often the scene of fightful necidents, to Musum, we kept nlugy the banks ut'a river through a lematiful pass, at times so marew that the roat had to lu blasfed sut of the perperulienlar roeks, to Miltlysue, witl: its :urle get picturesple silmom-traps, nod wheree we artived Wrary, lat mueh gratified, at our wil quartors at Lacrial. Wefore mriving at the vilhare of larrmal, $n$ torment from the soush fell into the river, which we soon afterwayds crosed for the list time, Jiny of the britges on this strem were very pintmespur imel habur, money, mud skil, is known to the Norwegians. Who aro jostly prowd of it, as the nevew or pass of Vindhellen.

Betine quitting the Fille theld, we may ahserve that the chameter amil eostare of the propho, on the side we aro now dexcrihing, are pecular, and totally dillerent from thiss on the enst side of the tichl. 'flite women have fair hair, oval fiters, mul rott inmy eyes; many of them me pretty. 'Their dress is a tight bendilice ot
 Neeves ; eloth petticoat, genemily dark green; buttons

white eap of very singular form. Those women who have had is child withont leing married wear a $e: 11$ peenliar to themselves, and are called half-wives. The madens wear their hair in a most bocoming manner: it is brailed with marrow bants of red worsted, aud wound round the herr-the Nerwegian snood.

Loerdal is the bost starting-point from whenco to visit some of the grandest Apine seenery in all NorWay. The way to the gheiers of the Justealal in by water to Solvom, in the Lyster fioml, and thence on to Rommed, where there is a good rmin to Dykenyr, where horses ame a guide can lorobtained, A very tolemble briderond leats up the walley, the track leeing along the bank on the Justedil river runbing through the untrow winding valley of same name. Asernding this fine pass for about a mile, the travoller amives at the finest of the glaciers, Nyguard. It is sem to the left ; aud near to the glaciers there is a farm. The Justedal river flows from the glaciors, bringing down with it vast quantities of detritus, which whitens the diom for abunt two ur three miles from the sput where it thows in. The ghecior of Sygathe with it comese of less than four miles, hiss a breaith of mo thousime to cleven humired yands. Bryoud this ghacier amd further wip the Justerial valley, there are other ghemers, and the
 with its wilh hreary seenery, is renched. The glacier ot' Lomelal is the largest in Norway, its atimated length being tive Finglish miles and a-half, ami its greatest breath abowe wight humbed yamb. To the artist this region of the Justedal attimels numerons suligets of the gramlest deseription of dipine schory, many of the peaks of the muntains being envered with perpetual show:

We started from Lomidil in the strmmer Frembuers, which is especially employed in tla tramit letwen Bergen and Loculal, alng the Nogne fiom, whre it pieks up the tomints who have eome tion 'hrintimia, Tosmely it presents dunble alvantages, for it dees mot make it Wiy almur the midelle of the fiom strumbte the ser, but it visits its alillerent islets, and evin -thes some hours in some of the more pietmespas. Wherever we stoppeithe pasants came un burib, and wometimes their cows and hores followed them. Their astonish. mont at the splombur of the fortwne was something guite illeseribable. Yet there peasments of the sogne tue very promi and reserval in their maners. "Sore than whe jeasme woman of the Suthe." say a Frenel tomint, "enmies hav heal ins high an the haughtiest promess on the other side of the Mande." Tluere is a rematable atlinity, alds the same anthority, in the lest linglish and Norman typers and these of Sogene. Dark hime eyo, Olympinn potils, ingosing height, belong to all thes. 'The pride of thes firmers mal tishermen mill rests yon the sigas or triulition of when times, they atill spank of the 'Smager liolf (linlon of Nomamby) they know that they are dosermdant of Hhe turestors of the eonguerom of the Chamand INamiof' Nopwny, aul of Englamb, anel it is the pride of thicomarionsieses that conatituted them the mast misto. enatie demweracy in the world, a hamed that emigrated tron scothad in the zistonth ene mer,

May of the panant fimilics in Nomay have thorir coats of

Passing up the Ly-ter ford and its brameh, the Aardals fiord, we were by noon of the next day at the foot of the gliciess of Justedal, and lying off the coquettish little chureh of Lyster. We were joined here he two students, whoh hal just effected the patasage of the Justedal from Lomb. This is a great feat anong the students of Christiania and Bergen, who make amual exemsions to this particular point. Eren the Swedish prinees deem it a point of etiguette assential to estatish their powers of endmaner, that they shall have erowsed the glaciers and peaks of Justedal.

Mr. Miltord describe in a fow words one of the many views to be obtained in this celebrated momatainpass. Never shall I forget, he says, the view which burst uron us: I can only compare it to some of the wildent I have seen of Laplamd or Siherin, hat it was still wihder and more desulate tham those. A precipitons wall, ir rather an abrupt mountain side, smek bencath me, and far below, in my right, was a wide sea-gren lake, borhed ly snowy ridges and peaks, which wermus to waters, amil a claster of small spocks in the dintance, which my goide toh me were a herd of reindere, atded interest to the seene. In from tone the Laklak-kaike, the lotiest mometain of thatbuge, to a height of may thousand fert, hetween which and the plain where I stood was a ravime filled be a huse flaceice and winy left was the waie of Justolal. 'The etream which rushow through it issues by a cataratt trom the lake, I belinse the Stug-so.

Laster in not the only churd at this point; close by is that of Uman, which a lemmed Gemma jublieation hav dermed worthy of buing comprarel with thome of IIterembl and of Bergund ; the thet is, that the interior of the ehnerch of Urases has heen rempected. and is replete with interest to the artist and the arelnowlogist alike, hut the exterior haw not hat for an twhitect a man of lowl. wrative and fintantie taste, as the the minnown who designel the senptures of linerul, mul pibel up the stephes of Hitterdal.
thin our return we tomehed whe more at Lowdal. ant fintting then carriolos on boarl for Bergen, we left the steamer to onve mine semture into the momation regions on an exemsion th the Voring foos, a cataract of wach eclehrity, that a visit to Norway would bo worse than incomphe withut having eontemplated and therebsidentitiol meself with its wonders. The tirst purt of our journey was, however, still by water, the stemmer taking us down the Aurlauls finso as fin as Uuld rhal, where we procured a hara with which to navigate the Noroons tiom, the wothewest prolongation of the Aurlands tiond tu Gulvangen. Tou much cannot be said in fras, of the scenery um this truly gram tiond-the whole jomracy presented a mosing pamorama of the finest inseripition. In many plares the dark monatains rise purpendicularly finn the water very fieturempe in form. Nomeros waterfills are this magnificent seenery incereased in grambern as we procended in the Nerrens fiond, and the water hegan to narrow.

The sontherast hatach of the Aurlands fiom, which leals to the valley of likam mul its watertall, is not less worthy of a visit than the Nieromens fiond or momthwest brunch which hade te tiudvimuen. The mancrous hauta-sthers to bo met with uffird evidnee of this having leen a chosen site for conets of justies, ore-things or mectings of the people, of sanguinary mombats or of seeret Pagan rites and saerificial ceremonis's, accorling as the tourist likes to place faith in one or more of the many controverted views of the significance of these stern and silent memoriais of the past. l'roceeding further up, the thaveller enters the wid mm pieturesque region of the Sverrestein, through which King Sverre, in the beriming of his reign, effeetel lis hazardous and bohd retreat towards Hailingdal and Valders.

The Noroens fiord is the narrowest of all the inlets of tho great Sogne fiord, and the granileur of the: semery will be best julged of from the representations given it page 40 , and at page 64, in one of which tho narrowest part of the fiord is seen, looking down whonso precipitons walls of granite, tho frail bark apmears to those alowe like a nantilus shell, and in the other the gates of tho Gudvangen itself, topped hy snow-elat momethins, with the picturesque little woolen elurch of lakke in the foregromed.
tiudvangen consists of alout a dozen honsts situated in a very dep and narow valley, elosed in by montains of immense height. Opprsite the station, and high up the face of the mountain, is the Keel fims, in fiill of 2,000 feet (a Freneh tourist says 1,000 metres'!), lut admittelly the loftiest in Europe. There is good salmon fishing in this river up the valley, and shootins in the momntains around; and this, superadded to the grandeur and varioty of the scenery, encmmerel the station with tourists, and it was as dillicult to nitain prartery as at the thot of Snowion in tho height of the statson.

XIN.

Pige op Stalurim shleven-The Voss District-Tows of Coise Vinoen-ime thatens Vand-helemd or the hlace Phoue-l'peer Hamasobi Fiobi-Villes op hebidid-line Warerphilg of Nobway-hienstic

 Buttisil Ardscis.
Ownce to the perionsiy noticel intlux of tourists at thanangen we wro introluced here to a new mond of pmishnent for the aulicity of $n$ venture into the Norwegian momenins. This was the stolekgorres, at light cart on two wheels without springs, and as it had to carry the laggage as weil na the prisim, sum the harrow eross-seat is cither a leather thang or a pine of wood atteshed tw it, the moount of torturo is searevly conceisahlo, exeepit to thosa who lave heen torn ulung over the steplles of Russia in a low cart, three fent long loy one in width, with the kuees bolting anainant the clin.

The sole indemmification was the magniticener of the semery. What will not individuals mulerge to tante of the plensure of something really mew mul exciting in nature? It is the gratiliation of one of the stromgest feelings implantel in the human beast. Ther river, or rather the torrent, of Narroelal is of a limpin! green colour, but it mad its fishing are barely five miles in extent. At or about that distane tho valley murrows, mul is shat up by a gignatie protrusion of roek, behind which the strem makes two tremendous fills. The roul itself, however, does not step, but ascends in a serpentine maner, mil that after so strange a hashim, that with one curve one lat, one fall in view, and with the other another; while behon is uinary eomceremonies, h in one or signific:mes pist. l'oohe wild intl ough which , effected his linglal anel lll the inlets leur of the resentations of which the down whuse k ajpears to de other the y suow-clarl oden chureh nses situnted in by momustation, aml Ked fows, a 100 netres !), There is groud and shooting added to the unbered the. lt to shtinin height of tha' CRTET-LOW: - Leamsi ow om-Vales Av-(imantue obino looss--TME FhiL-

of tomrists

 a new mank ur: into the hokghorre, : unl as it hatel ame the harwa piece ot ro is scarcely in tor'u alming three firet ting agginstmiticencer ot ; "milerg( to ly mew all! on of one ot man breast. oodal is of a f we baroly clistance the ie protiresiun two tremellyes not sty?, hant after so lah, onle fall ile below is the enormous bewl into which they pour their united waters, after deseending from the heights above.

At each turu the engineers who effected this wonderful triumph of skill havo also constructed benches of wool. They secm like the last relies of civilisation in the most will and appalling seene that it is $\rho^{\text {nossible }}$ to picture forth to ono's self. This vimuct is called the Stalheim Skleven, and it is the counterpart of the Vindhelten, only that, whilst perhaps less striking in point of boldness or conception, it is rendered more picturesque by the two falls, from which the eye cannot detach itself, and which at the conchusion of the ascent can be both embraced in the same perspective, with the valley stretching far away into the fiord heyoni.

Once emancipated from the great basin of the Sogne, unl not only tho aspect of country elunges, bui that of the people aiso. Leaving Stalleim, whero there is but poor aceommodation, but where, at a little distanee off the road, on tho north, there is another tine waterfall of a thousand feet-the Sevle foss-the road is emried over very high ground, inuch broken, and with n gool deal of woohl und ieather, ohl trees, and masses, of rock, nll highly pieturesfue; and with a lovely strean, near which the roal runs most of the way, is twiee crossed. The aprroach to Vinge, the next station, is preceled by mother waterfall of eonsiderable height on the right; the whter is geparated into two falls, and then split into a succession of smaller ones, forming one of the most picturewque objects of the kind that it is prossible to conceivo.

Beyond Vinge the same succescion of glorions views present themselves, but the mountains grimlually become less wild, and more like Westmoreland. Several small lakes are passed on the left, nut the road at length dessemals into the lowely valley of the Rindals Lils, near the head of the Vangestordat Vosse Vangen. Tho intervening district letwren Lakes Vinge and $V$ ingen is known as the voss, whene the nami of the town, Vosse Vangen. It is a gool pasturing country, and the fums (with their roofs protected liy growing shabs, wr rather green brunches sprung trom their own cross-beams, liavo vast runges of country for their lloeks. Verse Vimgen is a small town, quite new, ant, what is very rare, surrounding the chureh, instead of being, as is usially the case, one, two, or even three miles away from it. Situatonl on the bonders of a beautiful lake, like the small towns of the Swiss canton, and in the heart of the most echehated seenery, Vosse Viugen is a great resort for tourists, and we haver no longer a "gumed" attacled to a prist station, but an hotel-a real hotel. The tixhines and shooting are also very good, mul so many inpeetinents to conjoy either ure not put in the way of visitors an further north.

Our roml hence lay through a furest, in a southeanterly direetion, which quened upon a fertile valley, whrein was a lurge fium, several naw-mills, mul, we meed scarcely ald, jlenty of water-power. This guard was a perfeet village, but the valley in whieh it and its mills were embusumed was, by a contrast not uncommon in Norway, succeenled almost instantancously lig n wild und rugered country or pertieet chas of roeks, beyond which the rond nade in rupid descent down a kind of precipice, and was then curriet, by $n$ whoden bridge, across a torrent, directly below the great fall, known as the Haltiug firss, A visit to this point was, by itself worth the jouney.

Not far lecyond this most picturesque spot, the whito house of Vasenden or Orve Vasenden displayed itself on the shores of the Gravems vame, a small lake of only some two miles in width, embosomed among green hills. Here we obtained a boit-as usnal, a pleasant change from the jolting process termed carriole travellingwhich conveyed us to Guaven, a village with a church and goodly station-bouse, where we obtained suddlo ant baggage homes to convey us to Ulvig, on the uppermost in:let of the Mardanger fiod.

Travelling on horseback is as teclious an aftair in Norway as in some parts of the cast. The ponies are sinall and fat, and never trouble themselves to go out of a walking puce: all the more so, as the guides accompany them on foot, and lave no interest in rousing them from their placid progress. As to the Klovhest, or pony that curries the luggage, it has two frameworks of hark of hireh, suspended on either side, into which the smaller articles are put, counterpanes and eloaks being placed on the animal's back, between tho whole, and made tiast with hits of string or rope, and then the puny is allowed to have his own way to get over wooden bridges, eross torrents, or extricate himself from marshes, just as he can, and he does it with a slow step, but unerring certainty. It is quite a lesson of philosophy.

The transit from Gtaven to Ulvig took, unter such circumstances, " matter of four or five homs; vet we had only wne monntain range, or wather an extensive "field" or upland, to cross, and then we began to descend townds the Hardanger fiom, through a tulemhly fertile comntry, with luxuriant neadows, interspersed with groves of pine, ash, and oak. Wecieledly the elimate was improving.

So also on the shores of the tiond, fimus, surrommed by oreharls in full hearing, amb mealows in luxamiant green, gave manitest indications of a dittrent soil and temperature to what is met with on the Sogne fiord. The Mardanger fiord presents, indeed, is general, as well ats a local, ditlerence to its great butherly counterpart. Stretehnes its narrow indets tin into the mountains, still it is itsolt' less hemmed in hy precipiees, the hills upon its shores are less lotty, and it presents, at almost every turn, somo open pare which atiords whelter to whe or more hambets, and giver room fin cultivation, planting or pasturas : or, if very limited in space, nestles the rottares of hoathum or tishermen, a clase of persoms who derive their livelila al from the waters alone, mal fiom exchauging ite prodnets with more favoured loenlities.

But if the immaliate shores of the fiosed are less sublime than these of the Nogne, tho valleys are, "n the other ham, wider and more extensive, and niten umbrace, at a distames of a tew miles in the interior, the strangest sites possilhle, ant the most romantic seenery. It is trom the forders of the Mardanger fiord that the afrupt malley of lleimdal, takes its start, mul that the slopos of the Olde, the last spur of the Harlanger field, rise up to the rough rents of the thaciers of Folge-fonden-an immense aceumulation of fiee and snow, tion whence a thousand watertalls tako their ileparture-and at whose base are some of the most fertile littlo cormers in Norway, snela as the firm of' Bonchuus, und the nneient barony of liosemdal, the 1atrimony of tho Rusenkrones. (See p, तi.)

The great point on the Hurdanger tiord is, howover, thr Vuring foss, or "Romring Fall," ame it was to it that we were direeting our steps. We obtained a bont at Ulyig, being at the head of the lake of the sume name, and turning up Eid fiord were conveyed ly it to the station of the same name, at the entrance to the valley of Heimdal. Being a calm and serene night, nothing could exceed the bemuty of this navigation.
The next morning we started on foot to malie the pilgrimage of the Voring foss. 1 t is miversallymimitted by all who have seen them, that the eataracts of the Yoring foss, in the Bergenstift, and of the liuikan fuss, in Telemark, are so imposing, ind so fire surpass all that can he said of them, that they alowe fully weompense all the fatigues, troubles, and expenses of a trip to Norway:
Beyond Bill ford, we ceme to a little lake, the Eialfiord vand, a cilm mirror of a limpid green hae, where wr again ubtained a boat, and were ferried along tor an hour before we came up to the great lime trete and red churd of Sebo, from whence enamons vallergs openel to the right anel $h$ it, that to the left let to the Vowing foss. Crossing a little cultivated plain, the path soon heeme rurgel, and bending to the left m, the wild valley of Syssendal, we wise crossed the rapid turrent that rolled along its base, by frail and unstable wood n bringes. As weprocected, the scenery hecame wilder and willer, the whole vallev was blocked mplis immense mases of gneiss amid gramite, the bed of the river ahome marked, when met tumbling ow rocks, by a few stment bired treos. A mour was then traversel, the river crossed ly a frail bridge of pire trese, amble we enterel upanamith which was a mere smoth white surtive on the polishert roek, mande by the passage of horses and men, and beyond which were a fill, and tuother acemmation of houlders, aus a very steep acclivity, which was ascembed by a rough, winling. zig-zag track, in sume cases a mens stairease formed by hooks of gneiss, lint which was practicable for here herses of the comutry, We fell mach more at nuremer, however, on fort. It thak us an luar's toil to ascema this gigantio amphitheatre, which rises some eish hambed to a thoustmi feect abow the valley below.
One way mur hay norross a mon, from which a fine siew was oltatine if the somy Normands joknl, $\therefore, 500$ teet ligh. A devintion wis then male to the loft of the prith, anel a few minutes' walk aeross sume marshy mons gromel bromstat us to the river just where the valley serms cmmpletely shat up, an ablimp precipiee starting up from its very hank to the fiedrl alowe, while tothe left is a depli issme from which the view is rubleal ley a mameing weck eurtain, while the fissure itself semes like the trace of it gimat's sword that hat cleft these walls of sone amblopened a pasage fir the water, Firrolow that dark and himen fissure rolls the Voring fors, hut there is no gettin! at it from helow, althriegh it seems as if a way could lom mate at an expense which would he as nothing comparen to the magnificene of the serne which would in thus opened to the amual thomsands of tomists, artists, and dilletanti who visit this matumal wonder.

As it is, the thaveller is perfore oblighe to aseend the face of the precipiee liy 1,750 very indifierent steles ent in the roek, and the asernt of which on frut takes two montal homs, with an exertion for the ealves and ankles of a remarkally trying chanater, exerpit to those who are in full mountaneer orter. But what is most remarkable is that the Norwegiams make their indetatigable little ponies go up unl down this frightiul precipice; once or twice: we had ourselven nearly turned dizzy when, entering into a cloul that was sweeping liy, we emerged into the light of day just as the veil below was withdrawn or rent, und displayed the black-leoking depths below in twofold obscurity from the contrast. What then must such an aseent or descent be to a horse bearing its load or its rider !

It was a long way after we hated reached the top of this fatigning ascent to the Voing tiss. We had before us a vast tield or plain bordered on the horizon by the snowy heights of the Gokul or Gukeln* The preeise wot where the river fell from this phain into the Heimulal beneath was indicated at a considerable dist:ance by a cleul of mist. As we nenred this spot of terror, anid kramble:, briars, dwarf bireh and willow, the mouldering asway of which had gisen mivin to a thin coating of seil, on which flowered the Limmea borealis, the Rubus Aretiens and palulosus, and the charming hossoms of the Krokeluier, the waters hat carried away large flakes of this spongy mass, and left the rock in naked great white and romed polished massos. This by no mems added tor the security of the "ppronel, mal it would appear to be ahmet cer sin Iestruction to attempt, withent a guide, to timl out "the only overhmging stome," from whence a view of the fill leneath is obtaned. From any other point it appears as if the tencist would inevitably go aloug with the fall itselt:
The river, which had hitherto flowed tranquilly along tho fiekl, suddenly meretsat this point the great tissure, which we have descented as sem below, and precipitates itself down it at ome single leap. The left hauk of the precipice is on a level with tho field, the right lank, which fieces the spectator, is alvout five hundred feet higher. A fath of lewser magnitule prums likewise over these rueks, and arrised at the level whenee the Voring fins celsts iterll, it is atsorbed in it, and the rapidity of the two strems seems to be inereased with their junction and their apparently mited resolve to rush over the drep precince helow:

The height of the fall $i_{s}$ saill to be 900 feet, and the desent of the very consilerable body of water secms to be undroken; lint as another tomist remarks, it is a ditheult and perilons task to ntain a complete view from the dizz point where the puctater is placed. This point is abont a humdred or at lumdred and tifty fere abow the thl of tho tall, but the elifts on the oprosite side heing more than double that ele ration alove the commencement of the fall, if the laight be righty estimated, the precipices win the ingit lnuk must be cleccu or treelve humbed jeet alove the level of the river immediately brucath the tall. The roeks near the fall are so vertical, that there are no trees whatever in their fares, und it is only at a little distance that the occurrence of leelges in the escarjt ments :umits of a surinkling of bishes. Another tained from the clifl' on the north bunk, thint is, the oppresite: side to the nswal point of view. To reach this the river misi be cronsed ahove the tall, if a bat is to bee met with, and there is suid to be sometimes one attached to a suter, 'Ilie Voriug fiss is perhials more powerful than the liuikand fiss, hat the eye and the mind are less comiletely sumificel: one cannot contemplate, the former in all its plenitude mal puwer as mo can the latter. The seene, tho, bearing the stamp of a peculiat savage

[^0]
ns smeeping

 tas the veil Hyllywed the sewity from it ascent or $n$ its rinler! d the top ot ve lad betore orizon by the The preese ain into the diverable disthis syot of and willow, 1 migin to a the Limue: sus, ami the o waters hat nass, and left zled polishel e security of Imor cer :in , to fincl out nee a view of - other point bly go alongmquilly abong great tissure. wh precipitater thank of the (" richlt hank, hundred feet likewise over ce the Voring he rapidity of thi their june( ti) rush over
"feet, and th" If water serems markis, it is a ourpote view (1, ${ }^{2}$ is phaced. hroll and tilty - cliti, on the hat wontion the hright b. inght bink ove the level
The rock :tre no trees ly at a little iii the esearyes. Inother Il may be oh , thint is, the w. 'To reath fall, if'a hant be sometimes erful than the are less conn1: the former an the latter. culliat savagro grandeur, produces a singulan impression upon the mind. The sudilen disajpenrance of this enormons budy of water, leaving no other trace of its passage save a light elome of mist, has also something in it that speaks vividly to the imarimation, and leaves an imspressiou never to be forgotten.

A Danish artist exhithited an almirable view of the field of the Voring foss at the Fine Arts Exhibition at Copenhagen, in 1859. Despaiking of being able to represent the till in all its power, the artist han confined himself more to depioting the desolation of the fiedd, dark little lakes embosomed in bireh and the white b:u $\because$ of of the tesert, whilst to the left the abyss of the ${ }^{*} \quad$... foss was alone to be seen, an eagle soanding Whore . arot, was partienlarly striking.
$T$. to lie two other grancl fillis, which are little kin 10 tomersts, to the north of the Voring thes: one of $t_{\text {aseat }}$ is called the Skyttin fuss, and is weven hundrent feet ligh, and the other is called the Iembiedals foss. A small rielge of mometain lies leetween thr two fills, but the streams from them atterwards unite and dow down Sirnedad into the northerast part of the (iid tiond.

N゙ス.

Samigathon op the handanoer Fiord-Unpayodrable W'fathel-Choss to Vihoes-Excension to the Ostce Foss oh Fahb-Oyela the "Fisld"-Phe Mbates Foes Debluex.
Tus rlesent of the $1,7 \div 0$ steps was, if possible, mone latignian than the ascont. No wonder that the Sorwerian puly, who had bern down many tines frofore, meglud so duleronsly ; and it was with pusitive delight that wromised at the bridge thrown ower the Meibe elv, which we had erossed beture, amel which is it structhe of surprising strength :mul lroldhess. A mass of recks have lreen cast down intu the turent on buth sides, two stont gino trees havo then been tixal into these natmal lyder, inclined towards the hed of the river, ami athove the angle left between themand the benks two worden entuseways have been lad down, strongly fixed th the suil by enormous masses of mek. Guly the arel remained to be done. This was aceomplished hy hating down fonr sleal boakls, strongly tied tog ther by lark swathings, und then fastencel to the fine trow, whilst above all a row of flat stones constiIntril a kime of geneml pavement. Mon, horses, and carroles, pasis wer these kind of bridges, often earried over the most firions torrents with the most gerfeet sality. liy finur in the evening we wore back again at Finderd wik, after twelve homs' exertions, and whore a repast of fiesh salmon and tront, with exeellent putatues, :wailud us, and fully rostored us from our fittignes.

Maving aromplished onr long-wisherd-for visit to whe of tha incatest natmal emiosities of Nomway, our next whjeet was to metmen to liergen. In order to do this with the groatest amomit of wombences we himed a boat wherewith to crass the Wardang er tiond, int the weather proved malneky. It first, a heary furg came on, which ohliged ther rowers to keep clase to the left bauk of the liord, ant it reguired the ntmost exertions on the gurt of the stout bontnatn to kesp us from leing east ashore. It then eame on to rain, ant ans one has to preserve the horizontal pesition in those Inats, we were all the more exposed to its influenee. Gurselves, om coverings and mur baggage, were som stepmell by the rain and the waves breaking over us; for fog, rain, and the most awful sumlien gnsts of wind acemmulated, and no evil seemed wanting to our odyssey. Atter twelve iours of incessimt toil on the part of the enducing and unomplaining boamen, we had searcely acemplished hifteen miles, and per fored han to land at tho little islime of Heramsholm at the foot of tho Folge-fond.

No duubt but that this is a charming spot, when warmed up by a genial summer sm, aml the gray stones of its quay aro ily, latt the very min trickled cold from the pine trees, the pivement wis wet and slippery, and we were glad to take refing: in a house, where an aged botman and his wife belped to dry us.

Thekily we laul aceomplished so much of onv juurney that it only remained to eross the fiom, lireet from this point to Vilcoer, to reach a horse ane boat rond to Bergen-allueit one of a rude and devions character. Accordingly, the next day laming at the above-mentioned parish-elurel, where ther is no station, we had to reach the latter to make on wity to surlmoen. Lence we made a branch exenssion to the Ostud fuss, nother of the celelrated falls of Notway. The water fills perpendicularly four hundred feet upon a rilge of the mountain, from whence it tuans in cascades over vast pieces of rock into the valley, altogether serom hmodred foet, and the volume of water is immense. The mass of this water, as it falls wee the protruding ridge above, produces a beautiful rainbow.

The view of the fion from the momtain arove this fall is aplendil, and nutwithstanding the soaking we got unon its fair hosom, it was not withant rearet that we bade farewell to its pretty ports with little schomens lying at anchor, its churches haried amind trees, its hospitable peasants and picturesque villages, and to the magnificent seenery that avertopped the whole.

Starting from Samdmoen, our way at first along a qreen valley, at the end of which the hirchand pinechal roeks rose up like is wall, and we hat it just practicahle pathway throngh the woods, ant a continuons asernt for an homr, after whicin wh gined ote of the usual interminable stony and mardiy tichds or ufl:nuls, crowels of suipes rising up sereming from the little pools as we rode by. It took us fime hours to cross this didh, when, taking the valley that opened directly before us, we soon fonnd ouselves at Ekeland, and were hospitably received ing a worthy ohl man, who was rending the hible in a corner of his lint. smonnded by ten romping children.

Beyond Ekeland the contrasted eondiguration of the land presented secones of exceeding beanty, and we hal, among other varicties, to descention zigzag stairease that teminated in a vast matural cireus, into which tur enormons mass of water rolled with deatining noise, forming first a little lake, and then a torvent which we had prefore th past, This was the Bmatan foss, and late and chevation of about fise hametred thect. One ronte heien lay alonet the valley of the river of same name, sumetimes in tho water, sometimes on elry lamd, sometimes amid a chaos of roeks.

The village of Tosse, where at last new amivel, stands at the heme of the Sammanger hiond-the most nowtherly inlet of the vast lijorne fiom, and it is not moth more than a eouple of Norwegian miles (they are groud lumg ones, one lieing apual to sumen Faglish) neross the mountains, as the crow would fly, to Bergen.

It might be done in halt an hour in a balloon, but as such pleasant means of locomotion are nct yot provided, and the mountain barrier that lay between us and the city of the sea kings, dechured to be impassable, we had no alternative but to take boat, nnul, for a time, turning our back as it were upon this place of our destination, navigate down the long but beautiful waters of the Sumnanger fiord. Landing at Hatrigen, and proceeding thence to Oos, we turnell the extreme southerly point of the mountain barrier, and joined the main carriole and loat road, as it is called by courtesy, from Christiania to Bergen, after it has beell carried across the Hardanger and Bjorne fiorts, and there remains only two and-a-half Norsk, or seventeen Euglish miles, to Bergen itself, to which we could now proceed in a northryly lirection.

Our road lay at first over a series of wouded knolls, of considerable height and stecpness, which were succecdedl y a will, open eonntry, yet excredingly pleasiug, well wooded with birch aud alder, num showing here and there a farm-house or euntry residence of a proprictor, Among these was one belonging to an Enylish gentlemun, who often spenils the summer at Bergen, und his property uight well pass for an elegant retirement in the Highlani's of Scotlaul, with an excellent garden, well-fenced fields, and pretty matural undulating groumd, with dells anil knolls, struams and little tarns, overhung ly heantiful bireh-trees, and with bohl bate hills in the listance. At length, with a salt lagoon on the right of the rom, amd $\mathrm{p}^{\text {nassing }}$ green und eultivated liehla, with not a few pretty villas, we entered mon a formal areme of well-grown trees in full leaf, nud by then reached an olil gateway, by which wo effectel inn entrimee into Burgen, old as its own Sagas, nul now weulthy ats the Hause Towns, of which it ouce formed a component part

A BRIEF SOJOURN IN TRIPOLI.

I.

Greater and Lessel Syetis-Ancient Ofa-Approacit to Teipoli-The Citadel and Pasin's Palace-Tige Me-gaiaif-Streets of Thipoli-lbazaaks-Ghrat MosqueCofper Houses - Roman Antiquities - Conquest of Teipoli if the Ababg-Lotus Thee and the Lotoifaol.
There is but a limited portion of the littoral of the Mediterrancan that in this present day of impioved maritime communication remains without the network of stcamboats, and which is, in consequence, little visited by tourists who travel for pleasure only. The coast that is thus tabooed, as it were, from civilisation, extends from Tunis to the valley of the Nile, mud includes the older regency of Tripoli, now a mere ayalet or province of the Ottoman Empire.

Nowhere throughout tho wholo length of Northern Africa docs the great descrt come so near to the sea: the formidable barrier of the Atlas, which from the Atlantic eastwards protects a more or less narrow band of fertile lands, known as Morocco, Algeria, and Tunis, from the hot winds of the Sihhara, lowers, till it is, as it were, lost in the lesser Syrtis, leaving the sands a more or less essy ancess to the shore, all the way to the greater Syrtis, and to the Cyrenaic peninsula. Hence, indeed, the bad name of these coasts.

"Tres Eurus ab nito
In brevia et Syrtes urget, miserahile visu llliditque vadis, ntque aggere eingit arena-" says Virgil, and Lnean repeats:
" per inhospita Syrtis.
Litora, per C'alidas Libym sitientis Arenis."

I bohl bare hills It lagom on the cultivated tiehls. d upon a formal af; and by them wo effected an Sagas, nud now it once formed country from the latter in 1551. The population, at the prosent day, consists of Arabs, Moors, Berhers, Turks, Negroes, Jews, and Franks, and is supposed to number abont it million and a lalf. The Arabs call the country Bahr al Abiyad, or the "White Sea," from its sandy chazacter.

With in farourable wind the traveller can eross from Malta to Tripoli in abont forty-eight hours. The shore is low and not pereeptible till close upon it, but the mountains of the interior aro visible from a long distance. When at length the littoral itself is discerned a kind of creseent ish perceived, the hase of which is necupied by the city, while to the mast is a dark firest of clate-trees that seem to bathe their roots in the sea; but to the west there is naught, savo a samdy, barren and naked tract.

It is well known to evcry tyro in travel that the cities of tho East, so captivating and imunsing withont, are by no means so within. This is the ease with Constantinople, Smyma, Jernsilem, Bagdad, Alexandria and Cairo. Tripoli constitutes no execption to the rule. A chaplet of roeks invites the construction of a mole to protect a naturnly good harbour for small ressels, lint the lazy Turks lave left what their Roman prodecessors did towards miting the infets by solid massonry just as it was, and the mouths of sundry old gums with dismantled carriages, or no earriages at all, still pece ominomsly through the cmbrasures of the marine fort. Allah kirim! for the rest! It is probable that the brurharian pirates of a century ago proctisel their villamies on the open sea, with the same slam defences at home. The lapse of timo has made known the true value of these. (See 1. 73.)

The beautiful cities of the East must bo read of at home ; to visit them is to be disappeinted. It was probably the same illusion, produced by distance and by the finutastic and ferocions aspect of the rovers of Salee, and the corsairs of Algiers and Tripoli, that acted $\mu$ mon the imaginations of European sailors und gave to them so terible a renown. How much have travel and intimaey taken from these nbsurd pretonsions? What of the Salee and Rabat and the Tripoli of the present day? We have deseribed the first, we shall now proced with the second. As to Aljezinal, it is now the semi-civilised Algeria.

The extreme whiteness of syuare flat buildings covered with lime, which in this climate encomiters the sun's ficrerst rays, is very striking. 'The isthes form clusters of cupolis very large, to the number of eight or ten erowded toge ther in different parts of tho town. The mosifucs have in general a suall plantation of Indian liss and date-trees growing close to them, which, it a distance, appearing to be so many rich gardens in different parts of the town, give the whole eity, in the eyes of nun Europm, an axpect truly novel and pleasing. On entering the harbour, the town focins to diseover dilapidations from the destructive hand of time, large hifle of ruh hish appearing in various parts of it. The easto, or royal palace, where the pasla resilus, is at the east emil of the town, within the walls, with a dock-yard adjoining, where the hey (the pasha's chlest son, und heir to the throne) builds his eruisers. This castlo is very ancient, and is inclosed by astrong high wall which appeats impregnable ; lut it has lost ath symmetry on the inside, from the innumerable alditions malo to contain the different bunches of the royal family ; for there is sentely an instance of any of the blood royal, as far as the pasha's great grandehildren, living without the custle walk. These Imildings havo increased it by degres to a little irregular town. (See page 6j.)
The arrival of Christians in the harbour nceasions a great number of people to assemble at the mole-end and along the sea-kiore, the matmal consequence of an African's curiosity, who, never having been out of his own country, linds as mueh ammsement at the lirst sight of ma Europeni, as his own uncouth appearance atforts to the newly arrived stranger. It conse phently, after our arrival here, was not eany for us, during some minutes, to draw ofl our attention from the extraordinary group we perceived.
It may be remarked here that the Mughribis, or people of tho west (wheneo our "Moass") pronomuce the $p$ as $b$, and the a very broad, more so than in Syria and Turkey, lence the pa-siah (pasha), "viceroy" of the Persians aud Turks, is written by all old travellers " bashaw."

The eity of Tripoli is, or rather has been, surrounded by a prodigionsly strong wall, and towers, which are now in bal order ; lout persons of judgment in these matters say, that with repairs only, it might be made one of the strongest fortifications. The scal washes this town on three sides ; und on the fouth a sundy plain, callerd the Meshiah, joins it to the rest of the comitry. () 10 cast it is divided from Egypt by tho dreary deserts of Baren, where none reside except necasionally the wandering Arab.

Not far from this spot it was that idolators paid divine wowhip to their deity Jupiter Ammon, under the figure of a ram; and here stood the fanons temple dedicated to his name, which few could :ayroneh, on account of the burning sands, which still divide the inlabitants, or islanders, of this saudy ocean from the rest of their species. Ages pass without a traveller attempting to cross these lmuing seas. This eity is much less than cither Algiess or Tunis, mither of which states have been Moorish kingdoms quite tour hundred years. Alont the year 1400, three different hands of soldiers, muder the protectien of the Grand Signor, settled at Tripoli, Tunis, and Algiers, and from them these people sprong. This scate soon becaur very flourishins, and continued so till the rigorous siege it sustained from the $S_{\text {paniards, who attaeked it, under }}$ the general Don Pedro de Navara. Since that porionl, though harnssed ly the Spranish and the English, und latterly ly tho French, it has emtinued in the possession of tho Turks and Dlewres, and foverned by a Tukish pasha. It was tributary to the lorte fir a loug series of years, until freed from this yoke: it afterwards remained entirely under a Momish sowreigu. The town is so meven with accumulated rulbhish, on which they often build without removing it, that the thresholds of some of the street-luors are om a level with the teiraces or tops of honses not fir from them. The streets are narrow, hut nearly double the width of those at 'Thuis nul Algicrs. There is only one kind of vehicle used here for conveyance, nud that kepit only hy a few of the great Moors, for the females of their families. It is a sort of nalanquin, cutircly inclused with linen, and placed on the back of a cartued. The one loblonging to the pashat is very richly and elegautly adorned, inside and out, and is merely for the purpose of conveying the ladies belonging to his own family to their country residences. None of the ladies belonging to the royal finmily ever walk in the streets, exeept when they $g^{\prime}$ to their mosigues, to fulfil a vow, enatle walk. rees to a little nr uceasions a the mule-end sequence of an cen out of his $t$ at the first th appenrume ; consequently, s , during some on the extra-

Mughrivis, or m") "romaunce ore so than in (pasha), "wiceitten by all oll

een, surrounded

 very, which are gment in these might be made seal washes this ha sundy $p^{\text {lain, }}$ of the comintry. by the drenry ept oreasionalliy
; idolators paid

 Amunon, uviler famons temple ild :inyroneh, on still divide the vecan from the hout a traveller This city is mis, neither of loms quite four 1, three different , $n$ of the Grand lgiers, and from te suon became he rigctous sieg tacked it, under inee that period, he English, nul ued in the posnovernel by a the Porte fur a It this roke: it Moorish servccumulated rubout removing it, ot-dan's are un at ties not firr from early double theThere is only cyance, and that for the females lanquin, entirely back of a cumel. very richly aml is nerely for the fing to his own une of the ladies 1k in the streets b, to fultil a vow, o: mako an offering, which they frequently do on ravions occasions, but with the greatest circumspeetion. They go we as lato as eleven or twelve oclook at uight, nttemied by a consilerable guard from the castle. A number of black fomale slaves and Morish survants form a large bedy, in the very eentre of which the prineess or princesses walk, with their own particular attendants on laties encircling them. The gaard contimally amonnest then as they go, to give timely notice of their approwelh. They have with them a great number of liglits, and a vast fumetity of burning perfume, which is carried in silver fillagree vases, aud also large silver ewers of rose mad crange-tlower water, to damp the burning pertume, which, during their walk, produces a thick chand itroms then, composed of the finest aromatic olous. Either of these accompunimethe, lusides the vocifrous ery of the guards, is filly suflicient to iudicate the approach of the royal party, in time to leave the way elear for them; and this is partienlaty necessary, as their law decrees no less a pumishment than death tor any persen who may be in the strects and remain there while their ladies :use passing hy, or for thy man who maty look at then from it window, Ot conssis every phace is perfectly free from electater before they come near to it.

Wom a of a mindle station of life generally go out on fort, hat harilly ever without in female slave on attculant. They are then so completely wrupped up, that it is impersille to discover mero of then than then huight, motensily wen their size. They have a caw mint called a banatan, which is about one yard and a half withe and tum or tive in length. This conceals them "utirely, and they hold it so clase over their tite as searecly to leare thi least ropening to see thin waty through it. The dewesses wear this part of their chess ine:uly in the sime way; but they hohl it in such a manme as eleaty to lixeover whe aye, which a Mourish woman dines nut to if she hits a proper regrid for publie ofsinion, ha her reputation would certainly suther liy it.

Nerchamixe is nomaliy earried on the backs of eamels ame mula, mul the dust they wise in these dry sumdy strects is intolecable. The town stamb on a fimadation of ruek. There ant there are a few remains of pavement, wine of which are very ancient, and aprear avidenty io te hamath. They do mot exed here in shepr, then best of thes, being liftle hetter than beoths, theng their contrats are smetimes ballula, com-are tw: cowered buzars, or marketphaces, ono of which is wry laves, and built in four aisles, meeting in a cross. Thest aives ate fitted me wih shops, built on mich side of them, cont ming avery surt of merehandise, and haviug 14 wiy in the uidule for purchaters to wall in. Sownd parts of this place are nearly dark, and the powertul smell of musk makes it very impleasant to phes thermgh it. The othere bazater is much smatler, and has bus shops in it. 'Thither omly black men and women we brought for salel tho very idea of a human luing, hought and examined as cittlo for sale, is repughant to a feeling haut, yet this is one of their prineipal traflies.

The enteriur of the great mosque, where the deceased relations of the coyal fimily are haried, is extremply handsume. It stands in the man street. near the gite of the eity which leads to the combtry, and almost opmesite to the pabee. Before the door of this mosgue there is a second entry of neat lattice woodwork, curionsly carved, with two fulding doors of tho samo work: a great number of heautifilly coloured tiles, with which the buttom of the lattice work is set, to the oye. Over the dhors of all the mosques are long sentences from tho Kotan sculptured and painted; those over the door of this mosigue being more ridhly gilt aud painted, and the senlpture wueh handsomer thin in luy others in the town. There is another mossume at no great distance, having a door of most cerious workmanship, arred in wool by tho Moors. We stopped to look at it, hat could not enter tho building it being the time of divino service. The appearanee of the Mon's at prayer wats as solemm as it was strange. They were at that part of the service which obliged them to prostrate theuselves and salute the carth: the whole congreyation wats accordingly in this posture, alsorbed in silcht adusation. Nothing secmed eapalju of withrawing their attention for is moment trou the object they were engagel on. The eye was alternately directed from carth to heaven, and thom hearen to earth agrian, uncaught by muy oljects arumb, mheedel eren ly each other. They seemed wholly enwripinul in the prayers they ofterei up in this humble minmer from the ground. There are no seats in the musine, no desks, nor lassocks, nor prews; the people stani promiseuensly tugether, without distinction of rank or chess. The wenen are not permittel to attend jublic worship; they go to tho musques only at michight.
The meflie lukar is where the Taks meet to hear and well the wews of the day, ame to drink conice : it is filled with coffe-houses or tather coffee-kitehens, which within are very black with staoke, and in which mothing but cothee is dressonl. No, Moorih gentlemen enter these henses, but send thair slaves to bring ont conke to thenat the doors, where ate marble couches, shadel with green abomrs. There conches are firnishod with tho must rich :unt benutifinl mants ant calpets. Here are fonad, at extrin hours of the day, all the principal Moors, seated chos-lyyter, with eups of conlen in their hamk, made ats strong an the essence itwlf. The colle sersul to the laties if the castle has smbetimes in it an quatity of cimanam, cloves, and nutmeg. The Mons, when at these cothe-honses, are waitel in by theirown black servims, who statul constamiy by their masters, one with lis pipe, another with his cup, an! a him hothug his handkerehict, while he is taiking; is his hambs are absolutely neeessury for his discourse, he antiks with his foretinger of his right haml mum the pala of his left, as aceatately as we do with a 1 neth, che dialerent parts of his peech, : cumba, a photation, or as striking pusage. This renders their manuer of conversing very singular ; nul an European, whu is not nsel to this part of their discourse, is allugetiner at a loss to mulerstand what the speakers mem.
One of the grambent areles of antignity stands yet entire at the Marine. The whareh, as the Monstera it, was huil se homg ago as a.d. 16f, by a lioman who lam the conton of the customs. Hee erected it in homour of, mht during the joint reigns of Marens Aurelins and Lacins ARins Verns. Ninens Aurelins, on the death of Antoninus l'ins, with whom Lacius Verns likewise reigned, took him also as his colleagne in the empire, though Lucius Verui hat proved so vile it chamacter that Antoninus did not mominate him at his deach, When, in 161, these two emperors began to reign, they changed their names, which aceoments for the great number of initials in the inseriptions on the arel. When this arch was built, there were few labitations nearer this place thm Labed, the Leptis Magua of the ancients, which is about threo days' journey from Tripoli. Lacins Verus was at this timo rioting in the wools of Daphne at Antioch, and committing all kinds of outrages throughout Afriea ; and the Romans having strayed to the spot where Tripoli now stauls, to hunt wild beasts, foumd under this areh a weleome retreat from the burning rays of the sun at mou-day. It is thonght, hy all goorl julges, to be handsomer than any of the most celebrated in Italy, as the temple of Janns, though built of marble, and esteemed ono of the finest of these edifices, has only a $p^{\text {lain rout. This areh is very high, but does not appear }}$ so, being from the great accumalation of sands carried thither thy the winds, exactly as deep beneath the surtiee of the earth as it is high above it. It is eomposed of stones so exceedingly harge, that it seems wouderful how they wero conveyed hither, consilering there are neither stone nor stone quarries in this enuntry; and it is no less extraordinary, in such a country as this, how they could be raised to form this immense areh. No cement has been used to fasten them together, yet so solid are they that the hand of time, in its continual magages around it, has left this monument of antiquity uninjured. The ceiling is of the most beautiful seulpture, a small part of which only remains in view, as the Murrs, 1 lind to its beanties, havo for some time filled it up with rubhish and mortar, to form shops in the interior of the atch. On the outside are cormons groups of whole-length figures of men and women, which those who are versed in antiguity can casily explain; but they are too much worn away by time for others to mulentand them. Sor little inclination is there to search for antiquities, that those whiel remaiu are in general undisturbed. Europeans are often tempted to bring theee antiquities to light: and they might donbtlens make great and useful discoverirs; but the Moors and jealons Turks will not permit them to disturl, a stone, or move a grain ot samd, on such an aceount; and repeated messages have bern sent from the castle on these oceasions to warn Christians of their danger.
Without the walls of the town are frepuntly found pieces of tesselated pavement, known to have been laid down two thousand years ago. At Labeda very corisiderallle remains of Roman buildings are still standing nearly luried in the sands. So grand were the Romnn edifices, that from Labeda, seven granite pillars of an immense sizo were, for their beauty, transperted to Flame, and used in ornamenting one of the palaces fur Louis XIV. At Zavia, which is but a few hours ride from hence, an amphitheatre, built ty the Romans, i.s still st:uding entire, with five degrees of steps; its interior is one hnudred and furty-cight feet in diameter:
When we retlect, that on the northern extremity of Afriea, the Grecians fomded Cyrene and settled other colonies, whilo the Ploœnicians built the eity of Carthage, afterwards confuered by the Romans,

1 Towards the end of the fourth century, Tripoli, then the ancient city of Oen, was obliged, for the first time, to slunt its gates against an hostile incusion; several of its most honourable citizeos were surprised and massacred; the villages, and even the sulpurbs, were pillaged, and the vines and truit-trees of their rich territory were extirpated by the suvnges of Getalia. The provincials inplored slie protection of Count Lomauus, who had with all the kingloms of Numidia, and that this is the samo spont on which Tripoli, Algiors, and Tunis now stand, it is no wonder that Roman vestiges are yet to be found here, notwithstanding the neglect and destruction of the Aral, who is careless of the preservation of works of art. Most of the cities and towns in tho kinglom of Tripoli exhibit many interesting remains which provo their antiquity. Bengazi, which is a very short distanee from Tripoli, governed by a hey, or viceroy, muler tho Pashn, is the ancient city of Bereniec, built by Ptolemy Plilalelphus, 284 years before Christ. Near to Bengazi, at Derne, which is also governed ly a bey from Tripoli, in the vilhage of Rasem, are considerablo ruins of a tower and fortifications built by long exercised the military eommand of Africa; but they soon fonmd that tifeir Romn governor was not less cruel nnd rapacious than the barb rians. As they were ineapalle of furnishing the four thonsand camels, and the exorbitant present which he reyuired, before he wonid mareh to the nssintance of Iripoli, his denamd was equivalent to a refnsat; and he might justly be accused as the author of the pullic calamity. In the annual assembly of the three cities, they nomiuntel two deputies, to lay at the feet of the Einperor Valentinian the cuxtomary oflering of a gold Victory, and to accompany this tribute of duty, rather than of gratitnde, with an humble complaint, that they were ruined hy the enemy and letrayed by the fovernor. The count, however, long practised ln the arts of eorruption, had taken care to secure the venal friendship of one of the ministers of Valentinina; and, by a repetition of the sume ments, where they could most arail, continued to avert the vengeance of the emperor from his own guilty heal to the innoeent sullerers. The president of Tripoli was publicly executed at Utiea, and four distinguished citizens were put to death, by the express order of the emperor. In (ienseric's invasion of Afriea, Tripoti was included in the Vandal bingdoms; and, when this monareliy was sobverted by Belisarins, it was one of the five stations in which the Roman general estabished dukes or commanders.
After the standard of Muhmmad hard waved victorious in the enst, Abdullah, the lientenant of the Culiph Othmon, at the heat of 40,000 Mussulmen, contendet, in the vicinity of this city, with a numerous army of the imperial troops, for the domintun of Africa. Their ardomr was mabated by a painfind march, They had pitehed their tents before it: a resinforcenent af tireeks wis surprised and eut to pieves on the sea-shore; hat the fortifications of Tripoli resisted the tirst assmults; and the Suracens were tempted ly the npproneh of the pefet (irgory, to relinquis) the labsurs of the sige for the prits and hosses of a derinive ace tion. It is reported shat his standird was followed by 120, ,nim nen; were it so, the regolar lorids of the empire must have hewn 1 st in the disorderly crowd of Afrieans, who formed the nomber, not the strensth of his host.
For several days the fwo armies were fieredy engaged from the dawn of light to the hour of nom, when the lacte and fotigne coupelted them to serk shelter and refreshament in their respece tive camps. The daughter of (iregory, a muid of incompurahh beauty and spirit, is said to have tougit by his side. From her carliest youth, sle was truined to nount on borselaack, to draw the bow, and to wield the scinitar; and the richuess of her arms nod apparel was conspicuous in the foremost ranks of the battie. Hor land, with 100,000 pieces of gohd, was offered for the hend of the Arabian general ; nud the youths of Afriea were excited by the prospect of the glorieus prize. Zobeir, a young and noble Arab, advised Alxiallah to retort the offer on the imperini prefeet. At the same time, he recommended that a part of the Massuluen forces should lie concealed in their tents, while the remainder kept up the usial morning centest with the enemy. When the weary troups of the empire had retired to prepare for the rufresi.ment of the evening, mbrided their herses, and haid aside their armour, on a suden the charge was sounded; the Arabian camp poured fourth $n$ host of fresh and intrepid warriors $;$ aud the long lino of the Cireeks and atricans was surprised, ussaulted, and overturned. The victory was complete, aud Tripoli openel its gates to the eonquerer. (iregory fell by the sword of Zobeir; but the enthusiastic wurrior disdained to chaim the reward pro. posed at his own suggestion; nor would his nedievement have been known, bad not the tears and exclanations of the captive maid, on secing him, prochimed what his own modesty lail concenled.
at this is the 1 Tunis now sare yet to bo ul destruction tion of works o kinglom of which prove a very short , or viceroy, 3erenico, built efore Christ. a governel hy son, are contions built by a; lut they soon uel and rapacions of furuishing the ent which he rece of 'lripull, his iglit justly be aeIn the minual as. leputies, to lay at anry offesing of a luty, rather than y were ruinet by count, however, ten care to secare Falentinian ; and, could most nrail, eror fiom his own sitent of Tripoh inguished ritizens the emperor. On led in the Fandal rted by Belisarins, man general esta-
I victorious in the lman, nt the he:nl of this city, with the dominion of hit march. They bit of lirceks wis t the fortifications be saracens were rory, to relimyuish of a dectivive me. of a dective ne Howed by 120,1100 re tunst have herl rned the nombers, engared from the e hect and tatiprow t in their respece $l$ of incomparalise s side. From her rseliack, to draw hatess of her arms auks of the buttle. tifered for the heat fiered for the hest ca were excited by yeung and noble cimperial profect. of the Mugsuhnen ile the remuinder nemy. Wheu the are for the refresinmol laid uside their the Arabinn cump warriers; and the sed, ussaulted, und l'ripoli openel its aword of Zobeir; aword the reward pro. achiovement have ns of the captive own modesty lind the Vimeluls. On the const near Tripoli is the Island of Jerbi, known to be tho Meninx of the ancients. This ishund has heen in tho possession of the Pasha of Tripoli from the time that the Moors, by burying nearly the whole of their own army and that of their enemy in tho sea, drove from it the Dukes of Alva and Mediun-Celi, in the fifteenth century. From the Islaml of Jerbi they bring to Tripoli great quantities of fruit, of nearly the size of a bean, and of a bright yellow when fresh. This is the produce of a treo which grows there, und is said by a Freneh author to be the lotus of the ancients. ${ }^{1}$
The Moors eall it the karub, and with the sceds or stones of this fruit they weigh diamonds and pearls; the valuo of the diamond is aseertained by tho number of karul) stones.

It is also known ns the carob-trec although the true word is kurub. Its botanical name, Ceratonia silique, has been derivel from keras, a hom, in allusion to the long horn-like pools of this plant, which eontain a sweet freculn, for the sake of which they are often imported from Spuin under the name of the Algarola bean. This list mane is a slight alteration, by the pretix of the Arahic article al, of the Arabic nane of the tree, karub. It is generally considered to be the locust-tree of scripture ; and in spain, whero the seeds are caten, it is callen St. John's breal. Igmorance of eastern manuers and natuma history induced many persons to fancy that the locusts on which Johm the Baptist fed were the tender slowts of plants, ane that the wild honey was the pulp of the pod of the karub on jujube, and whene it had the name of St. John's l, read. There is beter reason to suppuse that the shells of the karnb pool might be the hasks which the protigal son desired to partake of with the swinc. The seels or benns were often resorted to during the proinsular war as food for the British cavalry horses.

The karub-tree is a beautiful evergreen, with a massive circular and expmasive head, and as it generally grows apart, and more or less isolated ou grussy plaius, it adds much to the beauty of castern scenery, inviting to rest by its slade, and giving it park-like aspect to the uative plains. This is especially the case in Cilicin Camperstris, and in some parts of Northern Syria.
${ }^{1}$ He says, "Sur la côte de retteisle, on trouve un arbre appellé par les anciens lathus, qui porte un truit, lo ta grosscar chuno five, et jaune comme dusafran, qui a ungeut ai exyuix, que les Gregs disaient que coux qui en avilient une fois groutc, onblierent leur patrie!"' Anl ns the a ient Lotophagi (a peeple so colled from their feeding on the, it lotus) are known to have luen that rnee of inhabitunts who lived near the Lesser Syrtes, where this island is, it is more probable that this was the ©-ait knewn by the name of lot us than the jubad (er jujube) or tho date, which sre found all over Africa, und which some writers have thought to be the letus.

The celebratel Mr. Mruce says, that Gerbi or Gerbo, is the Menins of the ancients, or the iskund of the Letopbugi. Ulysses visited this country on his retorn from the 'Irejam war.

Not prone to ill, uot strange to foreign guests,
They eat, they drink, and nature gives the tenst.
The trees arourd them all their frait produce,
Letus the mane; divine nectareous juice!
(Thenee calld Letophagi), which who so tabtes, Insatiate rivts in the sweet repasts ;
Nor other home ner other care intenils,
But quits his hense, his couatry and his friends.
Homer's Odyosey, Book ix.

II.

Oases on Wadis-Aran Taibrs-liethiks and Kaldaliesan arnaut Conspimacy-ILouses-Fandiks on Inss-Bathe-Adbiperous Sands-lise of the Kamimandisl'asia's P'alace-a Moorigi Rebellion-Claeat Mosqce - Oakdens-Fate of a Fair Circassinn-a llateted Castle-Cimels-Mosquea in the Desert-Stuny of a Safid's Dauouteu-Deatil of IInaet the Gueat.

A consideramle city in the neighbourhood of Tripoli, of the name of Bona, is built entirely with the ruins of Hippo Regins, and is little more than a mile distant from tho phace where that ancient city stood. The desert aljoining Tripoli, and leading towards Esypt, still hears the name of Barea, ${ }^{3}$ given it by the Romans on accomnt of the ticreeness of its inhabitants at that time. The couriers from Tripoli cross these deserts in their way to Grand Cairo, mountal on dromedaries, which the Moors esteem much swifter than a horse. The couriers are obliged to be fastened on with cords, to prevent their being thrown ofi' by the tleetness of the aumal ; and owing to the extreme difficulty of passing these dreary regions, the curriers can seldom quit their caravans, and nre genemally from twenty-five to thirty diys on tho way from Tripoli to Cairo.
On this part of the desert, towardis Egypt, are islank of inhabitunts environed ly oceans of sand, which completely separate them from calh other, and from the rest of the world. None attempt to appoath their hahitations through the burning regions which surromal them. Among these islands, ealled by the ancient geographors, oases, was that of Ammonica, where lived the worshiplers of Jupiter Almmon, ${ }^{\text {b }}$ it region which we deter to another opportunity to describe. Only a few ishamis in this piut of the desert are known to the caravans, where they stop in ease of extremo necessity for reffeshment and repose, after the hardships of a journey mure dreadful than ear be conceived, and which would not often be compheted, but by the hulp of the compass and a knowledge of astronomy. The rast and sudilen shifting of the samuls, levelling mountains in one spot and raising then in another, so completely varies the aspect of the way,
${ }^{3}$ Hippo Regius is fimons for having been tho episeopal seat of Saint Augustine, whe died here whilst it was hesiegel by the Vandals, in the year 430, A council was held here in the year 393, Saint Augustine at that time being only 1 priest. This city is mentioned by I'toleny, Strulo, P'iny, and Mela; Silius Italicas also spenks of it.
3 The country of buren is said to have derived its name from the ancient city of laaree, built necording to IIerolotus by Battus, son ot Arcesitas, ling of Egypt, nul utterwards destroyed by Amasis. This country is very larren, nud foll of roeks nod sandy phine.- Herodotus, lib. iv.; Strabo, lib. xvii.; Ptolemy, lib. iv. c. 4 ; Pomponius Mela, lib, i. с. 8.

1 Ammen and Inmmon, n naue of Jupiter, worshipled in Lybia. Io nppeared under the form of a ram to Bacchus, who, with his army, soffirel extreme thirst in the deserts of Africi, mul showed hin a fountain. Cpon this, Bacchus erectel a temple to his futher, nuder the name of Jupiter Ammon, i. e., the samily, with the horns of n ran. The temple of Jupiter Ammon was in the deserts of Lybia, nine days' joerney from Alexandria. It had a famous oracle, which whs consalted by Hercules, Perseus, and a famous orace, whers, lut when it pronounced Alexnader to be the son of other Iupiter, such thattery destroyed its long.established reputation. The word onses or nunscis (Strabo, ii. p. 120) is supposed by somo to be derived from the Coptie Ouah, a resting.flace; by others from the Arabie Mawn, a habitation, and Si or Zi, n wilderness; but it is mere probully derived frem the Arabie Wadi, as sueh places nre now called, nud which the French and otbers write as Oundi nud Oasis.-Quintus Curtius, lib. iv. c. 7; Arrian, lib. iii. c. 2 ; Strabo, lib.i. c. 17; Pausanias, lib. iii.
that the traveller, bewildered, knows not where he is except by such aid. Other islands are also here, whero the inhabitants will probably be insulated from the rest of tho world to thu end of time. Closo to these deserts is Pentapolis, a country of the Cyreuaica, ${ }^{1}$ where stood the tive cities of Appollonin, Cyrene, Arsinoe, Itolemais, and Berenice. This part of Barbary, once called, from its great fertility, the gramary of the Fomans, is recently mueh fillen ofi, The failme of its produce is attributed to the want of rains, which were formerly much more copions and frequent in this country than they have been of late years. The steep momutains of Ghavian are the only ones seen on a clear day from the city of Tripoli, and seem to be a long ridge of hig! black hills. These, and the sands, are inhabited by numerous tribes of Arabs, anoug whieh are those of the Tarhona, Bu-ajila, Auar-shifina, Auargrama, Aunt-ghand, Aunr-yama, Auar-feilah, Aulad Tu Saif, aul Beni Anlad, and others. These Arabs firm three elasses: the first, those who come from Arabiat; the secoml, the Arabs of Afriea; and tho thirel, the wandering Bedawiu or Bedouins. The dirst two are equally warlike, hambome in their persons, gencrous in their temper, honomrable in their dealings, grand and ambition in ail their procedings when in power, and abstemious in their food. They possess great genius, and enjoy a settled cherffincess, not in the least bordering on butbonery. Each of these tribes are governed by a chief, whose title is sheik, by whose laws all those noder him we direeted, judged, and fumisled. Each family has a chief of its own kindred, whoso anthority in the sume mamer extends to lite and death. Their trade is war. They serve as anxihiary troops to whoever pays them best: most of them aro at present considered as being in the interest of the Pasha of Tripoli. The Bedawin are hordes of petty wandering morchauts, tadinge with what they cary from phace to phace. 'Tley manuature a davk cloth for baxacans, and thick webs of goat's hair, used to cover tents, which they sell to the Moors.

These Bedavin, in the spring of the year, approach Tripoli from the I'ianna, or pliain, aljoining the town. Here they sow their com, wait till they ean repp, it, and then disappear till the your fislowing. During the stay of these people in the Piaman, the women weme, and sell their work to tho 'lripolitans. 'Ihey pitch their tents muder the walls of the city, lmitemnot enter the town fite withont leave; and for my misdememour the bodawin may commit, thejr cheof is answerable to the $\mathrm{l}^{\text {nowha }}$. hesides leming divided into

The Cyrenuta, so enlfed from the city of Cyroric, was ako denominateit the i'entapolis, from the tive cities it contaned. which, for several centuries were in a most totrishing eondition, The shecessors of Battus, first king of this state, migned tor up-ommonweattl, and hod many samginary diegntes with the republie of C'uethage abont the limits ot their restertive terri. tom'as. 'Tassu's idea of tho Cyrenaica is both fust mal hupily expresuld:

Wadi e Creta lontane inverso ' 1 Polo
Non sevrne; o pur lamgo Atrien sen viene, sul mar colfa e ferace; misentro sulu
Fertil ili mostrite it' inficonde urene.
La Mammica rude; o rate if atolo
Dove eiuftee cittadi eble Cirene;
Qui 'ldonnita; c pol con l'onde chete, Sorger al mimil fabuleno Lete.
-Gerusahmme Liberata, e. 15.; IHaquiere's Leflers from the Sallierrancai, vol. ii. 1. ©.
hordes, each fanily is governed by its own ehicf, in the same manner as those of the Arabs. The Sultans, or Kings of Fezzan, are tributary to the Pasha of Tripoli. The Moors of Pezzan are of a dark copper colour, almost lack. They are many shades tharker tham the Tripolitans who inhabit the comotries at a small distunce from 'Tripeli; fur the Moors in the city aul suburbs of Tripoli ate, ia genem, white. To each of the cities belonging to the pashat he semels a viecroy with the title of Bey, and to the lesser districts a goverom, who is denominatel a Kaid (or Kay-id) pisha. The dismion anong the Moorish princes preventing the [msha from attending as rigitly as usmal to those gro vermments, the Kaids are sufferel to neglect going out to their ditierent kaidaliks till it is absolutely necessar: for the pashat to reedive his tributes, wheli are then, tor want of time, taken by fore from the people. Where the Kaids have remainel at them pats, they have fomed the Mous logal to the pasha, and have githered the tributes easily; whike the shours, who are latrased at other kadidiks, hase hecome tromblesome and dimgerons to the state, Amohg these kaidiliks are those of the Meshiah, Tapma, Mizamata, Messlata, Zavia, \%umri, and others. Near the Moshinh is a large district of land, under the juristietiom, amd in the prossersion of a priest. This distriet is called the Sayd, which was the name of its fomer priest, the means lion. It is a sanctuary which cambt he volated he the para himselt: The life of a murdere within its walls is sacres. He may lee starvel ont, by his tivonds being prevonted fiom reliciog him, hat he camot 10 taken thene her tiree.

The great hast of the Ramadan is kept withe exreme or tather with exeossive punclilionsmes at Thinmi, and the Oriental proverh, when a thing is wished for; that it is desired as the monn of hairan, of the timst that succeds to the finst, is in few plates more real thon it is here. An exd incident wecured at this "poch during the last ecotury (athon (atio) which had nearly involved tho city in a great dishater. In Anomat, who hat heen sent unen an expedition from the siultan. with some small vessels, whi berwern firn and sis pat inter the harbum of' 'Tripeli lior provishons, sometime sefore the fost of liamakn. 'The formment, thongh much more 'ungetie thom it is mons, wats atill, like the Moorish states, very wedk. Many people wore oratly disuntended. and this man fimdineswerm of the chict otheres diophensed with the pashat, mond ripe for whellom, and having abor obserwo that a purs of the fortifications near the sea, for the want of a fen days hamor, rendred that part of the city easy of weens, formed the extawordinary idea ut atompting, with his hamplat of people, the capture of Tripoli hy surprise; thal had mot one of his emissuries rommithal would mowt probiblly have sucereded in this strange: muldrtaking. He tampered with sume of the erent poople, whe tired of the reins of the $1^{\text {mishim, of of the }}$ manter in which be lich them, und instigated by the lappo of ginin from the apoils of the severmment, determined to farour his phan. Amengst these wats the shoik. Withont the concureme of su eapital a porsenages it is mot prohable that the Armat. would lave matiotaken this enferprise. Late ono woning, he handed the sernter put of his ctow, under the walls of what the Monsw cull the Spanish enstle, nt the decayed bart of the fortilications, anl taok passession of it.
wn chicf, in lhe Sultans. te Pasha of dank eopper budes tarker mitries at a $\therefore$ in the city te. To each uls a viceroy 1 districts ir a (ly-ic) pasha. crenting the to those guvet going oul ely neecestily: ch are then, the people. - posiss, they at, and have Muots, who me tronblethese katida-
 the Ateshiah seliet lan, aml is catled the : priest, tum it be sjolated der within out, by his nun, lut he sithertmom at lripul, : wished for, or the firist ras mure real red it this 3) which hatal in Amant, a (Jusultan. ive and six is connmum, is ionts, sumeSowermament. in, wats still, liny poplo
 1, wiolna, :thl 1 dat a jart : 116 がafow rity easy of Bllomjtilltg, " Tripoti by a cmamitteil m: yilued, he this strmuge dis the grent 4, of of the ated by tla ment, deter. dee what the pordd have wrining, le the watls of the decnyred wivion of it.

The gums on thet side, which had lain neglected and out of use for years, exactly commanded the pashits palace. These the Arnauts immediately set abont putting in order. The port-holes since that time have been filled $n$ p, and no guns placed on that side of the eastle. This fort being left without a proper grard, the Armats found an easy admission. They got into it unobserved, and immediately proceeded to place in it a great quantity of ammmition from their ships, and aboni ten ofolock at night, during the hamadin, when all the great Meors were assumbled in the coflee bazaar, the chief Arnant sent one of his people with a message to his friend the sheik, and ordored the man to take particular notice aml bring word latek who of the great people were at the bazaur. This mar, probably intoxieated and not dearly moderstanang his master's projeet, when hee got up to the sheik, who was strrounded by everyborly of consequence in the place, was struck ly a most extravagant idea, and white he was delivering his message, seeretly pulled out a pistol, and whot the sheik dead at the instant. Such of violent step, of course, spread a generd alarm. The man was despuitehed at once by the hamdes of the perple rombl him. The greatest part of the Armants wore immediately cut to pieces; the est saved themsulves hy flying on word the ships in the greatest disorder. 'Iheir chid' eseaped, after several hours, to one of the Christian houses, where be remanest concealed some lays, and afterwards by the help of a disguise got into al vesmel.

The hanses of the princijul propsle of Tripoli difter from those ot Fuypt, which, according to the customs of the cast, are mostly lmilt three amb form stories high: hare they never "xeed one story: You tirst pass throuth a sort of hall or lodyro, called by the Moors a skitlih, with bonehes of stome on meh side. From this as staireane leads to a single gramel aphetment, termed a ghl-phat or sky light, which luss (what is not fermited in my other purt of the building) windurs tiveing the street, This aproment is sacred to tho master af the mansion. ITape ho holds his leven, transats bu-iness, and enjoys convin ial prorties. None even of his own family dare enter this gat-phar, withut his particular lenve; and thongh this seoms aditrury, yet a Mondish lanly may, in this one instance be said to equal her lowl in power, as ho camot enter his wite's apartments, if he fimels a pair of hady's Nippurs on the ontside of the doon, but most wait till they aro romoved. Liegond this lall or halge, is the coart-yand, parmed in propertion to the fortume of the owners. some ate of a brown coment, reambling finely-polished mable, whers ame of hark of white Tho honses, cither small or large, in town or eomitry, are lailt raxetly on the samo plan. The court-yurd is made use of to receive large femate eompanies, onter. tained by the mistress of the honse muni the eclehration of a marriage, of any other great feast, and also, in cases of death, for finmal eeremonies performed belore the decoased is moved to tho grave. On theso ocensions, the thoor is covered with mats and T'urkiy earpets, and is sholtered from tho indemeney on' heat of the weather by un awning, eovering the wholo yard, for which the Moors sometimes incur grent expense, Richsilk enshions are inid romnd for seats; the valls aro hung with tapestry, and the whole is converted into a grund sala. 'This court-yurd is surrounded by a eloister', supported by pilhus, over which is gallery is erectod of the same dimensions, inclosed with a lattiec-work of woorl. From the eloisters and gallery, duors open into large chambers not commmieating with ench other, and which receive light only from this yard, 'The windows have no glass, but are furnished with jalonsies of wood euriously cut: these windows produce a gloomy light, boing admitted through spaces a purarter of an iuch wide, and crossed with heavy bass ot jron; and as they look into an inward court-yiml, they are woll ealculated to calm the perturbated minul of the jenlous Moor. The tops of the honses, which are all that, wre covered with plaster or cement, and surrommed by is parapet about a foot high, to prevent anything from immediately falling into tho strect. Upon these ternces, tho Moors dry and prepure their figs, raisins, and dates mud datepaste. They enjoy on them the rotreshing inhat. or seralireve, so laxumbis atter a parching day, and are here saen eonstantly it sun-set, oflerimes their devotions to Mnhammad; tier let a Moor be whipe he may, when he hars the matrabut monnee the prayer for smiset. nothing induces him to pass that moment wirbout prostrating himself to the ground-a circimstance surprising to Europens, if they hapen to he in company with Moors, or walking through the streets at that hour. From tho terraces the rain water tills into eisterns heneath the eourt-vird, which preserve the water from year to year in the highest pertiection. No other soft water is to bo lndel in this comntry. There are immmerable wells. Fresh water is everywhere fomed near the suthee of the earth, but all if it is brackish ald iil-iliwomed,
'There are no livers near, mul eonsequently a long detith of ran may possibly oceatsion it playte. 'The rains fall incossantly for many days and nights, and ceasing suderly, not a drop morn if water deser mals for severil months together. The inside of the cisterns is male of a composition resembling mombe, and often oeenpies as much gromid as the size of the enort-vame.
 neme of the Smdinnary, is new the midde of the town, guard. 'this aga sende a party ut sohbers thromen the town, moompantiod by a pack ot dogs in a starved state, who save the mom the tronhbe of pmoning the people they wish to tuprehend, for with a wom the doges rush forward, neize the intortumate victim, and keep bim pinioned to the gromm till the gamds cone up.

One of tho handsomest of the Monmish finduls of ims is vory laren, with a spuner une in which is a well and ag gibya, os minh reservois for water, tor the comvenionce of the Moors to wad in ledoro prayers and meals. Rionnd the mea is a mumber or suall rooms. etach for the goods or mordianatias of the person or persons who may sleep in the apartments over it. The enmels, horeses and males of tho travedlers are maged romud the yat. When a stanger arrives, it Dloer dusts the Hoor of an empty rom, mol spreating fomt, whieh is all the duruiture allowed, leaves tho guest in quict possession of it. Those whe ean alfiend it, we expected on quiting it, to leave a small gratnity to the prorter, and none ean get ont or into the tameuk till the ndan, or dawn of day, when a Moor undecke the gates, The batho, which aro lange, aro buite clitetly of mathe, and every hom in the day till sum. erowded with ladies, who go there also to ado:
persons. They take their tirewonen mad slat .ion them. Each lady requires several attendants after she has bathed; one of her women washes her hair thoroughly with orange-llower water, and mother is rendy to dry it with a plowder she has just prepared of high seented pritumes, composel of burut nuber, cloves, cinumon, and musk. She divides or plaits the hair into suall tersses to the number of at least fiftya long operation, giving a great dend of pin; and additional sufferingi aro endured from the plueking out with an instrument all the meven hairs of the oyebrows, and then painting with the greatest nicety the eychrows and cyelashes with a black composition lail on with a silver or gold boulkin.
The people of 'Tripoli procure gold from the sands of the Syrtis. Their mode of procedure is to gather up, handfuls of samel, put it into a woenten howl, ind wash it with several waters, till all tho sole, which is so much havier than sand, remains at the bottom. This resilue is then tiel in little lis.s if rags of alomet the size of a small nut, and hrought in that state to 'Tri1mi. Thesen sumall pareds are knewn by the mane of mit tagal. Their an rage value is allum that of a bemerian sempin, or then shat lings and sivpenmor The merehants melt them intomars or ingote. It is ubyimes that if the. proeess of ohtan. ing gole troun samd hy nema of quicksilver, and reeowering the ruicknilw r by distilatien was known, that a much greaterepartity might in whtained.

On : apmaching the rasile of the pailat, the first intrenchnents wre passel, escorten ly the pashis bodr-gnaris. The easthe is smremuded fy a wall upwards of finty fout high, with battlenents, emfirmures and lewires in the whm maner of firtitications, inal is of ancient architerture, mueh disfigured on the inside loy irregular additions made by the dit: terent pashats to conking the momeroms bramehes of their hamilies. Ilaving pased through the gate, you enter the tirst court-yini of the castle crowled with gnards, waiting hetore the skilliur or hall, where the Kayah sits mill days. This is the highest oflicer helonging to the pashan the mant in lis confilmes. Hu, is investeal with sureme fower wherere the ibsha is absent. No subject can apuruach the pushat on any allairs but throngh him. I number of buards with Hack slaves and mamelukes attend him. Through this hall is a paved spuru with a piazza supportel hy marble pillars, in which is lmilt the messeles or council ehamber, whero the pashat reecives his court on gala diays. It is finished on the outsile with Chinese tiles, a number of which form an entire painting. $\Lambda$ flight of variegated marble steps lead np, to the don of it. The mburr, or royal land, performs with great ceremony lefere the dow of the messeley every atternoon, when tho third marabit annmuces the prayers of hazero at fiur oclock, and on the whole of Wednesilay night, locing the eve of the pasha's aceession to the throne. No one on any necount ean pass the music while it plays, and the pashic's elia-mses must nttend during the pertormance. The mular is never played but for the parha und his eldest son, when they go out with the nrmy, or on my public oecasion. Before it legins. the chinf oreapitain of the cha-nses, whe, in this instance, must $1 n$ emsidered as athe. rald, goes through tha' ceromony of proelaming the Pasha atresh. "Tha sommentitine monar are singulas to mo Euronamear: thy ary composed oit the turlukk, an mut of kethe-dre: the rend, anul ti. bimbrel; the tublouka belongs to the Mews, and the Foed and timber to the Macks.

Tha numeroubuildings alderl to tha matle form sen veral strects, bx yonl whinh is the ingonio whew tho Christimalawesatre kept, There are a number of Malthese, tinnowsi, nud Spanish within it, but mone of any other mation.
No gentlcmon are permitted to approach nemer the harem. or ladies' aportments, than the bugnin: honee ladius ure comducted hige eumehs thromgh long vaulted passuges, sin extremely dark, that it is with geat difliculty the way ean be discerned. On intering the harem a wriking gloom prevails. The comrt yard is grated over the tup with hawy iron hars, very elose together, giving it a motanchuly ypparance, The galleries romed the court-yard, hefore the chambers, are inchsed with lattices ent very simall in wond. The pheha's daghters, when maried, have soparate npartments saered to themselves: no person can entor them lut thir hashauds mad at temdants, eumuchs nud slaves; and if it is neerssary for the ladies to aponk in presene of thimed person, even to their husham, lather, or

im. Through

 supported hy eley or council court on gialia Chinuse tiles, ing. A flight the don of it reat ceremony tornom, whin s of lazzero at huestiny night, to the throne. unsie while it end during the ed but for the out with the y , or on thy lic occasion. orr it begins, clief or entitinu ther cin-ukes, , in this inice, must in siderol is a lop1, giex through ceremony uf claiming ther hatiresh. Tho ndxut tin mulair siugular to mat opmaner: thy romposed of turholki, il sort ettho-drov: tha 1, nimi th. tim1; the turtmoka mis. to the ors mid the 1 nand timbord hee hiaks.'lu: numernis dinges alded to castho form sin Il streets, be 1 which is the nio wher the istimu davesarn 'Tlem" aro culter of Malfiomonse, nal tish within it, mon of any r nation.
proach nentur thu lagmin: through long at it is with Hed. On inrevail. The ary iron bars, ly the chambers, n wond. Tho cparate nartan entor duem lis und slaves; hik in pusence all, fither, ar hrother, they must veil themseives. The great number of attendants filling up every avenne, renders it almost impossible to proceed from one apartment to amother.

In the year 1714, one Hamet, a native of Carnmanin (Kinaman), in Asia Minor, and hence dexigmated is the Karmuma, and surnamed by the Moors Hamet the Great, who was Bey or Prince of Tripoli, mate himself master of the phate during the tenporary absence of the pasha, iny putting all the Turks who were in che eity to death.? He contrived, without any disturbuce, to clear 'lripoli, in the space of twentyfinur hours, of all the Turkish soldiess, amounting to several hundreds of diseiplined troops. At his palace, not far from the town, he give a superbentertanment, and invited all the chiel's of the Turks to partake of it. Three hunded of these unfortumate victims were strangled, one ly one, ats they entered the skillinf or batl. This skillar is very long, with sumbll dark rooms or doep recesses on cach side, in which a hidden guturd was placed. These guards assassimited the Therks is they prssed, quiekly eonveying the looties into those recesses out of sight, so that the next Turk saw nothing extmordinary going on when he entered the fatal skilliar, but 'quitting his horse and servants, met his fate unsuspectingy.

Next blay, the Turks who remained in this eity, were (no doubt ly order) fomul mardered in all parts, and little or no inguiriss were mate atter those who haid perpectrated such horrial deeds. Only a few stragghing lumks remaned to tell the dreadinl tale. (ireat presents were sent by the pash:1 to Comstminople to aplease the Sultan, and in a day or two no ne dared to talk of the Tiukish sarrison, which, in a fow ho: res, had beren totally immihilated. Having in this dreadfal manare fieen himedt:men his fimity from tho Turkish yoke, and lawing snceeded in keeping the Sultan in lumom, he caused Tripoli to remain entiredy maler :a Morrinh govermment, lim which the Moors stitl eall his reign glorims.
Tho great mospue, in which is a gram manolem for the reinhing timily, is hy far the handsomest in this city: the rest are neat, but very inferion to it. The Aloors oblige crerybody, women as well as men, to go ower it hareforted. They take their shas suti at the entramee, ind hetiver then to their servants. This custom ut taking of their shoes at the door is of less consenuence, as the thoor of the muspue is rutirely covered with lanutibl mats, over whith are late rich Turkey earpats, Tha huihing is large, loty, and ahuest square, The walls, to within three fiet of the eeiling, we lited with hambsno tigured chima thes phat mathmy: the eceling is mamented in tho same mamer. The sixtren marhe colums lave thin the other, and forming a lacge checkwork through the are suspendent in fertuons antigue lamps with hans siluer clmins, some of thenn very large, with silver

1 Kammanis, the capitaif of whede is Koniyah, the ancient Iconiun, wis the seat of the Stljulian Empire, nuf the chief chicfs rose fintu power at Brusa, mad entemded thadr empire thence to Aidriample and Constantinople. We have, at Tripuli, 1 remarkable remmant of 'Turkomm, net 'lurk, origin, in the Rall- oflith, "sone of the servant" (of "Iral), who ronstitnto the chlef 1 peprataHon of the ceuntry hmonedintely' romad the city, nud are, in tharon du Kratf"s worda, "la pherre d'adopqument de toutes les tentatives d' bodégendarer natombe."
filagree vessels for incense, and printed eggs liung on silken cords. On three sides of the mosque are squaro bow windows grated with iron without glass. On the side towarl Mecea is a pulpit of marble resembling ilabaster, with a flight of tourteen steps, inelosed with i marblo balustrade: this pulpit is covered with Chinese tiles. Over it is a small alabaster dome, supported by four white marble pillars which rest on the pulpit, and the outside of this dome is entiroly covered with gold. Near to this pulpit is a small arehed recess or nielee in the wall, to whieh the imam descends riom the pulpit to pray, with tho sheikh on one side of him, und the kayal on the other. The Imam ulways prays with his face towards Mecea, as other altars are opposite to the east. Thero is no seat, bench, or restingplace in the mosque.

The window's on two sites look into a eloister which smrounds the mosque: on the third side they open into a neat white stone building resembling a mosque in aplearanec, but which is the masoleum enlled the lurbah. It is filled with handsome tombs ot ail the rolations of the royal fimily, exeepting those who have died oat of town, as it is against the laws here fior a corpese to he hronght in through the gates of the city, though all are earried out of tho gates of the eity that die in town. 'The Christians' burial-gromel is close ly the satiside withou the marine gate : there is nu way to it from the coumtry but throngh the town, and the corpse eonsequently camnot be carried there, but by crossing the sui befure the harbour's month. If is Christian die in the country, fond of money as the Moors are, there is no sum that would prevail on them to let the body prass the gates; no resomee remanis lat a sea-vogage to procure its interment.

To returu to the Turbah or "dome:" it is throughont of the purest white minlle, and is tilled with an immense quantity of fresh flowers, most of the tombs being dressed with festoons of Arabian jasmine, and lage bunches of mariegated flowers, consisting of orme, myrtle, red and white roses, de. Thay nflod a fragrany which those whe mer habituated to such choice dowers can searcely conceive.

The tomas are mostly of white marble ; a few being inhide with colomod marble. Thero of the men are distinguisherl fiom the women's only by a turban carved in marble, placed at the top.

As the windows of the great mosquo ture very low, and mule verp, the light is everywhere ditint, whiel ahls much to the solemmity of the place, and nifords a most pleasing relie from the stronge glare of light without, Wwing ta the partimes of irauge-flower water, incense, mul musk, uhled to the groat qumatitios of tresh thowers, and the ogremble coolness of the pates, on our entering it from tho loming, clusty street, it seomed to ns a sort of purulise. Its extroordinary meatness, molemnity, und delicions ociour, struek torcibly on the imagimation.

An binglish luly, to whon we are iudebted hor letters written dhring a tan years' residence at the court of Tripoli, in tho latier part of the last century, gives the follow'ug narrative of a visit to a garien, in the neighlourhood, as also of the lant days of Hanet the Grent.

During the absenee, at Moroeco, of tho mubassathor from Irijoli, his son, who is abont twenty-five yeas of nge, invifed a party of Christimns to his finther's comery residenee, tho grounds of which, owing to the taste of itsowner, who has visitel most ol tho counts in litroner, eggs loung on pue are squaro lass. On the le resembling inelosed with covered with er dome, suprest on the tirely covered 1 arehed recess deseends trom de sile of him, always prays tiurs are oppoch, or restingeloister which ide they opun ling a mosque rum ealled the mins ot all the boso who lave as here for a es of the eity, $f$ the city that cound is cluse : there is mo the town, and there, but by nouth. II : money as the evail on them e remains but is thronghont thon immense tmon being ne, and lange ng of orange, atloud a fra uated to such
; a few being the men are by it turban
"ure very low, + hint, which and athords n of light with. flower water, quantities of of the plate, asiy street, it extmordinar. truck foreillis ted lim letters the court of ury, gives the trilen, in the of Hanet the 10 ambassubler $y$-five yents of ther's comutry o the taste of its in Burope, re in muel bettor order than any of tho plantations near it. It is a wilderness of sweets, beneath thick arange groves, through whieh the sun's beams but fantly shine. White marble ehamels with rapid elear streaus of water oross the gardens in many directions; and the air in them is fraught with the scent of oranges, roses, and Arabim jusmine, whose thick shade forms an agreenblo contrast with the burning atmosphere survonding them. In the eentre of the largest garden, nearest the honse, is a most pleasint gul-phar, Britt a considerable height from tho gromel. The tloor, walls, and wimlow-seats aro lined with Clinese tiles of lively colours: the windows are placed round it, through which honeysuckles, orange flowers aml jasmine make their way. The shrubs retheet throngh them everywhere tho most lively green, and fill the whole with the riehest perfume.

These ghl-phas are for the use of the master of the nansion and his friends, as they canmot visit him in the dwelling-lamse on aecount of the femalo purt of the timily, who mre, therofore, never expeeted ; but the ladies of this limily dor not confine themselves to that rule, and it is feared that some fital eonsequence will result to them for trespassing, in so many instanees, the narrow limits of indulgence allowed to Moorish hadies. 'The ambassador's son spoke Euglish, talked much of his sister, but in a manner that spoke his fears for her, and his disapprobntion of her eonduct. It has heen ahrealy observed, that it was apprehemed her miclo would put hee to death. An event which appears to us of such comomity, takes phee here without hesination or inguiry. 'Tho hend of the house, whether tather, brother, or hashand, heving the power of life and death relative wo the female part of his fimily, has only to get a teskem of the prosha, whieh is a sumal! hit of puper with his signatme, giving lamo to the furon who repuires it, to put to death the olgeet ot his anger ; mul this fatal priper is procured with the greatest facility.
This ambissmber, a few yours since, possessed a fivonato Cimensimu shave, who lived at a gaven a little distanee from the fimily resilence. He thought her eombet reprenensibe, and atter having often threatmeyl and as often parioned hor, sho at length fell a victin to the rase of a Manduko belonging to hev lorid.
This wretel wis an onemy to his muster, and an msucersedial monime of the titir C'ireassian. Itmang that his master was engigem at an entertaimment given ly the Christima, he eamo to lim late in the evoning. and wo:ked on lis immambion till the fietal twand was obtained. 'The Mancluke immerliately rouk off all speod to the ginden where slo resided, mul hat dapured ont the wrotelad errami thit a fow momenta, When tho visible alteration and the arnay is the comartemmer of the ambassmelor, led his friends stan to the sthersition of the cruel orders ho had issurd, mad he was easily persmmed to combtrmand them. Ho sent horsemen with every indnement given them to wer tako the sangunary Mamelake, mul arrost his hand from thommater ho was so enger to perpetrate. 'I'hey reneled the gariden a few secombs ater him; lut be, knowing of " hemeld in the garden wall, hat, nesenssin. like, miterd that way to prevent alam, mad fomed the fiar Cibeasbian walkingsolitarily lo the garilen nt that hato hour. At tho sight of hime she fled, having long considered him as hue destined murderors. sho, in hir top of them. Those who were sent to save her siaw her 'im in vain. They forcod the gates and entered them ; in the meanwhile, twice thicy heard a pistol fircd, and soon after the dying groans of the unfortunate female, whom the Mamelnke, to prevent exphamations, hat stabled to death, after having discharged two pistols at her.

The ambassator having given orders for her death in a moment of despair, and from necustions against her which ho probably thought exaggerated, seems never to have been happy since, and from the aceummlated anguish he sudfers through the combuet of the ladies of his own family, it is generally supposed that he will not return to this eountry. Jo is eonsidered as extremely tenacions of his honour, free trom bigotry, and possesses an enlightened understanding. The two latter qualities disqualify him for comforts in his own conntry.

Not fur from this nombassador's gardeus are the rumains of an old building, called tho castle of Lillit Zanobin, it laving remmed in her possession after the death of her fither, Ilamet the direat. It wiss within this century a very gram! prlace, where tho cond of that sovereign was kept ; in one cormer ot the gavlens belonging to it is a very large nomud of earth, covering the berlies of several humbed massatered Turks, who wero huried in that sport at the time her fither sulmhed the Torkish marison. This is the pabee the 'lurks wers invited to hy Hamet the Grat and mondereal. Tho fatal recesses in the skitfin, which were the beepptacles of the murdered limeks, aro still entire, in is the skitior throngh which the 'linds passend in their way $t$ o the interion of tho palace. Lilla Vombina has lecen dead many years, and the building las boen begheted, and sublied to go to min. It is said that I'urkish ghosts holl here theirmidnight hame am rewhes. The Moors say it is su fill of such company, that there is no room for any othes. There are lut a few wit the inferior aparthents, and one prand room (said to he that where the pashe give andience) still stmulines. It is withont lhow wr root' ; the walls have some rematins of paint ing still tiesh in colour, mud many ornaments are yet visilile; tunt jart of the teding lies in the midhe of this spitcions rom, grown over with grews: the etter atre immensely larigo amb formidable. lhaving explored every pat of this ruined eastle that was pmsable, wo returued to the monassador's simdens to tako rofieshments: thither the Ghristhas' servats hand arrived, with the romment of suelt provisions as they hat ward from ther enger grasp of thatimished Moors. The city hand been long diatrosserl fine com, ami a considerable mul nif erkol the lomed mukes as th, weme passing throngh the town gate. In n fow montiones no ratables who lift, except some tow hishes of pork, a lool whieh Hop true Massahann hoks an with homer: the rest was seizel live in umber of huger wretehes, who tores was lost lut entubles- finod was all they contented fier. They fought togetluy fine the crmmbs fhad foll on the Eromid; to such im cxtromity hat humer luourht them.

The starval olyeets we passenl this manning in the streets wrow sheking to hehold. A troni want ot min weasions this dremilinl distress for the prearot, amd makes usf ferm a fomune will some be at the Joight here, Whith sumply, of all ealamities is the mest homid: the grent mast pay for it, lunt what the prow will sulliev must agonisa , very beding lownt.

During our ride we were struck with the singular appeazanee of the comtry at a small distance from town. 1n Barbary; the burying-places are out of the eities, in the munner of the meients; and the numerous lurying-grounds, from the shape of the tombs, resemble roots of lionses, and appear like little towns in miniature. The large mansolemms, belonging to people of distinction, represent capital buildings, proportionate in size to the little towns by which they are surrounded. In some of them lights are kept eonstantly buming, with the ehuierst flowers, the fragraney of which strikes you on approaching the tombs. The umucrous Moorish gurdens apperred to he so many woods of oranges; and these, added to ditacher plimtations of olives and dates, formed a seene totally different to what is met with near the capitals of Europe. We alighted at a farm: the ladies were admitted into the house, where we hat fresh and sour milk, and dates juit gathered from the tree of the most beautiful transparent brown, and having the appoazane and taste of fruit preserved in the highest mamer. Some of the same refreshanents were procured to be sent to the genthemen in the garlen. The Mours were olliged to secure a camel, which with mueh dithenlty was prevented atticking our howes while they stood in the yarl; though the camel is, with very fow exerptions, preffectly mild, this having a young one mainle to feed itself was the canse of its ferocity. The eamels" milk is hrank here bemsumptive pople : it is extremely walt and ill-tlawoured, richer than cows' milk, and of a red colour. The young camel, when a few wecks ohl, is remarkable hambome. Nothing ean be more distressing than to hear its cry at that age, as its woice then so esaetly rescmiles the cries of a yomg chind, that it is impussible to be distinguished fiom them. When they are grown no, their voice in very loud and rough, and when ungry, they make a particular rattling in the thront that camot be mistakem. which is a lacky ciremustamer, us it is a warnimg of their int ation to hite: for, from the size of theis mouths, and their mever wearing a muzale, a bitu is nearly fatal. Fortmately, they ure, in gemeral, su inoflensive and tratahle, that they commenly go without bridle or hatter, amd a single straw in the band is witen the only weann und to dhive them aloms with a burien of nine humbred-weight.

The dremediary seems to be need in this comutry moly for the contio or post. The Manss never dress their eamels with bells, as is dune mewher' and Asught these mimals haw no emulation lor dress, they are evidenty phensed, and basten their stepse when aceompaniel ly thir mastorns song ; they, therefore, fing to them while they drive them. This useful pationt mimal will sinstain many days' thirst when traversing, haty lador, the burning samb; but in town, where it is conder, and during the winter, he can whan some wecks withont drinking, living on tho water he has within him, preserved in a raervoir, whence he converss it intot the stominh at pleasure. 'The last timo the bry was encampul, in camel wits plened for the water it eontaned, when reverat gallons were fiumd in a perfect state. Jhe camp was at that time in want of water, the people having is very short allowance of it, and dying daily, when the bey mand use of His costly expedient, us in candil is very valuallo. Pine Hesh is enten by the Neurs, and they sily it is exceme ingly goond.
Continuing our ride to the sunds, we hail a distant view of two of the most eapital mosques in this kingdom, situated at some distance in the desert, where criminals take ahelter, and are safe as long as they can stay in a certain district round them. This distriet extends to $n$ yuarter of a mile, and sometimes to two or three miles, according to the mosgue it helongs to, and canuot be violated even by the pasha. All pervons maly bo mprehended if seen in the aet of procuring food for the enlprit, in which ease he is either starved to death or foreed by hugger to surremder. Ono of the marabuts we salw to-day is called the sayid, the history of which is relatell by the Moors with a number of fietitious circumstances. The word sayid, whieh in Arabie means lion, was given to a Moor, who, with little more assistance than his own courage and strength, drove all the limes from that purt of the eountry, and his sum was the marabut of this place. The name of marabut is given both to the mossue and to the saint, or haly man, whor revides at it; and the simple story of the sayid, related as a faet, is us follows :-

Hamet Pusha went, as customary, on particular wecasions, to visit this mosque or marabut. In the hury and confusion of the fauily of the sayill, ciuring the visit the pasha honoured them with, and in leringing him all the refreshments in their power to prucure, he got a momentary sight of the marabut's ehdest daughter, said to be sue of the most leautiful women at that time. Hle was so much struck with her apleatamer, that he direetly told the maralut his fortune from that hour was made ly sending his danghter immediately to Tripuli, as he was determined she slomble be the tirst laty in his seraglio. Tha aged and religions marabut, tiar fiom being plased at the honoms ollered him on such terms liy his sovereign, "xpostulated, and marle great objections to his orders, when the comaged !asha told him, that it he did not semd hi: daughter richly dressed and perfumed to the seraghion that very night, by morning there should nut remain a vestige of himsilf, or my part of his family. Saying this, ha idy partel, amblett guards to sen his meders "xachted.
The mitiortumate manabut, unable to extricate limsulf or his hot child, haided her with gold and jewels, and dressed her in the richesit chothes she hail; she having nespuieseed in his wishes of taking a dradly potion to atse her from the vinlence of Hanet lamhes passion. He wept wer lar and leal her to the done of his house, when he owlered the britial song to he sump over her beline she guitted hor home.' He then placed her in a linen conch on the hatek of a camel handsomely amamentel, sum as tia latios of this comentry tract in, ani gave her in, with tears, mill heavy impreat tions wh the pasha's heal, to his oflieers.
A mumeroms suite of attembants, in adlition to thos. the pasha had heft, arrived to conduet her to the castle. On her arrival there, she was immediathly cerriol to the ruyal anartments, where not lons ather the pallat masteried to reerive her. But on entering the romu he was struck wit! horror and surprise on pereriving is beautiful ruppse stretched on the lhane, stitl' and coll. He thmid not the least mark of vindence upmin lier, and he knew no me hand beem sutbered to mier the apart. ment alter her arrival lat himself. The had probaldy :Hend of the cowes her hather sient him, lyy the nttembints, who came witis her, which did not tial, with

[^1]ues in this kinghe desert, where : long as they can This district netimes to two or it lelongs to, and All persons may roeuring frod for starvel to death mo of the mariid, the history of a number of fictiwhieh in Arabie , with little more rength, llove all ', and his sem wist 10 of marabut is he saint, or lowly ple story of the on particular neit. In the hury sayid, diuring the and in bringing ir to priseure, he ehlest daughter, women at that her : aplearatuce, ortune trom that $r$ immediately to mild be the first ligions marabut, ©iftered him on latel, and male we embeged pasha daughter riehly that very night, vestige of himhis, he sheplateel, ted. , extricate himgold naul jewels, x whe hatl ; sla taking a dradly - Hamet Pashil's or to the dund of song to be sump Ho themp platel mel hiandsmely 3 country travel hervy impreatdidition to thos ere to the castle. ittely curriel to atter the pailhaz ing the rom lie on previving: ; stifl wal cold. e upon luer, and tinter the ipantTe haid 1 rolably bim, lyy the atil not tiil, with marriwh arv laried ts over tho curplise
the reproach of his own eonscience and the superstitious ideas of the Moors, to throw him into the greatest agitation, and he scemed to be nearly in the same state as the saerificel victim laying before him.
At the dawn of day, Hamet Pasha set off to the sayill, and asked the manbut if he conld any way account for the suddenness of his daughter's death? The mambut returned for answer, that his daughter had honour enongh to receive a deally poison from his hand thefore her departure from his house, and that now he had but one fivour more to entreat of the Prophet Muhammad, who had so mercifilly saved his chill in the moment of distress, which was, that he would strike him, Hamet Pasha, hlind. This misfortome aetually happened to the pashia four or five years before his death; but, in the fahle, tho Moors say it lappened at the instint the marinlut implored MLuhammat, and call it, of emuse, thi. reagenace of the sayiil. ]hat lamet the Great was adsancel in years when he lost his sight, and timeling from this mulhiply circomstaner lifs power decreasing mpidly, he determinei nut to chitlive lis ennse ynenee, and the great mame he had acquired numongst his sulyjects. He aptored himselt in regulating all he winhed to have dand letine hin wath, naming lis. (wne som Muhammatd for his strecesvir: : and immeliatoly atterwards ha whend une of the fonment puges of his guld ohar to attend him thither, where he sirent many hours in ment, the pasha desircol the page to give him his pistols. Aet, gres from two to three feet long. Wach bunch of Ine bid the youth stand elose ly lis side, and if one diates, which resembles monster bunches of grapes, fistol missal fire, to ho realy instantly to deliver the weighs trom twenty to thirty pounds. The tree grows "ther to himat the peril of his lite. The pashat shot nemrly a hombred feet ligh. From this tree the Arab himself dead with the tirst pistol, in the presence of his gathers the richst nomrishment tor his family, nud collected comogh to preveut the catastrophe. Bey cheers his spirits with that which has been longer Ambllah was at that time a chith about eleven years ohid. drawn. They extrate the juice from the tree by mak-

III.

 Onave thoves-hafs in time hamen-stone of had

On our way home we pussed through a street moted for its corn wells, or nather caverus, dag very deep) street of the consuls.

fot, extends fourteres
into the earth. They nre situated on cach side of the street, at about thirty yards distance. They were designed for magazines to hay $1 p$ eorn in ; and they say it will keep in them perfectly good a hundred yeurs. Happy were it for the inhabitiants of this comntry if these caverns were filled now as they were formerly, when the country was so rich in the produce of corn that it was hence exported to many parts of the world, and prized almost above any other. The barley, when sown here, yields twice as much as it docs in Europe. When it grows properly, they reckon twenty-five and thirty cars for one an ordinary produce, while in Europe fourteen or tifteen is considerel as a good return.
We have the use of a large Moorish country-house, ou the skirts of the sands; and though the grounds belonging to it are mot in the best mider, yet they are in the style of all African gardensmixture of beauty and desolation. The orange, eitron, and lime trees are in theis fullesthloom ; their branches, covered with tlowers, are at the same time bending down with the weight of truit ratly for gathering. The Arabim jasmines and viohets cover the Erouml; yet, in varions parts of the grimelen, wheat, bather, water-meloms, aud other still enarser, plants are indiscriminately finm growing The high liate tree, with its immense spreading bramoles is finitedround the gartens near the walls. Thebranches of this tree, which extends fourteen fret, grow from the top of it, furniNher with close dites, which resembles monster bumenes of grapes, weighs trom twenty to thirty pounds. The tree grows gathers the richst momrishment tor his family, mod ing three or tomr incisions at the top of it. A stone jur which will eontain a quart is put up, to each notels; the jars put up at night are tilled by the murniug with the mildest nud most pleasant beverage, and, on the coutriny, the contents of those jars which are put up in the marning and left till late in the day, become a spirituons trong drink, which the Moors render more pernicionsiy strong by adding learen to $i$. The tree will gieht this juice for six weeks or two months evory day; and, adter the senson, if taken care of, it recovers in three yeas, and bears better fruit than before it was blent, as the Moors term it. It is customary, in moble timilies to lavo the heart of the date tree at great tensts, such as wellings, the first time a boy moruts a linse, tho birth of a son, or the return of an ambassalor to his family; thus condemming this valnable tre from yidding further protit, for as timber it in of very lithe value. The heart lays at the top of the tree hetween the hauches of its fruit, and weighs, when cut ont, from ten to twenty pomuls; it is not fit to be taken out before the tree has arrived at the height of its perfection. When brought to table its taste is delicious, ant its appearance singular and hematiful. In colome it is composed of every shade, trou the deepest onange and bright wren (which lattere (wicompas ses it round) to the purest white; theso shades we delicalely inlaid in reins and knots in the manner of the most curions wool. Its flavom is that of the bana and line ; excpet the white part, which resembles more a prem amond in consistence, but combines as variety of exquisit. ) havours that camot be clescribed.
The inct diates, called by the Moors and Arabs tapunis, when fren wathered lave a cmadied, transparent appamene, fite surpassing in riclmess any other inuit. In thea garlens the Moors form no walks. ouly an irreguluy jath is left, which you trace log the wide of the numeron white narble chamels that cross it with rivulets of water, as I have before described to trees and slumins. The swet orange of harbary is reck mel hiner than three of China, both in flavour and leatuy ; tand the next best is at small red orange which gross at lin't almmet crimson within. Cherves me Lut known here: : and deatse and potatoes only when onltivatol by the Christims, Water melma, aty if ordered by prow idnce, are particularly excellent and plenciful. Masy we then lives to this cooling and grateful froit, whan andy expring through insupportahle hent. The pem memate is another haxions truit of this ematry. Thin دlours, hy pressing the juice tl:rough the rimy if it, proene an exquisite drink. The Indian and Turkey ligs are acknowledged to he extrenely whel hume Ther are two sorts of apricots; one which i renarkable for its large size and excellence, whih, the uther, with the musk melons and phature is wer indilereut. There are sueral sorts of fine phoms and whan ver hich-tlavempel sweet grans, which, if cultivated in griatities for wine, would rember this country rich in sineyarla, frem the wase and excellone of their prodnclion; lout Multammal las too exporsly forbidnen wine to Messonames to admit of its being mate in thair presence; for even the sight of it is $\mathrm{ra}_{\mathrm{j}} \mathrm{mg}$ matit to tho laws of the liomm. There are delightinh olize womd near us, hat when the olives are rije it is ineonveniche to walk under the trees an aecomit of the wives ematimally tilling liaked with oil. Fien to these wools are marble rescrvoirs to werive the oil the Moms's extract from the dives, and from these rereroirs they eolleet it into earthen jame ; it is as clear as ming water, aml very rich. The matives who em atlowl it are so delieatu in their taste of oil, that they allut it to thein servants when it bis berem made cight on uine monthe, and yet when a year ohd it whton surpassen the thenst Horenes oil. The walls which surroum the houses und gradens of the principal people, divide this part into a number of narrow roads in all directions; beyond them noo date trees, interspersed with fields of barley and high Indian corn. If to spaces of sand, seprated by olive plantations, sun-burnt peasints, and camels without number, are added a burning sum and the clearest azuro sky, a just picture may be formel of this place. The descerts adjoining, though singular in appearance, seem frightful from the frequent and recent examples we have hal of their victims. $\boldsymbol{A}$ party arrived from them yesterday so exhausted that they wonld have died on the road if they had not been instantly relieved by the Moors. Four of their companions had perished the day betore for want of water amd from tho excessive lient.
The gul-phars and best rooms in the country houses are sometimes telightfully relieved by a considerathe stream of clear thowing water, conductel in a marble chamel through the middle of them. The floors and sides of the apartment ave finished with coloured tile, and the ceilings carved and painted in Mosaic. In the inner conrt belonging to the house is a babiya, or reservoir, continually filled with fresh water from the wells near it, and which flows through it into the gardens; it is surrounded with a parapet of muble, and: flight of marble steps leads into it. There is only a broad walk left roumd it, which is pavel or terracel, and into which the best apartments belonging to the honse open. This circunstance afforls a reftenhing coolness to the house, and is most delightent durin: the extreme heat. (See p. 72.)
The lifo and adventures of a Georgian beante, it related ly the lady beforementioned, a men relativen Mr. Consul Tully, will serve to give an ifer of the position of females in a Mnurish seraglio, far mure satisfactorily tham any amonnt of description. 'The fortunes of the young Gicorgian, and which are eommon to most of tho temales providen for the harems of the great, derive alditional interest firom the cirenustance of her having been wite in Haji Anderahman, a Mhorish ambassador wha residel some time in England, and was reconductel to Trijoli lye Captain mow Admiral Smyth.
This Georgian lady related the crents of her life in the most interesting inanner. Wa saw her by appointment: she was evidentlydressel with stwied attention, aud looked particularly lematiful. She wears the Moorish drese, not by choice but. compulsim, as she olserved with a sigh, that sho was compelled to lay axide the Georgian halit when sho embriced the Muhamman faith, wh the day sho was murriol. She haud disumben with as many ot the Mourish artificial additions to her dress as she combl. Iner jowels wem brilliant fromebeng al! polished (the Morish ladies often wearing them in a rough state), and what other arts she hat nsel were not in "position to nature, lat suceesstully comployed to improve her apearanee; lont any compliment pail to her person semed much to distress her with the mhaply recolleetion, ns she termed it, of her beanty, at the timo Ahberraham purchased her. Her expressions of regret on this wecasion, puerile in :nother, proceded antirely from lere eluseation. She is sensible and ambiab, of a sury fine dighere, tall, with blan eyes and bemutiful sumil white tecth, Her comonenace, though lively and spirited, is the piet meo of innocene itself. Shar was as superbly drest us the Monrish costumo would permit, and hail for the outer covering a blue tramarent bintam, fistened at the shonllors with a lakge eluster uto n number of ad them aro date $y$ and high Indiau i by olive plantawithont number, rest azuro sky, a ace. The deserts we, seem frightful es we have had of them yesterday died on the roat red by the Moors. $d$ the day beiore sive lieat. te eomintry louses y a considemalie sted in a minble
The floors and itll coloured tiles, Mosatic. In the a babiya, of rewater from the it into the garrof mamberand: There is ouls :a wed ar terraced, belonging to the rds is rutreshing delightitul durin!
rgitm beante, in a neal redativen an idea of the eraglio, far hure lescription. The liel atre commont he hitrems of the min tlo ciretu. ji Alelerrahman, a some time in (inli ly Captain ats of her lie in - ler by appeint thalied attention, She weats the mpulsinn, ats she fompelled to lay o embraced the as mariel. Shbe Iowrish artiticial Her jew ls wer o Moorish landies sul what othev ition to mature, her apmentane ; an seomed much rollection, us she c Abrerralinana - regreet on this al cutirely from ialble, of a way beantitul sumit mork lively ame clf. She was ns o would perinit, ac transpurent a large cluster of brilliants, with several rows of very large pearls hanging from it. She had double gold bincelets ou her arms ; her cap was entirely of gold, with a binding of black over the forehead set with jewels hanging over the face; and she had six large rings in cach ear, set with diamonds, peurls and other precions stones. Two black slaves remained at her feet the whole time we were with her: when she removed from ono place to another they rose $1 p$ and followed her, nud laid down at her feet again when she sat down: two other blacks eonstantly stood behind her. No Moorish lndy keeps up near so much stato as the Georgians and Circassians.

Abderralman remained a widower for a few years with several ehikdren, and, rather than take a wife amongst the Moorish ladies, preferved looking ont for a Georgian or Cireassian slave, thinking she would belave with more attention to his chiddren, throngh tho fear of being sold agiin, or $p^{\text {nit }}$ to death: he therefore deterninei to go hinself to the Levant to cloose one for himself, mul bring another with him for his neplew.
In his researehes he met with two sisters equally handsome. Their being so nearly related would have deterred many Moors from takiug them, from being both inteuded for one itmily ; but Aldervalman, ever benevolent und kind, anl milike the jealous Noor, hoped to exeite anfection hy becoming the constant theme of two so nearly related, if fertumate in hiss purchase ; and he determincel to wait tor a prof of this before marrying the Georgi:u he intended for himself, or persuading his mephew to marry the other. Strmato to relate, the hargeiti was male for both, in lee own hemring, with her fathur ; and her jutico was granter than her sister's, by possessing the tequirements of drawing, singing, and wnsic. Eptaal cire had been bestowed on their acconepthinments, for on these is placed a Georgian's lope on the birtla of a female infant. IIe views her ouly with the idea of future gatin, und beanty without acconplishments would maso her no higher in the market than a common slave. Divery merve is therefore stranal to excitenatural and artiticial graces, to make her excel in vocal and instrmmental music, in all elegant works, and oworgthing which enn med to the thescination of her preson.
She spoke with enthusiasm of hee country, as a garden in the richest quartere of the world, where the choieest fruits and flawers srow spontanemsly. The inhabitants make the tinest wines mul ats muel as they please, withont eonsmang lualf the grapes that grow without eultivation, amb overum their lills. Bite it was not without some enotion she described to us the hatd lat of her hambome countrywomen : born to a life of shaver, elotios awat them in the conde. In this, first atlecting state, the muntural parmit with innpatience views the rising beanties of her intint. Ebery srowing eharm tills her with mpture, but exeited by that maternal aflecticu which should ehameterise the unther, but inconceivable to believe, ly the sordid idea of how mueh gohl every heightencl cham will bring her, when here ehikl is jut up, to be bought by the best lidder. She expects offers from a number of ditlerent 'lurks who como to purchase these mbaply beanties, not for themselves, in which case the mother laving seen the man but for hours, might still recommend to lim the fate of lier onspuing; but no, the 'Iurk purehuses for the murelant he deals with, or worse, to carry her to the next market, where le expects n handsome profit on his fair prize by putting her up to sale to a crowd of crafty traders. Those fatir ereatures whose pruents may cherish fuelings uncommon to the generality of people there, or whoso vast riehes may make them deeline, or not think of selling their children, even those fow are exposed to a lot as bad or: worse, the they are frefuently earried off by parties of Turkish robbers, whomake iucursionsinto their country, to seize on such unhupy people ats fall in their way, und by that means procuro beantifinl women at a ohcaper rate. These sons of rapine watel for those who incantionsly stroll too fir in their walks aecomganied only by a fuw female attendants. They ride up to them in full speed, seize on their wretched prey, and placing them behind them like a bale of goods, ride off with the same celerity; all which they do too ruickly to admit of a diseovery in time to redeem the unhappy captive, who has frequently mang days' hamd travelling to undergo in this mamer, over barren deserts, before they reach any habitation.

These ruflians show their unfortunate victims no other indulgence than that of keeping them from from bruses and honger, and that from the motive of a cattle-driver, who considers that a bioken limb or a meagre appeatince would spoil the price of his beant: at market. But the hardship and fatigue these far creatures endure in this tirst of their journey oflea prove fatal to a frame too delicate to bear it, and tol, the plouderer of his prize.

The first moment he thinks linuself satio from pursuit, he ineloses his wretelod victim in a sack, which he carmies with him for that pruse, to preserve bee from the rays of the $\operatorname{sim}$ and other injuries:

Ammani is the Moorish name the Ciesprom received on her marrage with Abdermhnan. She wats about seventern, and her sister fonnger, when they embaked with lim from Alexandri:2. His attention at tirst was paid to her sister, and she horselt was neglected. On thuir arrival at Tripoli, her sister Ieheld with jerfeet indiflerenco the preparations making at Mbermalhmans for leer recoption, while Ammui conk not conceal her tears when the day was naned for her removal to the house of Sidy Mustaphin, Almbralnnan's nephew. The first stem look, she satil, she hat evel received from Abderndman, was on this weasion, whem be bid them both withuraw, and fier sureml days they heard no more of him. They talked over their misfortumes, and shaddered with the fear of beines whld again, partieularly Amman, who had reginded Abdermaman with purtinlity.

At their next meeting, lie presented her sister to his nephew, and desired Ammani to consider herself' as the mother of his children, and to prowe her regard for him ly ber attention to them. At this most haply peried of her hife, as she tomed it, her comrose almost forsook her : she fanded herseli altered in here presm, whieh semmed not yet to havo recovered fron the ravages di a sat vogage: she feared also a greater change trom iudenly quitting a life of lexurions citse, whero every indulaence and attention had been mont profisely allowed her. To kerp herselt cheertal, and impore her looks, reguired now hee utmost exertions, in order to comsince tho friends of Abdervalum, who wre her chemies, that she was wholly taken up with the charge of the fimily. All of them were very young, exepht tho ellest daughter, who was near her own ate, and a great livourito with her fither. The Georytan could not speak a word of Moorish, mad was besides a Christian ${ }^{1}$ brought into a barbarian family, where the only enlightened person she coull talk with was Abderraliman. Her first days were spent in endeaveuring to divert Abderrahman's vigilance from perceiving the many malicious traits she sufferel from the female part of his family, ins she thought his dis1) leasure, however excited, might only serve to irritute them, and eonsequently increase her own difficulties. Their continual visits, or rather examinations, she would glally have dixpensed with; und though she was treated, by Abderrahman's order, with every mark of attention, yet in her precarions situation, as his shave, she was obliged to pay the greatest deference to their counsels, though often against her interest, till she guined sufficient confidence witl him and Lillla Udueia, hisstaughtir, to lweome more the mistress of her own proceeding. Abuler. rillman simin atforled her this advantage : he seemed to think all he could purchase fir her was inadequate to her merit, :und insulficient to show his attachment to her ; and as a proof of the mubounded confidence he placed in her, he allowed her an iululgenlee quite novel to the Morrs, that of writing to her friends, :and reveiving letters from them; hut this wass inct granteil her till atter her marriage, which took phice, with sreat pomp, in twelve months atter her arrival at Tripoli, on the birtlo of a soll who i now living, and firr whon she contexes a distinguished fioudness, by the circumstance of hisbirth having so som termimated her captivity, madr her Ab dervahman's wife, and placed her on a level with the first laclies in Tripoli near the sovereign's family. Abrdmabman introluced her to his relations as a $\boldsymbol{j}^{\mu r s o n}$ to be respected as himself, and had her 1 resentel to lilla Kebliera, who, from $\Lambda$ belerrahman's long and finthitul serviess to the pasha, gave her a most flattering reception. Finding harself perfectly haply at home, a fayourite at the castle, above the jower of those who might wish to amoy her, and respuretell ly the comntry, she appeared now at the zenith of her hapliness, when

[^2]she received news from Ceorgia that her parents, by some unexpected losses, were reduced to tho greatest distress. Ammani regarded her father with the strongest atfection for the edneation he had given her, and almost lost sight of his cruelty in selling her. At this time Ablerralman, owing to a commencing searcity in Tripoli, whieh has prevailed ever since, felt, in common with others, a great deduetion in his revennes, and his increasing family made him very maxious to, lessen his expenses.

Ammani was encrous and timid, she brooded, therefore, over her fumily misfortunes in silence : her lyre was laid by, her

irrigation well. songs were checthess and her looks grave, and often an involuntary tem spoke her mhaply. She was not aware of the danger of her silence till she pereeivel it from Ab . ierrahman's looks. He hamenten the change in her manners, without inguiring into the tanse of it : this alarm(4) her, and she determined to acounint him immediately with the source of her grief, without selning to impuse on his liberality, which to her wamibomuld, nor to give up eavily her parrents, whose sutlerings slu coulh not beare to thiuk (1) withont arnyy.

Whike making ul her mind to this c $\times \mathrm{x}^{\prime} \mathrm{l}_{12}$ nation, Atslertihman waw mexpectedly nominated, fior the thind time, ambassalor t" Swerken. So sublen wats this embassy, that the dity he receiven the propusal fiom the fuisha, hefure his returu in this house, the hews of his appuintmenthad already reached the manapy Georgian, ant then nu amthassulor's flag was hoisted in the harhour for his deputure. Mo finmi her more dend than alive. She told him the cause of her first distress, hight in comparison to the present, in, tho short a time to explain it. He cantioned her to be aware of ollending him a seemal time, ly not making him her only contidential frimul. The fow hours that remained were obliged to be spent in :unliences will the Paslan and transicting Dnsiness, leaving a very short space of timo to take leave of hix fimily. To console Ammani for the distress she had brought herself into, on parting with her, le left her in his absence an unlimited power over all that belonged to him, mud entrinsted her to his brother, er parents, by o the greatest her with the had given her, ling her. At cucing searcity since, felt, iu a his revenues, ery anxious to she brooded, in sileuce: her s laid by, her were cheelless r looks grive, en an involunar nooke her y. She was not of the dauger silenee till she al it frem Alb. nan's looks. He al tho change mamers, withuiring into the it : this ahmmand she deterto acquaint him iatcly with the of her grief, 1 sceming to in lis liberahich to her wauled, nor to give ly her parents, sulferings slu ant bear to think howt arony. le making mp Abulerralhman nexpectedy nod, fir the third ambassnutur t" So sublen ombassy, that ay he receised fuxal from the ,efore his return house, the news pipintment hal renched the y Geerrgiau, and il ambassalor's as hoisted in urbour fir his ham alive. She , light in comtime to explain flenting him a nly contidential were obliged to nel transicting $f$ timo to take ni for the disutiug with her, power over all r to his brother,

IMAGE EVALUATION
 TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic
Sciences
Corporation

nuly to demand protection if wanter, but to be under no sulijection-a cireumstance most uncommon, as Moorish haties we generally exposed to the vigilance of the hushand's fitmily in his absence.
Not long after his departure, one of his favourite children, by the first wife, died. The Georgian dreaded, and with reason, that the different branches of the family would attempt to injuro her in the ambassador's opiniom, with respect to the mamgement of the child; hut, as she expressed it, their malice blunted its point against Ahderghman's heart, without piereing it. She negleeted (as is the enstom here) to break and destroy the choicest of the furniture or looking-glasses in her honse at the death of this ehild, for iwhich sho was much hlamed, and said to have shown great disrespect to the finuily. All her enemies had persmaded themelves that she had, "pon the whole, behaved so ill in his absence, that her destruction was inevitable at his return. Contray to their expectations, however, whew he arrivel, lilla Ammani was loaded with fresh frenents, her brother sent for from the Levant, and her fither and mother provided for. Abderruhman's attentions to her havo never in the least diminished, and she often expresses her gratitude that her firmer wishes were not realised of being disposed of to a sovereign; and with reason, when she compares her situation with that of the three pueens or wives of the late pashat at Tripoli, who are imprisoned, or obliged to live in the castlo for the rest of their duys.

Ship-luads of unfortminte blacks me frequently bronglit to Tripoli : they are carried to the lazaar; or markni house, where they are bought by the rich jeople of the plare, who occasionally sell then inmodiately to morehants waiting to re-ship theu for other parts. We this morning saw a mmber of them, as we wero soiug throngh the ianer court-yard to the harem of a Moorish house of distinction. Two remarkably fine figures anong some newly purebaserl blacks, a beatiful woman and a well-looking man, arrosted wir attention. By their gestures, it was easy to perceive they laboured under some very denp distress: the moment, therefore, our first compliments of meeting the timily were over, we inguired the history ot these mulapy people, and the reason of their present apmrent despair. Wo were told they had given a great deal of trouble to the merdiant's fandily, so that thoy were obliged to the watched day and night, and all instruments put out of their way, as they were at tirst contimully endenvouring tu destroy themselves, and sometimes each other. Wheir story will prove that there is friondship nud fidelity to be fomm even among savacos. The female, who is emininly beatifin for a black, is thont sixtcen, hor lani: long, full, mad shining like jet, bov teeth beatifisly even and small, and their whitencsis more wonderfilly striking from the contrast of her faee, which is of the deepest bhek complexion. ller statare is tall, and fullor than that of the haneks in general. She is estermed to be handsomer than myy one that has been brought here for years. 'This beanty (probably the admimation of her own conntry) lad bestowed her heart and her hamel on tho man who is now with her. Their mutials were going to le selebrated, when lee friends one morning missing her, traced her siteps to the oomer of an udjacent wood; nond immedintely uppreheming she had been pursued, and that she had flown to the thicket for sholter (the common sid last resource of escape fhom thone who scoured the country for slaves), thiy went directly to her lover and told him of their distress. He, without losing timo to scarch for her in the thicket, hastened to the sea-side, where his fireboding hewrt told him he should find her, in some vessel anchored there for the purpose of carrying of slaves. He was just easy enough in his ciremmstances not to be afraid of being bonght or stolen hinself, as it is in general only the mprotected that are carrien off by these hunters of the human race. His conjectures were just. He saw with distraction his. betrothed wife in the hands of those who had stolen her: He knelt to the robbers who had now the dianosal of her, to know the price they demanded tio: her ; but all he was worth did not make him rich enough to purchase his female friend, on whom the high priee of two hmodred mathoobs (near a hundred pounls) was fixed. He, therefure, did not hesitate a moment to sell his little flock of sheep, and the small lnt of ground he was possessed of, and then disposed of himself to those who lad taken his compmion. Hippy that they would do him this lnst favour, he eheerfully accompanied her, and threw himself into slatery for her sake. This faithful pair were sold with other slaves to the African whose honse wo were in. The womm was to bo sent off from this place with the rest of the merchant's slares to be sold again, she having, from her figure and beanty, cost too much money to be kept as a servant. The merchant ${ }^{\text {: }}$ eant to keep the man, on whom a much less price was fised, as a dumestie in his own fanily.

This distressed pair, on hearing they were to be separated, became frantic. They tlurew tiamselves on the ground in tho way of some of the ladies of the family, whom they saw passing by ; and finding it was the danghter of their mastel, they conld not be prevented from clinging ronud her to implore her assistance, nud their grief could only loe momberated by this lady's humame assmrace that slin would intercede with her father not to part them. The mastur, two compassionnte in so hard a case to make use of his right in keeping either of these unfortunate slaves by force, expostnlated with the mun, showing him how easy his own blacks lived, and tolling him that if he remmined with him and was deserving, he whould have many more imdulgences. But tho black fellat the merchant's feet, amd intreated hinn not to keep him it ho sent bis companion away, saying, if ho did, ho would lose all the inoney he had piad for them both; for that thongh knives mul poison wero kept out ol' their way, no one could firce them to eat, und that no hmman menns could make them bre ; tho oath they had already tuken in the presence of their deity, never to live asuader. In vain the merchant told this rlave, that the beauty of his companion lad raised her far nhove the price of those bought for menial selvitude, und that she must soon beeme the property of some rich Turk, und eonse puently be separated from him for over. This barbarity, the bluck replied, he expecterd, but that still nothing should make him voluntarily leave her; adding, that when they were parted by force it wonld bo time enough for him to dic, and go, aceording to their implicit belief, to their own country to meet her, as in spite of those who had her in their power, he knew who would be already gono thither, and waiting for him to join her. The merchant, finding it quite impossible to persunde him by words to stay, would not detain him by force, but he has left him nt liberty to follow the fortunes of his comianion. old him of their scarch for her in , where his furetimil her, in some? se of earrying o! his cireumstaners stolen limself, at 1 that are carried 1 race. His emin tistraction hin who hud stohn d now the dixposal andel fin: her; but ma riell enough to a the high priee of dred pounds) was tate a momient to the small lit of a disposed of himmpanion. Hatuy pour, he cheerfully If into shavery for Id with other slaves e in. The woman ith the rest of the he having, from hel oney to le kept as keej the mat, on is a demestic in his
they were to be irew tiueuselves on ' the laties of the and finding it was could not be preimplure her assismonderated by this ould intercelo with naster, two compasnise of his right in te slaves by force, o lim how casy his lat if he remained hould hove many Il at the merchant's lim if he sent his , ho would lose all lı; for that though - their way, no one bo humnn means they liad already eity, never to live old this shave, that lised her far above ser'vitude, and that of some rieh Thrk, om lim for over. - expected, but that intarily leavo her ; l by foree it would d go, according to suntry to meet her, a their jower, ho iither, and waiting t, finding it quite fls to stay, would left him at liberty fion.

Among a number of thess new purehatsed slatyes ordered into tho apartment where :ro were, was the beantiful female back. For some time her attention was taken up, with us, but the novelty of the sight did not keep her many minutes from bursting intos the mast extenvarant grief agrin at the thunght of her own situation. She rim from us, tud hitling lier face with her hatads, sat down in a corner ol the gidlery, white the rest of her companions st:unding romme her, frequently pulled her violently to partake with them of the sight of the Christimens, at whom they gazed with fear, anszenent, mul almiration, bint i:u these blaves just driven away fiom their netive soil, hunted like tuinuls from the woods where they hutd tlown for shelter, and entied from their dearest commections, the sight of white people must naturally inspire every seratiaent ot ilisgust anil horror. However, by the timo they were a little eonvinced that their dreat, at least at the Christians present, was needless, some of them beemme guite pacified, whe wore ordered to make up a dance. Tho ablest anomgst them took the lend, the rest, tonching the tipu of each other's land and foot, aceording to their mode of dancing, tormed at line, when each, with the ureatest and actions of their leader in lerfect tinn (See jo 96). But neither intreaties nor threates conld preval on the: unlaiply hatek to juin in this dance. She nat inconsolahle by lerself, and eontinued many days in the same sulhon condition; and all we conld lean on leaving tho homse concerning this mfortunate femaic, hately so haply in her awn eountry, was, that she was destined with her hasband, or rather lover, to embark in a few days on boadel a morehant vessel, the owner of which had hongit them both, with several others, to sell them at Constantinumle.
it is sume white sal to timd a latly writing so late as in the latter pat of the last "entury, of the matives of the errat empires of Central Atriea as "sivanger," becemse the abmanalile patetice ot shavery obticins among thom. Tho allusion to the fact, as it curions one, that triondship, and tidelity is to he finmul among then, is eren still mone astomeling. $A s$ if the monal sentiments mad hunam passions were not as strung in the thatek as in the white man! The prwe julico would at any time lawe been more worthy of an Ameriean than of an liaglish lady, mat lapy it is that the progress of wographinel lionvlouge has now put all exeuse for such foolish mothons out uf Linhl, for it is impossible fier any one tor mold of the pwwer, popmation, amd vast indentrial, "griwaltural, and natural resourees of tha great cmpions of Negroland, :as given, for rxamphe, in our symopsis of Bathes Tracels, nul not to fed, despite their disweputable have lannts, that it is only from ignomane that wo speak of moromes as wo dor, and that, on their pat, there is only rendy communiention wanted, in otdor that they shombl gradually bo mude tur take the phace that is due "to them among the dillerent prominent populations of the globe.

IV.

Romas Thumphaf Anch-Abenia oven the StbeitsConsuls Silunet-'mhoil in the Time op tue Requser my a Younori-a Fiatriombis ilarem.
A atern of loman limes ${ }^{1 r}$ resents itwelf immedintely (in entering the town by the Bab al Bahit, or Soa Cute.

It is a trimmphal monmmenc, consisting of an cetagon enpelit, supprortel by four arehes, with the suane number of pillars. 'Ine wholo built, withont eement, with enormons stones, sustainel by their own weight. This monmment was ormanented with earvings, fighes, festoms, and warlike trophies, within and without; but the greatest part of these relievos are destroyed ; there remain unly is few scattered and uneonnected parts, which still show the ameient beanties of the work, On the north and west sidess are tho remans of an inseription, which, having been tho same on both silles, was restored by M. Nisisen, the Danish consul, by eompariug them, and uniting and placing in order the tragments of both. Mr. Thlly. British consul, at that ejuch, prevailed upon the pasha, who seems, between lituily revolts, the enerotehments of the Arabs, whel the lising of pirates, never to have had a day's quint during a loug ruld, to have theshops and rubbish removed ont of the areh, which had almost elowked up the inside and eoncealed the beantiful erilins. ITaji Skamin (Drom do Krallt) spaks of the sume moinment in more recent times, as disfogured remains belonging to the perion of tho Decline. The strets of Tripuli, present a remarkable peenliarity, by their extreme narrowness, even in the Fast, the comutry of narrow streets, as also by the peculianity, that at iriof intervals, in some cases almast eviry ten paces, the "pposite loonses are nuited ly areles atoout a yard in width, the oljoeet of which seems to he to livep the said houses aphrt, mad prevent any dangerons approximation. This style of bulding is satistactomily shown in ther sketeh siven of the street designated ats that of the Cunsuls, it patge 77.

Tharom de Krath, writing of the palace op eitalle, with its atecmunlated masses of ruinons structures, stys, om' would fancy oneself in the eantle of Udoljho, and it wond bo impossiblo to perase ther the foomy pares of Ame Radelitle without shuthering. Who ean natrate the lugubrions dranats enteted within those dirls preecuets, when the rey of Jumper wat nut therr to wateh the procedings of the ind pendent priness of the rurney! Only two vears an", an ohd woll within the citalel was clemsed ont, and was tumal to be tull of cramia and other haman bones.

There have hect, however, eye-withessey to these horrors, even at at time when thre were burppan eombuls tolemted rather than resilling at 'lripoli; tins, at that elroch, they hat not only little or ale gower or inhlumer, hat, atecording to Mr. 'Tully's sister-in-law, they were jowitively phated mader an moment of surveillane and ronsis:int that would nut bo subnitted to in the prexent day ly my Buropan of imbermbent spisit. It must le pro. mised that, at the eporh wo ne now writing of: the so-called rogal fimily of 'ripoli consisted of Ali Katamanh, the pralar; Massath Dey, his eldest nom; Shli
 "Ihe chief ladies of the enturt were, lilla Inallnan, will uf the pasha; Lilla Udusiga, eldest duyghor: Lilha lentina, seeroml daughter ; Lillia Aisha, wife of Itassu Buy; Lilla Zonobin, dilest danghter of Hassan liey; mul lilla lawvign, wite of sidi ITamet. Sidi Y'usui', or " Lome Jasepli," Hthough the third son, nquired to the regeney, min, in order to enrry ont his dinigns, he atlilinted. himself with some of the disematented A mb tribes of the welghbourhonch. The mumymons muthor of the Luthers firom Iripoli relates that, 1 jon one oe-casion, they had been away for a short time at tho pasha's palace in the country, and that, on their retirn, all was calm und quiet. But it was not destined to remain long so. Tlie pasha, the bry, and Sidi Hamet went to the marabut's tugether ; and, during our late visits to the eastl, wo have fornd Lilla Halluma and the prineesses happy, in comparison to what they were when we left town. There was only a little anxiety apparent to know how Sidi Yusut was engaged whilst out of Tripoli ; but that no person in or ont of Tripoli conld divine. It was thonghit by the family that Sidi Yusuf wont out only to gather his tributes from his kaidaliks; but it was suspeeted by many that he was going about to the chiefls of the Arabs to engage them in his interest against his father and the bey. After his return, he remmined at the pasha's garden in the meshiah, and at the palace at which we were, whence he went at difierent times, apparently in the most amicalle mauner, to visit the rest of tho roynd tamily at the castle ; and no one suspected the seene he meant vo sonu to bring forward. Sidi Yusuf's success in a plot so diabolically lidel against the bey, is amongst those wonders which eamot be accounted for. Tived of' waiting longer for the annihilation of the bey, he caune to town, morr determined and better prepured to complete the drealful net than ho had been before. He linought with him his chosen blacks, whom he had well instructed. The moment he entered the eastle, he procerded to lis mother Lilla Falhmm's apurtments. to whom he deehared his fixed intention of "making peace" with his eldest brother, and entruated her to firward his wishes by sending for tho bey to complete their reconciliation in her prosence. Lillit Halluma, transported with the iden of seeing her sons again united, as she tlattered herself, in the bonds of friemelship, sent instantly to the hey, who was in Lillia Aisha's (his wife) mpartment, a coafidential message informing him that his brother Sidi Yusuf was with her without arms and waiting to make peace with him: that she would herself join their hands together ; and that, by the pashai head, the bey, if he loved her, would come to her direetly marmed. The bey, actuatell by the inst impulse, armed himself with his pistuls anil salire, to obry the nummons.
Jilla Aisha, knowing the inpartial tendeness of billa Halluma fore all her ehidden, was sure no open dauger could threaten his life: hor only npprethensions wers from socret plots, but this the hey womld uswer listen to. It the present moment, Lilla Aisha trombled fon tear a report of the hey's paswing throngh the huren to Silh Hathuma, with so hontile an appertranco, so emitrury to the rules, might give a protext for the bey's being trencheromsly assaulted by sidi Yusuf's people ; she, therefore, chiserved to him, that, as loe was going to his mother's apartments, where it was :ut all thenes sucrilege (according to the laws of Muhummad) to earry arms, his going there armed, after the messigo Lilla Hallman had sent him, woukd scem an if he mennt to assessinute his brother, and thereby draw the vengeance of the castlo upon him. The ley, atter hexitating a moment, unarmed himself, rublraced Lilla $\Lambda$ isha, and was depurting, when she threw herself at his feet, and, presented him his sabm, entreated him not, however, to depurt wholly defineeless; unil she would not let him go till he had yielded to her suppliantions. When the bey enne to his mother's room, she, perceriving hix sabre, begged of him (assuring him hls brother lud no arms) to liny it aside before they entered into conversation. The bey, to whom there could not appear the smallest reason for suspicion, willingly delivered his salbe to his mother, who placed it upon a window near which they stuod; and she, feeling convinced of the integrity of the bey's intentions, and being completely deceived in those of Sidi Yusuf, led the two prinees to the sufia, and seating herself hetween them, held a hand of eath in her's ; aud, as she ufterwards deelared to us, lookin's at them alternately, she prided herself on having thins at lust brought them together to make peuce at her side.
The bey, as soon as they were seated, endearoured to convince his brother, that, though he came to go throngh tho ceremony of making peace, yet there wals not the least occasion for it on lis part ; for that, as he hat no longer sons of his own, he considered sidi Yusuf and hiss brother as such, and would always treat them un father whenever he succeeded to the throne. Sidi Yusuf declared limself' satistied, but he observel. that, to make Lilla Hallum completely happy, thew could be no oljection, after such protessions of friendship from the bey, to seal their peate with sacred ouths upon the Kıran. The bey replied, "with all his heart ;" that "he was rendy." Upon which, Sidi Yusut rove quiekly from his seat, and called loudly fur the Kor:un -the word he ladgiven to his eunuchs fior his pistul:, two of which were brought and pitt into his hands; when he instantly discharged one of them at his hrother, seated by his mother's side. The pistor burst, and Lifla Halluma, extending her hand to save tho bey, had hor fingers shattered by the splinters of it. The ball entered the byy in the side: he arose, however, and seizing his sabre from the window made a stroke at his brother, but only wounded hiin slightly in the fier ; upon which, Sidi Yusul dischurged the secoml pistol; aud shot the bey througl the hody.

What added to the nalliction of Lilla Hallmma at this tragieal crent was, that the bey, erroneonsly supposing that mo lual betriyed hin, exchanest after bein. wemmled, "Ah! madnu, is this the last presint yiu have reservel for your eldest son !" From lier fivourite som, what mist these worls have provenced in the breast of the muther : Sisti Yusuf, ulon seeing his brother fill, instantly called to his bhacke, saying, "There lies tha' bey-finish him!" In a moment they dragged him from the spot where he was yet breathing, anl discharged their pinces into him. ${ }^{1}$ Lilla Aisha, licariug the sudhen drendful somu!, broke from her women, who endenvoured to keep her from the sight, and springing into the room, elasper her bleesling linsband in her arms; while lilln Ihalhma, in endenvoming to prevent Sidi Yusul from distiguring the buty, fiainted ower it from ughy of mind. Five of Sidi Y'usuf's blacks were at the same moment stabling it as it lay on the flow ; ntter which miserable trinumph of their master, they tled with him.
This wanton barbarity, in thus mangling the bey's remains, produerd the most distressing spectucle. Jilla Aisha, at this sight of houror, stripped oft inl her jowels mud rieh apmed, and throwing them into tho ley's bhood, took fivm the bheks the worst barmenn nuongst them, nuking that serve for her whole covaring. I'lins habiting herself as a common slave, mil ordering thove

1 The bey had deven badis in him when he died; one in his hend, threo in his left arm, aud soven to his side.
versation. The ar the smallest I his sabre to his near which they the integrity of tely deceived in nces to the sufit, in haud of each ed to us, lookipus on having thus ke pence at her

ted, endcavoured

 i he came to go ce, yet there was $t$; for that, as he - considered Sidi ould always treat ell to the throne. but he observer. tely haply, there essions of frientwith sucred ouths ith all lis heart ;" Sidi Yusuf rose ly for the Koran his tor his pistals, t into his hands; of them at his, The pistol bust, $r$ hand to save by the splinters in the side: he e from the winout only woundel hich, Sidi Yusuf the they throughtLilla 1Inlluma at erromeously supbiamed after bein. last 1 nesent yan rom her favourite reed in tho breast eeing his brother ying, "There lies nut they druggel ct breathing, ind Hha Aisha, hearing from her women, sight, and spiringig liusband in lier orring to prevent $y$, fitisted over it isuf's blacks were lay on the flar; heir master; they angling the bey's os spectacle. Dillis off ull hut jewels ini into the ley's barnean muongst le covering. I'bus inl orlering thove
he died; one in his
around to cover her with ashes, she went in that state directly to the pasha, and said to him "that, if he did not wish to see her poison horself and her children, he must give immediate oviers that she might quit the castle, for that she would not live to look on the walls of it, nor to walk over the stones that could no longer be seen for the bey's blood, with which they were covered."

As Sidi Yusuf left the castle he met Bey Abdallah, the great kayah, a venerable officer, the first in jower, and beloved by the people. This officer, seeing the dreadful state in which Sidi Yusuf was, expressed his fear that something fatal had happened. Bey Abdallah was known to be purticularly atiached to the paslu's fimily, and, from his religious 1 rinciples, could not be supposed to approve of this day's deeds. The moment, therefore, Sidi Yusuf saw him, he stabbed him to the heart, and the kayali instantly expired. Sidi Yusuf's blacks, who were following him, threw the budy into the street, before the castlo gate, and the hampers (the paslin's guards), who were standing by, conveyed it to his unhappy family. It was buried at the sune hour with the bey. Sidi Yusuf hat been three times into town to perpetrate this dreulful deed. The last time, he came at un hour he expreted to tind the bey unarmed und alone; int meeting him, on the contrary, armed and surrounded with his penple, he kissed his hand, and atter paying lim the nsual compliments, retmoned disappointed to his resitence at the pasha'x garden. On the eOth of last month he, however, teeomplished the act, and nothing could then edual the confusion uf this place. The preple hurried in distressed gron!s through the streets, with their families and cattle, endeavouring to reach the city gates and gnit the town, not knowing where the scene of hatoe at the castle would end; mud mumbers erowded into our house besines those whin had a right to sheltas there from Ining cunler the protection of the flag. One "f our dragomen mat Sidi Yusuf with his trowsers amil bernus atained with blood. He was followed elose hy his backs, and riding tull spred trom the enstle through the eity gate, ilreadin!s at the moment the vengeance of the people. Virious wase the reports of the bey's existenco for seveml hours. When the pople were certain of his domath, they henan to urm, funl ghesed throngh the streets in grent numbers; the Aralis and Jebelins, or momutaineers, with their long gums and knives, und the Moors with their pistols and sabres, making th the inhahitants a mont tervilie appammer ; emeld dreading to motet an enemy in his neighbour, and not kiowing what party ho was of.

The general aharn in town made it inccessary to shut the consular houses. Ours had been closed but a few minuted, when two of the bey's officers hurried in despair to the door, und intreated us to let them in; explecting, ins they satid, to be massucred every monent by those nttached to Sidi Yusuf, for being the finvourites of their late master: One of them was Sidi Ilassan, the nephew of the mmlnessulor, Haji Abdermhman. Mis feelings for the fate of the bey wero so neute, that he would lave sunk on the floor had not our peopite supported him. In a moment after he entered our house, the liey's funeral pussed, nud Hussun instantly ruso to join the procension, determined (ns he said) tu pry the last uttention in his power to the Bey's iemnins, by supporting his coflin'; thongh lie thonght it so hazar-

[^3]dous, that he had not the least expectation of reaching the grave alive. He called to the other officer to acconpany him ; lut he declined it, saying it was only sactificing their lives to no purpose; and Hassan went by limself.

The bey was buried at three o'clack in the afternoon: the short spaco of little more than four hours had witnessed the bey in the bloom of health, in the midst of his family, murdered and buried !

The colom's at the consular houses were hoisted halfmast high, as soon ss the bey's teath was announced; and all the ships that were in harbour fired minutegins till he was interred, when the colours were hoisted up and the slips fired a salute of twenty-one guns.

The bey's widow freed every slave that followed his remains, but the pcople were so panie-struck, that the Moors of the highest rank seemed afraid to follow the bosly, and few accompmied it besides those who were ordered by the pasha to do so.

So littlo judgment could be furmed of the pasha's state ni mind at this eritical moment, that the shoikl could not act in any way withont sending tirst to the castle for orders, and whiting to hear from the pasha until he thought the town unsafe. Such was the agitation mad dread the while masy of people ware in.

As soon as the bey was interred chatushes went through the town, broclaiming en onder from the pashat for every one to be silent, not to assumble in the streets: on pain of his displeasure, and to tear mothing. The chatishes wirts were, "To the hey who is gone, ciod give a lappy resurcetion ;" and ", sone ot bis late servints shall be molested or hurt." But to the surprise of everyone, with this order no bey was proclamed, which was mprecedented, as at the moment a pasha or bey expires, his succesoor is "xpected to be ammomeed.

Sinl IItmet was from Trijoli when this shaeking catastroplu happencl, hat was in town before night, and brought with him from Mesmattat a chiof of the Aralos (nheikh Alient), and sevemal hamdreds of his prople. They were encamped romed the town during the night. Jiefore Sidi Hamet reached town, however, the pashat hat sent one of his confidential ofliners to Sidi Yusut, desiring him to conte to the cantle. Un worl buing hrought that he was uftail. the pasha sent him his bends,' to servo as a pledge for liswatety. Int even with this safeguntl, Nidi lusut would not trust himself within the town.

Whem Sidi 1 Fanet arrived witl his Arabs, he went immodiately to the pashai. Who was 3 m much alatmed It reeing him come into his presence armed, that he expressed his elispleasure at it ; but Sidi Hanet observed that he lud that moment seen the ofli $\quad$ swom the pashat hud sent with his bends, to render tue person of Sidi Yusuf" sacred, nfter lie had cut the bey in pieces! "This, then," satil he, "is a moment when no person or netion can be understood; every way is dark und uncertain, und therefore retuires a strong guari, for fome of stumbling."
Sill Hamet retired to his apmetment, where, fatigued with travelling nud overcome with agitation, ho tainted upon the sofa. This necident happening so son after his arrival at the castle, gave rise to a repurt that he had been poisoned, and threw the town mgnin into confision fir some hou's during the evening.

[^4]Were I not writing from a country where the ideas and mannets are so totally ditierent from those you are aceustomed to, I should almost fear that you could not credit the following account of Sidi Yusuf's conduct. The grive was searecly closed over the hrother he had mutilated, when he sent to town for Jews and a turbukn, 1 to make a feast at the pasha's garden, where he was. The sounds of musie, tiring, and women hired to sing :med dance, were louder than at the firast of a wedling. This was soon known at the castle, when, during the atrocions circumstance, the pasha retired, giving orders for no me to apporeh him till he called for them. From one of our rooms, which commands : view of a covered gallery leading to the pasha's npartments, we saw him seated in deepest thenght alme!

Hamet, the second son was elected bey in sucession to his hrother, and to the exchusion of Sidi Yusuf, but the latier lid not the less contiune to aet, not ouly in indelumence hut in overt hostility against both pashn and bey. All the family turmoils did not prevent the leaders of the consulate paying formul visits to the assassin's wife, just ns much as to any other lauly of the court. and the account given of such a vint made shortly after this ant of fratricide is very characteristic.

In geing to Sidi Vusuts house, we pianed through some sulterrancons passnges almost entirely without light : and the superstition of the Monisid women with ns (who wre convincel that we should mere the glast of the hey at every dark corner we pissed) did not setve to enliven our mimes, which were depressiel with the fear of meeting more animatel buings than spirits, When we arrivel at the entrance of the last of thrse glomy pasages, a dow nearly all of iron, securely fastenerl. prevented our advimeng firther till our mames were reperted. After some time, we hearl the emuchsadvane, push hack the iron lults. and, withgreat dithenly, remove two inmensu heary hars, with which this pass had lately heen guarked, to sorvin the guilty heart from the vengeance of nll hat its maker. As som as this gite was opened, "hatern, carrien by one of the cunuehs, gave just light enongh to discover a purt of their tormilable tigures and the glare of their arms: but when they held it ip to take a better surver of those to whom they had given entraner, it shone filly on their faces, which, back as int, were remberol mome striking ly the diereennss of their eyes and the whitoness of their teeth, anl thrilled us with hom, whik. we reflectud, as we followeel them closely through the gloom, how hiely their hands hat been stainel with the blod of the bey. We regoned whon wr saw daylight again, and found unselwes at a gronter listmice from these murderers. The tirewoman and blacks, who were sent to meet ns, trok us to an "partment, where we wnited for the princess, Sili Yusults wife, The floor of the aparthent was covered ifst with Ezyptimn matting, wer which wre Thukey carputs: and, betine the sofil, were hid over the aran'l muilterd satin mattrasses with gold dowers. Tho solia was crimson whet embroidered with goll, aud the cunhions were of gold tissuc. Comerny to the taste of the country, this room was not hung with tannstry, hat ncorly covernd with looking ghases, and golid and silver fire-arms, trinkets, and chams. Almot the room were a number of large eostly eabinuts of mothero'peal, tortoiseshel, mal abong, some momated with gold and others with silver. Before the sedia, where the courch or hed is fin slecping, four silk eurtains richly embroidered were hong, one over the other. Upon the whole, the npartment was grander than any in the castle, except that of Lilla Halluma.

In a few minutes aiter we were here, the wife of Sidi Yusuf entried the apartment superbly dressed. An etiquette was observed when she entered which wo have not seen practised in this place before: her people ranged themselves regularly on each side, her white attendunts nearest to her, and her blacks the farthest otli, forming a donlide line, through which we paswed to meet her. It was the finst time wo had seen her. She is of 'Turkish extraction, young and handsome, but nothing soft in her manner, and her face has too much of the fierceness of a Twkish countemane to the pleasing. Sho was very reserved at tirst, but grew moro familiar atterwards, and was so importmate with us to wait fö Sidi Yusuf, who sho stid was expeeted every mimate, that we quite despaired of quitting her hefore his arrival. When we parted, and before we got to the end of the galleries lielonging to her upartments, we henrid him with his bincks antering the court-ratel helow. The rnuchs who were with as wished us to return; but we desirod them to go on, and soon reached the ontside of Sidi Yusul's havem, when the cumehs quickly dosed the tremendous door after us at the cond of the subteimucous passiges, with as much grating and diticulty as it had been oproned.

On one return from Sidi Y'usnf:s we went with Lilla Halluma's women direetly to Lilla Hawviya the bey's wife. The rontrast was striking betworin the bey's murtments and those which we had just quittend. Here every eountomuce was open, amb the servantlooked easy and free from suspicion. Lillia llawivga receivel un in the most courtrous manner. Though this was merely a visit of form, a conscionsmess of her own dignity had satistied her, withont manilesting any outwarl sign of etiquette or ecremony that eould he dis. peneel with. Her dreses was more castly than usual. mul sho wore some alditional jewels. She was engagingly :thihle fint not cheertin) ; fir who, as sho saist, can trist Sidi lusuf? and whe trembled for her husband's satety: We hath not heen long with her before the hey eame in. Wesaw him cross the yard ats we entered the galleries. He was then gring to his father's heveo: but Lillia Mawviya sent to tell him we were with her, and he returnod to her apmetment.
Sinli lhunet has mever becu out of Tripoli, noer is he in the lahit of omsersing mueh with Cliristimes ; yot his lelaviour wis mild, polite mul courteous. Ilix dress alon Wespoke him a Mons. His manners to his timily wer mot less atliectiomate mod deliente tham thuse of the most potished Emropenn. Lilla llawisha. his favourite sinter, wife of the rais of the mariue, came into tho martment: an som as whe entered she went u! to the bey und kissod the top of his turban, which instrad of not deigning to notice, ns is the custom of the combtry, he directly saluted her eheek mad ullirevi her his chair ; this she did not necept, but male a sigu to her hateks, who instantly brought her another. Chairs, which do not enter into the list of firruiture fir a Moorish sulh, had been previously hronght in for nes, and it was tho first time we luid scen in Moorish, compuny nll the guests sitting on them. As sisom as Sidi Hanuet was senlemd they brought him tollive mill a pipe ormamented with gold, coral, nulher, and sitres.

Before the sedila, ecping, four silk ung, one over the nent was grander ? Litla Halluma. e here, the wife ot superbly dressed. entered which we place before: her on each side, her all her blacks the hrough which we tine wo hat seen ang and handsome, I her face has tou countemance to be it tirst, but grew impurtmate with said was exprectel ed of yuitting her al, and hefore we ging to her apartacks contering the ho were with us wh them to go cm , li Yusuf゙s harem, : tremendous door ous passuges, with ad been oproncd. ve went with Lilla Haw viya the bey's retwerin the beys had juat quittent. ane the secrantLillat lhawirya manner. Though macioushess of her at manifesting any $y$ that could he disenstly than usnal, ols. she was en$r$ who, as sho saitl, trembled for hea cir loug with her inn cross the yurd f then gring tis his sent to tell him - har martment. Tripoti, ner is he 1) Christians ; yet 1 comrtenis. ilis His munuers to und deliente than

Lilla Hawisha. of the marine, s whe entered she op of his turban, Hotice, as is the aluted her cheek iid not accept, but antly brought her r into tho list of been previously iist time we had guests sitting on nterl, they bronght with gold, corul, Moors of distinction hardly (ver sit in company withont their pipe and coffec. If they visit you they are immediately presented with both.

As this was a visit of etiquotte, all the ceremony of coffee, sherbets, aul perfumes were served, althongh we had already partaken of them at Lilla Halluma. The bey did not leavo the upartments till a very few minutes before wo went away, which was at sunset; he must therefore havo been absent from the pasha's lovec, for which he most have accounted to lim, as the omission of this ceremony ly the prinees, without some particular reason, is considerel a great mark of disruspect.
Sidi Hamet conversed with his wife and sister in a mamer which showed he considered them as rational beings: he told theur tho news of the day, and heard their opinions on different subjects with a complacency uncommon to the Moors. He desired Lilla Udusiyaia to send her women for soms new gold bracelets for the feet that were makiug for her in the castle, which the Jews came there to manutacture. They were brought for us to see ; the pair weighed nearly five pounds of solid gold eurionsly wrought, and from their weight they have literally the efleet of fetters; but a Moorish lady walks very little, ind with great cantion when sho wears them.
When wo left the apartments of the bey, Lilla Hawisha, the rais of the marine's wife, accompanied us through the harem as far as the house allotted for the black femalre slaves. This place, though within the precincts of the harem, is farther than the ladies are acenstomed to go. In consequence of this, a circumstance oceurred that might have proved very serions, hat it happened to any other than the parties concerned. From the long tinse we hal spent with Lilla JIawisha, wo were considerably beyond the hour appointed for us to quit the harem. The consul came to mect us ns fire as this place, a liberty, I believe I maly safely sity, that whild not have beeu permitted to any Christian hut himself; but the Moors look up to him as answering the title they give him of "Buwi" (protector), while they call his daughters, "Bint el bled" (ebilldren of the country). Lilha Hawisha's terror and surpise at findiug herself so fally exposed to the oyes of a Christian, is easier conceived than described, in a conntry where the laws make it death for a Moorish ludy to be seen by a male stranger. She instantly voiled bervelf and retired; but deelared all the fault was hers, as it was indiscretion to wander so far through the harem, without sending to the house where tho liacks are, to warn them of her appronel. She intreated us to come agnin soon, and smilingly said, she shamblat take cire no such accident should happeu in linture.
V.

Febtura conserraciss-Tue City of Turvoh abseobdSbi Yestr's Wape and Famly take liefcoe is a Sanctuahy - a Mathon's Hemersi - A Nuctelinala Skmmisu-Cualous liseldents of Civit Wan.
Tine: areh-tmitor Sidi Yusut did not remuin long quiet. Ilis next move was to get his second brother, Hamet Bey, to assist him in cleposing the pusha, their father; he leing in that cuse nonuinuted bey till Hanct's son should have uttuined his majority. Hamet Bey would not listen to so unfilial a project, besides ho prolunbly felt thut Yusut, who hud nuale away with his elder brother, and who now proposed to make away with his fither, would feel very litile compunction in getting rid of' Hamet hinself :und of hi. chind, if they were the only remaining olstacles that lay between hinn and supreme power. Finding, however, that his vile proposals were nut entertainel, Sidi Yusuf immediately left the town, and, placing all his family at one of tho comutry residences in the Meshiah, he addressel himself to the sheilhs of the Arabs, promising them large rewards, plundry, and future immunities and advantages, if they would help him to whtain the pashalik. At the same time, he threatened those who should hesitate with spoliation and massacre. This done, he fortified his eountry house, and abiled his time with occasional visits to the town and palace.
Among the subterranem pasagec, says the writer previously quoted, through which we passed, bolonging to the pasha's and to each of the prince, harems, and communieating with other parts of the castle, the bey has caused those leading from his harem to be closed up. This singular order was ocensioned by the following event. During the fist of hamadan, about a fortnight since, the bey went to pay a visit to his sister, Lilla Fatima, the widow of the Bey of Derner, who had sent for him. On entering the apartment, the bey perceived an Arab woman sitting in the room, wrapped in a dark baracan ; this did not strike him particularly, but the terrors of Lilla Hawviya his bride. who was there, and had purposely anveiled hersetf, surprised him; and she, at the same instant, mado a signal to him with her cyes, to leave the room, which he directly did. Lilla Hawviya followed tho bey as soon as she possibly could, and informed him, the figure in the dark baracun was sidi Yusuf, disguised as un Arab woman. She said it was the third time he had been conveyed in disguise into Silla Fatima's apartments, for the purpose of meeting the bey there, anll hearing his sentiments; and that she latil scen the saune figure each time, but never discovered it to be Sidi Yusuf till the present monent, when :u awkward plait in his baracan showed her a part of his countenance, after the bey had entered the apartments. On this account, the hey had all the subterranean passages that led to his harem securely clowed. The bey's precantions can never bo too great, while events eontinually prove Sidi Yusut"s intentions to aseend the throne at any price; the following illustration of which this day has turnished.

This being the tirst day of the fenst of Bairum, Sidi Yusuf cume to town to pay his compliments to the pushama bey, an etiquette which could not be disyensed with while Sidi Yusut keeps ip the least apeamner of cerdiality with his fither and brother, as one of the strongest of their religious tenets is that of reconciling all difterences at the liast of Bunam, and the least neglect or coohess at that period is considered as a welanation of opull hostility. When the prineses were at the prasha's levee, it wis noticed that Sili Yusut was uncommonly agitated, and was cagerly pressing to get uear the bey, as it to sperk to him in private, which conld not easily be aecomplished, as the brothers were too much at wiriance to accost each other withont ceremony. Sidi Yusut at length came up to one of the bey's moost faithful atiendants, who, with the keen eye of uthiction as well as of duty, watehes wer the snfety of his master in all critical moments, and disired lim to tell tho bey, that when their fither's court was over he would go to the bey's gul-phar, where he much wished to be permitted to say a few words to him.

The attendant excused himself from going at that moment, by observing to Sidi Yusuf that the bey was speakiug with lis fither, and he durst not interrupt them. Sidi Yusuf finding this man uuwilling to deliver bis message, sent another Moor, and in a few minutes after the brothers were proceeding to the bey's gul-phar, whither they were instantly followed by the iufimous marabut Fataisi, and several of Sidi Yusuf's people; which this attendant pereeiving, instead of accompanying them, he went directly to the bey's elief cha-ush, and told him to go instantly up with his blacks and take possession of the gul-phar to clear it from intruders, as the bey was gone there with Sidi Yusuf. The eha-ush lost no time, but on his arrival he found that Sidi Yusur's blacks, ufter the prinees had entered, had already crowded round the door of the gul-phar, with their chief (Sidi Yusuf's chn-ush) at the head of them. In consequence of the information he had just received, he ordered Sidi Yusuf's cha-ush to draw off his blacks and leave him room to pass, but finding it impossible to prevail on Sidi Yusuf's blacks to permit them to gain a foot of ground with out onen hostilities, which at such a moment would have proved fatal to his master's life, he had recourse to stratagem to effect his purpose. He took tho hand of Sidi Yusuf's cha-ush, ... if in a triendly manner, and contrived by one squerze to dislucate the man's little finger, the excruciating pain of which deprived Sidi Yusuf's ehu-ush of all strength, and, knowing ho was usurping a post, for which if he said a word he might be ent to pieces, he led off his blacks directly, und left the door free to the bey's cha-ush.

Sidi Yusuf, who was already in the gul-phur with the bey; on seeing the apartment on a sudden so completely guarded, not by his own cha-ushess and blaeks, as he had expected, but by those of the bey, rose quickly from his seat, und with his marnbut (Fataisi) took instunt leavo of his brother, who has for tho present escaped any mischief intended him, through the vigilmee of his watchful attendint.

Thus foiled, Sidi Yusuf nade another attempt to get his fither, the prsha, into his hands, whilst his followers plundered the gardens and country residences of both the pasla and bey. The town was now put in a ate of defence, and the Arabs were called in for further protection.

At hslf-past ten the next morning, Sidi Yusuf appeared for the first time in open hostilities against his family. All the atrocities he had as yet committed received $n$ tenfold addition of guilt, by their having been achieved under the mask of friendship. On the appearaice of Sidi Yusuf the second day, all the consular houses were closed, as were the shops and the houses of the inhabitants, who turned out with their ams, and ranged themselves in the streets.

TRIPOLITAN GARDENERS.
The pasha sent forees out early in the morning, to preserve the villuges of the Mestiah from the further rivages of Sidi Yusuf's people. In the aftermon they hought in the governor or kayid of the Meshinh, who was carried to the castlo to be strangled, but he is yet living. This man, instead of assisting the peoplo and protecting them, had given every assistance he could to Sidi Yusuf. When the knyid arrived nt the town gate, the prishu ordered his charuses to proclaim Sidi Yusuf a rebel, and that it should be lawful to soize him wherever he could be taken, excepting in the marabuts or mosques, which may not be viohted.
A noble Noor came into town in the evening of the twenty-second, and pretended not to have joined Sidi Yusuf, or to have approved of his mensures ; but he returued ngain to him early in the morning, and, a short time ufter hisdeparture, $n$ quantity of provisions and ammunition was stopped at the town gate, which be had endeavoured to send out to him.

About an hour before noon, Sidi Yusuf's people attacked the town. We saw Sidi Yusuf for soure time seated us kayid of the Meshinh in the Pianura, in the place the kayid shonld have oceupied had he been present. Just at this moment, the kayid of the Meshinh was brought into the eastle-yard to be strangled; but he was remanded lack. This is the seeond time in one day that he has undergone the terross of being put to death.
The pasha has sent round the const to collect the country residences n was now put in vere called in fer

Sidi Yusuf aptilities against his is yet committel , by their having endship. On the ond day, all the re the shops and turned out with : arms, and ruuged iselves in the ts.
e pusha sent forces early in the mornto preserve the ges of the Meshiah the further ravaf Sidi Yusuf's peoIn the afterncon brought in the rnor or kayid of Meshiah, who was ed to the eastle to trangled, but ho is tiving. This man, ad of assisting the le and protecting a, had given every tance he could to Yusut. When kayid arrived at town grate, the at ordered his chitto proelaim Sidi uf a rebel, and that tould be lawful to him wherever he 1 be taken, exeeptin the marabuts or lues, which may be violated. noble Noor eame town in the evenof the twenty-ge, and pretended to havo joiucd Yusuf, or to have oved of his mea; but he returued n to him eally in morning, nud, a time after his deure, in quantity of ped at the town end out to him. i Yusut"s peojle Yusuf for somo in the Pianura, in pied land he been he kayid of the astle-yurd to be hek. This is the ns undergene the
to collect the

Arabs. We saw n number of horsemen at a very greut distance, aproaching from the west: this circumstance gives courage to the people here, who were much enst down. The camion from the town were fired at Sidi Yusuf's people during the whole of the day, which hat the desired effect of kecping them back. But, though the firing was incessant, it did little execution on either side. Sidi Yusuf lost only five men, and in few horses belonging to the town were killed, notwithstanding there were upwards of three thousand shot fired. The cannon were not even momuted upon carriages; and they were fired by a Russian so badly, that lie frequently pointed them into the sea on his left, instead of into the Pianura exactly before him. This account, I assure you, extruordinary us it uppears, is true, for we saw every one firel.

From the situation nnd strength of the English consular house, it was at this eritical juncture considered as the ouly safe asylum among the consular houses. It is very large und chiefly of stone, being built for the bey's residence many years ago. The side of the house which commands the harbour, Humet the Great employerl to cont:in a part of his garrison, having shut up all communication thence to the house, in which at that time resided two of his queens. This purt was afterwards restored to the building. It is now considered strong enough to make a tolerable resistance, and is favourably situated, being isolated on mosque at tajura.

three sides. On the fourth, it is joined only by Momish houses, not sufficiantly high to anuoy it, therefore the that terracing at the top of tho building is very safe, heing inaceessible except from tho inner part of the house ; so that, in the imidst of tho present tronbles, we can in general walk on it with security. It is built exactly on the phan of all Moorish honses, with a square areat in the middle, and a piazza, which sulports au open gallery into which the apartments lead.

As soon as Sidi Yusuf arrived within sight of the town, the Greeks, Maltese, Moors, and Jows, hrought all their proparty to tho English house. The French and Venetinn consuls also brought their fiumilies; every room was tilled with beds, and the gallerics were used for dining rooms. The lower part of the building contained the Jowesses and the Morrish women, with all their jewels and treasures. There was likewise a great quautity of jewels in the house belonging to the paslu, which were in the possession of some of the consils, to be returned him at a future time. All theso circumstances rendered it highly neecssary to guard tho honso as much as possible, for whieh purpose a number of Schavouians, and other sailors, with small enumon from the Venctian ships, were ready with their urms to he stationed on the terraces.

Sidi Yusuf discontinued his assault upon the town about six in the evening. His people retired out of sight, and the cannon from the town ceased firing;

Int it was expected he would return in the deal of night. 'The cry of the town-ghard was without interruption till day-light, and at our honse the consuls watehel liy turns the night throngh.
It did not prosper well with Sidi Yusuf-the fratri-cide-alter this fittile attempt. The chinf Arab tribus dechared aguinst him : aml his distress for provisions and clothes hecame so great that he was obligel to plaee his wife, Lillia Hawiyn, and child under the protection of a marabut.
The pisha was imiluecel, from a relation of their sufferings, to otfer the prineess an asylum for herself, her mother, and her son, at the castle; hut this alleviation to her distress Lilla Hawiya womble not aceept : she says, she is orkerel ly sidi Yusuf to remain at tho mambut tifl he comes to take her fiom it, or till she heass he is deml. It the latter misfortune shoulit take place, Sili Yusuf has orlerel her to take his infant to the pashan and go herself to the castle; if she be still permittel to profit of such an asylum. These being the last directions given her by the prince, she says, nothing but death will prevent her strietly fillowing them. No person can force her from the marabut;? but they might starve her to death there, an it is lawful to prevent the converance of either food or clothes to those who tly to these sanctaaries, by which privation criminals must either die or deliver themselves up, when nature can resist no longer. After this princess had refused to quit the narrabut, the pasha, touched with her stiffrings, and those of his little gramlson, permit. from thr
The in . wishing, however, ? make terms with his rebellious son, sent ont his chief uffieers, the kitytayib, the kaynh, the ruis of the marine, and the silaktar, to treat with him before he quittel his gardens to attack Tripoli. On his mother-in-law leing informed that it was intended they should lie 1 misumed on the present accasion, she called to Sidi Yusuf from a gallery that surrounds a marble court-yard, amil stretching out her arms with his son in them, declarnl she would drop the infint into the yard, unless Sidi Yasuf swore at that instant not to violate thi" laws of hospitality at her house, he being then at her gariens. " Let these otficers fall," sail she, "in any other mamer. but not now ; they are come as friends, innl under your avowed protection, to see you under my roof." Her determined manner prevailed, and for that time these devotel people esenped with their lives.

A desultory warfare now ensued, all the more desultury at the pasha was supposed to be nt the bottom favourable to the cause of Sill V"usuf, and "plosed to the pretemsions of his seemed son, llanet hey: Skirmishes werw earried on by night as well as by day on the Meshiah or liamm, as the Franks term the great open phain, and all that was pasing cond be seen firou the terrace of the consulate.

It whs one of thowe elear still nights known only in the Melitermanan: the lright brams of the mom from a brilliant sky distinetly discovered to us the: greatest gurt of the Meshiah with every uljoen in it. The silence in the town was striking; mothing denoted

This rewpect for sanctuaries is descended from the most anelent times. Alarie, nt the sueking of lome, enjoinet hi soltiers to spure the blowd of those who whoutd have taken refinge in auy holy place,-Chenier's I'resent State of Moroces, vol. I., a night of ebecrful rolaxation after a long day's fast in Ramalan, at which time tho Monsw ure seon in their yards and on their torraces, profiting by the fiew hours reliet they can enjoy from sumset to sumrise, to prepurn them for another dity's alstinence. The greatest part of the inhalitants wore without the rampurts guarling the town, and the rest of the Moors, instem] of huing sitting on their terraces, were, by their fars and the pasha's orders, retired within their houses. In the streets no objeets were visible but the town gravil with their hungry pack of dogs, prowling ahont in vain for some strolling victim to repay then for their vigilaner. Near us not a sumbl broke יןon the car but that of the slow-swelling wave that washal the walls of the town; while, at at grat lintance whatme ana, the white sails of the passing ressels were distinctly visible by the clearness of the night. Opposed to this calno were the confused seveans and tho incessant firing in the Pianura and in the cometry round, necompanied by the loud song of war and tho continual beating of the tambura, or drum, to call the Mooss and Amis to arms. Frerpent parties of Moorish homemen and foot soldiers, we listinetly saw by the light of the moon, passing with swiftness over thr sands in pursuit of the Arabs. 'The death-wong breaking from ditlirent parts of the country, often monomed to us the loss of some distinguishai person on cither side, who at that moment was numbered with thi shain.

Some curions incidents characterisel this internecine war, which lerive interest as marking the Moorish manner of thinking and acting in war.

A party of Arabs curried a tine mare with its murdered haster to Sidi Yusuf; who usked them why they had killed a man not fighting ngainst them, ns lie hat ordered that none but those armed nganst him whould be molested; on their replying they hal killed him for the sake of his mare, as the solliers were su moch in want of loorses, Sill Yusut ordered the animal to be inought forwarl, had it shot in their presence, and ilesired then for the future to obsurve his orders better. Another extriordinary event was, that : Tripolitan, one of the pasha's peuple, having, on going out of the town, met with an old friend who was tighting on Sili Yusuf's side, the latter began to reason with him, and endeavoured to persuade him to join Sidi Yusuf; but the Tripolitan told him to profit of that moment in which they were speaking amicably to save himself, for he considered it now his duty to take his life if possible whenever he shonll meet him afterward; on which the Arab iustantly ilcparted. The third eireumstance, not less singular thinn tho two formor, was that the bey, nftur ho han given urders for his soldiers to go ont against his brother, preeiving Sidi Yusuf's people busy in earying awny their dend, prevented their going, saying he wonld not hive the enemy disturbed till their present work was owre.

At this time a reward was pubticly oilemel to the Arabs, by tha pisha's orders, before they quitted the town, of two thonsanl sequins to any one of them wha brought in Sidi Yusuffs heakl. We saw Sidi Yusuf"s men gathering up the sand on the plain and throwing it by handfuls towards the town. The meaning of this aetion was to show their coutempt of the bey's people, and to excite them to come ont. When the gums fired from the castle the Arabs ran off ; hat as soon as the butls fell, some of them returned und fired thrir pieces at the balls as they lay on the ground, halloning and a long day's fast in w are seen in their ghy the few hours sumise, to preparr ce. The greatest out the rampurts the Moors, instewl were, liy their feam in their houses. In nt the town graid wling abont in vain them for their vigi: enon the riu lint. t washed the walls bue oh a ealmu sea, als were listinctly ${ }^{0}$ pposed to this and the incessant country round, the $r$ and the continual , to eall the Moons arties of Moorish stinetly siow by the swiftness over the , death-song break ry, often manonned d person on either unlered with tha sed this interneeine King the Monish , ne mare with it. ho asked them why ngainst them, as he armed against him ing they luad killet te soldiers were $n$ ordered the animal in their preseuce, obsurvo his orders vent was, that a , having, on going iend who was tighter loegan to reason suade him to join ld him to profit of eaking amicably to ow his duty to take hil meet him afterly departerl. The liar than tho two ad given orders tor brother, pereesivine g awny their dend, rould not have the :ork wats over. ioly wflever to the : thay quittell the y one of them who - saw Sicli Yusuf's Whin anl throwing The meaning of this of the bry's peopite, When the guns fired hut as soon as the a fired their pieces nimd, hallooing ant hooting at the town for having missed their aim; when the pasha's horses were taken ont to water at the wells, an Arab, in the pasha's $l^{n y}$, momented one ot the very best of them and roilo off at full spred to Sili Yusui. The bey was at the samo time sondistressed for horses that he sent to one of the consuls for one tur replace that taken off lie the Aral.
The beantiful Zemobin, tho wite of Sidi el Bumy and favonite of the late hey, is at her husband's riarden out of tuwn. Sidi el Lunny is one of Sidi 'usut"s genemals, eunsequently lie is fighting against the piasha. Zenohia has leen eontimally sending seeret intelligenee to the enstle eoneeming him; and she gave notice to Kayid Mnhammad, to send thirty men to al gatden where her hasband is, to assassinate him. What a prit for a wife to act! but with such extrence inmoratity as hev character presents, such arimes are compatible.

Tr.

Abrival of a Turkisil Pimate-Ife restips the Reqeycy of Thmoli - The liabamanhat obrain seccoch prom Tesis-sidi Yuser eserps the 'Tinone-i l'asua is Sent from Constintinolle-Pahi of time Garamanla family - Mosqte at 'lajuaa, a supposed fombistias c'herch-Ravaoes of the l'laote-Menical PuacticeFinebal Cehemonies.
An interludo of a peenliarly Oriental chameter accurred in the midst of this probonged civil war. One fine eveuins a flect of Thrkinh vessels was sefn mexpectedly to arive athd anchor in the harbour. Soon the news eame that a Thork numed Ali ben Znl was on hoard, aul that he was the bearer of the sultan's firman to depose the paslia and monnt the throne himself. The ineident is thus related ly the eyr-witness before quoted.

There monot be a stronger proof given of the alegree of conserpuence attached to the sultan's firman, than the manner in which the Tripulitans have bowed their heals to it on the present oceasion; for as the pashat and the ley at last ventured ont of the gates detenceless to Sifi Yusut; the phsha might have let sidi Yasuf in, as he at one time intemdell to do, with his forees, to have alriven the 'Turks off; lut muler the idea that the sultan's firman camot be resisterl, all has been submitted to.

By half- jast six this moming, the theers of the frigate we are to in with were with ns: they emgratulated us on the ease with which the Turkish troops land berיs permitted by the Moors to enter the town, withon $i$ harassing it with a battle ; but everythiner is to be sirealed from the ferocity of the 'lurk, whe, known to be a great enomy to the Christians, will always endeavour to insult them, excepit when restrained by interest. Wo broaktasted in a prorty of thirty, must of whom had prassed the night in hoully expeetation of the Ambs entering the town from the land-side, or the Turks from tho sea-side. Before we land tinished our hrenkfast, wo were summoned to the terrace, to see the Tark come up from the Marine in the chamacter of pashat: for, hy this time, every person in Tripoli doubts the anthonticity of the firman.

On tho 'Turk's landing, all the Moorish flags were immediately changed for the 'Turkish colours; everywhere the crimson flag, with the gold erescent in the middle, displayed itself. As the Turks ndvanced, we saw them drive, with vinlence, the Jews from every pirt of the town, not suffering them to remain in sight while the Turkish pasha passed by, who was uttended by agreat mumber of Turks. The eastlo musie, and the same corps of cha-nses whieh hat fer so many years anmomecel to us the appoach of the pasha and bey, proeded him; all the Turkish vessels saluted him, and the batteries at the Marine tired, till he reaehed the custle. In lis stite, wo hat the sittisficetion to seo the rais of tho marime, who they last night sail wns strughed.

The despair and confusion of the Jews cannot be conceived : they expeeted to le stripped of their $1^{1 r o-}$ perty, and haply fon: them if they save their lives by diseovering all their treasures.

Fwerything is quiet in the Me hiah ; and so few of Sidi Yusuf's prepile are seen, that it is thonght by some of the Mours, he has ateterminel to go to Thinis with the pashit and ley: Otherssay, he is collecting more Arabs to make heal against the. Turk, whom he speaks of and considers only as a ruffian.
looth the pasha and the bey may he said to have fallen siccrifices to the fital efleet of believing in destiny. When the mexpeeted news arrivel at the castle of a new $\mathrm{l}^{\text {nes la }}$ being alrady in the lay, weompanied by a strong Turkish ileet, theso prinees were so paralysed with tho thonght of what they eonsidered impunding fate, that they seemed to wait, withont attempting to make any resistaner, till the storm reached them. When it was known that the Turk, who had arrived in the eharacter of a sovereign, was passensed of the sultan's firman, the pasha and his ministers appeared motionlens, and ready to bow their heads to the irrevocable aleerees of the Porte. After. some time, however, doubts were entertained of the validity of the firman, and of its having been obtained from the sultan; orders were therefere issuded from the castle for the sheikh and rais of the marine to collnet all the foree they emull, an!! oppose the Thuk's kinding; but neither the pashar nor the bey came out to animate the people, who feared, without a chicf, to resist the man who in a few hours might hold their lives in his hasd. An hour and a halt' passed atter these orders wero issued from the eastle, without any apparanee of their heing put into execution. Messages were again sent to the sibeikh and mas of the marine to arm, while neither the prshar wor hey approached near a window or gallery of the eastle to see what was going on, or to show themselves to the people. From cight in the evening, the time was passed in fruithess messinges from the pashat to lis ministers, till millnight; when the firman was sent from the Jurk on board the flect, with great eermony, to the castle, and the pashat ordered to quit it, or recoive his denth there.

The pashia, the hey, and the bey of Bengaxi went off, aecompanied ly a tribe of the Nuwiyalis, headed by their ehief, Sheikh Alief: Jhis offeer confirmed the accounts given us, of the pasha laving fainted three times in his way from the castle to tho gates of the town. Ite felt severely for not having sent the females of his timily, at any risk, to the Meshian, which it was now to late tu do ; but they eomforted the pashar by reminding him that all royal female eaptives must be sate aceording to the tencts of their Prophet, who formits their being in the least annoyed in cases of war. The subserfuent conduet of the Turk and his men, however, proved the pasha's fears just, and themselves to be banditti, and not authorised frum the Porte; for, contrary to all Muhammadian laws, they took not a buramen to coser thom. Onc of the prineresere, lithat submit to doad sather than loase the consto in wiech a here semue mine of har ihothes. Lilla Inalluma, wher was wry ill, was cartind cunt in the artom of her dom, fin oll the shases in attondater were detainesl survice or to low sold. Tluese blacks, motion living within the dasile and sonne in the trwn, mew gratefilly therked round their allietod mistress to other their servises to her at this mabirtumater menemt.

 widaw of the lato muriderol hery anil these two reyal wit where 'Tlue hate ley's hamifal danghter the Thim has detained in the astle, hat ing dedated his lation to the cimily, can ouly listat heme as mery of the pashas to a combanal in the sultata thay, was moted for hia piracies, and has formoty hern considerod are the mfise of the 'Tarkish dmaniuns.

This Turk put intu the harluous of Tripmis with his

 pashas tamily, mind comequent dimender of the king

 comery, hoping to sile min the ultand ministas by the rimh presemts ho will mend hatwes, allaswod ly minder anil rapiac.

It ihis mivis the ofld parhat, with his som Humet Iny, at Thnis, hat llatuet hey and sibl liusut, su bate y at deally variance, retmriol to Tripoli with anxiliary forces, and they sheceded in driving the townur away, by the decrees of the sultam, the hexp of Thuis, mul jointly to share the throne of Trijuli; 品t some ation the two prinees hat elemed Tripoli of the Thurks, Sindi which completely shat him "ut frum rysal power; and this was accomplishod in the following singuha mannes.

The bey, warnd by his friomds or hy his own appehensious, had for a long time since his weturn to Tripoli, avoded guitting the town hat in company with Sidi Yusut, finm the far of the latter acting inimically to his interest whilst ahsent, or preventing his enteriag tho town again on his return. But the two princes lwing ont in the Merliahl fogether, sidi Yusut; on a dispute with his brother, left him, reacheci the gates of the town some minutes befire him, and without further him from the walla la, wire to Derner, of which, hat said, hey permitlent him to low hey; moding, that on his reflusal, lum shomily be suarilleed befiere then walls of Tripuli. The hey having ner where resenvere, turnes brother, Sidi Yusut; guistly sunted on the throme : : panha of Itripuli.

A dispasition in the luy gatave ul his kinglom quictly, serme to pronise lim ol hupplier life in this mast duily mud lumily womind hine of clee late lny's muriler, jurpertrateol in the sulue room in which he himself tivat dow hreath, and which romm mill remains within it.

 "ormairs, ouc" whon Iragut hais expellow the Kinghts of St, Juhn in 16:61; and secomelly, whon Ali hen Kal aptured the place trom the deserendants of then first beron expertod fom the surties of crimes and usar pations ly which her paverd his way to dominim. It mush "ril mul curvption oxisted, that Yusuf, wher onjoyed a very long wign, was hot worse than his pro"

 property was to " certain "xtont resperted, nal com and cruilty manifested themselves more than evor, anil at lugith ather a reigh of finty yeme, he was shat up within tha walls of his palace hy his revolted sult irets, mul was ohliged th undicat.: Hence arome a civil war between two if his denomblante, whish hasted binew y yars. The lonte at first enpumed the catse of tho ihire sont, Ali (his two chlor brethers lwing dead), and

 Bin liamot, sum of Hanct biy, who hat retired to most favomed towns on the comas, as far na its site is concernend; a fleet was selle to carry of Ali, mall," phace 1 chinf-Askar Ali, or "the soldier Ali""ppointed from Constantin! ile. Ein Hamet, unable ts survive the fall of his finnily - tho karamanli chictio of 'Tripul-killed himself; but the last desecmants of ther mace are reflugees in Mata, mad they have atill at st ring party in thr comatry, who renoler Askar Alis sway almost powerless beyoni the walls of the eapital, notwithstanding that many of tho Aral tribes have acquiesed in tho rules of the 'hurks, the renowned thmmas-Anar ghuma, Amar shifina, Aurr-iycma, and Amar fillah, having lwen the hast to uphold their indeponilence.
These tribes were induced to give in their submissiun mainly throngh the instrumentality of t:": 'consul-General of France; the comentry whieh her represents having, in necordance with the sec-saw polieg which is unfortu-

Ald, RoUND TII: Wollil.

; hes than arderver leer, of whirll, bio liling, that ant lis lire thil walle of resulime, turnal ith him minl went long, lemving lis on the thrume :a
"up his kinglom upior lif. in lhis il ; whise les now in cempmoni"d as it. -ry olject nromm of the lates liey's - ill which he him(mbIn will romulas I surate performod

Co lufum Turkialı welle. lho kinights danis al thas dirst The rule on' the last. n of Yusuf I'and::, mul ин might finior rimuse mid natir tor domisaion. It y, that whire so that Yusut, who wrave than liк 1 "י" puldie: alliies will with moro likeral "иhaply comatiy; [ureted, mul com supplied, manulitoes incraming. $\lambda_{4}$ romanes tomariot mowe than rvar yome her was shint his revolted sult linur urome a civil whicls lasted thriw tho. canse of cho rripoli ; lus lueing (1) Sheikles in the ars to the cansen of laul rotired to to) bre ane of the: firt ats its site is off $A l i$, and to noldier Ali"Whant, Mualile Kurumamis chiefis ast descemblints of they liave atill a 'mler Askar Ali's Ills of the enpital, Aral, tribes lave ks , the renowned (unt, A uar-jyיum, it to uphold their

a their submission

 +h: ‘’usul. (ieuc-- ${ }^{\text {revents having, }}$ which is unfortu-fore to do overything in ita puwer the anosolidates his

An exconsion in then conntey in the (inne of the: reign of the Kinrammalias was bout prociarly what it is in tha of a visit male to that, niter which is alunt nites miles to who went with us, anmula el to more thon lihat number, dinesl was me olive grown, with grounds berlonging to t!, pashats first miniator, Mustuplat Serivan, where Soms are stationol to tuko eary at lis lanels.

 aeropied of un isvitation to juin the praty, newompanion in milers.

Fire mane milos after we laft the town of 'Tripeli, the. suil the groutert part of the way was a white silver sand, the brilliancy of which, in $n$ long jibricy, is :mere is pereniar to the sumls mat descots mearost Irio proli; their exiremo whitumess makes tha: contrast the Khamsin on hos windy from the interion, tes atriking to pars unnotiesul.

Ia our ride, whore the folinge of the Indian fige was in ahmolance, the romis, firlis, and other inchomares, to which it served as fienters, mado a mose expmotimory : 1 matrane. This immonse leaf grows hate to the length of sixteen or seventern inchers, mat eight or nine in width; its comsistroce rembers it mestry tho suldacerol' wral : while it ix young, it is of a manatiful areve, growing without atem, ond lenf out of the othere. This extmordinury nlarub forms a holge of fourtorn or fifteen feat high, and eight or nine tieet thick, making a much stronger fence than .ither brick or stone wails. This being the searon for it th, blewsom, its uppamaner was trilly curious; every leaf was set clone rouni the: edge with the lull blassoms of the fruit, which were orange enlour tipled with crinson; and the whate of the latwes forming large seollops, : e extrerme: brightuess of the sun gave the helpers -ad tiolily an appenance of bining everywhere richly decorated in fertuons of gold and red.
The eultivated grounds we ghssed were not hain ont with methos or design, hut were inclosures of trees of all sizes and punlities, mod placed in all directions, unong which the towering ilate treo was everywhre conspicuons, ilisjluying elaso tu its summit luxuriant brancles of tho ripe date, resembling amber: cabloges, lat leaving ther right atm :

 throt.

 allil the key rhinal lifose with whirh it was line is attentive than to the lemuty and cleanlinamen of their Whan we firat arrived at siblat, we tompd mbly to "xmmine lare alive phatatians, where we wete to dines, atill matimed onr rithe te, view at alt labe in thes minlat of the manle, walle d the lake of Tajora, bot far frema the: village of that maths. At thiatiar it wat hearly dry;

 ath haril in atome; it is lireleen with yreat dilicolty, Herat doal af hilt, and is the dhes flate whenes this artislo is taken whel is reperted from the kinendom:

 Alexamria. 'Jhe beds of these two extratirdinary lakes are a sont of litch, from ten to twelve mildes $\mathrm{i}_{1}$ lengeth, mul matr a mile in with: they are dry nine monthes in the year, bat in the winter thate corno-s from the pormai a def visleteralonred water, filling the Jitkes to five or six fiet. 'The return of the hatat above two fiet in thickseso, and sos haril that is is broken by bato of iron. 'They grorure frem these lakes thirty six thonsand quinta's off sate every year, : quaintal heing abont one lundred and twenty founds weight.

The Lake of Tajura i, nearly surrounded bes sams, Dut on apporching the villase of Tajura there ajr pearel innmmerabie small clusters of trees at considurable distances from cach rether. In the middle of each clunp the sands carried thither by the winds lay in a conical form, nearly as high as the tops of the trees, presenting an apperane of having luen brought there by human exertion for some partirnlar purpose.

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

The Muhammadin peasantry, though slaves to their lords in ereything but hame, ajpeared contenterl and larpy: Whole fimilies were laying romed the duors of their cotages, langhing, smoking, singing, and telling romantic tales. They lmonght us ont fiesli dates, howls of new milk, and jarsi of sweet lakaby.

In these mixed eireles of peasants, it was worth while for jersons more refined than the Moors to abserve, through the rudeness of their manners, the attentions pail from the young to the arged, and from the son to the fither: Lut Moors, Turlis, and Aralis are remarkably kind to their chidhen ; and, in returns chiliken are manently oherliont aml aflectionate to their parents, and sulmiswive to their superiors. It was eary to diserm in a monent, ly his mamer, whon a goung man was speakinis to his father, his superior, ar an ohder man than himsolf: to each he used a dillerent wort of marked respert, both in his gesture and worils.

Our ahmiration of the village maralut, of mosiue, newr Salal, grave an ollener to the Jowrs, which hat nearly proverl more serious than we at the time imatined. Seveml Murs came uy to us mons leaving the marabut; lut when spokin to by the grardy, and secing two lumansof sheh divtinetion with as, atherif of Mekka aml the sme of the tirst minister, they retirel, thongh avilently much diseontenterl. Several other partics :ulvimed to us, ome after the other, and retired in the same mamor: we thought little more of this ciremostanes, and contimese our rita. Snveral hurs attorwats, while we were dining muler the olive trees at Silnal, some Manss appeared at a distance, aparently from the curiosity they in senemb have to sef ('hristiams. Thuy hailed us with a compliment pait here from inferiors, that of "Salam alaikmo" (may there be peace hetween us), and receiverl from sur party the appnoprinte answer to it of "Alakum salan" (there is peace between ns). Onr servants eariod to them, as nomal, dishes of meat, and the Noors grented us utan in womm with the expme vion of "Allah hatre" (tion prospere you). This cordialite seomed to sueak all well. As the mumber of the Jlows incrensed, wo perenven their sunl-will towaris us cleclined, and from the time we hatl linished one ropast and preparme to monnt onv lanses, till wr nomery rathed the town, thes followed us, manmone and expostulatine with our drawneme ; and it erertanly of their lostila intentions, the foremon of Sahat ropurted this circumstmen to the jash yestorlay, satying, the Mon's womld have nttieked tha"Christians if bo lad not provented them in time. As we lid not know exactly the extent of our daneer, we arviel in fown sutisfied with laving spent a bery agreable day.

Ilse Jamon du Kratlit paill : visit to the same musture, which he had been told was all ohl chureh lailt ly the Spuniady in the vixtenth entury ; lut hu satistied hinself, hy elose examination of the lmide ings, that there were iogromuds for such is supposition. He believes this mosque to be, lowerer, of great anti quity, dating possibly from the time of the dirst eruption of Jslamism, nud that henee it may have lieen used ns a domed by the spminurls during the epoch of their foni nation in this enumtry, which cirenonstaner, he thinks, may have given origin to this legend. Our illnstrations, as are also the others referving to Trijoli, aro from deawings made from photographe taken on the spot.
In common with most Eastern cities, Tripuli has suffered at various periods from the raxages of the phague. Of this disease, which carried off sen great at ummber of the population of that eity in $178{ }^{\circ}$, the writer above groted makes the following menticn.
The plagne now (. Tune $28 t h, 1785$ ) depopulating this plaer is said to be more severe than has been known at Constantinoplo for eenturies past, and is proved ly caleulation to destroy twice the number of poople in mopurtion to those who died of the same disorder hately at Tunis, when live humber a da:y were catrich ont of that city. 'lo-day upwards on' two hundred havo passel the town gate.

Our house, the last of the Chistian houses that remaned in part open, on the l4th of this month commened a completr prarantine. The hall on entering the house is parted into three divisions, and the denr loarling to the strect is never mbackid but in the premence of the master of the house, who keeps the kisy in has own possession. It is opened but amee in the dhy, when he goes himself ats fire as the tirst hall, amil semis a servant to malock aml unbolt the door. The servant returns, fund the person in the street wat.s. till he is desired to enter with the provisims he has heen conmissinged to ling. It tind realy phaced for him a vessel with vimegar and water to preaise the ment, and another with water for the vegrables.

Among the very fre aticles which may be hrought in withont this precantion is coll hrean, salt in hars, straw ropes, straw haskets, oil pureal out of the jar to purent contagion from the homp with which it is coswerl, sharer without papre or hos. When this peran has bronght in all the artieles he has, he leaves by them the necomut, inn the ehange out of the mony given him, and rotiring shats the door. Straw, previmisy placed in the hall, is lighterd at a considerable distance, by means of a light at the ent of a stick, and no berson sumbed to cutor the hall till it is thought nutliciently purition liy the fire; atter which a sorvan!, with a long stick, pielis up the arount mul smokes it thanomgly roturns the key to his manter, who his been present diring the whole of these procendiugs, last iny part of them should har nerflected, as on the observaner of them, it mas safoly be satu, the life of every individual in the homso dejumbs.

Right pople in the last sevell days, who wore emphoyed as furovilars fin the honse, have tal o the phamo and died. Ho wha was tom ill to rethum with what he latul bought, comenned the artiches to his wext neighbour, who fithtully fininhing his commise sion, as has nlways been hone, of enmse mereded his wished it, or reommomed another: it has happened that Mooss, quitu ature sueh employment, have, with an monest charity, delivered the prosisions to the Christians who hat sent for them, 'The Moons prefinm nets of kimbuess at present, which, if attended by such dreathal circmastanees, would be very mately net with in most purts of C'hristendom, An instance very lately ocenared ot their philanthropy. A Chris. tian lay, ull olyect of misery, ueghected and forsaken; self preservation having tanght overy friend to fly from her prostilential bel-even her mother! But sho this, legend. Our ferring to Tripoli, agraphis taken on eities, Tripuli hats ic riatage's of the cd oll" so great ia city in 1785, tho ring mention. depopulating this mas been known at and is prowed by mber if perple in the sume ifisorder di:y were carrind two hundred have n honses that rethis month comahall on entering ions, and the denv wekoll but in the se, who lieeps the penel hat conce in $r$ :is the tirst hall, muboh the door: in tha strect waits - provisims ha hats ready placed for ter to reepise the - wegetables.
may he hrought in salt in hars, straw the jat on prevent it is cowned, sugar erem has brought a ly thom the ace many siven him, $p^{\text {revininly }}$ placel mble dixtance, by cok, and no jueron ought sulliciontly rimu, with a louts ses it thomoughly heving the door, hats treen present 4, hest uny part of he wbervanee of fevery individual
$y$, who were cmhave t:al | the ill to retmon with $e$ artiches to his ring his commisso sucecoded his M, lyment, if he it has lapproned ment, have, with rovisioms to the The Moms pere hich, il' attenthod a be very murely

An insfance rive. 4 Cluris1 anil fursaken; frienul to fly from her! But slo found in the harbarian a paternal hand: pasing by, the heard moans, and coneluded she was the last of the family; and finding that mot to be the case, he heheld her with sentiments of compussion, mixed with horror. 110 sought fior assistanee, mul, till the plague had con pleted :'ts ravages and put an end to her sullerings, he did not lose sight of her, disdaining her Clnistiam friends who had left her to his benevolent care.
The expense and the danger of hurying the dead has heceme so great, and the beririls to make the collins so very seare, that the lomly is brought out of the house by friemls to the door, and the first mam they can prevail on earries it over his shonder, or in his arms, to the grave, endeavouring to keep pace with the lowg rame of eotlins that go to the burying-sromil at noon, to take the adrantage of the thacral sirvice. To-day the dual amoneted to two hundred and ninety.
Tuly $1,188.5$--The cries of the jueplo for the loss of their firiends are still as frequent as ever; not a quarter of an hour passing without the lamentations of some new afficted mourner. No more prayers are said m town at present for the dead; but the coffins are collectel tongether and pass through the town-gate exactly at noon, when the ceremmy is pertormed over all at once, at a mosque out of the town, in theire way to the lurying-ground. The horrors of the melancholy procession increase daily. A Moor of consequence passed to day, who has not missed this melaucholy walk for the last fifteen days, in accompanying regularly some relic of his family. He is himsilf consiWered in the last stage of the plague, yet suphorted by his backs her limped before his wite and eqdest son, limself the last of his mace. The riches of his family become the property of the pasha, no one remaining to claim them, as does all other property exry that returns to the church; lands or houses of this deserip. tim annexed to the church, in possession or reversion, lning deemed sacred hoth by prince sund perple in all Muhammadan states: theretore, by whaterer mems the property is neguired ly thase who give the reversime of it to religions fomulations, those riches are transmitted mumolented to their direct male issue. Mecan and Medina are the phaces senmaly profereed for such datation ; the eater at Meces, in which the augel Gathied delivered the Konzan to Duhamuad, and the tomb of Mulammad at Medina, rendering theso places sacred alove all others. They gave the name of weaf to this settlement, for which they pay a very sumil acknowlelgment yearly till tho extinetion of the isser that holds it, when it all devolves to the religious fommation on which it was metted.
Whmen, whase persons have hitherto been veltei, arve watheng utwot complet images of despuir, with their hair lemon and their haracmis open, crying mand writuing their hauls and following their himities. Thugha great dead of thair griot here by custom is appessed hy action, yot it is dreadiul whon it proceeds so traty trom the lunt as it does mow, while all those we seare frionds of the departed. No stramgers are whon hars his som today, earriod his daughter sesterday, null his wife the diay beffere ; the rest of his timily ure at home languishing with the plague, while his own mother, spared tor the cruch satisfation of fors buwing her ollspring, still continnes with her son her wrotehed daily walk.
Siner the beginning of this drembinl intietion, whith is anly two monthe, there thousmed premons linve died in this town (nanly une-forath of its inhabitants), and its victims are daily increasing. It must he obecrved, that the Moors, in all madaines, have great disadramtages, ariving from tho mamer the peophe here treat their sick. I bedieve it to be olten a lonbt, whether the patient dies of the malaly he labours under, or by the hand of those attending on lim. They seem to have but a slender knowledge of physic: fire is one of their chief remedios : tiey use it, for almost everything -tor womals, sibkess, colds, ant even for headaches, they have accomso to a red-hot iron with which they mon the part affected. They pertoran anputations secely, slungh in in rough manar; ; hat in all kinls of uiszases, such as fevers, dee, it is thought one-fourth die of the disorder, and there of the remedies mado use of. They will give list beited up, with eollice-gromms to a child of three montls ohl for a congh; nad to a man in a high fever, at dish ealled tarshia, made of red bepper, onion, oil, and greens ; ur a dish called bazzeen, a kind of stiff batter pudding, dressed with a quantity of oil, and garnishel with dried salt meat trie d, hown by the name of kalled. When a person is thught to be dying, he is immediately surrounded liy his fricuds, who legin to serram in the most hidenis mamer, to eonvince him there is no more hope, and that he is already reckoued amongst tho thead | The noise :mul borror of this secue cannot surely liat serve to hurry the patient, wom down already by siekness, to his last state. If the dying person be in ton much pain (perhaps in a fit) they jut a sponful of hones in his month, which in general guts him out of his misery (that is to say, he is litcrally choked) ; whereas, by being treated dillerenty, or even left to himself, he might, primps, have recoverol. Then, as according to their religion they cannot think the depurtend happy till they are under gromed, they are washed instantly whilo set wam, and the greatest consolation the sick man's friends can have is to see him smile white this operattion is performing, as they look on that as a sign of an molation in the theensed of what is doing; not sulpusing such an apporanco to be a convulsion, oecasimed by wasling and exposing to the coll air tho unfortmate person before life lat taken its final depmrture. This accounts for the fromben instanecs which hity hen hove of people being hurind alive ; many of the Mars say a thind of the people are lont in this mamer.

A merehant, who died hero a little while ago, ans buried in less than two lours after they thought he was dend. In the evening of the same day, some peophe prawing ly the burying gromul heard dradthe eries, and when they tane inte the town, they reperted what hant happenci. As his man, whase name was bin, was the last humed there that day, his frienels went in the morniug emty to look at his grate, which they "prent, und siaw him sitting upright; he" had torn of all hive clothing. that was sullicentend.
Whem thes prepror a bouly tion the grase, thase when em allord it fill the ears, mostrils, mid muder the evehids with a quadity of camphon, mal the richast spicees they call provere, nul burn a great gmantity of aromatio heribs muler the hourds the landy is washed on. They then dress it in the hest elothes they have, nud gut on it all the gohh and jewels they ean paree. An mmarried woman is dressied as a hride, with bracelets on her hameds mul fiet; ler cyelrows pinted, and the lairs pharked out that they may look even. When dregsed, the hooly is wrapped up in in tine new picee of white linen, brought from Mecca, where it has been blessed. The poorer Jewesses will work night and day till they have amassed money enough to purchase a piece of linen, which remains by them till wanted to bury them.
The coffin is coverel, if a woman's, with the richest laced jileeks or jackets they have; if a man's, with short caftans of gold and silver tissuc. At the hend of a man's coffin is placed his turban, made up as hanisome as possible, and as large as his rank will allow The turbans, to those who are versed in them, clearly point out the description of the persons who wear them. By their fold, size, and shape, are known the ranks of military and naval characters, the different degrees of the church, and the priuces from the sovereign. A turban worn by a hadji is different from others, and a green one can be worn only by a shereet of Mecea. The size then of the turban is inereased necording to the rank of its wearer, and whether he belongs to the military, the navy, or the church, is known by the folds of his turban. At the head of a womm's coftin is fastenel, instead of a turlon, a very large bonquet of fresh flowers, if they are to be procured; if not, artificial ones. The body is carried often by its nearest relations, who in their way to the grave nre relieved every moment by some triend or acquaintance of the deceased, or some dependent on the fimily, all of whom are so very anxious to pay

NEGRO DANCE.
this last renpect in their 1 , wer to the remains of the departen, that the coffin is continually balameing from one shomblder to nother till it renches the burging gromed, at the risk of being thrown down every moment.

A space is dug very little more than lige enongh to hold the body, and plastered with a compusition of lime on the inside, which they make in a very little time as neat as ehina-ware. The body is taken ont of the shell, and laid in this place, where prayers are said over it. The iman of the parish necompanies from tho hanse to the grave. When the hody is haid in the earth, the pit is covered with broad deal hoards, to prevent the sand from falling in. They bury very near the surface of the carth; which is the more extmondinary, as they know that an immenso number of degs from the country come in dreves every night to the graves of their deprarted frimads ; nnd yot there is not ally perple who hod their own dead, er thase of any other veligion, more sacred.

It is the custem here, for those that can atiord in to give, on the evening of the day the corpse is burict, a gunatity of hut dressed vietuals to the 1 bor, who came to fitch wach their portion, and form sometimes inmense crowds and confusion at the doors: this they call the supper of the grave.
princes from the hadjii is different be worn only by a of the turban is inof its wearer, and $y$, the navy, or the is turban. At the instead of a turban, rs, it they are to be Che booly is carried n their way to the by some friend or ome deperident on ery :nxious to pay in. They bury 1; which is the that an immense ae in dreves every friends ; and yet heir own dead, or 'ed. it can affiorl a, ${ }^{1}$ orpse is burien, on Ite jour, who came min sometimes imdoora: this they

RUSSIA.

A VISIT TO ST. PETERSBURGII.

i.

Approleh to the Carital-Tue Neva and its Incidi-tions-Quarneing the Icr-Cmmstmas Thees-Adtent of Spmine-Fister Festivities-Cimencil Mtsic.
We left Berlin for St. Petershurgh early in the month of March. At starting we had nlready spring weather; But heyond Coselin (travelling through Pomerauia) the elevated ground was still covered with a thin layer of suow, whilst in the low grounds a thaw suceveded to the slight front of the night. The same temperature continued along the coasts of the Baltie, in the country between Dantzic and Konigsberg, nul througlumt Lithumia and Courland to Higa. Here the Dwina was still covered with iee; but it way begimning to break up, aml we lid not traverse it without danger. Ahove higit winter still prevailed; the whole eomutry was covered with snow, which beciune so deep after we passed Derpat, that we were obliged to place the carriage upom a sledge A comannes; the temperature was from fifteen to twentyfew posts howes er before reaching St. Petershurgh the five degreps below freezing point, and continued so till show suddenly disappenred, and we had to finten on the mides of April. The two principal disadvantages the wheels again and nhanden the sleige. This phe- | Whidh the city of Peter the Grat has encomeremb, and nomenon is suid to be not unusum, from the peculiar which it will continue more or less to labour under, are, warmath of this small extent of country. ${ }^{1}$

TOWN SLEDGE.

In St. Petersburgh we still found snow, and instead of the droshkies we saw only sledges in the streets. (See 1. 97.) It seemed as if winter were about to re-

[^5]the intensity ot the coll of its climate in winter, and the low and swampy character of the country in which it has been plaeel. For six months in the year, its port cannot be entered, by reason of the iee, cund it can never be supplied with provisions for the consmuptien of its inlmbitints at proportionate prices with those of citics whose ncighbuming fichls produce wine and oil, or eren breal and elecse, like nur own. Nature, it must be conteswed, however, has heat her stem chameter before the labours of men and the arts of eivilised life, mure here than in any wher lath possessing : similar climate. Bat there are lounds heyoul which the eloments will not cale to enterprise, ambition, or eaprice. The greatest inded of the nypurent olstates to the city's progress, mising out of the low character of the ernintry, hiss been in a wonderful mamer overconse; for, inerelible as it appears, all the splentiel Now of palaces, ame the noble ynases, and public and private editices of the molem an ital of lassin, are built mon piles senk in the more morass upon which the eity stands; and there rennais on this acemant nothing lut the mproluctive clan:teter of the ham ibout the town to regret.

But in another reygect the position of the town, taken in conjuction with the eflicts of the dimate, has appeared to some toleave it exposel to dingers which threaten iven its sudden and utere dissolution. There are ocensional swellings of the waters of the hay and the Neva, caused by the winds on the one side, and the heary rains on the other: :and these are sometimes so ureat, that the whole town becomes inumdatel to the depth of from six to twelve feet above the level of the strects. Every provision has been made to negative as much as pussiblo all the effeets of this inconvenience. Siaches. or wateh-towers, have been erected in all parts of the tuwn, upon which watchnen are stationed, provided with the means of making signals by night and by day, of the rise of the waters, inch ly inch, when an inundition is threatened, which enables everyone to retire to his house, and seek the י!per stories, in time to avoil the consequences of being suddenly overtaken by the rush of the invaling flom. The same watchmen, serve too, to give the earliest alarm of fire, which is of more frequent occurrence in every texw of Russin than in any other towns in any part of the worht, partiy arising from the quantity of wool uncl, even in their brick and stonc buildings, and partly owing to the nethod of warming their houses by stoves set in the mass of the building, and yet more, perhaps, from a certain carclessness habitual to the perople.
In relation to the inumdation, it is even suid by some not wholly visionary alarmists, that the entire city, with all its edifices, from the palace of the sovereign to the meanest balitation, is yearly expused to the danger of being swept from the very surtiae of the soil, withont searer learing one stone uphamother to record to future gencrations the glory of its short reign.
That melh a eatastrophe, indeed, is aven possible, is suthecint to exeite speculations; Lut that it is probable, us smoe of the inhabitants nver, and whoso alatm has heen welowl in a style of mixed path 's and humone by wome fincign, writers, can searcely tw helieved. To prodnce, it is said, this great culamity, it is lat neeessary that two ciremmstmers of ocensional and one of ammal ocearrence should hapien at the same time. These nre the riso of the waters unly a few fect above the hase of the houser, a vielent guto of wind from the wentwarl, and the lirenking up of the ier of the lake Ladoga and the P ver Nevn. Anyone who knovs anything of the irresistible force of large masses of ice driven before the wind, could not indeed reflect without terror on the conselpences to this city, slowuld its edifices ever be placed by these immontions at the mercy of the fields of iloating ice that may be driven before the wosterly gale. Yet, those who have speculated upon the probalibity of this calmity, have not perlaps given sufficient weight to a circunstance which must gir fin to comaterhalance these droadol effects. It must in emembered, that the open baty can only be covered with tloating ice when the great lake abnve the capital, inerensel ly the mancrous rivers which at the time of the molting of the snow fill into it, is pouring out the superthux of its waters, coverell with ice absu, and with such force ats must at least greatly cheek the moward course of the western waters sund of the iee which they bear, though it should not at the same time cheek the rise of the inmmataion. Thus the chances of such a calamity seem too remoto to be a just cause of dreal to the poppulation.
Ragular roads are marked out on the iee of the Neva for sleighing during the long winter, and these are even deconated at places with evergrems and lit up at uight by lanterns atlixal to poles. An appanance of bustle and inetivity is also kept up during the winter season ly the transport of ice. This is cut or mather regularly quarried like stone on the Neva and the canals, in misses of about a yntil and a hulf in length, and some two or three feet in thickness. This polygon is phaced upm one of those simple sledges which the fussimn peasmut construets so ingeniously himself, and with his small but patient and hardy horse ho is never in want of work during in almost arctic winter. (S'ee p. 104.) Not a noblemam, nor even a merehant's house hut that has its ice-cellar. Thus, instead of the long files of earts bearing firc-wood which amonnce the arrival of winter, these are aacceeded in winter by filcs of slelges bearing each its huge bloek of ice. The driver takes his reat upon his own merchundise, but his thick coat of sheep-skin protects him from cold,

The long previod of winter is by no means one of dulness in the eapital of Rnssin. First of all, stores have to be hidid in at the Sennaia market, where the bustle among the mountains of frozen provisions, shecp, pigs, poultry, salinon, sturgeon, sterlets, and a hundrod other thinge, that neemed to have been reized by the frost in the last convulsions, nud moulded into the strangest shayes, is nomething wondrous to behold. It must not he supposel from this, howover, that fresh provisions nre not to be obtained during the winter in St. Petershurgh. The contrary is the case. But they are obtuined at a muela lower price at this great antihyemal market, and they keep perfeotly well, so lons as they are not exposed to a high tumperature.

Another market, of a more gracefil chameter, heralls the eve of Christmas. Tho Chinistmas-tree has heen introducel into Russia, as with us, from Gremany: Fir the werk preceding this great Christian festival nothing is seen in the streets of St. Petersburgh but moving trees: one would fincy Birnam Wood in its progress to Dumsinue. This temporary market is heli at the tiostinui Dvor, $n$ vast bazerar in the Nevelky gerspertivo. Thonsumds of young evergreens are luronght thither from the forests of the environs, mad the demmed for them is prodigious, for no fimily is without its Christmas-tree. On the moming of the 24 th, the bazarar is one mass of verdure : all day long thine earriages of the aristocracy and the sledges of the middlo classes keep succeeding one another, till at night nothing remains.

Tho room at home, where the same great festival is loold, is curefilly closed to tho young people till evening, when, it a givon signal, all rush in, acoompmied by the o lavo speculated ; have not perhapis itance which must rletfects. It must in only be eoverel a above the eapital, ieh at the time of is pouring ont the ico alsu, and with: elicek the onward the iee which they no time eheek tho chunces of' suelt a $t$ cause of drend to he ice of the Nevil atul these are even and lit up at night pearance of bustle the winter season or rather regularly and the canals, in lengtl, and some polygen is placed hich the liussum cimself, and with se ho is nover in ctic winter. (See $t$ merehant's house satead of the long ich announce thic clet in winter by bluck of ice. The merchandise, but him from cold.
no means one of irst of all, stores arket, whure the Irovisions, sheep, ats, and a hundred reen neized by the moulded into the ous to behohl. It owever, that fresh ring the winter in te case. But they t this great anti. setly well, so long mperature. meefinl chameter, Whistmas-tree has us, from Grumany, Christian festival - Tetersburgla bit man Wood in its porary market is mur in the Nevaky pevergreens aro the environs, and , for mo tamily is e morning of the inre : all day long he sleiges of the another, till ut

a great festival is

 cople till evening, compunied by thedelightel elders. Handsome yomg girls, youths in the / effect. The priests are engaged in their functions old Russian boots and the uniform of the Imperial colleges, zush behind the youngsters, but in indvance of their parents and their more sedite guests. The saloon itself is brilliantly lit up, and one or moro trees are set out ujen a long table. Littlo wax eandles are burning from the branches, which sustatin in intinite varicty of presents. The table is also covered with hooks, albums, toys, pictures and works of art. There are portraits ly Zarenko, landseapes by Timorr or Zichy, worting seones by Svortehkoff, and pastels ly Robillart. After the first moment of dazaling surprise is over, lots are drawn, and the delighted young people testity their sratitu' by kissing the hands of their parents. (See p. I0:) 'ihe perpetual fromovar fullows, and a pleasint i. mee temmates the festival which inatgomates thuse gramd receptions in which the princely luxury of the nobility delights to dinplay itself. (See p. 112.)

Fownel the end of $\Lambda_{\text {phil mping appeared. Until }}$ then I was lodged in Vasili Ostrof, on the right bank of the Nem. One morning it was announced to me that the breaking ups of the ice in the Neva was about to commence; that in a lew homs the bridge of boats would be dismonnted, and unless I transported myself directly to the other side of the river, I should be ent ofl for several days from the main part of the town: I crossed over, therefore, immeriately. In a few days the suow completely lisuppermel; the slediters vanished, and were replaced hy dronhkien, which were more numerons and more necessary than ever, for the streets wete nouly evorywhe a monetos, almost impassable for pedestrians. The pavement in St. Petersburgh is extremely bad, amb all the cfforts of the anthorition have not yet modneel any satisfurtory amendment, although in sueverl phaces revery variaty of paving has been tried. The nature of the gromal and climate. undumbedly present great dithrulties; lut in vouing the lalwores engaged in mending the javement, it is dillicult to mulerstand how sueh wretehed work is tolerited.

On the Sumday before Easter all the members of a Rasuian limily assemble, senerally late in tho evening, and remain tegether until midnight, to visit the churches. I joinul a tiunily, from whom I hud roceiven! an invitation. About half-past cleven belock we left the hotese: all the streets wro illuminated, in a way which I have ouly seen in St. Petershough and Moscon. Along the trottoin on both siths of the street, in aldition to the limple, and at intervals of fow on fivo paces, are bowls filled with hurning tallow and turpentins, which produen it peculiar magienl illumination of all shigerts.

The struets wero full of people, on their way to the ditlerent charehes. Wr. went to the Post Chureh, iun found phaces in the gallery, wheneo we could survey the wholn interior: The buibling becume gralually filled with the fitithful, each carrying un muliglited taper in his hand ; everything was silent and sombre, and it was only in the cendre, aromed tho tomb of Clirist, that tapers were buring. At a quarter befire twelve one: priest aprared, then ofleers, and the simple and imposing ehanting of the litmies commeneed, with the constantly repeated "Gerspodi pomilui!" (Lord, have merey unn un!) in chorus. This simple chant, sung without uny neeompuniment by reverul tine malo voices, proceediug from the only lighted part of the chureh, hes a truly impressive aroum the tomb of the Lord, whieh is at length carriel into the sanctuary: then the roar of camon annownces the hour of miduight, and the commeneement of the new and important day. The chorus of priests, in loud and joyful tones, sounds the "Christos voskress!" (Christ is risen!); tho cloors of the ikonustas open; at that on the left the woman standing nearest among the people lights her taper at the eonsecrated one presented to lue by the priest. The neighbours receive the light from her; and thens its sprembs in cratic spatks om all sides through the ehureh, whieh is soon illuminated by athousand lights. 1 And now legins the solemm mass, with the chorns of the priests.
'The music of the Western Catholic Church, particularly in Italy, has aequired a secular and protiue character, which is heightenel by the instrumental aceompaniment, and the singers, male and female, clressed in the first style of fishion, in the choir, who not unfrequently sing bravuras with embellishmentsami cadronees of their own. Even the chureh music of Becthoven and Mozart too often partakes of this light and tlorid chanacter: the style of the theatre transferrel to the ehmeh. Sume of the stricter prontiffs have endeavaured to prevent this, but in vain: little improvement is likely to be effected, until instrumental musie is entirely prohibited in the elureles: even tho organ ought not to accompany the singing of the priest minchorus, but only that of the congregation.

The chomal music of the Protestant elourehes is almirable; the eompositions of Sebastiam Bach will always be regarled as masterpieces; hat in wenemal the music appears to me tou simple, momotonons, and cold.

The music of the Russian elaurel is well adapted to produce dep religions emations, which is manifestly the whjeet of all ehmech music. In its present state it is not vory aneient. Throughont the whole of the even among the Starovertai (anciont believers), whor rotain temacionsly all the wh torms down to the most insigniticant details-the ehureh singing is entirely diflerent from the liussian of the present day. It is entirely in unison; and in the execution the nasal tones predominate, as throughout the East, and oven antous the Juhammalans, so that the genemal effect is by no menns 1 leasinus. The melodies, hon ever, are for the most part very heantiful.

In the reign of Catharine II, the chureh musie was retormed in Pussia. The old melodies were mhpted for several voices, and persons were vent to Rome to eolluet the most meinnt C'hristian melorlies, which hat ben preserved there prineipally in the Sistine chapel, and thus the present music was formed and bronght intur use. Now compositions, ulso, particularly those of the Russian composer lantuianski, were intermingleal with tho liturgies. Selools wato everywhere instituted for temehing music to the priests; and it is a $1^{\text {roont on }}$ the groat masienl capueity of the people, as well as of [^6]their excellent diseipline, that within fifty on sixty years this monde of singing has gradually extonded over the whole of the immense empire. How often have I heard in simple village churelies the admimablo singing which 1 had becone acpuanted with in the enpitals! After this short digression, I return to my narrative.

'The mass procecded quietly, until shortly before the conseeration of the clements, when sublenly tho shawl of a woman in the thickest part of the crowl took fire. 1 t was a moment I shall not easily forget. A ery of thror cusued trom a thonsand woices, a fiearfal tumult, and rushing towards all the ontlets of the church! The priests instantly shut the ikomestas lehind them. Blowever the dauger fortumately was subit over, and the fire was extinguinhed by the by. stamers. The terow wan greatent and the dinger most inminent nar me, in the elair of tho gallery, which was crowided almost exclusively by hatien of tho higher clins: I have used the tirm " fims inent dinger," breause, in fict, there was ouly one small staircose down to tho hody of the clumel. After an interval of ten minutes all dimger was over, fuiet was restorest, and the service continued to the end.
On entering the street again 1 fomm universal rejuicing. All who met greeted, anhmacel, and kissed eace othry, with the joyfinl exelamation, "Christos roskres.:" anl the answer, "Vo-istino wokress!" (lle is risen imdeen!) It was about three crelock; all the honsse were apen, and everybody ont of bed; visitors ritered them, and wero everywhere receivel wit! the Baster greeting, mol conductel to the tablew loaded and decorated with all sorts of dishes, the consecrated hend and cheese being first presented. I met a friend, (seneral vom M—, in front of his lumse: his servanta received him in the hall, and lue embraced and kissed them all without dintine. tion: then the finuily mot us with embraces :mul kisases it looked like' a juyful meeting atter a long absence.

It was only when day broko that each one stinght reposes. At cleven oclock I went to see the Grand Parade. By the intercession of a friend 1 oltaineal, under the portal of the Winter l'alace, a favoumble phace for witnessing the whole. It was glorions wenther. and the magniticent trons were hawn up in a long line. The Grum Duke Michaed first uprated, galloping ahong tho line, ant was received with loul hurrahs trom a thousand voices. After a little whilo the emperor eame out of the palace, and walked to the troons; :un immense shont of juy received him. He was in the miform of the Don Cossacks, which heeame his handsome form better than a monhom miform, He stood in the centre before the troops, and the a number of pirivate soldicrs from all the regiments stepped forward ami surrounded him. He went up to each in turn, gave the Baster salute, embrned and kissed him. It was a scene of striking gramieurl Every year, on tho simue day, for centuries, this public jubile has been renewed, to commemorate the resurvection of Our Sord, The feeling of their equality befire Himpervalles the whole peopite; all, high anil low, an' race each other as brethren; and even the muler of a quarter of the globe, the temporal protector und heal of the chureh, salutes the lowest of his sulijects, nud acknowledges therely the religious tie which binds lim to his jeople, by a community of faith, love, mul loyalty.

Phonenade on foot - Abmirality Sqialle - Monements-- limeat Stheers - Neysia l'ebsifotife - Indicativi: Butsinviks.
St. Ievrasuundin has been justly deseribed as a wonlrous city, which rose up at the fiat of a mighty despot, from tho midst of perstilential swanns, where searee a bumber and fifty yous ago, the wolitary seabird alone fomed a home-where tisease and reath fullowed eneh man who placel his foot on the ungrateful soil. There the great l'eter, wh the bosties of a hundred thousaml victim serfs, defying all matual obstachen, resolver! to build his future enpital ; anll lo! as if at the eommand of a rangician, stately palarog, gorgeans temphes, and aplemidel milings appeared; and St. Petersburgh now rivals all and smplassey most, of tho alder citio's of bimoper. At many miles distanee the lofty dome of the lame Churdi may be seen reflecting back the sun's rays in a ball of glowing yellow light; and on aprroaching nearer, other donnes mad spires, mat empolas, mul minarets open to the view, varying in colour, and sparkling with gold and silver stars.
Walking is vory mifishionalle at St. Petershurgh, maless it he upon a public promenade at a purticular. hour, "Ir within a public garlen into which curriages are not mbintt- 1. The distanese to be mate are gene-whether we are engaged in the inspuction on sud, objects as uximilly atimet the attention of the stmager. or in : my other busimess whatsmes. Nevertheless we chose to walk in preformer to taking ome of the vehieles called drushkiso, whidh me tobe sem wating for hime in many phees, ns more fivcumble to our immediate риириме.
Issning from the street in whied on liotel stoot, w. came directly $\quad$ pon the grand phlio phace of st. I'eters hurgh, called the Amiralty Syumes This great place is in form bearly semicimentar, num in about a verent, or three-fuarters of a mile in length, amil about half' : verst in bradth. 'To give some ilest of its gramelen and extont it will he mblicient to mention the several chief edifieres which form ite sevaral divisions, with the ohjocts of art whieh hore prosent themodes to the admimation of the strmger.
'Ihe mont remakathe st the luihlings are those of the Admiralte, the Winter l'alace, whicle is the labitnal residenee of the sowreign, the s.mate IIouse, the Witat Major, mad the eathedral of Nt. I vate. The builelings forming the Almirnlty, which are all inctoved within walls nul surmumbed by wemues of trees, stand in the minhle of that site of the stuare which is tomed by the prer flowing Nova. 'Tho Winter lanace, facing the rivar, and the luilding of the Fitat Mnjor in the rear, fomm the ulyre wing of the sfuare ; num the Senat" House mul entheilral of St. 1suae, with some other publie ratiens, form the lower wing.

Ujen the square "fyenir nlwo the two mast remarkable momaments of the city-the timoms equestrian statue of I'eter the Great which mbons its lower division, and the mommental cohmm of Alexander, which is in the uprer division.

From the site of the sham" opposed to the river, radiate the thres principal streets of the enpiat, from all of which thoughout their cimpse may lo seen the slender nut gided pite of tho Admiralty, rising from the centre of the several buildings. After crossing the
15. - Monements tife - Indicativi his - Dnosnkies-
$y$ deseribed as a tiat of a mighty I sw:mphes, where the molitary seaiscase and icath $t$ on the ungratethe bonlios of a ying all matural "apital ; nul lu! a, stately palawer, lilings appeared Il shu!nisicy most, uy miles distanee di may be seren ball of ghowing arer, other tlomes rets open to the ig with gald ant

St. Peterslurgh, le at a purtienlar 0 which cartiages e made ame geum wed orre on foot, spertion o" such n if the stanger, Nevirtholess we ne of ther veliches wating for line o our immediate wir lotel stood, wi :ne of St. leters 'This great place alume a verst, or ani alrout half : a ot its gramlemr ation the several ivisions, with the bumbelves to the 1ugs arr those of $1 \cdot 1$ is the labhitna! House, the E'tat

The huildings 1 inclosed within rees, staml in the ich is limmed by 'alitee, faving thic Lajor in the reat, nui the Senate -ith some other

wo most remark

 mous equestritin s its lower divi Alexamler, which
al to the river,

 he capital, from any lie neen the lly, rising from fier erossing thegreat plaee we enterel the chicl strect, which is called the Nevski Perspretive, und is that in which there is the greatest inovement and commerce, and that which presents the most remarkable of such characteristic sceus of this metropolis as are calenlated to attract the first attention and interest of the stranger.

It was a little before the busy hour of noon that we turned into the gramd promemale, nul great commercial thoroughtire of st. letershurgh. An iden of the eflect produced on a stranger upon enturing this street for the first time, might only be conveyed in deseription by alesignating it a dunble line of lofty palaces, with a wide and well-paved space between them, and fired from the sameness incident to two grent regularity loy some variety in the style of the builangs, and by evidenees at every step, that it is the centre of commeree and thas sent of the more active and wealthy of the industrions inhabitants of the empital.

The first thing that strikes the stranger, after his eyo has dwelt for some time upon tho prospect before him, is the alisplay of paintings suspended from the walls of the homses, or covering almost every shutter, from the gromml thoor, sometimes, even to the highest aprartments of the linidings; and, at the same time, the pancity of writing, to indieate the trales amp professions of the citizens. These printings are, perhitn, the first of the traits of the chameter mal customs of the midhle ages surviving in Western Europe, which the traveller will observe in Russia, and of which the barber's pole seems tho last relict in this way lutt among musches. Thus, here, as well as in other parts of the town, tha: trades and avocations of the tenants of the ditlicrent anatmente ol the buiblings, are significantly indieated by these signs. Instead of distignting the fironts of the honses by large bow-winlows for the exhibition of the damlesmen's wares, as in onv srat thoroughtures, ahmot every article for salde, even ajon the gromen thoor, is represented in then indicative paintings. If, for instance, we would purchase groceries, it is not neersany that we shomh be so hamed as to read the linswian cquivalent fior our term, to guide ns ; Wr lave only to lowk ont for a sigu, anil we shall not sarach long before we timl a picture with tea ehests anil sugar-hongheadr, very likily aerompanied by annsing drawings representing the prometion of theiv contents, from the negro griuding the eane, and the Thinse rolling the tea-leaver, till they severally become articles of combures: in retail; mul aven up to the shopman vemling them from behind the counter within. If we wish to buy shoes, we have but to hom ahont, till wo see the painting of some aproned antisan, probally a story or twa high, linsily at work with the awl, while another is represented in the net of tiving 6in. If we want a cup of cotlere or tea, we won timb a shitter crowiled with the representatinns ot cotlee pots, ten-pots, and eljes and silncers, and have only to enter, to lee sersud with some of the liest in the world, of tea empeially. It we desire to refresh ourselves with a glans of wine, a down painted botth's meet our eyo in it moment ; and wo see waters proming ont tha wheroms beverage, and hibhers hahling up the sparkling ghass to sombeh for the insect's wing, which certain bon vironts among us are so delighted to discover. A Lombun aldoman, indeed, could not walk fin up, the Nevski Perspective, withont diseovering as muy indications of guod sulstitutes for turtle, if mot if the hatled mmphibious animal itselt, ns might reconeile him to any reasomble term of banishment from the table of the Lord Mayor. Horses, carriages, efnipages of every kind figure here; in short, everything for sale or hire, from a pin to a column of marble, or from a gocurt to an equipago fit for an emperor ; and for all which, indeed, I felt yuite as grateful, during my stay in the Russian capital, as overy simple pensint must he, that from his cloddy uecupation finds liis way tos the metropulis of his country. More than once, indeed, when unattemed by a cicerone, 1 had to draw the tradesuan from behind his counter to point ont the article I was in want of, from among the many that were upon his sign : and it may be said, to the ereclit of the liussian artists, that much more rarely than might bo expected, is a puinting mistaken hy the passenger for the representation of any other thing than that for which it is intended ; at least, only one instance came within my expericnce. Upon this occasion, I was in company with a friend, and when we had pointed out to the shopman what we theusht represented it pair of gloves, he presented us with a pair of breeches. But the mistake was easily corrected ; for, such is the aliscermment natural to all wheprof by their intelligence, that we had only to thrust wur hands insteal of our legs into the breeches, and we were understuod in thoment.

While we were oecupied, upon this first oceasion, in examining the amming pictmes in passing, we arived at the bridge of Auitshhof, which is at :thont the termination of the most frequented part of the lerspective, withont pereciving the change that was taking blace in the great thomoughare. lhat when we tmmed to retrace our str p s, we som found ourselves wounded with many pussengers, pronenading or hurying to and fro; and we now observed the broad miriage-way half fillent with equipages of the several rarieties of the comintry.
I was unprepared for the brilhant show which the Newai lierspective now presenterl. Upris the foot1avement, which is abont equal in bremeth to that of the liondevard des Italiens, at Paris, were promenaling miny well-dressed prisonages of luth sexi-s, abont a thind gart of the men being in unifinm ; and. at every instant curriages were driving up to the parment to discharge their freights of alegatly attimed ladies, atcomfed sumetimes by eity hemx with firlled shirt and Nemder came, and at others by fumale servants, who were the sole duwdily diressed persons to be men.
'Ihe sun luerhap ravely shines unon a more brilliat living spectache than that which the Nevski Perspective exhibits at this hour, in thu gay month of July; amb, as it the leright orb would make manems to this northern people for the panity of his rays during two thirds of the year, when he denes tivour them with his shmmer heans, his ray is searee anywhere wamer ; and the becu-monde of St. Petersburgh, know woll how to appreeiate, aml make the mont of, the short summer thoy enjoy:

Sthangers in this eapital me often surprised at the prediminame of uniforms in the streets or upon the promenades. At this time, however, the Limperial limud, and the quarter-part of the gimisum of sit. Petrishing, amometing to 60,000 mem, were encanped at Kiasno Selo; and, therefore, thare were not no unally tu be sen how as at ather seasons. Nivertheless, as evesy pablic functionary, or ehinownik, of every grale, weats a miform ot some kimb or other, mad an the greater piat apmear in full ilress in the strects, the proper bongeoise attive will always mpene to le in tho minority. Among the noveltics, he will at one moment sev at ath-otlicer in his carriate and four, dashing thong under the escort of a well-monnted body of Cossicks, and the next, he will pass by two or more Circassians in rompuny, richly elad, and as proudly treading the farvencht as if it were the free soil of their native hills. A few, also, of the bourgeoisie are to be seen in the eaftan or long-girdled piefse, and with unshorn chins. lint there is perhaps mothing more truly pieturerque and at the same timo charisteristic of the comntry, than the apperrance of the iswoshtchiky on arivers al' the chroshkies and other vehicles. 'They wear miiversally the catian, and their leadels, and a low fontcorncreal eap, which is pendiar to themselves. Thery are "luars smartly dresed too, ind they are a real ornament to the streets ame public places of the eapital.

But there is a novelty to the stranger of anothrer kimp, to be seen here, as well as upunall the carriagnwayn af the towns througlunt linsibin, canved by the nethod of driving the horses, which, until one has become accustumed to the sight, and aequired the falae taste fiom which it arises, is umpleasant to look upon. When there are two humes, one of them in attachal within shates, just as we attach a single homed hat the other. las the traces by which ho draws merely hooked nurn the left side of the vehicle. The hase in the shaft mons direetly upen his course ; lint the other instend of heng iblowed to pull in the dimetion in which he mans, has his head and his whele houly turned by the ofl-win, in the direction of annt forty-five me more derves asido from the cours which her is actually makines, and which the horse in the shafte is leawing. Thus this hose is runnines sideways, instemel of in at straight direction; and, when this is hint ohserved ly the stramer, it apeats ats it the ammal ind broken the gent which attaches him to the carriages amd wat merely dresged along by lis fidlow-puadruped. Yot such is the conventional law of fushion in the country, that the elegance of the whot equipas', as it consers the nuble or rich eitizen, is considered in a wreat mea-ure to depent upon the momber of degrees from the direct line of the conse of the vehich, at whels the site horso is made to "pper to rom. But it is yot still st ranger. that even foreigners, to whom this methoul of driving seems at first so stotespue, as to berern painfin toliehohl, alter :t fow monthes, mo only cease to cond.imm, Lut ven melmite aml imitate it,

The common troshly is a vehiele guire prendiar. atho, to the comutry. If it were introlnced into Enurland, it wond insinntly obtain the nanne of tho rockinghorse. The soit for the passemger is phaced, as samen wonld siy. fore and aft, insteal uf athwartships ; and sometimes, when there is only whe passenger, and sometimes when there are two, we are seated just :ns we sit upon : horse; and it is not mand langer than that which we dirst stroble neross in the muser:. When there are two parsengers, they wom monly sit after the mamer that our ladies sit mi horsebuck, aud one on each side of the foro and aft seat. There ure cther kinds of droshkies, howerer, though they are nsually very small, in which, jon may sit almont us comtortably has in a gig.

Amonge the novelties to a stringer, in the strects of this capital, ure, also, certain armed men called butshniks, whose oflien may be saill to correspond to our street pulice. Their mamer of performing their dutios, however, is more like that of soldiers cacamped. 'They are formed in parties of three, and they live in small wooden, eletached, and movable houses, which are usually placed near the corners of the streets at which the men station themstles. They bey turns keep wated, slecp, and perform the culinary otliees tharing the twente-four hours. When on watel, they wear a nomform compesed of a grey coat faced with ree!; and they eary each an chormous battle-axe, or weajun like that of a INoman lictor, the hamile of which, as they stand erect, rests upon the gronnd, while the metal jertion, unleses the bushaik be tall, appears in a line with his bearded and ficree visage. This we:pon is, inded, of such climensions, as to sem rather intruled for ormo ment than for use. AmI, in truth, any timoriters in the streets of this capital are it is well known, ot such ram ocurrence, that it is even said that the cige if the formidable weapon has never been stanal.

When we hail scen enomg of the grander puthlis: thoronghfares, we took one of the dromkies of the rocking-honse deseription, and after a drive theong! somu of the less remarkable thoronghtures of the city retirned tor our hotel.

1I].

 Chemen og st. Perre and Path-Imperal Tompotue River-letiar the cinevt's Cotraob-EschangeCositue of the Derehists.
The lay after tho tonu mul wemeal review of the fown deserilsal in the last rhapter. I was necupied, is. company with the same new acepuintines, in the ex. amination of such of the chumeles of St. Petwshargh as have the greatost mputation for their architectual merit we thair decorations. It will sntlice to make in this place a few such whmel remanks as sugesestorl themselves during wir visit to the Cathenhal of Fazan. 'Ihiss was at this time the nowst innurtant of the linishod churehes of the modrere Ruswian metroprolis, and that where the ceremmine of the sreat lestivalwere still celelmated, in awating the comipletion of the cathertmal of St. I satac.

Tlue Rusnime are, "ertamly, as far behime the elder nations of biumpe in the chaturtw of their architere tumb edifices, as they wre in alvance in plaminn ant construeting towns; and any one dixposed to contel "pon a eritical examination of the arditectumal :nerite of the Kazan mathelral, might easily fimd more to exense than tombire. Fint we are not ibont to maks more than surl few remarks upon this chate so ecimen of monern mative arehitceture, the the rextants unan the fite exurem of genins, which the chureh of which it is une of the temples impones, ami such as lerce themselves uph us ly tho initation which we apeat to sere of Sit. Petrr's at lieme.

The Kizan cathedral, in conformity with the established fonsum of the Greck, and which hats hern retained in thi* liussian chureh, and is marely dispegareled, in the larger temples a weiatly, is constructed in thi form usuilly designated the Eirerk Cross, of which all the bur arios are of efual length. Dy this restraint ulun the free hand of art, architectural beanty has been in this, us in othor instanees, in a great measmre sucrifiewl. The thumeln stands at a sumfient distance from the street to monit of a wide space in firont of it, and is phaced in the centre of a remi cirentar colon-they live in small bouses, which :ure he struets at whicl y turns keep watch, otlices during the h, they went it miwith ret; anl they or weatum liko thit hich, as they stand the metnl jertion, in a live with his "1on is, indecd, ot internded for omitlay disorders in the thown, of such rate the edige of the taineel. he grander pullis - drowhies of the a drive throug? thlates of the city.

Aazan Cathidral-rrova-thotras -

 $\therefore$ PEn masmath--Tmperal 'tows;-TIDET-FCEvery TIDET-GCENE REATAOR-Eisemange-
enal revinw of the 1 wats recempied, in intanee, in the exif st. leetershemgh their architeetural suttien to make in aths ns sugfesterl the dral of Razan. in!ertant of the :usvian metropoli, he great festival completion of the

- burnd the drter of their :welitece c in plaming ant diyposel to chen witectural :merit" ily filul more to mit alount to mak. is clrwite si de rextraints 川un elmech of whith and such :as terree which we alpent ity with therestirHich has lectin wo ardy disregirden, mstructed in the 'ross, of which an liy this restraint tural beauty has a great measure sufficient distance ace in front of it, ai circular colon-male. In this eolmande, indeed, eonsists chiefly the imitation of St. P'eter's, which ly foreiguers in Hussia is usually spoken of as if an attempt had been made to produce such another chureh as the great temple of Romish worship in Italy. In truth, there is lat one more particular, in which theso edifices force us into drawing any comparison between them, and that more properly reqards circomstances that are independent of the editices themselves. It is the anomalies which mark buth their situations, in regard to the towns in which they stand, and even to the imuediate tuildings by which they are surrounderl. The Kazan cethedral stands albont halif verst from the Allairalty Syuare, upm the Nevski I'erspective, the remarkabie elaracter of which we have just seen. The position of St. P'eter's, anome the dirty irreghar and poor luillinys which surrombi it, is well known. Now, if it wero powsible to persuade the alherents to the rites nud torms of worship severally practised withia these temples, to get over the seamblal whieh might attach to worshiphing in a building in the figute of a cross of the wrong form, amb after this, to win over al legion or two of such aecommontating saints at the ealendars of both churehes might supply, and persuade them to tear up irm their fommations the supposed great prototype temple at Rome, and its copy at st. l'etursburgh, nal transfor them, each into the phee of the other, then would both edifies be worthy of the eities they severally adorn, and both cities be worlhy of the temps that tulon them.

As fir as regardeyl the exterior of the Kazan chareh, we wer satistial with a mere ghace, aml we were not hero insensille of the initation. But as soon as we were within the chlifice, we mo longrer reeugnised anything but the original and brilliant appendages to the Greek furms of wership.

The form of the Greck cross is deeitedly a disadvantage also to the cffeet proluced in the decorations of the ehureh, and in the cerenonies which the Greek and Russian rituals require, as well as in that of the grand whole. In the present instance, indeed. this is more especially the case. In the rites of the linsian church, even more than those of the Romish, it is neesssary, on account of a prition of the religious ollices being parformed concenled from the virw of the people, that there should be one enpecially holy altar, arhich must fince the rast. Thus, in order to aceommolate the position of the chareh to that of the street, the gramil utar hats here heon thrown upon the left amm of the cross, which both spoil the erferet as you chter, and intertices with its proper relation the dome and cuphlits withent.
'The tinct show of the interior of a Greck, a liussim, or a Romish temple, and the firms of the offices of religion in the net of purformanee are, to a Protestime's olservation, much the same. Lensumdenly tine yoursolf in the milst of more or las grady decorations, and sighe and symblols of ewonts in satered histery, mud the rejnesentation in one firm or other of spinitatal and material beings, often even from the Croator, in the well-known figure of a gray-bearded old min, down to tho mement mitred or shaven-erowned saint, that has accuired sutieient celdrity to get into the caldendar of the church, or to obtain a place for his mondering bones, cased in ghass, bencalh one of the attars mpen which the miss is performed.
As sunn us we had obtained a first impression from the interior of this chureh, we begran to eximine the details of its decorations; and, as there was no mass at the time promming, a!nl but very tew worshippers wre within the churelh, we had ample time to do this, umbinturbel nurselves, and without disturbing others.

Tha firat thing that eaught our attention, as it wilk probilly catch that of everrone who may tor the tirst time enter a (ived whareh, wat the show of pictures, of which numbers wer hanging abont the vicinity of the prineipal altar. and the ceiraominary maner in which they are encasel. The whole of the painting;, indect, ate ahmost always. with the execption of the fate and hands, "utimbly acied in plater of silver or gold, as it alpars to the chocerere, and whieh is often surer femowd fron the cansus as to half emeal even thene featurn of the saterd inmon reperemed.

Litthe as these decorations might be to the tate of thase of a charch of nume simple forms of worship, yet we may find cause to exult, that our cortainly nearer vister, of the Clmistian tamily, in some wential partienkers, than the Italian chareh, hat at hest advancell a step, towards disearling the pawice of decorating lar vaced haildings with reprwentations of divine personages ; for, :lthengh we find pictures in aburdanee, yet we find no sedptured images within her temphes.

Our attention was first called to the princinal altar of the eathedral. Sume steps here conduct t" in broad antrule, heymul whidh a sereen shuts out the view of the smactuary, or holy of holiess called the "ikonostas," into which the priests alone enter during divine service. This sereen, however, is nut closed during the whole of the ceremonies ; but white it is elosed, the priesta at intervals appear before the prople, making their exit. and entrances ly small doors, of which there is one on either side the ikonostas.

We olserved that the whole of the sereen was eavered with such pietures as those above-mentioned. mul was glistering with gold. Beyond this, mul over the serean, which does not rean to the rout of the builling, alpered above the altar, the ianage of the great souree of light in the leavens, reprecented emitting his acenstomed abuadant rays. Ahove this eurtain was conceuled the proper altar-piece of the chmelt.

We now turned to the western arm of the cross, or nave of the church opposed to that of the chief altar, and where the arehitect has been most profuse in the decorations. Here there are double rows ot polisheel granite set upon bass lases, with gilded Corinthim eapitals. liotween theve were sen hangang the flag en all the mations whom sucersine ezars and emperes have humbed in the tiels, from those of the warlike inhahitante of the C'mueasus, to thane of the politer races heyom the western lammaties of then empire. The church contains aldso the remains of the sallant Kutusoti:
 the exmanation of ohjeets of interest in the wing of the church, we retumed to the eentre, where we fimm an :ugmentation of the mumbers of the devont, awaiting the mans, fir which preparaions were enmmencher at the grame att:ar. The first thing that nuw stuck nis, was tho greater propration of men on their knces before the pietures, tham are usually seen in the Homish churches, wal the next, the greater ayparanee of warmoth in the mamer of those whom we saw engaged in the performance of tha worship, than we are acenstomed to observe in any Romish comitry

When the mure devont, indeed, are in the net of frayer, we amot hat lee reminded of that Moslems in their sublimely simple and unadorned temples. The same gemutlexions, the same howing down oit the head, won till the forshend touches the gromm. And it were well, premple, if, like the Monkms, they hat too other pieture intire them, than that which the mind strives to concerive, in its eflonts to eomprechend and tigure all perfection.

As we olserved the Russians engaged in their humble worshij, we remarked that one of the encased pietures, whieh was of the Virgin, had a lareder share of their ulbmation than the rest ; and upon inguiry, we kearned that this was a pieture of peculiar sanctity; of' the Virgin of Kazan, the patron of this cathedral. It hul formerly hung in a church in the city of Kazan, the former ctpital of the Tartars; but, being an "higect of the spereial wineration of the Cossacks, it had heren hrought hy one of the nement carrs to Moscow, and alterwards ly Peter the Great transferred to St. Peterxburgh, where it remains still the object of veneration to this race of equestrinu shepherds, whose soldiers, it is sail, ofli red at the altar which it guards, all the spuils that fell to their slame, alter the campuigns which sueceeded the luming of Muscow. It is distinguished from the rest of the paintings of the Virgin, ly a greater abundunco of jewels and precioms stemes about the casiug, which forms the chering

ICF. SLEDGES.
 thinking, and perform our duties in a mamer we inland which it ocenpies, by its batteries, whieh monat which we trust we have attained, inul, thoush we say, ja strong for all purposes of detence of its own turrets Sum whe that "Gold put to use minw gold hegets," Wht we eanut refluse wir almimentin of this devent amit in the character of this perple.
The citalul of Nt. Pete whomg was among tite carlier of the publie works which we visited. Aftur passing the 'Troitskoi bridge, above the Almimaly Spare, and a brilge which nuites the inle unn which the fortress is built with the harger ivlant of Aptokarskni, which here form the right hank of tho Neva, we suched the entmuer, and we fomd no ditliculty in obtaning ins cathedral. It ue city of Kazan, lut, being an C Cossuleks, it had cran's to Moscow, ransferred to st. 11 the object of shepheris, whose - which it guards, , after the eamof Muscow. It is paintings of the wels and precions ms the conering sition upom the ien, which momnt a thousand men, fits own turet on the vuluerablo (iow against any c, or mon the invading momy. from attack liy ienlties already pas of the water; Niva. There is frigate equipped - diseovered but y time removed.

Within the walls of the eitadel is the mint, in whieh the trensure of the enuntry, in any time of thager, might bo guaviel. Here also stands the chureh of st. Peter and St. Paul, within the valts of which lie the remains of the emperors, and of several of the imperial family of different epuehs, begiming with Peter the Great, the ashes of whose predecessors repose within one of the churche, in the Kremin of the ancient capital of Russia. The spire of this church is similar to that of the Admiralty, and is seen at a great distance. The tumbe within are extremely simple, and worthy of being imitated by many of the royal families of other lands. The remains of the departed he in vaults beneath the church, iuml over these, on the floor of the nave above, are pheed tombs or sarcophugi covered with palls of red cloth, upon which are simply embroidered in gold letters the words, "His Iuperial Majesty," or "His Imperial Highness," with the nere name ; and even, in some instances, there is no more than the initial letters of the name and title.
There are many trophins of victory within the elmreh, in the form of the keysof towns mul fortressen, cresemit moons, suns, eaghs, find momerous thas, anong wh: latter, the most precions to the Russirns seem to be those of the Swedes, which Charles XII. designed to plant mon the towers of the Kreulin at Mascow. There are also in this church a number of the inger nious piece of workamship of Peter the Great.

We ascended to the turrets of the eitalel which overhangs the Neva. This poxition commands a tine view of the more remarknble portions of the town. No me:n l,aildings nor smoking manufictories and warehonses brak the rang of palaces and noble editices which line the bohd quiys of the brom, clear, and rapid Neva. As we stool upon these turrets, we had opposite to us the Winter Palace, the palace called the Hermitage, the theatre, and the Marllo lahace, and also the stately groves of trees that fom the Summer Garden. As we turned towards the right, our view embraced all those edifices mun the satue side of the river which have hern cnunerated as forming the square of the Admiralty. Turning turther in the same direction, we had hefire us the great edifice of the Exchange, which is placed at the point at which the river divides into two nearly equal streams, which, atter furming an island, upon which is built a considerable portion of the town, fill inte the 7roader waters, at the distance of thee or four versts from cach other; and beyonl this were sern several mble efifieen, which contain musums and chambers dedicatel io the arts, of which they themselves are remakalle monaments. Bat, turning towarls the left hand, the eye might rango from the line of these elegout and cheerful buildings to forest scenes, where the river seems to be issuing from the swamps and lakes out of which it proceets.
The scene upon the river is that alone wh. . $\therefore$ bears a resemblance to anything wo meet with elsewhere. Gaily painted loats appeared here pasing and repassing the stream in every direction; tund fine wonden bridger, two of whioh severally spau the two bramehes of the river telow, nad two the grand stream above, with their passengers crossing and reerossing, all added rather to the liveliness of the secne, than to the beanty of the stamiling provject. A fine stone bridge was at this time alls, in the carly stage of its construction, opposite the lower wing of the Adminalty Sinnare.

After inspecting the fortress, we visited a cottage in this vicinity, whiele was built and inhabited by Peter the Great. It has but three small apartments. One of these was that which was approp wiatet for the ruception of the ministers, another was leter's bed-rom, and the third was a private chajel. It is full of evidences of this monareh's taste and ingenuity. There is also a boat shown here, which is snid to have been constructed by this extraordinary wan. Lu that part of the town which is upon the Island of Vasilic, there is even a museum designated by this prince's name and appellation, whieh is especially inpropriated to conserve a choice portion of his numerous works of art, among which are lathes and tools, which are said to be the sume with which ho pertirmell numberleses works that must have required a knowledge of several distiuct arts, any one of which wonll have taken the whole lito of nlmost any other min to nequire. In truth, every place that Peter ever inhabited, every ynt of varth that was the scene of any of his exploits. or of the excrcise of his creative genius, is still full of lim. If we admire a palace, it was l'eter fomded it ; or it has risen phonix-like, from the ashes of one that he placed there lefore it. If we see a public gardin which the citizens recreate themselves during their t season of summer, we need scarcely ask to whom ey owe the inestimable blessing they enjoy ; we may be sure it was Peter that planned it, and phantel the first trees. All the great roads, the canals, everything in this purt of the empire mure onpecially, late from the age and epoch of P'eter, amd, with the social institutions which he framed, prodain to a wondering world the master-ham that created them.

Had such a manappeared in a somewhat darker age, but in whom $p^{\text {esesuma }}$ vanity wan medominant over "wery wher passion, so frent superiority above the ordinary geniuses of the human rice, could mot haw failed to hand his name duwn to future generations with the honours of some of the castern deition, beture whose images millions continue still to bow and bend the knec. But it was haply for Russia, that her mecivilised hordes tell so upportundy under the government of one, the motivent whise life was their jrogress and their improvenent; and, we may say, fir the word, that so large a portion of the human fimily was therely hronght at least within the eirele in which the light if sciance eannot shine long in vain.

On the same day we visited also the Birsha, or Exchange, at the hour at which the merchants meet. Arrived at the point of the islaml above mentioned, wo steppet from our hoat upon a tine ilight of stoue step) which conduct to a broml quay in thece of the building. Tho edifice itself resemblies the Bourse at Paris, from which it was no doubt derigned. Upmon the quary stand two large chlumns about a hundred feet in height, to which are attiched, nar their summits, the representations of the prows of ships in lironze. These are of couss imitations of the rostrum columus on the Piazzo del l'opalo, at Rome. Their appearance to a stranger, at a distance; is maspeakably groteribuc, but well in kecping with the character of the place that they are introded to decorate.

Finding no one upon the quay to whom we could auldress ourselves for the occasion, we directed our step towards the deor of the Birsha, and we were soon mingled with the busy throng within the luilding. There seemed to bo much bnsiuess trausacting, if we might juige from the earnestness with which the merehants were conversing with one another. Somemhabited by Peter apartments. One oriated for the rel'eter's bed-room, It is full of eviingemaity. There riid to have been aan. In that part 1 of Vasilie, there his urinee's mame - Mpropriated to imerous works of ols, which are suid rmal numberlesw owleatge of several hll have taken the 11 to acquire. In - inhabited, every ny of his exploits, nins, is still full of l'eter fommesl it ; - ushes of one that ee a public gardin selves durina their reely ask to whom ey enjoy; we may lit, and planted the canals, everywe eprecially, late nil, with the sucial int to a wonderings them.
uwhat ilurker age, preclominant over riority above the ce, could not hatre future generations term leition, betore I to bow nad bend ussia, that her intunder the governwas their progress may say, fiur the human family was cirele in which the vain.
so the Birsha, or e merchants meet. ove mentioned, we ight of stone stepos ce of the building. rse at Paris, firom Upon the gu:ly dred fret in height, immits, the repre nonze. These tre a columus on the 1. appearance to a bly grotesifur, but of the place that to whom we could : dirceted our steps nol we were soon thin the building. transucting, if we with which the e nother: Sunc-times a poeket-book whs taken out, and a memorandum mude ; und at other times ngreements, ns thry seemed to us, were ofuickly seribbled upon desks, of which there were an ample number in the linll: but ns we kn'w in one, and no one knew or addressed us, all that had lifi on sonl in what we saw, was but a dumb show to our senses. It may, however, be mentioned here, that the grenter purt of the foreign thate is curried on, mal nearly nll the ships belonging to the port nre owned by, foreignem, chiefly Englinh and Germans.
There were nevertheless two things that were intelligible to our nemses, nul interested us-the Russian merelant's eonstume, and the spiritual ingredient which we saw for the first time mixel up with commereial affian ; but with the usages and the chanacter of the perple we were among, in whase most armany transactions this is constantly seen, wo were yet lont little aequainted. Sone of the nativo merelants were dressed in the caftan, mul all, except probubly a few that mix more than the rest with foreigners, wore long beards.
The other usige, one might expect to time nlanost mywhere, mother than upou the supreme mat of worldy athars. We hat overlookerl, as we entered mad mingled anong the erowad, a lititu altar placed near the entrauce, uphn which there was a light burning, till we saw the merchants recognise its presence. Some only crossed theuselvers ins they pissed it by; others fromithe to time sppronded, and made their erenuflexions with bows and erossings: :and, if we might judge from the apparent emmestness with which their incidental worship was performad, their jetitions could not have been for anything late the suceas of the business which they hand come to thmsinct. Nevertheless, their worship apjenred to us ats much out of phace here, as a commercial negenciation would be in the mue or the aisles of a cathedral.

Nothing further interestad us in the Sirshat: and we retired withont having exchanged a word or at look with empone among the lonsy throng; but alsu, ats we trusted, withont having eansed tuy dermgement in any transartion of that day.
The next of the commereial marts of importance in St. Petershurgh, is the Gastinnoi Dvor'. 'This is a grand dejository and place of sale for merehnadise for the mont prot by retaif. It is me entablishment of a thwronghly national char teter, and is to bo found in every considernble town in Iussia. It resembles the baziar of the 'I'urks and A mibs und other eastern preople, and las numberlesw warehouses, stalls, shops, and sheds. The huilding in St. Petershmegh is of colossal dimensinns, and is situnted upon the Nevski Perspective, and forms the angle lertween that great thombunfine and one of the larger streets that piss teross it, at the distine of more than a vent, or about an English mile from the Admitalty Square.

Wherever the number ot fureigners that are intermingled with the population, as is the ease in the modern capital of Russia, is sulficient to give to usages of society rather a foreign tone, there is perhaps nothing so well idapted to give a stranger in idea of the chanacter ind enstoms of the classes which are the same throughont the land, as the markets and marts of retail. The buidling itselt, of this grent commereial depository, is by no means un ormment to the grand street in which it stands, though it is well placed for all the purposes of the retail trade, It las two stories. In the upper of these aro deposited the goods for tho supply of the retail dealers and the country mereliants; but in the lower are found only such gools as we for the retail trule of the town. The whole is surromided by a colonnarle, beneath which wro some of the lest whinis, fin the sable of every articlo of home production, and for nome anticles which are the produce of Chinn and Persit.

It was about the busy hour of moon that we cime beneath the colomandes of this great muel maversal bazaar. It presinterl to us the first seene we beheld after our urrival in Russia, if we execpt the isvosht chiks and their droshkies, that wan so thoroughly mational and wigimal, as to give ns that sort of impression so much sought atter hy travellas, and sommetimes called the romance of their thats. The retail merchants were nearly all attired in their pieturest etaftans, with cajs on their hends, and they wore lung lueards.

In some particulars the Gastimui thou if very different from the bazams to which it han hern chbove comparev. In the cantern bazara all is still, save the light sand of the samalal upon the unpared around, as the purchissers move slowly from stall to stall, eves when the alleys are crowded. The drowsy vantor, seated with his legs under him upon his carpet spead out upon the conater, with a little rail betore hing, and smoking lis chibook, reçuires often a second, we eres a third demand, betore he will tronble himsell to reachs an article of his groots the:t you exprese a desire to purchase. But at the Gaxtininoi Dvor yon no sooner come upon the colonnate of the building than two or three of the native merclants pronice upon you with oflers of goods, whieh they dechare to be not only the best and cheapent in the word, hat just exactly those whieh they are sure you are at that very monent in seareh ot.

It womld have been arpeable to us to examine some of the eroods that were of mative manuficture; but we found this impossible, os account of the importunity of the vendor:. When we but cast an eye thwards the shelves of one of the stadts, they approiched as, amt porred forth a torrent of elomence that seemed morvo suited to an inpassioned hatrogna than to a petition to purchase wares. Once or twice we haltend to look at the contents of a stall, secure, as wo hoped, firma these inmortunities, by the merchants havinit their humb full of business with their chatomers; but we no stoncr sto门日ed than others firon the opjusite side of the alley rushed from their sath, and seized us by the noms, to draw us to their severat stalls. Nerertheloss it was not easy, nor prorheps rifht, ton us to exhibit anger ; tor such wats the manuev in which they acted this seemingly rude part, und :1pulogisel when reboked, that any ill hemour on our part wotis lave seemed guite ont of plue.

When we hat neen enongh of the stidls of the colonnade, we penctrated to the imer laines of the building, whieh mo mumerous; and we found everywhere the sume characteristic of originality, and adl the trades classed as distinctly as in a Turkish buzan.

From this we retmrned to our hotel.

IV

Winter Palice-Girind Reception Room-hall of Alex. ander-Hall of St. George-Mfrmitige-Mahbid Palace - Statee of Petel the Cimeat-Alecander C'olime-Academes or solesce and Art--Acadejis of Mines.
Whes wo visited the Winter l'alace, we fount, apon coming to the entrance, that hoth the grand stair.

narknble: for their co that that iuterch may he suid to $s$ of that I'rincess's al era in Rassian private chapel in form a remarkable , without viohating so ofteriabandened private chatels of

2, fommbed alno by cign works of cele${ }^{11}$ linguage. Some said to have botes - veral of that great is alsor said, stored
, wo wrere tull, still 1e Empress ; and it tal muchanged by however, regimded seulpture, of which Of praintings there tion of which were the therearo thirty f seulpture, which ; murt, copins from

completes the line

 a, and is called the second and thime a lower story of ased with, marble. remarkible in its ifice we siw in s't. jon of negleet allilled, of this cipital, to notice the t wo c cireat, amd that which, as alrearly of the Admianty. of Preter the Great $y$ its thonsumds of , and is sat turon it a morass near St. f fourtorn liet in vonty in breadth, whanent, mexsuren. The lumse is of the rock, and his left hami, ame ver-flowing Neva, , becume tho seat us cily. 'Ihe wet trushing a verjuent therery well illusyparent destinies nculterda wondersome of the party work, as well as , with feelings of as selo of what it and then inquire cowletige to be so far above the orlinary efforts of art, shonld not inspire us with a wense of the merit of all who had any share in its construction.

This monument consists of a shaft eut out of a single block of red granite of no less than riglity feet in langth, resting upon an cmomousbloek, also of granite, of twenty-five feet in height, and of nearly the same mumber of euhice feet, with a massive eapital supporting the statio of an ingel bearing a eross raised high in the air, as an emblem of the trumph of the late Emperor over the enemies of his country and of roligion, in which double character tho linssians are wont at all times to regard their enemies. 'I'he fill height from the ground to the top of tho cross is stated to be one humlred and fifty feet. Among those who havo lonked "pon this colnmn with the rye of an artist, some lave formd finult with the very same parts of the work which others have cither delighted to dwell upon, ns instanees of exact and happy eonformity to the rules of art, or of an equally happy disregard of them. Be: the merit, however, of the work what it may, we were satisfied that the feelings above mentioned, which we experience, wero prolneed by the substitution of the cthereal loring which the vast mass supports, for the figure of the sovereign in whose honour the monnment is arected. Again, it must be observed, that whether a celostial messenger, placed in such a be not. in atn allegorical fight, the most proper that could be chosen to probluce the impression intended, we cannot behold so vast a mass of solid substance wet If to support the figure of ont of the beings, wh sh we may bulievo tu exist, though we do not know of what substanco eraited, and from the regretterl rarity of whese vixits we retain s. imperfect an image, without perceding an ineongruity in the lesign, which curvers a painthl or depressing impression. It muy ho also remarked, that perhaps no allegorical figure what socver shomild be permitted to angross the whole idea which an art ist hats embedied in any groat work.

This therertheless magnifient momment is alrealy damaged, thumgh to what extent is hailly known. $\dot{A}$ rent las apened in the uper limb ot the shatt, resembling a ermek in a pine tros, nud, loubtless, firom the same frost which will ramely permit reven the tall ntlyting of her own roalm to pass its soveral nges, ind return again to the gronnd, withont similar instanees of the pewer of a varying tomperature over all that exists within its influener. Thus, it conld hardly be exprected that even a piece of the oldest of the roeks that compuse our planet, and which must have had to contend more with heat than cold, now taken from the even temperature of the groume in which it was found, coulal licar uninjured tho violent and sulden extremes to which an expmoure to the nir most subject it in this elimate.
The inpital of Russin possesses un Acadenty of Science fonni a by leter the Great upon the motel of that of laris. Besides an extonsive librury of upwards of 100,000 volumes, this acmlemy contuins a Musemun of Nuturul History, au Egyptian Museum, mu Ethoographic Musenm rich in tho implements mud dresses of the northern tribes, mul a botanical eollection. In the Museum of Naturnl Mistory is preserved that pstomishling specimen of animated nature, the mummoth, belonging to in species of the olephant, extinct, at least, heforo the historic period of the world commences, and whiel lins afforded to the mindents of naturnl selene so fertile in field of interesting suppositions concerning tho coudition of the carth, and of its inhabitants, before our own species begin to cultivate and beantify its surfitee.

We saw this museum, as well that above mentioned, under great disalvantages. Wir land some ditliculty in obtaining almittaree : and, when wo were almitted, wo were acompinied only hy our interproter and an excessively stupin attemiant, whose answers to tho questions put to him seldom excereded the mose provoking of all replies umon similan oceasions-" I know nothing about it."
'The mammoth is stated by the guile books to be sixteen feet in lougth, without incheling the tusks, and nine feet in height. The bones of this gigintic animal, with even a purt of the flesh, were finmil on the lamks of the Piver Scma, in Siberia, in the hatitule of $70^{\circ}$, on the ocension of a mass of ier separatines itself from the great hotly of which it must have finmed a portion from "to hom that the ereature was imbeden in it, and, it may be, even from an epreh anterion to the "ppenmace of the prond biped whon now domineers wrer all ereatures, perhaps but for his briet day, to disaly"ar like his brute prederessors, and be hourd of 160 morrs.

This skeleton was not fomml entire, but lais been so skilfilly restored, that it is diflient to tell the real bomes from the imitation. Ihere was a piece of the skin of the animal lying poai the lwark mon which the skeleton stands, weighing thinty English pounds; and the quantity of thick hair with which it is still eovered slould be sumliciont to save somo matmolists such speculations as have emeled in giving to Siberia a tropical climate, after our slohn hecame cool enongh for tho existence of omanisel beings. 'I'le skeleton of an elephant of ordinary size hats hern plaserl beside that of tho mammoth, to make the dispropurtion between them the more apmarent.
'The Acalemy of Arts in St. Jetershmple, contains fat one pieture by a native artist of sullicint celderity to be the sulyjuct of interest to visitors to Russia, thoush there are severil organal paintiane of the Italian sehool, and many eopies of the tirst mong the 1talian ame ather metiots of varmos alures of merit.
'The sulgeet of the mative painting is the destruction of Ponpeii. 'The pieture weropins nealy the whole of a wall that forms whe end of aboal mallery, and the figures representer uppenr as large as lite. Thempinions of this chefelenurve of the Inssian sehool, nad its talented author Brïloh; are various, in relation to certain rules of art, or impremions, whether imarimary or real. It must at least be allowel to be a magnificent produetion, whatever may be the liscoveries of the nice observers or casuists that visit the Aeadeny.

The Mining Aeadeny of St. Petersburgh is an institution of great interest ; and it were perhaps well if it were made the model of some institutions that might bo with alvantage establiwhed in Great Thritaiu. Fouthes intenided to be employed in the eivil service of the mines belonging to the govermment in tho diflorent parts of the clupire, receive ull especially alapted practical education for the purpose, either hero or in some one of tho sevem braneh estalbishments of the institution which have been formed in wher parts of tho country. 'Thes, in phee of the stualy of the theory nlone of those hamelies of seience of which their fisture purnuits remer it necessmry they should aequire a eomprent knowledge, they have but to descend to tho caves beneath tho building of tlis acadomy, to be transported into the midst of the type of the practical operation of the works they are designel to superintoml. There, in as serics of model mines, furnished with everything required in the interior of the several descriptions of mines in Russia aud Siberia, they have the means of preferting their knowledge, buth of the thenry and practice of the art of mining in all its branches.

The museum attached to this institution contains a thousand oljects of the highest interest, and many artieles of great intriasie value. There is here a block of malaohite, weighing above $3,0001 \mathrm{lls} .$, and valued it $\mathfrak{f l s}, 000$ sterling, mul many picces of alative gold, one of which was marken \&s lis. Russian, which would be about 10 llos . English. There is also a piece of phatima marked 24 his. Russim, or about 22 lhs. Englinh, and also ten dimmonds, of !o earats wach. There are models, likewise, of portions of the Ural mountains, and of lakes:med mines, and of all the mechanical instruments and chemical apparatus used in the process of mining. Some of the models of mines in glass cases are highly curinus, and ate tillad with miners of the dithirent chases, following every ons his special wecupation, in excarating, carring, or wheeling the ores.

r.

The most remarkable of the social institutions of the Rusxians, of a purely moral chatacter, is the Vobitatelmai Itom, or Honse of Elucation, which is the Fomulling Inspital of the comntry, imul, as peoblarly linssian in constitution und purpose, merits especial attention. This charitable assiom, indeel, on aceomut of its extusive iuthence, forms an important tenture in the sucial ecmomy of thu Rinsian people. The principle upw which it is bused is, that the state recognises the right of every infint throughont the empire, almadoned be, or deprived of, its natumal protecturs, to ruceive puiblic suppowt during ehildhoot, and aven provision against want when arrivel nt mature use ; and the purnetical application of this principle is commensurat' with the liberality in which it uriginatenl.
The Vospitatchui Dom of St. Petershurgh was fomaded lor the Empress K:therine, in 1774 . At first it supporten no more than ahout thre hamdred chiblem at the same time, hat it has kept pace with the inerease of the popmation of Northern husxia; and the monlen of ehildren now amually received amonuts to nearly ten thonsand, and the stamsing munber partaking of the benefits of the institution is whut thirty thousand. Within this central elifice are the chithiren only that are under the age of six weeks of buth sexes, and the girls above six y ars. All the chilitren at the finst of these nges are sent out to nurse innong the peasants, null the girls alono return tin their elucation when they have attained their sisth year. The hoys aro sent for the same purpose to a brauch establishment at Galshina. The number of the youmger children in the centmal dejurtment, at this timo, was six lunetrel. The whole expenses of the institution are estimated at about $5,000,010$ roubles a y arr, which is provided for by especial taves, nud tho profits upon an neemmatated capital arising out of donations received severully from all the sovereigns of Russia sinee its foundation.

I was accompmined, on a visit I made to this anylum, by Mr. Marshall, an Euglish gentlemam, aul, like myself, only a traveller in Russia. After passing the centre gate of the lmilling, and crossing the hroal court, we approached the chief entrance, where, finding a sentinel, we inquired of him, as well as we were able, for we had no interpreter, where we should find the governor; lut we were not able to learnanything more than that we conld not pass. We were nut long, however, at a loss to know what to do ; fur a young man, who was erossing the court, and who atterwands infirmed us he was one of the medical gentlenen of the establishment, secing us staring about, came ul and adlressed us in French, and atter inquiriug and learning our wants, conlucted us to the office of the director, a German baron of one of the baltie provinces, who gave us immediate permission to inspect the institution as fully as we pleased, and as the winteman we had so opportunely encountered velmiteerel his further services to aid our inguiris, we cherrfuly accepted them, and commencel our inspection of the nome important alliees and apmrtments of the nohle elitice. It will suffice to mention such only as mont excited our interest.
The building is of great extent, and with its courts, gardens, and depeodent offiees, is said to cover moles, than twenty acres of gromed. 'Tlee apmetment where we tirst came in lirect contact with the childron was that appopriated to the earliest cares towards the new-hom infints. It comisted, properly, of a succession of chambers across the building, with ' ecommen passuge through the centre of them. As we chtered the first, the scene was tomeling and interestins. The peom was furnished with many leols, set equi-distant from one another ; and, nt onr alpearance, twenty or thirty young women, nll dressed in a simphe lowse iofm of the chastest white, and girilled at the waist, aurd waring caps, started from the beds unon which they hatl been sitting, with imbints at their lreasts, or in their urms, and remaned standing as long as we were present. They were evilently all from the cometry, from their smiling, fresh and happy comntename, which we especially remurked. 'The matron of the institution, a wrman of ripur yenrs, soon made her aplearaner, and, as she accompunied us, she informed us the age of the children, with the the chey had fieen in the asylum, and nuch other matters as she thought would minst interest ne, and she evidently took great pride and pleasure in so doing.
Some of the y ; women wero the mothers of the children they went mursing, suth an arrame ment not being against the rulus of the institution. Young mothers, indeed, are very wisely encomraged to enter the asylum and suckle their own oflspring.

Wr, the two strangers, were hoth under the inpression that we had heard a great deal about the nlmost universal ugliness of the lassium women, but there was nothing, in the sample of peasant girls befure us, to contirm this. They were, in general, indecal, very young, fow of then probably exceeting ome or two and twenty. We remarkel, however, chat (hough they were smaller than the wernge of our women, they more resembled the poasant girls of our rural districts, than the German peasant girls resemble any of our women, from which we supposed that they were less exposed to tield labour tham tho German women of the humbler classes.
We passed through the several chambers without nade to this anylum, ntheman, aul, like After passing the crossing the hroad ance, where, finding ell as we were able, we slould tind the to loarn :mything We were nit loms, to do; fin a yomig and who atterwards edical gentlemen of ing about, came ul after infuiring and to the olliee of the of th? Baltis: prormission to inspect tl, and as the gentlemitered valmitecerel inins, we chererflly $r$ insilectinn of the ments of the nolle 1 such only as mont and with its emurts, id to cover u". les, conartment wher I the children was enres towards the roperly, of is sueces. ng, witle $\cdot 1$ commur As we intered liuteresting. T'lu is, set equi-distant pearanes, twenty or a simpla louse roke at the waist, and ls ugon which they their breasts, or in as long as we wro from tha comintr, py comstenances, the matron of the nis, soon madr her d us, she informed the time thry had her mutters as she she evidently took the muthers of the in arrmy, ment not atitution. Foung weonraged to enter spring.
sth nuder the innwat deal aboui the ussian women, hut peasant girls hefore in genernl, inderel, exceeding one or wever, that though ge of our women, girls of our rural girls reseulble any sed that they wero German women of chambers without findiug any variation, until we eame to the last, save in the age of the children, which was less in every one we entered successively, and in the temperature of the atmosphere, which was warmer as we proceeded, and was regulated with the greatest exactness, to meet the age and streugth of the children. But in this last chamber we witnessed a refinement in the arrangements of the charitable institution which I do not thiuk can be exeeeded within any asylum in any comtry in the world. There were here several copper cradles, floating in hasins of their form, which were filled with warm water. These wero lor the purpose of raising infants of premature birth. The double eradle thus formed was enveloped in woollen coverings, by which tho temperature within was kept at the same degree for the new-lom intint as that in which the child exists before its hirth, but which was thily diminished, by faster or slower degrees, in proportion as the time of the hirth was nearer or firther from the natural periorl of parturition.
As our obliging friend explained this $t_{1}$ us, the matren removed an upper covering fron one of the cadles, and then withdrawing a thin ganze eurtain which was bencath this, exposed two infiuts tranquilly sleping in the damp leat. We could nut prereeive that they breathed. The kind-hemrted woman, however, tolle us that they were doing well. They had lien two days, she said, in the institution, always sleeping, excepting when at the breast, to which they were pint wrapped in hot damp, woollen cloths, Of those thus hought in, it right be almost said hefore they were born, she informed us more than half lived at lonat mutil tho end of the finst term of six weeks that they remained in the institution, and nearly the whole of those that survived the two first days. Never might the worls of King David, "For we ure feartully and wonderfully made," iupress the truth they pro. cham more strongly upon us than when we might be contemplating the chances of life for these tender laikes, exposed to fortume the most adverse moler which any of onr species oould cone into the world.
We were next brought to the great dining - lall ; :and, as it happened, at the hour ne which the children of the ages above six years were at dimer. The huron was present here; and, as soon as he satw us enter, he politely carue to serve as our guide in this part of the Asylun. Here we saw the girls that, from six to twelve years as", for some of them were nem twelve yems of age, passed their sliurt sojourn in tho leated chumbers we haul just beft, now after their return from the country, assombled to receive their proper eduention and the other benefits of the institution. Aceording, however, to the statisties of the establishment, not mueh nhowe one-third of the ehildren whieh enter the centrat edifies, atiain the age at whioh they properly commeneo their education. But when we emsider the character of the climate of St. Petersburgh, whieh is perlups the worst in Rassia, owing to the prosition of the town being between the grent lake above it nad the sen, mal to the daupness of the surrounting mornsses in summer, und, when wo hear, that of the children in the healthiest distriets, null even of those of our own comitry, as I believe, not above half attuin their seventh yeir, wo are less inelined to plaee this great mertality, ns it might at fl'st u!pear, to miy want of enre from the fester-murves and attendents of the asylum. Neither can it proeeed from any delicieney of medieal attendauce, there being no less thum a dozen prefessional gentlemen attached to the institution, who are under the obligation of frequently visiting all the children out at nurse, at any distance whatever at which they may be placed.

Ahout a thousamd girls were now sitting at two or three long tables in the body ut the rom, and at a cirenlar tatle romal a broad miche at the upper end. The first thing that struck us was their dresses, which were of different coloms, which upon inquiry we found distinguished the degreesof rouk to which they belonged in regiatlatene to their hirth. Those who occupied the table in the niche were the children ef nobles, generally military officers; and with these sat the teachers of the institution. Thus the Russian law, whatever the prverty of the parent, holds the right of mobility in the ehild inalienable, even in a charitable arylum. These, however, are generally the children that necessity, and not descrtion on the purt of their parents. lans brought into the asylun! and it is this chiolly which distinguishes the institution of the Russians from thowe which seem based upon the same general principles in several other chuntries. We conld not, however, when we considered the meremonious manner in which we had introducel ourselves, comsisteutly make very nice infuiries eoncerning the way in which the children were taken, or the intluence of the honours by which they were distinguished, or the future to which they were destined.

As we walked about the hall, we olserved them to partake of several dishes, one of whieh was rice, and another dish called stchee. The latter is an eminently national dish. It is sometling between a stew and sonp, and is properly composed of bect and cablage. I was at this time unacquainted with it, limt atterwards found it among the more wholesome, as well ats agreeable to the taste of any of the dishes of which I have ever partaken in uny country. I believe that its introduction into England, especially if accompunied with the delicions sweet rye-hread eaten here, provided it were cooked as in Russia by slow hoiling, would nueh diminish our consmmption of deleterinus thugs preseribed in phace of a receipt for the better preparation or better choice of aur tood. Their beverage was a kind of beer called quass, mude from fermented meal, and which I may saly at this time, is wholesome, retrewhing, and fittening. It has usually a little tartness, and is rarely liked by strangers, who, it Englishmen, are "ht to compare it with sour heer. Upon our expressing a wish to taste this natiomal heverage, the baron ordered a tumbler of it to be hrought to us. Mr. Marshall first drank a little, and finding it not to his taste, sermed rather to disappoint the worthy governor, in expressing limself not fuite satisfiel with its flavour. Seeng this, 1 put it to my lips, with a deternination to like it it it were possible, and was agreeably surprised to find 1 eoutd, without any strained compliment, exiol it very lighly. Indeed, during my stay in liussia, I rurely nfterwards drank anything else. The burom was evidently pleased that one of the forcigners found the leveruge which his great family drank, agreenble; and taking in his hand the same somewhat large tumber from which we hat drunk, pheed it to his month and drained it to the bottom.

When the dimer was coneluded, the children rose frem their seats simultancously, but at what sign we did not abserve; nud now turning their fices to the upler end of the hall, they crossed thenselves, and cenmenced a hymm which they sang with the peculiar melody of the Russian sacred music. At the conclusion of this, they all rushed towards the several doors, in a manner that left mo room to doubt, whether they were going to the garden which was attachel to the edifice, fur recreation, or to their studies. Upon this, we took leave of the henign gumidian of the comentioss thousands of childen that had been reared under his superintemence, for he had been for many years at the heal of the institution.

In fine, we learned that all except the sons of serfs, which are at tho dixposal of the crown, and generally sent to the imporial manufactories, were, after thic completion of their education, allinwed the free chuse of their pursuits in life ; and, inleed, that the care of the dirceters of the asylum was even extended to placing them, both boys and girls, in the severn positions to which their education, which has genemuly been directed by the talent they have dispinyed, hat scemed to yualify them.

Thus, out of this institution, from tho hoys proceed manfacturers, merchants, teadhers, artists, and rem priests, all perhaps as well disposed to respect for the haws, and to love of their comitry, sin resential to the atrance of civilisation, as any liusian sulpgects in any class of society : and trom the girts, the most usiful women, in crery way of life which hest suits their sex, the abilities they havo dinghyed, and the consegnent direction of their education, from menial servants, cren up to geremesses in the must noblo families.
Nop to the benefits of this moble asylum towarls those that are reared in it cul here. Fwell the marriage of the girls is anticipated, and uon the day of their muptials those of the ordinary elasses receive 120 rombles, and those who have raised thmemelves to be teachare, either within or without the institution, receive 1,000 rombles.
In whont, we left the huuse of charity with impressions roncerning its momal effect upon socicty, viry diffrent from thuse nsanaly entertained of institutions in our own cemtry, which bear thenearest resemblanee to the Vopitatehoi Dom of the Russians. It should he remanked. however, that illeritimate hirth is not lonked upne in Russia with the samo feelinge as in langland, and, that it is probalie, that fin every child that owes its hirth to the security which this institution atlords mainst the shmme that might othorwise have awaited the mother, thero are twenty reared that woull have perished if the institution had not existed.

VI.

Festivitifs-A Row to Yelativ-6inumis lisicives-Petbhuoff-Cossceratho of this Waters-, Ls Emhome is tie hate of Nichols--The Mamao chmmons-Batns-Rebtachasts.
Tue fete of the empress is a great day with tho ophe of St. Petersburgh, as well us with forcigners whomake a holidy of it nul an exemsion; the imperial fanily celelnating the festival at Ietorhofl; in company with as many thonsmods of the inhalitants of tho metropols, as could fint means to conver them to the seme of regnings; and as it arreared that no more and which it was stid would seareo givo timo to those who went by them on their seemal trip to witness all the diversions of the day, I determined, iustead of following the rest, to join the puicter portion of the eitizens, whom I learned were gathering to mito in a lesser display of all the ordinary excitements to joy, upon une of tha islunds on the opposite side of the Niva.

I was acompaniel on this occasion by a German genthman, who was likewise a stringer in St. Petersburgh, and in tho same position as myself'; and it was yet in early homr, when we drovo ofly for the phee of the lesser fiestivities.

A fter pussing to the opposito"side of the grand arm of the Neva, we crossed a narrow portion of the island of Vasilicostrow, which divides the current of the great river into two purts, and alighted on the banks of the Little Neva, or northern arm of the grand river, where wo touk a boat and proceeded, amidst a busy secne of grily decoratod cratt, towards the centre of the apminted place of the festivities upon the ishme of Yidagin.
The prospect around us, as we thated upon the hroad Neva, presented nothing of the nativo seenery which the hanks of rivers in high latitudes commonly exhilnit, consisting almost entirely of dark-coloureil and stuntell fir trees. An Englishman might ansily here havo helieved himself to be upou the River Thames, far above all the larger loridges, and the day to be ono of the spare holidays enjuyed by our industrims citizens of Londun and Westminster. Lotty mul broad-wprending trees, with their luxuriant foliage, overywhere shaded the green pasture with which the gromid was covered, and upon $\quad$ which somo shoep were seen grazing at intervals; and gay parties in the boats, with haply faces, and in their best attire, were sechl everywhere greeting each wher as they recognised accuaintances, or were heard singing tumes, not the less joyous becanse heard more frequently in "holy Clinech," than in placos less sacred, and at times of relaxation and enjoyment.

When we camo to tho phace of landing, such was the number of lasits and peophe thero gathered, that we hal some diflienty in getting on shore. Upen aflecting this, however, we fomen ourselves at onee amilst a erowil of the citizens of the empital.

We har so much in other parts of Kuropo, of the Russinn mujik, or man of tho peassant or labouring cla:s in his sherp skin, and of the citizens generally in their cattuns and flowing beards, that ny compuion and myself wero surprised on this oceasion to find that the dresses purcly Earopesm were at least predominant. It might, indeed, have been supprsed that the culphratim of the empress' feto was ahmose cuntined to the various classes of forcigners so numerous at St, Poterslurgh, or that there was some connection between the: Eurrpenu costumo and good humour, which had brought together all who had adopted the one, to enjoy in ench other's gool compuny all that was concomitant with the other.

A military band was phaying in tho contre of a harge open space, aromnd which thero were walks shated hy groves of trees, among which were phaced small booth and kabaks or spirit stalls, withont order, and withome exhihiting mything characteristic of the poople, in different from the similar places of resort of the continentild generally. Thero was nothing that our own holiday foliks would call a show; anul, in relation to commeres, there was nothing exhibited worth the least notice. In lict, wo should have returned atter haif-an-lom's promemade, inul wo not heard that tho government had provided nu exhibition of fireworkn, which would be well worth seeing. osite side of the on by a German ger in St. Petersyself; and it was ff for the place of etion of the isluml o current of the hted on the bank: of the grand river, al, amilst a busy rds the centre of unon the lsland of floated upon the the native scenery titudes commonly of dark-coloured man might ensily "pon the River dises, and the day yyed hy our indusstminster. Lofty cluxuriant foliage, e with which the a sumo sheep were arties in the boat,", attire, were serll $s$ they recogniserd ng tumes, not the quently in "Holy d, and at times of landing, such was rero gathered, that on shore. Unou ourselves at once eapital.
, ot limope, of the esant or labourinus tizens generally in hat my companion casion to find that least predominiunt. 1 that the celehmGo contined to the rous at St. Poters ction between the nour, which hal d the one, to enjoy it was concomitallt
(o centre of a large o walks shated by luced small booths orler, and without of the people, "1 resort of the cortaing that our wwn wd, in relation to ad worth the least turned after halfrl that the governf fireworks, which

We had to wait, howover, mutil near midnight hefore these were displayed; but we were not disappointed in whit wo now witnessed, as far as quantity and quality were concerned; yet, as there is no night in the 60 th degree of latitnde on the 14 th of July, they were neeessatily exhibited in fall day; and thoir eflect was rather to gratify the ear by strange crackings in the air, than to delight the vense which rojoies in the brilliant night exhibitions at Vauxhall.

We retired from tho giardens about midnight, upon the whole plessed with this first aequantance which we had the ofportunity of making with the citizens of the metropolis of the eountry with which we hat buth tho intentiom of acpuiting a moro intimate knowledge.

Another traveller thus desmibes the seene, and sums up his impressions. It is a fete day, und the popholation of Detershurgh is pouring in living streams alung the banks, or gliding were the hroad Neva in row-boats, towards "The Garden Ishands," which, like these wherem the eity stamb, were resened from an mulealliy swamp, to form the retreat of the wealthy amd the resort "f pleasure's voturies. The "Ginden Fslamb" "ne five in mumber, on one of which (Yelitgin) is ith imperial chateau. The athers are dottel over with thatastic villas, of Chinese, Clothic or Italian styles.
'Wo Yelarin, as the eentre of attraction, we made our way in a frail boat, rowed by Cussineks from the banks of the Don. It was a halmy evening, and the setting sum was already throwing the long shatows of the treen wer the water, not, howerer, ins a prehude to dirkness, for here, in summer, soft twilight (usmpling the throne of inky night) sheds its pale light aromul, mal gives a dremmy mystery to oljects which in the broad glare of the midnlay sun jursess neither interest nor beanty.

As we typroached our ilestination, a low momur of ten thoustand voieds, of the strains of musie, mellowed by distance, came wafted on the breeze. At length, amidse at crowd of boats, we reached the hand, and mingled with the joyons multitule. Who, while soring stromed, would have thought that he looked patly but on a throng of erefs? - that their lives and furperty were in the hands of one man, whe might at any tine heprive them if either or looth! Yot so it was; and no one bom in other and frem ${ }^{\text {a }}$ ands could have loft that seme without feebing that the slave who has known ne higleve estate misy diance momily to the jingling of his fetters, or pass through bife without fecling the werght of his chains.

The ishan is lad ont in walks and drives, alones which, un font or in carriagen, from the street choselaky to the magnificent "juipage of the molime, promenated thouswuls of peophe. Hew whe there smatl cireles of sohliese, with the "zapevala," or leader, in the centre, sang their wiht but harmonions nationat songs. Some uf these wero highly ammang. The zapuraba aldressed the gromp in singing threats or yrestions, entreaties or argmonts, aceording to tho nature of the song, acemmanying his voice with grimaces, lempings, and dameos, ime an weasional blow on a small tambonrine, fertorming these mowements with an aecuracy of time quite astorishing; some in the circle

I The Butlic, the Mack Sect, ant the Crimea, by Charles Henry scott. Hemry Ncot.
replying, or the whule joining in ehous with extremo vivacity and no ordiuary talent.

Pumeh, with his ever-attentive nomsense, conjurors, aul jughlers, drew admirers around them; while a handred terts and booths were erimmed full of gond folks, sucking their ten, flavoured with a slice of lemon, throngh lumps of sugar previously deposited in their montlis; a characteristic method of imbiling the decuetion of sonchong peeuliar to the Museovite.

As ten o'clock :pricuched a general movement was obsirved towarts the water's edge; for on an opposite ishand firewners were to he let off. By good lnek we found our boat, and with difliculty obtained a favomable position fin seeing the display of pyrotechnical art. Clinese latups of viuriel colours hung in festoons on steamers and bargers monterl for the purpose. Aiter pushing or strugerling, bawling or pulling, scolding or haughing, each endeavoning to get the best place, the boats were at lant jammed into a compact immoveahlo mass. All nuis: was now hushed, for a signal rocket flashing through the air was followed by sparkling fountains of fire, and seintillating stans; and then hy the bombardment ot a eastle with thousuads of rockets aml fire-lalls; a windup flattering to the tiastes of tho braves liecsses, ( $\mathrm{I}_{\mathrm{i}}$ our return to Petershurs we found the streets illominated hy pans of lat with large wieks in the centre, placed along the edges of the foot pavements.

On the moming of the 15 th we took steamer for Peterhoff, the St. Cloud of Sit. Petersburgh. The palaee, about which there is nothing remarkible, is situated on an eminenee; the sloping bank of which has been arrauged with water-works, considered by many pople to he as tine us thuse of Versailles.

This being the second diby's fete of the Empress (of which the one at the islands was the tit $-t$ ), we saw these fomatains in full play; aml the detbet was very beantifinl. There are an immense number of jots d'eurx, issuing fiom the months of dulphins, forgs, de., a pouring out of vases held by nymphs. The prinejpal jet gushes fiom the moutly of a lion, stretehed opron by a colossal S:mprou in toronze, eighty feet in height.

The gitdens ami grounds are neatly laid out ; and It small river and later made the most of. The stream is about three miles long, alanted on each hank with trees. Here an eflective illumination took plise in tho vening. The twes were tilled with Chineso lanterns. The borders of the stream, the margins of the lake, and the islands on it, were lighted up; and the outlines of some castelhated houses traeed with coloured lamps.

It ahout ten oblock a procession of earriages moved gratly along the avenue : the first, is "ehar-a-bance" contanced the emperov ant enyners, some of the Imperial tianily, and royal visitors. The rest, about thinty in number, were filled with ladies, and gentlemen of the court in brilliant uniforms. The fete chand with fireworks, artaged with elegance and taste.

At periodical semsons, a curions ceremony takes placo in Russia, called the emsecretion of the waters,: which

What ean be more imposing than the blessing of the waters of the Nesa, on the day of the Epiphamy ! A magnilleent oct zon tempto rises on the surfice of the river, opposite the Winter Patace. In the centre of this temple, a hare bioning made in the ice nthords a view of the water. I cmun-shot gives the signal. A is in fact a commemoration of the baptism of Christ. In the observance of this, at St. Petersburgh, the Neva is the riwer consecrated, while at Moseow it is naturally the Moskwa.
"About nine oclock, on the oceasion of the aceession of the late Emperor Nicholas to the throne, a procession of erelesiastics, consisting of mure than four huudred prelates, priests, chief deacons, and dencons, issued forth from the 'emvent of miracles,' and walked towards the river, escorting the royal family. This procession took almost the same rond as that on Pahm Sunday, by which formerly, in ancient Musenve, they celrbrated the entrance of Jesis into Jerusalen. (The Siviour was then representel by the Patriareh, who, cross in hame, was seated on a mare, whose bridle was lrid by the Czir himeelf, supported by his principal ministers. The procession used to go from the Kremlin, to the chureh of Vassili Blagennui, and then on to the Lobnoic-Misto, situated in the same place.) On the oceasion to which we now refer, the train turned round the churel, and descended towarts the river, where the ennsecration of the waters was to be performed with much promp, and in the presence of the whole population, After the ceremony, the festival of the patron saint was just bugiuning, when suldenly, they saw the Emperor appear at the cutrance, having on his left the (irand Duke Miclutel, on his right, the Grand Duke Constantine ; the three brothers were elasping rach other by the hand, while their comintenances be:med with joy. The crowd was enthnsiastic, eaps were theng into the air, thumbers of apphase broke forth, the citald resmumel with prolonged shouts of 'Hurrah, the Eimperor, hurrah, Constantine!'"
The Grand Dukr Constantine, believing the coromation to have been fixed tor the 15th, hat arived from Warsaw the day before, without having apprisel his brother of his intention. An aide-de-camp hastenel t" annmuee him to the Crar ; Nieholas, who was cinphoyed in dressing, and thonght that the visitor was his brother Miehael the (Grand Duke, would have exensed himself for a few minutex; but the nide-de-camp seemell rmbarrassed. Nicholas looked inquiringly at him, and the otheer unswered to the fook, "The ©zarnviteh." The Emperor with a joyful exclanation rum to meet his hrother ; Constantine seized his hand and kissed it with a low how; but Nicholas embracing him wimmly mate the deepest protestations of respect and sratitude.
long proeession is then seen emerging from the palace, composed of the archbishop and his elergy, the high dignitaries of the court, pures, otheers of the guard, and followed by the Emperor, surromuted by the meubers of lis family. Every one is in full uniturm, nud bare-hended. Whilst the proeession preceeds townrds the temple the crowil rushes in disoriter, and stom the banks of the Neva, and tho Neva itself, are lost to view, covered with the dense mass. It is fortunate that at thls periol the ice of the river is tive or six fest deep. Tho ceremony commences, A solemn silenee enables the prayers of the archbishop, and tho melolious response of the court ehoristers, to be hearl. At hast, the prelate takes the cross and plunges it in the water whieh rages nt his fect. The camon then rears anew. The limperor tastes the water, which is conscerated, in a golden eop that he receives from the hands of the clergy; after which he returns in sileneo to the palace. From this moment the people linve the const clear; they precipitate themselves with frenzy townrds the temple, enrrying pitehers to be tilled with the holy water. It is a struggle, a tumultuons erowding, a pele-mile whidh it is impossible to deseribe. Some individuals even plungo into the river; mothers bathe their chiliren in it. I lave mentioned ulso to what extreme the lhussians carry out the finaticisu nud ridicule of these superstitions. (See puge 113.)

Schuitzler, from whom the abovo is somewhat shortenel, deseribes at fill leugth the coronation, with its magnilicent attrndant pagementry, and then proceeds to say, "It was when the ceremony of crowning hins was over that the most interesting seene twok phace. Whilst the singing continued, the Emperor and Empress received the congratulations of the prinees and prineesses of their family, the high elergy and prineipal fursonages of the court. The mother of the Cair was the first who would have npproached-he pre vented her and hastening forwarl, embraced her and reerived her bleswing. Marin conceated her tears on the breast of her son ; perhips, sho was thinking of that other son so fondly loved, of whom death had bereased her. It excited the sympathy of all. Hardly had the Empress mother torn herself from her sun's embrace, when Comstantine was sico hending the knee hefiere that younger brother wher had repheed him on a throne to which, by birth, le had himself the n ealled. Nichons fiell on his knees, pressel him to his hent, and forgot for a moment his part as a crowned king, to obey the impulse of matme. Their augnst mother riturned and blessed them; every one whs moved on beholding this seene, in compurison with which, till the rest was firmalami languid. The Grand Duke Michacl, his lovely consort IIclena, Princess of Wurtrmbing, and the young heir to the throne, presented in anccession their congratulations, and the elergs; withomt leaving their places, bowed thine before the emsecrated conple"
"Ambaswalors from ciastern and western court, envoys firm Georgia, Circassii, Mingrelia, the Kirghiz, Kuzaks or Cossueks, the socureigns of Daghestan, and of other parts of $A$ sia, were assembled on this grmbi oceasiom. In the deseription of the aecompanying Prestivities, a curons areont is given of a hangut oflered the people of Moseow by the Cam. 'Two lundred and forty tables, were spreal on the plain of Devitele Pole, covered with a varinty of dishes, whilst wine and beer wero poured from fountains ereeted 'for the nance.' In the midst of all was a teni where thr Eluperor and his court were assembled. A humdred thons:and mujik, or Russian peanants, pressed romud the place of entertaimments At nom, at a sigmal from the bunnerwho stit gracionsly to them, 'My chidres, all this is yours,'-the mujiks darted on the least, and under their ravaers disappared in a few minutes, tables, clothes, dishes, meats, und fomitnins!"t

Marriage in Russia is a purely religious act; the ceremmy is thmehing, gencratly taking place in the evening, and freserving trulitions of the ohlen time. Fonnerly nuither father or mother couhl be present, they were supposed to be at homo absorbed in grief at the loss of a behwed child; this puint of etiguette is, however, no longer so strietly observed. A pulpit is lorought forward in front of tho altar bearing the liturgy, and it is phaced upon a handsome carpet. The bide and lidengroom, each atteniled by a page of homour, and their friemels, take their places in front, the minister behind, and tho ehoir on the sides. One portion of the cercmony is peenline, und is represented in the illustration at pago 121 . At a certain period, the choristers chant a loud hymn, the bride and bridegroom take a lighted taper in the left haud, the minister places another in the right, and then taking a hand of each united in his, he thens leads them thre

[^7]vo is somewhat emronation, witl. ud then proceeds of crowning hin: cene trok place. Emperor and $s$ of the princes elergy mad prinother of the Czar oathed-he pre mbraced her and led her tears on was thinking of rhom death hal y of all. Havilly li from her soms bending thr knee replaced him on imself heen called. him to his lieart, a crowned king, ir august mother ne was moved on ith which, all ther mi Duke Jiclinel, of Wirtemburg, resented in mucc elergy, withmit re the comsecrated

I western courts, relia, the Kirghiz, of Digghestan, :mbl m this mand ocea anying tistivities, it wilered the people al umb forty tables he Pole, covered ne and loedr were se nonee.' In the Fimperor and his thousimel mujiks, the place of enmin the limprorhildrem, all this in feast, and whele minuted, tables, $\because 1$ eligious net; the fing plate in the of the ohlen time. conld be present, osorbed in grielat fint of etiguette $i$., ved. A pulpit is altur bearing the come carpet. The ed by a page ot , laces in front, the the sides. Ono fund is reprosentel a certain period, the bride aul the left hand, the and then taking " leads them three times romul the pulpit, the pates of honome following, all the time holding a erown of sil er wser each of the ir heads.

Vapour haths are not a mere object of luxnyy with the Russians but a matter of necessity, All classes of socinty make use of such with the ntmost regnlarity. These hygienic establishments oecupy vast ipaees. They are of three descriptions or classes, and costing from three kopeks to tifteen, or from three-halfpence to sispence. The armagement is the sume fin all, a memales have their own eompartments, hat in tho higher priced every person can also have his own compartment. The vapour is chtained hy thowing water unu heated plates of iron, and a diflerent temproture is obtained by woolen stages. The higherpriced haths are lusmrionsly amd often tastefinly decomed with carpets, mirrors, and rich fimuture, and they arr brilliantly lit up in the evonings, especially in winter tinne. Wi have given at sketeh of the crowd besieging the entrance to one of these bittlis. Saturday is the day upon which they are mont frequented, and long lines of soldiers, mujiks, women, and of the Working elassex may be seen on sneh ocensions presenting themselves at tho doorwiy with their packet mader their arms.
liontamints abound in St. Wetershurgh, some of them we first-rlass establishments of their kind. Duswant, lamel. Vair, and Domar upos a well-morited reputation. 'Their satoms are spacions, hambomely furnished, and wall lit up. The attendance is pail hy 'artars drewel iv black with white eravats, in other respects somi Musulmen, and, generally, speaking liussian, Goman, mil French. The prices vary trom a routbe upsaths. 'Ilue estahlishments of Wolf, of Dominique, and of the Great Viaxhall, at the ralway station, are also in high repute. After the restimuat eome the taktir, a worl which a French traveller helieves to be a eorruption of treiteur. The traktir is as much a national institution as the "public" is in wom mon commery, and the cafe in France. Some of these estar hlishments aro kept in phemelid style, but still they are cosentially linsian; the attembints werar their hong hatr livided in the midille, that perpetanal tunie, :mal the wifitimer hoots. The chiet artiele of eonsumption is te: ; and hasimes and pleasme alike are transured in the hum, tonsur, sturgeon or sterlet, dry and muked, with the olearimens roe of the latter (eaviare), as appetisers, are to be ohtained. There is also always some kind of manie goling on, from a mommentil organ down to at lumer-gurde. The linssian camot timl lepose withent his argath of hearing being put to tortures by harbawas sombs, although a great appreciator ot cocal musio. I vam Tursianictl; of Doscow, in hiv entertaining little book, callod K'ussian Life in the Interium, or the E,rperiences of it Sportsman, gives a lively and characteristic deseription of a village traktir, as also ot the musieal freling among the peavints, (see p. 1:20.)

Vif.

Cue Trakith on Tavern-A totsshan Most-Tur havine of Kobororka-lime Whute Room-Truk lacmas-line "Shume Gentreman"-a vucal Coniest.
The little village of Kolotolka was fomerly the property of a laty sumamed in the comery stivgrimikh (one who elips or shaves), on' account of liev.

Wharl and realy humonr; it now belongs to some Grman from St. Petersburgh. This village is situated on the castern slopo of a barren hill, ent tiom top to buttom by a frightful ravine. Yawning like an abyss, and torn up liy the fury of the spring and nutumn tloods, this ravine runs right through the main and only street of the village, dividing the poor little hanlet into two parts, which, though fice to face, we fite from being on that accomnt neighbours. A few meagre lazel trees maintain a precarious and hesitating existence on the irregular banks of the horrible and tortuous eanal. The bottom, whiel seems to he a composition of various kinds of sand, is of a dry and copper-coloured tint, and covered with immonse elayey bomhlers. It is to be confessed that the locality is tire from an inviting one, and yet there is not an inlabitant within a circle of tourteen miles who is not fimiliar with the road to the village of Kinlotof ka, and who does not pay it a willing visit, and that pretty often 100.

At the point where the ravine enters the village, a few phens from the narrow eleft which forms its commencement, stands a little square house quite apart fiom the rest. It is thatched, and boasts a siugle climner, which rises from the middle of the roof; it possesses only one window, aml that at the back of the house, like a Cyclop's eye looking down יpon the ravine, which on winter nights, lighted from within, is visible from afar throngh the thick and frosty mist -the polcostar of many a belated peasant. Above the door is nailed a bluo sign-biand; and as this eabin is at onee the tavern and phace of genemal rembezvous, it assmmes the title of l'ritymmi Rabatehok (Little Tavern of Retinge.) I daresay that in this tavern with the euphonous sumame, the gram wine is sold at the same price as in every uther ; but it is, notwithatandings much more fireguented than any establishment of a similar kind in the whole district. I'he reason of that i-, thit the host is Nieohai I vimytel.

Nieolai Wimyteh-hot so long agon a well-formed, hambome young fellow with fresh comontenace and curly hat-n-mw a man of remarkable rotundity, gray heal, moist, perspiting face, and possessing an eye alway mimated hy a time geniality of expresion, and a deeply- introwed brow-lass leen establi-hed at Kiolotorka for more than twenty years.

Nicolai I vantch, like the majority of tavem-keepers, is a man of yniek and penetrating mind ; he is not distinguishod by any particalar proliteness, lut, without heing comminicative, le persesses the unconseions art of attacting enstomers, who seem to lowe to sit by the bar under the calm elear-sereing look of this phlogmatic personage. The is endowed with admirable good sense; ; le knows aceurately the mode of life of every proprietor in the elistriet, of every citizen and every peasint, as well as the state of their athars. In dithintt conjunctures there would be wisdom in consulting him, but as a cireunsject man he is fir fiom desimis sogreat an honomr, much preferving to remain muler the shandow ot his bar ; it is consequently only ly ilistant hints, uttered apmureutly hy aceident, that lue puts his enstomers on the path of reason and gook whes, and these only such of his custommes the takes a gemuine interest in. Ifo is learned in everything whieh it is important for a Russian to know-horses, eatthr, building timber, bricks, deltitware, hides und leather, somes and dances.

When his tavern is cimpty, le generally sits like a sack of what on the sround before the door of his cottage, his slender legs drawn mader him, and in this position exchanges greetings with all the passersliy. This man has seen much; he lias survived ever so many pour conntry gentlem'n, who, if they did not look in as they passed to rinse their throats, at least provided themselves with their annual suplly of brandy at his house. He knows everything that is guing on within a circle of a hmadral versts, and, so thar tirom letting slip a word which might indicate: what he knows, he one could even guess that he was quite intimately acquanted with a thousund little secrets, beyom the suspicion of the police commissioner himselt. He eloses his lips, smiles, drinks, and passes the drinking cup. The neighbours have grent respet for him; aro his exedleney M. Stcherpetenko, the most distinguished propictor in the clistriet, so fir as civil rank is conerned, does not fail, every time he passes, to salute him with an air of comsideration. Nienlia I vanyteh is clearly a man to be relied on.

He once induced a cattle-stealer to restore a horse which he had stulen from the courtyard of one of his atequantanes ; one morning he bounght to their semses the peasunts of a neighoning village who had manimonsly determined not to reognise a new oversere. Do not imagine, however, that his conduct in these matters is regulated by devotion to his neighbours; he wi.hes, in fact, only to prevent what might afterwards disturb his repuse. Mis mife, a woman of tirm and agile top, with a yuick eye and thin mone, las lately hecome rather stont, like her hasband. He has a blime coutidener in her, aml she keeps the keys of his strmes hox. The turbulent drumards are afraid of her ; sho is prity firm with them; althugh, in general, plenty of noise in to he had from them, lint little moncy. She decidedly profers the silcut, murose, and moderate drink res to thise who are hahitual and reputed drumkards, who are sure to charrel with one muther.

It was a July day, oprosively hot, aud I elimbed the hill with diflienty in the direction of the Pritymi Rabatchok, on a footpath which ran along the shipu of the ravine of Kolutotka. The sum ruled in the heavens like a merciless tyramt-terrible, implacablo, umavoit able; the air was inpregnated with a sulfocating dust. I was tormented with thirst; there was meither spring nor strean at haml. At Kolototka, as in the najority of steppin villages, the peasants, for lack of ajpins and weils, have aceustomed their stmmelis to a mumity marsh lifuid. But who wonld be an bohd as to lanour with the nanc of water at hifuil so disguting ! resolved to pay a visit to Niedai I vanytell, and "hioy ag glass of here or kvats.

I helieve 1 lave said that at no perind of the yan is the aspect of Cirlotefka pleasing ; but under the pitiiess ratys of a July sun, it excites a feeling more than the brown and dilipidated reof of the louts, and burnt poor village illech-it tlock dusty and wan, which dows not, I assure you, remind ine of Holland ar the Tyrol -among which large and magre fowls stalk abontAroop and languins umler the sickly atmosplere. The sun xtrikes propendienlaty on the gray walls of :m old ruin, the remans of tun ancient seignorial mamion, at ruin where flurish luxurionsly the methe, the larian, :und tha' wrimworl. The mainh, with at black surfinee, speckled with the down of gone, sems to be craporating its last moisture mate the burning leat ; mar the embankment which incloses it, and, resting on the dry shrivelled carth, the sher breathe with difliculty, anil, giaping for air, press hagnidly une upen the other, hanging their poor little mazales as low as possible ns if to let the fiery torrents which the swn durts upon them pass over their heads.

Worn ont with fatigue, I approadeed at last the dwalling of Nicolai J wayteh, enusing an astomishment on the part of the children which partook more of sthipidity than anything else, and a discontent mong tho dogrs, expresseci in violent barkings, whieh semed to do them some serimes internal injury on the spot, fine they were at once seized with violent eonghin!, and began to twist ahout as if they wero the vietims of enivulsions. I reached the tavern, however. $\Lambda$ s I appronched there appeared on the threshold a man of shall stature ; his head was lmre, und from his whole: appearance and manner I could discover the cecentrie man.
"Come! hatlo, comr, will you ?" he stammercl, raisines his eyes tund long eyebrows with considerable eilort. "Come, Morgatel; what are you atter? yon "reep and ereep along, whike people are waiting tor you insile. Come!"
"Well, well, here 1 inm, hacre I am," replicel a small tretful voice, and from tehline the house there emergel a little lame man. He was clothed in a chath tehnika, in pretty gool comlition, ome arm passed through the dreve, aud tho uther lonse. A pinted hat hug over his syebrows; his little yellow eyes were rentess, mul rumed his thin lips hovered a forced, a werved suile; his lants printed nese jutted nut like a slupis prow.
" [ inn coning, my friend," har continnel, stering fin the tavern-thor ; "lut why call me in that fashion, and who is waiting fion me !"
"Why eall you " " replied, in a tume of triendly reproach, the tall mann ; "ah, Morgatch, what a droil tellow! you are asked to cuter a tarem, and yom wish to know why! Those who are wating inside are gond mad right jovial fellows. Them is Tark lamha mul Diki-Barin, and the contractor of Jiaha. Iachka has taken a bet of a large mename of heer that he can sing better than the contraten- yon understand!"
"Will Iaclika sing !" waid Nargatel, shan"ly; "sot wro not leceiving mir, Olmblui !"
"I am not a harr," repliwd Ohahdui, humblith. " lour quastion is rude. There can be nu doult it lathkits singing. I should think, whin her has mate at but ou it. Are you such a blocklual as mot th sece that ? and surll :a brute to tell me I lie?"
"Well, well., lit us go in, simplicity; let us go in. ame hav done."

They enteres.
1 sippen that wey few of my rombers have had an "pportunity of making :"puaintione with our enum" aspect is that of a hat, mind their interier arrangements are externely simple. There in tirst a lithe passage of somewhat enhomy chaneter, and this heals into a liuser wom, calloul in liuss bedieiu $i=\ln$ ( whiti, that is, ne oue who is mut a number of the lanily is allowal t." pass, In this partition, abowe a lapge ouk-table, representing the har, is "at oun opming of prester hrealth than lenghl. Aloug the sides of (histable are armugel. ir sevrial rows, the ligumes in frecess of consumption :
 arraged acemeding to their sizes. The mitorior part ul, resting on thir 10 with dillieulty, IC upen the other? low as possible ns s sun darts upon ched at lant the an astonishment trok more of sthiment among tho which seremed to on the syot, fin at conghing, and re the vietims of however. As I reshold a man of d from his whole wer the cecentrie he stimmerred, with emasicherble - you after ! you are waiting for "repliced a small se thoro: 'merged a choth tehmikit, ssed through the d hat hung over were re-tless, ind reacreed smile ; shipis jrow. ntimed, steroring fin that fithion, tone of friendly tch, white a droil 6, :1ull? ? winh tinside are gewal imle- ladliaa mal ra. Jachka lits that he can sing stilind!"
, shamply; " soti hiui, haughtily: lee hor dombt of fhe las mate at d as mot to see $\cdot{ }^{\prime \prime}$ let us go its.
ors have had ma -ith olur coustry 'Their esterint or :aramgements a little pasagt his leals into it (whitu, that is, (in, behinulwhich ily is allowed la oak-table, repre greater breadth blo mo arraned, 4t consumption : ce scillenl bottles. e anterior par of the room-that devoted to visitors, is fumished with a single benel, romaing romel the wall, two or threo empity casks, und a table in the comer, under the holy iunge. Village taverus are, for the most part, gloomy enough, and you rately ever see on the naked beams of which the walls aro eomposed, tho consse images called ludotchryice (bark) so strongly coloured, and which no hut in liussia could want.
When I entered, I found alrendy assembled a jretty large eompuny.
At the bar, his luge body almost filling the entire oprening in the partition, was Nicolai Ivanytel, pouring out two ghases of eat-de-vie with his white flably hunds to his two friends, Morgatel and Obalini. Behind hin, in a contuer, and just halt' seen, was his wife, kecping evidently a watchfal eye upon her lord and muster.
In the midille of the room was a thin man of ahout twenty-three, clathed in a long bue nankin katetan. He had the air of a factory workman, and his colour was fire from indieating very robust health. His large restless grave eyes, his straight nose and flexible nostrils, his white shuping brow, his yellow curls, pushed behind his ears, and his lips, somewhat inelined to thickness, hat fresh and expressive-all revaled a ficry and impassioned nature. He was in a stato of great agitation ; he openod and shint his eyes, and breathed unerfully, and his arms trembled as if sutlering from an aguc-fiser, And indeed ho latd $n$ fever, that neuralgic fiver so well known by all those who havo to sing oir aperk in public. It was the artist Iachka. Near him stood a man of about forty, with low forehear, thick cheeks, horizontal Turtar eyes, nose short and flat, squarc chin, and black and builliant jair. Without moving his body, he looked slowly round him like an ox under the yoke. This man went by the name of the Savage-Gentleman, Diki-Barin.
$O_{\text {Peosite }}$ him, on the corner of the bench under the images, was seated the rival of Iachka, the contractor ol tho town of Jizdra-a man of morlerate height, but well formed, ubout thirty years old, with a face covered with red spots, flat and crooked nose, slightly wall-eyed, and possessed of a fine silken benrd.
"What is the matter, now?" eried Obaldui, after tossing ofl' a glass of eau-de-vie. "What do you wait forl Let us begin. Hallo! Tachka?"
"Yes, yes; come, commence," said the tavernkeeper in at tone of encouragement.
"Good; let us begin!"said the contractor, in a ealm and conffient tume, smiling at the same time; " 1 :m realy."
"And I too; I am rendy," muttered Turk Iachlan. not without some hesitation.
"It is time," "xelahmed Diki-Barin, in gruff, diccatorial voice "We slatl draw lots : you will draw," he adiled, mblessing Morgateli.

Morgateh, pheised to phay a part in all this, smiked, seized the erbe with loth hamb, and shol it well.

There was a profomb silence; the two lots struck aboinast each wher. I watehed attentively the faces of thase present-all apressed the highest anticipation. Even Diki-Barim knitted his brows. Morgateh phanged his hand inta the eap, and pulled out the contracter's lot. 'There was at stir in the assembly. Iachka reddened ; the contractor 1 nassed his hand throngh his lnir.
"What shall I sing!" he said, with some emotion.
"What sollg yuti please," raid the tawern-kedrer,

Nowly crossing his arms on his breast; "one doos not ask ono song more than mother ; sing what you like beat tu sing, only take care to sing well, and we shall [ronomee our juldinent conseientionsls."
"Yes, conscientionsly," mded Obaldni, as le licked the rim of his empty glass.
"My friends, give me a little time to colleet myselit", said the contructor, playing with the fur collar of his eoat.
"Bah, hah! no more off-jutting and excusesbegin," said Diki-Barin, resolved to hear only, nad peak no more. The contractor mused in moment, shook his hend, and moved towards the eentre of the room.

Before deseribing the musieal eontest which took place on this eccasiom, it will not be ont ot place to say a tow words about each of the personates of my harrative.
Let us begin with Obaldui. His real name is Evgraff I vanotl, but in our districts he nover roceives any other name than Obaldui, a sobriquet of which ho is himself puite proud. It is suitable wough for this good-for-nothing brawler, this meddloweme marplot, whose features, like his long ams and tongue, are in continual agritation. Hu was at one time a serving-man-a habitual drunkard, whom his masters had dismissed to take eare of himself; and though he never has any oceupation anywhere, and never receives a kopeek from a single soul, he somehow finds the means of amusing himself at the expense $o^{\prime \prime}$ others. There are a great many people of his neymantance who treat him to toa and brandy, though they conld not themselves tell why; for he is never in the least amusing. On the contrary, he disgusts rererbody by his stupiul talk, his mosquito-like pertinacity, his nervous restlessness, and his loud hollow langh.

Morgateh has no trait of resemblanee with Obaldui. The name Morgatch, or the Winker, is a niekname this min has received no one can say why, for he does not wink more than any other person. The Russian people ure natmally disposed to dub every one with some sobriquet, and tho man who lives in twenty places runs great risk of having twenty nicknames, and of course it would be a wonder if all of them were equally just and approprinte. In spito of my desire to know something about the history of Morgatch, there still remain, as the people who niake books say, many points in his life enveloped in thick and impenetrable darkness. All that I know is, that he was once eoachman in the house of an old lady without family, that he ran away with three of the best horses committed to his came, was not to be foumd for a whold year: that, haviug probthly consine dimgers and mierics of it vagahond lifi, he returned ot his own accord in a deadful condition, lame, haggard, and in ris. lat repentant and beseeching pardon itt. the feet of his mintres; by his exemplary condtuet. catused his prast fiults to he forgotten, mganed hy degrees the tivour, amd atterwards the fall contidener. of the lady, heenme steware of her property. and on the death of this excellent person found himestt free, nut emrolled anting the odnovortzi. Ifo alterwands became a famer on the lands of a meightombug pros prietor, mate lis fortume, and now lives in the enjoyment of easy circumstances.

The is a slorewd follow, full of pacionl wistom. His moral chameter is neither goal now but. Ha i- : dever speculator, las a gomb knawledge of laman character, and does not taill to show it on oceasion

He is ciremoppect and bold, in ease of need, like the fox; he will sometimes chatter like an old woman, but witheut ever saying a word he does not intemd to say, although he induees other peophe to utter what they wond fain have kipt concealed. He dnes not assume the look and mamer of a fool, like so many coming fellows of his kind, and indeed le woeld tind it diffiente to play this part; for I have never seen eyes so piereing, so sparkling with intelligence, as the small roguish cyes of this henest peasant. He never looks you stmight in the faee, but sileways, up or down; in short, in every other direction.
The Contractor is a contractor, and goes liy no other name in this part of the country; he will suply you i with goods of every kind, from beef, fish and candles, to bricks, stone, lime, and wood for a house; he will let you a houso er sell you a hunting dog, provide you with a stock of lucifer matelies or of stewnans.

To pass to Turk Iachka, or Inkoff, his rival in singing. The sobriquet of Turk he has reecived frem the fiet that his mother was a Turkish woman, brought as a prisuner into Russili. This man, despite his coarse external appearance, is in soul martist-an artist in every senso of the word. He is engaged in a paper manufactory belonging to a merchant in the neighlourhood.

As regavis the Duki-Barin, I shall not be so sparing of details-the high civilisation of tho present age

A TRAKTIR OR PUSLIC HOUSE.
having hand the singular eflert of spading a bite being withont grace-that, on the eontrary, there is an for savages. 1 ought to premise that the clabuctor of incontentable and umintakeable grace in liss npparthis man is more migmatical, less savas, and less lordly than the title la bears would at first indine as to believe.
The first expression which the appename of this man produces, is the feeling of a brute firm-a rude masive; tremendous indunitable powor. He sems cuduwed with the physical robustness and health of : Hereoles; he looks as if la were cut out of heart of calk, only in this leart of oak there is life sullicient for ton men. It my reader does not wish to she lim presented as Alcides, I have much pleasure in recommonding him to his notice as a bear ; hat, again, I must inform him that my friend the bear is fir from ance and manner, whieh proceds, is I believe, from the sweet and phacid confidence he has in the power of his ursine hmmanity. It is very difficult to guess, at first sight, in what sucial eategory we mught to phace this personage. One ean only describe him by ucgatives; le is neither a domestic servant, nor an udnownetz, nor a man of business, nor a ruined or retired lawyer ; still less is he a gentleman, : John Lackland-the vietim of his own folly, or a murtsman, or a poacher, (ur a boxer, or a parasite. He is what he is, a man of overwheming plysical power, of an inollensivo disjosition, who does what he pleases, and to whom one illways yields withont thinking about it. No oue can fish and candles a house; ho will dog, provide you stewpans soff, his rival in has received from I woman, bronght despite his conlsse tist-an urtist in agaged in a paper nt in tho neigh-not be so sparing tho present age

ntrary, there in :in fee in his appearis I believe, from as in the power of bicult to guess, at mylt to phace this iin ly negatives; r an odnovoretz, ir retired lawyer; 1 Lackland-the in, or a poacher, the is, a man of inofleusive dispohid to whom onle it. No oue call tell to what his affection for our district is owing；some have expressed the opinion that he is ecrtainly de－ scended from un olnovoretz fimily，and that he must have been in the army，or at lerot in the civil service， in the culministrative，if ne ${ }^{\frac{1}{2}}$ in the judiciary depart－ ment．The fact is，no one can give any positiv in－ formation about him，and he alone could write his history，if he knows how to write－and even this is still his own secret．As regards conversung with him， ＂t is easy to see that he is naturally silent and morose．

My realers may still ask，what are his means of living？One thing appears certain；he has no pro－ fessien，no trade，no business．He never goes to alyy－ body＇s house，he doos not seek the aequaintinnee of any－ body，and yet he is never in want of meney，and takes nothing on credit．I cannot say that he is medest－ that would not be the correct expression，but be is always peaceable；ho lives like a man who is indepen－ dent of all authority，and has made up his mind，once for all，to take no notice of anyborly．When speaking of him，people never empley any other designation than the sobriguet of Diki－barin；but when addressing him，they call him Perevlegotl：＂No one hats ever re－ marked that he endeavoured to lord it over the poorer people，and nevertheless he possesses great influence through int the district．He ix ubeyed without a gruige， altheugh he has not the least right to give orievs，and indeal never allows the slightest suspicion to escapre him that he has uny idea of the sort．

He says a word，gives a sign，and he is obeyed． Such is the privilege of power；the idea that it may advance，makes us fraw back：the iden that it may compel，eanses us to come．He very seldom drinks any liquor，and never speaks to women；but is mauly fond of vocal musie，whether it is a man or a woman who is singing．

The elanacter of this man attracts the attention much more powerfully than any enigha，than any inscri；tion， than any inystery created lyy the ficulty of is＇inite combination living in the human brain；for a mon，as a theme for study and exumination，is an alyss that． cannot be fithomed－he is something almost infinite， for he comes from Goll himself．It seems to me that in Perevlecoff lie hith extraordinary forees which he keejs sternly chaned in the depths of his sonl－well knowing that if ever they should rise and break forth into the world without，they would instantly become intoxicated with the free nir，and dash tand shatter him to pieves against the oprosing forees that met them in the exter－ nal world．And I much deceivo myself if，in the life of this man，there has not happen⿻日土（senething of this kind；if；taught and enlightenen by＂xperience，after having with difliculty suvel hinsidf from some tragical fate，he does not pitilessly，desputieally，keep limself under a constraint and a surveillate which absert all his time and all his faculties．What has struck me most in Perevlecutl；is this ferling of an immense mi－ tural foree，an inmate emecty－thu impulsus of which， suppressed with gerat lifticulty，now and then sudenly aplear in his look－jonned to a goolness of heart just as natural：two ghalities which I lave nuver bicat united in any other persom in tho same degree．

The contractur，stamding between the comiter and the cerner lar had heen sitting in，with his wey half－whet， began，in a very hifh falseto，it nationd nir，which I heard for the first fime，und which certainly camot be compassed，execpt hy a wiee capable of reaching，with equal purity，the very higicest notes．His voico was sweet and ngereable，though in some places thin；he played with it as a girl would with a toy parklin！ with rubies；the sound appeared io come trom the elonds，and to vemount and lescend meeasingly；ans from these elevated heights rained elouds of dazaling melody，floating and undulating in the air，from which wonld dart points like shooting stars，and lose them－ selves in the silence．．．imd after these pauses，which hardly left him time to draw breath，he would resume with a sweep and a boldness that carricel away the soul．

In the rapid evolutions of his exeention，sweet ：und strong notes succeeded each other，and the perfect art which he showed in managing these transitions，inte－ rested me nore than all his shakes and roulades，wint－ derful as they were for the musical purity and skill displayed in them．Every comoisseur would have heen delighted to hear what I was listening to；a fiernam alone might have been dissatisfied．His voice wals a Russian tenore di gruzia；it would have hern enjoned and appreciated at Milan，or at Venict，on at Naples， and，as a light tenor，at Pats．His themo wats ： merry dance－air，the worls of which，so till as I was able to cotch them amidst the intermimalh．furitures and shakes，seemed to be those of a national love－sons．

All listenod with attention．He evidenily tell that he hat before him juiges of experience sumb ability；and he did not spare himself．In fiect，the district which I inhabit can count ly the huntred acute commoisseurs in musie ；and the reputation of the large town of Sery－ hievskoe，which stamls on the Orel high road，is far from being necidental or mumerited－ithe reputation which it enjoys through ut Russia，as the leveality whicl has pronluced the sweetest and nost charmin＇s．${ }^{\text {precimons }}$ of vocal meloly：
In spite of ail his efforts，the contractor simg fin some time without producing any very powertul eflect on his audience ；he wanted a choris to sustibis him in tho refrain．It last，after a very diflioult passage on a marvellously high key－a passage which hade even Diki－Barin smile with pheasure，Obaldui could no longer contain himself，aud uttered a loud shout of delight．A rapturous shuilder pussel through all． Obildui and Morgatch begn．．．to follow the enitractor in a low tome，to take the purt of chorus，and when the singer＇s voice rose nlone，they whispered mad nutterel to each other：＂Maguificent ！That＇s the thing，that the thing ！－Yes，yes，well done！－Ahi！ahi！capital！ －Ah1 Iakotf has no chance！－The devil ！nhi！＂and many other polite exchamations of the same sort．
Nicolai I vanyteh，seated on a corner of his cominte， wagsed his heal approvingly to the right and left． Obaldui male a thousand grimaces，shrogged his shoulders in the most convulive mamer，and stimped lis heels on the flow with a supurnatural energy． Takoft＇s eyes were rell ：und intlamed，he tremblal tike： lenf，and a rostless vagum maile phayed on his face． Diki－Barin nover changed a kenture of his comblemate， mul sat motionless in his seat ；but lii look，fixal in the singer，hore a remakable sweetness of experssion， chough his lip was curted as if in dishath．

Encouraged by these evilences of tha general de－ light，the virturso rose into a perfect whirlwind of song，extentel such rouladew，such wonderful shakes， and poured forth such cataracts of sound，that，when at laxt，pule，exhansted，and hathed in ferppiration，he nitereel his hast notes，which seened to he lost in the infuite heigits of spmec，a gensell shout of rupture rom me places thin; he ith a toy sparkling io come trun the al unceasingly ; and 1 clouds of dizzling the air, from which tars, and lose themtheso Inuses, which $^{2}$ th, he would resume at carried away tho exention, sweet :nnd and tho perfect ant eso transitions, intes and roulades, winical purity and skill enr would have lieqte aning to ; a Gernaun d. His roice was: 1 have bech enjipged Penice, in at Naples, His theme was a rich, so fiar ths I wals ceminall fiomitures a national love-song. to eridently felt that nee s.an ability ; an the divtrict which 1 aente eomminsents in large town of Surs ret high roul, is fir ted-the reputation as the levality which t charming pecimens dractor sang firy some y powerful eflect on is to sustain him in - ditlicult pussage un ge which buato erem Obuldui could no reel a loud slant of passel through all. follow the contractur horus, and when the sperevd and mutterol hat's the thing, haits -Ahi! ahi ! eapital! he devil! ahi!" aul the same surt. orner of his comuter, the right and lett. maces, shruggal lis namer, and stampud surumatural ancrys 1), he tremblen likie: : phayed on his face "of his eommennew, at hiv look, tixeld 1 is - ethess if' expressiun, listain.

* of the genemal deerffect whirlwind of h wonderfil shakes, sound, thut, when at in perspination, ha el to loc lost in the shout of mpture rese at once from all tquarters of the room. Obaldui threw himself on the neek of the contricter, and pressed him in lis long bony ams; on the broal dat comatenance of Nienai Ivanyteh shone a rudly glow, that took twenty yeurs from his age; lakotr slouted as if he had loost his senser, "Moluketz! molodetz!"-(Cipital fellow). Even my pror neighlmur, the ragged mujik, could not resist the general enthusiasm, struck his ist on the table, eried, "Ahgha! Ah gha! it is beautiful ; devil take mer, it is capital!" and spat boldy to the other side of the rom.
"You have givenus a treat, brother," erie! Obaldui, without puitting his hold of the exbansted singer ; "and what a treat! what a treat! Fou have certainly gainal the vietory, brother! Iachka nead not trouble limself trying "Leave him mone, linve him alone, I tell you, tiresomo blerkhend!" cricd Morgateh; "don't you see he is ticel almost to death? You carplut! you ace always making a fiss. Youre like the bath-leat, or the fly in the honey-there's no getting rill of yon."
" Well! let him sit chwn," repliel Olahldii; "I am going to drink his health," he alliled, going up, to the cemmter: "I expect you will pay tenc it," nolling to the contractor, who returned a sign of coment.
"Y'on sing well, hrother! I say aecll:" said Nicolai Ivayyth, in the tune of a man who knows the in. portance of what he is saging. "There, now, it is your turn, lachka; pay attomiom, brothers! don't be afraid, ked up your heart, Iachka! We shall sed, we slath julge, You have heard for yourself, y ou have "wned gumself that the enntmetor sings well, really well, unum my word."
"He dinge wery well, very well," added thes tavemkeeper's witi.
"Capitally, gha, all gha!" bellowed the mu, ik.
"Ah, the wriguler! the polecka! what the devil is he doing have?" cried Olmhlui immediately, ant apromehing the luor, he pointed his finger it him, and hurst into a lond shont of laughter; "polerka, gha, bulet. pomiai, gha, the wriggler! Come, Ahother, where have you fillen fion !"
The mulapry mujik tre:uliled; he was inst ming to rise and lense the room, when the hazen voice of Diki-Parin thmerel-
"Will that animal not lase a borly in patee""
" $1-1$ ann doing nothing," muttered Obaldui.
"Inald your tongne! Xinl you, Lakoll, hegin."
lakull' rose, matrered smue meonneeted words, and appenred owerwhehnel with agitation. All eyed were uph him-the contraten's nome ansionsly and fixerty than the rest; there wat chaservable in his comentence, too, beneath his matmal nssuranee and the trimmpthant expression which his rerent ancess had reaterl, a vagne trstlessiess fire which I coulli see mo motive, chaserving, as I did, the great timidity displayed hy his rival, He leaned bak against the wall, and kept perfectly motionless.
The singer sighen, drew a long brenth, amd commenced. The first mote promised little; it was ferlie, mangual, and ,lid not seem to proceed from his chest; it apmened rather to come from a distame-firm withut-and to have been thrown by chanes, as it were, into tho midst of tho attentivo madiense. It parheal in singular efteet upon all of ns; we look at at ach other, but ench seemed to relombia his attentiont, mal iletermined not to lose a note of this secome patit of the eonecrt. He went on-his yoiee beeoming elearer, fuller, and firmer; he grew anmated, and his soug rose and swelled, and earried every soul ulong with it. It was of a remarkably melancholy character, and legan thus: "0): there's many a path leads to tho prairie."

1 hase mavely heard a voice of such expuisite freshness. Weak and hroken at tirst, with a siekly tone that was fir from plasing, it afterwards revealed sentimme so profound, passion so trun- such a mixture of power, swetness, youth, and a charming abandon, with tmes of poignant sorrow, as to seareli and shake the soul of every listener. The whole power of the Russian soul-naturally good, warm, and ingrmousbreathed forth in this voiee, which went right to the heart of erery ow, awaking the national melaneholy with the magie of its notes. He had now hasi every trice of his former timidity, and gave himself up with his whole sonl to the enjoyment of his own singing. Ife hal conlletely forgoten his rival and his ambience. There was something gemune, mational, linge, invigurating, ineffibly swect, in the tom of his voiee, like the berezo that sweeps acrons the lwomdless steppes of our comatry.
My car was strmek with the somm of stifled sobs. It was the tavern-kerper's wife. Iakofl cast a rapid glance at her, and his voice continued not les- sonorous. ame iuprasioned. The Lreast of Nienlai Ivanytel was palpitating with delight: Morgatelh's eye glowed and dihated ; Obatdni, stupified, sat with his mouth open; my neighimur the peasant could not restrain his sobs; while, on the iron comutenance of Diki-bivin, unler his long eyelanhex, stool two lange tears, realy to burst mul thaw down his eheels. Lakuff's rival sat with his fist elenched against his forchoad, and without making the least movement.

I lo not kume how all this would hater embd, overpowed its we all wre loy these feelings, hat not lak of subhuly conchuded with a shall nuto ei :m extraontinary deliany, holdness, and purits. So one houted or apolie-mo one moved; we seemes to be all waiting for flar return fiem the skins of this womertul, maishing somad. hakoll opened his eyen; her semmed astouinhel at this ilenee; his lank : pl anch to ank the rason of it. It was not long before he mularemed it the victory was gainet.
"Inkell"," sait the Diki-Barin, pacing en hiw shonker a hand trembling with enotion; adnd he could not utter mother syllaske.
Wra were all in if [wdifind with astonishment. The rival uf Jakoll rose, we ut up to him:
"Vou have won; yo, you have von," he said, with an ugitation paintul to behoh, and left the tavern.
This mapid mosmom, this sudden mpning and slutting of the door, hroke the enchantment which finand his tomgue, and the an hergan to resumal with the natail chat. I left the room and walked home:

I was desecuding with ripion strides the sile of n ravine, when, from in distance in the valley, the shrill wieo of a child suddenly broke the stillme of the night. "Anfropka, Antropka ; at, 1 , a." Dlore than thifty time did the name of Antropkn hrike we my car, but numswer was returned. At last 1 heard is vaire, werkened by distance, shout in retma
"What!"

The voice ai the tirst child, thll of maligmant gice, replient:
"Come here, you demon : come here, yu devil."
"What do you want me for!" answervi the other, alter a silence of two minntes.
"Come here, aunt is going to whip gun ; they're waiting." ${ }^{1}$

VIII.

Moscow wind its Greit Mazaar- Ressian SmopkerprasPbition of Women-Popelation of Moscon-Change
 mathon of a (itizen Class-Cifmuan Cobromithons ani hersian Asbociation-hessing Amtigans-Mintams Service-The bromsik on Door Portrar-The brdosnsik

Os the other sille of the greatsquareat Jowenw, which extemds binfire the two linge gates of the Kremlin, commenees the initajgoron, the tirnt builling in which is the i:mmense warhouse ur hazan, eallen alsu gorod. I beheve a person might wall for an hom withent thavers. fing all the immarable passuges, with that rows of boe the on both sides. It is a fair that lats the whon year; but one nut well acquainted with it dow mot easily fand what he wants; for ewry kiad of merehandiee has its nwin row of heothe: leather gomes, cot thi, limen, ete. : and the strmger may comader himself fortumate it in his wambering he soon arriwe at the booth he repuires. These lazans ane finm in ewry town in Rusial : the are manifotly of hiental origin, but quitu alapited th the sinit of :anociation of the Ruswians. The Gintinui Der in Morow surpheses, as might ha suppesen, all the others; and it wonld be dillicult to time in the whole somb, umber the sime roof, a stock of gowls sumparing this bere in the variety and richmess of the diflerent artions. Fiverything imiginalle is to be had hore, of crume at a sand priee: there is, however, grat prewins ind tempiting of wistmers. In mort of the lantli: are loys of twown on fiftere years of "go, in lome cloth kiftams, womerally bhe, who are trained to deoy the parmors is soma: you :ppronch the buoth, the little racme eome: shaiking up to son, int tries wh wherline gertura and xpmans to wate gon in: heston the way, fhees himelt before you, "and only gillowhetantly his own w drement he makes another lemprate enint.
 of amm, and irics to force you inter the henth. It, hanever, you till resist, ha sudduly desite, and walks away, to hunt down the next pisser-her in tho same manner. Fion, howerer, exempe trom ine, whly tor enominter the assault of the next no lese zealusis litive bast ; and if you maluckily chance to stand in the midile between two lowthes, you are attacked on lusth sides.

Women or girls are never sern as shopoman in wait uns the custonden; I never olsward liussian. Among the yong work omen sewng and emberidere ing may sometimes, indeal, be men linsiatus niso; lat thy do not upear as saleswnen, at leavi not of millinery.

Russion Life in he Interior: or: the Iargeriemes of 12 Sportsman, By Ivin Turrgheniell', if Moseow. Editedl hy datues 1, Seciklijeltat.

The St. Simmiams went to Egypt to discover the free woman; had they gone to Russia they would promis have retumed better satistied. In a constitutional conutry the kinge reigns, but does not govern; in a well-organisel timily the man reigns, but the wife goverus. In Russin, at least in Moscow, the re verie of this is the case ; here the wife reigns, and the iomen governs. The female sex in Russin oceupies a peculian position, diflerent from that which they hold in other Europent sombtries: it varies, however, accorling tu rank. In the ease of tho Mujiks, or pensints - of whon there are about 100,000 in Moseow-the women work mucin less than the man; "wen the work in the honses is generally done by the men, who carry woul and water, and light the fires,? while the wife leriks on, walks illoust, earries the chiliren, de. Vith the hamrgeoisie, partienlarly the murehants and ortisms, the wite does nothing the whole day; she takes nut the slightest trouble with the leorsckeeping, nor las any idea ol the life and duties of a Craman howewit. The husband dones everythi, os. ifineting the homsekeping. Among the air are are alucated muntly in the difleront maviing-sehouls, athl receive an education mueh superior to that of the men: but these institutions form ouly ladies of fasbion, wot honsewives. In the higher elasses this is still more the cats.
The households in Moscow are indeed hecoming more and more Euronemised; in very genuine lins. dim lomshold all the work was firmerly, and still is, performed by the mate sex. There mer only men conks -1ue cooknains, chambermaids, houst kecpers, fe. : :th their work is done ly men; hence the extratimary prodominnme of the malde population in Maneow, which amomets to nearly louhte the female. The statistical womu.
$\therefore$ great part also of all fixed property is in the hamis of women. In the front of every house in Musemp mils. Setwlough is writen the name of the prider, and lufno every third lumen at lant th. is that of a whan. Witl hambed promery ta, in tha hands of the femme ses. The propmater ... this mast give 1 "I the women, in their whoh suctan t"sitim, may canily loe coneeved.

The gumeal develnment of somblal life has ley to this resind. Nowhere is there sueh a perputhat reve. hation in property ats in Russia : the lame ix censtantly bassing from hand to hand ; in the publie serviere in commerce, in mambactures, in the professions, laras fintumes are made rapilly, lut are as rapidly liont.
${ }^{2}$ There is a fumbrous little Itusxian story which mpresenta, in the tiom ot a liahgue, the pationce and hamitity of the pasint, and the ts ramieal domination of hix wife over hin temont.
 barley; it is luchwhent-P. So be it, I wan an ar it.-

 - 1 . 'The larley is ripe, we will ent it. - If: It is mot harter, it is buchwhat. I! Hackubat fo be it, I won't dixpute it.P. The hathy is threshesl now how the it ls "- $\mathrm{H}^{\circ}$. It is not harler, it is "mekwheot. - 1 '. Muekwhent tot it he, 1 wnet with it,-If, It is mos litly-mult, hut of buckwhent,- but i nevers hraral of buchwhent-mat, or that beer was brewel trom it."

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

Egypt to discover the Russia they woulh isfied. In a constitulut does not govern; m reigns, but the wife a Moseow, the re vere reigns, and the :uall oh they hold in wher rowever, according to iks, or peasints - of Moscow-the whem ren the work in the meth, who enary winal life th, wife Jooks on, en, de. Vith the rehants amd irtisams, e day; she takes mit or:sekeeping, nor hats a Coram housewife.
,itecting the ces are allu-"araing-vehools, and or to that of the men; laclies of fashiom, 1,0t ses this is still more
(r) indeel heroming "، "rery gemuino husfirmerly, und still is, reare only mun conks bonstikeppers, fe. : all tee the extramerimary tion in Mumeov, which malle. The statistical rin, and only 13:3:
epery is in the hamis my house in Musim" the mano of the mase at halat the al property th:
me fom ${ }^{2}$ i The preponiter . 1 in their whold sand
orial life las led to teh " $j^{\text {ner metual }}$ mus. the land ix comentantly the puldie sorviry in the protessions, large are ar rapidly lint.
xtory which raqresunt, in lumidity of "We tumant, tie over hins itas. "ife. Mustan! ! is nut 1,1 won's 1.4. ., $13 .-$ II, - II: It is an It, It "tre, it won't diypute - il: It is nut turley, is it, I won't dixpmete ti, - hanat let it he, I wort -mult, we will brew liewt - linit we whek whent. 'it dispyte it.一R'. What -11: it was mot tuarly - it, I won't displute it , or that beer was brewe i

Frauds are discovered in the public scrrice, and the property of the enlprit is contiscated ; unsucerssfinl spreulations (the Russinns are fond of speculation) ruin the merchant and manufacturer, and in cuch cuses his tamily would the completely ruined. These ocenvences are so frepuent, that the parties are -higel to calenlate upm them as a part of their promable casualties, and thus sek to preserve a pechition for the ir tamilies. They assign a part of the property-the hernse for instance and the real property-to the wife; at tirst this was for appearance sake, but it has gradually become a fixed and permament legal condition. Russian legination too favours women in the adminitation aud dixpusal of their property more than that of any uther romitry. The property of the honshand has becume the pervomal, that of the wife the real gart of the property: the latter remuins secure, even when the bormer is dissipnted.
As Howeow since the great tire in 1812 han assuined a completely altered outward aspet, so has it also mulergene is grent revolution in its pepulation. It was once the eity of the Rassian mbility; it in now a modern manuticturing town. Only fitty years ato it was calculated that, of tho 8,360 private houses, abont 6, 100 belonged to the nohles, who at that time lived mustly, at leart in winter, in Moscow. The mobles, lowerer, were too proul to allow others to live in the same lanses with themselves, the whole builings were so constructer that shops eould not easil. $\mathrm{ha}^{2}$ placed in the lower storios, nor traders and artisans rarry on their business in them. Tho dwelling-linhe was pheed either in the back part of a courtyard, or tronting the street, but hat always a conrt with a raringe-gate by the side. May wero large piataes, with two and even thre stories; pthers, of one story, were comstructed of hag, hut hamisomely ornamentei. Streets ennsisting of rows of : whoming houses, of two. three, or more storine, the lowest furming shop, is, as in

In these honses dwelt the mobles with their timilies and dependiunts (serfs), in a mixture of Oriontal amb European luxury, The peasint worked and paid a pull-the to his lorl, which the latter with his limily and domestie shaves gemerally expented in Moseow: The gratest laxury was dipplayed in tho number of huge aml servants: and the government was froInumbly ubliged to issue regulations regarting the "quipage, decreeing who was to drive with sis, fom, twin horses, ise: Of the luxiry displayed in servants in innossible for un to form any idea: it is assurten that in the larger palaces there were as many as a thousand, or more; even mbles of minor conserfuence and firtume had at least from twenty to thirty; mul a mure wretchel, haze, mul disomderly crew were not to be finund. It was impossililo to give sutficient neenpation to this srowd if proplo: I lave heren toll it was utten rilliculons to see the mamer in which the honselhold business was divident anoogst them: one hat nothing to the his whole lifi long but to sweep, " light of stairs, mother had only to feteh water for the fimily to drink at dimer, monther in the revening, so. The expense of their maintenance, however, was not great : they lived, like the Russime peasnants, on hrent, groats, shtech (cabbage-soull), mud kives (a kind of some beer) ; their dress was that of the peasmints, mal they lived in the ibbes (hatek roome) whiell are nlways found in Lussinu courtyarts. The nobles and their house-servants constituted nt that time the prineipal pobulation at Moscor, 1 whaps 200,000 souls. of these, one-half on two-thimels repaired to the combtry in summer, aml Noseow was then leserted until winter:
Since 1812 a complete change has gralually taken place. The nolle? housis wre all burnt down, and their fimilies retired into the comentry; they had suffired immense luses, and haul therefore neither the power nor the means of restoring their phaces to theirtimmer statr, or of lauling the ille amil laxurions liven to which they had bren acenstomel. The mobles remanel more in the country, and passe! the winter in the ditlirent govermment-towns, which have sinee greatly inereased in prospurity. The quermment bugan to encourage mil pronate trade and manuactures, and Masoow sum lecame the centre and prineipal seat of industrinal activity. If yon now ask, "Wh whom hnes this anhee belong!" the answer is, " I " the manufaeturer $\mathrm{M}-$, the merehant $0-$, Ne., formerly l'riue A - or G -_,"
Since the rise of this trading ame mamulacturing atetivity, the clement of the pepulation of Moscow have been completely changed. In the better parts if the city the rows of hamser are more continume, one the tse adjeining the ather ; the large courts with catrance. gates are now seldom seen, being fonal only in the more distant quarters of the town. The houses are generally of two or there, tately of more, storiex, and in tho lower storics are rows of shops. Fime streets, as for instane the Simith's brilge, may vie in this repper with the mont spleulid in the bent towns of Eurol":

The phace of the nobility, with their innmerable and laze wmestiey, is now oecopied ly the manntheturers with their equally munerens workmen. A liarg mumber of the mbles have themelwes engagel in manuthetures, and their fime honse-servan ${ }^{2}$; now work in the fictories for wages.
lint even these of the nobility who haw mit turned mantiantu" rs, and revide in Masow in the civil service of the government or on their private fistumes, have rititely altered their mode of lite. 'The mumber of lunses hits bern sery much diminished, and they contime themselves to what is indixpensables The arstem of houschut! servants has been quite changed: jio mere are retained than ate neessary ; inmblahough there may still he double the mamber kept than for instance in berlin (is timily which in bintin would bo sperved with two or thre domestics, mantains in Hosenw at least finur or six), still the crewal of meme phyed dependauts has disappeared. It is a rare thiag to find twenty or thirty poople in the louse, or to hane a Russian noble rineak ut some wh boyne still gathering seme lemadreds of servants about him in the ohl way, is musentmadinary ocentrenes. I wha told of' : Priuen Galitain an an instance of this. In gruema, the nohles find it suit their present labits as well as interest much more, to permit their fermer idle servants (on payment of had-money to them their masters) to take work for wages in the numerons manutietorim, in this way mantaining themselves, and olten nequiring property. Indeed thase of the nolility who mlopt completely tho Europem modn of living, have genmeally not oven their own gerts as servints, hut hired donestics. Whilst a nohleman's own werlis are purhupls living as domexties in other tamilien in Moseow for their loard and wages, he in turn hires the setfs of other nobles.

Thus the cutward appearathe as well as character of Moscen has been so much changed in the last thirty years, that the social combition of the phace fitty years ago is no longer to be recognised. The political influence which Josicow exercises, in the centre of imbinstry, upon the $\rho^{\text {ndicy }}$ and measmes of the sovernment, has hitherto wither been madn the sabpet of investigation nor remark. With the love and veneration of all Russians for the " white-wallend encireled holy mother Aloscow," and its immuse importance as the centre and representative of the industrial activity of the empire, the govermment in abliged, particularly with regrail to the system of protective fluties, to show the greatest respect for the "pinion of Nosenw, however mueh reason of foreign policy might ineline it to adnat another course. This will lie better muderstool when we comsider the tent of this inmantrial distriet, which equals that of : : ${ }^{\prime \prime}$ ppive, and contains sixtecn million inhblatan : © tuld that reently, when there was some talh. (omplete incorpration of Polami, a deputation fi a Muscow represented that the industry of the interine, amd marticularly of their cits, would wiffer great iujury, mind consequently the project was given op for the time.

I have :atrealy remaked that I consider it me of the greatent defects in the social condition of linsia, that it powessem no dinthute citizen chans which he its elluation and position in suefety might have introduen that municipal and raporath apivit, those honomalha and prond sintiments, which hase eontri latel so much, firm the Midhe Agm downamed, th
 Romanic nations.

It appears as if mysterions canses existed in the character and history of the slatenic peoplen mitarourable to the finmation of a ritiene cliast f fir not maly in the case of the linasians, int also of the other shavinraces, there is nowhere aly powiful sontamens develnment of it - mither anng the Poles nor the somhernstans, and in Thhemia it is an institution introlucel hy the tinman; nay, the binhemian towns are to this dity moth inhation bermans.

For mure than hai a century the yovernmen has rime 11 . is-moll regulations fire the towns, and several baws concenning their romdition were mactel in thu German spirit ant atter the (ecrman moklel. It mast the acknowhelged that thes laws were on tho whete a
 The tirtuan mompate girit, wh whill the law was tounled, wata puite forright tu the Jassian national chatratore, which fresorses anstrong spirit of assandiation : it was opmed to the natimal habite, the socein rustomes that it will ever really strike tirm trent in the soil.

It is athowive in the ease of the tranding and name facturing sy-vem, whioh has sprong yp with much visumer in the last twenty-tive years. Thait this, with the engmons extension it has acpuiral, will exereine a ducidell mathene, and nue which it is at present imposvible to continate is monestimable; but what form it is to assmus still lies conceraled in the future.

The hassian has copacity and talent for overything.
 practical athility in neppining a position mblipted on him.
 the German- -an athelment and lowe for his persition, his prole:shi lis work-is maknown to the linseinu.

The true Germ:m loves his position in the world ; he would not ecechange it fir any other; to the protession or trade to which he has devoted himself' he remains fiithful, pursues it with constancy, with love, and with a certion pride ; la thinks it homurable to preffect himself in it, ind rejoices in the successfinl work of his hands: he believee that he sees in his position a distinet appointment of l'rovidence, to which he is homel to remsin faitlifu.

Nat so the Russian : aceident mosily deeides which of the talints a boy posecseses shall bo itirst developerd. The lauld promietor, withont much examination, elooses among the boys of his serfs, who is to he a shermaker, whe a smith, who a cook, who a derk, Sc. I'rudent hatowners, ia order to acquire better workmen, sometimes give the boys to mater-artisans, mader a contract fin three to oight years to tomeh anm exercinc them in their wink. The colond of a reginent orders at onec, and withont much investigation, that in many men shall be saddle te, so many smiths or wherl. wrights; these shall be musicians, those elerks. Aud thery becone all these, and ahoos invariatly with vase and dexterity; mal from then proeed in general the mont solid nand best artiticers, workmen, and artist, Incause, being alpointed and comstrained by outward anthority, they remain in the oceupation they have adopitent. In the case of the crown pensants, on the wher ham, the hey receives the first impulae from his parents or relatives, or chooses an ocenpation fir himsolf. Alter adepting his calling, there is no guestion of :any chluation such as the Gorman artisma receives, mor if the sethed appentireship, with regular mastere, nur absancenant from the jusition of apprentice to that of jonneyman, and ultimately on examination and trial to that of master, participating in importrut priviloges, The lemens as he can, from ubmeration or accibent, attemate and invents himself, and sevks embdoyment wherever is can find it. of lowe or venera. tion for his pasition or malting there is nuwe any 'questiont: he has no fixed tarifl' of the price of his work, bat takers what he e:on get. (ot the fieding ut luty or loman int the produrtion of a good sulsitintial piece of work he is ighoment f he works only fin apparame, mily to dispose of his commodity, and his mpation is guite inditliment to him.
 andopts another. Llow oftern ders is ham commence as a shovenaker or tailor, then Leabe his work, and lecome Whaps a kalathi carrier (rmaning alont the streets it St. D'elomhargh or Moscow with pastry for nate) ; then, after having mand rome moner, and proviled himati with horses and a eart, he turis carrion, anil wanders in sume siput, mal if firtume is fivonvalle, becoms pedaps a rich mereltant. 'The cares of most of the lange merelamts :und manulineturers, if examined, will be fimbld t" correspoud with this deseription.

Bint cron when the Rassim has berome a rich merehant or manatictimer, hed dees not therefore gow attached th his pusition and protession: ho rugarls the latter merely ns a mems of aepuring wealh. If he hats , hildren, he pridhaps cednenters one fier his own profesiom, lant solely in order to have at fiathfint assist:mt in his husiness; upon the others he emleavoms to bestow an education qualifyi! g them for the military or eivil serviee, and thas giving them hope of aceniting the mak of noble ; for the love of money
m in the world ; he er ; to the profersion himself he remains with love, and with nommble to perliect uceessful work of his n his position a iliso which he is homul

1ostly deeides which I bo intst levelopect. much eximuination, rfs, who is to lne: a ok, who a clerk, &c. ecpuive better work-tater-artisans, maler ; to teach and exer. lomel of a regiment westigation, that an my smiths or wher those clorks. And inviniably with rase oreed in general the rkmen, amd artits, tratined ly outwand :cupation they have wi prisants, on the ist impulse from his ocenpation for himthere is 110 guestion aull artisall roceives, with regular masterv, on ot aymentice th ely on examination prating in important from obrervation on thself, and serks em"t love or venema. haro is mever any of the price of his
"I' the fiellige of If a goor' substantial works only for aprommodity, mul his im. alt or profession, he 6 man commuente as is work, and become alrent the strects af wistry for sale) ; (hen. mel jrowihed himadt :amicr, mad whender ters, tor, intus small tratablishes himself fivolualble, liecomus Heer ul most of the s, if examined, will eseription.
hat berome at rich not therefores show fession: her regards guining weallh. It tes one tur his own have a fitutulal se othisw he cudeaifyit g thenn for the - giviug them hope the love of moncy aml distinction are the rocks upon which in liassia every elaracter' is slipwrecked. 'The common man, the peasart, is estimalile and good at heart; lat as soon as he ampures mones, and becomes a spermbitor or merchant, he is rumed and metammphosed into an arrant rogne.
The govermment is aware of the injurious eonseguences of this fluctuation, and has mande varions attempts to restrain it within eertain limits. It is ansions to form a stable elass of citions, and the law regarding the institution of honorary citizens is a striking proof of this.
The awakenel manfacturing activity contributes in sme degree to introtuce stability into the citizen chas. The were merchant, particulaly the Russian one, whe possesses the spirit of : chatherer ur shopkepper much move than that of a merchant (amp therefore sehlom, considering their herg number, engage in the foreign treuld of the enpire, which is genersilly Idti to the Germans and English settled in St. Ieteresburgh), can emsily shat up his shop, when he pleases, amd abandon his insiness. Not so the manneturev: a manfacturer implies a certain stability ; it is almost like a lamed estate, There belomgs to it a lavge material and tixed apital in buildings and mathinery, and an equally large capital in luman physical and mental labur mal jwowe ; emserpently a slissolution of the whole is mush more dillienlt, amb always acempanicel hy great losses. besides, a liar more comprolensive ability, stady, and varied edncation are meded in a mandicturer than in a morehant. The permanence and stability of a manufactory loads the owner to educate his children to his business; in this educntion solid acpuirements are requisite, nud these produee in every bun $n$ vertan lowe for the oceunation to which he devotes them. In this why undoubtedly liassia may cherish the hope that graidatly, in the mannfacturing class, may inning up a ligher clins of citizens.

But the real kernel, the lower eitizn elass, is still wanting. The higher will, in Jiussin, sooner or later become momalganated with the nobility; hut for the formation of' an honourable ant numerous lower class of citizens, there is nt present no hope. The prople who represent it-artisans, shopkerpers, and smull traders-are utterly demomalised.

To attempt to raise thene classes out of this domoradiation by mams uf strict gaihl rementations 1 consider improticable; homase, as 1 lase observed, Ane curpurate spirit of guides is altogether foreign ta the linswian national hametre. Vixample, emulation, "nli competilim litwe dome most fin these clateses. In ahnost all the larere tuwns ate (inmath workmen; and when a liussian wislu's patticularly to paike and recommend any artiele, he siys it is ferman work; consephently compedition anil examphe ocerniontally load to imitation, and the linssian artisam beybus to work in a mosesmial manmer and to elangre fomest prices.

Unfinfuntily it has latoly heen the sulderet of reand k, that bue mewly artived German sorkmen have unt maintainel thrir ohl reputation fin solid and hommable slatings, lat many of them have berome foml of pulling anid unt to $\mathrm{l}_{\text {ne }}$ deprothel upon.

The original linssian furm for the probuction of medianical products is the trading comuman organisord tother the whole of their inhablibuts, canry on one and the same tride. There are villages which produce only boote, others only tables and chairs, others anthowary, &e. One or several families fomm a mannfartory, diviting the work anong them, and latving their warchonses and shops in the large eities and market-towns. This kind of molustry is found all over the tmpire, and is gremunely luasian. Tho linssians are in geneml excellent workmen when mited in manufiktories, lont singly bud artisans; they are fomd of worlenem's assmiations, bat not of workmen's corprotions.

Ther is no lower class in Moseow, such as is found in German towns, fir instance in lharlin, living in garrets and cellars. Cellars I have never seen in Mosersf: and there are fow if any hired garrets. Fommery there was 100 mable in Macow, atad even now this torms but a very small proportion of the probuation. There were in tormare times only two lower clases: eithre they belomis to the peasantry anl to some enmmune, and had always a right to the possession of a portion ot land, or they were bondman, and betonged to some proprictor, who was obliged to provide lood, lodging, and clothing tim them. Heqple without a home, land, or a proprictor to provide for them, people in general vis it vis du rien, were maknown.

Valistment in the army is one of the means by which fredom is attaned in linssia ; the serf who becomes a soidier is therely freed from his master. When discharged he is an matirely free man, lat it is only the freedon of the hired in the air: Formerly the sollier alandonnd wery wher relation in life. and this for ever: The number of solliers who remained after the twenty-five years service, and again retumed into civil liti, was very small: they seldmo formed new family relations, but lived and died isolated and alone, and conlld not be considered as the germ or fundation ul' a future proletariate. The Eimperor Nieholas abritged the time of serviee, and even introdued a system of furlongh for a series of years, which gives the sollier back to civil life, without his former connections with his commune, his family, or his master leing resmued. It is a dangerous experiment, and exhibits in Russia for the first time the germs of a rable, of a liture proletarinte.

In Moscow the wholo population of the lower clases, or merhaps mine-tenthe, apmen in the national dress. Singaliu aud necasiomally very eharneteristic figmes are seen among llum; there are also some particulier employments whish have wiven peculiar manners and customs to certain classes. Among these that of tha dromik is whe of the mast characteristic tigures-h oecupies tha phate of hamse-sprant and densprter. The drormik lives summer and winter in the comet and entrome hall, nuder the gateway ar in the strect: the lattor he is bound to keep in a serpectalde state of elembiness; il' he neglects this, let hin hewar, for his gund emsin the budushaik moleratmals no festing. Duming ane evening lo is seen, armal with his broom, indetatigably at work, chanins lur is atsolate ruler, and liom which (ifor, court) le has derived his name. thatged by the proprictar with the sujevintembence of the honse and premises, hreme as , utent letween him and the bulgers, whone finctutum he is, lowrst servint of the protice: he is the superintendent
 the comer of all the prineipal streets is a log-hut, the His tirst instruction he receives as pastilion to the aboule of tho buloshmik. It is his duty to sen that no equipuge of some nobleman ; here the boy of ten or disurder takes place, and that the street is kept clean: he has to olserve everything, and to know who lives in each house-to him yon matways ably for information.

A thoronghly characierintic figure in all Russian towns, but barticularly in Moweow, is the insowhtehik (the droshly-driver). The great Russian is horn a thiver; riling is properly not his metier; the common mom (Cossacks exeepted) is vellom seen on horsulmek, lout in the art of lriving he surpasses all other nations. The flower and crown of Russian drivers howerer is the isvoshtehik. A more amiable, civil, comning, and twelve yeans in secon the whole day, and in the season also the greater part of the night, sitting upur me of the leaners: he eats and drimks, phas and sleep upou it, in short he is properly one with his horse, When seventern oz eishteen years old, he is als:amem vither to be comeham on the lox, or becomes an invonh-teliik:-at tirst on hire, with some one richer than himself, until he hass saved or made by his sperenation. sullicient to procure a harse ind droshky, and in winter a sledge, fin himself: Thuceforward he lives on : marrow seat in front of his dromky or slelge.
In Muscow and St. Peiersburgh there are night an

PUBLIC BATHS.
well as day droshkiw, which drive ahont the streets the whole night from ten till five orlock. (imme:lly two isvoshtechiks unite in partureship; they lave to gether there horess, and mange so that each hurse has always in turn one clay of rist. Ahont five veloek in the inorning the night dreshkymen drive into the courtyarl of ertain kabaks (ims) ; here arre also the day isvinhtechiks, who then get out of heel, ant they elrink their ten tugether, their only wam foul dhering the day. From five to seven welork wareely a single alroshky is to les seen in the strmes. In grool-hreeding, putience, and civility the isvoshtehik simphsem every other class of the people. When a welledressell man, walking in the street, merely looks romm, he is sure to see half a dozen drowhedrivers thive up to him, ollierit:g their services in the politest manner ; there is the greatest emulation hetween them, hat none of thent Wer ahuses amother, or a suceessinl pival; they never twich or driwe neanst ench other, nor injure anything The pmblic carriages in St. Petershurgh mad inocow are excellontly und carchally surierintended liy the polies: murelenting severity is exercised; the ilrive of iswoblatelik wha kills on even injures anylody by driving over him, or who injures another carriage, iimmediately arrosted; and in the first easo he is introverably deliserent un to the made a soldier ; in the other case he reccives rorporal pmishment; lin hooss, however, he always losess; it is given up to the pulies, who send it to the alepot of the limo brigide.

11 the wide worl as pustilion to the a the boy of ten wh y, and in the season $\therefore$ sitting unun one es, phass an! slepros one with his lurse. old, he is adsamend 14 becomes an iswoshne one richer that by his speculation osliky, and in winter ward he lives on: $y$ or sledge.
there are night os

ranuer ; thew is the bint none of thent al rival; they never nor injure minthing. shurgh and Llaseow crintendad live the "reived; the itrive injures muythorly by mother earriage, is first easo ho in irrele a soldier ; in the punishment: liin it is given up to depot of the live

FROM BEYRUT TO THE CEDARS OF LEBANON,

WITH A FURTHER VISIT TO THE CEDARS IN THE DEPTH OF WINTER.

I.

befret, tife Pont of Sybia -Tife Bebotiatit on Ba'al beboril of tige Hebrews and Berytus of tee RomansHistonical antecedents and present Condition of ter Town and Port-Lleoend of St, Groror and tee Dracon -The Dog-Rifer and its Sculptures - Lazabist Convant at antora-Maronite Chief and his Famidy.
Beyrut or Beyronth, as it is variously written, but pronounced as Bayrut, thut is to say Bay as in lay-tree, and rat as in our word root, is a port and city of great untiquity. Steplannus goes so fir as to say that it was built by Chronus or Saturn. Strabo speaks of the same place which Scylax designates as Berytus, a city with n port, as overturned by Tryphon, but restored by the Romans, and garrisoned by two legions under Agrippa. Pliny says, the colony of Berytus, which is called "Felix Julia." It is also so designated on coins of Augustus Cesar, and of Trajan, COL. IVL. AVG. FEL, BER.

The city was celebrated in olden times for its kanubin, the maronite patriarchate, schools. Enselins and Socrates in his Ece: "stienl History, both attest to this fact, and the p. Semmemorate it as a pleasant quict city wherein to diwell. Thus, one calls it " Berytus the nurse of a quiet life." (Nonnas Dionysius, xli. v. 364). Another spenks of it as being in a most pleasant place, (1'eriegeta, v. 911) And a third speaks of Tyre as opulent, hut of Berytus us most agreeable (Festus Avienus, v. 1070).

Beirut, as Dr. Robinson spells it, is the ancient 81

Berytus of the Greeks and Romans, and perhaps also the Berotinai or Berothah of the Hebrew seriphures. The notices, however, respecting the litter, are so very indefinite, that the mame alono suggests an identity. ${ }^{1}$
${ }^{1}$ h. yrut seems, in all probability, to be the same as the Berothah or Bu'al Beroth of the l'homicinus (Benjamin of Tudela, vol. i. p. 61), whose site, tiko that of the nelghbouring byblus, is supposel to lo coeval with the first settlement of the conntry by Cromus or Ham.-(Cory's Anctent Frayments, p. 15).

As Burytus, it is mentioned by the Greek and Latin geographers. Under Augtstus it becaue a Roman coleny ly the name of Felix Julia; nul was afterwards endowed with the rights of an ltalian eity. It was at Berytus, that Herod the (Great proeured the flagitious mock-trial to be held over lis two sons. The elder Agrippa gratly favoured the city, and adomed it with it splendid theatre and amphitheatre, besides bathes aul porticoes; inaugurating them with games and spuetacles of every kind, including shows of ghadiaters. Here, too, after the destruction of Jerusalem, Titus celehrated the hirthay of his father. Vespmsim, by the exhilition of similiur spectacles, in which many of the eaptive Jows perished.

In the next succeeling centuries, Berytus became renowned as a sehool of Greek laming, particularly of law ; and was visited by scholas from a distance, like Athens and Alexandia. Euselius relates, that the martyr Appian resided hure for a time to pursue Greek seenlar learning; and the celebnated Gregory Thanmaturgus, about the middle of the thind eentury, after having freqnented the schools of Alexandria and Athens, repaired to Berytus, to perfect himself in the civil law. It was early likewise made a Christim bishopric, under the jurisdiction of the patriareh of Antioch; and is mentioned by Jerome, as one of the places visited by Paula.

Under the reign of Justinian, in the sixth century, berytus was regarded a.s the most beantiful city of Phenicia; its aeademy ontinued to flourish, and was visited by many young men of wealth and rank, who pursued here the study of the Roman law in its Greek form. Under the same reign Berytus was laid in ruins by an earthquake, and the school removed for a time to Sidon. In a later and more legend-loving age, in the eighth century, Berytus became the reputed seat of the noted miracle, accerding to which, when an image of Christ was once mocked and c:ucitied by the Jews in scorn, and the side pierced with a spear, there issued from it blood and water in great quantity.
The Crusaders, in their first progress along the ceast from Antioch to Jerusalem in A.D. 1099, passed by Beyrut, as they did other cities, withont any attempt to got possession of it ; indeed its commander is related to have furnished to them supplies of provisions and money, on condition that thoy weuld spare the harvest, the vineyards, and the trees around the city. The place was not captured until A.d. 1110 ; when King Baldwin I. tooh it, after a protraoted siege of seventy-five days. It remaiued long in the hands of the Christians; and is described as surrounded by a strong wall, and as -lying in the midst of orehariss and groves, and vineyards. Beyrut was male a Latin bishopric, under the archbishop of Tyre, and the patriarch of Jerusalem. III A.D. 1182 , Saladin besieged the town ly sea and land, and make violent eflhts to take it by storm; but withirew on the approach of the Christian forees from Sepphoris, atter laying waste the aljacent orchards and vineyards. Five years later, immediately after the battle of Hattin, Beyrut surrendered to him on the eighth day after it was invested.

To the now host of crusaders, chicfly from Germany, who reached the Holy Land in A.d. 1197, the possession of Beyrut becamo an oljeet of importance. It was now a seat of trade; it ocenpied a favourable position ; and the Saracen galleys which harboured in and near its port committed great ravages upon the Christian commeree, eapturing and making slates of thousands of pilgrims as they "pronehed the Syrian consts. The Chrixtim army mareloe from Tyre u!nm this enterprise; and atter a genemal battle with tha Saracen forces, near Sidon, appeared before Beyrut. They foum the gates open; for on the preceding clay, the Christian slaves within the walls had risen moon the Saracens, and delivered the eity over to the Christian thect. It was now given up to Amalric, as king of Cyprus and Jerusalem, and re-amexed to tha latter kingitme.

In the later strife letween the Emperor Frederick II. and the Regent Johu of Ibelin, Beyrut was seized amil oecupied for a time, in a.d. 1231, by the imparina forces; but was again abundoned without taking the citadd. The rity remained in possession of the Christians, until the final and terrible overthrow of the Frank dominion in Syria, in A.d. 1291, in the siege and storm of Akka. After the abandomment of Tyre aul sidon ly the Christians, the troops of the Sultan Ashrat approached Beyrat. The Emir in command amomeed to the inlalitimes that the former truce, which they had not broken, slould be continued to them; and, at the same time, summoned them to come out and meet him with confidence, as he drew near. They went forth aecordingly in procession, to receive him on their borlers; but, false to his word, he caused then to be seized and jut to deal or thrown iuto chains, took $1^{\text {wissession }}$ of the city and castle, and laid them both in ruins.
In the next following period, Beyrnt, like Saida, appears to have recovered from its desolation, and contimed to be a trading city. A bulfeda describes it as surrounded by a rich soil and gardens, und as the port of Damascus. So, too, edll-Dhahiry, in the fitteentill century. Frank travellers of the sixtecnth aud seventeenth couturies speak of the beauty of its environs, full of fruits and gardens of all kinds; mang which, however, the mulberry already predominated; the culture of silk being, even then, the chief uceupation of the inhabitants. Like Saida, this city also revived somewhat in the legiwning of the seventeenth century, from the activity of Fakhr-edDin, who inatle it one of his chief phaces of residence, and erected here an extensive palace; although be tilled up the port. Aecording to (1) Arvieux, Heyrut, in his day, was twice as large as Saida, and much better built:; though the clief centre of European trade, during tlat and the eighteenth century, remained at Saida. Caravans from Aleppo, Danascus, and Egypt, regularly arrived at Beyrut ; esprecially at the season when the silk of each year came into market.
Within the present century, and indeed within the last twenty yens, Beyrut has received a new iupulse, from having been made the centre of European trade for this part of the const, and as the port of Damisscus. Betore that time, one or two censular agouts were the sole representecives of the West. At prosent, there are resifent consuls from most of the Enropean powers, and also one from the Americam Stutes; trade has flourished and been extended by the establishment of mercantile honses, some of which have branches in Danascus; and the activity, tho populatien, and the importance of the city lave been greatly increased. This circumstunce, and the facilities of communication with the interior and ether parts of the country, bave caused Beyrut to be selected as the

1 making slaves of wulued the Syrian al from 'gre unom al battle with the arod before Beyrut. the preeoding lay, lls hatd risen "poun city over to the up to Amalrie, as ro-immexerl to the

Emperor Frolexick Beyrut was seizel 31, by tho imperial without taking the !ossession of the rible overthrow of A.D. 1291, in the he abandenment of the troops of the The Smir in comits that the former :lould be continued summoned them to idenee, uts he drew gly in procession, ; but, false to his mid pint to danth on m of the city and

Beyrut, like Saida, ts desolation, aud bulteda describes it arrens, mad as the h-I)hahiry, in the es of the sistcenth the beanty of its ens of all kinds: berry alveady preIg, eveu then, the Like Saida, this 9 legisining of the ivity of Fakhr-edhitees of vesidence, lace; although he , Arvieux, Beyrnt, Sinida, and mueh ontre of Europenn eenth century, reAlерро, Damuscus, yrut; esprecially at li year came into indoed within the vel n new impulse, of Earopana trade te pert of Dathasvo emsular agents (1) West. At prifrom most of the om the American been extented hy ses, nome of which I the netivity, tho the city havo been e, and the ficilitics and other parts of , be selected as the chinf $\operatorname{seat}$ of the Ameriean Mission in Syria; which, in its schools, and by its press, as well as ly direct effort, lats prospered not unly in proportion to its mems, but to an extent firr beyond what its. linited means would have authorizel us to expect. ${ }^{1}$

The town is situated ou a kind of slumber, sloping towarls the shoro (see p. 136), from the burth northwestern side of a triangular point which rums more than two miles into the sca. It contidins upwards of 3000 honses, all of stone, well built, aod generally loty; and some of the hest display the consular flags of difterent mations. The bazar is andepuately supplied for the wants of the Maronites, Muslims, ind other inhahitants, whe momber nearly 15,000 somls. The strects are narrow, only moderately clem, and usually have in the centre a deep channel of tlowing water.

The phare is inclosed on the lamb side by a substantial wall, thankell hy largo sp pare towers; besides which, three wree eonstructed as an aditional means of defence in ndvance of the works, hy the Emir Faklor-ed-din. On some rocksat the north-western extremity ut the town are two castellited huildings to defind the harbour or, more properly, the anehorite, which is exposed to the west and north-west winds. The innermost castle is combected with the town be means of a canseway, resting upom arehes of unequil size, purtly constructed with ancient cohmans and hewn stones, and through which the sea passe..
Herond the sonthern extremity of the town thero is a basin capable of contaning four or tiva small versels, and in its neightomhone are sone cisterus exavated ia the wech. There are also some portions of mosaie pavements and other remains probably helonging to oll Berytus, if not even th the Ihenician Beeretin or Derothah.
A rich lielt of mublery and date gavens, inclosed by hese ne walls, and stulded with country honses. sitrmads the town; heyom which the extensive tie plantation of Fakhr-ed-lin firms part of the striking handsemp presentex by the sopes of Lebanon. Common report, it is to be wberved, aseribes the planting of this grove, also callerl 11 ursh Beyrat, to Hukhed-din, hat lidrisi describes the same city as having in the twolth century a hage forest of pines in the south extending guite to Mome Lehanon. No doult a remnathe if the groat farests of antiquity.

Beyrat was muels injured by the bombardment it vistained trom the Eaglish and Atstrian tleet in 1810, when the allies wrested syria from the figyptians to rostere it to Tu'ukish rule. Jhe Turks have heft the castle of the port still lying in its demolished state. They prombly think, that as the allies tumbed it down they ought to build it up again. Europems, Frenchmen espeeially, hegin now to ilock to leyrut as settlers in great numbers. They are attraeted by the silk trade, which is a very advantageons oue.

Our start from Beyrut, for Kesruwan and the eountry of tho Maronites, lay along a dusty sandy rome letwecn cantus healges and sumill mative honses, amd among mon, eamis. hurses, and asses, till crossity tho Nahr lieyrut (the Magmas of Strabo and I'liny), the passage of whielt is effecten by an old Roman bridge recently repuiced, we got upon the saudy beach, at the estromity of which was the rueky promontury which advances into the sen sonth of the Nathe al אeelb
' Biblical Reserrchas in Palestine, Mouat Sinai, and Arabia Petreat, de., by kid licbuson, D.D. de., vol, 111, p, 4H. et seq.
-the Lycus or Dog river-ame which is so remarkable for its finded seulptures and inseriptions. The priucipail tignves, resembling those on the Nineveh marbles, are cut in low relief, presenting the left side to the spectator. The right hand of one is held np, with smething in it ; the arm bent at right angles; the left am is aeross the body; on the head is a conical catp; tho beard long and in formal curls; a lotes tunic deseconts to the fent, which are not seen, or if sculptured, they are not distinguishaible on account of the weatherworn state of the stme. An inseription in cuneiform chatacters covets all the stone, from the waist of the figures downwards; but it is so nearly obliterated from the same canse, that we could witit groat difficulty copy a few of the chatacters behind one of them. 'Ihis, howevor, is of no importance, as excellent ciants have been tiken by the indefitigable exertions of Mr. Bonomi. They aro depositel in the British Museum.

We found the figures cut in three places in the roek, in slightly excavated niches, wath circalar heads and romd mouldiugs. By the side of two ot thes is a tahlet larger than the miche, with a sort of Dorie entablative. At tirst nothing was visible on it but tho marks of the tooth of timo. After having attentively considered it for some time, each was found to havo two small figntes of Egyntian chatacter; mue making mollering to the other, is with the Foptian Phrahs, to their godis. On one of the tablets the king hats his leys stretched omt, as in quiek motion ; and the arms like those on the propyle at Edfu, Phila, &e. The four tignes are incised like those of Egyptian monnments. When seen fiom a distance we dincied that the greater part of theso tallets were covered with inseriptions, but on approaching all was lost in the "honey-combed" makss of age. When the mys of the sum fill at a certain angle, they may be detected, if auy exist.

The Jatin inscriptions aro given, it is to be noticed, by Mumbell and burekhate The Lgyptian senlptures are supposel to be a momment of the renowned complueror Sesostris. Mlr. Sharpe, in his Mistory of ments lehinel him in the comutries which lo conquered, and one of these still remains in Syriib, near beyrut. The Niar Beyrnt, or ALagomes, it is ahso to be observoul, is the tratitional site of the combat of St. George and the Drugon. All these chivalraus stories o." dragon combats lave their orisia, it seems probable, in the existence in ohter times of erocolites in the rivers of Syria and of the Meditertancan; the remaius of such have not only been found in tho rivers of Syria, but as high up as Furis in the Scine. The legend in question purtienlarly attractor the attention of the Urusatlers, and is noticed by their historinus. ${ }^{2}$ bescending from these incient sculptures-which no tonbt are records of deats which in their day filled the world with admination, or dismay and miserythere is a very tiue view, looking up, the liver Nilm al Kelh, howing theugh a merow ravino from the lofty Lehanon mominins, which are seen in the background. In the midille distance the river is spanned by a gool hridge of one large areh and two smatl ones, linitt ly Fakhred-Din. It the foreground the rocky and rugged road was male more pietures que by a party of ten $H_{a}$ wara, or irregular soldiers, armed in various ways, with miskets, pistols, or long lances. Altogether I never saw a subject in naturo more truly in the style of Salvator Rosa. The soldiers having been disbanded, were seeking service; and from their appearance, and the furtive glances which they cast on us, it wonld not perhaps be doing them much injustice if we had suspected them of wicked thoughts in reference to our wallets. They scemed just as likely to enlist for subverters as for supporters of order. We had to ford the river, which was mpid, and at one time I made up my mind for a ducking.

* A churd eommemorative of the legend is said to have been crected in modern times in tho sume neighbourhood.

Soon after noon we left the sea coast, and turned eastward towards the mountains. Several lills before us were picturesquely crowned with convents; expecially one seated on a precipico overlooking a deep ravine and river where the Patriarch of the Maronites resides during the winter season. This convent was rendered famous by the atrocious imposture of Hindia, a pretended saint, who gained many proselytes before her abominable practices were detected.

At 1.30 we passed through the village of Zuk, where the greater part of the beautiful cmbroidery sold at Beyrut is made. After this we finirly entered upon the Lebanon mountains, by the best route, at this part, through which they can bo penetrated. Before losing sight of the sen, we had an extraordinary view of the western tince of the mountain range in long profile, extending as fir ats the eye could reach, having a uniform outline descending rapidly to the sea.
At Antura (Pococke calls it Ontua) we visited a handsome Latin convent, which had been reluilt by the liberality of a French bishop. Attached to it is a college of Lazarists, much frequented ly Maronite youths of this district. (See jage 145.) We rode along a precipitous ridge commanding a tine view of the deep ind fertile valley of the Nahe el Kelb, with the village of Bektaiah on the heights above it. A part of the ridge is sandstone, on which is a small patch of pine-trees.

We net the sheikh of the village of Ajaltun (Ajnlton, according to Pococke), surrommed ly attendants. He was very well dressed, and bore the evident stamp of a well-bred man in the conrteons mamer of his salute, and the apparent sincerity with which he prayed us to alight ut his house. As he was going down the monntain, wo thanked him without feeling the necessity of making the ungiacious return of refusing his hospitality ; which, had le heen there to have received us, we should have done, as it is not advisable tor aceept such offers when one is not prepared with suitable presents, which are geneailly expected.

We arrived at Ajultun at 4.45, and pitched our tents on a good sward, and were soon surrounded by the villagers, some of whom were well dressed, especially one who was pre-eminent not only in this, but in person and in manners. His pipe-stem seemed to be rather inconvenient for a peripatetic smoker, heing the flexible shoot of a wild rose, freshly ent, aml about six feet in length. The son of this gentleman was sent for to interpret the animated speeches nnd gestures, which we could not understand.

The youth came in great haste, and earnestly entreated us not to sleep in tho tent, as tho night in these lofty regions would be very cold, but to do his father the honour of nccepting his hospitality. We now felt the consequences of dissinulation in not having frankly accepted or refused the former invitation, and perhaps added to the dilemira by the want of tact in telling our new acquaintance of it. He, however, denied that the first was the chief of the village, asserting that he himself was tho princo of all the district. The fact was, the first was tho Druso sheikh, and the second the Maronite chief. After many exenses and refusals, and ns the first did not make his appearance to assert his prior claim, we relnetantly accepted tho proffered kinduess, which had all the nir of disinterested patriarchal hospitality ; and having made arrangements with Yusuf, we followed the prince to his house, which was large, surrounding a court into which all the rooms looked. We were led into a spacious saloon, plasterud and whitewashed, with a tinge of yellow. The timbered roof was black with smoke, which, by way of apology, was saill to be unavoidable. This truly was manifist, as there was no chinney to carry off the fumes of a charconl fire burning in a small mud-made tire-place in tho middle of the room; romid which, close to the walls, were spread mats with muttresses and cushions. We wore led to those in the centre, the place of honour. The master of the house having dechured that ull we suw was our property, seated himself next to us, and beyond him were some other gentlemen, apparently belonging to the fimily. The unveiled ladies were ranged along the end of the room, and some, the youngest, wero very pretty. All had brilliant eyes, and all wero vigoronsly plying the narguleh while fiutively watehing us. (For sketeh of Maronite man and woman, see 1. 137.) Jipes, sherbet, and eoffer, were handed round. Our ride lail given us an alpetite for more subatantial things, which were very long in making their apparance; as a whet, howerer, which wo did not repuive after the swect, invigorating draughts of mountain air we had inhaled, raw vegetables, sweetmeats, amb fruits were brought in a tray, and placed on a little table just high enough for us to sit at eross-legerel. The son did the honours by pealing wahnuts, which he stuck in the sweretments, and pointed out the proper order in which they wern to he eaten. When this table was rednoved, pipes were again bronght, and then began a series of questions, through the young pince, who, having heen educated at the (atholic college of Antum, spoke French very toherahly. Thry wore at first personal, as regraling our ramk, de., the rest principally related to the government and constitution of Eighami, about which they were very infuisitive.
The timily of our host consists of one son, named Daher, our interpreter, a fine, intelligent youth about seventern years of age, and two benutiful danglters, about fitteen and twelve. His name is Mansur Ibrahim. He is the head of the family or tribe Kazain, which dates ohout four hundred years, by tirman. It numbers three hundied men, who intermarry with no other trike, even of noble blood, in order to maintain the honour of their honse, which, howover, in the opinion of jersons of less exclusivo idens, lecomes thereby much degenerated, both pliysieally, morally, and especially us to worldly udvantages, for many of these proud scions of unguestionable nolility gain their livelihood by menial service in foreign counties. This fumily formerly possessed all the villages from $J$ uni to the mountains, but much has been sold to peasants, and much has been given to convents.
The land is cultivated nt half profit; the landlord ssimulation in not 1 the former invitalemirs by the want intance of it. He , is the chief of the as the prince of all irst was the Druso mite elicef. After $s$ the first dill not is prior clain, we induess, which had al hospitality ; und tsuf, we followed the urge, surrounding a ked. We were led I whitewashed, with oof was black with was sail to be un. st, as there was no of a chareonl tiro dace in the middle to the walls, were hions. We were led mour. The master all we saw was our s , and beyond him tly belonging to the inged along the end $t$, were very pretty. e vigoronsly plying ing us. (For sketch 137.) Pipes, sher1d. Our ride hail untial things, which munnce; as a whet, e after tho sweet, air wo had inhaled, its weve brought in e just high enough on thid the honomrs in the sweetmeats, which they wer moverl, pipes wern series of questions, ing leen educated spoke lirench very anal, as regamiling dated to the governabout which they of one son, named lligent youth uhout mantiful danghters, te is Mansur Ibray or tribe Kazain, arx, by tirman. It ntermarry with $n 0$ order to maintain however, in the ve ideas, hecomes oliysically, mornlly, tages, for many of e nobility gain theiv gu counties. Tlus villages from Juni en sold to peasants, S. ofit; the landlowl provides implements and pias the tributes, with the exception of the klarateh. Silk and corn only aro sent to market, the rest is consumed on the firm, from which but a bare subsistence is derived for both parties. The peasants do nothing in the winter, und but little eluring the spring and the summer. The lords of the soil do nothing all the yow round but smoke, and sometimes hunt or shoot. Improvements of any kind are never thought of, partly from want of capital, but more through absence of energy. Many were the inquiries made of mo as to the possibility of masing money in England, hut the necessity for providing suflicient seeurity does not enter their heads. They have, however, a mine of wealth in the silkworm, whieh would be very productive with a little more industry and care in the cultivation.

Diher is very anxious to gos to England, but as he is an only son, his father will leo mwilling to purt with him, and I could not learn that this prince, or emir, although he has so large a territory, would be able to provide funds for a journey of such a duration us might be bencticial. There ean he no doubt, however, that it would be a very desirable thing tor the sons of great proprietors to travel, in orter to see what raay be done by the energies of a free people. We had now been several homs talking, and at intervals speculating hetween ourselves on the probability of having a dimmer, for which we yearned. At length it was brought in, at seven obluck. Beforo sitting at table, however, the youngest daughter presented each of us with a rose. The haties having previously supped, hat the pleasure of looking on. The male purt of the funily-that is, Mansur Ibridim, his two hrothers Assadi and Maron, and Dither, drew round the low table, as lefore, with ourselves; and on this important ocasion we were grovided with torks; the rest had skewers, with which all jlunged into the sane dishes. The supper wats abumbant, though but little to our taste. When wo hat done eating, Hansur proposed the health of our noble tueen, afterwards that of Colonel Rose. He next did honom to ourselves. Atter each toast a song on the same sulbject was improvised. I givo as a toast "The prosperity of the family Kazain ;" but had no song for the oceasion, and the eompany seemed disjosed to accept an :uplogy with better grace than an attempt would have merited. After these comtusies, we took a deeided lead in the manifestation of somaifirons tendencies, in whiela also they concurred, less perhaps tiom politeness than eom$f^{\text {mision, }}$, rrwing that we all telt we had cujoyal as much of ench other's conpany as we conht hem for one sitting. We were led by the Enir to a clem room, where goor beals with embiruidered shects were laid on the ground. We wero not long in accommorlating ouselves to them after the titignes of the rifle in the morning, and of the supper in the evening. We slept somully till the dawn of daty.

II.

The Noure Fimiay of the linguss-Tife Tistora, on ILonn-TuE Beavtifty Ott-Rock Brooes-Tue Demon's Glen-Temple of Tenes-Viliaoe op MhrawitisRelics or Old Trmbs-Fable of Adonis-Tine Assassins Cubastla and Pory of Jemall, Geimle of the BibleCubestian Cuubcif.
The tollowing day was stormy ; and Daher tried to urge us to wait for better wenther, as he said it would bic very celd in the mountuins. There was, however, some littlo prospect of its cleming up, and his solicitations were unheciled. This young chicf had tilllen much in: our estimation by the unmistakenble proofs that he was speculating on the amount of bakshish we might he disposed to give. I even hearl the hated word pronemueed, or pass between hin and the servant who had done the very little waiting we required. The great umd frequent prases which were lavished by all the party on English fowling-picees, pistols, gunpowiler, Sc., were as neir to a request as could decently ho made. Unfortunately, I hat but such as were sufficient for my own wonts, and powder was so scarce at Beyrut, that I had mly been able to purchase a very small quantity, and no shot. I therefore made it convenient to consider theso as common-place remarks, in ther ordinary course of conversation ; and that I could t offer any trifling article, which I might have dispensed with, without running the risk of otlending the "honour of the family," in payment for the entertainment we had received. I resolved, however, never ugain to give up the better eheer and better lodging of the tent for sueh questionable hospitality; especially when the master should assure me that i was "mistaken in calling it his house ; for it was mine antl all that belonged to him." Yusuf afterwards said that the inducement for such a pressing and apparently cordial invitation was the hope that we might turn out to be some very great people in disguise, travelling about for no other purpese than to distribute valuable and disproportioned gitts; which accounts for the frequent interrogations we lad to miswer with respect to our exact rank, and whether we were not princes in our own country.
The dollar whiel I gave the servint was therefore a great disippointment to the master, it not to the man; fir they hoth went off abruptly on recciving it. I must, however, do Dather the justiee to say, that though he did not wait for the moment of departure to say his arlien, he pressed us strongly to return it the weather should prove bad. A few minutes atter eight o'clock we proceeded in our journey towards the momatains, contriry to Iusuf's alvice, as well as that of our young triend.

Tho road was very rugged, mong isolated roeks, though it sitt, and showing their stratitication, as if the whole country had been torn by prodigious torments.
> " Their rocky summits, split and rent,
> Form'd turret, dome, or battlement;
> Or seem'd funtastically set
> With cupola or minaret."

Lady of the Lake.
We hath not gone fire when Dilier's predictions were verified; and, atter braving two or three showers, we were obliged to take shelter in a house in the village of Klahart ; where, as we hat not to yied to pressius offers of hospitality, there was no fear of oflemiling the"honour of the house" by a fair remmeration for what we might require, and where wo were received without the suspicion of being luinees in disguise.
The house was large, and like tho generality in this country, built on the slope of the hill; so that there is only one floor ut tho back, and two in front; that below being occupiod by the cattle, farming implements, de.
The uprer story has in front a large portieo or vestibule open to the south, with seven gothic arches on two ranges of pillars, the capital of cach having differcut ornaments. Four rooms open inte thi, portics, and there are others at the end. Ono room is oceupied by the proprietor, a widow, and her family; the others by servants, and the peasants who cultivate tho land, all hudilled together in the most higgledy-piggredy style. Yusuf had just secured, by agreement, two of the romms for us, when a man came in, a cousin of the Kazains, who pressed us, with great inportunity, to go to the "hetter" accommodation if his house ; whieh of course he deelared was our jroperty. We resisted all his bandishments; and ho seemed resolved to make up for the disappointment on his part, and the disadvantage on ours, ly promising to give us the henetit of all his sparo time; which was within a very small fraction of the whole of it.
Our new firend was communicative as well as inquisitive. His aequirenents in language was limitel to a little French, which he had gained at the "college" of A fialtum; and he was very desirons of adding Finglish, in order that he might oltain in gool poit with some Englishman ; a prinee of course, thougl, to the disgrace of the honse of Kazain, he had served in a menial eapacity in Constantimple. The fict was, he was ready to neeept anything, in the hoje of making it a stepping-stone to foridee. An miterprising genilns is indend lost in these mountains, where the chict care is to seenre a subsitence.

The lady of tho house, a very fat reprentation of the noble fimily ot Kazain, is mo of the few remaining of the Maronite women who preserve the ancient custom of wearing the tintura or hore on the forshead. Iner's was the first grod specimen we hanl seen. Slie promised to allow me to make a sketch of it ; but was too tat und hay to sit M, and it was constantly defiered. It is never takith off even tor sleeping. I canght her napping, with the horn proped up in the corner of the window frame, in a very unembiortalle position: lut she was obinged to pay thus dearly for her antique vanity.
The horn is atbont twenty inches in lengtle, anl three in diametrr at the base ; tapering, so as to lie mueh smaller at the upper roul. It is male of thin gold, or silver gilt, with tilligree ornaments in front and precioms stones. It is attached to a pal, or enshion, on the toreleated, and semind by a strap, ramal the back of the head.
The discomfort of this custom, which would seem never to havo been felt during the thonsamels of yemrthat it has been in vogue, is now aeknuwledged, as few yomg women will subuit to it ; and in mothergeneration the "horn" will cease to be "exalted."
Th consele me fir the disippointment, the bantiful yomig Oti, her miece, who was saill to lie ill in lnel, got up firm it all "a taunto", that is, iressel, and put on her bext attire for me to excreise on her my small :mmont uf skill.
The room was very dark, and blindiug with smoko from a tire mate with wat wowl, which alone womld have been a suffieient exruse fir failume, with even hetter talent; but, in adlition, the fair Oti was in continual motion, either to put herself in : hettur attitude, to coguct with her triends, or to wateh the progress of the work, interrmpting the with directions ahout the oval of her lovely face, the arch of the eyebrows, and the thimess of her delicate sum aristocratic nose. Pointing with ber little taper finger to the colvur-box, slo frequently told me to put plonty of rel in her richly coloured checks and coral lips, so that there was small blane to her tiate for leing lis:atisfied with my production. I, however, made up fur all deticiencies ly telling her that it was nut in the power of' art to do justice to liew beauty. In which, indeed, I was not tar wrong ; she was a lovely creature of tifteen. My compliment untortunately made her winh to powsess tho portriit ; which, though more of a libut than a likenes, was nseful to me as a memoramdun if the eostme, as wrll as something of a reminisernee of a Syrian leauty. I, therefore, was ungallant enough, in both necounts, to resist all her entreaties; but promisel a hetter one for her. Whon I was ofl my gnard, the coming little rogne snatehed it ont of nyportfolio: which obliged me to have recourse tu gentle toree, after a lomg and ammang senreh and struggle, to which her amat and the larkers on instigated nue.

I some what recmeilad her to the lass by pointing to the fact, which she was not willing to eleny; that I hail mot made her cheeks red enough, nor have eye bright cnough; though I might be allo to apprach : little neary to her perfections when I had more time nul rosy tints to bestow on them. I was sorry, howere, tu see her pouting her little lips when i made my adiun.

The' next moming was clondy, after a groat deal m" rain in the night; hint showal somes symptons of clearing ui. Wis started at nine welock over rocks liecolning mone rugged as we asernded. The inolated bloch, hat theen wom by the action of the weather to shary pimatele, furrowed doply by thoo ot rain on their perpendicular vides la nome par eapping, likera table, was left on the apes of the The diditualty of the roal increased with the wi.... .. of the monitain semery. In the heiphbouring valler of the Nahs al kell, into which we looked from the lueights, there are sume tine clik rising tom dep ravines. Win oro semulal to the mper pirt of this wamly; wal ohtainel a lorging in the peror village of Paryut at 1.50 , tha weathor being wry threathuing. At fime odock it eleared a little : anil taking ag guine while Yusuf was preparing one dimar. we crosed the valhes, tording at rap iol strabm, and ascenaling the oprosite monntain, in search of the matural hrigge of dirr al Majar (or huet tringry. the principal object of this part of the journey.

The thad was wry ditticult; we had to find toment: and to surmome two ranges of elitls. A little smow was in our path. After some toil in sorambliug ower the rexks, in many phaces obliget to leal the horat, we camo toa stupenduous natural arell, forced ly the minmer netion of the river through the upper range if elifls. The turyont is not now vixithe, as it is axeavating for itself monher passigo through the rock- lower down, where it precipitates iteolf from the hole than fimmed, which the haduess of the weather wobld not permit us to explume Intense gloom lang about the chassu of the hidge; throgh which, and through the driving clouts above, ocensimal jeeples were hat of thr sumy tichts of the higher range of mometains. Many fine watertalls descendeel from tha" "prosite momatainAll was in larnany with the derp music of matherthe gloom, the storin, and the roaring cataracts. Altogetlen it was one of the wildest $A l_{\text {pine sechess } 1 \text { hand }}$ ever belrell. It has, I believe, been rarely visited. We reached onu cottage at dusk, laving beeri abiont an hour in going and the same in returning, with a litth: time for a humpind and impurfect sketch of this very fine cavern. At six belock, thermometer ins, the aneroid at the villigge indicated a height of 4803 leet ; but as I haul mu corresponding observations by is ras nut in the power
In which, inderd, lovely creature of ately mule hur wish mgh more of a libel A a memorandula if of a reminiscence of * ungallant enough, er cutreaties; but then I was oth my atched it out of my o recourse to gentlo relt and struggle, to instiguted tue: e loss by pointine to to deny, that I had nor her ryes bright to approach a litthe lad more time and was mory, however, , when I made my after a great deal if asymptoms of chenk over rocks hecomThe isolated blecelis IO weather to shary. if rain on their capping, like a The elitlieulty of' the monivalley of the Nabe 1 the heights, there mavines. Wrode ady ; anl obtaine! $\therefore$ niyut at 1.50, tla At fung ochack it lo while Yusuf was se valley, torthing it posite numutaln, in al Hajar (or How this part of the ade to fond tormats it]:, I little suow in scrambling over leal the hatesc, we forced by the finthe wiper mang of de, as it is creavathe the rocks lower from the liole then weather would not on hung ahout the h, and throuph the pe were hat of the mountains. Many prosite manntaim. musid of natherig cataracts. AltrMpine stenes I hanl echl rarely visited. ving been about mu ning, with is little etel of this very mometer $5 \%$, the ight of 4803 teet; observations by a staularl barometer, and as the weather was very unsettled, I doubted my little friend the aneroid. However, the reading of the instrument the following morning, with vory beautiful weather, differing very little from the observation of last night, makes it prolable, that the elovation here given is not far from the truth.

If it lad been possible, wo shoull have crossed the mountains at the bend of the Wady, to Akura, and then miglit have been able to renel "The Cedars" on our way this morning; but the rain whiel yesterday anil during the night fell so henvily with $u s$, was a great accession of snow to the ligher regions. We therefore were obliged to take a lower road, ascending the range on the right of the Waly. The mukris did not know the way, and stopped to inriuire at some cottages in the villago Kharajili, where no one wns to be found but intints taking caro of bubies. All tho people were at church, and we were obliged to wait till morning mass was over, before we could get put in the right road. At 8.10 we crossed a brow to anothro valley; then a torrent; aud tho rom passed round the erest of a steep mountain, with snow in many places below us. Many ravines from this take a direction west-north-west with numerous cascales from the upher ghaciers or masses of snow. In soveral places are fune streans gusling out tron the rocks. On wir turning is shoulder of the mountain, a splendil view burst on us of a very extensive valley, losing itself in the distanco in the deep recesses of tho debanon. All was in broad light, mixing up and rendering the retails infinite by the soft blenting of the colonring, snch as the genius of Turner alone could show or canvas. It is the Wuly el Jin, at the upper part of the Wady Nahr Ibralim, which terminates at the sea near Jehail, and which corresponds to the meneient Alsmis. Two ranges, or perpendicular walls of cliff, encircle this tine valley; one crosses it at right angles, entting oft all commnnication thetween the nuper and lower parts. From the midhlle of this range a beautiful cascarle leaps at-least one hundred feet in one sheet. The higher range: rests on a soter stratum, and is eontinually falling and senttering huge fragments of rock tin nut wide; resombling, in one place, the chaos of the valley of Gavarni in the Pyrenees. The rocks are full of fossil shells. At. 1.25 we left the broand valley, and turned up a smaller one, communicuting with it, an its left.

Tho road was excessively diflieult ; the mules could hardly find footing on the steep sides of the hill, anl we were frequently obliged to dismonat and lead our horses. The mountain beenmo more precipiteus at everystep; and wo could discover no pussibility of a passage through this gorge, which neomed to terminate in in an amplitheatre of perpondicular rocks tiom 000 to 800 feet high. Bolow wis a roaring torrent, leap,ing from crag to crag; but whence it came we could not imaigine, so closed was the head of the valley. "At last a turn of the woad brouglit ins in front of the most beantiful object. I over belheld-the stream emerging from a lurga cavern at tho toot of the perpendicular mountain, forming $n$ succession of beautiful falls over leilges of rocks ; and erossed, immediately on its exit, by a picturesque bridgo called Nabr Nabr Ibrahim Megara. But luforo reaching this wo passed, ou our right, but on the left bank of tho streaur, the ruins of a building perched on an tur eminence over-looking the cascade. This building is called Kalali Fakhraj and Porter gives the following account of it.
'lhis is a simple spuare tower of Roman origin, with massive walls, and a tew confined apartments. Owe the doorway is an inseription, but so much broken and defaed that I was not able to copy it.

On the samo sido of tho building, near the angle, is another inseription, showing that the building was founded in the year 355, A.D. 43, which was the third year of the reigh of the Emperor Clandius. It appears that Richter malo out se much of the inscription above tho door as to ascertain the name of this emperor:

Five minutes south of this building, down the rocky slope, is another and mueh more extensive ruin. Here are the traces of a templo with a portico of massive eolumns, and a large inclused area in frout. Tho walls ure of grat thickness, and constructed of large squared bloeks, and the colmmens are four feet in iiameter. Near this are the mins of a bith, fragments of the marble pavement of which, I was informed, still exist beneath the rubhish. In the rocks around aro some exenvated tombs, and thereare likewise the fommations of scveral other buidings.

This place, though tirl removel from luman habitation, was now alive with groups of men and women; childene, ton, played around the bases of wild clifts, and seampered along the miniature meadows that line a littlo stream. It was the harvest season, and the villagers hat for the timo desertel tlieir houses to bivoure on the thashing-floors. Gaily-drussed sheikhs wero dashing aloont from field to tield on their tine mares, while the more aged perched on a stone or a rocky lelge, with mubrelias to protect them from the sun's rays. It is the universal custom in Lebanon for a large portion of the inhabitints to spend some weeks on the thashing floos during the harvest. In the more exposed divtricts this is impossible, and there the grain is conveved to the village as soon as it is reaped. This scene brought vivilly betore me the simplo Bible narrative of Boaz and Ruth; and it showed, Ealso, how little change the lapse of near three thonsand years has etlected in the habits of the people of this land.

On n nearre aproach we found many copions streams ghshing from the base of the cliff in this amphitheatre, and contributing to the grandeur of the principal cascate below the bridge. Passing this, we went up a small valley; with several pretty falls. of water. At 3.30 we stopped at the Metawali villago Afka, composed of only a very fow wretehed hovels. Aftur a careful scrutiny the doest honse we could secure promisel us but very inditterent accommodation, as we lad to share the only roon with the horses, mules, and other cattle ; the man, with his wifeamil children, having kindly vaeated in our favour.

We had ridden eight hours this day, over a very fatiguing road : yet I could not resist the desiretergo down again to the aboantifinl cascade, and returnell quite exhaustel with afatigue. But in that horrid house there was no prossibility of sleep, the odour wits so excessively bttensive. After tossing about for soveral hours, I was obliged to remove my bed to the open portico. My companion remained within, undisturbed ; though: he gavo occasional intimations by his heavy brenthing, that the pertume made itself palpable even to his dormant senses. "The night was fino but cold, and I lay a considerable: timo. looking at tho bright stars and the suow-alad mountains before me, till I fell into a profound and refresking sleep in the pure air' ; and resolved nover again to run the risk of fever by sleeping in such a contmmated atmosphere as that, uneroid gave mu elevation for this village of 4,500 feet within. The natives were somewhat importunate this mornNext morning, at dnylight, the wenther, with $n$ ing. Thyy are the most uncivilised peoplo we had north-cast wind. Thermometer $58^{\circ}$ last eveluing. The, met in Syma, and bear a very indifferent ehnracter.

MARONITE MAN AND WOMAN.

The Mntuali, or Metawali, are a different race trom those we had hitherto seen in the mountains. They have generally a very round face, short chin, with rather os wild appoarance; the children, however, were very pretty.
The whole population of 'the village was grouped in andaround our portico, watching every motion, and inspecting every articla they could lay their hands on. Thongh differing widely from them, they are anxions to bee thought gool" "Turks, and followors of Omat; they really are of the sect of Ali.
WWo proeeeded on our journey at 6.40 A.M., np a steep hill, and soon surmonnted the higher of the two ranges of cliffs which oncircle the valley, and had a delightful ride along tho brow, the view losing itself inthe vast valley below us. Yusuf reeonnted an inorbedible story of the sheikh of one of the neighbuming villages, who, to eseape from the wrath of lhrahim Pasha, leaped over the precipice without boing hurt; but his poor horse was killed in saviner his mastel.
TThe trees were here but just bursting into leaf, though we had left the muliberry in full foliage int Beyrnt ; while, higher up in the momntans, the lind is only appearing.

At 8.10 wo reached the heard of the valley, where we had to admire a natural phenomenon, similar to that of yesterday; namely, a river bursting throngh a cavern at the base of the perpendienlar mountain, with the dillerence, that a bridge near it is also the work of nature. The volume of water that comes from the rock is very great. Half-way up the fice of the clitl we observed a belt, or long horizontal stripe of brilliant pink coloming, which at tirst was diflienlt to be accounted for. It proved to be the blossom of wild almond trees, which have here foumd a eongenial soil.

At nine we crossed the tapid river or torrent Jime, by eoming through a gorge in the perpendicular and rocky desect from a higher valley.

The mountains were still clad witis snow, so turning at this point to tho westward. we followed the right bank of the Jinueh, or Juneh. 'T'The semery in this part is tho grandest and most beautiful we liad seen in the Lebanon.
At eloven welock we eame by aedident on the rains of a small temple of meiont architecture, probably Roman. I The walls are very well built of good squared blocks of limestone: what now remains is perhaps about two-thirds of the original height, but without any veatiges of ontablature. The length of the building is about forty-two foct; and jts bremith nineteen. It is square at the west end, with nim apsis at the east; which; from tho inferiority and looseness of the construction, way have been a recont nddition, on its adaptation to Christian purposes. The lower purts of two colamms are standing inside the building, but there are no capitals to identify the order to which they lielonged. I'wo opposite doors in the north und suath sides have lintels and oousoles of gool workmanship.
Outaide of the south ioor; abid attriched to it, is n pointed: arched vault, us a poreh; most likely also of recent addition. At ten yarls' distance aro tho ruins of n large chureh of three aisles. Two crosses were in the whlls, but nu inseriptions wewe found. Beyond these we sum mother spuare building of small dimenssions. These all passibly belongel to some monastic establishments. Greut heips uf stones were lying nbout, marking the sites of other buidings, now utterly ruined.

In the temple some recent attempt lad been made to discover treasure, which the Arabs always believe to be buried in ancient buildings. A priest; aecompavied by a party of gold-seaking Christians;:had mado excavations without suceess, and unfortunately they turned up nothing of interest to the antiquary, in objects of art, or inscriptions, that might have:given some clae to the origin and purposes of the building. It seems next to $n$ certainty that a town most have existed in this neighbomhood; being the centre almost ot in wide aud very fertile valley, though now deserted and overrun with brushwood; a jeasunt said that a town formerly stood here, whieh he ealled Noah. In the forests among these mountains the benutiful Adonis lost his life while lunting, The valley is a basin inelosed in the monntans, abont ten miles in length. and four or five in breadtl, with a tine little river flowing through it. It contracts at the lower end to a very narrow gorgo with precipitous sides, throngh which tho river unciently forced a passage, muid draiued the basin of what was previously, in nll prohability, a lake.

Porter thus deseribes the sulbime glen of the Nahr Ibruhim. I here stood on the summit of a ridge whose side sunk down at my feet in a series of gigantic natural terraces, faced with rugged clitlis, to the brow of the Waly lhrahin: and there a sheer preeipice of maked rock formed the sido of a maine that seemed to epen the vast mountain to its hase. On the oppo sito side rose a similar but stibl loftier precipuce, over whieh towned, almost perpamlienlarly, a mountnin peak, its sides partially elothed with the dark toliage of the dwart oak. Tall needle-like rocks of white linestone shoot up here and there from its sides and smmmit, giving it an alpine wilduess nud granteur. A fleecy clout of milky whiteness hovered round it, bringing out in holder relief the jagged top, and rendering still more glomy, by tho contrast, the profound glen beneath. Tho whole was mone like a seone trom Manfred than a living reality.

A with bedatw, who appeared mysterionsly from among the roeks, guided us to tho lost road. After passing throngh the littlo encompment of his tribe, we reached the fine spring of Nelme el-Hadid. Having drank of its ieconld waters, we entmued our courvenlong the shelving momatain-sidn-the sublime glen of the Nuhn 1hrnhim, the ancient Adonis, tur below on our left, ned the loftiest smmmits of Lemanon rising up on our right, The path was in most plaees a mero gont-truck, and the stones loosened by the howses' foet rolled and leaped down the declivity till lost in the firr distanee. In a Jittle over un howr from Nolu el-Madid we remeled the brow of a long dosecont, pasing down which we arrived at Atkn. 'Tho muletecos wero whiting honcath the ruins of the old temple. The tent was soon pitched in the ravino helow, overshadowed by the tiagrant foliage of a large walnut. Bewile it the fomming torrent leajeed tiom rock to rock, ditfuaing au agruenble coolness and tireshness through the air, notwithstunding the bright beams of the evening sun.
"This is a spot of singular wildnens and beauty. A semicirenlar wall of naked roek, nearly a thousand feet high, shuts in the deep glen on the east. From a dark rave nt its foot hursts forth a nohlostrem, which almost immedintely fitls in sheets of form wer several ladges of roek, und then rishes liki a mume through confused heapis of huge boulders to the profoumel mul unseen alepths below. Groves of pine nid onk treus, tempt had been male Arals always believo A priest; accomChristinns; had male id unfortunately they to the nntiquary, in ant might havergiven poses of the building hat. 3 town must have eing the centre almost , though now deserted upeasant said that a he called Noal. In is the beantiful Adonis tho valley is a basin : ten miles in length, tha a tine little river : at the lower end to ipitous sides, through a passage, and drainel ; in all probability, me glen of the Nahr 1) summit of $\pi$ ridge in a serzes ut gigantic ed clitls, to the brow e a wheer precipice of a ravino that seemed 3 luase. On the oppro oftier preeipice, over larly, a mountnin peak, do dark tolinge of the as of white limestone ts sides and sommit, 1 grandeur. A fleeey d round it, bringing b, und rendering still to profound glen bean seene tion Manfrel?
d mysterionsly tiron ho lost road. Aiter ment of his tribe, we Iladid. Having drunk lour course along the no glen of the Niatr elow on our left, and ising "1p on our right. mero gont-track, and fout rolled nud leaped a firr distanes. In a Iatid we renelied the wn which we urrived wniting beneath the 6 was soon pitched in $y$ the tiagrant folinge aning torront leaped revable coolness and hastunding the bright less and beaut!: A nearly a thonsaud in the enst. From a noblostream, which of foan over several :" a manine through to the protormal nud lino aml onk trees, intermixed with the walnut ank the mulberry, overshadow the boiling waters nnd clothe tho rugged banks of the mvinc. On a little monad besine the waterfall once stood the temple of Venus, now a confused mass of ruins. Hewu stones and shattered columns cover its summit and sides, while many others have rolled down to the bel of the river, and are washed by its whters. This is the fountain of the River Adonis.

There can be no alonbt that this is the Apheea, celebrated in ancient times for its Temple of Venns, where the lairest daughters of Syria assembled to pay their vows to the godiless of Love. It is also the seene of the romantic tale of Vemus and Adonis; and the river was in former days loclieved to be reddened at cortain seasons ly the blood of the shepherd hunter who was killed on its banks.

The little village of Afka stands a few luudred yarils from the fountain, on the side of the maine. Its inhabitants, who are all Mctawali, have a bad name, and the appenrance and mamers of such as 1 saw tended to eorroburate the common rumours. They present $a$ murked contrast in their spare figures, restloss tiorce eyes, and abrupt andress, to the staid dignity and nolle bearing of their. Christian neighbou's. They are idlo und unsettled in their habits, and are noted thieves.
To the sonth of Jubail the Wady Thrahim joins the sea; into which a "fair harge river" diselatrges the water collected by the valley; which at certain seasons of the year; is of a hlood-red enlomr, helieved by the ancients to bu eansed ly sympathy for the death of Adonis. Manndrell withessed the phenomenom, ant sups that it is occasioned hy a kime of mininm, or real earth, "and not by nny stain fiom Adonis' blood."

Alter lenving the rains we aseended the $1111-111$ the right, and arrised at one o'elock at the vill. taba, situated in the midet of fertility: of 1 i shows the proofs in a large convent, and in the w! built houses of the prasauts. Whe view from this devated spot is very time.

We fund here our muleteers, whom we had sent on while we remained at the ruins. They propsed stopping at the convent for the night, which seemed prepostarous after laving made so short a thay's mareh; nud we therefore insistal on going further, not erediting their nssertions that, at the next vilhage, whieh was very fir, no lodging could be procured tir ourselves nor com for the beasts.

Our wish whs to lime lisllowed the wady to its termimation at the sen: lint we wore assured that the ravine, at whieh it oontracts, has only sufficient breadth for the torrent El Jimmeh, diashing and tomning over a roeky hed the whole way, whth walls perjendicular on either side, muny hundred feet in leight. There was no alternutive luit to cross over to the next valley by the mest diflieult unl fatiging inseent we have yet had, up the monntain-ridge on the right or moth side of the Wady Ibmhim; winding mu it puth so stecp, that the pour mules eonh searce raiso themselves with their londs, and sometimes they wore wedged lwetween two roeks, or stopped by the overlinnging branches of treos. It seened, rather surpmising that they could git on at all, bat they wero good mumals; one was the largest mul mont powerthl mulo I hind seren. We wre abliged to dismount, and lend our hosses the greater purt of the usecut.
The monntain was well covered with trees; lut the beauty of the evorgreen oaks was destroyed hy the gractice of stripjuing ofl their leaves in the winter for the goats, and lopping the bramelies for finel.

In an hour-nud-a-half we reached, is we hind hoped, the summit of the pass called the Widy ed Jin, or the Valley of the Evil Spirit ; and descemeling on the other side of the ridge half-in-homer brought us at three ram., to the small village of Balhais; where, as preticted ly the mukri, nothing was to be had, and there was no suitable place for pitehing the tent. At length, after mmeh entreaty and utlers of paynent, an ohd man with great complacency led us to a small room, with mud floor and walls, and the roof thackened with smoke. However, wo were the sule oeculants; and not having to share it with our quadruped eompanionis, there was chance of having a better night than at the dirty village of the Metawali. One joun heasts fined badly, having scanty food after their very twilsome journey. Althonsh the old man hate asammed atl the morit of lodging us, it was a woman who took pity on the strathgers. The aneroid stood at $95 \cdots$, riving the elevation of the village at 1096 leret ahowe the seat.

We started the next diy at $\overline{7} .15$, aml jassing roum the hemd of the little valley Wady el Dijat, imel up another rogged ascent of an hour, the Widy I Inahim again appened onour lett fir below. At 9.15 we reteled the real summit of the jhas, and crossed it to at line widn valley "ןpening to thas seat. At 10.15 wo forded at stroum in the middle of the valley, with a picturesifue mill and waterfall. There men, a lurk, a Metawali, and a Christian, looked on with astomishanent while we mide our breakitist on the bakk of the profty rivulet.

Another long ascent bronght us to the shomker of a monntain; from whence we hated a prety view ot the town of Jebail, where we arrived at 2.35 . The heast execially the strong mule, worn very tixal, and unable to \&o turther; his fiot was much swollen. 'The little horse which T roxle was a woulde. I thonght on leaving Gherout hat lie would have bo lian down atior the first alas fommey, and I wats wh mueh disestinthed with 1 wit the having mado so hat ia largain. Huwever, the gallant little roan ea ind me wive the mont rusered pathes whont "wor mak ing a fillos step, or trip. 'Tlos 5 all well descoued a rest : the refure, althomph so camly in the day, we masle al lait. 1 pitelued the tent in it large cemetery, fla fivomitr lamge ut the prople ut the town. Mians: rolys were sented on calperte or on the grass in val whes pate. Sunce, ammarg theme the governor with is number of cullecials, were diselussing pmblic lusiness in the interwals of smoking ; at least so we had a right to $\left.\right|^{13}$ mome. Othels wore in the simple purformanow is at or gossipling, or nothing. None women were it it tombstome the freshness of which, ami dhe newly-watered tlowers, might indme the beliet that the period ot igriof had not pussed awny: while athers, before seme more wather-worn stone, and rank plants, apponved to le there more trom euston than fueling; but their veiled fitees did not permit or sanction a smomise eithor way. Horses wer pieksted in all directions in the now rich herbage. Groups of hokers-on, boys and leggars, varied the general asplect ot the scenc. In the backerromed was the picturesquo enstle of Jebnil.

We strolled through the town aud bazain: As there is a large proportion of Clubitians, wo, as Ciams, phased not only withont insult, but the jupple were remarkably civil; which was rather smprising in a place but little visited by athumers.

This is the ancient Gobal of the Hible (baze. x.xvis.
9) ; the town of the stone-squarers, who assisted at the building of Solomon's Temple.

The ruined castle is interesting, as showing the architecture of many periods. In the greater part of the outer wall, and in the keep, that is to say, for about two-thirds of the height, the origiunal structure remains; and is of bevelled stones, like those of Bralbec and Jerusalem. The largest were from fifteen to eighteen feet in length, and five or six feet in thickness. All this part has the appearance of great untiquity; and though we can hardly suppose it to be so old as the buildings which the stones resemble, they may represent the skill of the ancient Gibleites-those "famons werkers in stone." In the mont, at the corner of the lowest course, and consequently the most ancient part, there is a stone not bevelled, and haviag from above the appearance of a portion of entablature: which wonld go to prove that, however old this part may he, it las in its substructure portions of an earlier building. The apper third of the keep is of the time of the Crusaders, and a more recent Turkish style. In a crypt, or the lowest apartment in the keep, are some large blocks; but the small stones of the pointed vaulting would appear to be recent, except that they are built in with the original wall, In the gateway were found some curions characters, on different stomes, and not consecutive.

The small, but very well sheltered $i$ iort was formed by a good pier seaward, having a tower, possibly a famal, or lighthonse, at the extremity. It is now nearly filled with ruins and sand. Many gray granito columns are lying on the shore and in the water. It now has shelter for boats only. The view from this, with the castle and the Lebanom mountins in the lackground, is very fine. When I sit down to sketch it, a Turk, loubtless the eaptain of the port, called out to me several times from his little house on the sea-wall; but whether to desist or not I could not imagine, either from his worls or gestures. So 1 thought it better not to attempt to miderstand them; lut to consider then intended for some other delinquent. Whereppon he came down; :and I fonnd I haif dhene the pror man great injustice. In fact, he was a connoisseur, a mun of taste; and was esidently flattered by the honour I was doing his charge, ly eatrying off a delineation of it for the Ingleak (English).

IIe condeavonred to convince me that 1 sheuld have a better view from his guard-house, where hin could aceommonlite me with a chair, a tuble, und a pipwis i however preferred my own selection. He wateled the development of the sketel with interest; and was much unused, as were also some prety young girls, when wher persons, who hand been looking over me, duly figured in it, as they reached a proper jusition for the foregromid or midide distmes.

This littlo larbour could be eleared out very easily; amb would be of imnense value to tho coasting trate, which is very insignifiemut now, it is true, but would inerease as limiltaidic does by the construetion of roads.

The mules with the buggige were sent on as swon as they could be got ready, for they still felt the ellects of the tatigning journey of yexterday. This gave us time to wander whout the picturesque town, and also to examine a church in the suburl, which was said to be very beuntiful, and supponed by Pococko to bo of the fourth or fifth century. It did net justily such description. There is nothing to be adnired in the interior. The slafts of the three-quatter colnmas are built of several stones; the capitals are of very rude and debased style. The windows on the outside shicy some similarity to the Norman style of architecture; which may also be said of a sort of vestibule by the side of the entrance, that may have been a chapel or a small chapter-house. The mouldings of the areles lave ornaments like the "zigzag and billet." One arch was peculiar, being ornamented with what might be called the book moulding, being like the backs of books on a shelf. There are some of the same kind in ruined buildings of the Crusaders at Jerusalen. This church so little answered to the description given of it by Pococke, that it is possible it may not be the sime that he describel, although our guide said it was tho prineipal Christian edifice in the town. ${ }^{1}$
"In this vicinity," wrote Benjamin of Tudela, "reside the people ealled Assissins, who do not believe in the tenets of Mohammednaism, lint in those of one whom they consider like unto the Prophet Kharmath. ${ }^{2}$ They fulfil whatever he commands them, whether it be a matter of life or death. He goes hy the name of Sleeikl-al-Hashishin, or their old man, by whose commands all the acts of these mountaincers are regulated. His residence is in the city of Kadmus, the Kelemoth of Scripture, in the Land of Siehon. The Assassins are finthful to ono mother by the commands of their old man, and make themselves the dread of everyone, beeanse their devotion leads them gladly to risk their lives, and to kill aven kings when commanded. The extent of their comery is cight days' journey. They are at war with the Cluristians, called Jranks, and with the Court of Tripoli, which is Tarablus-cl-Sham. Some time ngo Tripoli was visitel by an earthquake, which destroyed many Jews and Gentiles, numbers of the inhabitants being killed by the falling houses and walls, under tho ruins of which they were buried. More than twenty thousand persous were killed in Palestine by the earthruake.

One day's journey tor the other Jebail, which was the Gelbil of the children of Ammon; it contains alonat one humdred und fifty Jews, anl is governed by seven Genoese, the supreme command beiag vested in one of them naned Julianus Embriaco. You there find the ancient place of worship, of the children of Ammon. The idol of this peoplo is seatel on a eatheimb or throne, constructed in stone, and riehly gilt ; two female tigures ocerpy the seats on his side, one being on the right, the other on the left, and before it stamis an altar, upon which the elidhtren of Anmon anciently othired sacrifieps and burned ineens: The city contains alont two humbed Jows, the principal of whom are IL. Meir, RL. Jacob, and R. Syriachah. It stamls an the comst of the sea of the Holy Lamb." Our triend Mr. Thomas Wright, who has edited an aindidgenent of Shenjamin of 'Tudelas' work, from which we extract the above, in his Early T'ravels in Padestine, justly remarks, upon the passage whiclt refers to Juhimus Embrineo, that it was entirely mismmerstood iny the curlier transhators. The family of the Eimbriaci was one of the most ancient of the [^8]ls are of very rude on the outside sliwe ylo of architecture; of vestibule by the c been a chapel or a dings of the arches ; and billet." One ed with what might ig like the backs of of the same kind in at Jerusalem. This scription given of it nay not bo the same uide said it was the own. ${ }^{1}$ min of Tudela, "rewho do not believe m, but in those of the Prophet Khare commands them, death. He goes lishin, or their ohl aets of these mounence is in the city of ture, in the Iatud of al to ono another by and make themselvers dheir devotion leads d to kill even kings of their country is war with the Chirishe Court of Tripoli, ae time ago Tripoli ich destroyed mamy re inhabitants being aths, moler the ruins than twenty thoue by tho earthyuake. Jebail, which was numon; it contains aml is governed by and being vested in brineo. Youthere , of the childrea of plo is seated on a if stone, and richly the seats on his side, 14 on the left, ind aich the childron of and burned incense. al Jows, the priuci, and IR. Syrinchah. "of the Ifoly Iambl." who has edited an Itlelas' work, from is Eurly Trueds in the plassago which at it was entirely hators. 'The family host, ancient of the

bunder of a sect called

 Assassius, One of the founder transmigrates te person who hell the iflention of the orighalpatricians of Genoa; and one of its members, Gulielmus Embriacus, was named commander of the fleet which was sent to aid the Christian princes of Syria, and which, in 1109, took Byblus, of which he became the feudal lord. The jealousy of the other patrician families was subsequently roused, but the family of the Embrinci succeeded in retaining their fendal tenure. The supreme government of the city, however, at this time, appears to have been vested in a committce of seven persons, six of whom were delegated by the republic, the place of president being always tilled by one of tho Embriaci. William of Tyre relates the conquest of Byblus by the Gr vese, and informs us that the Christian name of the Embriacus, who governed when he wrote (about 1180), was Hugo, "a grandson of the Hugo who convuered it;" but all other historians called the conqueror Gulielmus, and Mr. Asher thinks that we ought to read, in Beyjamin's text, William, instead of Julianus.
The so-called assassins to whom Benjamin of Tudela here alludes to are now known as the Ausarians, Ansayrii or Nusairi, und the Ismaili, the former of whom are, according to Mannert, a people who, under the name of the Nazareni, had their own Prince as late as the time of the Romans, and are still powerful, being able to arm 12,000 or 15,000 men. 'They are ocensionally mixed with a few Arabs, Kurds and Turkmans, and occupy both slopes. of the great Ansarian range, from Kalat-el-Hisn northwards to the southern part of the district of Aleppo. The Ansarians consider Adam, Christ, and Mulammad simply us prophets, but they regaril Abel, Peter, and especially Ali, is personifications of the Divinity. Many of them believe in the metempsychosis, but there are different sects, such as the Shemishiya, the Kelbiga and the Muklidjai ; tho first of which, as worshippers of the sun, are conmected with the idolatry of Babylonia. Their tenets are, however, involved in mystery, and are likely so to continue, for in eonversation they practiso the same system of deception which is in part the saliguard of the Druses, by whom they are elamed as an apostate hranch. It is hid down that nothing concerning their ruligion is to he disclosed to strangem; that they must love their brethren, he charitable, refinin from theft and sweuring, and patiently ondure poverty and ill. treatment from their wives.

The other branch, the lsmaili, or Assassins, strictly speaking, are less numerons, anil their tenets no less mysterious. Kahat-ul-Masryad is their principal seat, and outwardly they aro Shi-ites, but they do not believe in Muhammin ; althongh they nttend tho mosques, in order, as is sulyosel, to conceul from the 'Turks that they are attached to paganism, which is not tolerated by that people. They implicity obey to the extent of life and toath a chief ealled Sheikls al Hashishin, and they have atepuired sevemal strongholds in the monntains of 'Iripoli; but Persin is now the principal seat of the $A$ ssassins whose nume is now supposed to lave been derived from the intoxieating herb Inshishin, and to lave no connection with the story of the old man of the momntnin.

General Chesney estimates the population of the Maronites at 250,000 ; that of the Anmarians, at 90,000 ; of the Metnwnlis at 40,000 , und of the Ismaili, or Assassins, at 15,000 . $^{\text {I }}$

Expedition for the Stroey of the Rivers Euphrates and Tigris, vol, i., pe. 542, 5.43, ami 548.

The small Maronite town of Jebail, according to the same authority, surrounded by fruit trees and vineyarils, is inelosed by a wall of about a mile and half in circumference, with square towers at intervals, apparently of the time of the Crusades; as at Beyrut and Latakiyul, ruined eolumns of older date have been used in the later constructions, in this euse remains of the Gebel of the children of Ammon, which supplied caulkers for the fleets of Tyre, and which at a later period was eulled Byblus. Owing to the treaehery of Raymond, Count of Tonlouse, the Crusaders failed before this place in 1090 ; they subsequently sncceeded, but it was retaken by Salal-ed-din (Salalin) in 1187.

III.

The Triple Town of Tritans, Sidoniang and AradiansTupoli still congiats of Thbee seiparate TownsYallify of Kadisha-Grotto Convent of St. AntmonyKanubin, tile Ecclesiastical Capital of the Ma. ronites-a Modern Eden-Carmelite Col. fent-Arbife at the Cedahs of Ledanon.

We bade adicu to this interesting littlo town carly in the morning, and after a ride of about un hour und a half we crossed it bridge of one arch, spanning a rocky ravine, with a pretty little valley above. From its construction it appears to be Roman, nlthough its good state of preservation has a more recent aspect. With this exception, the country pronised very little of interest or beauty. On one sinle were dreary, stony hills; on the other tho sea; and under us a road so hal as to have detied the powers of Macadam. Thus we hat all the monotony which could weary the mind, and the difficulties which fatigue the hody. Yet, in a Iand so apparently doomed to sterility, $九$ untu was ploughing in the loove stones, to sow corth, as he said ; so that the soil could not have been far heneath; and seed seattered anywhere in this tivouring climate is sure to grow.

Wie left Batrun at some distance to the left on the sea-shore. It was now an insigniticant village, with no remains of the ancient tower fomeded by Ithobalus, king of Tyre: about the time of the prophet Elias, according to Josephus, After having passetl this place, we turncal inland towards the mountains. On the horder of a small stream, and muler the shate of some fine trees we found a 'lumkish gentleman seated on his eurpet, more wisely than we, resting lluring tho midday hent. Fe had numerous attendants abont him, On the left was a picturespue, steep bridges. Beyond the little river rose a long, marow, perpendicular crag about a limulved feet high, crowned by the ruins of a castle inuecessible neuly on all sides; while in the distance woro the blue monntains. The whole formed a raro assemblage of su'jerts for a picture, which I regret not having aketched. It is the beau-idéal of the strongholl of a border on robber chieftain.

At one welock we entered a very pretty valley between hills of very solit limestone like that of tho Lader of Tyre, or even more ehnlky. The ascent was very steep, nul jusses over tho neek of a promontory, $_{\text {min }}$ terminating in the bold and precipitons hemdland ealled Rasel-shakka. From the summit is a pretty view towards Tripoli. Descending on the other side, wo pitched our tent on a green near a roadside kuflimeh, or collec-shep and police station, on the senshore, with a fine view of the promontory; where, two-thirds up the cliff, stands the convent of Belmont, a conspicuous oljecet. It was visited by Mamolrell.

A very heavy dow fell during the night, and nemply wetterl us through the tent. Yusuf and the muleteers, however, slept in the ofen nir without inconvenience, We then proceeded on our journey through a pretty countr'y, with the sen on the left hand. At about even miles from the last enempment our attention was drawn to some upright stones, forming in feculiar kind of niche, ficuing outwards, and of three hocks only; a very primitive style, which perhaps proves its great autiquity. I thought I could make out the form of a building, or rather the gromel phan of it ; which appened tor be an olifong, with a semi-cirentar end towiris the ma, on a rectangular base, in phattom. The two midhes are near to each other on the somb side. The groum shepes from the min tomands the sea un the west. There was nothing else to indiente mancient wittement on this spot, nor was there any nppeamuce of rocent habitations.
After lavinis this undefimbio piree of antiquity, we foum the roul agoin tum inkm, leaving another hill between it and the coast. When within alont four miles of Tripmi we passent the small vilhage Calman, the ancient Calamon. The road was over rugged rocks close to the sea, with many points jutting out in the liites of st matifieation, forming tiny covers, Thess may 1 camot think the have been cut for the pmonese, as it has heen supposid. I should wather imagine them to be cansed by the wearing away of a soit rock, ale proating with a hatere stratum. The comutry then hecame an :Hhvial phain, in some parts sumdy, with many hillocks, the elepnsit from the little liiver Kadisha; which we forled at a part whore there are aboments of an ancient heidge, and traces of a rad.

When wermed Tripeli we calledon our rice-ronsul, Mr. Catzedis, who, with his brother, carries on a harge trade howe as a merelant. They have wery comfortable lumstes, in the style of Damasems, on a smaller seale. The streets of Tripmi, and especially the hatzans, art, picturespue: "wint, in sume respects, to the muncrons arehes and hadforches crossing them, and intersecting cath other. These are probibly remains of huildings of the perimil of the Crusaders ; though this iden is mit entertainal by the antiquarios of the phace.

Tarabmhe-cl-sham, as Tripoli is cathed, the eaphits of the lathalik, exemplities the eastern principle of having things as they haphen to be fomb; fin it has now, as it had in ameme times, there sepmate divisions, viz, the Marim, the Town, end the Forturss, which $\mathrm{p}^{\text {robmbly }}$ remenent the sites of the triphe town ance "ecupied by the Pyrians, the Silmians, :mul the Amallians; and which, at a later periot, was one of the most improtant cities of Phenicia. (simp pr 14t.)

The linst emtains the steres and the dwellings of Shijwrighes, latourers, and others commeeted with thale, The lnilding in this portion are mean, but prettily sitnated ronad a hay, and wn anchurate, which is hat inperfectly sheltered by a string of rocky ishots, defended by seven spatre Samenic towers at epual distamees aromml. Abont a mileand a half to the enstward, at the lave of the triangular plain, is the secoul rud prineipal purtion of the town; this part, which is, perhans, the hest buill in Syrin, streteles north mad sonth along the western slope of a hill inclosing one site of Wiali Kadisha, aul is pieturesquely sitmaten? amidst luxuriant groves of orauge, lemon and mulbery tives, intervpersel with the dark green of the spiral cypress.
Tripoli contains good shops, an excellent bazarar, several largo mosques, laths, khans, and about 2000 houses, many of which have gothic aroles below, and are covered with small cupolas, or the ordinary terraced roof, commanding generally a viow of the sen. Being intersected ly the stream, or mother canal of Nalur Abu Ali, water is casily conveyed by means of condints in every direction; so that fow honses aro without the luxnry of a fountain in the court, and not unfrequently also, jets of ceet in the reception rooms. There is an extrusive soap factory, and a population of alout 3000 (Areek eatholics, 1000 Maronites, and marly 14,000 Turks. The town is inclosed with an ordinary Lompholed wall, and is surromed by the trmit groves alremly motieed, which extemd up the side of the hill to the eastward. On the hatter is the remaining portion of the eity, now the fintress, and onee the Acropnilis, which necupios the whole of the summit, and completely commimes the town ly its gans.

Ther work comsists of on very high ses"p, flauked hy square towers, and is without a ditch, beit of as nsmal, constructed probibly by the Saracens, alower the ex. treme elge of the hill. $A$ little to the enstwarl there is another hill rather more ellovated, which is separated from that of the eastle by a deep raviuc. A little way "I) Wadi Kalisim there is al comvent of dervishers, mil hale an hours jommer farther, the valley is crossel hy the apurduet of Kantarah el Brine, from which a came convegs drinking water into thre town along the left site of the Kialisha-the valley of the Cular (irove.

Ancient Tripolis was une of the last stronghools held hy the frusaters, from whom it was taken by the Manluks in 1289; and it is firther remarkalde, in conserucuee of being the tirst phace where the existcheo of the nigar-eane, then callen atere, or swerthonied reed, is noticed.
heing rather low, and embononed in gardions, the heat of Tripoli gives rise to intermittent fevers, :st artain scasens, to whids, huwewr, owing to the sum lureeses, the Marima is man less exposed than the cther barte of the town. Where enltivated, the rids suil or the phan of 'Tripoli produces the surare cane. conton, silk, grain and the finest tobacoo, equal to that of latakivah; higher, it is publy nuld less fivourthhe fir cultivation, yet the steepp sides ol the momtains prewhee silk, oif, grain and wine.

We laft Tripoli hy the montry which extents to the frot oll lahamen, and which, for ahout two leagues in extont, is callent a phin, thengh it is very mervell ground. It is waterem liy there stremms, the Cubban, or Guthan of boocke, tho Nahr Basham, and the Ah-i-Ali, or Ahnuali of Poococke, nko eallod Kontiss Chai, all of which come from the momutains mromed and above the C'relur (irove. Thuse having nuited " little to the cust ward of Trijoli, the truak flows through the town and into the sen at the port. We first crossed a hill, and then pisseld over a small tra's af groumd planted with dive trew, whene we gained the valley of the Ab-i-Ali ow Kulisha riwer, passing over the river by akantarah or hridge of six arehns. We then proceded uloug a most rommetic valley, which apperered as if it was shat in on every side by hish pointed rocky mometains unowst covered with wool. The Kadisine river rushes throngla it with a great noise, but is su covererd with trees that it is seen in very fow placos, but there were several villages on the hills around, umong which ns , and alrout 2000 c arehes lelow, and he ordinary terraeed of the sea. Weiug ther canal of Nalir y means of eomuluits houses are withuut mitt, and net unfre. ation rooms. There population of about ronites, and nearly ad with an ordinary by the frnit groves he side of the hill to remaining portion onee the Acropulis, summit, and comguns.
th sen'p, thanked ly teh, beii to as nsual, cens, aloh:s the exthe enstwarl there l, which is seprameded ivine. A little way nt of ilervishes, nuil valley is crossed tyy trom which a camal town along the left the Cedar (irove. the last strongholits it was taken by the her remarkahte, in ee where the exist. al atere, ot sweet-et in garilins, the mittent fevers, it ; owing to the sam. expoosed than the eultivated, thee riels ces the suratecate. traceo, equal to that ly and less fiwourivirles of the momi* ine.
-hieh extends to thi" wont two leasues in it is very un-wn treams, the linhati, Ir Jashan, num ther , also ealled Korfs mutnins stromud :md ving unital a littlo k tlows throtigh the We tirst crossed n 1ll tra 'z of' ground gainel the valley of ngover the river hy We then proceded de npwared as if it mointed locky monnThe Kadislat river re, but is su coverid w placos, luit there ount, nnong which are Kaftin, where there is a Greek convent, and Kaffirkalah where is a mined castle. Turning to the left we came to the Maronito convent of St. Anthony Cassiynh, which is almost all eut ont of the rock, the chureh itself being a grotto. There is also another large natural grotto with stalactites and stalagmites, as in ether grottoes of a similue character in limestone countries. Pococke tells a strango tale of this grotto, for he says that in $\pi$ dark part ot it they discipline mail people; this place being, as they saly, famons for miraculously euring the disorders of the lomin. The same travoller tells us that they lury the monks in a vault ahove gronnd in their halits, in whieh they appear liko skeletons; and "I saw," he ulds, "one whose skin remed to be menrupted, who, they saty, was a holy man." It is emious that, passing their liviug days in eaverus, these monks should take th prite in locing luried ahovo gromm. This place is fimons fir excellent wine, which the monks preserve for their we in large earthen jurs elose stopped down with elay. Crossing the valley at this point, previons to arriving at which we had renchel the region of pines, wo went up the hill to the nouth, and passing Bun, with a single church on the right, ealled A-ukn, wo deseended to the renowned monastory of Kanubin, the ecelesiastieal eapital of the Manouites.

Kanulin, the summer residence of tho Maraite patrianels. is situated on the sonthern slope of the steat monntain amphithentre of Besharva, or Bshirrai, otherwise varionsly written, which eontains the lange Maronite village of sams name, having 120 houses fud no less than seven clmehes, surrouded by gardens of mulbervis nud other fruits. This remarkable momastery overhangs in precipitums roek, in the mper part of which, in aldition to a church dr licated to the Virgin, und some finty or fifty cells for the monks, a sepulehal grotto has been in part excavated for the deceased patriarehs, and another for the priests. The elureh itself is a fine large srotto, und its threo bells are conveniently swung in its window. Near the ennvent is the chapel of St. Mamin, whieh is also a sroto; this camonised female is said to have lived as a monk and in man'a habiliments both at Tripoli and at Kanubin. 'l'ie Kadislar runs in a narrow valley below tho monnstery, having on both sides two very high ridges of munntains covered with pines; this situation, l'ococke remarks, is athe moss extraordinary and retired that can be imagined, there being only ono way to it, which makes it a very secure retrent, and is probatbly the reason why the patriatelis have tiken up their rexidnue here (See p. 180.)

Procerding cistwad frem linnulin, we passed by the villagin of Aten -on as somo lave it plpopriately eneugh, Eilen-a rematkally pretty village, nuel of which Poeweko sait," it is reckened one of the most pleasant places in the worlh, on ateonnt of its situation and prospuct, its waters, mul tho fine inprovements about it." Seveml hemtiful easeules were visible on both sides as we travelled onwards to the convent of the Satin Carmelite fithers, ealled Mar Serkiyas or St. Sergius, which is a most delightful retirement in sumner; the beanty of the opposite hills, the sevemal waterfalls and stremms of water, and the perpetial freshness of the air in these high regions, make the place very agreenble, whilst the heats in the plains are ahmost intolemble, but in winter tha fathers reside in Tripoli. From this convent, a gentle ascent of nbont an hour took us to in lurge plain between the highest parts of Mount Lebimon, and in the north-eastern corner of which we formil ourselves in the presence of the saered grove oî cedurs, (íee p. 152).

IV.

The Cedalis of hamanon-Forest Thees of Syrta and Phlestine-Wconomichi. Uses of the C'edali-Differfyees of Opision vron tur Subject-The Teryas "Ebes," "Kodnus," and "Cedar," alplaed to vabious WoodsTine cedar a fayourite Imagr in tire loethey of the Mebrews-Dinchepancy of Thivellers in hegard to Ntmbel of Thees and Gmoves-a Modenn Place of Worshif-Deserlitions of the Ghove by differintt Thivbleers.

Tue Cedars of Lebanon have the glory of heing one of the most ancient groups of trees, or fragments of an almost primeval forest, that are historically known. Thry are the patriarehs of the Holy Land, and some of them still in existence may have been nnintelligent witnesses of scenes recorded in Seripture-may have aetmally shated or sheltered the perwons of those who now only live to us in their inspired writings.

Judea possessed, in olden times, forests which are somght for in vain in the present day. They are often alluted to in the Seriptures under the name of Jarim. Thus, upon the Lebanon were those famons torests:. of cedars, unore particularly notieed in the First and J Second Books of Kings, of which, in the present day," only $a$ few descudants remain. The oaks, firs, and pines of the Lebanon supplicel the Phomicians with worl for the construction of their ships ( 3 Sim., xiz., 23). And we know, from the historical canses of the wars between the I'tolemys and the Seleneides, that availahle forests still existed in the stme regions, since they beenme the field of contest for the ponsession of the timber.

The-Bible furnishes us with similar testimony as to the existence of forests, tho place of which is now oecupien by a mere naked soil. Such were the forests of Ephraim, the destruetion of which was commenced by the Ephraimites themselves (2 Sann., xviii., 6). And those in the land of the Perizzites, and of: the giments or Rephnim (Josh, xvii., 15); as also those whieh elothed the district of Banla, oll tho frontiers of Benjumin und of Judah, and gave to the eity its sumame of Klriath Juinim or tho city of forests.

I'leiPhonicians, who were devoted to maritime commorce from the most remote times, were no dontst tho chicf agents in spoiling lalestine and Syria of its forests; and in the present laty, few even of the remhants of wuch mre met with sonth of the parallel of Tripoli. But nowth of Kalishat valley, the country becones genemilly woody, the low hills mad valleys being alike densely elad with shouhs and trees of leswer growth, till on Jomit Casius, Momit Rhosus, und Aumnt Amanns, the great forest features of the country, the various miks at the hase, and tall pines nt tho summits, nttain their full development ; and, inded, in tho two last-mentioned mometain ragens, to the samo extent as in any portion of the Cilician liumos. Ibralim Pusha is satid to have olitained three millions of frames worth of timber from Adian, in 1832, Tho pashalik, which comprises a large portion of ameient Ciliein, is meant, for we know, by onv own personal observintion, that the greater pirt of the wood was obtanted from Mount Amanus, nor do we believe that a single trunk was flonted down the Cydnus, Sarns, or Pyramus, from the Taurus. Our good friend, Mr. L. Alfred Mary, is in error, then, when quoting our account of the Valonis. or gall-nat forests of Kurdistan ; ${ }^{1}$ he supposes that there are few or no trees in Syria. ${ }^{2}$ The forests of North Syria are still very extensivo and very productive. Nor must we omit notice altogether of the woods of mountain pine and stono pine still existing in Lebunon, more especially near Beyrut; of the thick ook woods of Bashan on the table lands of Gilead; of the groves of pralms which gave their name to Jericho, as those of sycamores did to Sycominopolis - the modern Kainla; of the evergreen carob trees seattered over the park-like meadows; of the Turkish oak, with it, many veterans, the oak of Abraham near Hebron, the oak of Moreh at Sheehem, and the oak of Bethel. Nor of the tall and spreading terebinth trees, or the evergreen ilexes, myrtles, and olcanders of the valleys. As the aged trees became the centre of a long succession of historical recollection, nud had at first been marked out as natural resting.places for the patriarehal or Arab encampments, so they were alterwards in all probability the sacred groves under which altars were built, partly to the True God, partly to Astarte. Canon Stanley points out two such groves, one as existing with apprirently the remains of a sacred edifice at Hazori, near Bancas; another, of singular

TRIPOLI IN SYRIA,
beauty, on the hill of the lesser sourees of the Jordan, at the ancient sanetuary of Dan. ${ }^{3}$

Abstract

${ }^{1}$ Histoirs des Grandes Forcte de la Gaule, ఫco., p. 97, quoting Ainsworth's Visit to the Chatleans, Journal of the Royal Geographical Society, vol. xi., p. 29 . ${ }^{2}$ Captain Williom Allcn, in the same way, quoting Hamilton, Ainsworth, Walpole, Smyth, and others (Dead Sea, fic., vol il., p. 278), goes a great deal too far when ho says that such travellers deseribe tho southern slopes of tho back-bone of Asia Minor as a perfect contrast to tho well wooded northers side, and the louge forms of theso hills ns all mire, except in some localitics. ${ }^{3}$ Mr. Van de Velde describes what he calls a Lecbanon forest ns occurring between Hermel and the ecdars. "Between theso two places," ho snys, "I saw still moro of Nature's benutles, and these too of quite a dillerent kind from what I had seen in the more southern mountwin ranges at Jebea. I was ravished

While the palm, which gave its name to Phenicia, "the Land of Palms," is still found in groves on the
with the pietnresque groups of oaks, the fantustically shupal terebinths, the oddly-twisted stems and bramehes of other trees, in which were blended together all sorts of green, pale, dark, yellowlsh, sometimes more inclining to brown. At other points, agai:, the rond led over rocky phatcaux, grown over with short priekly shrubs. Alternating with these there appeared at other phaces cypress groves, where eneh several tree was in itself a study for the landscape painter; some on account of their enormous stems and branches; others on account of their trunks laving been Lroken by storms or being half-decayed with age; and others, too, on account of the liright verdure of the ahoots here and there springling up from a piece of root apparently dead, mind purtially torn out of tho ground. (Narratire of a Journey through Syria and Palestine in 1851 and 1852, by C. W. M. Van do Vetde, vol, ii., P. $47 \mathrm{~F}_{\mathrm{o}}$.)
; of the Turkish oak, $k$ of Abraham near chem, and the ouk of dding terebinth trees, ind olcanders of the e the centre of a long m , and had at first esting.plaees for the , so they were after1 groves under which True God, partly to out two such groves, e remains of a sacred another, of siugular

* name to Phenicia, nd in groves on the the fantustieally-shaped brameles of other trees, ts of green, palo, dark, rown. At other points, grown over with slort thero appenred at other tree was in itself a study unt of their cnormous their trunks having been with nge; and others, ho shoots here and there putly dead, mid partinilly Journey through Syria :W. M. Vun do Vedde,

MARONITES OF ANTURA, maritime plains of that country and of Philistria, the | spectator is amongst them that the twisted stems and Holy Land is in the present day mainly characte ed silver folinge of the first, the dark broad leaf of the hy the olive, the fig, mad the pomegrunte; and it has second, and the tender, green, and searlet blowsoms of been truly remarked of these, that it is only when the the third are fully appreciated as the must beantiful of sights, even when stripped of the assoeiations which would make the tamest of their kind venerable.
There has been some misapprehension with regard to the economical uses of the cedar, pine, nnd oak in olden times, owing to the difficulty of determining the kind of timber nlluded to by the ancient writers. The word eres or œres, whieh is supposed to be synonymous with cedar, occurs in numerous places of Seripture, hut authors are not agreed on the exact meaning of the term. Celsius (Ilierobot., I. 106), for instanee, conecives that it is a gencral name for the pine tribe, to tho exclusion of the cedar of Lebanon, which he considers to be indicated by the word berosh. The majority of commentators, however, are of opinion that the cedar of Lebanon (Pinus Cedrus or Cedrus Libani of botnuists) is alone intended.
It is unfortunate that there should be discrepancy of opinion as to the identification of so remarkable a tree, as it uecessarily produces a distrust in the conclusions which are arrived at respecting what would appear to be the less easily distinguished plants and trees mentioned in the Dible. The discrepaney of opinion has, on this occasion, however, arisen from the loubt whether eres, in the numerous passages of Scripture where it occurs, is always used in the same signification; that is, whether it is always intended to specify only one particular kind of the pine tribe, or whether it is not sometimes used generically. In the latter case, others of the pine tribe appear to bo intended along with the cedar of Lebanon, and not to its exclusion, us advoented by the learned Celsius. Viewing the matter in this light, one of the best and most qualified of modern writers-Professor J. F. Roylesays, in an artiele in the Cyclopedia of Biblical Literature, "We are disposed to think that the diflerent passages in which eres oceurs authorise our considering it a general term, applied to different species;" and we think that, considering the variety of economieal purposes to whieh the eres was put, as ship-building, the construction of temples and honses, and the uioderate supply and littlo adaptability of the cedar to sueh purposes, combined with other considerations, leave little doubt bat that this is an accurate conclusion.
The name arz or ars is, at the present day, applied to the cedar of Lebanon ly the Arabs iu the neighbourhood. Mr. Harmer (On Canticles, v. 15), observes that the country people near the monntain call the cedar ars, which is very nearly the original name. But the same name appears to be applied also to others of the pine tribe: thus, at Aleppo, the fir tree is included under the name ara (Niobahr, as quoted by Rosenmüller, Bibl. Bot., p. 246). So we find the term al arz applied by the Arabs to a coniferous plant, a native of Mount Atlas. The wood work of the roof of the celebrated mosque, now the cathedral, of Cordova, which was built in the ninth century, has been showa to be formed of the wood of this tree (Loulon's Arborct., p. 2463). The English name larch is supposed to have been derived from this word, al arz. Professor Royle also points out that in Persian works we find the name aras or orus given as a synonyme of abhul, which is a species of juniper. Celsius says that arz is a general name for the piue tribe among the Arabs, and he adds that the translators of the saered Seriptures into Arabic sometimes use the term sunobar or pine, sometimes arz, as the representative of eres.
When Hollund, in his translation of Pliny's Natural History, speaking of the lesser cedar (Cedrum minorem), says, "The timber of it is everlasting; wherefore, in old time, they were wont to make the images of the gods of this wool, as it appeareth by the statuc of Apollo Sosianus, made of eedar wool brought from Seleucia ;" he appears to allude to the juniper or ecdar, the kedrus of Dioscorides, either Juniperus oxycedrus or J. Phonicia. Box is, however, more frequent than juniper at Seleucia. Quintus Curtius also uses the term kedros in a general scuse, when he says of the palace of Persepolis "multa cedro cedificata erat regia."
If we proceed to compare the severul passages of Scripture in which the word ercs oceurs, we shall equally find that one plant is not strictly applicable to them all. Thus, for example, when we find Moses commanding the houses in which the lepers dwelt to be purified with eedar wood among other things (Lev. xiv., 4, 6), and Moses and Aaron nsing ecdar wood in a sacrifiec, we cannot but feel that an uromatic juniper or cedar is meant. The ancients threw the berries of juniper on funeral piles, to protect the departing spirit from evil influenees, and offered its wood in sacrifiee to the infernal gods, because they believed its presence was aceeptable to them. They also burned it in their dwelling houses to keep away demons. The cedar of Lebanon, as Lady Callcott remarka (Scrip. Herbal, p. 92), could not have been procurcd on Momut Sinai withont difficulty, whereas the juniper is plentiful there. Professor Royle also remarks that there is another species of juniper, called gogul by the natives, which is employed in the remote parts of the Hirsalayan mountains for burning as ineeuse in religions ceremonies.
We are informed in several other passages of Scripture of the negociations with Hiram, King of Tyre, for the supply of cedar trees out of Lebanon, and of the uses to which the timber was applied in the construction of the 'Tenple, and of the king's jalace : he "covered the house with beams and loords of cedar ;" "the walls of the house within were covered with boards of cedar ;" there were "cedar pillars," and beams of celar; and the altar was of cedar. In all these passages the word eres is employed.
Whatever the wood employed was, it most have been considered as well fitted for building parposes. Now it does not appear, from the greater number of testimonies, that the cedar of Lebanon is so. People, when speaking of cedar, have often in mind the red or peneil cedar, which is the wood of a juniper ( $J$. Virginiana). Loudon describes the wood of the celar of Lebauon as light and spongy, and ly no means durable (Arboretum, p. 2417). Pococko eompares it to white deal. Virennes de Fenille considers it as the lightest of the resiuons woods. Di. Lindley calls it "the worthlews, thongh magnificent cedir of Mount Lebanon," and he is of opinion that sonie of the cedar trees sent by Hirmu may have been the produce of the Al Arz (Callieris quadrivulves) obtained from Mount Atlas, but why not of the Syrian pines used for shipping, alike in ancient and modern times? Professor Royle remarks, that "though wo have seen both temples and palaces built entirely with one kind of cedar (that of the Cedrus Deodara), we think it more probable that, as the timber had to be brought from a distance, whero all kinds of cedar grew, the common pine tree and the ecdar of Lebanen would both furnish some of the timber required for the building of the Temple, together with the juniper cedar. Celsius was also of opinion that the eres indicated the Pinus syl-

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

; wherefore, in old aages of the gods statue of Apollo t from Selencia;" - cedar, the kedrus IrusorJ. Pheenicia. uniper at Seleucia. edros in a general Persepolis " multu everal passages of occurs, we shall ictly applicable to :n we find Moses he lepers dwelt to ther things (Lev. ing cedar wood in 1 aromatic juniper rew the berries of he departing spirit rood in saerifico to ieved its presence burned it in their ns. The cedar of ks (Scri). Merbal, d on Mount Sinai niper is $1^{\text {lentitul }}$ arks that there is gul by the natives, rts of the Hircaleense in religious passages of Seripain, King of Tyre, of Lebanon, and of pplied in the conking's palace : he bonrds of cetar ;" were covered with edar pillars," and of cedar. In all oyerl.
vas, it mnst have building purposes. greater number of hon is so. People, 2 in mind the rel 1 of a juniper ( $J$. wood of the celar and by no means cocke compares it He considers it as
Dr. Lindley calls nt cedar of Mount some of the cedar the produce of the Lined from Mount nes used for shiptimes ? Professor have seen both with one kind of we think it more be brought from a grew, the common would both furmish e building of the odar. Celsius was fed the Pinus syl-vestris or Sooteh pine, which yields the red anl yellow deals of Norway, aud which is likewise found on Mount Lebanon." This opinion, Professor Royle observes, seems to bo confirmed by Ezekiol, xxvii. 5, "They have made all thy slip-boards of fir trees of Senir, they have taken cedar from Lebanon to make masts for thes." For it is not probalile that any other tree thum the common pine would be taken for masts, when this was procurable.

It must not at the same time be omitted that the cedar wood of Mount Lebanon has been manufactured into small pieces of furniture, which presented "a compact surtice, agreeably varied and variously shaded" (Parisel Mist. du Cedre, p. 42), and Mr. Wilcox, of Wurwick is said to lave in his posscssion some specimens of furniture mado of cedar of Lebunon, ornamented with carved work, in flowers, leaves, &c. We masy therefore admit, with Professor Royle, that the wood of the cedar of Lobmion was used as well as that of pine, in the construction of the Temple and palace, the more especially so as the cedar was so well known to the Hobrews, and so great a fivourito with thenn as a poetic image, although tho two were not distinguished ly appropriate nanes; and we may still say, with Cauon Stumley, that a practical indication of the size of these eedars, ans compared with any Palestine timber, is the faet, that from the earliest times they have always been used for all the great works of Jewish arelitecture. "They were so employed for Solomeu's Tenule, and again for the Temple of Zerubalme, when nothing but sheer necessity could have induced the impoverished Hebrows to send so far for their timber. They were used yet onee again, probably for the last time, in Constantine's Church of the Nativity, ut liethelem. When the ceiling of that ancient edifice was last repaired, the ratters were no longer froun the furests of Lebanon, but gifts from our own oaks, by King Edward IV."
Wre lave said that the celar was a favourite image in the poetry of the Hebrews. Luckily, ufon this point there is little room for discrepucies of opinion. It is manifest that in the tigurative pussages of the Seriptures in which the eres is alluded to, that the cedar of Lebanon is meant, as when the word berosh is used it applies to the fumereal cypress. Thus in 1 'almis, xeii., 12, it is said, "Tho righteous shall thourish like a palm tree, and sprend abrond like a cedue of Lebiuon," It las been well remarkel that the flourishing head of the pala and the spreading abroad of tho cedar are equally characteristic. But the prophet Fzekiel (xxxi.) is justly ndducel as giving the most magnificent, and at same time tho most graphic, description of this celebrated tree, "Behold, the Assyrian was a cedar in Lebanon, with fair branches, and with a shadowy shroud, and of high stature; and his top was among the thiek boughs." "Therefore his height was exalted alove atl the trees of the fieh, and his boughe were multiplied, and his branches became long becauso of the multitude of waters." "All the fowls of heaven made their nests in his boughs, and under his branches did all the beasts of the field bring forth their young." In this description, Mr. Gilpin has well observed, the principal charncteristics of the colar are marked: first, the multiplicity and length of its branches. Few trees divide so many fair branches from the wain stem, or spread over so large a compass of ground. "His boughs are mnitiplied," as Ezekicl says, "and his branches become long;" which David calls sproading abroad. His very boughs are equal to tho stem of a fir or a chesnut. The second characteristic is what Ezekiel, with great beauty and ajtness, calls his shadowy shroud. No tree in the forcst is more remarkable than the cedar for its close-woven lenfy canopy. Ezekiel's cedar is marked as a tree of full and perfect growth, from the circumstance of its top being among the thick boughs.

Almost all travollors to the east make a pilgrimage to the saered grove, which is indeod easily eneugh reached in summer-time, being at the head of the Valley of Kadisha, a small river, which having its origin in the little Lake Lemone or Yemone, in the upland valley of the grove itself, flows into the sea at Tripoli. Tho grove itself stands in reality in a bight of the mountains where the Jebel Akkat from the north terminates in the spur or group of the Jebel Makmel, before it is prolonged by the Jebel Liban, as the greai backlone of Syrin. The whole are, however, generally known as the Lebanon.
It is remarkable how the different reports of observers made at different periods of time would seem te indicato a gradual falling oft in the number of veterans -patriarchs of the grove-and a rapid rise of undergrowth in modern times. Belon, who travelled in Syrianbont 1550 , fomad about 28 cedars in a valley on the sides of the mountains. Ranwolf, the Elizubethant traveller, visited the cedars in 1574, and says he could tell no more but 24 , that stool round about in a circle ; and two others, tho branches whercof are quite decayed from age. De la Roque, in 1688 , found but 20. Maundrell, in 1696 , found them reduced to 16, and Dr. Pocoeke, who visited Syria in 1744 nud $174 \overline{0}$ discovered only 15 . One of these that had the soundest hody, though not the largest, measured 24 feet in circunference. M. Lamartine, in 1832, says these trees diminish in every suceceding age. Travolless formerly counted 30 or 40 ; more recently, 17 ; more recently still, only 12. There are now but 7. These, however, from their size and general appearance, may be fairly presumed to have existed in Biblical times. Around these ancient witnesses of ages long since past, there still remains a little grove of yollow celars, appearing to me to form agroup of from 400 to 500 trees or shrubs. Every year, in the month of June, the inhabitants of Besharrah, of Eden, of Kanulin, and the other neighbouring valleys and villages, elimb up to these cellus, and celebrate mass at their feet. How many prayers have resounded under these branches, and what moro beantiful canopy for worship can exist ?
The distinguished biblical traveller Dr. Edward Rolingon attributes the isiscrepancies of travellers in counting the trees not so much to the perishing of the veterans, as in inchuding more or less some of the young oncs. At present, he adls, the number of trees appears to he on the increase, and amounts in all to several hundred. This grove was long held to be the only remuant of the cedars of Lebanon. But Seetzen, in A.D. 1805, diseovered two other groves of greater extent; and the American missionaries have also, in travelling through the mountains, found many celars in other parts. The distinguished naturalist, Professor Ehrenberg, who spent a considerable time in Lebanon, found the cedar growing abundantly on those parts of the mountain which lie north of the road between Baalbek and Tripoli, ns we advance in fact to what still continues to be the woody region. The trees wero of ull sizes, old and young; but none so ancient and venerable as in the traditionary snered grove. Upon this point General Chesney also observes (Expedition for the Survey of the Kivers Euphrates and Tigris, vol. i., p. 387) that the celebrated cedars have obtained an extraordinary size in the peculiar sheltered spot at the foot of tho Jebel Makmel, anil in a few other places only : "it in general should be observed, however, that although indigenous to the soil, the cedars scarcely attain the size of mere shrubs." Elsewhere (page 454) the General, sjeaking of the sacred trees, says, "Five of very large, abont 50 of tolerable growth, and 200 or 300 of small size, still cemain, but stunted cedars are common in other parts of the Lebanon, and probably are indigenons." Although General Chesney's observations were published in 1850 , they were really mate many yeurs previously, and ante-dated thoso of Dr. Robinson and of the Ameriean missionaries.

The Maronites used formerly to celebrate the festival of the Transfiguration benenth the cedars, but their patriarch was obliged to suppress the festival on account of the quarrels which accompanied it. In the present day the inhabitants of the neighbouring villages go there from time to time in procession with their priests, nud having said mass and celebrated their visit by a few discharges of musketry, and ly sundry libations. with a few songs and dances, they roturn with branches of the trees in commemoration of their visit. So erreat is the afflux of visitors that a Maronite monk of Jesharri takes up his residence there in the summer months, providing travellers with refreshments, and, what is more, selling little boxes hewn out of the cedar wood by the monks of Beslaarra and Kanubin.

The Rev. J. L. Porter was lucky enough to visit the sacred grove at the time of one of the festivals. He had been mislet on his way from Hasrun, of the beauty and grace of whose female inhabitants he spenks in the highest terms, attenting thereby to the great salubrity of the mountain elimute, and arrived nt the cedars loungry and exhausted. "I sat down," he relates, "beneath the wide-sprending branches of one of those gignatic trees, expecting to be obliged to pass a dinnerless and houseless night; and this was not the worst, for crowds of drunken men and women were wandering about, quarreling with each other, and firing off guns and pistols, without much regari to the safety of their neighbours. Thus do they celebrato the feast of the cedars ! About nine o'elock the muleteors nurived, and nfter a liearty dimer I threw myself on my humble bed. I was soon asleep, and notwithstanding the neisy piety of those around, the light of inoruing was stealing over the lofty mountain-tops ere I avoke."

Tho next day he thus deseribes his experiences." On first viewing the cedars from the lieights above Hasrun, I experionced feelings of disappointment. I hal pictured in my mind far different seenery in the district round them. Imagination had painted rugged eliffs, and wild ravines, and theso remnants of neient noble forests clinging to the mountain side, like pines on an alpine pata. But here was a vast eemicirenlar basin in the bare white mountains, whose sides slope down from the rounded summits with uniform regularity, without a crag, or peak, or patch of vordure to relieve tho monotony. The monntain-tops were now streaked with snow, but even $t$ is almost blended with the whito limestone, and gave little variety to the sceno. In the very centre of this vast basin I saw a solitary black speck, apparently altogether out of place-it was the grove of the cedars. On appronching the brow of the hill, where my cye took in the sublime glen of the Kadishs, with its terraced banks, and numerous vilJages peeping ont from dark masses of foliage, the view was finer and more varied; but still a long naked slope seןurated the cedurs from the grandeur of the glen below.
"It was not till I entered the preeinets of the sacred grove that feelings of disappointment vanished. Then the heautiful fan-like branches of the younger trees, the gracefinness of their pyramidal forms, and, above all, the huge trunks of the patriarchs themselves, which one must walk round to form a true conception of their vast proportions, excited feelings of unmingled nilmiration. And when all the associations of their high natiquity, ancient glory, and saered interest swelled upon my memory, the wondrous attraction that had for centuries drawn erowds of pilgrims to this lunely spot from the ents of the enrth, beeame at once manifest. The pine-groves of the Metu are fir more picturesque, and the oak torests of Hermon and Baslian fir more extensivo and beautiful; but cedar-beams were laid in the Lorl's House nt Jerusalem, and the cedar forests wero the glory of Lehanon, as Lebunon was the glory of the lnid of Israel.
"Only a few, perlapps a dozen, very ancient trees uow remain. There are, however, many others of very riguectable dimeusions and antiguity, some of which are four or five feet in tiameter. The whole grove is com$j^{\text {act, }}$ the trees growing elose togother on the sumbit and sides of a little limestone knoll. In the. ement a small rude chapel has been construeted within the last few years, the roof of which is wholly of cedar-wont. In a chamber attached to it resides the deacon, who is the recognised guardian of the place, und expects from all travellers some little present in exchange for a few cones, of a fragment of a binneh whieh the winter's. snow may have broken dowin.
"I was present during the celelnation of momingmass by two stranger bishops who had just arriver. During the performance the tlencon brought mo the traveller's book, with a pencil from ofl the altar. He requested me to write my name in it. This is certuinly a mon rational mode of recording a visit than the sacrilegious practice of earving the letters on the bark of some nobltree. In fact the trunks of all the most ancient trees, with one exeeption, are now hacked, hewn, and disfigured by this larbarous propensity of travellers. There may be real by the curious, names of illustrious savans joined with elsewhere unheard-of individuals. Noble lorls, too, figure beside the autogruphs of their dragomen; and other associations, equally ennobling. are formed to excite the amusement and indignation of posterity:" ${ }^{1}$

Thus it is that within the last few years-that is botween the epoch when we first visited the cellars of Lebanon, nigh twenty years ago-tho solitude so well calenlated to enhance the reverence of the place, and the solemn almost holy silence that pervaded the precincts of this lone temple of nature's architecture, have been broken by the intrusive presence of a monkish beggar, a Maronite who has built a halitation for limself in this lovely spot, and of whom Van de Velde says," I cannot strictly call him a hermit, for ${ }^{1}$ Five Years in Damasews, foc. By Rev. J. L. Porter, A.M, F.R.S.L., vol, ii., p. 300, et seq.

- out of place-it was oaching the brow of sublime glen of the , and numerous vilss of foliage, the view ; still a long naked the grandeur of the recincts of the sacreal ent vanished. Then the younger trees, the orms, and, above all, as themselves, which te conception of their of unmingled admiations of their high red interest swelled attraction that had lgrims to this lonely ecame at once manitu are fur more picHermon nud Bushan iul ; but cedar-beams Jerusalem, and the ehanon, as Lebanon ery ancient trees now uy others of very $r$ ty, some of which are e whole grove is comther on the sumbit oll. In the cont.a a ructed within the last vholly of eedar-woot. es the deacon, who is ace, und exprects from in exelange for a fers h which the winter's.

ation of moruing mass

 just arrivel. During ght we the traveller's altar. He requested is is certaninly a more than the saerilegions the bark of some noble he most ancient trees, cked, hewn, and disensity of travellers. s, names of illustrious aheard of individuals. e autographes of their ns, equally ennobling. ont and indignation ofat few ycars-that is visited the cedlas: of -the solitude so well nee of the phace, and e that pervaded the nature's architecture, rusive presence of a has built a habitation and of whom Van de all him a hermit, for

Rev. J. I. Porter, A.M.
during winter, when the celars lie buried under twenty feet of snow (an oriental exaggeration) le returns to his old residenee in the village of Besharra." And such has been une afflux of visitors in recent times, that their piety seens to have aroused that of the native Syrians, their visits and processions have become more frequent, and havo even gone so far as to desecrate with the presence of a rude chapel, although not the most magniticent, still, perhaps, the most love! y and intercsting of all existing places of worship. ${ }^{1}$

Mr: Van de Velde gives a very graphic picture of the sacred grove as seen from the narrow ridge where the two roads unite, one from Buallse by Ain-Ata, the other fiom Hermel by Deir Mur Murum across the Jebel Muskich ( 0,000 feet). "Of the apparent magnitude of the olijects" he says, "you may form a comprative idea when I tell you of the fir-fiamed cellur park as it appears from this lofty spot. Yon know, from the narratives of different travellers, that the old cedars, now only twelvo in number, stand in a broad eleft of Lebanon, nt 6,300 feet above tho sea. You know that those venerable trees-perhaps tho oldest in the world, and which some think nust havo sprung up soon after the flood-are giants above all other trees growing, and that this dozen is surroumded by an after-growth of 400 younger cedars, more or lews. Such a park consequently eomprises a considerablo plot of ground, and the height of the cedars is in proportion to the ground they cover. Nevertheless, the eedar park, vern from the summit ridge where yon cross Monnt Lebanon from enst to west, above the deep valley of Besharm, uppears like a groen spot of tho size of a man's hand, a grove of such tiny dimensions that one might suppose it to be a solitary bush of oak.

The descent from this to the cedurs occupies rearly an hour and a half: After that, one passes from the scorehing ruys of tho sun under their splentid leaty areales, where you find yourself transplanted at once into one of the most charming regions that this globe can show. A cool atmosphere, perfimen with the halsimic smell of the eedar-wood, and the charm of the birds among the branches; you may imagine how the overheated and waried traveller feels at the change. Had not the praise of those cedars been so often sung by others, I would try to tell yon something of the glory of God in His works,-the cedars which "He hath planted." (Ps, civ., 16). But you know the cedars, aud have perhups often cre now felt a desiro to come and encaup here for a part of the summer. If you ever happen to realise that wish, then I beg that I may be of the party. Six weeks under tho eedars of Lebanon! it is worth one's while to set about such a jouruey." (Van de Velde, Op. Cit. vol. ii., p. 478.)

This is very touching, but still more splendid is Canon Stauley's peromation. "It was the very remoteness of this noble tree, combined with its majestic height and sweeping branches, that made it, one may almost say, in object of religious reverence. It is harlly over namal without the aldition, either of the lotty mountain where it grew-' the cedats of Lebanon,' or of some epithet implying its grandeur and glory, 'the trees of the Lord,' the 'celars which He phanted,' 'the tall cedars,' 'the cedars ligh and lifted up,'

[^9]'whose height is like the height of the cerlars,' 'spread abroad liko the cellar,' 'with fair branches,' 'with it shndowing shroul,' 'of an high stature,' ' his top annong the thick bonghs,' 'his height exalted above all tho trees of the ficld,' 'his boughs multiplied, his branches long,' 'fair in his greatness,' 'in the length of his branches,' ' by the miltitude of his branches.'

These expressions elearly inclicato that to them tho cedar was a jortent, a grand and awfill work of God. The rorls would never have been used had it been in familiar sight amongst their ordinary gardens, as it is in ours. It is said that une clergy of tho Greek church still offor up mass under their brunches, as though they formed a natural temple, and that the Arubs call them the "trees of God." This may now be a homage to the extreme antiquity of those which are left; but it may also be a contianation of the ameient feeling towards them which filled the hearts of the jrets of Ismel."

Still moro recently (in the autumn of 18G0), Dr. J. D. Hooker aecompanied a party (including Captaia Washington, Hydrographer of the Navy), on a voyago to Syria, where it was proposed, amongst other scientific agenda, to examine the cedar grove of Lebanon, and, if desirable, to exeente an aceurato toprographicil plan of the valley. They sailed in the Firefly, commanded by Captain Mansell, an able and scientifie officer. On September 25th they arrived at Beyrut, and on Sepitember 29 reached the Kadisha valley, and camped in the evening at its head under the cediurs, at an elovation of 6172 feet, as they have determined the real altitude of the saered grove to be. They describo the number of trees as being nout 400, and they are disposed in nine groups. They are of various sizes, from about eightcen inches to about forty feet in girth; and Dr. Hooker points out as a remarkable fict that there is no tree of less than eighteen inches in girth, and that no young trees nor even seedlings of a second year's growth were found. It would seem from this as it only a particular cyele of seasons was fivourable to the propagation of the cedars of Lebanom, and this would partly account for their occasionai diminution and rapid re-supply. Calculating roughly from the rings of a branch, Dr. Hooker thinks that the younger trees in Lebanon would average 100 years old, the older 2,500 .

We are further glad to hear, through the Natural IIstory Review, that a survey of the valley was made by Captain Mansell, and sent to England, accompanied by sections of two of the youngest trees. ${ }^{3}$
${ }^{2}$ Sinai and Palestine, &c., by Arthur Penrbyn Stanles, M.A., Canon of Canterlury, p. 139.
${ }^{3}$ No traveller in the east has been so minute in bis geograply as ! Ir. Pococke. Dr, Robinson may bnve surpassed lim in details, whero a speeint regard to Biblienl sites was coneerned, aud the offieers of the Euphrates expedition in as far as North Syria nos eonectued, lyy carrying out a regular survey in every dircetion 's whieh their labours extended, natarally workel out more satisfactory results; but wherever we have followed in the footsteps of the veterau traveller, we have found his notices unequalled in their detail. Yet in his aecount of the Kadisha valley we find some points that want elearing up, and whieh in a popular aecount like ours it is not necessary to enter upon, but wo may notico that in one plaee he describes Marsakeis (Mar Serkiyas), whieh is synonymous with the convent of St. Sergius, an being situate on the point of the high mountain above St. Antony Casieeh (Cassiyah), "under which is the pleasant village of Aden." In another place he describes himself as retracing his footsteps from Kanubin to Aden, and coming thence to the convent of the Latin Carmelite fathers, called St. Sergius

We have mach pleasure in giving still furt her completeness to this briof account of the collars of Lebanon, by a marrative of a visit made to them by the Rev. Joln Hoskyns Abrahall, accompanied by $n$ friend, in the wister scason; a feat that wo have never heard of as being before accomplished, being at at time when the worthy Maronite Monk, who is commissioned by his brethren as the custodime of the ancrod grove, retires to the shelter of his convent, and when mountains, hills, nud valleys aro aliko clad in a deep, and uniform covering of snow. The nutloor has, it will be observed, only enumented tho trees in one gromp, not those of nll the nine groups as distinguished by Dr. Hooker's party.

OVER LEBANON AND BACK IN TIE SNOW.

By the Rew. Joun Moskyns Amahall, M.A.

Is the early purt of Fehruary, 1853, we left Beyrut for Damaseus, through the valley of Balbec, Lebmon being on our left. A loug lay's ride brought us to a little group of huts, shaped like beohives. Thero we pitched our tent for the uight, this being the point from which Lebmon was most accersilile, if une wished to ohtain a view of the celars. They stool, we wero informed, sume four thousund feot below the other side of tho ridge that rose above as. To seo them vuly was all we then contemplated. At this season no one attempts to visit them by surmounting the rilge for that purpose, as the depth of the suow is great no less than four thonsand fect below the summit. Indeed, from even the ascent of tho mountain were we dissuailell ly our thagoman, Koni, whou we had brought from Cairo. My companion had been lost on ono oecasion in the Litule Desert ly going too hir away from our cavideade; beniles, the expedition was a hazardous one. At this time of the year not only is the mountuin corered with suow, but snow-storms are frequent, nul gather very specdily. Kimi assured us we shoult harvily tind a guide in tho village who would venture to atcompany us, After somo search a mometain guide was fomul, who escortel tourists up in summer time. He was very reluctant; he spuke of the depth of the now, the risk of show-storms, and the long time required for the purpowe, as, mider the most favourable circuustances, the experlition could not bo accomplished at this season by the light of one day. We determinei, however, to attempt it, if the morming poved promising. It did-or rather, probably, "the wish was fither to the thought," for Komi was nat so sanguine. So bent wero we on the ascent, that we awoke before the men, whom we hall brought from Jernsalem to attend to our howes. The gride in the course made his appearane; he wore a very long fice, Komi, with a kind of protest, haoded us over to his charge; so, after a hurried hreak tast, wo started on our homes. It was about 7 viclock, asm. ; day was somin to duwn. Our course, at tirst, was a tortnous path through a womed swamp; this lasted somo miles, as the thools werr out. Tho snow that hal fullen inring the winter had melted, and turned the comery lying at the fiot of the mountain range

[^10]intur a morass, which extended some three or four miles; in some purts the water was out in lake-like sheots. Eventually, we emerged trom this low country, and gradually asceoded through a forest of stuated oaks till we renehed the line of snow, said to be then four thousand feet below the top of the saldellemack ridge. Iere wo were obliged to leave our horses, not only on account of the snow, lint alsn from the steepvess of the momatain. The viilage guido alome accompanied us firthor. We soon found the snow becoming deeper. We had a treadmill-like task-the undertaking, in fact, promised to ho a serions onc. We lowked at each other sonewhat haukly, mul a glance at the guido's face did not reassure us. By diut, however, of hard and silent phoughing throngh the kott show, the lepth of which contimally inereasel, we pushed on. Oceasiounlly we stumbled neross some jagged roek that cropped out; we then would fall wer on cur noses, and leavo on the yielding materinh rude casts of our countemances mul our boties. The guide took the work more leisurely, and hung behind, satisfied with kerping us in sight. He had uo idea of our going leyoul the tip, of the ridge. Ile thought wo should be contented with a distant view of the eedars from above, nur ilreamed of our troubling omselves with desoonding throngh four thousinul fet of deep snow fir a closer acemintance. On our renching the summit they appured so insignifient, that wo thought wo had really, as far as they were concerned, misspent our toil, if this was all we were to see of them. They looked like a herd of eattle crouehing in the suow. Recovering by alegrees from our fatigue, becoming invigonated lyy the momentin breeze, and reflecting how much the apparent insignificance of their size must be dhe to their great distance below hes, we determined to descemal to them; memenhile, we enjoyed the magnificent view. Allowing for the difference of sensons, it tully bore out the deseription given of it hy Professon' Stniley in his ndmirnble work on Sinai and Prestine. All the surromading heights were matherl with show, 'This, however, as it bronght out in all tho bolder reliet the verdure below, by no means lessened the bevuty mad grament of tho lambeape. Wo hand tensted our eyes on the scene nud decided on a visit to the cedars, when the gude joined ns, We made known to him our intention. On finding portestation and deprecation of no avail he let us po, but dedined to necompuny us; supposing we should have him insight ull tho time, wo did not care ubout his
the sacred grove, nt, and when mounelad in a deep and uthor lans, it will be es in one group, not is distinguished by some three or four as out in lake-like om this low comntry, a forest of struted ow, said to be then of the saddle-buck eave our horses, not also from the strep: guido nlone aceumthe snow becouing ctask-the under1 serious one. We laukly, mul a glance ns. Dy diut, howig through the sott nally inereased, we mbled neross some hen would fall nver Hing materinal ruke bodies. Tho guide hung behind, satix-- hat no ideat of our e. He thought we view of the cerlurs troubling ourselves msimil fret of deep n our reaching the nt, that we thought roncremed, misspunt see of them. They ching in the snew. fitigue, becouning and rythecting how their size must he 4, we determined to njoyed the mannifirence of sensons, it of it by Protiessor inai and Prulestine. nantled with snow. in all tho bolder acans lessemed the detape. We hat and deeided on a do jnined us. Wo $U_{n}$ finding pro. il he let us go, hat ng we should have not caro nbout his company. We soon found agnin that we almost had reason to repent of our undertaking. The snow was considerably deeper on this side, and the mountain steep was hroken into abrupt undulations, so wo repeatedly lost sight of the guide ; indeed, we scarce saw him the wholo time, and wo might have perished in the snew bufore he nould lie expected to seek for us and rescene ns. Another cause of danger arose ns wo approsched the oedars. Tho sky suddenly became overcast. It was clear that a storm was brewing.

We reoellected the gathering storm viewed by the Hebrew prophet from Monat Carmel, nnd the awful circumstanees that precedod $i t$, the thrilling tale of the appeals to Baal and Jehovuh, and the solemnly impressive miracle that followed. We were veminded loow soon "the heaven was black with olouds and wind, and there was a great rain." It was not till we were within about a furlong of the eedars that they began to swell into their real proportions; and it was only whon standing under them that we became fully impressed with their grandeur, and with the nndoubtedty wast antiquity of about a dozen of their number. The girth of one of these aucients proved, on mensurement, to be five times as much as the taller of ass, whose beight was five feot ten and a half inches, could span with fully extended arms. This girth extended some considerable way $\mathrm{p} p$ the tree. After taking a hasty survey of the trees, wo soarehel some ten minutes for a conc. Only one conld we find perfect. It was about the sizo of a large duck's egg. The rest were more or less in in state of decay, and senttered about in fragments. From their appearance one would have snpposed them to dinve been gnawed to picces by squirrels, The ground beareath the trees was earpeted with them, and entirely free from snow. We conld only utford a quarter of an hour for our stay among them. On a hasty and rough estimation, we made them out to be about a hundred. All wero fine trees, but the majoxity were not to be compared with the dozen veterans.

We have spoken of liffieulties, hat the brumt of the struggle lay in the returu to the top of the ridge. Thinking it the easier method, we retraced our way on our old footsteps; but thereby we simk down all the deeper in tho snow. This was especially trying to the shorter of us. In his haste, he, by mistuke, stepped into the track of his taller companion, and got fsirly stack in the snow. His foet not touching the ground, and his body resting on the pyramid of suow between, he looked as if he were astride on a jolting white ass. The longer-leggell, not being subject to this uneomfortable process, foma the asoent less difficult. Every time ho looked behind him, he anw his friend cither astride, as has been mentioned, in a compratively secure position, or clse in the act of losing his equipoiso by striving with one leg to get a footing in the oavity, and thereby $a$ purchase for $a$ fresh start. The taller of comse stopped oceasionally, to give the shorter traveller time to overtnke hin. But, what with the gathering storn, and the short space of daylight left, it was absolutely necessary that we should push on as fast ns possible. Hence, though it seemed hard, the taller felt obliged to start ngain, as soon as he had entioed his coturade on by slackening hiv own prace. We at length reached the top of the ridge. So sensible were we of the danger we had escaperl, it fresh fall of snow hnving alrendy begnu, that we spont:meously uttered an exclamution of thanks to lrovidence.
We now, accompnaied by the guide, descended through tho fulling aud fallen as:~w to the spot wher: we had left our horses. It was quite dark when we reaohed it. The disagreeables of the joumey were not over. In retraeing our way through the wooded swamp, the guide was ropeatedly at fault. What by daylight and in summer-time would lave taken but half an hour, was now a work of two hours. Meanwhile, ton, wo feared we might be going in n wrong direction. It was with no little joy that we boheld twinkling lights in tho distance, unt, ns we drew nearor, beard the burking of the dogs, and then the buzz of human voices. The matives thad been for some time looking out for us, and had felt most nuxions for onr safoty. Komi at their head. they received us with great wurmth, embracing the guide, and congratulating us nt having escupeel from a serious dauger. Doubtless we had. It wna ns well, thongh, that we made the expedition on that day. Dariug the tollowing night and the whole of the next hay; the wind und min, which hat eommenced rome time betow our retum, $n$ wept incossantly down the valher. We had to rini the grantlet throigh it, an we pushed on to the ruins of Bualbee.

THE DRUSES OF MOUNT LEBANON.

Mounp Lemanon goutit ov tife Cemare-Mountaing and Valdeva of the Druses - I'rodhall sernghy-Vahous Movmtatn Rodtes-Dahe ki. Kamah-Camital ov the Dudsum-Palaee at liresidin-Pmecety Fammi op Surnab-Wahs of tife Dhubes againet tue liogptiang -Rebet againat the Tuhke - Shehihes afavid by the Enohish Consul-lhbigion and Habits and Manneis of the Duushs.
The courre of Mount Iebancri firon Jebel Mmimel, which rises up to the southward of the monntain reoess in whioh are the celebrated codurs, is rather wost of south as far as the eountry of the Druses, nud it shows ntintervaln the elevated peaks of Jebel Sanin, Jebel Rhuan, and Jebel Jhuruk. 'I'ho range is aluost entirely compused of masses of limestome, which rise nlmontly from the valley of Zahlo and bhalbee on the matern side, whilat on the western there is a mecession of lower mountains forming woodmi basins and rich valleys which extead from thenco down to the seareonst. As the erests of this part of the great range are eowered with purpetual snow, they must have nat chewation of more thin 7,000 feet; on their steep wides aro torests of pines, oaks, mad other timber, while at intervals we plimtutions of mulberties, und grain iv cultivated on a shecession of hariow terraces supported by stone walls.

In certain phaces these little gardens completely en-

druses at dar el kamar.

eircle the mountaiu hasins for which this purt of Syria is нo remarkable, giving to them, in consequenes, the appearance of gigantio amphithentres, of which the scattereal flat-ryofed eolinges seem to form sopurations between suecessivo rows of seats, Rich mad varied securry of this kind, interspersed with towns, villuges, mansions, aud convents, und vineyurds, previils on the western slopes of the principal chains, which, leaving the country of the Maronites north of the parallel of Beyrut, becomes, south of the same parallel, within the tenure and jurisdiction of the Druses, and is hence signiticantly known as the "Jebel el Deruz."

The Druses inhabit many mountain districts in Syria; the threo prineipal centres of population are, however, the Jebel el Deruz or Drus, in whieh are the distriets of esh Shuf, Al Tafakh, Al Shumar, and thirteen others enumerated by Burekhardt (Travels in Syria, p.p.214, 305). Robinson, however, simply distinguishes the districts as of el Ghurb, el Jurd, el Arkub, el Manasiz, and el Shuf. The sccond eentre is the Jebel es Sheikh or Mount Hermon, commecterl with which are Rasheiya and Hasbeiya, nod the third the Hauran, where, according to Mr. Porter, the most powerful sheikhs have taken up their aborle: Shuhba and Suweidiyah having been for a long time the residence of the prineely family of Shehab. Advancing from the sea-shore into the first-mentioned district, in some places luge masses rise abruptly from the veryenge of the sea, whilst in others they gradually recede from it, showing peak above peak, and forming in ecrtain places rocky basins or amplitheatres, on whose sides are villages and eultivated termees shated by lotty pines in cedius, with not unfrequently a convent or monastery above, overlooking the whole.

Towards the interior the slopes are generally formed by a suceession of hogr'-back ridges, sepurated by deep gorges or ravines, with walnut trees on the lower slopes; and abont midway are villages and lamets surrounded with terraces, on which are grown eotton and hemp, besides grapes, olives, mubberries, and other fruits; higher up are forests of pine; and on the summits a profusion of myrtle, with usually t village, adjoining whieh is either a convent or an emir's serai palace or mansion.

But occasionally the scenery is of a higher east ; a deep and wide gorge terminating in an auphitheatre of valleys and rifges, studded with villages. From the ruined Ionic temple at Dar of Kalah, for instanee, the view presents a great amphitheatre eoverel with terraces, ainidst which forty-tive Druse villages may be counted, in addition to Mar Khana, and several other convents, with the serai of Ras el Mittan; while boyond all are the snow-elad peaks and furmowed sides of Jebel Riahan and Sanin.

No sooner has one narrow ridge in this singular country been gained than nother valley or muphitheatre appears, teeming, like the preceding, with villages, to reach some of which, although at short direct distances, $n$ whole day is frequently eonsumed in asceuding and desceudiog from one village to another by zig-zag juths or steps.

It in just upon one of these bohl ridges or maritine spurs of Mount I، dbnon-ridges which separato the mountain lrasins, just us in the country of the Maronites, into so muny small distriets - that Dar el Kamar, the capital of the Druses, is situnted. The particular rilge in question is one of two that riso ur between the valleys of the ancient 'Tamyms to the north, and that of the Bostrenns to the sonth. Dar el Kimmar crown the northorly riblge ja the diatrict emfled of Marasif, dudwidn mad the Mramat exh Shat-a holy manis mimenhmorrown the sontherly ridgat in the distriet of eshastort.

The disuriet in 'ruestion also lies a little to the northenstward of Sidum, "town which, if not now eomparable w the leuyal City which furnished its quota ol' the Phonician aud Syrian flect for the invasion of Greece ${ }^{1}$; yet, as one of the ports of Damascus, and an ontlet tor the produce of the neighbouring monntain districts, has some commerce ; silk, eotton, oil, com, and fruits being exported from thence, whilst almost every vestige of trade has fled from the rival eity of Tyre.

Proceeding eastward from Sidon, we have first the eonvent of Mar Iliyas, or Elias, and to the northward tho villa of Jun, where resided Lady Hester Stanhope, and where Lamartine visited her ladyship, and penned no suall amount of absurdities in conneetion with the said visit. Dar el Kamar is about twelve miles northeastward of Jun on the enstern side of the prineipal valley in this part of the chain. A horse track-that is to say, a highway in Lehanon-runs from Beyrut to Dar el Kimar and Beteddin, the palace of the ecle. bated Emir Reshir, and there divides into two mule tracks, one of which erosses the mountains near the head of the Fostrenus, and through the main ehain itsalf descending into the valliy of the Litany, or Leontes, at Jubb Jenia. The other gocs by Bikkin and Jun to Suida or Sidon. There is also a short ent from Beterdin to the valley of the Bostremes by Judcidah, and this rond is prolonged by Badram across the Lebanou, the valley of the Leontes, and Anti Lelanom to Rasheiya and Damensens. It is one of the " highways" of the country.

Another, and still more interesting road, as that most favoured by the Crusalers of old, fullows the northern tributary to the Bostrenus, crosses a mountain ridge at the castle of Niha, a most pieturespue place, with a noigh houring eomsent, surmamed of the apricots, "Deir Mishmushy," erosses the southerly trihutnry to the Bostrenus to Jezzin, thence by Kafr Huneh to the renowned belfort, now Kalah esh Shukif, which conmands the ancient hridge and pass of tho Litany, now Tisr Burghuz, and whence rouls diverge to all the comitry lyyemi.

Dur el Kamar is varionsly written by tourists, Deir el Knmmuh (Chesncy), Deir el Kam (Lorter), and indead in a diffrent mamer by nently every triveller and tourist. Yet Deir and Dar aro two very distinct words, mad known us such from the most remote regions in which tho Arabie hugnuge is spoken.

Dat ol Kinmar contnins abont 8,000 Drose and Maronito inbabitants, two Maronite and as many Melchite churches, with nearly nineteen hunired substantially-built dwellings, which form a suceession of terraces and a number of marrow strects. In the upper part of the town there is a well-supllied bazaar, displaying the rich abhas or cloak, interwoven with gold or silver threads, for the mannfacture of whieh it is celobrated.

On still higher gromml, forming a sejarato hill, or rather shoulder, stands the groat pile of huiding once the serni or palace of the Enir. Beshir. T'uraces sown with eorn, or on which are planted fruit-trees, particularly the raulberry, extend for somo lit.tlo distance, chiclly to the eastwnel of the town; and in different mots aromid the latter, there are many segulehres of 10 feet squate, mal amost every Chastian timily lats one whish is wallal up uft 1 each inteliment.

Amounthig to 300 vessels. Herof, hib, vil, gap. isxsix.

Beteddin or Bteddin of Robinson, the walled palaee of the Emir Beshir, is a little way south-castward, on the southern side of the valley, and nerrly on the same level : it occupies the crest of an isolated sugar-loaf hill, whose slopes are covered by termeed gardens, supported by walls, forming a succession of circles from the base almost to the summit ; through these, by means of a flight of steep steps, there is an ascent from the valley to the palnce. A castellated entrance leads into an outer cou't ot the latter, romed which aro arcades, partly used as stables, and partly by the guatds and other attendants; on the western sido throre $i s$ it Samecnic archway lending into a second court; and beyond is a third court, which is that of the harem. The second count is in the eastern style, having in the centre a large marble fountain, prettily shateth with orange-trees; and hround it are the church and principal apartments, forming several suites. The rooms are, however, it is almost needless to say, very different to anything associated with our ideas of a palace ; but the deficiency in this respect is more than compensated by the wide and striking scenery presented from the terraces of tho buibling. Bencati is a deep and winding valley, which at first presents, on one mide, termed gardens, trees and shmbs, with bold rocks beyoul; and on the oppossite side is the town, bneked by hight and ruggel monntaias, throngh an oponing of which the sea is visible in the distance.

The Druses or Druzes (ed Derma, in the singular of Derazy) used to abioy a kind of republican indepandence under their sheikhs er horoditary chieftains, chiof among whom was the sheikh heshir Shehah in the region now in question. His eontt and attendance have been pieturespuly deseribed by a great momber of tourists of former times. 'I'la late massacres ocenrring sinee cisilised liuropo has taken in deener interest in Oriental mathers has led to the rule of the Shwikhas being superseded, first by French oectpation, and then atter. wards by that of the Oammlis.
The princely fanily of shehab, from whom Shubbat in the lhmaras derives its name, has tor many veas been one of the most celehated in Syria, and it is said to dorive its origin irom the anciont tribe of the Koreinh, its members thus chaming relationship with the Prophet, the of their ancestern rmigrated abent the seventh century fomm ladramant on the sontherin sheres of Ataitiv, and took ip, his residence at Shahba. There his descematants momined, with their propurty and dependente, till the twelfth century, when during the war of Nut-ed-bin "lieht of fitith" and salalied-1)in "work of fath" (the Nom. redulin and sidarlin of history and romance) they resolved to aseafer from their adopted city, where they were expersed for the depmedations of the eontembing parties, nind to take up their uhbodo amid tho lastuesses of' Lelanom. 'they comsernently set ont in regnlan' they wero ntacked hy the Fmank garrison of that stronghohd, und invinis sigmally defeated them, they took buscession of the eastle and have ever since retained it. Tho pesent Emir, Sayiled-lins, of Inableign, is now the heml of the honse; the Finuip Effendi, of Itmaneiyn, is mothere seion of it ; and the celehnated Bmir Hoshir Shohals, the formere prwortid chief of Tare el-Kımar, was only a junioe member of the mame fianily.

One of the most remmekatile episotes in the history of tho Druses is the resistance they bumbe the the tymany of Ibrahim Pasha, and his Egrptians, in their ortion of Syria.
In the yeur 1839, the pasha, making a second concription, demamied a levy of one hundred and seventy: five men from the Droses of the Haturnu. Sherif Pashat, the civil governor of Damascus. summoned Sheikh Hamblan, at that time prince of the Druses, to press the levy. The prinee replied, that if they met the demands of Ibrahim I'a, ha, of a secont conscripptien, they, as the settled enltivators ot the iand, wond have no more ablo-boulied men to resiat the incessant attacks of the Arabs. The objections of the prince were, however, not admitted, and four hmmed horsemen were sent to Um esh Zatitum, or the "mother of olives," an important village on the frontion of the Lej:l, where they were put to death vith the exception ot their leader. The Druses then withelrew into the almost inaceessible regions of the Leja, ant bid definnce to the Egyptians.

Mahamathe Pasha, the general of divisiom, and Achmet ber, brigadiar, wore sent with the first regiment of the guad, and the seeond and eighteenth of the line, to chastise the lifunaites. They entered the Laja, met ting but little opposition, and that only from a few markmen, who like the Parthians of odd, retreated before them, firing. The tactics of the Druses were to draw tho Egyptians into the worst fastmesses of this rocky region, and so well ilid they succed, that, having got Mnhammal Pasha, with the guarls, as far as AD,Ekadem, they there surrounted him, and killed the general and Yakub Buy, the colonel of the regiment, the soldiors taking light, and leaving mumbers of thend on the ground.

Ihrahim Bashat at once orlored the second regiment of the guad to matreh from 1 omm the tourth of the line from Aleppe, and the fourterentl, trom Antioch, to mencre this aleteat, but the news of the melvance of the Osmanlis neross Taurus, towarls Nizils, prevented his gning himself; he stopped at Aleplu, ant des. patched Aelmet P'aslia Morekly with horsixth regiment of intantry, the ninth of eavalere two mens, and font to five huniberl horsemen. The sane thing happread on this ans on tho previons accasion. The Egyptimes insimed, the brises retreating, firing lefiore them, till at length they emme to : wall of rocks, sume two miles in extent, crowning the crest of hills, to which the 'Torres Vellens wonll have been a phathing. 'Ihro.. times were the Eqsptians led to the assublt, and is often repmised. tili the Druses, seecing their numbers thimed, mul thoir ranks discommged, and in disomber, rusland past their lines upon them, putting them to flight, killing two generils, one colonel, one licutonamecolonel, siven eommamlants (bimbashi), twenty eaptains, and upwads of thee thonsam soldiers, and womding two thonsmi, hasides raptominut the two gins, six humdred muskets, fifty camels litlen with prowter :and the whole baggage ot the Figpti:n loree.

Ibrahim Pasha, comavelled ly Sulaman Pashat, adopted a new phat, aftor this most signal reverse, for subjugating these have momntaners, the Lequ, like many other Syman listricts, has to Jopend for its suphily of water, in tho dry sason, ubun artificial reseroits ent in tho rock. It was revolved to till thene if with stones, and several regiments were emfhyend in this unwarlike procecding. The Denses lefembed their birkets, as they are ealled, with obstinate untom, but one altor anotber they were taken, and filled in detail. 'lhey had no altermative then left them but to sulmit or to emigrate: they preterred the hatter, and sought sheltur in tho Jebel Sluikh, between IFashaya mud Rashaya, in the Anti-Lehmon.

Previous to the war in which the British nava! furces combined by sea and by land with the Osmanhis to (x]nd the Egyptians from Syria, Mr. Wood hat been sent tor effeet an alliance with the revoltel Druses, and for which exertions he was rewarded with the consulato of Damascus. Alter the abjects of tho coalition had been obtained, however, the Druses found that in weleoming the soldiers of Goneral Joomus they had only chamged masters, and they mee more withdrew into the Lija in "pren revolt. The newly appointed Turkish Pashat of Wamaseus was tervitiel at the alternative presented to him of attacking with three thousand nurn-all he hatl at his disand that in a comntry where, with only one thomsand men, they had defeated the admirable trons of Ibrahim Panha, wo they appaled to, Mr. Wroad to intercede. Mr: Wood consentel to da so, hat anly upon the most solemn promises of an amosty. This was eonected, and tho Emir Assaad Shuhah, Sheikh the hoopitality of the British emsulate. After the lajes of two months, it firman arrived from Constantinople to put all the brue chicfs to death, and to seme their heads to the eapital.
The day atter this tirmam arrived, the pashis sectetary cule tu the consulate, and inguirel, with intinito suavity of mamer, why the sheikhs did not como to the pralice and take al pipe and a enp of eolleo ? Vinsut acerpted the invitation, wad hat no somen mothed tho palace than he was arrestell. Mr. Wood at oneo went nuld ramimed Ali and Achnet lashas-the civil and military governors-ot their express and solemu pro. mises. It was, howser, in vain : the hatal timan was produced in reply. Mr. Wood justly remarked upan this, that if the lorte had been luyally informed of the true character of the transaction, it would never hase issucel such a firman. Aftio a diseussion that hasted several hours, Ahr. Woul, finding he could not prevail, and being tuld that a mattalion of the Nizan would be sent to the consulate to tetch the chiefs, prepured to withlaw, deelining that he would defend tho homour and inviohability of the eomsulate to the hast, and that not a Druse chirif should he removed so hang athe was alive The Thrkish J'ashas, hearing this, at luggth gave way, and the lives of the Dritse sheikhs were savel by the resolution of the British consul. Bere since this, this warlike cate of monataners has domed apon the buglish as peenliarly their friends-their fritemis whon assailen ly thratim lasha, mod equally their friemss when than lives and libarties were threatened liy the Tumbs. It is much to be regretted, therefine, that they shomb have heen involved in the late internerine guarels with the Manouites, fimented by foreign intluence, mul still more so that they shomh have bren implieateal in the atrombons massarese comnmittell by the fanaticisin of tho Noslems of Dimasens mad ather phaers.

This was not, inderd, the last time that the liritish consul at Damasens hat to interfero in belall of the Drases. The defeat of the 'Torkish troops in the war of 18 sis again led the giverument to seek the intercussion of the English consul, but, on this weeasion, maly after the representatives of other Europem nations had voluntecred their serviess and failed. Mr. Wood arranged a meeting with Sheikh Sayyid Jimblat, at that time the most powerful and influential of all the Druse chicfs, mat, in company with him, proceeled first to Ellha nud thence to Buss el Mariry. At this hatter phace, the shoikhs of the Hauran all assembled to receive the propposints of the Porte, and discuss the terms of peace. It was a stomy seeno ; and more than once a peace congress was well-nigh ehangel into a fierce battlo. The fanatical Moslems feared, or pretended to fear, treaehery on the part of Mr. Wool and Sayyid lley, und onee the ery was raised to pull down the houso in whieh they were sitting. The proud Drase chicf could ill brook such insults, and hanghtily stated that if he hat anticipated such insolence, he womld have brought from his mativo mountains such a foree as would have effectually prevented its reeurrence for the luture. In fact, it was only the smalluess of his retinue-about one hundred and tifty men-that prevented him from taking instantaneous revenge. Still, notwithstanding such threats and insinuntions on the spot, and the no less dingerons intrigues of dixappointed censuls in Damaseus, Mr. Woon, with his usimal ability, succeeded in opening up eommmications, which secured peace till the late outbreak.
'The sketch at page 153 gives a pieturespue ider of the assenbling of these warrior mountaincers at Dar el Kmarr, under the appent of their prineely chieftein, whose intluenee with the people is no less in the present day that it was when they wrested Hasheiga from the Frankish erusuders.

It is curious that mo satisfactory ineount has yet leeng given of the religion of the Druses. De Sacy, the well known Oriental soholar has written a wirk (in this sulbject, "Lixpose de la Religion des Druzes, fec., 2 tom., Paris, 1838." Niebohr has ventilated the suljeet in his Reiseleschr, ii., p. 428, et seq. Volney, the seeprie, in his Voyay', ii., 1. 37, et seq., wi. 1 Burkhirlt in his Travels, pI. 193, 205, and several edneated Syrims have nided modern tomists in eliminating facts without, loweser, by any means makins the matter perfeetly clear. Their books have akio been seizel, as in the insurrection of 1838 by the Egyptimes, and it was from ono of these that De Siacy compited his work, others are also said to have bern furchased hy the missionaries of Beyrat, but with un better menults.

Dr. Rolinsm says of them that they appar to have sprung up out of one of the many Muhanmadan sects (the Kinmethians) of the eenturies before the ('rusades; and the insane Hakim, Khalif of Egypt, is regarienlas thoir deity. Burckharlt suin on the contrury that Islanism was first introduced among them by Lakim, in 1030; and when in public they perfiom its riles, lout in privite it is otherwise, and they are said to nbhor all religions except their own. Genemal Chenney says they have a priesthood, of whieh the first chass is the Akkal, or initintel, who have charge of the schools, and perfirm "eortain unknown eervmonies" "rery Thursday, in the elosed and guarled omtories. the wimen being purt of the assenblages. It is alsi said that in order the moro eflectunlly to coneeal their religions opinions, they, on being questioned concerning them, profess to bo of tho same faith as the inguirer, whether he he Christian, or Muslim, or P'ugat. Benjumin of Thuleh deseribed them simply as heathens nul mbelievers, who contess no religion. (By A.
Assher, vol. i. 1., 61.)
ices and failed. $M$. eikh Sayyid Jimblat and influential of all with him, proceeded el Hariry, At this cutan all assembled rte, and diseuss the y sceno ; athl more -nigh ehnuged into a lems feared, or propart of Mr. Woorl y was raised to pull e sitting. The proud asults, and haughtily o such insolcuee, he ve mountains such a ented its reeurrence mly the smallness ut' anel tifty men-that antancous revenge. and insinuations on ans intrigues of disMr. Woorl, with his up eommanieations, atbreak.
pleturespue idea of ountaincers at Ditr ir princely chicottain, oo less in the prescht IIasbeiya from the ory accomit has yet Druses. De Su凹, has written a work nion des Druzes, sc., lias ventilated the 28, re siq. Volney, 37, et seq., in. 33, 205, and several ern tourists in eli$y$ any means making ir books have aloo on of 1838 hy the these that De sacy said to havo bec'l Beyrut, but with 16 they appear to have Muhatmmalan seets before the d'risudes; bgypt, is regarded as the contriny that og them by IGakim, y pertorm its rites, and they aro said neir own. (ieneral sd, of whiel the tirst tho lave eharge of known cercmonies" guareled oratories, nblage. It is ulso tlly to eonecal their juestioned conerrnsame faith as thi Muslim, or Pagun. simply us henthens religion, (By A.

They are said, however, to keep a register of births, and that they cannot disinherit their children. They do not puactise circumcision, neither alo they fast or priy, but they belicvo in the transmigration of sonls; moroover, they divorce on the slightest occasion; they drink wine, ent pork, and marry $n$ sister; none of which practices would be followerl, if their religion had been founded on that of Muhammand. It is probable that its origin must le sought for in the ancient practises of the Ilimyaritie Sabems of Hadramment, from which country they came originally, mather than $f_{f}$ 's those of the ancient Samaritans, with whom some recently attempted to establish their anaingy,
-. © before sern that, owing to the nlselee: of
$\because$ and the deptle of the valleys in the Druse dists. .. Lehanon, the villiges aro tomed usually about $\mathrm{m}_{2}$. way ont the slopes of successivo ridges, along which rows of honses and mulbery terraees rise one above another, like the steps of a gigantic amphitheatic.
Tho number of houses in the villages varies in general from twenty or thirty to abont a hundred, but some eontain nearly form hundred, bexides the serai ot their ehief. The latter is always a more or less extomsive pile of buildings, usually situated on tho most commanding gromul, and eontainiug two or even three generations of the family, with suitable apartments built roumd ; min outer and an inner court, the latter genemally oecupying a higher level.

Tho ordinary houses are comfortable, being substantially hailt of stone, und almest ulways whitewasied. They seldom contain more than one apartment, with the addition of a kimal of areade or else a vemandal eovering the door, which not unfreguently is the only aperture in the buikling. A tire-phace in the centre, $n$ mised divan on one side, and several enphoards recessed in the walls, constitute the furniture of the interior, hat a terracel roof, shaded by mulherry and jomegramate trees, solves as asceonll room, and is tho sleeping place in summer, as well an the chief resurt of the timaly ; pussengers also ocenpy it accasionally, fir on the mot of one house is the orlinary passage to that of a hie 'er building, tho terraces are common to all persons, but a stranger must not eater the ilwelling itself, Arudic is the langonge spoken.

Intient industry, in whieh the females largely share, determined valour, extrene pride of birth, hospitality, extending to the watlinching protection of strangers, deadly fends among themselves, an aheme of respect for the thes of blood, the dromd of a publie insult, and exceding love of their romantie conntry, are somo of , the leading characteristics of these mountaincers.

All thint such a race revilly wants is a fair market for tleir silk, fruit, grain, and other produce, protection to their landed jroperty, or to be allowed to vindiate their rights when assailed by Turks, Arabs, or Maronites themselyes, relief fivom restraint, which their lunghty clamish spirit rebels against more thm anything else, nud of which one of the worst forms is eonseription; and indemaity from that extortion to whieh they have ever been subjected, when the transaction of husiness emries them to the ports or large towns in the hands of the Trurks. This is asking a great deal as tiur as restraint is coneerned, but it is a question, if mere justice were remlered to them, if they woull not submit to a fair umount of taxation and conseription without a murmur. They did not break out into rebellion ugainst the Egyptims till conscription was pushed to an unendumble extent, and as tu their sad affrays with the Maronites, it would be a long tale to tell of the hereditary disputes, bickerings, and blood-fends-the: Maronites pushed on by European powers-that have grown up into such disastrous antagonism. The Christinus have, under the now arrangement, their own governor or ruler, the Druses and Nuhammadaus theirs; mud it is to be hoper that hostilities will ceast, and the two peoples will live together in peace and halmony.
M. Vunde Velde, looked upon as au Englishmen, was most hospitably treated and feasted by the Drusiss when ir their eountry, yet he sets the opinion of Christian natives againse tho evidener of his own seuses when he says, "I do not at all wish to decery the virtue of hospitality, an exercised hy the Dusers; but from some hints dropped by William's father and Mr. Wortabet on this point, I have the impression that their special love for the English is not quite disinterested; these two gentlemen being residents in the comutry must know them well." Promaps, thus murowly inquired into, threre is no such thing as utterly disinterested internatioual loves or hatreds.

In white follows, M. Van di. Velde is, however, especially entitled to a licaring, inammed as he is by his origin to a ecreain extent removed trom the intlueners which actuate other prarties :-
"Not that I shall venture to determine exactly bow far the warlike Druse, the ehild of indepentener, sympathises with the originality of the English mational elaracter, as tar as it is displayed by linitish travellers in Palestine; nor that I overlooked the moral influence exercised on this people by the American missionaries (who are looked upon by tho Druses in the same light is the English), in ;roof of which influence an ocensional convert from among them is senn; but it is well known that for many years the Duses have sought the alliance of the Enoflish, in opposition to the union of the Greek Christians w... Russia, and of the Maronites with France. (I'his is tho Syrian Question divested of all subterfuge.)
 beome greater in the dominions of the Sultan, this party spirit has developel more strongly; while the Druses, veeing the progress male by I'rotestant or Evangelical Christianity in Symia, lave not been slow in openly showing their prefermee fin the lrotestant natives. A matural emsernence of this is, that you unet with great eliversity of opinion among the difierent writers who have ipolen of the Lebanon popnlation.
"Freuch travellers jaint the Dreses in the blackest colours, while they attibute to thi Marouites, as their brothren in the Roman Catholie taith, not a few good qualities. English visitors, on the eontury, are not free firon prejulice in the way in which they view the vies of the Maronites, while they are less disposed to acknowledgo tha hyjuerisy of tho Druses, which is, promps, their greatest viee, and is, alas! comnted by themselves as in morit. From the little experionee I have had as regards both Druses amd Maronites, it seems to mo that travellers in Palestine and Syria have good reason to think lightly of both."

This is so far quite correct, and it is probable that there is little to choose between Ansmians, Ismaclians, Maronites, Greek Christinns, Druses, Arubs, or Thuks; but it is sutheient that any European power gains by the ascendincy of one of the numerous znees that rule or dwell in Lebanon, that the spirit of antagonism, founded on the mantenance of the balance of power, should to aroused, It is admitted by M. Van de Velde, that the Russians have religious allies in the Syrians of the Greek Chireh, and the Fromeh in the Maronites; it is, therefive, no more to he wondered at that the Druses flould scels alliance with Englamel, than it is that England, having an interest in the welfare of the country, as well as in the balanee of power, avails itself of is friendship founded upon mutual political interest. Aecording to M. Van de Velde, the greatest vice of the Druses is hypoerisy, but it is admitted, on the other hand, that they possess many noble virtues, as courage, hospitality, fidelity, family pride, love of independence, and the spirit of national honoms, to an extent not to be met with in any uther tribo in the Iebanon.

MENICO AND TIIE MESICLINS.

WITII AN ACCOUNT OF ASCENTS OF THE PEAK゙ OF POPOCATEPETL AND ORIZAVA.
I.

Vera Crez and sax tean he Tlef-horaes and la-hamtanjs-Rodds to the Intehion-Reghon of Pibin Fobests - strascans on Prahmes - - lichas of Oldes 'fime - Hizion of Fonests - Alpine on Highlasi) Histricts-fine Forests-hame op alif Vigetation l'lateacs on Thule Lisds of Mrivico - Curiots (actuses.
Tue pupular mind satisfies itself with there vary genemal idens in reference to Mexjer: first, that it in it rast and fertile territory, more particulirly remamablo for its romatic sednery, as also for its dangers and in-convenimers-hoth natural ind artiticial-from storms, banditif, and vile hostelries; secondly, that it hatd an ancient history, of which very little is known, save that its ollder inhabitants: left some magnificent monnmonts of induatry, and many more of a grotestue chat racter, behind them; and, thirlly, that as a Somish vicurovaly, or a spmish repultic, its presut inhabitants lave inherited the pride and vices of the mother comery, have superadded to them those of a tropical climate, and that the vices of the peophe having extended to its rulers, the whole nation is now in at state of :anarchy and disorganisation.

And no womber that the $p^{\prime \prime}$ mular mind shomh be satistied with such crule and imperfect ileas, when we consider that prea ims to the publieations of our awn native historian, the elogat and learned hobertson, little more was known of this and the ofther Spansis colonies than the histary of their diseovery and emo Iluest ; and even the information adinded hy Robeetson was, till the days of Preseott, most seanty and imperficet. Fur two handred years, with the exception of Ullon's trawels, and the narmatives of hongore and Condamine, no satisfactory inteligence had been emmmonicated to the world relating to my of the principal Spmish settlements. It was not till $s$ min abaudoned the system of secrecy and eoncenlment, and threw upen the trallo to other mations, that truvellers appeared, such as Molina, Alcedo, Estalla, 1)epons, Antillon, and, abnve all, Humboldt, whose P'olitical Essay on New spain is, despite tho chauges which lifty years have called forth, a point d'apmi for every writor on Mexico. The grent Prussian's researehes did not, however, extend to northern or Now Mexieo, and we are mainly imbletel to what we know of that region to the prople of the United States, among whim Prescote takes the lead as historian, and Pike amel stephens as explorers.

If wo : aproach the coast of Mexieo, as is usually lome, by the purt of Veri Cruz, with its renownem fin't of sit. Juan de Uha, dark forests, gradually sloping upwards, are seen to inchose the samly share to the whis; then follow sevral montain teraces, one commanding the other, till at length, towering abowa all, the masnificent cones and indented smmaits of thre. dark blue Aules seem to support the elear vault of heaven. Majastieally rearing their heals over their tellows are tho showy summits of the peak of Orizasa ans the wild jaggel crater of Perote. From the latter the mountains braneln oil northwards to the sen, terminating in an abrupt rocky wall on tha slowes of the gulf, whilst to the someth the Cordilly ras extend in a luge semicirele in the distant horizon. Every where we find the same features-a narrow level tract of const, not many miles in witth, then a gradmal aseent by gently inclining slopes to tha spurs of the monutains, :and finuly to the high lanls, which, atmost minterruptedly, extond for mony hundral miles from murth to sinth, nealy parallel with the const.
On lamling, everything appoars strange-language, dress, aull cumplexion of the inhat,itats, and the thwn, with its Amblasim.Moorish traphings. Here we behold a group of uegrues and mulattoes gesticulating in the most passiomite mamer, there the eoppercoloured I Idian silently offering his fruit for sale ; the clearer skinned Mestimo, or Mestin, urges forward his hase, or trots on an ass after his well-lacken mules, whilst the European or Creole dandy, puthing his eigar, examines the new arrivals, On one side the Paris fashions, on the other the lightest possilhe clothing, consisting of a broud-hrimmed straw hat, coloured or whito shirt, and ample trousers. The fiair sex exhibits tho same contrast : on one hand the greatext luxury, on the other half-nuked. What Europenim can fail to he astomisheed nt the sight of tho fat negress there, who, seated comfortably at the dinor of her house, with a short clay pipe in her mouth, earesses lur perfectly naked oflspring, elinging to and clambering about hor like a very apel Who would not cast a glanee after that troup of Mestin givls, all mounted, with fluttering ribunds in their straw hats, as, smoking their cignettes, of power, avails itself ual political interest. e greatest vice of the nittel, on the other e virtues, as courage, ove of independence, to an extent not to the İebanon.

AND ORIZAVA.
tell States, among historiam, tud Pike

Lexieo, an is usually with its renownel ests, grachailly slope samily shore to the 1 teracies, one comtowering :above all, ell smmaits of the 't the clear vault of 1. heads over their he peak of Orizava erote. From the morthwards to the ocky wall on the wuth the Cordillyras lue distant horizon. res-it narrow level lth, then at gradual , the spurs of the ands, which, almost undred miless from the const. trange-langunge, aliotants, and the truppings. Here ulattoes gesticulatthere tho eopperfruit for sale ; the urges forward his well-laden mules, t, putling his cigar, one side the Paris possilble clothing, hat, colonred or he fiut sex exhibits he greatest luxury, ropean cin tail to legress there, who, lier lonse, with a sses hur perfectly bering nbout hor st a glanee aftor ed, with fluttering ag their eigarettes, they jest with their brown admirer, who, scated on his long-eared siced, thrums his jaraua and singe jocular songs !
The women and girls of the lower elasses wear large four-connered wrappers of callieo, with nothing save a fine clemise, often embroidered and trimmed with laee heneath. They have also a wide pettieoat of hight calieo or musliu, semetimes with a white under-pettieart, whilst tho feet, imnocent of stockings, are encased in light silk shoes. The dress of the wealthy Creole hadies is pretty much the same as with Europems, bring regulated by the newest Pinisian fishoms. For churelhgoing, nevertheless, they alhere to the ancient Spanish buck mantilh, filling from the heal over the shonliders, and half way down the arms.
In Mexico, as indeed in all the origimitly Spmish colonies, the apleamee of the towns is mere or less similar to what is observeal in the mother country. Striight streets with raiseel foot-parements, massive stone honses with flat roots, churehes in the Italian style of the seventecnth century, with lufty towers and ligh cupolas, coverel, for the most part, with particoloured shining tiles, meet the eye. The interiun of the houses is deeidedly Moorish. Fou enter through an arehed gateway intu the first court, surrounded ly a colomule, which is repeatel in the upper storics. The doors and windows of the apartments all upen on this court. In some districts there is a pritty fominain in the eentre round which flowering phats are grouped in large vases. A secoml contr is usmally surrounted by the servants' oflices, kithenens, and stables. In Vera Cruz there are no fomatains, the flat sandy soil does not atherd a drop of water, and that which is furnished ly the tropical stoms is cellected in large stone cisterns. Within tho town the mmerous black vultures, seated in long rows on the hinildings, or divputing with the lem dogs in the streets for the refuse of the kitchens, make in strange impression, and, withuut, the slorubless downs impart a dall, forbidiling fieling.
Two grent roads lead from Vera Cruz to the interior; the one passing through Jalapa and Perote, the other through Cordova and Orizava, The traveller may either proceed by mail-coach, by selan borne ly mules, or in a still more independent manner, mounted on a mettlesome little Muxican horse. Tho road lies at first over the sandy district, and it is some time befire the woonded region is attained, and where the beatiful flowering trees, shruls, and lianas rejoice the traveller's eye. On the bauks of the river Antigna rows of back and white ibists, diazling white herons, and red spoonbills, may be seren perehed on the hovizontal branches ot the fricus americuna; :and vecasionally an old alligator may be seen sumning limuself on a diry log, and leoking like a log, too.
The huts of tho garoches, ur consters, we the most simple things imaginable-Wills of hamboo stems, aul a rool of palm-leaves. The river supplies them with tish and turtle, the forest with game ; ready money is abtained by eharcoal burning, and they cultivate a littlo maize und a few fruits, as bammas, pines, ormges, aull lemons. Such a bounteous nature makes man idle. If the garroclo wants thel he gones ont with his domkey and brings in a fallen tree; he then passes it in by the dour to the fireplaee, and when the end is consumed it is pushed in further, and so on, till it gets into the house. On the same river is the village of the same name, tho first prmunent settlement of Fernando

Cortes, and whoso stone chureh is one of the oldest in the conntry.
Beyond this the traveller reaches the first palm forest. A forest of this kinu, a triveller remarks, represents "the grandest eupola; palas of all sizes constituted the proud viulting, the eaplitals wero represented by the blussoms and fruit which regularly appeared mader the stipules, the dark gloony forest firming the walls, tho light of the deep, Wiue sky penetrating solely through the fuathery palm fuliage. A teeling of indescribable awe and reverence was given birth to in me, and too distinetly I reeornised and bowal beforo the might of tho AliWise."

That wart of the eoast in which the conditions most favouraole fur luxuriance of vegetation-a powerful sum, an I moisture loaded with earlon-rxist, is the one lenst titted for man. The moist atmosphere promuces not only all the bad fivers prevalent in tropical regions, but ealls into existence countless armirs of tormenting mosquitoes, ticks, and bhoclsucking inseets, which render life a complete torment. The only somuls that euliven these dark forests are the chirping of erickets and grasshoppers, the chatering of purrots, the tapping of woodpeckers, and the ery of the прен.
$\Lambda$ few leagnes more, and the phains, with their paim firrests, wre left hohiad, the comery becomes undulated and rocky, chiefly voleateie, and rent by farful chasms. In the summer months the tropieal rains eall forth it lively green in these savannalis or pairies, which extend from soul to 2.500 feet alove the sen. At such times thonsamels of cows pasture on the rich juiey grass, tended ly the leather-juketed rancheros, who dwell in solitary farms, for there are neither towns nor villages in these wild district. Yet it was not so in olden times. Thaces of terraces, water-dams, houses, large cities, and miles of regular roads, are to he met with buried in shrubs and tall grass; remains of extinct tribes and of a deaso agrieultural population, who had heen extirpated belure the Spumiards invaled the country. At ono time pery linot of lime appears to have been as diligently cultivated as the banks of the Nile, of the Euphrates in the days of Solemon. At other times of the year these wildemesses are elothed with low thorny nimosas and other slirubs and trees, whilst dark pillar-shaped cacteo, opuntias, mamillareas, bromelias, and agaves start up from heaps of stones. In the dry scason the prairies are also often set on tire, $p^{n}$ intly to destroy the clouls of tormenting tieks and tarantulas, partly to call forth a new erop firom beneath the ashess. In this region, the village of Codiastal alonc, the aneient Cantistlan, with fine ruins of hewn stone, covered with seulpture, dites firom an historical period; it was a royal residrose, and was destroyed in the Aztee wans with tha. Toltees a century before the arrival of the Spminarls.
On attianing an elevation of 2500 fect we come to the oak and evergrecn firests. There is no gradual trinsition from bush to tree; "the complete forest stimuls all at once beliore us." This region extends to an elevation of 3000 feet. "Ifere wo ean breathe freely, mo pestiferous vapous rise from the seil, wo internittent fevers rol the planter of his vigour, no enersating heats hem his netivity. A seft, mild atmosphere prevails here all the year round, rendered pleasint during the day hy tho sea-breere, cooled at night by tho refieshing unountain air. Here the clonds, driven by the trade-wind towards the highlmods, most frecquently discharge themselves; the comntry is never long without fertilising rain, and the plants are nightly refreshed with a heavy dew. Without artiticial irrigation, here flominh the sugar-eane, riee, tobaeco, and the banama; without wearisome labour, bounteons nature furnishes abmadine of wholesome food within a small spher."
Plants which in the north searedy rise alove the gromend become trees in this fertile region; for instance. the wolf's-milk speeies, the thornapple, the nightshadr, and sage. This is also particularly the ease with the climbing and arlorescent ferns, which may be reekoned umongst nature's most graceful productions. Sonetive are the powers of natiure that they eall forth life wherever monisture can arive, Every trec is a colony of conntlens plents. The forests, produer many excellont kinds of wild fruits, to which the Ohl World has sent its cultivated nullitions. An Indim villag" of this zone presents a tenly delightitit jieture, surroanded by heavily-laden orange-trees mud banana stalks, hy fruits of every imaginable shape and hue, and he the blossoming shrubs which invariably follow the stepss of man. Arboreseent dallias, gracefinl and various-tinted blumerias, and lilacs and roses smround every Indian hut.

The thaveller camot fail, however, to experimer swruise oll passing through these fertile distriet, where there haw long been larg, settlements-for instanee, in the vienity of Comlova, Orizava, 1 humtuseo, Jalapa, l'apouth, and other towns-to see how little land is enltivated. This is partly aecomed for by thas prepared for them, and decm it folly to providi the spare population, partly ly the prometiveness of fir the fature ! The very birds of the air and thr the soil, which prolnces within a small space a mass of mutritions fruits. Who is maequainted with the valuable and important banana or plantain, which can furnish sustenance for tifty men from gromud on which wheat would not give more than would be requisite for the nourishnent of two, and of the nomishing roots, suel as yam, manioc, arum, batate, und arrowroot? The yield of maize is two hundred-fold, of riee fifty to sixty-fold; the coffee-plant flourishes here as in its native mountains; vanilln grows in the forests; colouring matter, spices, and ilrugs, are in part spontaneously brought forth by miture. Can we wonder if the colouists as well as the natives enjoy the banquet bensts of the fiehl seem to set the exmmple of thoughtlessness and inmpovidence.

We find the most luxmiant vegetation at the height of from 2,500 to 4,500 fect above the sea. Most if the original settlements of the matives are met with at an elevation of betweon four to six thonsand feet. lu loftier situations tho clinate is no longer tropieal: frequent rains cool the nir, and in winter rime and snow-storms are not unusual. Nevertheless this climate is exceedingly healthy and wiform ; the valleys and mountain slopes are alorned with perennial green, and the products of the temperate zones ann be harvested the whole year round.

produce many ex

 hich the Oll Worlis An Indinu vilhus lightful pieture, sur-e-trees and banama nahle shape num lue. ich invaribly follow dahlins, gracefinl and is and reses surruandvever, to "xperience rese fertile district, rg. settlements-for a, Orizava, Munture), ms-to see how little min folly to prowid * of the nir and the example of thugghgetation at the height bo the seal. Most il tives aro met with at x thonsand feect. In no longer tropical: in winter rime and ertheless this elimate rm ; the ralleys and perennial green, and perennial green, am

It is in the forest region, however, more than in that of the sitvannahs, that thase picturesque scenes are net with which form the staple theme of admiration with every Mexican traveller. The mountains are decply indented, the valleys narrow, and declivities steep, and there are cererywhere indications of volcunic activity, streans of lava, craters fallen in, mountains uplifted and cast down. All tho streams are torrents, and they form countless waterfills. A vapoury cloud i.s often observel rising from some obscure recess of the forest; it is suro to be a caseade, precipitating itself into some deep abyss. It is only here and there that the comitry assumes the level appearance of phatenus, or of bronder valleys. For the most part it has an alpine character, with a tropical or sub-tropical aspect, smiling valleys, dark forest-grown momatiing, everywhere moisture, and an exuberant vegetable and animal kinglom.

It is the reverse with the alpine or highland districts. Here the principal mountain ranges, instead of jutting forth, rise in the form of terraces mid vist plains or phateans, ench of which is distinguished by the peenliar character of its verretation. "In countless sputs we find ourselves in the most beautiful woods, in ull the luxuriance of a semi-tropical vegetation: a steep mountain-path conducts us 2,000 fect higher, and, as though by magic, we stand in a pine-forest, and hear the whistling of the wind as in the forents of the north." Bat generally the elange is more gradual, and the ordinary forest trees, as the oak, alder, and arbutus, are found extending fir into the pine regions. The lowest limit of the pine is usually 6,500 to 6,800 feet.

The different forms of the Mexican conifere have not only been lately described, but miniature specimens of these dwellers on the Audes are sceu in most botanic gardens. These, however, can afford no idea of the graudeur and majesty of these mountain forests. The straight, slender stems, often 100 or 120 feet in height, the clase summits. with the brauches inclining downwards, the sharp-pointed haves, now shorter, now longer, the concs sometimes quite small, sometimes immense, the frowning groups of Abies religiosa, which are furuished with branches from the base upwards, the solemn stilluess prevailing, interrupted only by the occasional scream of the blue jay, of the green aris, or the howl of some lungry wolf-all give rise to a foeling of loneliness, more oppressive evin than that of the fir-cxtending prairic. Ravines with foaming mountain torronts, stecp; masses of rock, and green meadows, afford now and then some varicty to the otherwise monotonous scenery ; here, too, we find all the ch .rms of alpine vegetation. All is fumiliar to us, from tho grasses to the different species of clover; crowfoot, putentillize, gentimere, strawberries, anil violets. Vacciniz and other momintan herries are found here as in the north, the lupius and penstenonoe blossom even at the height of 11,000 feet, where the alder alrcady disuppears, and nothing is found save the Pinus Monlezumur, the forest tree of greatest elevation. The juniper species are not met with so high; very few indeed grow on the east side of the mountains, but all the more on the west. The agave and cactus are only seen here and there between the rocks; they olject to the moist climate of the eastern declivity, although they are not wholly unrepresented.

Aithough the forest disappears from the lofticst und most desolate portions of the mountains, vegetation docs not entirely ccase. Large patches are still covered with grass, with some shrubs, and, still more, flowering phants; the senecio, with its silvery bearl, and the snow-thistle, completely covered with grey felt, are seen, with lichens and mosses, in the loftiest reginns. Above 14,500 feet the latter are nlone met, with, und they extend as high as 14,700 feet. On Orizava, Parmelio elegans rises above all. A few steps further on and we are on the borders of the region of cternal snow, or ice, for it is here a compnet mass of cighteen or twenty feet in thickness, covered with loose snow, which is constantly thawing and being replaced.

From this stanitpint, which is higher than the summit of Mont Blanc, let us view the country we have traversed. An interminable prospect lies before us, too extensivo for every different object to be distinguished. We clearly recognise the mirror-tike surface of the gulf, the darker forest-region of the soast, the lighter tracts of prairic-land. Then fillow the sombre, wavy lines of the forest-clad mountains, occasionally interrupted ly cultivation. The chasmes indicating the watercomses are distinctly reeognised by thicir profound shade; solitary white dots in tho mindst of the foliage wo presume to be churches and villages. The mountains ascend from terrace to terrace; we recognise the line of the pine forests, where they are in full development, and the elevation where the trees completely disappear. From the threshold of rigid death, as from tho North Cape, or the glaciers of Iceland, our eyes pass from the arctic zono and the pine groves of the north to the gardens of the Hesplerides with their golden fruit, and thence to the glowing zone where tho palms and the arborescent ferns anil grasses are developed. An immeasurable panorama nequaints us with the physiognomy of the countrynamely, a gradual ascent of the soil from the sea to the ridge of the highlands, and from there a gentle, declining slope to the fur-extendiug table landa or platemus.

It is not the same with the eastern half of Mexico as it is with the western. The land rises gradually from the Pacific to the height of 10,000 to 12,000 feet, then fulls again some 3000 or 4000 feet, forming those extensive plateans which lie from 6000 to 8000 feet above the sea, and constitute one of the great lanimarks of the country. Viewed from the sanse summit as before, moderately lofty mountain chaius are seen to bound the plain ; groups of mountains, mostly pointed or with blunt cones, interrupt the surface, whilst further to the west a lofty cordillera, with a snowy summit closes the picture. No furests, no luxuriant neadows can be perceived in the valley, but on all sides cultivated fields, many villages and hamlets, also sand and moor, gray lava masses, bare monutains, or slopes with a few scattered bushes oi low trees. The contrast is so grest, that it seems as though onet were trimsported to a totally different country, from the south to the north, from the fragrant forest to the dreary heath.

Tho great platenu; or table-land, of Mexico is intersected by numerous mountain chains, which, however, never completely interrupt the communioation of the plateaus with each other. From the eighteenth to the thirteenth degrees there are carriage roads, and from Mexico to Chihuahua a railroad could easily be constructed. Tho climate resembles that of Southcrin Europe, hence the vegetation has nowhere a tropical appearance, neither is it so perfectly develeped, nor in atches are still covered l, still more, flowering ilvery beard, and tho I with grey felt, wre 1 the loftiest resions. e alone met with, and feet. On Oriznan, A few steps further the region of cternal pact mass of eightien ered with loose now, being replaced. is higher tlinn the view the country we le prospect lies before rent object to be diswise the mirror-like forest-region of the e-land. Then follow orest-clad munantains, vation. The chasms distinctly recognised y white dots in the to be churches and from terrace to terse pine forests, where the elevation where From the threshold Cape, or the glaciers e nretic zone and the ardens of the Hespehence to the glowing rborescent ferns and neasuratile panorana ny of the countryl from the sea to the om thera a gentle, ading table lanils or tern half of Mexico land rises gradually 0,000 to 12,000 fert, 0 feet, forming those 6000 to 8000 feet of the great land. om the same summit in cliains are seen to tains, mostly pininted e surface, whilst fur, with a snowy sumrests, no laxuriant e valley, but on ali es and hamlets, also , bare monutains, of or low trees. The as though onc were country, from the grant forest to the
of Mexico is interins, which, however, mmunieation of the he eighteenth to the age roads, and from could easily be conthat of Southern nowhere a tropical ly developed, nor in such exnberant masses. The giasses are short and fine, the trees low, the mountains bire. Succulent plants, gs the cnetus, agave, and yucca, with the mimosn and composite plants, determine the chnracter of the landscupe. Villarges and large farms (haciendas) are met with, and attnched to them are extensive cultivations ot' wheat, maize, barley, and pulse. On all sides the agnees bonntl the fields and roads, and surround the seattered dwellings.
The phains of Thascula and Huatmantla, of Puebla, Mexice, Queretaro, Morelia, fund Guanajuato, present landseajes which resemble those of Sonthern Europe. Numerous towns, villages, and firms, surroundel by olive, fig, cherry, apple, quince, and other trecs, avenues of popinu and ash, orchards and kitchen-gardens of all kinds, would make the trave. le forget that he is on the riolge of the Andes, if the phantations of agaves und the garden-hedges of cactus thid not remind us of Monteama's empire.

Wherever there is ueitlier water nor cultivationon tho roeks and mountains and on the more arid plains-sueculent plunts abound in the most whimsical and varied forms. An nequnintance with lot-lonse phats is now so general, that we may venture just to glater: at these. Sinull and very prickly aamillarex saredy mase themselves above the gronind, gronps of n larger kind nestle in the rocks, melocactere and echinocactere of all dimursions start up, from the size of a fist to the altitude of a man, from one to three fect in diameter, furnished with short or long, with stmight or eurved prickles. The opuntio, or Iudian figs, are crowded together in distinct gronps, differing in form, size, and colour of the leaves or branches, and in blossom and truit. The ecrue creep like saakes along the ground, eling to the bitunches of trees and to the rocks, or rise in the form of a pillar thirty or forty fect nowo the generality of their species. There is ouo singular species called organos, whoso appearance is almost incredible. A tliick, ungainly trunk, from four to six feet in height, bears severisl humbred upright multangular pillars of all sizes, and which, being tallest in the middle, and smaller on either site, resemble a largo organ. 'The monntains, where freguently thousutuds of these plants are seen, are not unlike walls of columnar busait. This stitl; strange, and shadeless vegetation is quite in accordance with the rest of the liadscupe, with the grey rocky masses of volumic or with the yellowisle calcareous momatains.

The succulent plants, however, present both man and beast with the sources of existence. Humbuldt las justly terme the cactus " the vegetable spring of the wilderness. Without them and the agaves, the sterile momntius of the platerus, being so poor in water, would be minhabitable. Ins'inct teaches the oxen and horses to remove the thorns and wool on the top of the thick echinocactee with their horns or hoofs, nud to bite in tho suceulent flesh, so that a little reservoir is formed. During the night the clear sap collects in this, and in the morning quencles the animal's thisst; the reservoir refills itself for several weoks in succession. The animals know their waterngg places wall, retum to them every morning, and defend them against usurpers. The agave is hollowed out by man in a sinilar manner into a bowl, and the liquid, removed every morning and evening, easily ferments, and coustitutes the fivourite drink pulque. The young leaves of the opuntins are usel as a fivvourite vegetable: the juicy fruit enten raw is highly refreshing; dried and pressed, it is not unlike fig, and forms an object of traffic. The juice of the fruit is sometiones converted into syrup, sometimes, slightly fermented, ant tormed colonche, it forms a substitute for wine at the fextivals of the shepherds and mountnineers. Pulque is, however, the chief drink of Mexico. A large plant produces claily about eight bottles of saj, and there are plantations of twenty thousind to forty thousand. Caravans of several humdied mules are frequently met with conveying this nectnr of the Indians to the towns in goatskins. The quantity of alcolol in pulque is about the same as in strong beer, and, as our authorsays, "one should see the happy faces of the Indians, squatting in a circle, withont distinction of sex, and passing round the filled schiknls (large gomrds), one must see them staggering home from their feasta, in order to compreliend how so vast a quantity of sap can be consumed." In districts where water is rirely secn, it is often very difficult to procure a glass, whilst every Indian willingly otlers a cup of pulque. The natives, it is to be observed, howevar, seldonn use it till it lins acquired a strong taste an l a disugrecable foctid smell, and as it is fermented in caskins with the hair inside, and carried in goatskins, the #lavour is not always tempting to a stranger. Lopes, thread, sacks, and cloth are also, it may be observed, woven out of the sume plant, which, to the Indiaus, is in some districts almest everything. They build their huts, light their tires, weave their cloth, and supply their table tiom this invaluable gitt of God.

The heat and dryness on the table-lituds, which do not all prescut exactly the same physiogoomy, are greatest from Mareh till Junc; the trees then lose their toliage, the comse of the rivers and brooks alone being indicated by a green line. A dense bluish fog tills the atmospliere, nrising from the heated state of the lower strata of air. Vertical atmospheric currents often take place, whirling grass and dry leaves to an immenso lieight. Ald these phenomenti vanish on the approach of the rainy season. The air is then most pare; everything assmmes its green coveriug. The wiater months are sonewhat raw, and on the nore elevated plateans night frosts are not uncommon, snow falling weasiounlly, rucly, however, lyiug more than a day, although in the northern highlaud valleys it sometimes lies a week.

II.

Facilitirs of Transpoht is Mexico-Staak and Cofpre Plantations-Mines-Vorcanoes-Barbancisor Chasms - Nochal and politigas lelations of the MexicansMestins on Mertisus-Lambos-Indians - Libereros or pholethimans-holitical Ryents-General Demorali-sation-Dicture of a Mesican Revolt.
South Amemea has its plateaus like Mexico, and those of Quitu, Cuseo, and Cundinamarea are in part loftier than the latter. But they are separated fiom each other by profound and extensive valleys, and bounded by enormons chasins, with it tropical climate, from which the ascent to the cold Paramos is made with iucredible fittiguc. Not so in Mexico, where froin sonth to north travellers and merchandise meet with uninterrapted vehicular transmission. Although there are three principal mountaiu ranges, the middle one is so constituted that the connection with the table-land is everywhere feasible by means of broad valleys. It is only the dechmation towards the sea that is less favourable for travellers. In the south, for example, the descent from the mountains from Chiapas to the gulf is so steep, that it is impossible even to employ mules, and both goods and travellers have to be conveyed on the backs of lnclians.
Taken altogether, the western slone is less abrupt than the castern, and yet it is in parts more diflicult for the construction of roals. The character of the landscape also differs nuch. The comntry is itrier and hotter, the dense luxuriant forests are rarer, whilst more grasses and a alight growth of rexinous treesnimosis and terebinthias-are met with. The sencoast is rather rocky than sandy; and there are safer bays than on the gulf. Dense palm forests border the lagoons, and the valleys are alorned with charming groups of palms, cesslpinire, and figs.
There are districts where the iminstry of man has introluced artificial irrigation on a grind scale. Sugar and coffere plantations, equal to the most considerable in the West Inclies, exist in the fertite plains south of Mexico. Extensive plantations are also met with in the plains of Mechoacan, but, generally speaking, little is cultivated, save what ean be sown during the roiny season, although there are many Intian villuges, the inlabitants of which plant vegetables and fruits in antifieially irrigated fields. The yielh of cotton along the coast is good, but there is a want of humds in the plantations, and the dwellers on the plateans shm the coast as carefully as they would the infernal regions.
The country ia very thinly $p^{\text {ropled, nul would have }}$ still fewer inhabitants if the mountains towards the South Sca were not so rieh in metals. Most of the towns and villages owe their origin to miners, amil new colonies are founded by them alone. In these mountains mining is very ancient; before the Enropeans discovered America, the Aztecs diligently worked the diggings of Thavehko, where, at the present day, the mining town of Tasco is huilt upon silver. From Tehnantepee to Arispe, and further to the north, the momatains between the sea and table-land are metalliferous. In the north of sumorn are extensive solld fiehs, richer, perhaps, than those of California. Silver, coprer, haul, and ivon have leen found everywhere; lut tho rich veins can scarcely be said to have been opened tor want of hamps to prosecite suel: unlertakings with advantage. When, in the course of time, the Germanic population penetrates further sonth, and the HispanoIndian race is replaced by one more energetie mid enterpmising, the extraordinary wealth of this comery will be duly appreciated.
These mountnius have also a rematkable number of hot salt springs, giving off moch gas. Subterramem tives are not everywhere extinct, and weasionally bust forth here or there, committing the most extensive ravages, or convulsing the earth with terrific spusims. In the south, $n$ succession of voleanoes passing from Oajaca throngh Chinpnas aro comnected witl the burning mountains of Guatemala. Cempoalt,plec, one of the loftiest points of the Cordilleras of tyaja, is a volcanic cone, and the frequent earthquikes in the plateaus of Onjace always appear at the sime time ns thowe of Guatenula. The chief range of the Mexican voleanoes lies, however, between the nineteenth and twenticth degrees of north latitude, and may be traced from the Atiantio to the South Sen across the whole country. The last eruption of the Tustla, only sixty miles from Vera Cruz, took place in 1780, when the ashes lay several inches deep in towns sitnated twenty miles distauce. The last eruption of Orizava, the highest point of the Mexican Andes, being $\mathbf{1 7 , 8 1 9}$ feet in elovation, occurred in 1569, and lastes twenty yenrs; but the internal fires are not extinct, and the lurking monster may, like Etma, ngain terrify those dwelling on or ncar it, even after the lapse of three centuries. The base of the ginat is also surrounded for a considerable distance with smaller volemoes. Two rivers, which rise on the east side of Orizava, suddenly disappeur. The perpendicularly rocky walls, from 1000 to 2000 feet high, of the profound chasms which are met with for some miles in the volcanic soil, give the best idea, with the height of the mountains themselves, of the might of volcanic ravages in this conntry in former times.
Popocateletl (from tho Aztee "popoen" to smuke, and "teptl," monutain), 17,773 teet hign, is not extinct, and the neighbouring snow mountain, Iztacciluatl, bears the same relation to it as the Coffer of Perote does to Orizava : it is "a ruined flue of the same hearth." From Toluca to the South Sea two more voleanoes me still aetive-Jorula and Colima; the latter, sinee the earliest known periods, the other a recent production of the mighty subternmenn fires, which in the middle of the last century ealled forth terror and dismay on all sides. Theo whele succession of volcanic mcuntains in Mexico, necorting to Sactorius, from Tastla on tha Gulf to Colima, traverses the mountain range at right angles, and all seem to stanl on a great rent or cleft in the firm crust of the curth; even Jorulle, the mest recent in its origin, exhilits a cleft far down in the erater, at a right amgle with the monntains. Frequent observations have shown that for the last twenty yeurs the earth puakes were most severely felt in the volemie line, and that the shock were move from east to west, or vice versa. We shall, howewr, when giving an accome of recent as comparel with former ascents of the two celelrated voleanoes and loftiest of the Andes of Mexico, enter more into details regarding them.

The derp ahonost perpendicular wents-barmueas, as they are callen, those whiderful chasms which are so frequent in all parts of the country-are amongst the most strikiug peculiations of Mexico. Tho greater part are met with between the mountains and the sat; but they are nut uncommon win the table-land. In many purts the comntry is so rent by chasms that one cannut travel a league from north to south without finding the road interrupted hy these perpendicular nhysses. They are frepuently unrrow cletts, with hare perpendienlar rocky walls, more than 1,000 feet in height ; but often they are of immense width, the siles haviug, hy falling in, formed ditferent stories or termers. Sometimes several elasms communicate, the result being highly picturesque. Foaming torrents almost invariably hurry throngh these ravines, plunging from rock to roek, sometimes na a neisy eascade, semetimes us a rouring eataruct. There ure an incredible mumber of these waterfalls in the comery, vying with one another in sulbimity. The humidity nlso brings firth a most luxuriunt vegetation in the shady dells.

These chasms naturally interfere $n$ great deal with the conmmication in the interior, being frequently inaccessible for a distance of many lengues; and even when a passage cun be eflictol, long use mul coutidence in the sure-footedness of the minles and humess are requisite to, enable one to vile down theso neekbreaking, winding, rocky paths. In some placess they mee spammet by matural brilges of rock, ne nt the "Puente de Dios," near l'uelia; at others by a fallen tree; or they are crossed by the Maromus or hauging

819 feet in elovation, venty yenrs; but the 1 the lnrking monster e dwelling on or near enturies. The hase of considerable distance ers, which rise on the Trpear. The perpento 2000 feet high, of ot with for some miles iden, with the heright the might of voleanic times.
"popoca" to smoke, "t higin, is not extinet, puntain, Iztaccihuntl, the Coffer of Perote e of the same liearth." o more volcanoes are the latter, since the - a recent production which in the middle terror and dismay en f volcanie meuntains , from Tustla on the nintain range at right great rent or cleft in in Jorullo, the most left fre clown in the ountains. Frequent the last twenty yeary $y$ felt in the volemie re from enst to west, (1), when giving th th former aseents of loftiest of the Andes regarding them.
rents-barmucas, as hasms whieh are so $y$-are amongst the exico. The greater mitaine anl the sea; the table-laml. In nt liy chasms that wirth to south with. these perpentienhar ow clefts, with here than 1,000 feet in use width, the sinles $t$ stories or termees. micate, the result ug torrents mbost ines, plunging from easende, sometimes ineredible number , vying with ono y also brings forth sludy dells. a great deal with , boing frequently engues; and even ng use mal contimales ant horsers down these neck1 some placess they I rock, ne at the whers by a fillon aromns or hanging briilges of the Indians, as also by means of a basket maspended by a rope.

The little plantations of the Indians are fiequently found in the clepths of these chasms, with their banamas and kitchen gardens in the midst of a dense growth of forest trees, in spots apprently quite innceessible. The Indian likes the dangers and the solitude of the chasms; a cave atfords him shelter, and he fears neither the jaguar prowling about in the night, nor the swarms of monkeys that phunder his fruit.

We wish we had space to add something eoncerning thezoologyot Mexico, in comection with which interesting subjects much that is fithulous has been printel-as, for example, by Trmmel, in list Mexico and the Sfexicans, where he speaks of aper: of such monstrous dimensions as fear or drunkenness could alome have imparted to the reality. The learned professor; licherstein, of berlin, also considers many of the amimals deseribed by old llernandez as falbolous, but Sartorius tells us that the old anthor wats right, and thant the animals exist. The considemation of suek a subject, as well as that of geology amd minerahogy of the country would, however, eary us boyond all moderate limits.
Tum we, then, to the Mexicans and their social and politieal relations. According to the prople themvelves, they ure of two kimds, "yente de razord y gente sin razon," or, the rensoning and the unteasomingthat is to say, the whites, and the red and black raees -the mixed races not only asserting their chain to some modicum of reasom, bint being at the same time more pertinacionsly opposed to the ludians than the whitest of the whites. The law happily knows no distinctions; the eonstitution has pheed all the citizens of the eomatry, whatever their colow, on an equal footing, all piviluges of hirth are umihihated, and shwery has been long since cmdicated. Customs, however, whieh havo taken root amongst the people, and wre perpetuated by the langunge, camot he easily oblitemated by law, and we consempently tind in Mexico an aristocracy of eolomr, as in Emope we find in aristomatey of hinth.

The Moxican pormation presents the most striking contrasts. On one side, xplendour and luxury, clogant eurriges, und I'misim fashions; on the other, dirt and indigence, an exelusive life with a separate mational type in its ontwarl appearanes, in language, and mannelso. The ditlorent ligures that gias hefore us comprise a leaf of the history ot the comatry-a sitld one, as with so many mations. The dasky Indian ruled here, mal bousted a mighty empire ; the supurior intelligencouf the Europeras conyuerod it, ami rendered the firemen slaves. Tho severe tasks inupsed on them earried ofl thousimuls, and to save them from extirpation the black A frican was introlaced. When Cortes with his daring lame compuered Mexico, the dominnat race was that of the Aztees, who, coming ins invilers from the nowth, laul subjected the peacefnl agricultural nation of the Tolloes, and, euriched with immense hooty, hat ndopted the enstums of thoso they had werthrown. The noblest of the Aztecs fell in the strugglo with the Spmiands; their property passed into the hands of the victors, whe at the samo time hecime possessud of the fanilies of thase who hat fallen; tho rude wrriuss were plensed with their nequisition, und married the dusky dangliters of the comintry, who wore rentered their epunls by baptism. Cortes himself maried the benntiful Ninima, or Matintzin. At the time no oue considered this it misnlliauce, the: expression Mestizo, or Mestin, wits miknown, and the noble families of tho Aztecs were regarded as mobles of Spain. Besides these noble allianees there lave been others of a less distinguished and often of a less legitimate character, and, dming three centuries, "the priest and the monk, the soldier and the young creole, have continued to graft the Chucasian stock on the wild trunk."

Thus arose the numerons Mestizo population, which has inherited in fart the brown hue of the mother, but also the greater energy and more vigorons mind of the tither. The gradations of colour are naturally determined by the dergree of relationship, the union of the Mestins with tho whites giving riso to a lighter, that with the Indians to a darker, line. The Afriean rnee, which is but slightly representel in Mexico, lins buel very marked characteristics, that it may be recognised, in spite of every intermatriage, by the woolly hair, thick lips, and broad, compressen nose. From the umion of a negro with an Indiam female, or of a mulato with a negress, arise those tark-brown Mestins, known on the west const by the iplyellation of Zambos; in general, however, the diflerent alegrees of colour are not taken into consideration, as was the case when slavery still existod, and as it still is in the West Indies and North America. Mexico, in tiact, never had many slaters, and these only in the torrid regions on the coast. In the higher districts, where there was no want of hamls, the conviction had long since heen arrived at that the labour of free men was cheaper than that of slaves. When, in 1810, the Creope prpulation rose against the spanish rule, nbolition of slavery was proclaimed in one of the tirst patagraphs, and as mon as they had attained complete impepentence, it was determined by the constitution that shavery should nout be permitted within the bounds of the repmblic, and that every slave should be tree as soon as he tonched Mexican gromml.

The varien groups of the Mexican population have something highly wiginal, and torm an oxellent relief to the landseape, prartienharly the Greole in the comutry, and the Mestins, who, as horsemen, are quite eymul to the Arals, and gallop about the far-extending platemas. In the towns, the yomuger ('reobe belonging to the chucated classes is dressed in the burpheare style. The desire to play the landy is unmistakable in the young people, whilst the ohl Creole, as well as the Spaniurd, never guits his dwelling without his long dark cloak, even thongh the sum be in the zenith.

The Creoles constitute a seventh part on' the popalation, on ubout $1,200,000$. In outward appearance they apponch the Sumiards ; and yet a peculiar type is ummistakable. 'Tiue' ('reole is, above all, passionately attached to every kind of fostive anusement, is a grent admirer of the finir rex, and most pertimuenosly midicten to gmmbling. Ther momatity of the women is upon a par with that of the men. 'The Creoles constitute the thinf part of the population of the cities; they we govermment otlicials, physieinas, lawyers, merehnuts, mamatacturers, uining proprietors, and artifieers. The grent haded proprietors, the comatry truders, and the hagher orders of the elergy, also belong to this elass. "lhe wealthy Creole is a friend to luxury; he has showy equipages, bentiful saddle-horsed, unmerous servants, lat no eomfort in his

Domestio life is very diflerent from that of ly .anme races. The life led by the hadies in then wadoirs savours somewhat of the Oriental; they work leautifully with the necdle, weave and embroider, play, sing, and smoke, the latter from early youth, but the intellectual element is wanting, the mulerstanling and the feelings are uncultivated, and seusuality therefore easily obtains the upperland. Yet they are said to bo amiable and animated, aml their soeicty, as well as their persons, to be very attractive. The respeet paid by the children to their parents is a redeeming feature in the character of the Creoles, who are also generally hmane, compassionate, kind, and imbukent. The Creole las retainel the liveliness, the exeitability, and the romantic seutiments of the Spumiard, lout whale the latter is conservative, the Mexidum Crenle is for progress ; he is ako linural and twlerant even in religions matters, whitst the Spaniard never quite the established ferms in Chureh and State. The Spumiad labours perseveringly, serks also to pouft in detail, and saves what he has carned for oldage ; the Me winu eans with facility, but just as (asily lets it slip through his tingers; he seeks to enjoy the flecting moment, and leaven Providene to eare for the finture.

The aborigines of Amerita, from Cabada to the mountains of Aranearia, hatere fumbamentally the same type of features, greatly monlitied of comse liy positom and climate, mond of lif, and pernlar enstoms. The aborigines of Dexico, too, thongh divided intor many thibes, inul separated by totally ditternt langages, exhitit at the first glanee the peenliarities of a mace. They are matumbly elone, distrust tul, and calkulating. Thais namone thanselves as will as in their intercourse with stramers. It lies in their langnage, their mamers, and their historv. Their exprossins are always molignous, and they are refinel liphomatists in their negeciations. then lue priont e:munt mulnstand the contessions of thin converts, the penitent idnivering himself in metaphors and ridillos. An Inlian cman promiserl. Thay are nbmisive nul servile, with the oxerpotien of the $A_{\text {pardas }}$ and lomandan, whon still retain that inderembere in the nown comatry. The Indian have the mumatage of momerimal lation, and appordonsioma mighi loe antertitined of race. But thix is milikily ; they hawe luat all histury and all phirit, thow is bu, miom amones them, and as they enjoy the same right an the where inhabitante, they hati bue ramse fire diseontent. Speaking some four-abl-thirty ditlient langugen, thers atill live in conmmities, partly in villagen, purtly in thens, when own municipah ouliores. All the suligented Indians are Rommen Cothomies, mol must of their priests atrof theid awn race. They have also demontity schouls, bat they nor lithe caresl te.

The Mretiz, ar Mestin, is properly the oflspring of a white futher and an humben mother, lat the villions relations of the Mostizos among themswes, and with the whites mul Indians, have given to the bame a mond wider signitieation. There is this great pervliarity abmet the stestiza, however, and whidh is mhost goneral, that whike the Grole hats taken for pattern his progenitor the spaniarl. and sompht as far as possible to exproduee him, while the laitian was gutietly preserving the usares of his firelathirs without ever being able to msert a prominen josition, the Mestizo, has never been atiything else than Mexican, and tha Creole has ndoptet his peculiarities rather than the reverse.

The Mestizo is a harly fellow, of lank, elastic form; his complexion is not white, neither is it e"percoloured, like that of the Indian, but a light brown, through which the flush of the cheek appears. The hair is thick aml black, but softer than the Indians, the forehead higher, the eves hrilliant, sometimes hank, sometimes hazel. He has inhoritel the Roman nose and henvy black liearal of his father, the white teeth ant small foot of the mother: One might take him for an Aral, as, lance in hand, he rushes past umon his light steal. He is an exeellent horscman, of a bold. excitable disposition, temperate and 1 יrstoving, but levity itself: always prepared fior the dance or game, modisturbel by any care her the fatme, if the present moment hat allything to (mjoy.

The Mestizos are distinguishable from the. ('reoles on the one side, and the Indimin on the other, by dress, as well as by complexion and language. The Ure de contests his mpality, while the ladian hates him as the hastaril of his lianghter; hence the progress is contimually thwards the whiter, and the nearer the Mestiz, apmoriches the Creole in colom, the mure easy beemes the amalyamation. That whieh has one hem turn away from the Indian mate maly returns to unite itself again. The fudian seeks his marriage allimees omly ameng those of mmixed blood; the ambition of the Mestizo is ouly satistiel with a wife of a fairer colnar tham himself. Still the manerical supreiprity of the Chdims would hind sulywht to Dr. Knox's theory of the greater whaptability of the Indian mees to the ir awn climater ; the Prostizos do not, inked, reckon ahme two millions, or . .e-fourth of the: antire p"pulation.

As the kind of foliage determines the physiognomy of the lamberpe, so do the cities bar the mametristio impress if' a peeple's lifo and mamerx. The Mexitan citien whw, at the first enlance, a romanem origin with the Romaic nations of Southern binops: athaight hxury on the obr hath, bitth mad nakedness on the other. The two lantilex hater furmindel be models: thore, an will as hare, we find the wame lack of tres, the same abseme of beantiful parks and sardons, if are mem and dirty, mind inhabitod by the howent alasses. Ratioe mad bilth, curcoser of animats sumb rublish of thildheg, we fomel piled up it the sutrances of the streets ly the sile of wretched havels, the athator of ragigel vagatomils or half maked hulians. J.am, hungry his pare on passing to withrian hoth nome and cyes from such mophasme impuresions. Altwong this piotmer ajplien alment universally to the town wis the table lanles, it is ant 80 on the emastern const, where at

 are a lahyrinth of froil gardens, fom mony which the real tiked roots of the cuthoges look forth with remarkable eherertuhnes.
Thu Moxiean cities, it is to be ohserved, have thoir momerous and peculiar proletarians as wodl as Niples and Seville; mal, indeed, whilo the well-known Latz ian Mexican, and thi ities ruther than the of lank, elastie form ; neither is it cepper , but a light brown, cheek upluears. The er than the Indian's, iant, sometimes bilack, ited the Roman nose her, the white teeth ne might take him for rushes past upon his hersemin, of aboh, :unl persevering, but - the thance or grame, cuture, if the presur

We from the (rroles n the other, by ilress, ngnage. The Crenle Indian hate's him as o the progress is conw nearer tha Mestizo ir, the more easy rat which has one tee rimely returns to seeks his mamiage manixel blood; the isticel with a wife of fill the numerical and silyon't to Dr. ability of the Indian © Pretizos lo hot, or , , e-fourth of the the phrsiognoms w the chanteternati The Mexivan Mmm migin with Finropu: stmitght with that rowfo, lusmolas, firrextemiting小ury, masnitient me-sileminna and makimbess of the iskind the menlels; ame late of troes, $k s$ surd sumdens, of Nexico tho subuths ; the lowest classess. ls and rublins of ' entramees of the vels, the aboulet of आs. Leun, hungy * bele-curner these " travellew hastrus woth moee mal wes

Althoush this the towns on the It coast, whim at mple, thir sulnmins nnture which the rth with remirkrrved, have their as well as Noples well-known lit\%- zaroni have perhaps more skill in devouring macaroni, they searcely represent their class so worthily as the Leperos-or, as they are also called. Pehados-ot Mexico. In Europe is is very hard to be obliged to belong to this class, in Mexies it is deliberately chosen ; 180 pressmre of circumstances can linder the freedom of development, in which the peculiar talent of the Mexican can disphay itself to the greatest advantage. The Leperos are proletarians in the strictest sense of the word. Epicureans on principle, they avoil the annoyance of work as much as possible, and seck for enjoyment wherever it may be obtained.
The possession of houso and firm produces cares, and it is ineonvenient to lock up boxes and chosts, therefore they ilecline tronbling themselves about such, The wholo indiviclan, with all that he lite about him, is not worth a groat, anl yot he is in the best limoner in the world, and ready to sing and dinee. When avening comes, he moly knows where to lay his home at night, nor how to fill his empty stomach in the mommig. A sliirt is an article of luxury, but ngrmethlo ats a reserve in order to pawn it, or stake it, aecordines to circmmstances. If he is in luek he buys one, and a pair of trousers of manta (cheap, cetten stull). His chid possession is the frazala, a coars, striped choth, proterting lim against stabs or hlows, his bed and comnterpane for the night, his state iress for ehareh and market. This, his toga virilis, the Tepero throws over his shoulders with more pathos, he prodeces a greater eflect with it, tham formerly Ciecor and Pompey, and shonlal he eventually fall by the knife of an irritated foe, he dows no with as much dignity as the great Casar on the ides of Mareh. Sympathining friemls then wrap him in his royad roth, jassileg an cord round lam like a bate of gooms, amd thas he wanders to the gmese simply as he livea.

The groletarians, it is to be whorver, ate exclusively Mestizos; the Imlians, fuor as they semem to he, ins gramats, landowners, mechanies, and ns members of a community, are never prohetarians. 'The Tudian smpports himselt and his limily homestly; he prys lis taxes, lives in wedlock, amd does not leave his village to wamler nbout hike a Lepera vagabont. 'Twer nen [moverl hy thein vigoroms mininistration that this bad satron roulal he a good dral controlled: these wre Cunat Revilla-Gigedo, viceroy in Mexico from 1789 till 1791, and Censtal Miguel Tacon, governor-genura! in C'uba some twenty yeurs since. The prosition of the latter was uncommonly diffieult, as in the Havannah he had to do with a most vile deseription of groletarians, eomsisting of mogroes mal mulattoes, and with a diswipaterd, unmly nohility.

It is strugy to think that, with smeln a mothey mul immoral popmlation, it was not till the legeming of this century that the filen of a separation trom the mother comitry, und the assumption ot an indepemphet political existenee, lngan to tako root in the Spmish provineses in Ammien. In Mexieo, it was not till Islo that the indepment purty, leel by Vilalgo and Allomin, took up arms ngainet the Spuniards. In this sanguinary struggle, which lasted ten yenrs, the leaders fioquently changed, fir the sworl enrried ofl many. Tho popular party gave evidener of mueh talent mill bravery; ans in the prersons of the two ceelesinaties, Morelos ninl Matamomos, lat, defeated ly smperior tacties nom diselpline, they had to have recourse to that guerillia warfare to whieh the comntry is prendially mopted. The chicfs of these gucuillus, Cinemero, Bravo, Cos, anil

Victoria, termed thenselves generals, but their sphere of action was very limited.

The revolt of Augustin Iturbid, a Mexien by birth, but a soldier in the ranks of the Spaniands, ultimately seoured to the conntry its indepenclence, but snpermided a military despotism. The sniben elevation of this adventurer to the throne remedered hin giddy, and he was deposed by the sume power by which he had been elevated. The people then elsuse the republican form of government, and, moreover, the federal constitution, affer the precedent of the V'nited States, At the same time, most civil ollices and omployments, as well an military commands, fell into the hands of the insurgents, miny of then medneaten, ind only ealeulated to make themsolves pidienlons in the eves of their subalterns. T'he natiomal gramy wat looked to as the ehief defenee of the emmatry, lut it was so bady ormansed that it becane the toul and the butt of the line. Owing partly to this circumstance-the ineara bility of the individuals in power-the demmatisation of the patriots, and the incompetrucy of the mational gumed, there lans heon nothing lint civif comanotion ever since the institution ot the reniblic: the stambing amy playing the pitithl part of assisting som times one partisim, sonetimes another, to gain the "prer hamel.

The army itself heeanse as chomoralisel as atl the other institutions in the comery the revolt which carred Sintana into power. This rude and immoral egotint, to whem honour and conseience, thlelity and finth, were hut as ampty words, deprived the army of many exedlent onlierrs by dismissing the Spanimels and replacing them hy an uttedy worthess set- the willing instruments of his seltish phans. Inwing Santanna's long dictatorship every hranch of the alministration fell into disurder. In the govermment expenliture immense sums-from twelve million to fifteen million pesos-tigured every your for the war hepartment, and yet there were no warlike stares; the trongs were liadly clotherl, the fortresses insmantled. The army, which ought to have leon $: 36,(1) 0$ strong, conld searedy number 10,000 . Fet, fibhhuns as it may "prar, the army register connted 120 semmals and 30,000 ofliecrs, all demmadiag their bay for doing nothing; and the comitry had to fied this fluek of vanpires. Ihis superiority in the nmmer of offeers over that of sulders had its origin in tho gnerilla times, when ehiets elected peasants into oftieers nt pleasure, suecessive promancianonts bodig followed by the ereatiun of colonels and gemerals-satellites of the sumees ind
 be. The deseription of the way in whith a Mexiean revolt is comocted amb earried ont is alike amusing and instructive.

It sublilenty oren's to some formor sollier, perhaps acmitain, resibling in a village theo handred leagnes from tho equital, that the sovermment is good for notling. Ilo sperks about it with Jack and L'oter of the sume vill:ufe, remets the newspare to then, slows letters fiom triends of conseruenee, which alse blame the minister, and harangues his gowsips that it is for them to chanso mathers. They me contens', and beat mp proletarinns for their scheme-raseals who prefer spending money to working, and know well enough that little is to bo risked in such matters. A discontenter colonel is known; he is informed that the country lowks up to him as her liherator, and he is requested to place himself at their head. If he be one of the right sort, he comes with some of his confidants, a consultation is immediately held, and the phan for reforming the world is concocted. The same night tho town-hall is taken possession of, the aldermen are sent for, are made acquainted with the intentions of the revolutionists, and compelled to do homage. On this the tax-gatherer is obliged to hand over all he has in his strong-box, and shonlil it be littie, a foreed loan is raised from the disaffected shopkeepers's of the place, the alarm-bell is rung, rockets ar'e sent up, and when all the inhabitants are assembled in the market-place they are informed of what has taken phace. Now follow loud cheers for the putriots, exprecially for the general-in-chief, as le is dublied. A proclamation is then put forth, addressed to the whole nation, which is, of course, read with applanse, and as soon as a sufficiently animating quantity of spirits has been drunk, it is resolved to march upon the next market-town. All hasten to fetch their arms and horses; the women howl and refase to let their husbands depart; and, indeed, with many of them no great amount of persuasion is requisite. They slip out of the back door to the forest till the tumilt is over. At length, after midnight, the patriotic aray is ready to march. Though few, they are full of courage; the bottlo is passed round once more at the expense of the regiment, and the heroes samish in darkness.

MOUNT IZTACCIHUALT-THE WHITE WOMAN.

If all goes well, reveral villages are surprised and join the rebels. When the prineipal villago of a dis. trict hae given in its adherence, a provisinmal government is appointed, med the momy ( 200 t men, perhaps) organised, armed, and drilled, tho newspapers are full of it, a detachment of fifty soldiers is sent unt pgainst them by the prefect, but returns with all speed at sight of the superior numbers of the foe. The prefect precks up his archives und hastens off, whide every one seeks to conceal his property of all kimds. Men who ean be depeaded on are sent to treat with the insurgents, to sound them, and to promine to join them in order to gain time. Meanwhile flect messerugers are sent off to the proviucinl government and to the federal goveru-ment. The provincial muthoritios complian that they have neither mony nor urms to put dowit ti. increasing movement, presime that the conspinity has far-cxtending ramifieations, talk of a certain party, who ar waiting for the favourable moment only, and reguest suenty assistance from the eapital. If the promanchatos were enorgetic men, they might generally march halt way acows the conntry betoro meeting with any organised resistance; but they decline going firmerely look armund to nee where they can lay their hands on some public funds and guard against a surpriso. They have great ditticulty in keeping their men together, who have all korts of seruples remly when the excitement is at an end. An instance is relatid wher hhole nation, whiel id as soon as a sutti-ts has been drunk, it market-town. All es ; the women howl epart ; and, indeed, ount of persuasion the back door to At length, after ready to march. rage ; the bottlo is ase of the regiment,

A proclamation j

2

 01408 y $x+x+2$ 2 2 m $\operatorname{con}^{2}+x^{2}$ omplaw that they own ticinereasing piracy las far-exin party, who ar only, and reguest If the pronianat generally mareh necting with any line going farhey cma lay their rit against a surkecping their men ces realy when the e is relutend where the wholn quota of $a$ village declared to their chief that they must now return home to have their shirts washet!
At length information is brought that the government troops have marehed. A comecil of war is held; it is resolved to ocenpy a strong position, to with haw to the momitains; nevertheless they remmin for the present in the village. A well-combined attack would in a general way settle the whole affiar, and placo them all at the mercy of the government; but milder neasures must be attempted. The blool of citizens must not be shed, and those who have strizel must be reclaimed. The rebels proadly rejoct all advances; some of the outposts fire on each other from a distance of a thousime yards; a dizen of the government soldiers desert; this is a bad wam, and prudence is the mother of wishom. Souse bonest people of the neighbourhood wher their modiation, which is necepted, and the end of the stery is, that atter several bootless marches, after wasting a tolerable quantity of powder, an agreement is come to, according to the terms of which the chiefs of the promuncindos lay down their arms and acknowlolge the authority of the government, retain the rank, dignity, and pay which they bave conterred on themselves, keep, what they have stolen from the state, dismiss their army, and are all completely ammestied.
This is the way in which civil commotions incessantly arise, and are as ineessantly extinguished, and all real progress is impuded, the social condition deteriorated, comurree injurel, and property tendered insecure, whilst the arny continnes to be supplied with incompetent coloucls and generals. Siantama himself signed thirteen thonsand commissions whilst he was at the head of atliiis. Many of them were given to mere children aud others to reward other services besides such as were of a politieal or military nature. Thus it is rehatel, a gool Germm shoemaker made his excellency a womderful hoot tor his club-fiont. The artist was rewated acoroding to his deserts with a captain's commissim, for he had heiped to put the first man in the republic on his legs, the cother now dotermined not tostick to his last, lut to strut about with his flumed lat and sathre. 'Tho shoe-shop, however, was still carried om, atthongh the ciptuin had so much to do with his comades in the collee-honses and guard-roms, and lad such dibliculty in quenching the thirst thereme given rise to, that the mester had me time to cut out, whe to book after his jommeymen. The thse tomers complianed of corns, of hal workmanhip, and therving Coman shomaker hat lweomo a pen vagabontising Mexicmu emptain.
No wonder, then, if in the Mexian arme of ofteens as thas constituten, mateur whlners, handits, and forgers are to be mit with. Whew there is sueh a total want of eclucation amp morality, there is just an little military homour. Siet with all this, Spunard, Mestizo, or puletarim alike, helieve themserves to bo the erram of the earth in peint of knowledge, netivity, and conrage. Thuir vanity, as with most meducated uations, is mblombed. Thu war with tho United States did them an intuite dend of good in this mespect. They finm that they were not precis?! the invineible horoes that they demed themselves-especially in the presencer of their mintresses. Hut even on this neesision there was gin popular or genead rising in the enmiry, or Scott's army would have been mmihilated.

He was allowed to penetrate from Vera Cruz into the interior, across the mountains, and throngh the mist diflicult passes, without an arm being raised against lim. And ho was further permitted to oseupy such a position, and to bring ul his reservo and supplies, withont a blow being struck. "The laurels which Scott gained," says Sintorius, "were owing less to his tacties and bravery than to the weakness and inmolence of his opponent."

Such, then, is the present state of Mexico, a country presenting as great a variety and richncss of resourcis in the vegetable nad mineral work as perhaps :uy country on tho face of the earth, prossessing almost mequalleal advantages in climate, soil, and configmation, nud yet are three of its finest provinces, Sonma, Durango, nad Cinuloa, overrun by wild Apaches ant Comanches, whom a handful of men ought to drive any day from their forest and mountuin lairs, while the more eivilised portious of the conatry have been for a long time past sulbjected to the discomforts ame alome of revolutions, bronght abont ly a necdy, unprincipled. and demmalised set of oflicinls and ndventures. It is to be hoped that the interference of Britain, Franow, and Spain, in the enuse of owder and good government. will work in quiek change, and introduce forthwith na entirely new order of things.

III.

Abchet of the Pomicatapeth on Smoke Monetain-Chalob and Valhey of minaco-Cumous hites- hean stientipho Mission-hacienda on Fahe of Tomacucu.

A smala party left Mexico early on the morning of the 17 th of Janury, of a charming day. They wem bomal to ascemel the grind Promeatepetl, next to Orizin: the lofiest of the Mexiem Andes. The name derivel tain," is mut prepusacssing, yet we have an uppoxim:tion to its mest repulsive syllable in the Turkish " "t"p pri" or hill-tell of the Arabs. It was considered hy llumboht, whon determinel its clevation at $17,-1$, feet as the highest point of the country. M. Sartorins says, in his work of Mexieo, that as enty as the yow 1s.e. :and 1825, he repentedly felt convinced thit b had seen smoke rixing from the erater, thongh he was dishelieverl, at lenst by the untiver. In April, 18 , 4 , Mr. Froderiek von Gerolt, ifterwards P'russian Ministu at Washingtom, ascended to the summit ; according a his estimation, the enormons crater was about a leagh in cirementruce, with steep, almost perpendienlar, sill of about 800 feet in elevation. At the bottom were two sulphur springs, the water of which was precipitaten| inta the lower part of the criter. In tho upper fart strom issued from numerons erevices, also impreghan al with sulphur. They also rise from the crater itself in greater or less volumes, nud consequently may be wern at a distance. It was found impossible to deseend inth the emater. At this height the eold is very intense, but the rarefied atmosphere was still more tromblesoms, and give rise to an opllressive feeling of anxicty. Thero was on this momuin, as on Orizavn, a deseri tract between the grasery region and the snow.

Aher hais first expedition, l'opuenteptl was fre(quenty nsemadel ly Burupenas. One party urvived at the summit just as the bowels of the momutain were lis combustion; the erater vomited lorth sumok, rom Vera Curn into tlee and through the most m being raised against mitter to occupy such: reserve and supplies. "The laurels which ' were owing less to his: weakness and intolence te of Mexico, a country ad richness of resourcis world as perhaps ally arth, possessing almost te, soil, and configni:fuest previnces, Simumb, by wild Aprches mad men ought to drive any untain hars, while the puntry have been for $n$ rliscomforts aml abum a needly, unprincipled. fand adventurers. It is see of Brituin, France, fud good government. introduce forthwith or Smere Mountaincas Antonio-Canal. op -Cumoun Ritras-lina. al Onelasks-Citalcu-chmeca-Mкмикиs on'me on lianm of tomacuco.
arly on the morning ot ming thy. They wern alepetl, noxt to Orizat es. The name derivel oke, and trytil, "monn. ve have an npproximale in the Turkish "'ty It was consitered biy s elevation at IT,:-: ountry. II. Sartoritis at as enty as the yens felt convineed thit lue erater, though he was ives. In April, $18: 4$ meds I'russian Ministur summit ; according ${ }^{\circ}$ ter was ahout a leazu ast perpendienlar; sith t the bottom were two hich was precipitatell

In the upper part jees, also impregnatell m the crater itself in requently may be sern wsible to alescemal int" cold is very intense, till more troublessme, feeling of anxiety. on Uriznya, a deept ad thes snow. ?opocateptl was liceOno party urrived els of tho mountnin romited forth smoks, and great masses of atone were cast up, though without renehing the edge, as they always fell lack agnin into the alyss. Fine sand only was hurled high up in the air.
It is well known that the momiain was aseended by order of Cortes, and that the first visitors beheld molten masses in the crater, which they took for collt, and were at great puins to got out. It is also known that the sulphur was procureal from this crater at great risk, which served the Spaniards for the tabrication of the first powiler in Mexico. The volcano hits, therefore, been in aetivity for now three centuries, without exhibiting any violent cruption.
No swoner had our party issued forth from the sate of San Antonio (see j. I 60 ), than the renowned volento could be at once perceived in the horizon, and not fitr from it the lofty show-monutain, Lataceihuatl, from tho Aztee, "iatau," white, and "cilmatl," woman; and so named from in Indian tradition, alloded to in a splendid passige of Preseott's, where he aleseribes an episente in the lite of the Conquistador, and which has comseenatel the "white woman" as the witis of its more formidable neighbur. Surtorins remarks more philosophically, if less poctically, that this mountain bears the sime rolation to Popocatepetl, as the Cofler of Perote thoes to Orizava, "it in a ruined the from the samu hearth." (See p. I68.) Cumpures with the other heights that rose up arounl them, "says the historian of the expedition,M. Lavericte, -on the great Mexicunpland, and which semed insignificant in their presenee, these twin mumataine lifted up their bright white helmets, as if to dety us beforehame. It really semerl, inhed, ins if our ditlientties were to commence at the onset, lor notwithstanding that the previous momeths had beren very dry, the orent causeway that lemds in a statight line from Mexien to Penon Viego, was subnerged by the fir-spealiug waters of Lake Tezenoo. This ciremestanee momered it necessary to fullow a very devions rome. Wee left the chureh of Chumbinses, it place of smane edrbrity in the warlike ammals of Mexico, th, the right, und crissing the Mexicult:ingo, enlivened by the Indian bontes that ply upen the camal of C'lateo (ste pase 161, tin seene wh the camal, with a general view of the Valley of Mexico, and the two monatains on the horizan, we arrived at Ixtapalapan, onee a $1^{\text {wower- }}$ ful and puphlous city, but now a ruinous village. Near this place is a burten hill, which, in the time of the Aztecs, was the locality of a curions ecremony. 'Perozonne relates that there was at temple on the said hill, 'lahualhinean, at which the Acheacatains, or chiefs of Maxiou, camo to present as an otfering, little packets called enamhnmatl, amd which inclosed whatever hat been cauctully removed from the visages of wilews, whose duty it was to remain during a mourning of eighty day: withont washing themselves.

But that which eonstituted the pride of lxtapalapun, before the morival of the Sknimeds, and which bonsted of Gifteen thomsand lumses in the time of Curtes, were its garlens, celdumed thromghont the whole enuntry of the Aztecs. Traversed by a novigable eamal, which commanicated with the Jake of 'lezeneo, they were divided into sepmrato portions, morned with graceful trellis-work, which supported climbing phants, while at their baso gres shruls, with bright fingrant flowers, and delicious fruits. The horders of the enmal were decorntel with eurions senlptures, and wide steps leal down to the level of the whter, which was finther distributed over the garden in lesser channels, and thas maintained a propetual coohess in the shades. The estallishments devored to horticulture in Europe would not at that time hear comparison with what the art of the Aztres hitd efiected. A las! scarcely had "t gencration of the "more civilised" Europroms succeeded to that of Cortes, than this very spert, once so charming, coull no longer be known. Ixtapalapan, its buildings and gardens, were all alike aleserted; the waters drained from the tible land, and it.s wood eut down by the conquistulores, have ieft behind them nothing but waline efferescences, while repulsive reptiles and birds of prey have male their home in the midst of ruins that were onee the palaces of kings. The mismble remnant of population in the village lerives a scanty subsistence from these efflorescences of antron, or carbonate of sodia-called tequesquite in the country, and which men, women, and children are daily employed in collecting for the consumption of Mexico.

The little camban erossed this phain at noonday : horses and men were alike overwholmed with the heat, whinst clomls of acrid ilust, amb the Inichaness of the snow-white erystals, litigued rese ami lung: At length thry reached the group of monntains whith streteh like an island from Sin Nicolas to Santa Marta. Euch separate mountain in this district bears a mame, borrowed from the Elmistim mythumg, Sinta Clua, Sinta Maria, Sinta Marta, San Yagu, dee Their dark ontline alistinctly manked in the blan sky, and the barrenness of their acelivitios, martioshed by any streans, attest their voleanic origin.
A mass of detached rocks presented themselves on the westem slipe of these nuruatians, which, at a distance, resembled the thantistic ruins of a castle. They consisted mainly of three enormons matises of basalt, stuck ap like obelisks-a raised momil. One of them was eleft. or sumbered in two, "pparently by the lightning. They were a mile or more from any wher rocks. It seemed, indeed, as if they had heen thrown, or cast, by somo probligions volenic impulsion, risht into the hollow formerly uecupied hy the Lake of Tenochtitlan. and there tixal in tho soil, which subserfantly held by them, whilst the rest wats carried inw:y aronmi, thus leaving them, as it were, iswhted on a monnd, or montionle. Nem the momatans progress is impeded, it not rendered ittogether impossilhe, by at chas of rocks and munal preefipecs, Intween which are aceasimally small enltivated spots; lut fiagrant plants and aromatic partures eluthed the surfine of the more level lout unduhating upland. To the lette was the great Lake of Trexeoco; behind them the white walls nud rocks or' Mexieo; in front the colliptic cone of the volcano of Ayolta. 'The expedition arrived at nunset, well wearied, at Sian Indro, where they intended to pass the night, but imfortmately the flace was neeppied by suliliery, who ham invaled the town, and even the lacienda ol 1stapaluean, situated a league further. They had no alternative, then, but to push on with thatir worn out mules to Chales, which they reachod about nine at night.

Lackily, the next diny being Sundny, they obtained some rest, amel limether strenethened their party by an arrino and his mufes, who were on their way to prowure ice from the monntains. They then effected an emrly start om the 19 th, the rond trom Chuleo to Thamamuleo leating through a beautifil cultivated comntry. The land sloping gently was ensily intigsted by little streams of pellucid water, but maize and barley seemed to he the only erops. As to cattle no one seemed to trouble themselves about them; they are sent in the daytime among the stubble, and they are fed merning and evening with a little maize straw. Brought up in the rough sehool of alversity, the Mexican ox is a perfect model of solriety; he feerls as he can without complaining, works as little as possible, and revenges himself by leaving as a legacy the most detestable beef possible.

A league and a halif from Cbalco they passed the cotton mills of Miraflores. Messis. Martinez del Rio employ some hundreds of natives in this factory, which is therefore a benefit to humanity, as well as to the country in which it has been founded at great expense. Higher up on the hill side is Thalmanalco, with a very insignificant modern church flanked by the ruins of a Franciscan convent, commenced shortly atter the confuest, but which never rose beyond the first arehes to the crypt. The exquisite heanty of what remains, however, richly and gracefully carved in the Moorish style, but in the hold proportions of the lieaissance, make it much to be regretted that the lmiding was not completed.

They arrived by daylight at A mecameca, and calling upon Don Pablo l'erez, well known in the country for the interest which he takes in all that concerns the Popocatepetl and his brother Don Sitturnino l'erez, whose love of field-sports had faniliurised lim with the mountain, volmecered to aecompany them on their pryjected ascent. They also obtained two guides, Angel Bastilla and Frincisco Aguilar, one of whom was to have the eommand of the brigale of porters, whilst the other was to lave elinge of the equipige of the commission to be lett helow, and to forward such :upplementary instruments and provisions as might be fonnt to he dexirable. The most difficult thing to obtain was a pulley, and one was only found atter a deal ut research. An incident like this tells valumes of the $l^{n}$ imitive habits of the inhabitants of the upland of Mexico. They are ging slowly, impereptibly, but still irmessantly, back to an almost savage condition. As is the case of the Orizava, the Aleade of Amentneca also desired an othicial witness hefore he conld give a certificate of an ascent really aceomplished, even by a Govermment Eixpeditiom, for ugreat many persons were satid to have previously obtained such upon tallacions representations of suceess, and for merely imaginary achievements.

The members of the eommission were assembled on the morning of the 20 th of January, with righteen porters, two guides, anl Hon Sitmrino l'erez, in the square of Amecameca, and they issued thence, and ont of the town, rejoicing in the prospect of success. The porters were almost all men employad in extreting sulphur from the erater. Among then were two Indians of the Chichimee race, stout fellows, to whom fatiguo secmen to be n thing unknown and unfelt. They were brothers, one called Vieente, the other Guadalue Teyes.
The tirst suot they arrived at was Tomacoco, $n$ hacienda or farm situated in one of the most pietu-

[^11]resque places possible. On one sille was the plain of Anecameca, framed in wooled hills, on the other the Volenno and the Sierra, the lofty white peaks of the first seeming to rise up from out of an immense dark pine-forest. A rivulet, that tumbled down noisily from the mountain above, was made first to turn it mill and then to irrigate the lands. The landlord, Don Jusé Mria Perez, an old man of seventy-one years of age, but still active and robust, which speaks well of the upland climate, received them patriarchally.

Hence they proceeded by the road to Puebla, which is exceedingly picturesque, but also replete with ntstackes and diffientics in the shape of fallen rocks and trees, and abrupt ascents and deweents. In parts it becomes a mere pathway, cut amid soil and stone, and rendered devious by the growth of great forest-tress Vegetation was indeed splendil in its vigour, and the fortifying fragrance of the great pine-trees was softencl by n light bracing ntmosphere.

They were now in reality ascending the foot of the colossal mountain. At times the road was so binl that most of the purty were obliged to get down. Dun Saturnino, however, kept to his saddle, mailed, as it wore, to a sturdy little col, ; ho seemed to be nitterly indifferent to stumps or trunks of trees, or shipery precipices. Yet was this painful rond the same as that which Cortes had followed three centuries betore on his way from Cholula to Mexico, and tho description of whieh cuabled Prescott to introluce a vivid and eloquent account of the ropocatepetl and of his " white wite" into his Mistory of Mexico.

IV.

Asci:nt of the Morntan-The Rancuo of Thamed:Cbecifin at the hine of Pebpetual snow-Effects of the Rabefaction of the atmosifiebe-Tile Pioo Mayor and Eispinazo del. Dhivolo - The CbaterFomerolek, on Smoke lloles-lespimaberos, oh Jets of Watble and Varorn-Siclemira Derosits-A Night in the Cueva hel Mcemo. or ideab Nas's GmottoMolnino breaking over Miadico, as serf fhom the Summit of lopocateleti.
Arten three hours of perpetual ascent, the Puchla roal ilescended into a ritvine, which it followed for some distance, to the right, till it once more began to ascend, over a spur butween Mounts Hiclosochitl and lenaelio, at the eastern nlope of the momntain. The erest of this spur was a kind of amked table-lant, clat with yellow zacate, and burrowed with the boles of rodents. For the finst time wo could contemplate from the naked uphand the volcano, whiel seemed to welcome us with a noost ghecial physiognomy: To the right was Mount Torrenepmingo, and the Pico del Fraile, the latter of which was cut up with frightfinl precipiecsall, however, sloped off to the Valley of Amecaneca, bearing in their roeky folds more or less ubundant waters, supplied by the melting snows ahove. Thr ridge tlut comected us with the Torrenpange constituted the waturshed between the Valley of Amecuncea and that of Pucbla. A ravino sprang from its lase, which took a north-ensterly direction, round Mount Tlamanas. Crossing this, and climbing over the rocky and precipiturs shoulder of the last-mentioned momtain, we soon luad the pleasure of being able to distinguish the little rancho of Thanacas, embosomed in pines, and at some distance helow ns.

Notwithstanding its easterly exposure, the elinato of the runeho of Tlamacas is severe. Trees re few in number and wide upart ; their trunks aro hotted, ne side was the plain of d hills, on the other the lofty white peaks of the out of an immense dark tumbled down noisily as made first to tumia e lands. The landloril, Id man of seventy-one nd robust, which syeaks ived them patriarchally. e road to Puebla, which t also replete with olnupe of fallen rocks and descents. In parts it mid soil and stone, and th of great forest-trees. 1 in its vigour, and the pine-trees was softemel eending the foot of the: he road wes so bich that d to get down. Din is saddle, mailed, as it - seemed to be utterly s of trees, or slipuery in road the same as that re centuries before on co, and the description introduce a vivid ant rocatepetl and of his $t^{\prime}$ Mexico.

Rancto of Tlamach:RPETCAL SNow-herficts Атмовриere-'Tie Pico avolo - Tine cbater-- Respinamenos, on Jizs ra perosits-A Night Dead Mas's GrortoICO, AS SEEN FROM TIIE
ual ascent, the Puelda which it followed for it once more began to mints Itichoreditl and $t^{\prime}$ the momintain. The maked table-land, chad ed with the holes of ould contemphate from ieh seemed to welcome my. 'Tu the right was Pico del Fruile, the frighttinl preeipiceswhley of Amecancen, ore or less almudant 3 snows ahove. 'Thr' Torrenpunge constiValley of Anecancea sprang from its base, sction, round Momit mbing over the rocky ast-mentioned monnof being able to disnuens, embosoned in ns.
xposure, the elimatis vere. Trees re few trimks are hatted, not tall and slim, and their branches are eovered with mosses and lichens. The soil is a loose volennic sand, that with difficulty affiords sustenanee to a few long blades of dried grass. The only habitations were a kind of soeter or ehalet, built with sawn planks, nud three log huts. These are for the use of the sulphimr collectors; and there was also a building for the sulpllur itself, but it had been aceidentally destroyed by fire. (See p. 169.)

Our brigade of porters had anticipated us at this mountain station, and imparted amimation to the seene, that contrusted agreenbly with the silence of roek und forest around. The fires lit up in front of the hats, the neighing of stceds, and an ocensional shot fired to keep away the wolves, made the solitude less frightful to some of the party, who seem to have been but little accustomed to solitary adventurcs. The calcined foot of the voleano, surmounted by its dome of snow, and ouly separated from their livouac by $n$ thin line of mission wisely prepared for the fatignes of the mornpines, appeared, indeed, to them, as a dumb sphinx, ing by corly rest, the Indians, to whom the ascent was daring them to their mext day's exploits.

Preparations were made at this spot for a twentyfour hours' stay at the summit of the mominain. l'rovisions were cooked and mule rendy, the loads mul instruments were distributed, and skins and other coverings provided. Whilst the members of the Com-no fatigne at all, danced and simg round the fires.

Everyone was on funt by daylight. The Indians were alvendy gome with the brethers Teyes. The Commission next mounted. They were very silent, for it was very cold, aud some of its members appenred te be deeply impressed with the magnitude of the task they land entered upon. "Our looks." says the historian, "tixed themselves apprehensively mon the colossins whose summit was at that monent bithed in the ruseate hems of a rising sum. The boumbines of the wood wre crossel in about a quarter of an homr, and they entered mien a sabulons distaiet, whence they gained the baranea or chassu of Huiluac, which, strange to say, was dry, with is samily bottom. The water was in purt frozen alove; what did thow down, fureolated hemeath the sumb.
beyond the hamen ot Hailoac, the rond turned in an ensterly direction round the northern flanks of the mountain. The sandy soil readered onwarl progress very fatiguing to the horses. All traves of vegetation, save a few patches of brown and yellow liehens upon the rocks, haul disalyreured ; but, as if to recompronse them, ther could gaze belon unen the V;alley of Pueld:, hathed in the moming sumshine, and presenting a seene of marvellous beaty.

Starting at six, it was half phat seren when they rached a moky wall known as the Buten. There was a little rextimplater for the sulphur-gatherers at this spot, and the harses were allowed a monent's breathing time. Another lann's toil took them to La Cruz, at little promontory, nut fire firm the region of perpethal suow, and surmouted by a crucilix.

Here wergene hal to set down, and the howes were sent back to Tlamaciss. Jlere alow tho parte refieshend themselves, and prepravel tir the remamiter of the aseent on font. A start was afleeted at nine ocheck, Don Siturnino leading the way, the west following like a line oft she'p. Nut a word was spoken, emryone regular step were fomm to preserve the mpinatory frowers lunt, and to exhanst the liniss the least. Mesis. Salazar :med Oeliri gawe in tirst, they had haten their fert with heary pattens to save them tiom slipbing. An hudian guide who was with them, alter whorting them to exertion, gave them ip in despair, and with at hurt run and af few tommts, aceomplished as if lee weye toster brother to a ehamois or a mountain shece, lue joinel the party in alvaluce. One of the fuhkus who on before, digging holes wilh a hatchet in the ief aml show for the teet of thove who fibllowid luhthen ; lay thi- means the zone of glaciers was soon promet, inil they roached that of perpetnal now.
The :inew presenten a gool forting, fill superior to that on' the ice and volcamic sand; lunt this andantage Wish men than compensated for by the sutlerings Brombt in ty the dry, cold, and rarified atmongher'. Witio most of the party, the fices lecane pale and the lips bhue, while the dilated nostrils nut nervous contrictinnt of the mouth, shawed to whit exigeneies the rempinatory procers was sulgected. M. Sumitag also emplaimel if pain in the region of the heart, mad hat to wait awhih. The major-homend the guide, Angel, were alteoly firr in advanes. Aiter hating carefilly veiled their faers, so ats to insure a lithe leed of artiticind air, wima iat loadel with eathonic: acid, near the mouth, the atreent was recomm need, bat still they had to rest every firty or tilty preers. M. Somutag become norse, his comentenamer assumed : learlen livid har, and froth cane out of his lipe, hat still he persevered with indomitahle comage.
It was half past one hefore they attained the fringe of show that hordered the lijns of the crater, bud whieh was som suceceded by a warm bed of samb. They were ghal to cast theuselves down uron this and seck a little repose, but the skin dried so quickly as to wrinkle ane illuost oraek nuder tho contraction. Refreshments had no beneticial effeet. As to spirits, they burnt the mouth nud stomieh, and left them more prostrato than befure.

Even wine rather increased than diminished their faverish thirst. As to solids, they land no appetite for such. The pulley was, howover, hoisted mon a enpstan and a rope allixed, but the Indi:ms resalutely welinol to expone themserves to the peril of so slemder an "pmathes, ind nothing canne of it.
Such portions of the crater as were arecessible were in the meantime explorel. The party stoxel upen its north-morth-enst side. To tho right was the lico Mayor, which, from M. Sountag's alneasmu ments, was found to be 147 metres above the puint where they stood; to the left the tooth-like elge of tha bipinazo del Jiabolo peored over stratin of perpundientar rocks. On the side of the crater, at what they called the breach of Siliceo, a beil of volemic samis sumb rock led down at :un inclination of 35 degrees. Shit it was merrly held up by rude rocks below; over whith :uything that was disturbed from its place volled down into the depths leyond. (.iee 1, 176.)
There were thaces of a kind of rat at this extrema elevation, and the major-domo and Angel saw whe but could not eatel it. They described it as laving a meddish eont. Thero was, howover, no vegetition. The air was londod with sulphuroons exhalations, which cante from fumeroles or smoke-holes in the interior of the crater, and in the rocky ereviees to the right of the brach near tho Pico Mayor:

There was a desernt in the same direction, a downwarl pathway which led to the rocks that suppurt the previously-deseribed dihris, nad numong which is : grotto kniwn to the sulphur-gatherers ins ha Cuma a del Muerto, on account of one of them having dien theme suddenly. There is another similar and correxpundine phatform lelow this, on which a rude capstum had been arectod. Hence the descent is made to the luitom of the crater.

From this phatform, which is desiguatool as that of Malaente, the whelo eireminfence of the ariter could be conterplated. The walls were more or less rifenlanly dixposed, and the stratitication of the thick heels generally horizontal, with a slight dip tward the P'ieo Mayor: But helow the Espinaza del Diahelo the rocks wore broken up into irregular masses, often wery shatry amil it was naidst these that the fumeroles mist alounded. There were none on the stratitial rows. A vist fuantity of rocky debris filleal the sifes at tha buttom of the" crater, up to varibus heighte, highust benasith the phat form of Malacate itself. 'This mass of debris reluess the eiremoference of the buttom of the crater considerably. In the latter are sitnated the respambern, as they are called, columus of watur :und of valour of varions colours, red, yellow, mat white. Otheris exist in the state of simple chimueys or timerites.

Seen from the platform of the Malacate, these respiraderos resemble a colum of steam issuing trom a locomative, but MI. Sountag, who afterwards desemed into the erater, found that one of them was mine French yards in diameter. The volume of water, however, varies, it appars from different reports, at dificrent sensons of the yeur, as do also the mumber of respiraderos. Capitain Don Lorenzo Prrez Castro, who descended in 1857, found tivo; M. Somitag found only te skin dried so quickly E under tho contraction. ll effect. As to spirits, meh, and left them nore wine rather inereased 1 thirst. As to solidis,

The pulley was, lowsand a roje nilixed, but to expuse themselves to aths, illid mothing came as were alecessible were The party stamel umon its o right was the l'ico g's almeasmonurnts, was the pint whore they e edge of tha Ripinazo of perpendicular rocks. what they ralled the anic sants tund rock led degrees. Jint it wats below, over which :myits place molled lown . 176.$)$ of rat at this extrem. ad Angel satw onur but ibed it as having a molr, no vegetation. The exhalations, which cume in the intrrior of the is to the risht of the tmo direction, a downveeks thint shpinit the 1 nhong which is a herers as la Cuevaldy en having tied theme ilar and correxpmating rude capstan had been aule to the buttonn of desiguatud as that of e of the crater could re more of lasis dipenfon of the thick beds light dip (wwand the intaza del Dialols the lar masses, whten wey at the filmuroles most, the stratitied rooks. filled the siles at thi ious heights, highest itself. 'Thin mitss of of the bottum of the tter are sitnated the olumas of water and I, ycllow, nul whitr. simple chimmeys or

Mabicate, these restean issuing from a ifterwards deserended tem was nine French of water, however; reports, at diflerent number of respiraPerez Cinstro, who Sountug found only four. The power of the jet was so great that a stone cight or mine inches in diameter cast into it was immosliately thrown aside. A thermometer which nurked $150^{\circ}$ bahrenheit was at once broken when inmersed in the water. Sulphur is colleeted from around these respiraderos. It is found insmull compact masses, in matius mixed with sund, and as flour of sulphur deposited by the vapours. The vaters re-mite to form little reservoirs at the bottom of the enater. These also vary in number and amonnt nt dillerant veasons thid epuchs, mul are at the stme time mone or less neid and sulphareons, aceorling to the deneth of prolominance of thid. Exsept in the neighbourhoon ot the vespituleros, the lottom of the crater is eovered with snow. On tha way down by the cable from the platfom of Mahacato, a cavern is passend from whene insules an cohl wind, that is suid to lhow son strongly an to somutimes make the sulphar collectors turn round selpharis. M. Somatig found the bottom of the erater to be clevated $2,8.41$ metres aliove Mexico, ami from the Pieo Mayor to the Espinazo del Diaholo was a distane of $\mathbf{S} \dot{6} 6$ metres, leaving about 800 yards as the dimeter of the crater.

Mowsis. Salizan and Ochor joinem the rest of the party at half-pust lour the same evening. Their suffriugs hal been gront and very much prolonged. The Guevi did Muerto was cleared oht for a sheltering place during the night. It would, however, only hold tive persons, so the grides and Indians had to sleepr on the platton'm. Don Saturnino had retraced his steps to Thanturits.

It wats not a very pleasant night that waich was spunt in this grotto suspended over the erater. The liofly seemed to be on tire, whilst the limbs were freceing. The sulphureous vipours made theit heads ache, und strunge noises rising up from below interripted the feverish attempts at sleep. The Indiams wone preserved their gaiety, and s:ang eheerful ditties tir into the night.

The vision that presented itself at the first break of morning wits one of mbounded magniticence. Tho patk of thizava secmed to light up as it on fire, or bike a brilliant ruby set in a dome of brightest silver. I few minutes more aml a colossal disc of purple hue projected its first bilys upon the summit of Popocathentl. The horizon semed to be bathed in a diaphatands man. tiated with tho richest colours. (imadually the luminus rays erept down, driving the shatlows of night before them, and rocks, rawimes, aud plains, the suil man the tress, ramo fonth as if by enchatatment. Immiatirl with light, the whole lameseape seemed to live and breathe.

After having made some titrther observations, the party felt the crater at ten occock, their moles were ready fir them at the Crueifix, and they got hack to tho loweho of 'Tlamaca at half-past one. Several days en aterwards spent at Amecameat in explomations oi lhe $1 \times$ xaceihuat and other points in the neighbourhowe, and M. Sountag made another ascent of the Dopoeatepetl, on which occasion he suceecded in exploring the very lastom of the cmater. The party returned to Mexicn wh the llth of Felmury, atter an absenee of twenty-fiso clays. The barometric observations made during the expedition gave ths results, for the city of Mexico, 2,277 metres; tor the rancho of 'Ihaneens, $3899 \cdot 30$ metres; for the l'ieo Mayor (lopocatnpretl), 5,422 metres; und for the soutliern peak of the Iataccihuatl, $5,081 \cdot 16$ metres. These results difler very slightly from those abtained trigonometrically by M. de Humboldt.

V.

Ascents of the Voldano Ohizava, the lofthest on time Andes in Mexico.
T'ue workings of Nature in her profonndest laboritories are, it has been justly wherved, concealed fion us. It is true that science tenches us that the metallic bases of the earths, which constitute the solid crust of the globe, are eonhbustible when exposed to the action of are or water, aud their axides give birth to quirtz "ir silex, to felspur and clay, to lime and to other rueky bases, nom it is therefine presumed that these sulstances may exist in their metallic form in the contre of the earth; but this is ns yet conjoetmal ; sor does such a theory procisely acconat for all the phemomena of voleames, or the production of eertain simple combustilile borlies, as sulphur, fluor, or phthore, and others ; possibly, howerer, heeanse their metalic haves have not yet been elimimated. But, granting ali this, still the real fact itself; amd the manner in which volennic action is actually brought about, have not yet been unfolded to us, althongh now so readily cinjectured at.

The results of' voleanic action are, however, everywhere present. The mighty torees of subtermonen ngency nre to be sern in the inclined stratn and disturbed disposition of the selimentary rock formations almost all wer the carth's surface, and elsowhere in the heaving up of islands or mountains from the abyss, or the erumbling them to atoms, or the emission if smoke, flames, cinders, and lava from their ignivimous mouthis, or in the vents established by their own forces between the interior and the exterion.

In Mexico vast revolutions hitwe been eflected by volcanie ageney; the Cyclopean forges are, indeed, for the most part cold, but the subterranean fusces are not everywhere extinct, and occasionally bunst forth here or there, committing the most extensive raviages, or convilsing the enth with territic spasms.

In the somth a succession of volcaners, passing firm Oajica through Chinpras, are connected with the burning mountains of Ghatemala. Cempoaltepec, oue of the loftiest points of the Cordilleras of Oajaca, is a volcanic cone ; the frequent earthquakes on the phateans of Oajaca always appear at the sfme time as those of Cimatemalia, so that a complate assemblaye of voleamic ageneies would aplene to exist there.
'The chiof' rang' of' the Mexican voleanoes lies betwen the 10 th iml 20 th degrees of noth latitude, and may be thaced firon the Atlantic to the Sonth Sea, atross the whols conatire. Near the gulf shores, about sisty miles from Verib Cruz, the isolated mountain tange of Tustla, or San Martin, rears itself above the plain. It is evident that the whole range must have swollen up like a vast bladder, and subsequently have been eloft by repeated ernptions und fallings in. The highest point is about three thousund feet abovo the sea ; several ernters are visible, and also a woud, very deep lake of fiesh water, on a little platean on the south-west side, indienting a sunken hollow. The hast recorded eruption of this volcano took place in 1789. It was preceded by an earthquake, and suhterranean thunder. A vast cloud of asles was east up to un incredible height, and carried ofl by the current of air-

IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic Sciences Corporation

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

that sets in from east to west. The ashes lay several inches deep in the streets and on the roofs of houses in towns sitnated twenty miles to the west, aul even on the opposite side of the mountnin, eight miles off, in the villago of Perote, everything was covered with ashes. Sinee then the volcano lats been at rest, but sounds as of distant thunder have been heard in the depths. The natives then siy, "The Tustlit growls!" The dwellers in the Tustla, itself, however, nver that the sounds come from the direction of the Peak of Orizava, and call it the thunder of Orizava. It is hence deduced that a subterrancon communication exists between the two mountains, $\pi$ eircumstance rendered all the more probable, not only by several voleanic summits rising up on the line, but also by the fact that earthguakes are felt most distinctly in the same direction.

Orizava, the loftiest mountain of the enstern chain, exhibits at the first glance its volcanic origin ; its form a majestic cone, whilst on the mugnificent snowy peak, somewhat to the east of the highest ridge, the vist erater is distinctly seen. An eruption, that lasted almost withont interruption for twenty years, took phace fifty years after the arrival of the Spaniards in Mexico, in 1569 , but it loes not appear to have been accompanied by a discharge of lava. The opinion which was entertained in the following centaries that the ascent of the mountain was impossible, is surposed

CRATER OF POPOCATEPETL.
by some to be derived from the long duration of this ernption. (See p. 177.)
In 1848 some North American ollients were said to lave attaned the summit, but Sartorins, in his exeellent work on Mexico anel the 1 Mexicans, says that no one in the country lelieved it. Three yeurs latir, on the 26 th March, 1851, a party of "ighteen young men undertook the ascent. They 1 nssed the night at the puint where vegetation censes, and noxt day they reached the lee, where the perilons part of their cuterprise began, hy suntise. After a short struggle, one half of the party, whinh eomprised varions nationalities (two Frenchmen, one Englishmm, one Ameriean, one Belgian, and thirteen Mexieans), gave up the attempt, and returned exhausted. Six of them succeeded in reaching a ridgr of rocks, uloont half way up to the snowy cone, on the north side, whence the ascent trok phace, and which can be perceivel from the sea. Here they rested, enjoyed tho prospeet, and then returned.

One of the Frenelmen, however-- - lexandre Doignon by name - reached the lighest point, nfter a further fatiguing aseent of five hours and a half. He described the day ns being perfectly elear, the air pure and transpurent, and not the slightent eloud obsearing the lowhands. Tio the east the blue surfine of the Athantic and Vern Cruz were distinctly seen; the whole of the coast and the bright prniries; the towns of Orizatva and Cordova, St. Juan, Huatuseo and Julapa, thu indented mountnin elain, stretching morth and sonth, and the talle-lands, with their numerous the line, but also by the most distinctly in the in of the eastern chain, its voleanic origin; its the magnificent snowy I' tho highest ridge, the An eruption, that lastel for twenty years, took ival of the Spaniards in not appear to liave been of laya. Thu opinion following centarics that impossible, is supposed at lualf way up to the whence tho aseent tiok od from the sea. Here t, and then returned. ver-Alexandre Doig. uighest point, after a hours and $n$ half. He tly elear, the nir pure ghtest oloud obscuring blne surface of the distinetly seen; tho t prniries ; tho towns Huaturoo and Jalapa, trotching north and ith their numerous vilhges and lakes, bounded by the snowy range of piration execedingly lifficult, and blood flowing from Popecatepetl, constituted an immense landsuape that their mouths, they were som foreed to return. The extended helore the astonished gaze of the intrepid elevation of the peak was estimated to be 18,178 feet. traveler like a gigantic drawing.

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

Tho crater ho clescribed as lying something to the south-east of the highest point, and as being some hundred feet lower down. He also fomd at its edge a hlag-statif, six Kut long, bearing tho date 1858 , and part of a North American flag, afforling proof that the honowr of having made the first ascent is dne to the Amerieans. Only two of Doignon's companions, Majoms, a Belgian, and Contreras, a Mexican, reached the edge of the erater, and they were completely exlaustel; the rurity of the atnosphere rendered res-

The inhabitants of tho little town of St. Andres Chalchicomula, on the west side of the volcano, having donbted the truth of Deignon's story, he was incited to venture on a second ascent a week subsequent to the first, or on the th of April, 18jul. He was accompanied on this oecasion ly a number of Mexicans, who, however, gave up tho uudertaking the moment they reached the snow. This time the ascent was attended with great risk. Fresh snow had fallen and covered the former track, the ehasms mind fissures were concealed by it, and our adventurer sank into it at ahnost every step, earrying with him a dlagstall, as nloo "harge thag, which he had wound ubout his body liko a seart:

Laviug attained in safrety the pile of rocks that jut out of the snow, he here unfortumately missed his way, and getting mure to the enstwards, or on the lift side, than the tirst time, he foumd his progreses imperded by an chormens chasm twenty five fert wide mul finur hundred deep, mul consisting within of terrued like mussess of ice. This chasm extended about half a leugne in in semicirule. Somo fragile bridges of ice ufberding the only mems of pussage, Doignon ventired over these, but oven then ho mot with and had to erons several other daugerous lissures, in deing whith he haul 84 to encomnter the greatest dangers. When just nearing the summit, " sterp wall of ice interponed itself between him and tho accumplishment of his hopes. Calling forth all his remaining energies, exhansted, trumbing, every moment in prill of leing preeipitated into the abyss, ho at length surmounted this lavt whactace, and was uble then to rest for a time.
It tirst onr alventurer was shrouded in a lense fog, which, however, soon fell below the snowy cone. To tho morth-east he pereeived a suceession of isolnted rocks, several hundred feet high, rising like n ruined wall. 'The nhow extented to the eilgo of the erater, within whieh, on the north side, were deep tiswures reaching to the top. A rock at the ealge of the enterer, fifteca feet thiek, is described as being quito hot, as was the soil romal the same, and even the gromad is sail to have trembleal slightly at this xpot, lout it was more probally the spectator. There was no snow, only sand and voleanic nshes. A powerful smell of sulphiar is also described as proving the ceaseless activity of the fire within, and buth the interior of the erater and tho highent westerly point of the mountain were eoverod with sulphur, the soil being also heited. Neveral rocks were also glazed on the surface (vitrenos lava, or obsidian), but within they were whiteish, like burnt lime. The cmater itself lad an owal shalne, with two inlets to the south and east. The diameter at the top was estimated by loignon at alunt 2000 motress, and the circmemfernee 6500 .
'This greme crater presented a terrific ahyss, with almost perpendiemar sides, farrowel by black burnt tissures. "We lon $\dot{z}$ down," says the marrator, "into a fearful gulf, which on the cast side may be about tive hundred and tifty feet deep. In this gulf enormons bark pyramidal rocks are seen, dividing it intos three "penings, two smaller ones to the south, the larger one: to the east. On the north side, about one humbred anul tifty feet from tho elge of the erater, a gignatic black cleft rocky pramid rises to the height of more than four hmalred feet. From the large opening to the east, volumes of steam, strongly impregnated with sulphur, emastantly rise as from a the. A low rumbling is heard in the depths, eausing to feeting of anxiety in the lifeless wilderness." The sides of the crater to tho west and south-west were less steep, and coverel with slow.
Doignon had phented his flag on the loftiest pimacle, but a brisk ice-wind male him fear that it hat been nverthrown. Ile thevefore once more returned to the sammit, and believed, for a time, that be slould be forced to 1 siss the night at the foot of the wirm rocks: the wind filling, however, he commenced his descent at four welack in the afternoon. At eight odeok he joined his compmions at the foot of the glaciers. A Sow days after this the gallant young man was honoured with a splenelitl lmnquet, mul even valuablo presents were made him by the inhalitants of St. Andres Cbalchicomula.
This, it is to be observel, was in March and $A_{p}$ pril, 1851. A still more reeent uscent has been effected at a different season of the year, in the month of Augnst, 1850, by Baron Müller, who had only arrived that month at Vera Crus from un exploring journey in Camala and the United States.
The learued traveller issued forth from the small town af Grizava tu effect tho assent on the moming of the : 10 h of August, necompanied by Mr. Soming, a Swelish gentleman, Mahmijig, and a groluate of the University of Berlin.

Tho purty, purvited with all that was necessary for their madertaking, took the divetion of the volcann across marrow but rapid strenmes and barancas-tho cerrible chasus or rnvines that intersect the uphandsand which they found lifficult to eross aven with the uid of the well-trained Mexiean horses. They arrived the tirst duy ut the hacienda, or farm of Tixpuiln, near San Juan Coscomaterpes, where they passed the night, and hidl in a turther stoek of provisions. Reyour this they renehen the Indian village of Alpatlahna, where they obtnined mative guides, whon led them liy rocky pathu ys nlong the beds of torrents and over rocky crests, hut still amidst a luxuriant vegetation.

The plain, says the harom, was now far below us, the. lightning thashed and the thumber rolled bementh our tiect, for we had nttained an elevation of twis thousumd six humbed amel sisty metres. At this elevation vegetation had changed its aspect, creepers and climbers hat disappeared, but the orehidacera still elung to the trees. After passing the night in a rancho, or shepherd's hut, they mate an early start on the morning of the 1st of Sipitember, and som rearhal the rogion of piaces. By wine in the morning they arrived at the ranclu of Grecale, three thonsand three humired metres above the level of the sea. The road kept incrensing in difficulty, and was now intersected by horvible barancas.
"At ten aul a half," says baron Mialler, "we rached the end of the hamanat of Trineliert, and the sourcer of the hio de lit Soledad. Not fire trom theme was the raneho of Jamapa, the nim of that lay'sexcursion: it consisted of a few women huts, thin prin. prietor of which, a Mexicun in rags, received us with the most polishel dignity. We refreshed ourselves at this station, washing down our meals with latalian (a strong' Spunish brandy), and slecping somully. The next ilay, on our departure, wo suw tho colussal head of the voleano glitturing with the reflected light of the sun in an azure blue sky. Shom vegetation reasend entirvly, we were surrounded by nothing hut rocks of gueiss, of trachyte, and of hornblende, with voleauic sund and cinters."

At eleven the thmellers arrived at the base of the peak, properly so called. 'The view to the westwird is described in being magnificent: the Popocatepetl and the Malinelar towered out of the lofty upland of Mexico, whase surtace seemed to be dotted with lakes that glittered like so many precious stones. To the east the landseapee was buried in fog and cloul. A slurp wind gave alditiomal intensity to the cold, and the Indian guides were derpatched into a forest below to bring up wood to construct a lut and make a fire. They dill this with great alacrity. A lofty rook of granite served as a gable; anotl:er of less dimensions filled up one of the sides; the opposite corner was supported by a stake raude firm with stones, for the soil was too hard frozen to germit of a holo lwing made in it ; the croswbeams were nude fast with rumes, and the whole was covered with straw matting.

Next morning the party marle their last prepurations for the aseent of the prak. They started at seven in the morning. Their way lay at first over lowe suil, with here und there a putch of snow, atter which they hall to climb now rocky honlders and huge detardew stones, anid deep crevices and matines.

After two hours of the most painful toil, they had attainel wh chevation of only three humedred and sixty yarls abue whence they had startell, anll hail reached the line of perpettual snow. At this point the guides gave in, wul the travelless hat to carry the instruments themseives. Tiho nseent was so alorupt that thery did not adranee more than eight or ten feet in twentylive paces. The brillinat light reflected from the suow addeel to their discomfort by duzaling their cyes and uffeeting the sight. The snow was covered with a thin coating of iee, which often gave wny beneath their ficet.
"We were nearing the crater," laron Millter relates, "when I hearil Matmejö cull ont from hehhad. I trimed romad, and saw that he liad sunk into the suow up to his urinpits ; anil at tho very moment one of my leans broke through the ice deep into the snow below. 1 , vas now fit below us, humber rolled beneath I an clevation of two xty metres. At this od its isprect, creapers ut the orchidacere still ssing the night in a made an early start on mber, and som rearhed in the: morning they , threa thousand threo of the sea. The road il was now intersected Jaron Miiller, "we of Trineherat, atid the - Not fire from thener aim of that day'sexvoorden hats, the pros rags, received us with refreshed ourselves at meals with latal:un (a leeping somully. The saw the colussal hean e rellected light of the won vegetation reasel y nothing but rocks of blende, with volcanic ed at the base of the diow to the vestward nt: the Popocatepetl of the lofty upiand of bo tlotted with lakes cious stones. To the n fog and eloud. A asity to the cold, and ed into a forest below lut and make a fire. ity. A lofty rock of ber of loss dimensions opposite corner was with stones, for the rmit of a holo lening made fust with ropres, traw matting. their last jrep itrulines $\gamma$ started at sevell in first over loose soil, ww, after which they 4 and hage detached ines.

[rinful toil, they hat e hundred and sixty ted, mul haul reached his proint the guides to entry the instrus so alorupt that they or ten feet in twenty. lected from the snow aling their ryes and $s$ coverel with $n$ thin ay beneath their feet. Baron Miller relates, on behind. I turned into tho show up to nuent one of my lems the snow below. I, however, succeeded in getting to Malmsiii, when he showed we the hole he had fitlen into. Wo were, in fact, standing over a vast abyss, fre:n which wo were separated by only a thin coating of snow and ice. It was in vain that tho eyes sought fire indications of rock or soil, columins of ice timl erystils, filled the depths beyond, und the abyss, insteal of being dark, wis splendidly lit up by some subtermetu or subnival source of light-prolably the sun's rays that fell upon the show. Feme 1 naralysed onr every movement. Atter having raised ourselves up with thet utmost cantion, we spreal out our moms at all risks over thes snow, and then we let ourselves slide slowly down. After hisving thus deseended some hinnelred paces, we arrived at a spot that appeared to be tim. There we held $n$ deliheration, for it was necessary to aletermine ! y which side it was best to turn tho abyes in order to reach the erater." But suldenly atroug wind arose, and bore up thick elousts, whicls so euveloperl them that they could not see one another at a distance of threo paces. It was impossiblo to aseend any further in such n snow storna, so that they were obliged to retrice their steps without guides or provisions, for in suving themselves from the abyss they had unforturately let the provisiou lusket filll.
They arrived at four in the afternoon at the extemprivel hut where they hal spent the previous evening. This aight was still more painfal and distressing than the previous one. The ditermination of blood to the head injected their eyes till they wore quite red, and an inflamamation, attended with the most severe pain, mumifested itself in the instance of Gountely and Malmsii, and what was their horror, when daylight came, to find that they wome jertectly blind!

All these notoward circumstancers combined, induced Baron Miiller to attempt the passage to the west, towards Sam Aulres Chatchiommata. As the Orizava appraches nearest to tho high uplatal of Mexico on that side, the travellers would have two thousund metres less distance to go to remels tho table-lind. They linul to loul the blind across a most ditlicult comintry eovered with rolled stones and volemic cinders, till, after an hour's toil, they remehed the limits of vegetation, and soon atterwarls the shelter of a tino pine forest.

After luving traversed a coltivated plain, enlivened here and them by mondow, our travellers roachod the small town of Sinn Amiress Chatchicomulat the same crening. Sumbly washings pertimed nemr an aqueduet uron tha eyes of the sutherers lum emabled them to see a little better.

From information which they olstaned at this phee, it appered that the ascent of the monntain was mueli more practieable from the south, and Baron Mialler was determineel to try ngain forthwith. But, notwithstanding it fuw days'repose, M. Malmsjia and D. Sountag sero too ill to join hin, two other persons, howeverMr. Cumpbell, nu inspretor ol telegraphs, mud M. ile la Huerta-voluntered to :ucompany him.

The Citaltepotl, " the mountain of the star:" as the Indisus call the Orizava, or, as some have it, Orizabin, was enveloperl in denso clonds the morning of the 8th of September, 1856, Buron Mialler rulates, when he bade farewell to his friendes, nud left Sian Andres Chulchicomula amidst the good wishes of the inhabitants.

Two courageons and experiened Indians, whose services lud been obtained for mo by the prefect, hal been sent on beforelant, in order to lay in provisions of wood and water, and deposit the same in a grotto that was sitnated on the sonth side of the mountain, just below the limits of perpetial snow, and where we were to spend the tirst night. My pirty was composed of M:C Camplell, M. de La FLuerta, and two attendints, all four on horseback; and we had besides, a mule lalen with provisions.

Starting with spirit, we soon attained a table-laml, the surface of which was diversified lyy a great number of voleanic bills of little elevation, and beyond which were fine forests of pine and fir ; but our way was not more olnstructed by tallen trees than it was by occasional deep ravincs aul the uecessity there was for following the most impracticable nad dangerons pathways.

It ubout five in the evening, as we were thas tuiling along the side of a baranca, the horse that bore M . Huerta lost its footing and fell. He was near me, and as he fid on a smooth rock, I expected to see lim lurled into the depths of tho abyss lelow; Lut the Mexican horses are extraordinatily sagacious, and tho poor brute extricated itself and its rifler from their peribus position with marvellous promptitule and address.

It was lato at night befire omr travellers reached tho grotto. It was not dark, however, the firmament being lit up by a tropical moon.
'The preparntions for tho asent were enmmenced by the earliest dawn on the ensming day, and, fifter an hour's tuil, they reached the last limits of vegenation, and then the zone of perpeturl snems. The horses were so thoroughly done ny that they hail to be sent back to the grotto.

The atmosphere, says Baron Mialler, was so raretied that unt poon steds could scarcely inhale a sutlicient quantity of oxygen, und their brathing was as deep und elitlieult as it they hat galloped it long stage. The men were also sensible of tho same inthence; but birils seem to bo indiflerent to it, for leve, at an olevation of dive thousamd fivo hundied yamds, 1 . satw two falcons playing in the air tull seven landred yards above me.

The travellers arrived without any accidents at the fields o! nnow, out of which pieces of rock jutted here and there, and helped them much in their seramble upwards. By noon they hat attained a little plation'm covered with snow. This point, which premented a smooth surfice of a tew tee tupuare, was tho last where there was any possibility of reposing thenselves before reaching the voleano, so thay necordingly rested here ar few moments to refresh themselves.

Tho aseent was recommeneed after a guarter of a hour's rest, but the shepths of the show presented extraordinury obstacles to our progrems. We went up to our kures at every step, and as the slope generally excealed an anglo of torty-live degrees, wo had to ernwl on nll fours. The chief dillicilty was to lyeathe, and we could not get over twenty or twenty-five pues without rest. Spite of a veil and of green surectacles, my oyos sntlered this time: but even the pain derived from that alliction was sumplssed by an attuek I experienced nt ubout two o'elock. It cume on like the sensation of it red-hot iron searing my lungs, and firom that moment, uvery time I took il Irenth, I experienced ugonising puius in the ehest, and which, with intervals of relief, becamo so neuto at times as to leavo me perfectly seuseless. My two friends and tho Indian guiljes were so terrified at the intensity of the attacks, that they wished to return, but I would not consent to that.

The sun had at least warmed the travellers up to that time, but the heavens coming on cloulded, they now begin to experience a sharp colt. They now began to feel alike wearied and discouraged ; the day was already far advanced, the summit was still far off, and the Indian guides refused to go any farther. Even the companions of the baron begin to lose courage. It was only upon the latter's lecharing that, if left alone, lie would still persevere in the ascent, that they consented to remain with him. It was not till after un-heard-of efforts, and the most indomitable perseverance, that, alnost utterly exlnusted, and yet finll of a firm resolve to succeed, the baron attained the brim of the crater at forty-five minutes past five in the afternoon.

Success had crowned my efforts, suys M. de Müller, and my joy was no great, that for a moment I forgot all my sufferings, but I was soon recalled to a sense of my weakness by a fainting fit, and the paring forth of torrents of blood from my wouth. When I camo to myself again I was still on the borders of the crater, and I summoned together all my strength to look around me and observe as much as I could. I proximatively determined the form of the crater ; but my weakness was so great, and the fill of snow continued so dense, that $I$ could not fix its precise circumference with the aid of a sextant. Nor was it in my power to make a topographical survey of the regions belew, for nothing could be phainly discerned.

The crater has an irregular elliptical form; its chief axis is from west-north-west to east-sonth-east, but it curves a little more to the sonthward; its length may be about two thousand five hundred metres. Two other axes, running mearly from north to south, have very different lengths; the greatest to the east is about five hundred French yarls; the lesser one to the west abont one hundred and titty garils. I estimate the whole circumference of the volcano at six thousand metres. (Nee p. 181.)

My pen fitils me in attempting to depict the appearance presented by this great erater, or the inpression that it prodnced upon me. What terrible powers have been evoked to raise and lireak up such enormons masses, to melt them, to pile then up one upon another, tower-like, till they eooled in such a position and retained their existing shapes ! A bed of yollow sulphur covered the inmer walls at different places, and little volcanic cones roso out of the bettom. The soil if the crater was, however; mostly clad with snow na far us I could see, ant was not therefore warm; but tho Indians assured me that a warll air issucs from the crevices in various places.

A project which I hind entertained from the first of passing the night unom the erater had, by the force of imperious circunstinces, been superveded. Twilight, which, as is well known, is under such latibudes very brief, had already set in, and there was no alternative but to return at once. The two Indinn guides rolled the peutes, or straw mats, they had brought with them, in the shape of a kind of sleigh or sledge; we then took our seats upon these, and spreading out our legs, had nothing to do but let the veliek thins extemporised glide down. But, as mily be imngined, the rapidity with which we were thas hurriod along soon increased to such an extent, that our descent resembled rather $n$ fall in the air thun any other system of locomotion; and we wore carried in a fow minntes over the same distimeo that had taken us five hown to climb 11 .

Arrived at the limit of perpetual snow, after having effected their dangerons descent, which the baron designates as a schiilte, not without some slight accilents and still more serious perils, our travellers had to accomilish the remainder of their journey on foet. At half-past eight they were cheered by the vision of the fire burning in the grotto of the Velle de Joper, nud they were safely ensconced in it in hour afterwards,

The scene, says M. we Mitler, was singular. The snow had fallen in every direction, and the floor of the gratto had been converted into mul by the increased quantity of water that had filtered into it. Our clothes were also wet through and through, and yet our eyes were so bail that we durst not appronch the fire. All we cared for, after fourteen hours' urduous toil, was to lay down and repese ourselves. So we took ofl the greater portion of our clothes, and let the Indian, dry them at the fire, whilst we sought refinge, halfnaked, in the driest colmers of the grotto. Water was, at the same time, being boiled, so as to make a strong decoction of tea mixed with wine. An hour afterwarls we had had our tea, our clothes were partially thied, and so happy did we feel, compured with the dilligers just surmoninted, that we slept better than princes buried in sheets of cambric.

Our slecp was broken next monning ly a cheerful sun. The snow of the previous evening wits in great part molten, and, strengthened by a groml slecp and a goorl chocolate, we took the roud that wo had followed on our ascent. Alout two in the afternoon, ins we were approthing Son Andres Chalelieomuln, I was surprised at seeing the whole population of the town coming ont with musie aml bamer's to congratulate us on our suceess. One of our Inlian guides had started ofl fron the grottu of Valle de Japos by a short ent and with a quick step, and had spleme the news of our successful ascent some timo before. Atter having briefly reposed themselves, Mr. Campbell and . It. An la Huerta went to tho prefect, and mado an aflidavit as to the positivo aseent having been neomplished.

According to Doignon's measurement, the luight if the 'eak of Orizua is 18,178 feet Euglish; Ferrar found it to be 17,885 feet; and the North Ancricun engineers, 17,810 feet. Bhaon Miiller estimated the height at 5,527 metres, and if we atopt the least of that calculations, it would appear that Orizava is the highest point of the Mexicm Andes.

These ascents, and expecially Joignon's, which wro accomplished under more favourable cireumstimees and with less exhaustion than Baron Miallor's, allord proof that the subterranean fire in this volcano, or rather the sources whence its volcanic action are derived, are not extinguished or exhnusterl, and that the lurking monstor, like Etna und Vesuvius, may again terrify those elwelling on or menr it, even after a lajse of three centuries.

Tho base of the giant is likewise surrounted for a considenable distance with smaller voleanocs. To the north-enst and cast we see a whole greup of blunted cones between steep cnlcareous mountains, solue of which have cast inp liva, others mud und ashies. I'o the south and south-east are various craters, hot sulphur-springs, and springs which burst forth from rocky cavities like brooks. The course of the streans has also been much altered by volcanic action. Two in a few minutes over aken us five hours to tual snow, after having , whiel the baron det some slight acoidents our travellers had to ir journoy on foot. At d by the vision of the e Velle de Lopos, and an hom atterwards. r, was singulat: The $n$, and the Hoor of the mul by the increasel ed into it. Our clothes nugh, nad yet our eyes ppronch the fire. All s' irduous toil, was tu So we took off the and let the Indium, e seught refinge, halt'le grotto. Water was, o ns to mako a strong 3. An hour afterwarls were partially dried, red with tho langers $t$ better than princes woning ly a checefial evering was in great y a gome sleepu minda that wo liad followrd the afternoon, as we Chalchicomula, I was opulation of the town er's to congritulate us ion guides had started Lupos by a slart cat preal the news of ont fore. After laving dimpell and N. le la made nu athilavit as n aceomplishend. rement, the height of feet English; Ferrar tho North Americ:n Wiillere estimated the ndopt the leist of the Orizavn is the highist.
Gignon's, which wern mablo cireumst:mees Buron Miillor's, atlord in this voleano, or volennie netion ne - exhansted, and that anul Vesuvius, may neme it, even after a fise surrounted for a r volcanoes. 'T'o the ble group of blunted mountnins, scmuse ot mud und ashes. 'lo various crators, hat ch burst forth firm courve of the streauns leauio nction. Two rivers, which rise on the cast side of Orizara, suddenly disappear. The larger one, Jimalia, plunges into a fissme on tho right bemk of a deep, ravine, and reappears three miles farther oll, om the other side of a range of limestone monntains, not in the ravine, but issuing from a cave more to the south. From the point where the fiver quits it the bed of the ravine is dry. Tho other, called Tlipat, after fonming as a raging torrent over the rocks, disipppears near Cordow, at the western base of a range of lills, and then rerppears as a leep vortex in a step, rucky inlet near the monontain-pass of Cliquihuite, at a distance of two miles on tho east sitle. This rivulet has further the peculisrity that the chief source, which is high up, in the pine forests of Orizava, has milk white, lukewarm water in winter, whilst in the rainy scason it is clear and very coll.

On the west sido of the Peak of Orizava, towarils the talbe-lands, several volcanic appearances aro als, met with. Sulphureus vapours rise frum a shribless hill. The Inelians usi' these warn sulphar exhalations to obtain vapour baths. They dig pits three feet deep, und as many wide, then sit down in them and crover ul, tho top, so as to leave the heed tree. Not fial otf there is also a group of mometains called Los Sertmbitos, one of which is clet, and frequently belehes forth flante.

In the plain nt the foot of Orizava, towarils the west, near the village of Aljujuca, is a crater tilled with water, which tastes rather hrackish, but can still be used for drinking. This ronnt pool is about one-cighth of a mile in cirenmferene, with perpendicular recky sides. A path made by the ameient Imlians leads down into the hollow. Firther ,n, the steep eones of l'aury and T'paymales rear their smmits above the phan, and a massof lava serven them tir a pedestal. It is protly generally anhitted ly geolugists that, us exponden at lengh by the illustrims. Inmbohte, the fires of voleanie netion ane malerging diminution. Bacrgthing tends to show that the ernst of the ghowe has gone through elunges which tre gralunlly ariving at a certain point of consistency. Bat there are spectlations which militute agrainst this view of the sulyject. It is, for exumple, supposed that in the constant marel of crention mal disintegration, the grent allavial beds deposited hy rivers, and the vast lithophytie on comalline grow has in the Pacilio, vemain to ho tileed up from below by volamic action beforo thoy can taks, their

 this as it may, and "xen granting tho limitation in volcanic action, there is nothing to show that the country now in question may not yut bo sone day the seat of some territi convilsions of miture, an! yet these may be, comparatively ypaking, slight, as conthasted with sum as have preceded them. Further, were eruptions to chste uphin such etlints of mature as relieve itself; they would, from what has heen pres viously noted, be nume likely to mecur in tho tithtrlands, the sides of montans, or in lesser manges, them trom the cruter of Orizava.
As this lofty veleam has been suceeded hy smuller. volemoes and other cones and craters, an above deseribed, so it appears to have itself sueceoted its nucient rival Naucampatepetl, or the Cofler of Porote, in the principal monntain-chain, and which appears to have been in purt dentroyed by latemal eruptions that have occurred at an ejoch posterior to when it was itself an active volcano, just as we see going on in the present day with regarl to Mount Vesuvius. On the north side of the mountain is the so-called Mal I'ais, a brond strean of lavia, nearly ten miles in lengtb, whose glazed scoriaceons miss bears every indication of a multen state, while the pumice-stones, scattered far and wide, distinetly prove that it discharge took phace in that direction. The mountain is most shattered on the sonth-cast side, where it has an appearimee as though an explosion from the summit to the lase had hurled one whole side of the erater to the east. A benntiful plain. remarkable fis its great fertility, was produced at its base by this falling in, as also by the stremms of lava, and the discharges of ashes ind mult. The mightiost trees flomish there, and for more thm a century maize has been annually sown in the same ground withont manuring.

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

The perpredicolar rocky walls, from a thousand to two thoustud fiet ligh, of the profound barancas, ravines, or dhasms, which everywhero intersect this region, also enable us to form some iden of the might of volcanic ravages. They are compract masses of tirm conglomerate, with larger or smaller firagment. of basalt, or a jumble of volmanic tufa. Thit upper eovering is argillaceons of mll colours, but mostly fermfinolos, und wherever water can exert its influcuce, iserine, or erystals of mugnetic jron, are washed ont in grent quantities, as in other countries similarly eircomstanced. The breaking up of these monnains must have huppened at a very remote periond, for horizontal stratification may ho observed, or at all events divisions into woprate storien, marking. probilily, ditlerent epochs of ermpiom and cataclysim, anl there are ineep eaves and grottoes at their base.

It only remains to bo remarked that the lofty 1'opoentepetl ( 17,773 feret), thongh guiescent, is stil? active, and close by it is the show momutain iztacehuatl, which bears the same relation to Popocateputl as the Cufliry of I'erote does to Orizivat : it is at ruine thae of the same furnace. Nearer to the l'acifac lwo more volcanoes are still active, viz., Jorullo and Colina. the latter since the carliest known periods, the oflory a recent production of the mighty suthtormaern fires. which in the middle of the last eentury called forth tervor and dismay on all sides. It is not impossibl. that this line of volcanic country, stretching from ther Atlantic to the Pacific, indicates an occavional subte:; rancan comeetion or filtmation between the two nceats

NEW (GLEDONLA.

FRENCI POSSESSIONS IN THE PACIFIC.

I.

Uccoration of Netw Caledonia by the Fuenci in 1853 and 1854-Mode of Pbockedino-Mishionaly Auxilia-hies-Chalicter and Afteabance op tile Nathesproceedinos of the Fannch at Vabhots boints of the Isfand-Hocndation of port de Franee-La Conceri. tion, a Missionaily Ebtablibinenet.

Some geogmphers have given the mane of Oceania to the whole collection of those islands which are situated in the Facitic Oecan, but it having been fomal, upon closer inspection, that this vast asemblage of islatuls is matumally divided into three gromps, we are in the halhit in this eonntry of writing of them as belonging to Mabasia, ur the East Indian Archipelag", to Australasia, as contracistinguished from Austratia, ly which mane what was onee absurlly called New Ilollam js now ilesignated, and to in thiod on matern division, gromped muder the had of Polynesia. These designtations are not almitted by our gioul triands and ablies the French for obvious reasons; they have recently fiumded a colony in the Mindla Chineso penin-sula-in Amam or Cochin Chimanand thry naturally feel that the su-called Eatst Indian Arehipulago is just as much Ilindhu Chinese as it is Fast Judian; they have establinined themselves in the Australian Seas, it New Caledonia, and the arehipelago might therefore just as well be limneo-Caledouian us Australasiun; and they linve declared their supremaey in the Society Islands, diseovered, like New Caledonin, by our own cireumuarigator ('onk, at the very heart and centre of the Eastern Wacitie group, as also in the Marpuesin, and they have therefore divided the whole eollection into Malasian and Ocemic.
'These regions, satid whe of their most gifted writros. present in every guarter seones fitted to move the most irigid imngination. Many nations are here found ia their carliest infumey. The amplest openings haw been athorded for commercial activity. Numbertes valumbe produetions have been alreidy laid matir contribution to our insatiable luximy Ifore lows natural treasumes still remain concended from scientidic abservation. How numerons are the rults, the ports, the straits, the loty mountains. and the smiling plains: What angniticence, what solitule, what originality, and whit variety ! Here the zoophyte, the motiondes inhabitant of tho Pacilic Ocean, creates by its acers. mulated exuvia a zampart of ealenroous rock round the lank of sand on which it has grown. Gruins of seed wro bronght to this spot by the birds, or wafted by tlu winuls. The masent verdure makes daily acpuisitions of strength, till the young palm waves its verdant fulinge over the surface of tho waters. Lach shallow is ennverted jnto nu istand, nud eael island improved into a gurden. Wo belold at a distance a dark volemo mbing over a fertile comory, genemited by its own lawa. A rapid mal eharming vegretution is dinphyyed 'y the side of heaps of aslew and of scorice: Where the land is more extended, seenes more vas:
smaller f firgruent. uf tufa, The ujper eover. ours, lut mostly firru. can exert its influence jron, are washod ont in countries similuyly cir. up of these mommains ty remote periorl, for the observed, or at all stories, murking, protion aud eataclysm, and res: at their base.
warked that the lofy ough outiescent, is stil! now momatain latace relation to Popecateput Oriza ya : it is at ruited arer to the Pacitie two viz., Jorullo anul Colima. nown periods, the ethote ghty silfterrane:un fires. at century called forll It is nut imposible try, stretching from the is an occavional subter etween the two wectus ery lieart and rentre of also in the Marquest, 1 the whole collection ir mont gifted writers. titted to move the nuel ions are lere fonnd in mplest ryeniogs haw petivity. Nimbintes abrealy laid mandr luxury: H1, 1 , man memaded trom scientific re tho gults, the ports. and the smiling plains: ate, what originality, olinyte, the motionles 11, creates hy its nem. enlearrons rock round bas grown. Grains off - the birds, or wafted serdure makes dialy young pahm waves it, of the waters. bacl? taul, and each island loblohl at a distance a fo country, gencruted harming vegutution is f aslues and of reorice. led, seenes more vast present themselves; sometimes the ambiguons basalt rises majestically in prismatic columns, or lines, to a distance too great for the eye to reach, the solitary shore with its pieturenque ruins. Sometimes enormous pamitive praks boldly shoot up among the clouds; while, hang on their sides, the dark pine forest varien the immense void of the desert with its gloomy shade. In another place, a low enast, covered with mangroves, sloping insensibly bencath the surface of the sea, stretches afir into dangerous shallows, where the noisy waves break into spray. To these sublime horrors in scene of enchantment suddenly suceeeds. A new Cythera emerges from the loosom of the enchanted wave; an amphitheatre of veriure rises to our view. Tufted groves mingle their foliage with brilliant enamel of the ineadows. An cternal spring, eembining with an etural autum, lisplays the opening blossom along with the ripencl fruits. A perfume of exquisite sweetucss embahass the atmosphere, which is continually refreshed by the wholesome breezes from thic sea, A thousand rivulets triekle down the hills, and mingle their plaintive murnurs with the joyful melody of the lirds animating the thickets. Under the shade of the cocoa the siniling but modest hamlets present themselves, roofed with thanama leaves, and decorated with garlands of jessamino. Here might mankind, if they could only throw off their vices, lead lives exempt from trouble and from want. Their bread grows on the trees which shade their lawns, the scene of their festive anusement. Their light barks glide in peace in the lagoons, protected from the swelling surge by tho cornl reefs surrounding their whole island, at it short distance trom the shore, and contining their domestio water in the stillness of a prison.

For what Great Britain has done for these lands of promise, it is sufficient to refer to Austrulia, Tasmanis, and to New Zanland, the first with its tive sepurate colonies, or distinet governments, and a population, since 1788, of upwards of a million of souls. Tl.e Dutch have their settlements also, of no sinall import, and the A mericans have obtained a footing in the same s:a of islands. No wonder, then, that France should desire to be worthily represented in "Oceania."
"But when we turn," says M. Alfred Jacobs, t " from the spectacle presented loy the English colonies, and pass on to that presented by our establishments in Occania, the change is as complete as it is alrupt. We no lenger see the netivity, the foree, the exuberant and turhulent life, the vast spaces delivered up to the process of elearing: at the bottom of some haven, where ocasional whalers of a wandering merchantman now and then seek refuge, muy be seen a brick and mud building, oter which our standard floats, whilst a few marines lounge about the donwny. A few scattered huts sometimes help, to eonstitute a group of habitations that spreads and assumes oven the aspect of a littlo town or of a goodly village ; but everything is dull and lifeless except when tho commodoro or admiral, who carries his thy from one establishment to another, comes to impurt a kind of litetitions nnimation by his presence, and to crente a movement that is more military than industrions or commercinl," The pieture is not flattering, but it has the much greater advantage of being pointedly mul graphically correct.

Whence, the same writer goes on to inuluire, this

[^12]inactivity? Are wo, then, merfual to the inclustry and labour of our neighbours, and have the deseemdants of thatolil Celtic cacr, that loved so much to wimuler over the fince of the earth, become inimical to all change of place? Most assuredly not: Egypt, Persia, and India, which witness so many Frenchaten taking there their science and their sworls, can tentify to the contrary. Nor has the aptitude to colonise been always wanting to France: witness Cannda and lousiana, hot to mention India, which might have had a very ditferent destiny if Duplcix and Lat Bonrdonnais, the heroes of the eighteenth century, had not been basely abandound. There isstill a region in the present day where French activity secms to take foot and develope itself, and to that is in the magniticent region watered loy the Rio de la Plata.

We are mot, then, utterly foreign to the labours and proceedings of external life, and yet we must admit that divers circumatances have contrilnted to leave us in inferiority to our neighbours, the Eniglish, and even the Germans. Out of his own country, the Fremehman is engineer, soldier, adventurer ; he is sellom a cultivator or a morehant. Further, the complete soparation from his mative soil is more repugnant to him than to any other exile. What a touching and persevering atliection have Lonisima and Canalia preservel for the mother comintry! Add to all this, Flunce has always sutficed for herself, and has never obliged her ehildren to cast looks of eovetonsness neross the ocean, or to ask from foreign regions for the resourees of existence. Hence a radical difference has spring up between tho education and the primary idens of the English and Fronch wople. Heve people are born enltivatoms and soldiers; there, sailors and merchants. In England, the great citics arv on the coasts, and a nation of men, eradled in the ser, are familiarised with ideas of expatriation, and have for the most part friends or relations in the most distant comntries. Every day they read in the papers news of their countrymen in Chin or Australia, and they thus become acenstomed to consider the worhl as a province of England.

The fertility and natural abundance of our soil, the attachment that we experience for it, the political circamstances of the end of the last century, and the commencement of this, our continental military glorysuch we, in fact, the honomable and avowable causes of our colonial inferiority. Wu do not complain of it: every nation has had its destinies, und ours yiehl in Durope to that of none ohlier. 'To Enghand lielongs the great movement of colonisation, to create empires. to clear the forent, to cover the hant with floeks and herds, and to build cities that shall rival London and Liverpool. It is a part full of gradeur, but which has its cleceptions and its tangers : colonies are ungrateful, often very forgeiful and very repuliating. More than one has cast off tho mother country, and, to continue prosperous and powerfinl, Eughad has perfetually to begin over again.
A few men and a fow books that havo mmantel from France is, on the contnury, all that has subliond to establish the preponderanco and sprend the inthence of French genins over the world. We havo miny times heard regrets expressed that Fianco wan not hefore England in occupying Now Zealanul-rectets that have no timudation ; that colony which haw burome so prosperous in the hamde of the Eugrisls wouh hatre remanined sterike in ours. Besiden, if wo want a tiod fir whatever intitude we have in this line, have we not Algeria at out very dooss? Co'anerse rath do very well whenere chanion ; the luitod stater have sume surf, whinh dows bot perent them losing the tirat "rmanercial prople in the werdd. What we can reasomably demand, is a "momerial development that mall

$\qquad$

 at arate in the prodite of dixtunt fisherion ; and mavitime cine mercantile masy. This is the tithe mather which Calachomia.

The comvette Iox Comentatine, comanamd by Captain

 Frame: Thi, iblimi, combertel with whim are the latitude. It in sixty-xix lughem its hath, the in widet, and is fumeal by a monntainone orest, fortila and well wateren, that ramin from surth west to sumb.

 wext chate of Australia (Qumplatid), and mont of the mathy besmels have perishol an its daturems and inlurpitable thomes.

 Piblariur des foints, "undrer ajprehensions of being :micijated by the Emalinh," had gome hither from T'ahiti, in tha presiona spomber, ter ann to an un dentanding with nesme French mismonarion methed in bature, allum having built a kind of small proviniunal fint.

 'puch rine the mimionaries, when ar atheationsly disembathed atew misminamion in the Babade haven, on the wert ermat, in $1 \times 13$, and, bupere learing, the sailon exmerncull as anmmoniona haditation fin the:

 filice of refuger for tha srow of the sime, which vesmed

 Furromblal, they were, indered, athen, bating made

 10) the J Wh of Jines.
'Ihare, with a prosenmane that dow them homour, maweded in rownening buw mations with the natises

 Phal, wore doxpatched in a hoat with fiftern men to effect a resognisane atong the const amb in the innermen of the bay:. Tllay whentmately allowed themationg (u) lee taken by salprise by the mativen on in sumall isfand whiela they thought was unimhabitod. Oflierts atill suilors alike were all massucred and bevourad. T:o commander of the Alcmerke tired ugno the mative aud burm their huts whervever las combla pert at thom, hat he was destined to lee aldurst as unlucky an him reft that ennelopem the inteat.

At the wory bemant, indend, that Commentere Tardy de Mentravel buale his apparater om theme fatal waters, athone Fromela vesod had just buan lowt theres. This vintaly. It had vivitod Ame fica, Chins, and Ansualia.

 the exptain believel himself, oh dombling the western wherens he went right "un the mefis, and the olat

 u, land from the lastility of the same nathere whe liad devoured se bages at protion of the eme of the dlemene.

 it exuld in any way redieve the Croise che sicul; but all and the arew of the firnelt merrhantuan had w itseff of buing tanderred tesydary.

The mission of the Fioneli comateriur: was mero

 Whe of the chicf, wher ow being laingived, had. Chated his bavinernax name of Bubune fior that of
 (1) ull that was debation of him: Bu granted umpo him of em of hin "ravial privilege, which was u, dis. tribute justice by haraking the hataly of the actured. He was fise the future homal wore te graduate the ality, aul ewen, in "atain "tamer, to hatw meanse to ther the ingenions id of of intoratheg the ravages themsolves in milpmessiug orne and in arrosting the guily.

 ing them with tobsem, ind deomating, or rather slin. limgninhing, them bey a indge with the frenels colars. 'They thas hecame quites promd of decir rengmaibilitios,

 As te the chief; l'hilip, hes was is l, atai savage, of very limited intelligence, and if wav ar ablo to

Varmonet and Saint. with fifuent men lo est and in doe interimer $y$ allawed thelanelvers natives on at ratall ninhabiterb, Oflicem worl and devontol. ijel 川pon the nutives 4: condel wot at darm, we :ty unfucky no lis: ; Niig ujen thes comal att ${ }^{2}$ 'enmmentore 'fiardy In theme liathl wittern, aes: lerst theres. 'Jhiss is: olu siuel, which hath actate two yenosproChinat, :und Australia. with low intentien of by impertiote dathe, endiling the wextern it- rectio, und theo any wer motatere doft that m rey luckily numandal, "uhing l'om Shataly, xhathetal, yer washle Hull- bative:s whe lath - srew ol the dlowene. hipwreckeal, atul i.
 rives alle situl; but al! der jowlongeal eflints. ther-hathtman had wh protumity jressontad $4 \cdot y$. chmmoklores wats thers - Latior the: minsionaltor ree doms antil hal, hot

 -11 any breat dillimio - .efinl uilnes of J'umat - of ther missionarimo He layntived, Jend al Buhome for that of ving it liaw juresshity.

In gantual woriithod to the jnomal. H-ved liclesw, duymand r:\%, which was to dix"rals of the acelused. a. to graduate. the to have recsurse to conmmandes had fiar a 'ry the ravaiges thesu. arresting the puilty. why themselves, pri! ratugg, of rathor dion - Che F'wath colthers. IJair respumsibilitien, colt fin mabliarther.
 A8 it 1 atacsl savage, ii, wave if !am. ible t" trust in him. Jog in was, Iofor), "he of ise mome vitudit:- as a relice of his phomber a magnibienent eateserd, which uctations.

Altar having emastrabed and armad the bew fome the month, and in the territory of the triba ad Nowstila.

 their very sumanits deswat the Net-shasts; whiat a at Christias, lueanses if her dial lae would latve to la of matilum, tand alse twer lis hat pieres with which lo, of dixagreathe.

 lion of the womlery by athe whas white the 11 . 'Ihe

 lwint.

The ollier chamed with this mission sumeceled, is ascending at godly viver that waters hayanwai, in reaching the residence of Buarate. Ife fomm the chief seited in front of his homse, a gun in hamb, and he prevailed upon him, not without difticults, to tillow him. Buarate was treated with moro courtesy on hard the eory the tham he aprean to have andicipaten, and he promised, after some opruxition, to aprear next morning with his warrions in tront of the principal village, and celdhate the act of giving up his territury to the foreigner.

Accordingly, the nest day, right huats tak their departure from the corvette and the brig, wavering two hundred and tifty men, with two sums, whe eflected their landing in the midst of a convideralle assemblage of warriors, armel with muskets, assegais, and sterd axes, which hase taken the phater of clubs among the tribes that are in relation with Burpans. The act of possession was rad lay the commolore, and translated salued lay thee discharges of musketry and one-andIWenty sums from the Cumatatime; after which, the two himbed and tity marines detiled in timent it the flag, whilst fuame and other chicfo of the tribe were engiged in signiag the act of sovereighty and ocempor tion. The sigh of so mathy men armell with muskets, and the somid of the great guns, made we ane told,
 The parties seprated grow friend, and the commodore promised hamate to visit him in his own home tho next ding.

In execntion of this promixe, the "figh hans proreeded up the biver the emsuing moming in fike. The river of lliyamman is bared at its matmee ly a reed if eoral, which only leares a narrow pasmage at the sonthern extremity of the hay; it itself "uly reaches which bur down the waters of the mblanls hy deep rlothed with a riwh and vigoron- verstation. Comanut trees sheltor well-emstracted hats: at the botem of the atrines.

The native mashed to the shome in emosils the contemplite a sinctate no new to them, mind they firllowed the processim of honts by narrow pathways that ram along each side of the rives: The armed burn bed tha way; the women amb chibden followed at a slow distanee, and lom shats arose firm cach side of the stream. Hasiug reachecl the village, the Fremeh theeted their landing in a colum, the flyius artillery in the centre and thin twok up, a position in order of batth in front of Buarate's residence.

The latter was what MI. ditcols colls "unt getuh, atse ©athohmien, "r," a kind il cone hoisted upen a cylimer tom feet in height, with a how, nawow don in front, wat at the top of the eone was a rule sentpture representing the human form, whilst to the right and heft were other huts for women ithi, strungers, The chiefs of the tribu*, one hamdred mal titity to two hamded in mumber, were groured betime the prineipal hat; they were diversely armed, and all ankell with the exeeption of Burate, whe was draped in a blue woollens shitt. Other groms at wariors remained at a more respectinl distance, ind tio women and children lookel on with entrosity trom behind the homses s ad trees.
The artillery and manes then went through a variety of ewalutions, after which mother Fremeh thy was unfurled, suluted with twentyone guns, and then handel over to Buarate, in commemoration of his new mationality: The commodore took rulvintage of the impression producel hy "this impusing eerenonial" to engage the tribe to give up the practice of cannifmisun, representing to them that such a practice was looked pon ly all civilised people as the most disgricectal of any to which humam beings comled he aldicted ; after which he interdictel buarate from ailministering justice any longer with the hows of an axe ; ; mill finally, to allay the bitterness of these mew ohligations, ho distributed a few arms, some tools and utensils, and inviterl the chief to sit down with him and his oflicers and partake of a shepp, ronsted whole, atter the Caledomian fishiom. The soldiers also partook of : mepast on their side, and the erown, overeming their tears, also erowhed round, precipitating themselves upon the bones or hiscuits, or the least fragments that were thrown to them.
This military demmentration of the French commandant hat, it is said, a lastiog celfect; firm that. time forth Buarato ceased his hostilities, and the other chicfis fillowed his example. The two vessels, passiug the two stracge rocks that were called the towers of Notre-1 bime, breanse at a distance they resemblei them both in finm and devation, left Hiyanwani lehind them, and prosecoted their searel for a suitable spot wherein to fomb the chief thwn of the relony in juturo. Amoner others, they visited the mumniticent hay of kimala, where a chief, muned Kai, came on lwand of his own fiee will, prome of a shift, tronsers, and caln, at also of an wh sword, which, in his uses. constituted a magnificent costmme. Thenee they doublem the somehirn point, tonched at the Island it l'ines, and procechal to explore the lower purtions of the western comet.
'The Bay of horare, one of the tirst that presents itsoff om dionbling the routhern peint, presented many clams tir rlection. Numrens stremens of water finil thair way at that $\mathrm{p}^{\text {mint }}$ to the sea, and ressels meot with an exedlent watering place formed it tho toot of a enpions fall, which descends firom the Mont I'Or, an isulated peak that dominates the const at this puins, and which is intelded to its name for the hyper cutertained at tirst of fimding it to he murifernas, but which were mot alterwats realised. The fall predidtates itself from a height of sixty feet, iato a kimb of harin. Tha richuess of the valley, the tieeilities fin irrigatam, the rentle melivity of the monntains, whll insited enltivation ; the forests wero tich in timber, mal the lorders of the sea were mememberad ly that monotonans grow th of mangreves that is met wit' "ur so many wher $\mathrm{l}^{\text {nints. Fixtensise phans, diversition } y}$ groves of trees, sermed to he waiting for mattle. Lantly: deposits of eoal sirmand the bay; tive veins show themshlves at the surlice of the soil close to the sea. With a better muchomas, Mome would have beom made the seat of the chief cohmial establishment; but failing in this essential, the neighbouring hay of Nommen, ir Numiga, now loort de Fromee, was selectel as "/a chẹ:Lica Ruroprite de la Sourelle-Cudedonie."

It is now lithe moro than form years since thar finst stone of this establishment was haid, and prople will not lial to bo interested in knowing whint, in the present day, is this town, still in cmbryo, that France has umbertaken to build in Austrahasin, opposite to Qucenslund nul New South Wiales. A harlour ems of neerss, saffe, well disposed, and misy of dolence, lies at the entrance of a spacions nom well-sluiltered bay, moration of his new k advantuge of the: yosing ecremonial" he pratice of eant such a practice was te as the most dis: an beings eould be ted harate from ad. ith the blows of an drmess of these new ams, some tools and sit down with him luep, roasted whole, soldiets also partook crowal, overeoming precipitating themw the least frugments of the French com$\because g$ efleet: from that. tilities, and the other e two vessals, passing ealled the towers of ance they resemblal ion, lett llyamwani ir search tor a suitief town of the colony isited the mugniticent: amed Kin, came on d of a shift, tronsers, l, which, ill his wes, tume. Thence they hed at the lslame if the lower purtions of he first that present: noint, presented many tremms of water timd eti, ilul vessels ment laee tormed at lar cuds fiom the Mont hates the const at this ts nome for the loper tu lo aurifernas, hut. ch. The fill precijiy feet, into a kinul on lay, the tireilities for of the monutuins, thl ero tieh in timber, and renemmberal by that Fthat is met wit' phans, liversitie y ling for eattle. lantly, tive veins show thermuse to the sen. Witle I have been made the cmant ; but failing in hay of Noumeta, of was selected ins "/o -Culedonie."

- years since the first laid, and 1 noplo will owing, what, in the ambryo, that Frame stralasin, opposito to les. $A$ lurbour tasy aisy of dutence, hies al will-shultured biy, hemmed in ley hills, and behind it narrow penitsula. The hills that survomel it foem form a kind of hemioycle, enveloperd by mombains that rise in stages like in amplitheatre. This is the spot on which rises Port-de-Frane?; it has the inconveniener of not being well wateren ; the nearest rivalet is at a distance of six miles : it may somo day bo bronght nearer, but, for the time being, water is obtained from deep wells. A kind of barrack oceupies the leach of the peninsula, which ean acoommodate about in linndred soldiers; the French flag flonts on the top of it. At a little distance are tive or six houses, one of whieh is the seat of government, and is surrounded by a large gatem, in which have been innugurated the usual essai dacclimatisation et ele culture. (Seep. 185.)
Since 1855 the miswionaries, persecuted by buarate, Philip the Convert, and other chiefs, whese aprehensions had bed removed by the dismppearance of the Frenel ships, gathered torether to fomme an establishnent under the protection of Port de Framere, ealled "La Conception," and of which they have made -as also of Puabs, on the other side- the centre of their labours. There, at threo lengues from Jort-deFramee, near the sea, and upor a hill that dominates the shore, they have grouped aromad them a few humdred natives. Tho Caledonim city, as it is rlesignated, is divided into three quarters, aceording to the number of individuals who have contributed to its erection; tud it must not le' suppersed that it consists solely of hats; somo nt the salviges, instrueted by their Laropean directors, lave bilt themselves houses eovered with slates, in which the island abomels, and they are whitewashed and surrounded by gordens amd exiltivations. It is a noval nul curinus spectacle that of thess men digging the suil, sumerintemling theis plantations, bukang to their domestie duties, treating their wires ulmost as their equals, grouping themselves in regular athe imblastrious fimilies, and no longer repuiring human flesh from the want of other form to assuage therir hugere. 'Phey aro elan in a sort of woollen ( inemser, with is medal or ehaplet romal their neeks, Their coarse features mbax when they exhatore at condial slake of the hand, with the words "fithere" or "inother" in their monthes. A tolomaly mations chated of hiriek and whitewashed earth wermpies the contre of the "village," When the bell smmons them to their religions ilu! ies, they quit their hanus and join in the services with a guttural masal tone.

The sam: $\boldsymbol{p}^{\text {rowess of praisewont hy improvement is said }}$ tologgoing cant l'mbo. 'The suission is sitmated therent ahout half a teague from the sea, at the cund of' a tino plain, wher the lill-xide is shaded by eocon-nat trees. 'The buildinin, which consist of two spucious houses, in giodly chureh, und n fow hats, ne surromuled by earpeaters' workshops mud a hacksmith's forg'. 'The enltivation of rice mil maizo has partienlanly succoeded at this phace, whilst herds of eattle, pigs, mill goats no a leiter gumanteo thun ull tho sormons aganst the anthropephagons babits of tho nutives.

Tho mensure of nuecess lus been, it is suid, oven still greater at tho Islo of Pines; there, $n$ thousamel natives obey one ebiet. Tho hats me grouped round the religious estahlishment. Plantations of cocon-mat trees, of sugar-enne, nud of hanams, tho grapevine, the figtree, nul diflerent Europenn corenls, prosper, mid oceupy the foot of tho hills crowned with verdure. Dhany if the native; hwe also heen tanght to hive lees.

- Here, says M. Alfied Jucols, are very good results, muly it must be acknowledged that they are very eiremmscribed. I'he eateelnmenists do not nmbler two thousind, wheh, necording to M. Tirily de Montriwn !'s estimate of a population of sixty thonsumd, is hut a twentiotle of the population; further, it a number of docile and dixeiplimed natives ato to be seen round tha misions, it must also be ubmitted that a fine greater mumber wituess these innovations with extreme repugnance. Some even among the converts are very indithent, and have been knuwn to say, "Well, if your biptism is so salntary and procures tilicity, you shall eonfer it on me when $l$ an abont to die." Others are "rgumentative. A good missionary was argoing with a mative one day against anthropophagism. "But," insisted the savnge, "it it is an enemy killed in fight!" "He is thy equal, in man like thysilf, who miglit be thy relative or leeome thy frlemi." "Itis tlesh fills my stomach and nourishes me is well ats that of inothar; ard besides, do not you yourself eat of the sheep atul the fowls which you have hrought up with your own hatuls!" M.Alfred Jacobs avers that "to tell the truth, there is little real hope that their missionaries, whatever may he their courage or zeal, will le ablo to organise an indigenous society living mader theit constant direction."

In the meantime, the Freneh may, with justied, congratulate thenselves mon the exproment that is luing made : it redommls inlinitely to their credit.

II.

 Road-Tie Thimtans-thosectro Lase of Cinermpayt-
 -Tine Funsen in the Mhequas-Cuabiothe of tha Inlanders-Nikahiva-lhojeeted mingonanint of the Fuscu lomactonate.
Awames until the importmer of New Caledonia with its natmal riches shall drevope itself, 'lahiti, a' Otabriti, the chief of the indames of the $A$ rehiperber of the Society lalos is, we arre told, at the hemd of the fremeh passemions in the lacitic, and l'aluecte, its enpital, is the Fweheh metropolis in tenamia.

Wo haw before athuled to this hemotiful aroup of iskads, lut mainly in reference to theid sembogieal chancter, in val. ii., p. 117, of all liound liu: World. What we mow ald is mose in reterence to their oeenpation by tho frenels and to their listory since that epord.
'Tho expuisite hemuty of 'labiti is familiar hy repute tor nhost all. In the exterior or border handsemes of Trahiti nut the other islimils, ways. Mr. Ellis, there is n valu'ty in the oljeets of natmal history; a haplay combination of land and water, of precipiees and level

1 The Society Idamds are generally spoken of by Itritish geographers us being about seventy miles to the westward of 'Lahiti, or thatheit, which is the chlef isfand of the deorgian group, sio maned in honuur of Qeorge III. Marimers, however, sometimes desiguate them as tho Windword und tho Leoward Ishmis. As the two chasters are pwitically as well ax gengraphicalty distinet, the Preneh shouht spenk of 'Tahiti in the tieorgian Ishands, und not in the Society Ishads. Tho names of the indunds, neeordinp to the orthography introlneed hy our missionaries and used by the preas now established mboug the people, are: Ovorgian IslanisMhatia, Tahiti (1)tuheite), Simeo, Manaite, or Clarles Sander's thorahora, Masaran, Tubat, Lord ITowe's Istand, umd Scitly Inhand. 'The Society lahands wero so numed hy their discoverer, Captain Cook, in honour of the Royal Society of Londen.
plains, of trees often langing their hraches, elothed with thick dark follinge, wer the sent, ant distant momatains shown in suldime outline and ridhest hnes; and the while, often bended in the harmony of nature, produces sensations of admiration and delight. The inland scenery is of a different character, bit not less impresive. 'The lamdsenpes are occasimally extensive, but more frequenty ciremseribed. There is, however, a startling bolduess in the thwering piles of hasalt, often hanmi in rmantic confusion near the sonre or margin of some cool ir crystal stream that flows in that arrest its progress; and there is the wilduens of romance abont the derp and Jondy ghens, around which the montans rise like the stepe sides of a matumal amphithatre, till the chand seem sulnurted ly them-ting suxpents his ficulties in mute : istomi-hmont. There is also so moch that is new in the character and growth of teres and limers, invernlar, of antamens, and luxamiant in the vegetation, which is sustainel ly a prolitie soil, and matured ly the semial hent of a intescribithe eflowt. Otten, when rither alome or attemided ly one or two companions. I have jemrney yd thrungh some of the inkent partis of the islands, such hais bem the etiect of the through serniery which I have passed, that it has appeared to me as if we had leen cariod hark to the pimition ites of the whid, and hedud he foce of the marthen it was perhap often exhititel when the Creator's works were apmat arr it in all their omblews sariety, amball the vigour of raon the genins on "uterprise of man had altored the aspert of its surfine.

The Prench likewise dererile Tahiti, the ir new pare sarions contigumation, 小minated ley a paak of two thonsand fine hamed and fitte Fruch yards, which is called the Diald.m. A hove this majemic paka, "pona tahlelam, it an elemation of tive hambed Premeh samb, is a lake, half a league in bensth, and very deep, the watow of which is always at the temperature of twenty-there to twenty-form degres emtigrald Little rivers thmilhe down in the form of mamets from the carions luights, imel water the picturesqu. valleys and tibu phan, where the natuse hathitations are gromped muder the shathe of the remon-mint tres.
 lysenven in width, and a reef of coral surrumbls it, laving only marow passuges at certain pints. The tiret navigators who visited the island, struck bey the milduess of the "dimate and nll .ts beauties, eveki of it in the most ruthumiastic terms. An onticer of the Fremeh naw, who has recently returned tron the islami, deseribus the most gracifill panormatas Inein, unfoldect an the ship, "ppromehing the imband, dembles the P'oint of Venus; and as it consts ther reef, ten miles in length, whin hoparates it from the pase, the nbrupt peaks of the islambippear in suecession, sumounted liy the sharl puinte of the Dialden. Thesecondary smmuits appar to he cowered witha luxuriat regetation, in the nidst of which spurklo imumeralle catsendes, whilst the shore is elotheif with ereon, jumdans, orango and bread-linit trees, whase slude sholter here und there the lints of the matives, and whose roots are bathed liy the internal sen, perfectly calm leetween the reaf ant the const. Sueh is the landeape, vigoronsly lit up by a tropical sum, that presents itsolf to the traveller still umber the influence of the ruin chimate and imhaspitable shores of Cape Hon. A moment more anl the white houses of Pipuete, the French metropolis in Ocemia, malo their appeamee at the bottom of the hariom:

The roalstend, of censy acesss and well shettered, presents a good anchorage to merehantmen; the beach surrommes it like a cirele ; a reef closes it u! theards the sea, and the eity streteles from one print to the other, having in its centre a jetty for disembarkation. Aromud the honse of gavermment, of brotetorate, and the arsemal, masames, buracks, and dodes, are seatwred the habitations of two or thee thousimel persms, vamerers as woll as matives: and these houses are arrangen in a toleralbly tair line, callel broom-roal, along the shom. Tley are chictly of woud. There arr, indeed, only the puldie hailitings and consults howes that are of stom and twostmies high. A gonl roul starts from the chief town, and is carried romel the ishand ; and in tront of the bily, in the amphitheater formoll hy the heights that rise as it were in stages, the homses of sume of the resilents are sratered amilst plombid gardus, in which the orange, the banam, the encom-mut, tha alor, the varilla, and twenty other varisties of intertropical phants mingle their foliage. 'Tho' mavet-phee stands at the meeting of the two man roms; it romsista of two thatehend sheds, thirty feet bue ing ton wide, in wheh a fow ride men, wimen, and chilifon are seated, surrombed $1, y$ their somotimes fish, :mbly or ronstal purk, Near the arsemal is a momalimes and ahment pretty hous, the rendente of Guren Fomarr, who, neemiling to her fimer, fwells there or in her native hat at lapaba rants, fir the uaf of sailors :mal these cogageld in the hartume. but no comfirt:ab- inn-a cin umstane which, with tha " beressity for a permission to reside there whin is exartm from all passing visiture, aro the somere of mad legitimate grombling win the part of the Buglish and Amoricans.
The inligumb lift or baven, a kime of toga of Inilliant culanrs, whidh the Thitians emst wer cheir shoulders, and allow to till in gracerin follos to the leti. mingles with the Bareplem costume in the city. This gamment is muredomsly well mhated t.e the high stature and hanlsome firms of most of the natives ; whilst thou who have luen foulish mongh (1) idelat the Eintrpeam "oxtmme, lonk awkward and ill at ewe. T:uhiti hat impeed, nut elanged much in apparame from when it attratere the manimation of the early cirommaigatons. There are still to be een the vigurous fierns of the matives, the hamdromest of the l'olypevel, inlle, withut a care, decorating themselves with dower, aud only yenking for plensure, are alsat sill there. Bat, alas, Europerans have entailed many viers and mimy miseries "pon the inhahitmonts of this fortumate ishand. Of the nime thousimul matives af Tahiti, there is searcely ons who dees not hear murks of disemses of liaropun arigin, and all seek with avility for spirits, esperially ahsintle, Every morniug at daylrenk the Kurepen is woke up by the mise mule in the streets liy a groun of' women of all nees, firon the gray-ludired matron to tho young girl with a laughing fine, und who havo been combemued to sweep the streets, somu of them for a week, nud others resent: itself to the of the rull elinuate Horis. A moment P:yneete, the French r appeataince at the d well sheltered, pre. dinamen; the beach i' closes it up towards mone puint to the y fin disembarkation. , or motectorate, and and dueks, are scatree thorsanid persons, and thrse houses are $\therefore$ called Broom-rons, dly of woul. There ailinges :und consul's sturies lighl. A gonl and is carried rumul hay, in the :maldilait rise as it were in residents are swattered hich the mange, the he vanill:, inil twenty plants mingle their lo at the meeting if It wo thateheni sheds, which a fiew ohl men, , surrombled by their , nranges, cocoma mots, trid pork. Near the mint pretty house, the lon, acerding to her ative hut at laproan lic-louses anit rostimthose engagen in the -a cil anstanee which, ssion to reside there ing visiturs, are the ling win the part of the

1, a kind of tora if itime cast ayer their costal follon to the leti, me in the eity. This alapitol t.1 the high monst of the matives ; lixll amongh to indept kwarl and ill at ewe. muth in apmaratere miration of the surly (1) to be ween the vigurmikom'st of the l'olybales of soft and easy lecorating themselves for plemare, ate alve : lamen mutaicel may 10 inhabintantes of this thonsinnd matives ; - does nut hear marks , anic all seek with nthe. Every mornius whe up by the mise of women of all ages, the young girl with a 1 condennet to swetp) a werk, and others overt longer, for having been pieked up dead drunk. It is now nigh weventern yeha; since France has established its protectorate, or rather its domination, over 'Tahiti. "It iv,", siys M. Jiterb, "a precions acquisition, for the ishand is in a straight lime with the road which leads from l'inama, Niearagma, and TehnanteIn't: on the Ammrican isthmas, to Anstralia," Vessels favoured ly good winls, both in gring and retiming, put in three on their way from Melbonme and Svaney to sum Pranciseo and lnack agith. Stomers renew their provisions of coal there: and it is thas that Tahtiand Siw Caledonia wre called upon to give one another the hand. 'The ohe contains rich coall deposits, the viler presents them with a marke w ontlet. A few vantribute to lice emsumption within: but the agrialtural and commoreial resoures of the place might bu made to assithn a ctanithmable extension if the abnists were more active aml mumonas. bow Euryman have moldraken attemphe at combisation munat later sual in the indind; anil it is posible that hires, ar elvewlere, this dhty will be delogated th the 1 linese.
The yellow fares hat heen ramely swat 'Tahtiti till the yeur 18 inf, when an Ameriean ship hronght wer it whele hatelh of them. They wern miners anme cration mon, on their was fom Ansmalia to Califonnia, but arieel at l'uperete, they asked permisiom of the goremor to establish themselves there as servants, porters, and workmen. Thare eiptam, whon ont his sidn hand been in ereat apprehensinn ol a revolt, was delinhted with the iblot of getting rid of his living lowed. Thus in wats that thont a lantred imbividnals became thenulous of a ('hanese eolony. They have their sep:arate quarter, whence they issue forth every mombur hy davight throwghat town and islame in the purwit of all kinds of tramehes al' induxtry. The alpmoximation of two such ditherent classes of men as the 'hanese and the native Onaminut perents a very singelar eontrast, wheh ean only be seen at 'lahiti and in the Santwich Wiands, beanae it is only in these that the matives mingle with buroperas in their towns. The Chinaain makes bit at mant apramate, with his bathl hoal mul long tail, his prominemt fiw and ohligue look, by [^13]anl strong, with regular features, somewhat savage, with an expresion at times ferveions, at others simple, iand a step at once proud and indifferent. Sitting at the door of his tent, or hending beneith his burden, there is something in it Clinamins physiognomy that is at once expressive of timility, and yet of chmming, rheating, and deception. Dy the look which he casts at the native, so gatlint in his pernon, lut so improvilent, itle. and eareless, whe can sen at ones that loe Jooks upm him as his prey. "Alas!" sity, ML. Jacols, "these are the men to whom in inl probsability a great bait in the future of Oceaniat is left. If one day the circummaviguter linds some thousands of these: Jews of the East seattered wer Polvmoin, inereasing in numbers and wealth, will he not rewer the time when the canoes walted the imblent, bemerolent, and peacetul (with some "xepptionsl) natives of these fortunate islands of the Pacitie alongside the shipn al Cook!"

The native of the Hampests, better presorvel liom axternill wontuet by isolation, fiom thane ivamels not luing as yet upon ang commoreial highway, and visitend almast sublely, ly whaters, has also mome pertectly presirved his persenal and primitive plysingnomy. Te "ppart lo belong to a more anergetic and toree raw thata the Talsitian: tathooing af a complieatal chatmater, wartior damees, and human sumdices are still in fall vigenu in thase protions aif the eountry where Fremeh intheme has not yot mate itself filt. There is the same dillerone between the nathets of the two arehipelages as there is between the inlands thenselven. Nuknhiva hats not the same smiling ansect a- Tahiti; its shores present at tins aspect nothing bat ghomy elitls, whinh terminate in dark precijiees oner the seat, on rise 11 p in slopres towarls the shary ant pointed peaks of the momatains of the interins. Thear black volcanie rocksare chad with conare grats, and only hero and there a fow trees of stmated wowth: how themselos $\quad 1 \boldsymbol{u}^{\prime \prime}$, the heighes; it is only in the deep valleys that pren towards tho sea, inn that are watered by rivulets, that is rich vegetation presents itself, So tlense, however, is the vegretation in these narrow glens, and so intricate is their elispusition, that they have the motives in a curious kind of isulation from one another-at ciremonstance which hats also materially afliched thar wamater. 'They aro ahmot uniturnly of a grave aml alment momblal diymsition. To see them asking of their kavit its fomidable enjownents, it wonld he fancied that there men were secking to
 -1150.

Fivn or six matives get tugether, one of them chews the white and tomler vonf of the native plant, and with his soliva mixul with wator he torms a vellow liguor, having " jubletratigg odour, but mot spirithous, and which prombees a sommolnoce mul incbriety which resimbles that of the hamhish, The who partakes of it does not reed, nor does la utter axehamations; lop pros serves his eonsciousness and his reason, hat he is seized with it genemal mervous slaking, he propeets his hend forwinds, mul feels groat wemkess in his limhs, 11. walks slowly und with an meertain shep, and soon seeks repose on a mat. Dre requ'res, inderd, absulate perspintion enmes on, sight beennes confinsel, and at sort of torpid yet calm feeling suprrvenes, nerompmoned sometimes by eretic visions. 'This state al' intexication comes on at the end of twenty minutis, ant lasts from two to six hours, semelimes mure, necording to the dose and the halits of the drinker. The use of the standing the coarseness of their thesh, are atorn math kava has disippeured from Cahiti, whose inhabitants sought atfer.

ALL ROUND TIIE WORLD.

prefer hrandy and ahsinthe, but it is in full vigour at the Marquesas, where the habitual drumkarls are easily recognised by their bloodshot eyes, their exceeding thinness, and by white scales or ulcers that apmear Mon the skin.
The French have increased the natural resomreps of these islands by importing threre cattle, sheep, and asses. Pigs mill dogs imid poultry have been hong bimwn. Untirtunately, bits. have emigrated at the same time, and hey entail sad if truction among the finws. It was, no doubt, with the view of reserving what remainel the themselves, that the priests anil chinfs deelared them to be taloooed. Nothing wuble induce a mative to eat a fisw, or even to lay his head on a pillan stutled with thour teathers. It is the same with regirel to the swa turtle, which is not often canght. and which is reserved for certain religions ceremonies. The devil-fish, a kind if skate, and sharks, notwith-

The istanders, the number of whem are reckoned at atow + welve thousamb, present in genetal a hameme type. The men are tall mad well male; theirphysing. nimies would be often pleasing, if it were not for if. tattooing to which they suljeet them; the brown colour of their skin falles beneath this frightitul operation, aml they appear black or derp blue. They raise up their hair into a kind of tan with a stifl' lamel. Their eyes are dark and expmesive, their teeth envi, amb they have more heard than other Pollymesians: The wonen are will male, and have pleasing figure. Thy are marriageable when very yones, and as la.civious as all the women of the Pacitic. Men ami women are "qually apt in all holily ex.reises, nom the: swim and dive with marvellous dexterity. The dialnet, spoken at the Marquesus anel at Tahiti have been mal. the abjeet of expecial study by the hydrographical engiueer, Gausin. They may, he says, originate from

ENGLISH ESTABLISHMENT IN NEW CALEDONIA.
it emmon surere, but they have burn molitien in divers senser, ame have taken very dintinet charaters, areording to the instincts and tastes of the twe popmhations, "When," saysa French naval oflicer, M. Ionan, who rexided fin anceral years at Nukaliva, "one arrives fiom Tahiti, where the inhabitunts are so talkative and misy, utd where a soft and flowing jdiom is heare on all sides, one is surprived at the tacitu. aity of the Nukabivians. Thuy spak little, and what they do utter is i:s a formidable lass thene, in whish they climinate distinctly all the syltalides of their harsia language."

France touk pussession of Johiti and Nukahiva in the year Is 42 ; lat these two establishuments have had different destimies, which have ben attributed to their respective proitions in the Pacitic. Papeete saw one hundred and forty-three merehantmon enter its harlwor in 18.56 ; the value ul' imports has risen to three millims, and of exports to a little less than two millions of lizancs. Nuknhiva has only leen visited hy the Ameriean whalers when desecmeling from the north-west seas to the southwnel. A lurrack and a marines, and a lew miswinaties, constitute the bur
 this posisession, which is so umproduction, lut misuli. tion has heren songht in the hope that om era is lestine to see theso old harriers, which lengthen the vigage to ther Paritic and to the hodian Ocean, removed. Where that is accomplished, the gromp of the Matcuesas, the Archipelage of the Suciety Islands and New Calelonia, like stepsis trom the east to the west of the lacific Ocean, betwern the American isthmes and Au-tralias Malasia mul Now Zeahnd, the $r$ gions of gold, it colnuisation, aul of commeree, may beenne so many stations betwerol the Old Wrintla anil the Niow. There. roeks, so long usielens, will thon xpring into new bife, and at the same honr the doom of the native mats will have been promonneel. Either they will have leamt to alapt themsedves to the active and haborions "xistenco of which Europe maker law, even to the Islands of Ocemin, or they will have given way to the Americans, the Einglish, or the Chinese, to those metu who move and toil "thronghout the whole carth.'"

- Hesh, wre alou wath whom are reckonel at in general a handsume Il made; their physing. if it were not fir the set them: the hrown the this frightiul operimleep blue. They rais. fan with a stith mam. rive, their teeth guorl. man wher Pulynesian. d have pleasing tigure. ery young, and as lahee Pacitic. Men and hily exereises, mel they dexterity. The dialucts Tahiti have lreen mal. by the hydrographieal he salys, originate from and a liwhemat, twem? s, ronstitute the Bins ftestion of alandonat. productive, hat consustay cthat nur era is lestimel lengethen the varage tu eem, removed. Whan of the Matrunesas, the as and New Catedonia he west of the 1'asific isthmus anul Australia de $r$ gions of goll, it may beeme so many 1 and the New. There a spring into new life, In of the native raters Bither they will have on active and halmorions akes law, even to the luve given way to the Chinese, to those men the whole earth,"

TOUR IN PORTUG.LL.

I.

Moorisil and Brrorndian Efocis-Morse of Braganza -Gebminic-Portcocese Dysasty - Port and bay op Gioo-Tux, the stcmblivo-bloek of the Fursch abyy - Valenca and tis Sabi deloved ny Crows-Tife Riter Minho-chminialad ths Thayeled CbectifNapier's Expriots.
Is the old - man times, there cas in town ealled Galle-now Oporto-near the mer th of the Douro, in Insitamia; and this haven laving teen much frequented, the ignorance of tho Mildle Ages conferred on the surromuling region the name Porto-Calle, which, as the comentry was gradually recoverel from the Moors, was yet more improperly extented to the whole kinglom, and whence its momern mame-Portugal.

Its whl inhabitants were, it is said, a Celtic tribe, and they were subdurel hy the Romam, Gothe and others, ere the country was finally over-run by the Moors. It was afterwards recosered fiom the Moors by the Spamiarls, assisted by the I'rinces of Burgundy, who fomded its tirst Ilyusty. The Moorish wars were hence succeeded ly those with the lings of Caxtike, in which the matural hatred of the P'ortugnese and Spaniarta had its first migin. Among the kings of this period wo distinguish Dimiz, or Bemis, who dynanty was extinguished wit Pedross fon Ferdinamd, reigned from 1279 to 1325, and who was worthy of who died in 1383 . the sumames which he reeeived from a gratetul pus-terity-the Just, the Gultivatin, the fiather of his Comitry. He resisted with prulence amblimmess the (meroaehing spinit of the elergy, who lowily domandend exemption from taxes, and, at the salue time, he managed to remain on gool terms with the mont innperious of popes, Nicholas 15 . Himselt a selnhar and a poot, ha proved tho most liberal fireme of sciener, nud he fimmed the University at Lishm, which was in 1309 trausfierred to Coimbrat. Dimiz was sucereded by $A$ phonsi IV., and his son and sucensent, Podro, married the miontmate ham de ciastro, whon trigie and romantic history forms ane of the fincot misades in the Lusicel of Chmoens, mud has heren the subiget of severni tragedies. The male line of the Burgundian 85

rocee, and the dynasty expiring with him, the comtry tell into the bunds of rhilij of Spain.
In If th the Spaniards were driven ont of Lisbon, and the Duke of Bragamzi prochimed King of Portugal, under the tite of John IV. It was mider the first king of the homse of Braganaz that the bouls of amity that exinten between England and Portugal were drawn closer, an! in 1808 Portugal was wrested by British bravery from the hands of the French, and was restorel t, its mative prince. A British armament was again calle lypen to interfere in the usurpation of Dom Hignel. Tha marriage of the Duke of Leuchtenberg, and then of lrinee Fordhaul of Saxe-Coburg, with the Quecn Ithna Maria dat (iloria, introduced at new element into the lymasty, which is now (iemmanoPortugnest, and allied ly hoom, as well as by long ecmenterl interests, with the reigning fimily of Great Britain.

These introductory observations are meensitated in the insture of lartugal, heenso wherwise ase hintorical allowins that may he suggesten in the course of the accom which we propuse to give of a tour in the northern provines by the presence of castes, ehurches, miversities, and other pullic luildings or roins of olden time, wrold lose half their point. It is essential, in travelling in Portugal, a peculiarly artistic comutry, to rentminer ins Mrorish and Burgundian epochs, its Portugneme lynasty-the era of discovery and of religin uns tanaticism-and ita honse of lhagana tomented by the invasions of Spain und France, weakened hy aintieatinns to. Brazil its princes and prople in incessant insureetinu, and its constitution and laws undergoing successive changes, counter-revolution succeeding to revolution, till a period of repose embittered only by recent domestic calamitios was bronght about under the existing reigning family.
The J'cininsular Stan Packet Company's vessels prencint the pleasantest and readiest of all methorls of reaching l'ortugal from this country, touching first at Vigo, a purt of the Spanish province of Galicia. The coast of this province differs from that of Portugal in being deeply indented with buatiful hays, Vigo, immediately north of the Rio Minho, constituting the most southerly of these grand natural harhours, while, with the exception of Aveirn, there is nothing but esturries and mouths of rivers from that puint to Cape St. Vincent. ijnuto is on the Denero, Coimbra on the Mondemo, ant Linloon on the Tagr:x. Our tist object (in landiug at Vigo was to elimb the stepe hill which is crowned ly the Costle del Castro; a maguiticent view is ella dind trom this point of the hay, one of the finest in the world for security ind extent, with its granite wolk called the Cies, the more distant Bayoma ishands, ther woyond, and the stem and impenetrable loulang Sorm in the backgromd. The town itself, which is sidposed to be the sucient vicus spucorcm, wermpea the wholo of the ateclivity in 'flestion, Mron which are ihe remains of the old castle of San Echastian, as well as that of Clastro. Sir Francs Drake terend his way into this bay in 1587, and took the town, "hath heplundered. In 1702, the combined Dutch mad liuglish theets which lay in woit for the Spauish galloms returning from America, suceeded in cilpturing sune and sinking others wihhin the bay. The tuwn o is again taken by the Euglish in 1780 , but was shortly atterwards evactated.

Vigo has mi the present day but a trilling amount of commere'; the mere fict of the Peninsular steam Packet Company's stomers touching there has mut suthiced to confer unm it the wealth and tame which aprings from inhustry and whteprise.

The woll-known suthor, Mr. William IT, G. Kinsston, who is familiar with Portugal from his earliest youth, gives a lively account in his Lusilanitu, ikeleches of bis arrival hy one of the same company's stempaekets at this jort.

When I went on deek on Tharsiay moruing we were rumning in for the Bayona Islants, at the mouth of Vigo Bay. The bahy air came softly trom the land, strongly impregnated by the sweet-scented ilowers of the heather, which clothes the mountuins of Galicia, then rising bhe and indistinct on our laft, Two hours elipwed before we entered the bay, leaving the Ons Islands and the harhour of Jontevedra on our left, and the two rocky Bayonas on our rightthe imer sides of which are cultivated, and whorl secure anchoring-gromed and gooll shelter firon westerly gales.

Everyboly munt admiro tho hay, or rather, firm its great depth, it might more projerly be calleol the Gulf of Vigo. It is large enongh to contain all the mavien in the world, and the water is so deep that I have been close up, to the town in a first-class frigate, the Castor. As we sailel up, worsled and vine-encered hills, rising from the water, appeared on cath side, coverell with enltivat i ields, interspersed with cottancs and hamkets, and elevated into mountains on the nurti Alont five biles up, ou the sonth side, siands Vig", pieturemquely situated on a hill crowned by a dark frowning castle, the bnse: surrounded by a wall aul trench, which, I suspect, from its appearance, would allord hat slight protection to the town.

It has been my fate to visit Vigo several tines. When leaving lortugal it has appeared to advantage, lout the strangor from Eugland camot particulaly admire the interior, however leantiful it may selm to him from the deck of the vessel. It is indeed very inferior to any of the other sea-port townis I bave risited in the north of Sjaiia. It boasts of a squme, in which stands a tolenable hotel, with several st rentsnot very dirty-containing many rexpectalle louaves. A goonl road leals from it in the divection of the famons St. Jago de Compostella; but how far the maendamised part extemis I kbew not.

In the winter, and when there are threatenines of boisterous weather, the mail-bugs for the north of Portugal are tambed here, and dispateled by a whurin, who travels night aul day, on the same home, tu Oporto, enjuying mily a finw hours' rest; lint so had is the roal, except for a few miles in Spain, that ho ocoupies nearly tho days in performing a distance which te might with facility perform, were the roads improved, on three or four gool horses, in less tham ten hours.

The lay of Vigo extends some consile rable distance above the tow, when it suddenly nurrows betwen light rocks, and then ugain expands into a seemal lasin or lagoon, which I moderstand atliords some beatrtiful semery. Twice 1 have masucessitully athouted to exptore it: once when eruising in a ship of war we put into the bay, amb, setting of with a party in a small lont, we were nar'y lost, aun compelled to retmon; aseond time my compuions illed away the diay in the town, until it was too late to aceomplish the expedition.

The moment the steamer's padules are stopmed ull
meling there lats mut wealth and tame which Imise William 1T. G. King etugal from his earliest his Lasitaniun, Shetches anc comphy's stem.

Tharsilay morning wo

 4 Islands, at the month came softly troun the by the sweet-scenter othes the momutain* of indistinct on our left. utered the bay, leaving our of J'ontevelma on 3ayonas on our right cultivated, and atlor? d shelter from westerlyhay, of rather, fiom properly be called the agh to contain all the water is so deep that 1 in a first-class frigate, orled and vine-cosered preared on each side, erspersed with cothuges ountains on the norti. outh sitle, stands Vig', 1 erowned by a dark unded by a wall and its appearance, would e town.
t Vigo several times. pleared to advantage, d camot particulaly autiful it may srem to el. It is initeed very a-port towns I have It boasts of a square, with several st reetsay respectable hoses, the direction of the a; but how far thi w not.
c are theratemings of gs for the north of spatched by a courier, the satue home, to s' rest ; hut so load is es in spain, that ho erforming "listance rfirm, wero the roads d horses, in less tham

considerable distance

 mly narrows between mads into a seemed ind aflords some beanaccesstinlly attempted in a slip of war we ofl with " purty in wi, and compeltel to dimes idled away the oo late to acemullishVigo (for sho does not anchor) she is surrounded by numberless sumall loats manned by the most neouth, widd-looking beings imaginable, all speaking together, and at the tup of their voices, a hatsh guttural hanguago- n mixture of Spanish and l'ortuguese, athongh disowned by buth. The lientenant's gig is now howerel, and he proceeds on shore with the mailhags for the nurth of spain and Portugal, to deliver them to the British consul, accompanind by an impurtant persomage, the comprader, who is in seurch of fresh provisions-milk, eggs, and fruit, to repale the passengers. As the lientenant in charge of the mails remans anay barely an hom, it is seareely worth the while of a paissenger to visit Vigo, except for the sake of saying that he hats trod on spanish soil. Some twenty, thirty, or even fifty ficol passengers presently arrive on board, but they are considercl of the fiouth dhas, and are stowed away on the fore-part of the deck, us pigs aro when brought from Ireland for the thuglish markct. What a dreadtul jiblyering noise they make, and how fieree and wild they look! but they are in reality orderly und whelient, aud $w^{n}$ to the stations allotted to them without a murmur: blow high or low, sunshine or ram, it apmens inditifent to thene harly sons of the momatains. They are Gallegos, the inhalhitants of Gallicia, of whieh Vizo is ome of the didef ports, wat are bound fir oprorto, Listoon, and Castiz, in seareh of emphement as watcorearriers and parters, as also in the lower menial oflices. brom the intioner grales of servitule they froptently. by perseverance and honesty, rise to the lighere sitnations. They have expended all they powess in titting themeplves ont and in paying the ir pasane-money, hut their hearts are light, fin they put a firm trust in their motron saint, a stont am, and in lome stick, which, with a second shirt, a giy waistemat, and coloured handk rechice for fiestal weeasions, wontitutes the capital with which they prope to enmance busincos. The parer Gallemon leave their homes to arek their lintunes and work their way by hand to their devination, subisisting on a dried herring and a pincer of brown bread for cach meal, mal slephing in stathes, or moder trese, with searely clothes to corer them.
1t will he sain that dablieia must be a wretelad eountry when her peophe consider Fortugal, sulpused to he so juser, as the land whence weath is to be whtuined; hat the truth is, haticia is in weneral very fertite but ower-pupulatel, while Portugat is thinly prpulated in compurising to the vast recouress she phereseses within lurself, and whish ahome requite industry, set in mution ly cilpital, with jurlicions. direction, to be lomuht tinth. Severad examples of the permeratue and botesty of this mate have combe under my notice. Some friends of mine were reviding at Uporto mayy years atm, when a youth oflimed himsolf to malertake the lowest menial athice of watercarrier and shou-mblack to the household, eartustly: eutreating to be taken into their service. Ha, wais at length allowed to remain in the homes, that, he might make himself usetinl as he hest could, to do, Which he som fomm many nevesions-reeceiving as his wages merely the fowd the servants gave him. When the French under Sonlt entered Oporto the fimily were ohliged to fly the comitry, escaping on boand an Buglish morehmet-vessel. They had abremdy got out to sen, whon the young Gallugio was disemered stowed away in the hold, and when hrought on theck he fell on his knees, and petitioned with tenrs that he might not be set on shore again, but lee allowed to seek his fortuno in England, promising to serve his buster tiithtinlly. Indeed it was impussible to hand him, and he was comserguently allowed to acompauy the family to their home in England, where for some time ho wecupied the amme nassmang other he hat liefore held. Having marrowly watched the other servants, he quinckly learned the mysteries of their oflice, and entered tho jarlour as footman. He then taught himself to read mud write, and became buther ; he forgot his mative tongue, and even tirm of religious worship, and regularly attenled the Protestint elsureh, saying he conld not diseowe the differene. Ife proved a mont excollent and trustworthy servant; and having saved some two or three thonsuad jomands, ho returned, whout three years ago, with the sin of his ohl master to lootegill, where, when describing the womens of Eagland, ly fomd limself satly at it loss for word to expers his id wiss anong his emphatriots. From thence lue went to his, mative vilhage in Galicia, where he bought lame, and, like Gil Blits, set if ats an hidatso: but he som atherwards again mate his inplearance at $0_{\text {porto, shak }}$ shis heal, and saying that his wats a miscrade comery, that the inhabitants were harbarians with whon her could for mething, :uat that he prefered a seat by the fire site of his ohd friends' kitclen in Werglat. He again went to Eughand, hut he fomm himself there treated as a servant, while in his own hand he had Jren at gentlomam, so he onee more returned to Spain, imel is now living with indipentence on his extate.
There ware now onjoets, however, to detain nis have heyond the necessity of abtaining the means of furthere progress, and which, awating the opening of poopertive railways, consitad of horses and hatgage mules under the sanerintendence of the asial arrioro, indor, ins of garlie. If was also cssential to lay in a small stork of previsimes, tior the resources of estaldems. jusatas, and vendas, esluelidly in hyoways, ar ofthe very problematical, nut, when found, not always very agreeahle.
At length a start was cfiected by ten in the morning, on the loth of $\mathrm{A}_{1}$ ril, a pleasmit time of the yem; and we heft Vign hy the gate called tel lhare, hat were only enahnd to gre as tir an Porrino the first day. After n night's rest at this place, of which all that cam bee said is that it is a lage villago ow small town, whow white-washed cottastodetaeh themselver prettily from the surounding groen limblsene, we started at an carly hour fir the firntio town of The, where we: arrived without incident by four achock in the atternoon. Tuy, which is collomed for its excellent preserved froits, commands the right nomk of the River Minho, with its citald, whilst Yalench protects the left on the opposite side. Spain tinishes with Tuy, Portugal begins with Vaienca. The two phaces, thus confronting one another, seene as if upholding a perpettual state of defiance. We did not stop at 'Thy, but pasing the Minho by boat, got comfintably instailed in a huspedaria of Valenea the samo ovening. II. Silva, an old oflicer of Dom Pedro, showed us the town the neat day. It presents, howorel, few mints of interest, the chice being its fortifications by Vimban, the position of the stronghold med town itseli, upon the summit of a table-lind, from whene the bende of the magnificent fromtier river conld le seen for a distance, its hanks green and enlivened by honses that sparkled like diamonds in the sun stretehing away into the fire distance. Valenca is commonly called Valenca do Minho, atter the river, num to distinguish it from the town of the same name in Spain. It is supposed to have leen fomuded at the time when Portugal lucame an inlependent kingdom; and was rebuilt in 1262, by Aphomso or Allomso IIl., who changed its former name of Contrasta to that which it now obtains.
In 18:37, the baron de Leciria defended the phace aginst the Septembints ; and ten yems later it sustained a vigorms siege from the saine faction, till wlieved ly the Spmish (foneral Conelaa. 'The guns of' Valenca rould, without mueh diflienlty, lay 'Tuy in ruins, a fact which our kind cirerone, M. Silva, ater refreshing our imer man with rice and cimanon and a glase of $\mathrm{O}_{\text {porto }}$, lid mot fail to pioint out to us, remarking, at the same time, that the strong are always merciful.
It was from Tuy that the Pronela General Thomićres medanomed to force his way across the Minho in 'mats, but was buten back be the Portugneve Ortenanzas; this ohliged tho Fruch to go romed ly Orease, preventend Soult from marching on Lishom at once, and gase the Dukr of Wellingtinn time to lamd amb to expel the invalers for the second time trom l'ortugal.

Niar Valmea is the village of tamei, once coldbrated fur its tmonantery, re-erected alther it had been dentroyed ly Amamsor, kiso of Corlova, by San Gmifi, a Premehman, in 970 . The chureh, hough much moderniserd, heservers a visit. It was a fammes, phace of pilerimage for the whole of Galicia. A histury of tho phace is given by Brother Leon de San Thomas. in his Lusitanic Bermedictina. It was at Valnea, also, that san Vianent, from whem the Cape. renownel fir the maval victorion of Rolney, dervis (afterwads Lome St. Vinernt), and Napier, dirives its name. withered umber the I'reffert Dacim, in 303 . The bexly of the saint was, arombeng to the legend, attrmbed on it removal from this plate to the cinge that bays his name (and whitleer it was comeved for salfety at the Mamish invasim), ley (ewns, and the same birits, genemilly :upused to in of ill-mmen, finlowed it on its second translation to Lishon, in 1117 , and attembal the -hij, in which it was transfirrel. Honer, evertain tame crows are :"hays kept in the choisters of the into thu arms of the city. Heree, olse, the ctan is frequently called Monte Corwe, and was named hy the Mours Kenimba-thath, "the chareh of crows,"

With the aid of one swowl friemel, M. Silsa, whense sturies of the combats at Sim Digucl aul Terreira, tund of the lattles of l'onte Tereetira, Santo Romende, and Almaster, were parkling with vivacity, wo ohtainerl, at Valenea, the servicers of a decked tishingboat, "ha Santa Annica," painted in dazzling colours, with a triangular sail mid generally primitive aspect; and that of two swarthy sailons yelpot Caspar mud Leomarlo, to procect diwn the Xlinho, amble thence along the coast to the sonthwarts to Vian or 'Viama, situate at the montlo of the Rio Lima. The Minho is ahout the breadth of the Thames at thelsea, between Valenea and Tuy, and it is mavigalile to Moneao, about two leagues higher up. The secury on beth sides of the river, expecially on the sonth, is rich and beautiful; the momatains pradually grow bolder, and, during the genter part of the distance, Monnt Sim Theela, eavily to ho distinguished by its very remarkable shape, fimed a conspienous orjeet in front. Sevemal aneient and ruinons forts were to br sern on the Portuguesio side, each one nonswered ly a corresponding fortification on the Spanish. Such wa, the Villa Nova da Cerveira, a small rumos frontier town, commauled by Fort Goyan on the Spunish side; and the seal of the lazarette for those performa, 'purantine on cutering Portugal from Galicin. Tlis this $1^{\prime \prime}$ int of the river. Beyonl, was Scixas, a pretty little village in the midele of vineyarls. Jnst beymul this, the River Comat joins the Ninho, and is cranel by a long wooten hridge. It, as well as the Minun, alwomds in salmon, shal and hanpeys.

An we sailed gently over the striam, Leonarde sit steering in thoughtial silence, whilst Giapmer, takio, his viola or guitar, indulged as in an intermimable series of villanceres, as the songs and melolies of the country are desiguatiol. We had just passed Villa Xivs, freshas a honguet, lemang over the forts that pres tueted it, as if to admire itwli in the river, when Lat timardia, a fortress which alvances into the Athantis at the extreme pint of the Sierzal de Testeyro, ifpeared in sisht with its white walls, real rouds, ilut green shutters. On the left was Caminha, with is armed hatterim, its frowning rocks, its lumsess seatermi alont the hilly shons, and buriod in pleasant and um. hageons garilens.
'The charelo of Caminha is comidered to be the the in this part of the country : its creetion was begun is 14s, anel not completen till 1516 ; the tower, fert in height, is battlomented, and externally resta bles a fintitimation; the choir and naw are very som specimens of Phmboyant ; the extreme lensth is abme 1.01 fint. A rrucilix is vencrated bere, which is st to have becth diseorared, with two chatices :thl th vestments of a prian, in it box at sea in 15:3, whem is finther suppeal to have leen thrown fin the sala of preserving it, in some ontherak at the leformatic A Fremele thunist says, several of the frontion chumel.
 tigure of a man with his back turned to spain, w: anything but a emmidrate on delicate gotane. It wen hinted that :an instance of this ix to low sern Caminha. What is mueh leveter is, that this lis?

 redolent of satic, and which is exputed a- well ast salmon. Notwithstanding its frotifiesl wall abs th when an anmial in the service of the Quew of Portas surprisen :und captured this place from the Migurdite with a few marines and British blue jackets.

Mr: Kingath, whon travilled in precisely on opposite direetion to that which we were fursuing, and cab (1) Caminha ly lamb, writer thas eoncernine Caminha is a rugnlanly furtified town, the walls one sile are washed loy the waters of the Minho; hes it is not " place of any great strength. At the menth of the larhour is a roeky ishame, on which stands a for: munting sercral guns, and forming a cross-fire wit Chumbia. After the emburkation of the livitish anys at Cormma thr French nttempted to enter Portugal is this direetion, and attacked the town, but were sueces. fully repulsed, mid finally abademed the conterprise. 1 dilfierent tate befel it bithere the arms of the gueven Portugal's admiral, Napiep. Apluearing ofl' the mouth the river with his theet, ho humbed his blue jaekets at marines, with whom he marehed towards the town, seriruinous forts werv to bu C, each one answered ly in the Spanish. Such was at, a small ruinoms frontier Goyan on the Sjanish sitle; tto for those performin, rtugal from Galicin. Tla, in splendid lackegronne at yonl, was Seixas, a pretty of vineyamls. Just Legurl the Dinlor, and is cromet lt, ats well as the Minho 1 hampreys.
the stre:m, Leonardusat ner, whilst daspar, takir, as in an interminable seri-s nd meledies of the cometry just passed Villa Nusi, over the forts that fre itself in the river, wher advances into tho Athati ne Niorma de Testeyro, ill hite walls, red roofs, ath? fi was Chminhat, with ${ }^{\text {P}}$ f rocks, its homes seattor wrid in pleassut and mb:
a eon-iblered to be the lie its rrection wats begmo till 1516; the tower, 11 ? ted, and externally rowt ir and muve ate very lee oxtreme length is abole werated acre, which is :a sith two elaticen and th. ux at sea in 15:39, whor lneen thrown fir the sill dambe at the Relonmatio ral if the firmutiow when maness deromated witla nok turned to Sbain, w: or delicate goature It are if this is to for sepu better is, that this lie' ; town, gossesses the a its loutition wall :and t o river, Sir Chathes Niq e of the Quern of Jortue plater from the Dligutit ish blue jackuts. led in purecisely an opposit? were pursuing, and cat. rites thas emeeming titied town, the walls waters of the Minlo; strength. At the momth and, ou which stands a tot: forming a eross-fire with kation of the Britisle arny mpited to enter Portugal in the town, but wre suces. andomel the enterprise. : the arms of the tuern of Appearing ofl' the month it muded his blue jaekets a: hed towards the town, sen-ing a lumad in manime to siny that he purposed to bring iil) hiv big ginns, and to blow the walls about the enmof of the garrisom, if they did nest instandy surremer. Tor this bold threat the governor thonght tit to send a civil answer, ussuring him he hat only to maneh in and take passension of the place, which haceardingly did, much to the surprise of the Dignelite fareas, who fully expected to see a large amy with all the monitions of war mako their apearance. In war, ats in love or polities, there is nothing like: name tu cary a mom on to victory. J'robably the goverum was vary ghal of a decent excons to yibli up his command peaceably, for ber knew that the canse of his master was by that time bist.

We walked romul part of the fortifications, whieh are not now kept in good eondition, whatever they might then have beron. Thes looses beiner buite of square blocks of hewn stone, have a neat appearames, hut the phace has a deserted triste air. While om hoses were feedins, we entered into conversation with some peophe at the doon of the imn, who were very rager in their inypiries about irom steman-boats and fiving machines, and semed to have great resuect fin us as bolonging to the nation which could invent such woulers. The tlyine mathines, one man satgacionsly diamenl, were less womderfal ; for Lirds and bats could Al ; but iron ships! they were surprising, for everyhady till now supposed that iron wonld alwiys so to the button. " Aliracles will never cease!" was his concluline remark. I mast do the rest of the party the justice to say that they fully understour the princhle of the iron vessels ; mer is it smprising that they believed in the flying machine. There is at dockyand at Caninha whero nurehant vessels are hailt.
From this town to Valenea is thon lenges, tho roal ruming along the banks of the Minho the whote way, sometimes close to tho margin of the river, and at others winding wor slight rises. 'the scenery, though fiur trom sramel is vay pretty. About two leagies from Ciminhat we passed through the olit fortified town of Villa Nova de Corveira, situated on a hill, the lerty thowning towers which genalded the two entrances still standing, though sully shattered by time. I regretted not being ablie to make a sketel of this pietmesture ohl plate. Nobre it is a castle of more modern date, but of uo st remeth ats a fortification, and on the opposite side of the river is the Spmish fint of (ayyu. Further on is another smatl fort called Suvalia, with a Spanish rival of the natue of Aborim. From the nature of the soil, more than from the eare bestowed on it, the rand is good all tho way to Valenea.
The seenery on :ppromehing Vilenea is excedingly interesting. The lintifications appear well in the foreground, with the River Alinho below, the Spanish town of 'Tuy on the opposite lamk, ind the wild siermas of' Galieit in tho distance. 'The walls crown the summit of a hill, rising sently from the sonth and west, but ireepipitons on the other silles. The fortress mounts about fifty pieces of camom, and consequently its rovernor, when summoned by Napier to submit to his arms, unlike lis brethren, refused to uley. It held ont for a considerable time, but at last, when threatened that it would be stormed, it eapitulated with all the honours of war.
After pussing the month of the Minho, the coast assumed a softer charateter, the hill sides being covered with pine-groves and tields, with white glittering estarges inturpersed anomg them. Wir enmld hear the sound of the wheels of the ox-carts sereechings or rather sinting, in eonerrt; for when at seat, and at sumo distance from the shore, the unise has at pleasing eflect to the ear, and tells of rame lifi, jnare, ami indinary. On share, when followint a cart upa steep lill, on at hot das, and sufferines from a head-ache, it is duite a diflerent thines Our pleasmit sail aloug the and the llights of rea-hirds, luoth of which abounded ofl' those fishy shores. The sithe avening we fetehed the fintress that defends the entranee of the River limat, and expurienced tu litliculty in our suall boat in pasing the bar, which is datagernis to versels datwing much water, and the "Niata Amice" east andar before it was datk amidst a small theet of fishimer-buats, amil other small vessols, which we were told worr lithen with fintis, oil, and manulitetures for expert.

II.

Sina or Vianna--Tife Areebispo Sinto-f'ontroerste Coukfry-Tus Lama and toonte do hime-The thomans at the River of Ghlivion-Bhecelos-Costron: of the Peasints-limaid-Lames asd haptices-('anho de Santa Anmb-'Tife Catifibhe-Mocntuss of the Bom Jeses-The Chereif Mimtant.

Vinar or Vhama is one of the chanest, most prepussessing, and charminis towns that cath bu possibly eonceived. None moro gracions is to be met with in I'ortugal. The houses of handionte andere are often fined with colonred tiles (aznlejos), the roots are turned up at tho sides and cobrers, :ind wronglit in various patterns; and temaces momed with shmots ar flowers line the wide streets. 'Ihese emmat be said to be very lively, for the Portusuese are not so busy it people as the Vinglish; on the other lami, the popidation lats a well-to-ds and quidet, happy aspect, such as is rarely to Le met with in a conntry town in France.

Viant is the largest and most prosperons port in the [rovinee, next to Opmito. It was known to the Romans as Nemetatabriga, and atterwards as Volohriga: at a still later perion it wats ealled Diama, from containing a celderated temple to that godless, ind thenes, by an uasy corruption, Viami, or Viannit. It has a tolerable havionar, whoh minits wescls of 100 tons burthen: the quay is respectable; and it earrie's on a eonsideriblo trule in salt fish with Newfommand. H1w was Nhipued the dirat prot wine over exported to Bindand. It is a fortitied eity, with tive gates. I'te Castello de Sintiago, whieh detemds it, was tho work of Philip If. The Jgieja Matriz is an interesting Flamboyant buidding. The arcading of the time of lham Manod in the north ainde, the lilamoyant canopy to the altar in the south aisle, and the efligy in low reliet' of a priest at its west end, are peenlindy worthy of examination. There are two wostern towers, and a very tine Flamboyant door between then. The chureh and eonvent of San Domingos were tho work of the colebrated Arehbishop of Israga, Dom Lartolomeo dos Martyres; it is a handsome Grecinn structure, with finu cluisters. The convent is now the residence of the military governor: The arehbishop is buried in it sareophagus of ted and white matrble, on the north side of the choir; somo ex-votos are suspended from it, though he has never heen formally canonised. L[o was born at Lisbon in 1514, entered the Dominiean order at the age of fonrteen, and was nominated to the arehbishopric in 15.8s. He atemad the (bumail of Imont, where ha tistingushed himsell by his haming amb mbilisy, amd thy the rexisamee which toe oppused to the assmation, Sy the set of 'Poleto, of the l'rimary of'all the 'pains.
 milled its statutes to the approval of the l'opre, he forme that it hat bern intrusted by the latter to the revision of the Arehhishop ot Cambray, on wheh bremeh "t' diaciphine lee distingrished himsitt hy one of the betatine the firthest roedesses al its momatains, where no bisbuy hatel been sern before. As a ginat of the begher which it had exprioned, it is reobed that.

 wildent oftens in the Nonth, he was mel loy the inhati munt haly 'I'rinity, and hursistere the most pure V'irgin.'

 cehing" Sinto. Ilis lifi, written lef lir. Imiz de Suma, Es one of the moat interest in's works in the I'orthenese lamgnage; aml, with the exception, perhipes, ot that ent

 phy. The lirst wlitum was printed at V'ianat in lify, by the monlis or samt dimain dex Irós, apmaral in bitet; and there is another enal lile ly d. li. Bunn, unelar the titla of Mistorice ele V'itid Burthotomei da Martyibuts. 'The works of the arehhinhey were pultlindorl at Bume in 1734, in $\underset{\sim}{-}$ vols. Cillo. 'Tho modallion wer his tomb ahe esempletely with his anthentio picture in the combent of the 'lhare Under of Ean Dominice at tinamamess

Viana was lomedy known simply as villa (litele Maria II. hist raisal it to the sank of civilatle (town). fin the loyaty amd eomase dixplayed ly its parison in $1 \times 17$. that it asomned har mane of Viana du ('astallo. This was ent the ocemsion ot' the hast revolt of the actimet the progressist insurgents of oproto, It hand hatore survemered to Napior, when, by the hame of his natur, mome thatu by the stroneth of size at his army, ha. Won the entior jart of the richest frosinu of I'ortugal fior the quets.
"Viana," sisy Mr. Kinerston, "is oter of the nimest and chenest towns in D'ortugal. The streets are brimb, mut well the comes of the eomsionions wheh lacrated the comintry latiore liberty was contablisheol.

"Viata is tha eapitad of the empegidntia of the smme mane, to much fullen onf; thongh I trist its commere, with that of the rost of the ematry, may nain revive. 'The hartmor nlat han he-from the interime. Tha entrater is defented l,y the eathe of Santagen, best to that of Vabencin the strongest firt in the morth of P'ortugal; althomeh ita delenders alde betatempt to withotand the virtortons littlo hume of the gallant Napier, when he, turuing himself amb him bhe jackets inten sod diers, with a fow native troung, -ank jumstessing of the greater part of the provine for the glueen. On the lunth side of the castle is on lare green-a retreshing sight to Eughish ryes schlom to be secul in this country. In every di.
()ibl Yigo provinions Iming axhanderl, we first mate : town. 'I'lee allied to a movier was disastrous in the -xtomere. Tha Vinuese have a detestabla passion lion tha same, hal it not bern lin its brins preadiad by: cold soup of watur, breat, nil, vinegar, mither and gill-PVen bice was served up seasemed with sallien. Wie dill, limeato, so called beeallase the grape vine that pronhers pendint downwarls, and some still better Aforcau-n G:alician whe which onght la he introulured inta mer ly the jalito or templiciek, colt ont, it is said by ame, t, it the woud al the wrime tree, hat by others firon the whits willow. I sketels at bage I 193 ut the jhaca of Viana will mavery at and bhat of the tantetal danriteter of the stemt arditerture, and ot the artivide tasth displatyed in its pmblie huiblime and momments-w en in thue rase of a simphe finntatio.

If is a lithe mone than elevan leagues hy water fron

 Hivigation of the rimo was delightelul, mothing motd thes then strean. Fivery bend in its water diyulayed wree going agemet the curnent, the berere wastoo slight to makn murh way, and the mavigation was tinther im-the graty at the tion of than Prolro the Firut's brides.

 common to many centitries, estarimet to bue the bust heantilul plate in the worht. This praise reevive enve the the ermery to the right the the tatme of the F'lysinn Fiomls. 'I'lue Lima itsedf was rabled the Land 1ha River of thlivion, laceanse its labaties were sim pasplat prosess the elleets of the lotus, und to make the travelher finget his combtry and his home. It was

 Ohlivion, a fiat lafore mhturd of: fir the soldiari rection ahant the town are fomatains af pure water, fith sian and firkhoms, which nell much to the demaliness mad beaty of the whatever might formedy have hecu the ruse, it dues mot in that respect surposs himga. There is a hage mamal hior held hare in sold, incluling hats, wooden shows, tuoth-picks, tin-tackn, nas tor sale from onlar parts of the provine', but the from 'span, us rompared with the munher sent to Vixen. 'The chied impart is nerthern part of lomtheal is suphed.

limstonl，we fiest manl boking at this flatant Was dixastrons in that －letestable passion tion then of ail mat girliek． lianatged by Nhirking ts Ininis pereded by： in＇gan，onions alll witl－
 d with matlion．Werlid， was somer＂xeedlont comi， T1 asmorila，as the rold ral（qaspluda ins Spir semes grond vinlas div． yer vinu that produres will hetter Muse：口иー－ －introhered int．，onr Her is alwnye follormal ot，it is saill ly somer， but be others firnothe ag．［：3\％of thir plata a if the tantefinl chan－ and of the artintice tarel und monuments－ con loaguay liy water from we mogaged ont oll onsey be thilloes：The ightinl，mothiases retuld thatu the bunks of $n$ its water dioplayes nlackily，lowever，we Iי Jurne was tow slight fition was fint her ins ans ouly after fourtan ＂anchared illangside Iro tho Niext＇s brident welles． tagrage of patheyric －Mond Io the the thent Thes prown reativer inloration from having I hy the：Rume．th，whe the tho natme of the was ralleal tha Lache： ts beallities wore chir －lotus，anel te make if）his lumar．It was

＂J：wing trawnem the histarisell，＂ind Lasitrai，lor advammel 1 woist，an mefinm the ＂rowsed the liver of of：fin tho solbior
nre water，or all sians and liness und heauty of the frempently rasides late． going tinward，themplo． rabe，it daes mot ill that unan！hair holl hore in of cotton to a neclle，is thi－pinks，tim－tacks，and siss are nise brouyht lare ，but tew from spain，as ＇u．＇The cliset＇impurt is feured to cross it，us they would fear to in＇to certain destruetion．Brutus，seizing the standiad fiom the hand of the stanlarl－bearer ；＇Now，＇sabse lut，＇the：vinsign and your imperator will to bryond the river ：it is your husiunss to do what you choose to do．＇And jluging in as he spoke，shane womblat jurmit the ma to remain on the uther sitlu，and the whole：passed over：＂I＇rasdlers have fomml words fial them to ex－ press the beranty of the spot．＂I thought，＂sings Lord Carmarvon，＂wleen wandering along the banks of the lima，that 1 ham never gazed purat bovelier seent； as I raw the susia set ghoniously hehind a ranse of bohd nountains then dohen in the 小eepert purple＂＂It womla lae in vain，＂writes lanhhama，＂to make any whert to doncribe the beations＂if the majowtice seen ry surromaling this place；words have at meaning too limited for the purjose．＂It wis the l＇orum Limectorneme of the Jomans，retimmed by Donna Tareja in IIs号， and again by Jom I＇endal．in 13t00．The estalagem is wry decent；the town itsolf has shaly，narrow streets， and great remains of ancient fintitications ；its peln $^{\text {m－}}$ lation is abobt 2,000 ．The River Lima rises in the Sierra re shan Mamede，in Galicha，and receiving the pretty little Cabroo，llows across Dinho，and enters the sea at Viamat，atter a eourse of el lemothes．It is，not unaturally，it great fivourite with the Portuguese pects．Jiego Bermardes gave its mane to the col－ lection of his prems；he spaks athectinnately of the ＂Claras aguas de nosso done Limat．＂

Aud in another flate lie says：
＂Junter do Lima，charo e freser rio， Que Jecthe se chanon antiguanente．＂
It abounds in salmon，Larbels，and trout；and near the sea in hampreys，soles，and a kind of sea－eel called Moreiat

From Poute do Lima we lisul once more to mount our mules and put ourselves umber the charge of the arreiress，ami pussing l＇onte d＇ilhel by a mather rocky and slesert country，we arrived the same evening at Barcellos，a town of grater importance tham I＇onte do Lima，less perpiled than Viana，but rivalling both in the beanty of its position，the cleganco of its houses， and haviug pechliarities that belang to it alone． Situated on the right bank of the Civaulo，a little blue river which flows into the Atlantic at Esposedele a fe－w leagues further down，its streets rise up the lill－side， at times so precipitously as to recuire steps to go from one to another：It is also approached by a bridge，on the sonthern side of which is a singular colmande all rommal；a very pieturesplate ujant．Un the oppmitu side ate the reatatus of the dusad palate．

 Dumathriteste lereira，damphter of the Great Comstable； from whom this donain descended to tho present reigning fiumily．Above the palace is the collewgiate church，a respectable but not very ramakable Flam－ buyant building．In the Ruat de Sinn Franeineo is a pretty little chapol，with a pool lelambigant door． The Campo da Fecira is a large upen space in the upper piat of the town；at the further ens is the chureh of Sata Ciu\％，atomed modern erection，with short teansepts．＇Ilse Convento diss Beatas，and the convent of the What Onder of Sith Frameis，are meryly morem buiklings．It was at Baredons，during her last journey to the North，that the house in which the barely prosemeal her life by we：aphug in lum night ress． baek to the thaces of the amorstors of the homer of Bhat when，we explomal this chatuing ohe city，ath this gese avoloped themsolves in bask mantho．hatan－e that disphatal jewellary，in the shapon＇＂ur－rings，ne klaces． tmil chains，and wre alike protty and panal．A few of the men we me listinguished hy mathes with atarminer colours，callotl＂homets do mitandat，＂：anl sume of＂the araw bunliess and skints，and they lesked lihe moving beehives or savages frema some remote tormat．

It is tive I＇ortughese lagnes from Barrellon ta Braga． ＇lae roal kerps for a time alomer the right hank of the Cavalo，it is afterwads mariod over the river，amel then over laroken comatry，by a second－rate roal，tor a phaia of enchanting atspert，which is watereal by three rivers，the Caviulo to the month，the Boste th the south， mand the Ave to the rast．An isobated mommi on hill rises out of the centre of this plain，imil stesets，radis， walls，and the ruins of an whe fortitication ramp up the sites of this hill，while at its foot，and withont the pre－ gradually，scatter themselves in the plain，anidst trees， shrubs，and thowers．Such is Jhaga．

We somm fonnd vurmelves entering out of the loug， spider－like long which streteh ont tiom the berly of Braga：for let it be known that to that reptibe tho the inhabitants，from its slape，liken their cits．We reined in our horses，and rode stealily atones ：for goon］ rensen we hatl to do se，not only that a slow pace was mure suiteal to our serlate ehitsubter，lat that from beneatls the latticall windows on each sillo of the street many at bright puir ol eyes were betaning finth，in whose lustre we were tain to bask，even for＇at moment．In coumbon place langrage，I have never nec n so mathy pretty girls looking out of windows in ：8！y towu as i did during that rime through the strons of lhath． Thern the windows ：rre fot anmann witulews，which let in the girish light of day undestrainw of，of the valgat stame of the andacions crowal ：lat ordatal－like late cier Which，lifting up，likn the ports of at ship，rxhifit only so muld of the jerxon as the thir inmate may wi－h ris diseluse．

Now the ladies of Braga are mot only vory lowely
 the gadlant knights who may be prambinlating the structs a feeling of eharity and kindmess，which mako them unwilliner to kerp those jealous blinds alluzether clused ：and themfinve，intringing the ensions of their orimatal sisters，thery mise therm suthemanty to be any great ditheulty on the purt on＇＂ithers．＇These lattiors are aif various forms，painted grean or atark ral．Some cosur the antire front of the honse，so that it is dithenlt to saty fiom what lan＇t the bright eyes of the imprisonel lieauties may be gazing forth thongh these have certain purts which open on ocension, but which in all probability are generally kept loeked by the disereet duennas during their absence from lomer, lest their fair charges might be tempted to ensay their attractive powery on the sensitive hearts of the many "rady to alore thom without. Fur sueh things will happen, it is said-not that the duemms cun mistrust their chargen, of comse; but merely that they have a kind and considerate regard for the feelings of the loving youths, and wish to keep, the tempting fruit from their sight. Other honsess have only the windows with latticed fronts, which lift up from below, and some havo latticed balconies; but these latter have regular rows of ports, which when open enablo the ladies who sit working within to see, without being seen, all that gones forward in the street below.

Fortunately for us this was a holiday and saint's day, which fully nceounted for the number of fiur beings who, dressed in their best attire, were muwilling to allow their charms to heom unseen, and thus, with lattiees lifted to their utmost height, were looking forth on the world abrond. The tramp of the steeds of seven eavaliers on the hard smooth stonepurement doubtless drew many to the wimbows, though we do not presume to say the nprearance of any individund of the party had sueh attractive pown; indeed, we have strong fears that we were pronouced barcellos.

to be a very dirty, unpolished set of travellers. However, before we had ridden five minutes through the streets we pronounced Braga to be a very delighuiul place.

At the end of the long street turning to our right, we entered one ne:nly as long and twiee as brond as Suckville-strect, Dublin, whieh, as all the world knows, is the broadest in the British Isles. Not that I mean to compare the Campo in Sunta Anna of Braga with that of the Irish capital in any respect, exeept in width ; for, instead of being paved all over, the centre is a sea of dust; and though it can boast of a church of respectable size, and several of the houses are large, there are wany very small ones. Dut when completely paved, as it is to be forthwith, and rows of trees planted on each side, and fountains in the centre, the effect will be very handsome, and it will mueh resemble the strects of one or two tewns I have visited in the south of France. The towers of the ancient citadel at one end, and a clureh at the other, auld much to its appearance. A broad pavement of beautifully regular square stones runs the entire length on cach side, formet, however; I am grieved to siy, by the demolition of one of the old towers of the city. Directly on cutering the square our guide stopped nt a large old house near the ehureh, which we soon discovered to be the Estalagem dos duos Amigos. Into it we were mast hospitably welcomed by a on open enable the - see, withont being treet below. holiday and saint's the mimber of thir st attire, were ullbloon unseen, and utmost height, were Che tramp of the the windows, though appearanco of any attractive powers; we were pronomeed

 $22 x+0$ mer nic: 0

, and rows of trees tains in the centre, ne, and it will much two towns I have The towers of the chureh at the other, A broad pavement of runs the entire length I am grieved to sily, old towers of the eity. re our guile stopped hurch, which we soon a dos duos Amigos. ably welcomed by a personago who informed us that he was the Moco do extalugem, il est, the waiter, that his name was Manoel, that the master was away at a quinta, and that he himself was prepured to wait upon us and sundry "ther guests bexides.

Driga, from being an episeopal see, was formerly overrun ly priests and friars, so that no ladies ventured abroad, and every one walked (as a friend described it) with their hands crossel before them, and their eyes cast to the ground. Exeept chureh music, nono was heard, mud diancing was an amusement so little dreamed of, that not a young lady in the place possessed that accomplishment.
"It was sards, cards, carls, and scimdad all," observed a friend. No bad deseriptions of some cathedral towns in Englimd!
"Were the prople better?" hermanued. "Certainly not. Were they happier ? Fior trom it. There was more wickelness, and more mischief going forward on every side ; and an immeasurable deal more of hypoerisy, Thank heasen, we have got rill of theabomiuable muisunce: Great changes have lately taken place. We now nect at each other's houses, where we have music and dancing. We have a capital clubhonse, at which we also give balts-for the ladies will not be exeluded from any socicty; indeed, where is it perfect withnat them? Daring the Carnival we have masipuerade-hialls, conmanced two vairs ago, which might rie with those of Italy, thongh we keep, them select; but during the last Carnival, though onv dresses were orkred, and arrangenents mande, owing to the mulappy athiix of Alucida we could not have our ball. We met and eousulted on the sulject, but though none of our relations were chgiged in the affiur, how could we enjey dancing while our coantrymen were cutting "ach other's throats?"

I have given a taithtul translation of my friend's words, for they will hetter deseribe the state of society in Brigat than I can in my own. I found them to be perfectly correct.

Even at present there is a certain clerical air about Braga, and at every coruer wo meet priests in their robes; a sight not assual at oforta. There are also many more shrines than in the latter city; one of which we passel in our walk, over the gate of the public prison, or lock-up house. 'ithis prison is a dreadfullooking den, a recess apparently in the old eastle walls, with a strongly barred iron grite in front, moro suited to contine wilh beasts than human heing, however turbulent. Some half dizon must rutlian-looking wretches were throsting out their ams and hats from between the grating, begging elanity of the passors-by. Over this den there was it shrine containing the figure of a saint, whether mahe or femme I froget, surrounded by tlewers, and lighted up, with mumerous was-candles, hefore whom envery passer-ly took off their hats-a few devont old women kneding down to wifer up their prayers. Following the wise rule of "Do at Rome as the Romans lo," we of course howen as respeetfally as the firmest believers-or the greatest intidels-among the erowd.

Notwithistanding the exertions of the previons day, and the excessive hent of the wather, we left our hotel at ten ocluek to view some of the sights of Bragn, and ufterwards to make some calls on our aequintmice; having first pent a messnge to Senor Joam Borges to request him not to venture out on so burning a monning, his health, as we knew, heing delicate.
"Beneath the lofty roof and the shady cloisters of the eathedral we shall be far cooler than in any ether spot in the neighbourhood," we concladed, "except it be on the summit of those lofty serras above us, to reach which would be a toil beyond our powers." To the catheilral therefore, directly facing tho bishop? palace, and which was close at haul, we bent our stepy; takiug advantage of every shady spot to advance. It was useless to look up at the windows in our way; the jealous lattices were closed, nor at that time of day could we expect any bright eyes to be gazing forth on us through then, or rather, I onght to say, could we expect to see any of the finir inmates of the demiciles beneath them. The heat was certainly very great, hut the position of the eity being high, the atmoxphere was pure and rarefied, and besides, being highly interested in all we saw, we felt not what might lave overcome other people.

I think my realers may, from those I have already describel, picture to themselves the style of the strects through which we passed. In general, there were, first, on the ground floor open shops, that is to say, with many doors and no windows, cither of Fresch perfumery, gloves, and bijoutcrie, or those of linendrapers, groeers, or eloth-merehants; then, for one or two stories, came the vast masses of light trelliced wood-work; and above all was a story of stome, or wood, with two or three windows falling laek bedind the rest. The streets are paral with inat flagestone the gutter being in the centre, and mostly without trottuirs. Sill imovations have lately been male on the picturespueness of the city (however the inhathtants may have gained both air and light), by the partial abolition of the trellices, and the substitution of $p^{\text {lain }}$ landsome fronts of stone-work, with large windows to some of the houses.
The enthedral of Braga is one of the oldest Cuthic ecelesiastieal strnctures of Portugal ; and althongh on many sides it is concenled ly other buildings, the purts of which as \%od view ean be obtaned utter: rery beautiful shecimen of that s.tyle of architerture. The poreh at the principal entrance, in particular, is most light mad airy, with several delicate flutel columus, sulperting a rich tracery-work, and a root of highly-peinted arehes. One end of the mbitiec, fieing a broad street, is also very exquisitely wnmmented. As I neither took measurements nor sketches of the building, and as I have never read any doseription if it, I cannot well say more of the exterior, hat thy impression was, that of itself it well merited a juminy from Oporto to Braga to be viewel. The intition has been much disfigured hy the exectable fishium of the last few centuries (I fen that I may say the wery last), in being whitewaslard, or beduberl with hand guintings -in having the Gothic columne turned into thine of the Grecian, or some nondeseript order-and hy altars. of the most inappropriate deseription, crecteil at the sides. How grieved would tho arehiteet he, who planned and built that once profeetly beautifil stras. ture, were he to belold the sad changes which the hatid of modern hurbarians, mine than of time, bave worked on the promuce of his genins and knowledge! how little canse would he have to sny that the presenit age is in advance of the past. Many Tortnguese genthemen expresmod to mo their disgust and weation nt the vile havoe which the motern mue ut priently Vauduls havo mule on the finest productions of the architectuml talents of their forefithers. They turned the shady eloisters ff oler than in any oflan concluded, "except it y serras above us, to ond our powers."' $\mathrm{T}_{0}$ y faeing the bishopis ant, we bent our steps; spot to advance. It adows in our why; the $r$ at that time of day to be gazing forth on ght to say, could we mates of the domiciles certainly very great, ; high, the atmosphero es, being highly inteot what might lave those I have already the style of the streets general, there were, shops, that is to say, Ws, wither of Frouch e, in those of linennts; then, for one or ses of light trellicel n story of stman, 1 . sfalling loaek behin? 1 with ilat flag.stomen, and mostly without lately been made on (however the inhalsid light), by the purtial substitution of plain vith large wintows to of the oldest Guthic ;al ; and aithough on other buildings, the be obtained oflier : tyle of arrliterture nece, in partienlire, is eral delicate thutel -work, and a reofif of the whifiet, facing tely omamented. As 10r sketchess of the dany deseription of xterior, hat my in. meritel a jontry l. The intertur has mable fashionl of the y say the wery last), I with had prantings turned into these of rder-and hy altars, bion, erecteil at the arelitect be. who etly leantitil strus. changes which the thun of time, have is and knowledge! ay that the pressint ny l'ortngucese gentat nall vesation at 11 mee ut $1^{\text {miestly }}$ productions of the hers. Thuy turned aside their heals with a dissatisficel air as we passed, in our walks throngh the eity, several of the elegant crosses, in which it nboumly, disfigured by whitewnsh, or yellow, green, and vel paint. Some portions, however, of the interior of the builaing of which I am speaking, have cxeaped this barbaroms lesecention of art.
Having made this prelude to my description, I will endeavonr to sketch in detail much which we saw worthy of note. There are several clanpels on each side of the eathedral, opening into it, and in one, that of the Holy Sacrament, 1 observed an altar-piece of carvel wond in very high reliefl. The sublject was the triumph of religion. War, Rapine, nud Mnrder, representerl 1 y men with mout expressive features, are fenge gromid benenth the whels of a chariot; preceded by a prancing steel and his rider, bearing alott the Roman eagle and the keys of St. V'eter.
An (ill, fat, smiling faced mulatto, who performent the duties of sicristan, acteclas our cicerone; and before her would alluw no to see anything else. he insisted on our entering what he considered his sunctum sunctorum-the region over which he more esureially presided-the sacristy itself, It was a handsome hail with arehed roof. Up the entre, arrauged on stands, weve the rich canonicals of the hishol, and the other principal dignitaries of the extahlishment, whild on eath side were immense lockers with intawers, in :ol, ich varions other Iresses and valuables were kepi.
Pirst, we -acre shown a drawer hodding the gohlemtissue robes of some departed bishop, who being a man of very diminutive stature, hand a pair of white and goble shes, constructed with mormonsly high heels, which gew him nearly hall': feot more of height. 'They foded like a caricature of such te were worm hy our gevit-grambentio. rs more than st century ngo. There were sereral miates of whito silk worked in gold with glitering jew ls-but I must mit say purcions onesfior I suspect thase roblers, the Pronch, hasd cariend such otl, as they did everything ralmable they eombl pinere of gold tissme, with whin to cower the 1trly sierament. Othor drawers matained piles of magiticent vextments; anme hat hern worked in hagh, cthers hat come from limer : sume were of ted silk mulduld, tw be worn on the day derieated to the lloly thost; and wthere, of green silk and sobld, were rery hamdsome. The wright of some which we lifted was protigions-suthicient, I shomble think, to fatigne the stimanst prolate who ever rulet the she of hagn. Thase powertill bishops, however, it mast be rmanbered, were in days of yere acenstomed to don mot only good servies therein, when they led their folhwers to the fiell ; so that they might purhips have fotand no, inconvenience fiom such emblempure gitments. Ohe dress in ${ }^{\text {and }}$ ricular I remember, of the richest Inoende, and of great weigl , with a cross worked on it, was brought fiom Chi at three hundrod yeara ago. It was used, and 1 suppesestill is, when a new bishop is inithated in his oflice. On a fine marlde table in the centre of the hall were arruged the gohl emp and ether atensils usent in the communion service, covered with elotlis of gold tissure. On the mprer shelf of the locker which rom round the hall were numerons hasts of the former bishops, and above them, $\mathrm{l}^{2}$ intinges of the suints, mul events in their lives, ly l'ortuguse artists. In a ghass case, anoug the bishong' heads, way the skull of Smata Camelida, crowned with a wreath of white roses; and I believe that the cathedral contain, many other most precious relies, which 1 must own to not having seem. I fear the sarristan hat not full confidence in the ortholoxy of our belief, as he alid not even otler to exlabit to us those invaluable trensures.

An inscription on the outside wall near the entrance gives a long aceount of them, mentioning that they were presented, many centuries ago, by a eertain pious preate, who hate collected them at vast expense and labour. The army of Sonlt never thonght of carying them ofl, which is a strong prool, if any were wanting, of the utter disregard they had to all mingious subjects. The vile intidels! What, leave belhind thase invaluable relies, which were well worthy of a deneral crusule of all the nations of Cliristemlom to win, and carry away instead all the vile dress of gold ame silver which came within their reach? No woulder the mited nrms of Englamel and Porlugal drove them with ignominy from an hat.

We hand not yet seen half the treanme. 'The sacristan now onwed a clowet door, and di-phayed a fine collection of gohl and silver cups and croints. The most beantifin was a large chatice of finely chaned gold, and sarrounded with bells, whieh gave forth a musical somed as it was raised aloft. It was mpards of three humerel years , wh. Then there was in small silver cap, inlaid with gold, used at the elrist ning of the great Alfonso Henrique, more than seven handred ye nisagn, and a ring and crom of even greater :utiçuity, 1 elonging to sume bishop, of same phee or ather, which, is orr dark cicerme obscreal, it mattered lut little to us to know.
Near this closet stoon a trionk with all the atensils used at the sarmmont and in alministering extreme unetion, which I hat now, for the first time in my lifi, a guod opportunity of examining. There were jugs to contan the wine, a poot and spern to sprinkle liwly water, a case to contain the oil and cintment, and other resels, looking wry like tean-pots. 1 mat assure my reakers that I tonched them all with the utmost rexuet.

Un emeh sile of the sacrinty were two Morisen-hoking femitains, painted of all colnus, the tapo nt which shat with a spring, wo that they canmut be le ft raming -an illea worth evpring fin thee need in bear or wineeasks.

It is time we should heave the satristy, and momit the stepm of the high altar, over which stamis a tigure of Nossat Seuhma dia Codra. to whom the eathedral is delicated. The altar-tible is covered with a cheth of gold, the sulinect worked on it being the lives of the twolve apostles. On ame sithe is the (ombl "Comnt IEenti of Besumen, the fither of Alfonso Itemigne, and on the other that ot his wite Doma 'Jeresa, hoth of stone. On the lis of the tirst is the recmmbunt shatne of a knight, rudely carved, which has sine been vilely mutilated, one arin beins also broken. Thank of tho senn and chapter fimeshortening Comen Hemiis legs to apucezo him into his present powition. That of Dome: Teresa luns less pretensions to heanty or sty le of exemuion. On ene side of the attar is thr misempat throme; louth it mad the cmoply heing coveret with cloth of gotd.
On the left of the principal entrane is a my ancient and beantiful font, nut on the other side is flee tomb, if Bom Selbustim, tho infant sen of 'lhm Jome I., who divint ten years of age. It is entively of honae, anel the design is very elegant. On the lid of a riehlyworked sareophagus is a child sleeping, with angels watching romml him, while conehaut dogs support the whole tomb. A canopy of bronze raised by four light pillars shades it, and it is also surrounded by an iron ruiling.
Leaving the body of the ehmeh, we entered a separate chapel of pure Gothie architecture, in which no immovations have been made, dedicated to Nossa Senhora do Libramento. It contains not only the tomb, but in a glass case, on one side of the altar, the veritable mummy of the gallant Dom Lorenzo, bishoj, of Braga, who fenght most valiantly at the battle of Algibarrota, where he received a trementous sabre ent, the mank of which is still to be seen on the right side of his eleek. The body is very perfect, of a light elay colour, the teeth, luir, and nails still sem, but the rober of gold tissue were renewed some twenty years baek. Benenth is an inseription praising his valour and his fiety. On the wher side of the altar is the sareophagus in whieh the body was originally preserved.

We next iscended to the orgm-loft, which quite blazes with gilt earving. The organs me very hamdsome, of hack wood, with gold ornaments, and are fincly toned. By a fee to the organist strangers may at any time hear them phayed.

As the saeristan was showing us round, he frequently comphaned that sueh and woch an ornment had been carried ofl hy the Fromel. "Then I suspeet, Sumhor Sacristao, that they are ne fricmis of yours," I observed. "Friends, indeed," he answored with a scornful tone, "Thank heavens, I have ne friemts amomst the greatest thieves of the carth. How eam an honent man chan them ans friends, forsooth ?"
We lingered amid the cool reces, es of the sacred ciitice, till wur hack ciceroue informed us that he hand shown us all the euriosities of the phee, $p^{\text {whititely }}$ hint. ing at the same time that he was anxiuns to close the doors, and to take lis dimer and siesta; so we most muwillingly were compelled to seek onee more the hot firmace of the outer air.

We stool for sone time ulmiring a fountain of cherant dexign, which therw aromd its cooling showers in fiont of the bishop's palace. Six figmes support a harge shed, on the tej of which is a rock, with in castle fincly carved on it. The castle is surmomed by turrets ame hattleme: ; the wate: flowing from beneath it, over the siles of the sliell, into a large tank bullow.

We then enterel a part. of the palace open to the pulic, being a harge lall hang roum with port rats of the definct irelates of the see; nud beyoml, the bishop was lomling a sort of a court of justice, his predecessors having enjuyed, at one time, the rights of petty princes.
Among the other sights of Braga is the sacren hitl and elumed of the Dom Jesns, with a lad ruad about a mile in length, with two elnopels and iren gatewny at the eommencenent of the nseost. Looking up an intermimilde range of steps nhoove nteps, nul masomy piled on masonry, uppoured, with here and there little chaipels or resting places for the devont, like the few calm numts we meet with in the toilsome mp-hill journey of life. The eminnence on cither side is thickly clothed with trees and bestrewn with vast stones, the chesnut, the cork tree, ani the wak suceneding eath other as the elevation increases. Pinsing the principal chureh, on the highest point to which the chapels rench, is a largo "pen space, on the further extremity of which is the crowning chapel of all, that of the Aseension. All the elappels belonging to this singula: strueture have irm-barred gates ut their entrance, lept always closed, the whole of the interior of eath being fitted up as the stage of a theatre, or some was-worl? show, with figures perfioming different furts, as large as life or larger: the seenery is very appopriate, as are also the dresses. The figures are carved in wool, entirely by Portuguese artists, and mostly by those of Braga. The expression of their faces is almirable, and their attitudes matural. Thus, the look of surprise and awe in the countenances of the diseiples at the ascension of our Saviour is very well purtraged in the tirst clapel. These clapels are of considerable size, and cirenlar, or rather of an octagmal firm, hoding some twenty or more tigurex, grouped about on rums, or beneath treas, as the seenery requires. To the right of the elapel of the Ascension is that of the last Supper. Christ and his diseiples aro seated at table with it leg of mutton lefore them, while several attendants are bringing on other dishes of considerable magnitude. Some seriblers, profinely inclined, might find subjects in these exhititions on whieh to exert their wit, nul would laugh at the dog and cat in the centre of the stage, who are lowking up with lomging eye at the savoury viamls the waiters are leating; indeed, it is dithenlt at all times to preserve the gravity sueh subjects demand.

On the left of the first chapel is one of which the seene is the angels guarding the tomb of Chist, when Mary Magdalene and other women eane with pisto and cintment. This large phtfiom is surroumed ly a stone bahustrade and seats. On fwo sides of it the hill descemes preeipitonsly to the vale below, while a beantiful virw up the valley towards (havers is serm from it. At the Festival of the Bom Jess. 'is in the" chint joint of attration; for here the venden. "frimd fish, cakes, mad wine, treet their hooths, ma make their princigul stand; and here thonsamels from all purts of the country colldet to eat, drink, pay, ant amuse themselves. It is truly a gay and enlisemin, sceno at the time. The large square of haga itarlf? the roal thance to the Monte, the whole ilight of steps, the clurel, the platfinm we uro speaking of, mad the wooled hill above, are crow ded with peeplice, in their fest holiday attive, and in many variod costanes; some having arrivel on foot, others on horses, mules, or domkeys; all sereanin" laughing, talking, or paying tugetions. Not only, peasunts thare collecterl, but shopkeepers, merchants, mul traders of ac. ary descriptinn, rewort thither ; nor do the lesser gentry, or the high filatges, think it deragatory to their lignity to join the festal seene. The largest fair in Portugal is held during this festival at hraga, where 1. rery species of merelnumbise is sold, including cattle, horses, mules, and donkeys.

Thit J. must describe the Mount as wo saw it, almont deserted, and not the Festival of the Bom Jesns, with its seenes of moving life. From this high phatform, by a grudual descent, we reached two other small clapets ; the lisst emitaining a representation of the Rasurrection of Christ on tho third day. The astonished look of some of the soldiers, nud the slepy expression ill others, is exuct to the life; indeed, tho believing prasumts muy be excused if they fincy that they seo before then breathing figures of flesh and blood. In which the elaplecls ne further extremity 1 of all, that of the ging to this singula: their entranee, lept turior of eneh being ; or some wax-work erent purts, is linge very appropinte, as are carced in weol, 1 mostly by those of - taces is adminable, , the look of surprive the diseiples at the ell portrayed in the of consideruble size, gomal firm, hoding ped about on ruck: thires. To the right is that of the last aro seated at table m , white several at. ishes of considerathe nely inclined, might on which to exert dog and eat in the ug ul with hurging vaiters are lyaring; preserve the gravity is one of which the mbl of Christ, when In came with yinte m is surromaled by two sides of it the vale brow, while a ards Chaves is sem Bom Jes. - is is than the vember. ifried - hootlis, mara make thousands from all at, drink, pay; and gay nud culiveniu; are of Buga itselt, the whole thight of we are speaking ot, wdel with peenike, in ny varind eustume; ; is on liorses, mules, yg, talking, or praymits there collectest, traders of M - y a the lesser sentry, leregatory to hain The largest fiur in al at baga, where hi, ineluding cattle, as we snw it, ulmost he Belu Jesnis, with this high phattorm, d two other sumall presentation of the lay. The ustonished es slepy expression deed, the believing fincy that they see esh and blood. In the sccond chapel, Christ is representel as dead, with the women mourning over him.
We now eame upon a seeond large tertace, on which stands the prineipal chureh, with a large edifice on one side, huilt for the aceommodation of families of higher rauk, who may wish to perform their levotions in the purest nir, and to enjoy a lovely view at the same time. Numbers spend several consecutive days there for that purpose. A little further off, on tho side of the hill, is anether long low building, where aceommedation is to be foumd both for uan and beast.
The chureh is an elegant structure, theugh of the modern style; mud surely no spot conld have been mure appropriately chosen on which to erect a temple to the nost High Gol. The interior is chaste and guiet, without any of that tinsel and paint which disfigmes so many of the sacred edifices in Portugal. The altar-picee is eurions. It consists of a tigure of Christ on the Cress, as largo nus lite, and is considered to be, and, as far ans 1 conld judge in the imperfect light, is, very beautifully executed. It was a present from lieme, and is mado of pine. In front stand abont twenty wooden figures, also ans large as life, representing the apustles, thu" soldiers, and women, who were present at the erucitision.
'The sacristy was hung romme with pietures of the benefictors of tho work, amming whieh were those of Dom Jnan V't., the Duke of Delatoens, and the Marquis of Mariakn, of whom Beekfiril spaks so affectionately. We were shown also a very beantiful crucitix of ebony inlail with ivory, brought from Chim. The nane given to this crucitix is the Bom Jesus los Navigantes; which may be translated, "The Good Saviour of Snilurs." Betore it, therefore, "they that go down to the sen in whin"" come to pay their devotions.
We momnted to the sumumit of the helfry, which contains some limowouling bells, which were atterwarla rung fire our gratifiention. Thence we oibtained a gool view of the hrome streets and white witices of firage, the whole valley being batherl in the glowing light of the setting sme. After sitting on the trimace for some time, listening to the sweet sumad of the bells hul wing ing the virw, we emmmened hur descent.

It mint her known that the whole of this vast strueture has her on lailt hy the velontary domations of the thit hful, and that the cutire phen is not yot complete.
(1n the maxt landing plate we reachad, two new chan ${ }^{\prime}$ ls were in the course of crection, of chaste design, exhihiting a vergent improvementin the modern tante. Nour one of them, on a summit of a large rock, is the statue of an armed knight on larseback, representing, we wree toll, the soldier who phused his spear into the side of Jesus; but why ho is thus commemoraten, I cament possibly say. Both the chapels mad the statue were designed inul excented, I bulieve, hy two Braga artists, of whom I land before heard.

On each sitlo of the steps, which near the top consist of two tlights, mre high lazlustrades surmomited by statues of suints and seriptural eharacters; on the outside arr clasely cat box-trees, and down the eentre are a suceession of tomutains, to the very buttom. Tho first fummain is delieated to Hope, over which Nonl presides: his ark, from heneath which the water gushes forth, rests on a row. From the second the water thows firth from the holes in which the mails were driven in the Cross, with this motto over it : "Fijns fluent aque siva," which one of our party rend most innoecutly, "Ejns fluent aque vite," and translated, "Heuce flows a fountain of brandy;" being mueh disappointed when he discovered the water was neat.
We had all the way down a fino view of Braga, and enjoyed that sublime spectacle nut witnessed by me withont emotion, of the sun setting in glorious splendour behind the momitains of Gerez, the whole sky glowing, for many minutes afterwards, with a vast flume of rucldy light.

On the third fountain was a curious design. It was that of a durk lantern, a rope, dice, a triangle, hammer, uails, and many other carpenter's and mason's tools, such as, it may ho supposed, were nsed at the Crucitixion. From several conseentive fountains the water flows forth from all the organs of the senses, first separately, and then all combined; but I am mable to give any interpretation of these designs. During our deseent we passed eight other chapels; the fifth from the top being that of the Descent from the Cross; the sixth, Christ compelled to bear his Cross. A figure is holding a handkerehief, with the impression of his face on it. I know not from what authority the itlea is taken, but doubtless descrving of implieit lielief. The seventh is tho Ecce Homo-Chist brimght bumbi before the people; the eighth, the erown of thorns platted on his head : the ninth I forget: the tentl, the Betrayal-Simon Peter is cutting ofl the ear of the high priest's servant, and his Master is robuking him. The two last chapels on each side of the entranco contain representations of the Last Supper, and the Passion on the Mount. There are thus twelve chapels, each of which contains from tel to twenty figures, so that at the least there mont he a humbel anil fifty of them, as large as life, nul many very well exeented: hut it is as a whole, and not by parts, that this work must be julged.

The idea in itself was grand, thes to hild a temple on the sumuit of a lofty lill, with a tine tlight of step leading to it from the vale lndow; 1,ut the designer probathy died hofore lis work hat proceedel far, and his suecersons diul ment earry out his plan.

What I had pietured to myself was ath elegant temple of Greeian architeeture on the wry highest point in the moigh harrhool, with a single brond and wide tlight of steps lemding in an whoken straight tine directly to it ; th" smaller temples resting on termees, it ench side at some little distanee. This would indeed have been heautiful, and I doubt if any temple in the wowl conld then have surpassel it. The great difticulty would have been to propurtion the steps to the wize of the churel, as they must have beon several humedred gateds wide to have had a good efleet at the distance.
linga, the Bramm Augusta of: the Romans, is said to have hern fomudel 206 years before Christ : it was the eapital of the Nuevi, and one of the most importiant tinus in the early Portuguese momarely. The maritime diseoveries gave the hist blow to its splendonr, and it nuser recoverem the erection of lishon into a patrimehate in 1716; it still, however, contains 16,000 inhahitante, being thus the largest place in the kinglom with the exception of the two capitals and Setulal. The first hishop, of the see was Sam Podro we Rates, who has a chapel in the enthedral. :und who, aceording to tralition, was a diseiple of the apostle Piter. The third prelate, San Ovidio, had the somewhat singular distinetion of an epigram adilresid to him, hefore his conversiou to Christianity, lay the peet Martial:

> Si credis mihi, Quinte, quol mereris, Natales, Ovidi, tuos Aprices [ t nostras amo Marties Catenlas: Itic vitam tribuit, sed hic amienm; Pus dant, Quinte, mihi, tual calentie.

The eighty-sixth archlishop was a persen of very remarkable character and belonged essentially to the chureh militaut. He was known ats Dom Loureneo de Lourinhai, hint his true name was simply Lancerote Vicente, and the chapel of Nossa Senhoma do Livatmente, which forms the cast end of the external north aisle of the cathedral, wats erected for his burial phace.
Maving studied at Montpelicr and laris, he was mised by Don Fermando to the see of Porto, and thence translated to that of Braga in opposition to the rlection of the chapter. In the siege of Dishon hy the Castilians, during the civil war which fillowed the death of Dom Fermade, he distinguished himself by equiping twelve falleys at his own exprense ; and wat afterwards one of the most vigorous suppenters of the Master of Aviz in the Cortes at Coimma. Betine the battle of Aljubarrota, lee confessed and commmicated Dom Jnao I., and rode along the ranks, bestowius indulgenecs on the soldiers. In the battle he fought valiantly, wearing his rochet wer a complete suit of armomr, and having an innge of Nostra schhur de Nazareth instad of a plune, the pimatial cross being carrical near him. Having received a wombl in the right check, he was carried fiom the fich without hope of life to Nazareth, but shwly recovered. He after this enjoyed his -ee in peates : anl it was a saying of Don Joan I. that ane of his eyes was the fireat Constahle, and the other the arthbishon. In the later years of hi life lee fommed thin chapel, and cumsed his efligy to be phated there. It is said that, when he came to see it, he fomm that the scar, on which he sat so mach value, hat thet ben remesented, on which he callai a chiwd and chgowed it himelf, saying when he hatu finishenl, "A groza sim ; que enta ato natural." He died June I, 1097, malkiag, is Cardea observes, "a better end than hegiming." Un the anniversary of his death in 1663 his toml was on"und, and the body discovered in that state "d incormption in which it will be shown to the visitur (the cpiseopal vestments have, within the last few sars, becn renewed). The news of this discowery rearled the I'ortuguese army just before the victory of the Lines of Elvas, aud inspired them with firesh courure for their assante.

III,

The Lisk of Sonft's Retheat mpyore time Butita - slacomiz of the Fhesch Thoors-The Misbelela.

Mn. Kingston made a hatural exemsion from liaga to Salammio, in witer tor follow whe fontstens of Soult's moteat bufiore the Bhitish, the acerant of which is alike repkete with local and with some permanent historical interest, anil to which a primary referene to the .ges of tolonel Napnier's wluiruble History of the Leninsular Har, commencing at the 3 Tith page of the second volmac, firms an alpopriate introduction.

When Mashal tioult hail heen diven ont of Oporto by the British army uader Sir Arthur Wrillesloy, he retired through Valongo upon Guimatans, und thence |taking a $1^{\text {nath }}$ across the mountains, leaving Bragn on his left, he reached the beights of Carvalho d'Este, having been joined by Loison's division at Guimarams during the night, and by Lorge's dragoons from Braga. Here, drawing up his troops on the morning of the 15th, he reorganised his army; taking command of the rear-guard himself, and giving that of the advaned guard to Ceneral Loism. From Carvalho he retired to the small village of Salamonde, in the neighlowhood of which is a bridge over the Cavado which the English general had ordered to be destroyed, but the work being imperfectly performen, the French drove the Portugnese peasantry who were defending it from their posts, and entered the dangerons and narow detile lading to Montalegre. Befure the rembernard hand passed, the British appeared on the heights aitove, when a scene of shaghter and confusion ensited in the French army, though they contrived, by vast exertions and courage (fighting their way across a secomel bridge, that of Miscrella), to make good their retreat ito Spain.

We quitted our conclies at three oclock, though we were not in our saddles till four, when in compact order, the stars yet shining brightly over our heads, we mede out of Bmya towarila the mast, with two monnted servants in attemaner, one leading, the other heringing up the rear. Passing near the foot of the Senhor to Mante, which it was yet tom dark to see, we continned along it narrow rough roal, till, daylight breaking, we perceived a beautifully rieh valloy on our right, along which we role for some miles, till we commencel the step uzeent, hy a most rugged path, of that muge of lofty hills called the Carvalhu d'Este.

We male a rispzaty way up the montain anid harge rocks and wer stous which rolled down benewh our horses' feet. "It is to be hoped we slall have reached this beftre the return of darkness, or our necks may sufler, nut to mention "ur horses' knees," was the firrseang remark of one of our company.

Surmounting the aceinsity, we linud a goond bridepath, over whech we could trot gaily along; none of the party apmoung to he atimaid of the rather uglyhoking shopes which fordered either one or the other side of the road. Whan we reached the extreme summit, a fine view of the lovely valley of (ierce (hy the side of which liay our destined route) larok on our sight to the left. I reined in my sterol to gaze at the homuty of tho nerene, so calm nud solt, in tho cold tiants of the early morn. A silvery mist thated at the lothon of the valley, rising above which might ho olsiserval the tops of the thickly-leaved chasiat, and the delicate green of the willow, or here amb there the white walls of a peasant's cottage; while the lower shopes of the green hills ware alrendy dotted ly cattle, or shap and goats on their waty to pasture ; the "pposite roeky side of the valley apmearing of a grayish tint, through a gal in which towards the west werre bhe interaecting lines of the distant momutains. As we ruble on, the light clouds, which thated like fleces in the east, seemod suldenly to burst into showing sunsses, the sky throngradully assuming a rudly hus, till the glorions salinuce of tho sum himeself appenerd.
"On, onf the the summit of vonder monn!!" wo cried; and di..ting ferwand, we rathed the point in time to see the hight orb of day hust upon the world, lighting up ull the monntain-heights with his goliden rays, and driving down the shadows into the valleys bolow. I shall not forget that sumrise on the momatain ins, leaving Braga on of Carvalho d'Este, visiou at Guinaraeus lragoons from Braga. the morning of the king command of the hat of the advineed ، Carvallo he retired e, in the neighloure Cavalo which the je destroyerl, but the d, the French drove are defending it from ngerous and narrow efure the real-inard in the heights athove, atusion ensmed in the ed, by vast exertuns ross a sccoml bridge, al their wereat into eochek, thangh we s, when in compact ly over our hands, we i, wid two momited f, the other bringing sot of the Sunhur do to see, we contimued ay light breaking, we on our risht, along 1 we commenterl the th, of that muge of ste.
mountain amid large 1 down bencath nar e slall have reathet or our meeks may knces," was the farmy. inud a gronl lridegaily along; mone of of the rather uglyaer one on the other ached the extrene valley of Geres (by ed route) liroke on a my ntewd to gize: 12 nend soft, in the silvery mist flosted above which might kly-leaved chnsmut, $v$, or here anl there te; while the hwer dy dotted ly eattle, to pasturce ; the pearing of a grayish trds the west wirre nt menntains, As Ilonted like flesces urst into glowing ming a rudly hues, himself' allumed. nder momid!" we ached the print in rst upon the worh, ats with his goliden os inte, the valleys ise on the munatain of the Carvalho deste, on the first view of the valley if the Cavido.

It was ou this ground that Soult drew up his forees after his retreat from Oprrto, and lefore he commenced that dangerons mareh through the pass of Sulamonde, which he must have felt was to canse cither his amihilatiou or his preservation. Tiurough his own talonts, and fortuitmos eiremonstances, it proved the latter. Looking over the rugged and momitainons country he mast have passed to reach this position from Guimaraens, it is surprising that with a disorganived and dispirited army he conld ever have pertormed the mareh. The truth is, that neither did the cruel Loison (nickmamed Maneta, the one-amed), nor a single Freuchman at that time, chare to surrender. Fetel man in the amy well knew that only by keeping tomether eonld the" experet to escape with life : most of the baggage and ammmition having already been abandoned.

Continuing at a grod pace with the valley on our left, we monnted gradually to yet ligher ground, when wimling round the hill to onr right appeared on the summit of a lofty peak the fanned tower of Lamhozo. The position is wild in the extreme, stanling alone as it droes high amid a sea of treeless momntaias, sliping and falling in every direction. It was to this cistle that the warlike Donna Teresa retired, atter we had been lefeated meder the walls of Guimaraens by her son Alfonso Henrique and the insurgent barons, and how it was, aceording to some aceounts, that sha was eonfined, to prevent the further efliects of her turbulent disposition. On the summit of its square and lofy tower she stool, and eumed her once-belowed sum, as she saw his army defile by on their mareh to invade the Galician territories of his cousin $A l^{1}$ honso VIlI. That the eurse had muy etlect, does not alynar, as he was nearly always victorions, and survived it upwarls of fifty years; his denth taking place in 1185. Dismonnting from my steed, which one of my frionds held, I made a sketch of the tower of Lanlowo fiom the eastern side of it; inderl, it was not visible from the west.
Urging on our horses, we overtook the rest of the party as they drew up before a little estalagem in the prettily-situated village of St. Jeans; they bondly rociferating that they eould proved w further without nomishment. "Then we shall lowe the mivantage of the cool morning air, and not reach Salamonde till the sun is high," I observed. "Food, fool, fiwal!" was the only answer ; so, twining out beasts inter a stable, which ocenpied the entive lower story of the house, we mpacked min satdle-bags, and mounterl to a veramdah abover. While sume of the proty wroe reenpied in armuginis whe eatables, and making conliee in a clay , ing. anI which purved most exemable, I took henee a more laborate aked of tho pieturesphe castle of Lathora, which apmeared to great abluntage, rining on the other side of a vale, sect wer at rich profusion of trees, shrubs, and vines, with momerons tamges of motntaintopsaround and beyond.
When I tme travelling throngh an intoresting comatry I think little of mue crature-comorts, non till my strength gives way dal dream of rest; thrrfome, using the most persuasive arguments, I indured the rest of the party to monnt and proced. After lembing the village, through which the roal wits narrow and hakl, we wame for about a leagne over the hrow of another height, wild, rooky, and unenltivated, till we remehed a secord hamlet, from which agood bride-road brought us to the village of Padeira. We here once more came in sight of the vale of (ierez on our left, nor lid we lase it aunin, the road winding along at a cousiderible height above it parallel with the stream of the Cavado, till we reached the village of Salamonde.

Altlungh the road was a very good bridle-path in most plates, yet in many there was not even room to pass an ox-cart without climbing up the bank, or juming the risk of toppling over into the valley below; so that the reader may judge of the dititenities and dangers the retreating army of Soult must have encountered, hastening on with a sued on which their very existence depended.

The views for the whole way were most lovely. Hish alose us on our right arose the sontlem side of a ileef valley covered with lofty tiees, which in many phaces werhung the rom, while in others vines therew their sleuder tentrils aeross our path, on wild and rugged erass jutting out fiom the hill-side compelled us to deviate fiom our coluse, and vast dark roeks threatened to overwhelm us if we paseed heneath them. Below as on the left the River Cavialo, now diminished by the summer lieats, sparkled bright and elear over its rocky hed, but the water-worn crags fiar above its present height showed how wild and foiming a torrent it must become when swollen ly the winter-rains. Ou the other side were the lofty and precipituns cliths of the Gerez monitnins, on the top if which wimbs another road to. Montalegre, and an old Roman way, Whieh, I am informed by a friend who went wer it, is in many whees very perfect. On the other site the monutains were broken by ravines and smaller valleys which extended ip from the main braneh; adding variety to the views; and dry as was the seasol, wi ohserved several waterfalls datshing down the sides of the mountainx in forming cataracts.

On a print from which we of the most heantiful views is to be obtained, a large handsome stone huilding has been erected, which, as it lans a chureh attached to it, was prohably intended as : stmmerresidener of the members of some monastic institution, but it was al\}arently never finished, and is nuw in a state of lleas.

Passing through a small hamlet, beatifully jerehed on the very slope of the hill, looking as if it would slide into the stremm beneath, we weve courteously offered by a young girl from her pitcher it draught of the coolest and clearest water I ever dmank, She told us the stream never tailed, that in smmer it was always thus cold as iee, and that in the winter it was warmer than other water. Most of the party, afmal ot the ellects of the cold, mixed brandy with it, hat I could not. resist a tribught of the pure nectar, nor did I ferel any ill efleet- trom it. When I ofiered her a small silver coin, she Whalingly at first refused to take it, till sume mon stamding nem langhingly told her that the litalans had many hags full of such, aml that she need han. now seluphs; when, with many enpressions of gratitule. and it molest air, she consented to receive it.

Our party at times were at a considerable distance apart, and ats mo knew the road, and were fin hatiore wur attendants, we more than oner tmok a wrong turning; but fortmataly each time fiomul somu poisant to sliract oms ntaps. Fow about two or more leagnes the path, thongh narrow, was so good, that we were searcely oneo compulled to draw rein; and well did our steeds, cither at a trot or ceater, carry us over it, appearing to eare nothing for the heat, which hat by this timi become eonsiderable. Neither, inteed, lidit we ourselves sutfier trow it, owing to our trequent applications to the way-wide fountains, the fluid from which supplied the untunal araporation which was taking place.
I always carry on such exemsions a quaigh, which I value much, having received it as a present when climbing the heathery heights fibuve Dunoon on the fiir Clyde, during a delightful rixit I made to Seotland. It holls a deeent mouthful of whisky, and as mueh water as a man in a violent heat may swallow with impunity: many a time that day did I use it to refresh myself from every stream and rill we passed.

By ten o'elock we reached the small village of $$$ ilin monde, the place at which Marinal Soult tirst haltel after quitting the heights of Carvalhe d'Este. Tha, street is so narrow that thre horsemen camot pass abrenst, yet through this hatd the whole of the Frenel army to defile. We had numo of na nuy detinite ideas as to the position of the beilges and pass we had com to ser, having been led to suppose that both were elose to Silamonde: we were therefore not a little disip. pointel at learning, trom the imkereer of the phate. that tho Ponte Nova was half' a long longuo onf, and the Miserella full another beyond that.
"Our horses will he knooked ulp, if we trake them with out rest," remarked some. "We slall be so ouscolve.

oUr lady of the olive.tree, guimaraens.
if we walk," interposed others. That we must wourn to Bragai at night, nearlyall ngreed. " 1 am determinel have sullicient time to makn som skotelns of the Miserella," I insisted, "As there anyhorly here, who etul guide us thither ?" "I ciu, scuhoris," eried a young active lad. "priuging forth from a crowd of peasant, who werc hulded in an comer of a narmew strent to be clent of our horses' heels.
"But you will not serve to hold all the horses," I olserved. "I have a father who will go too at your pleasure, senhores. O/ men pai," criad the boy, "und an old man stepped firward with a long stick in his hand, whose sinewy frame showed him to be yet eaprible of great artivity.
"I shall be happy to accompany the tentlement and show them the way," he sail, taliny of his lamer brinmed hat. "I unght to know it, fin mine than fifty yeurs have I lived in the meighbourhoul, and well do I remember the diy when your brave eontryma were here.
"'the very man fir us!" I shouted to my compar nions, interrupting him. "Now hear my propast Set us have word to desire the two arriemes with our food aned forage for our howses to follow us forthwith we will dine at Miserella ourselves."
"There is, about al quarter of a hague from Miserella, a stiblic where the horses may be put "p," obsarved the ofl mau.
fe smatl village of Silitrolad Soult first halted Carvalho d'Este. Tha' horsemen enmot pasi 10 whole of the French ot' us any cletinite illenls ; and pass we had come no that both were close fore not a little disu!. Ennkeper of the phees, a long leiguo atl, an! nill that.
y, if we trke tham with. Ve shall be so ourads:", mpiny the emtemen 11, taking of his hrwal. nur it, fin murn than righbourthon, and well our hrave ennutrym?

shouted to iny conplat ow hear my proposit: two arrieros with our on follow us forthwith : rselvex." "Thew is. om Miverellat, a stalikn up," observed the all
"All our difficulties vanish, you see, my friends I" I cried: "so onward!" And walking my horse, following the old man and his son, I found that all my friends were moving the same way.
"And your name, my friend?" I asked of our guide.
"Joze Maria de Earia, at your service, senhor, and that lad is my son: ho is a quick boy, and has learned to read and write jerfectly, of which arts I, his fatler, alas! know nothing. $H e$ is a good boy, too, and if you will take bim into your service he shall go with you at once. I wished to send him to the Brazils, but you must know, senhor, I am poor-tho means are wanting. I owned a mill down there on tho stream we are about to piss, but last winter's floods carried it away, and 1 have spint all my money in building another, which is not yet finished."

street of the english at oporto.

Sueh was Senhor Jozé's account of hinselt́; and I shonld adviso all visitors to Miserella to inquire for lim as the best of guides, or mother ciceromes, for there is but little difficulty in finding the way. He had far more interesting narrations in store for us.

On leaving Salumonde we turned sharp off to our left, winding down the rough sides of the monntain by a stecp and nartow track, among a few straggling oaks and other trees, with small gullies and ravines runniug up in various directions, the mountains of Gerez being sometimes on our left, and sometimes before us. Above us were the lofty ridges of the Serrn de Cabreira and the heights of Silamonde and Ruivacus.
"Well do I remember, senhor," said our guide, "the time the Freneh and English arrived here: the weather was cold, rainy, nnd blowing, and it was near night when the Freneh appeared, and took up thow quarters in and about Salimumde. We thought they wonhl all be captured, when what was omr dismay to find that the position of the l'onte Nova, which bridge we fincied lad been destroyed, was taken, and that the soldiens had tom down the houses, mui carried of the plamks and beams to repmir it I All day they were crossilus two or three only abreast ; yet yood reason they hal to harry, for lefore dark the British troops haid reallow those heights ahove us. I hat "scaped up the mombtain, mad never shall I forget seeing the long lines of layonets drawn in as far as the eye could vach-somi had come from Penga, some from Guimarache: yet there they stool, carcless of the wet, the cold, of the wind. In that hollow, senhor, to the right, the Fuchel threw away many mule-loads' of treasure, which the English recovered: that deep gully was fall to wertlowing of the carcases of mules, horses, and men, while dead bolies sprinkled the whole side of tho hill. About here, senhor, it is said the military chest was huricul, and many people have dug for it, but no one has touml it." We were passing a narrow but drep ent in the mountain which extends towards the Cavallo. "The day after the hattle wo diseovered a Freneh drasion and his horse, in that hollow," continucd our guide: " the horse was killed, but, strange to relate, his rider was only slightly injured, and we carried him up to the hospital establishment at Salamonde.

Winding down the hill, a sudden turn of the puth bryught us to the side of the mountain-torrent over which the Ponte Nova is thrown, and directly on to the bridge. Colonel Napier was misinformed when he speaks of it as over the Cavalo-the stream is very similar to, and rums almost parallel with that of Miserella, falling like it into the Cavado. The bridge eonsists of one high but small arch, of only breadth snflicient to allow of four men crossing abreast. So short, however, is the distance spanned by the areh, that an active man might almost leap across it ; and nothing hut the complete demolition of the whole structure could have prevented desperate men like the Frenelh frone crossing. Rocks directly fice ench ond of the linilise, the road taraing sharp round in opposite directions, while on each side of the torrent the hills rise rugged and precipitous. It was near here that the greatent slaughter occurred; for before the French rear-guard had pamed, the British cannon had begen to play upon them, "and then man and horse, crushed together, went over into the gulf; and the brilge amil the rocks and the defile beyond were strewid with mangled bodies." Colonel Napier says that thi" j"isionts tortured and matilated every sick man ur straggler who fell into their power; but our nild guide, on whose word I can rely, assured ns that lee isssisted in succouring many wounded Frenchmen. This, however, was under the eye of the English, and dubbless many atrocitios were committed in stern retaliation of those of which the Freach themselves were suilty.
"It was late in the evening when the English appeared," said our ohe gnide, "nor was a moment lost in attacking; night alone putting an end to the slaughter : indeed, lefore all the French had crossed the bridge, it was destroged by them, and it took the Euglish some time ngain to repair it. By that time the French had escaped; hut as they marehed along tho guerillas hovered on the lills above them, harassing them dreadfully, and cutting of numbers ly the way. Those were sad timen, Senlor."

When our whole party were collected on the Ponte Nowa, "Let us give thure cheers for the honour of Old England!" exelaimed ono of tho party, in a fit of military enthusiasm. "As you like it," I answered; "thongh this is not exactly the spot where mueh was done to huast of Hear, however: May the foes of Great Britain mud Lasitania fly ever hefire them as they did through this pass! Hip! hip! hurrah!" and we made the welkin ring again with a hearty British shout.

As I rode slong, listening to Senhor boze's descriptions, I could almost have wept with vexation as I thought of the escape of those lawless devastaturs of the rich fields of Portugal, and could well enter int., the feelings of rage which must have possessen the bosons of the brave men, who, after so many ditys of toil, suw their foe thus eluding their grasp.

On crossing the bridge, the road turned sharp round to the left, and then continued ruming paralled with the Cavado, generally so narrow that not more than three fout-soldiers could have marchod ahreast. Durk roeks were above, and precipices were brhow, over which a false step, or the bullet of a guerillia, nust have sent many an unhappy horseman. The viows were much the same as I have before descrilnul, but rather increased in beauty and wildness, thungh nicre words can scarcely express the difference of tha scenery; looking up the valley especially, the mountains were more lofty, ruggel, and broken by ravines, while overheal the trees were more aged, of more Iuxurimut growth, and more fantastic in their shapes. At alvint a small leagne from the Ponte Nova we fiound a how honse of two stories which had formerly been an istilagem. "Can you give food and shelter to our howes, my friend $\eta^{\prime \prime}$ I asked of a man whose head was projecting from the window of the building.
"They may go into the stahle; but except some dried grass I have no fool," answered the said personage, who was a little man with a large hooked nose, and a most dull expression of countenance.
"What, no milho?" we exchained.
"Not a grain, Senhores."
"You have some broa, then?"
"Not a particle : our broa is but just put into the oven," was the masatisfactory answer.
"Now, my friend," I urged, vexed at his real or pretended stupidity, "both corn, bread, and wino are to be procured at no great distunce-they want be fonnd." Saying this, I walked away, and took up my seat undir a shel, whence I made a sketch of the magnificently wild mountain scenery hefore me, looking up the valley towards Montalegre, the direction the French took in their retreat. My friemls in the meantime made up their minds, that, taking a glance at Miserella, we nust return forthwith to Sulanonde. "I mean to dine and spend some hours nt Miserella, and so will you," was my answer as I sketched nway.

Before I finished my sketels our muletwers with the saddle-bags arrived, as did a saek of milho for the horses, and some broa for ourselves, our own white bread being nearly exhausted. I must sing, to the credit of the thoughtiful nogo do estalagem, Manoel, he had supplied the said sumdle-bage with meat most plentifully. Our old guide, throwing the bags orer his shoulders, and his boy carrying a jug to fetch water, we commenced our walk in better spirits towardo the utting off mumbers by , Senhur."
ere collected on the cheers for the honour ne of the party, in a "As you like it," I xactly the spost where Hear, however: May sitania ily ever before ! Hip! hip! hurral!!" again with a hearty to Senhor Jozés wept with vexation se hawless devastaturs 1 could well enter into, st have possessed the fter so many diags of ıeir grasp.
rond turnel sharp nued rumning parallel sarrow that not more ave marched abre:st, piees were bolow, over of a guerilla, must onseman. The virws beffore descriloul, but rillness, though uicre ference of the sienery; the momutains were en by ravines, while ed, of more luxuriant cir shapes. At about Sova we firund a low ormerly been an estashelter to our howises, whose heall was pronilding.
le ; but except some swered the staid perwith a large looked of countenaneo.

```
mued.
```

but just put into the ver.
vexed at his real or m , brend, and wine distance-thry wu-t lked away, and took I made a sketel of in scenery before me, atalegre, the direction
My friends in the hat, taking a glance hwith to Salamoule. hours nt Miscrelli, as I sketched uway. our muleterers wit a suck of milho fou ourselves, our own ted. 1 must say, to lo estalugem, Maueel, uga with meat most ing the bags over his jug to fetch water, spirits towardo the bridge. Not to mislead peeple, I must observe that the roul is perfectly praticalle fir horses. The scenery increased in beauty and wilduess as we advanced; indeed, it was altogether the most romantic I havo seen in Portugal.
Walking for rather more than half a mile, with declivities sloping stepply down to the Cavade on our left, and the ruggel sides of the meuntain above us, we wound ghulnally round to our right, and soon came upon the precipitous hanks of the torrent of Miserella, a little way from tho mouth of which is the narrow, onearelied lomidge which the French were obliged to storm before they conld cross. On each sile are high ditls, or rather vast breken erags, with trees elinging aromed the crevices in them, the torrent leaping down with falls of ten and twenty fect at a time, trom a deep rent in the momenin above. On the eistern sille, anong the rocks, the Portuguese gurrillas were stationed, with slight entreneliments thrown up; but had the hidge been destroyod, and regular tronis with geod officers been in their place, the utmost lnavery of the Freneh could not havo driven thom from their ${ }^{10}$ ist. After taking a genemal surwey of the whole scene, I crossed the bridge and claminered down the rugged banks, to make a sketeh of it, hooking up the ravine. At my feet amid buge masses of rock the water daslied, hamiug and boiling along, yet now was the driest time of summer: What must it have been when swollen by the melting smows and the rains of winter! Alas! the lapless wretehes who were once plunged into its ruging tide!
1 lead just finished my sketelh, when I saw my fdlow-travellers serambling down amid the erage, on the opposito site, towards a clear, deep, calm pool, heneath ihe arch, evidently with the intention of bathing: the temptaticn was great, and I rosic to join them. As [ was erusuing the narrow bridge, and looking down into tive deep abyss leclow, "For the love of Gorl, do not venture into that deer pool, Senhor !" sid our ohl guide. "It looks calm enough, and you fincy you cau touch the bottom, but believe me noboly has ever reached it; for it sinks down into the bowels of the earth." "lear not, my frienl," I muswered; "we intend only to swim on the surface",
Though on one side the water is of this great depth below the arch, on the other the fall is so considemble that it appears but a few feet below it. We fuund a delightifully shauly spot benath a liuge rock, on a slab lisel with the water, and in a frew minutes I with thase who eould swin wero floating on the clear stream, while the rest rexorted to a slallow spot in a channel worn by the torrent. We found the water refreshing after the hent and lust of the morning, though far trom colld ; having heen well warmed by its passago down the valley, inte which the rays of the sun darted tiereely. I tork a sketeh of the spot, as I did afterwmeds a thinu of the bridge looking down the valley; and then a lond call summoned mo to dinner, which I fonnd spread on the bank, beneath the shate of a large tree, smromuled by the rest of the party, who were doing muple justice to it, quatling guaighs full of wine to the success of the British arms in every part of the world
The day had sped fister than we fincied: unwillingly, thercfore, were we compelled to duit that lovely spot. On our return, the rays of the sim fulling mote horizontally, the views appeared to double mlviantaye, there being on the more distant eliffs that light blue haze which contrasts so beautifully with the bright green of the forigromid.

Reaching tho ci-devant estalagen, which our hookednosed acquaintance Senhor Antonio dia Cruz owned (for ly that mane was he knewn), we monuted our steeds, whe nypeared quite freshl. Sunhor Antonio, like many stupid-looking, persons, was fully alive to his own interests, if we might judge liy the outrageous elarge he made for the use of lis stal, le and the grass he lam afforded our beensts. When ilesired to mention the items he monlestly named so muy jus of water brought from the neighbouring spring. In truth, the ex-imkeeper looked the regne, and was one ; nevertheless, I advise any of my frimds who intend returning to Sulamonde to lring corn thence, mad to make use of lis stable.
While my companions were halting at Sabimonde, feeling in a meditative mool, I role on athead, and being well mounted, completely distanced them, enjoying by inswelf the superlitive benuty of that magnificent pass. The shades of evening were fast approaching hefore I had made good hald our distanee to Iraga, so on I pushed, every instant expeeting my frienils to overtake me at a gallop. I had erossed une barren height, nud fully believed that I was close to the villige where we had breakfisted in the morning. It was now perfeetly dark, when I saw a light l,urning in a cottarge window. "Alu!" I thought,"there is the im, and there will I cook seme colfor, and wait for my friemols." When I reached the dor, I was tolld the im was a little further on, and as my steed scemen prertiectly to kuow his way, which I must confess 1 ceuld not even see, I threw the reins on his neek, and let him proced at his own pace. Sometimes he trotted, sometimes cantered, mad on, on he went, till I found that we were on the barren smmuit of a lill, whence it appeared that tracks were auliating of in every direction. Two ideas at that moment occurred to me; the first, that the horse might jussili,y be as ignorant of the road as I was; and secondly, i recollected having been tola at Bagat that there was a greater probability of encountering banditti in that neighbourhood than in any other part of the north of Portugal. I never; however, telt more pertictly unconcerned or contented in my life, and in a minute my confilence in the amimal's sigacity was restored. He never stoperd nor liesitatel. I lid not for a single moment ittempt to guide him, merely kepping the rein sutheiently short to nill him in case le should step on treacherous gremul. For a whole league did we thas proceed, sometimes with precipices on one sile or the other, and sometimes down steep descents, which appeared to me to leal into some dark chasm, till at latt my gool steed struck into a lane with high hanks on each side; in passiug through one part of which, where trees overhing the road, I could searecly see oven his head. At last I heard the somul of human voices : how sweet mul clear they rung through the culm night-air! for they were those of young girls whose joyons laughter struck like musie upon my car. "Am I near St. Jcans, my pretty maidens?" I cried. Suddenly their laughter ceased. I repeated the yuestion. "It is here! it is here!" cried several, and then they broke forth atresh with a merry peal, I faney at the compliment I had thus paid at hazard. Tho noment I loosed the rein my horse trotted on, and suddenly bolting to the left, nearly knoeked my head agrinst a manada which was over the dnor of the stablo where he had been fed in tho morning. Calling to the prople of the estalagem to open the door, I give him a good feed of Indian corn, which he so riehly deserved at my hands, and sat down by his side till he had finished it. Then with the aid of the fint old landlady's two daughters, who were blowing up the fire, I prepared cottice for my friends, while I rested on a bench with my back against a heap of faggots, and entered into conversation with a variety of persons who came into the kitchen-the comnion room of the inn. More than an hour thus passed beforo the party arrived, with an aceount of a variety of clisasters; such as horse-shoes lost, missing the rond, and missing me, of whom dluring the latter pert of the way they could gain no tidings.
Some of them, almost knoeked up, were for remaining the night here, but four beds only were to be seen, nnd these none of the cleanest; others were for pushing on, and the latter gained their point. We had, by Manoel's forethought, brought three torehes, hut those even of the very best sert could not last us one half of the ilintanee, two very long leagues (from eight to ten miles). Having matches, we reserved them therefore till we should reach tho descent of the Carvalho d'Este, and the precipices betore we arrivel there. The chief muleteer led, we following in single file, and our second man brought up the rear. It whs most dreary work, fur we could not see many yards on either side, yet in spite of the dangers of the path, we could scarcely keep our cyes open, and O'Shanghnessy declared he was uable at times to tell whether his horse was moving with his head or tail foremost. We hat long passed the eastle of Lanhozo when the first torel was lighted, hut so dried had it been by the sum during the day that it rapidly burnt out. We luckily found a pool in which to moisten the others, or we should have seon been left in darkness on the momntain's summit. So long was our line that the single torch in the front ouly increased tho difficulties both to horsc and man in the rear; nor at times, when I was riding there, could I see even the persen betore me. The light, too, increased my inclination to sleep; sometimes I thought it was the setting sum, next the rising meon-and agian, the great light, the emblem which first hursts upon the amazed sight of tho initated in the Egrptian mysteries.
Suddenly, as we were passing a very narrow path with a steep precipice on our right, my drowsiness was bmished coupletely, by a ery from one of the party, the man before sliarply pulling up his horse, "Good God !" he exclimed, "he is over !" It was impessible to offer assistance-one horse could not pass the other without the risk of sharing our friend's thite. The horse of L _- had tillen with great force, his rider's legs were entangled in the stirrups-he gave one roll over towurds the steep declivity-it was a moment of dreadful suspense. L- providentially extricating himself, serambled up the bank, whilo his benst, with instinctive thead springing back, recovered his feet. Our friend again mounting, we rode on for some timo withent any further disaster, till after aseending for some distance a barren hill, our guides gave us the pleasing information that they had lost the way.
"The very spot where Manoel warned us we should be shot down like partridges if we ventured to pass it at night I" exclaimed one.
"He told us so becanse he knew we should most certuinly venture in consequenee," said another.
"Ay, and bought the terches to tempt us!" eried a thiril.
"Dejend on it Manoel expects us to eat the supper he has providel, though I fear he will be dissppointell," observed a fourth. "I deem the chanees are we shall spend the rest of the night on the mountain's brow; but do not mind, we have cigars: we are not rery hungry, we can light a fire, und the heather will afford us clean couches. I have slept on it in a collder climate."
"But not with a white jacket only and thin trow. sers on," cried the most desponding.

Our guides now tried to recover the way back, lighting, as we retrograded, piles of dry heather which had a fine appearanee, blazing on every point in the neighbourhood. I was apprehensive that the flumes would extend over the whole hill, but the universal "Nao tem cluvidn," assured me the muleteers thought differently. At last the right track was found, which led us to the very worst bit of road that I trust I may ever be compelled to descend on a dark night-I refer to that ou the side of the Carvulho d'Este. Lpreferred walking, while his horse, whose knees were dreadtully cut, followed sagaciensly in the remr alone, one of the muleteers being on foot, with a torch to light us at the worst spots. By setting fire to tufts of dry grass, those who followed wero able to seo the way elearly ; and bad as the roud unquestionably was, not a horse stumbled or appenred tiren. Scarcely had we reached the bettom when our last torch expired, and for a long weary league, in almest Tartarian darkness, did we jog on till the lights of Braga cheered our sight. At the Duos Amiges a good supper, served loy the active Manoel, renovated our- strength, though it could not keep us awake; and for my own part, I have a conseiousness that I fell fast asleep at the table. It was now three o'elock. Thus three and twenty hours had passed since we left the im, the whole of which time we were in the open air, and, exeept a few minutes at hreakfast and dinner, in violent exercise-riding, walking, and swimming. During the last hours the exercise we went through indeed was not violent, it must be owned. hut the slow pace at which we were compelled to move wis more fatiguing than a faster rate. For full fifterth hours we were on haseback, which also speaks well for the enturance of Corneiro's steeds; but the liest advice I ean give my friends is-not to do the same, if they can possibly aroid it.

IV.

Praca dos Carvalios-Roman Antigcities-Hospttal op Braoa-Anecdote of tire Ibon Duke-GuimaraensAncient Antecedents-Cnuren of Nossa Senhora da Oliveira - Legend op the Holy Tree - Praca da Frira - Time Castla and Palace-Ancient CuapelDominican Convent-Literary Associations.
Amone other interesting points visited on the return to Braga, we must not omit to notice the Praca dos Carvalhos, a sort of public garden, formed by the camara of the city to eontain the Foman remains discovered on the Gerez mountuins. In the centro of the garden, on a pedestai, is a large cireular slab, which must, I should suppose, have served the purpose of an altar in one of the high places. In regular order about the garden are arranged mumerous pillars of from five to six feet in height, with inseriptions on them deeply ent, and very pertect. From having been discovered on the Via Romana, whi in, as I have observed, runs

s to tempt us!" cried

is us to eat the supper e will be dissppointed," e chances are we shall the mountain's brow ; ars: we are not very the heather will affori ept ou it in a colder only and thin trow. ing. cover the way baek, of dry leather which n every point in the nsive that the flames ill, but the nuiversal the muletcers thought rack was found, which ond that I trust I may a dark night-I refer rualho d'Este. Lree, whose knees were isly in the rear alone. foot, with a torch to setting fire to tufts of re able to see the way uestionably was, not a red. Scarcely had we ast toreh expired, and ost Turtarian rarkness, saga cheered our singht er, nerved hy the active , though it could not wa part, I have a conthe table. It was now venty hours hat passed of which time we were v minutes at breakfist -riding, walking, and is the exercise we went it must be owned. but oupelled to move wils ate. For full fitmon chingso speaks well for ls; but the best alvice do the same, if thry riqcities-Mospital op DUKE-GUIMARIENSof Nossa sembora ba ly Tree - Praca pa e-Ancient Chapelissociations. its visited on the reit to notice the Praca garden, formed by the Roman remains disIn the centre of the circular slab, which ved the purpose of an a regular order abont s pillars of from five tions on them deeply ring been discovered have obscrvell, rums along the suminit of the Gierez mountains, they are supposed to have servel the office of mile-stones; but what the antiquaries say on the subject, I do not know. Certain it is that the Romans must at one time lave very thickly inhabited this part of the comntry, as their numerous arehitectural temnins abundimtly testify. In a lower part of the valley to the south of liraga the foundations of a town of consideruble size have been discovered, the stones and bricks of which probally served to build that which stood on the site of the present city, and which in like manner has given way to more modern structures. Outside the I'raca dos Carvalhos are many other columns, not yet set up; and I regret that I had not time to copy the inscriptions on thens.

Our friend then led us to a pracn of some size, at one eut of which staunls the hospital. To the right is the church of the Crncifixion, the front of which is cariously mrmmented with all the emblems of that event, well cut in stene, of considerable size, und on the left is a large convent. On one side of the hospital is the chnmeh belonging to it, which we visited on account of a mosaic sarcop hagus sent from Rome, and also to (lrol' onl contributions on behalf of that admirable institution into a box near the altar:
We then entered the hospital, which, as it should be, is a building of the most simple style of arehiteeture. Every useless piece of ormament on an edifice of that deseription I consider as being so much abstracted from the purposes of the charity, to feed the vanity of the townspeople or nation. The dispensary to the right of the entrance is a large room well furnished with the very best drugs. There are two principal flysicians and four surgeons attached to the extablish. ment, whu are esteemed the most skilful in Portugal, where the study of medicine and surgery has been much attended to in late years, thougl formerly zadly neglected. The edifice is built rome a quadringle, with arcades on the two first stories, beneath which the patients may take air and exercise, sheltered from the sun and rain. The area is laid ont with flowerbeds, in tho centre of which plays a clear fountain. The whole building, both the interior and the ontside, is neatly whitewashed, the wood-work being picked out with various colous. We traversed several of the waris, which aflord an example of neatness, clenuliness, and good arrangement, to any country. The beds run in a single row lengthways ronnd the ward, each benge separated from the other by a lath and phaster partition, while in the inside a passage runs the whole extent, to adinit the uttendants, and to allow of the freest possible circulation of air. Each compartment was furnished also with curtains, so as to form a separate chamber for every inmate. I was told that it contains gencrally from one hundred and fifty to two humded patients ; two-thirds of the neeessary funds being supulied by voluntary contributions, the smaller portion haiving been left by the tomeders of the charity. Since the abolition of the monastic orders, the contributions and bequests have very grently increased; one benetit, at all events, arising from the suppression of theke crying cvils.

The air of Braga is ecrtainly very pure, and the water also is said to possess most salubrious qualities, which, aided by the skill of the medical attendimts, have worked cures eonsidered elsewhere hopeless. At the end of one gallery we looked into a neatly laid out burial-ground. A lurge building is in the course of twetion, joined by a coveved way to the hoypital, for the reception of patients it the upere ranks; tho rooms in the main buil ling appropriated for that purpose heing found inswilicient. This circumstance alone speaks for the hice th cedit in which the institntion is held.

Quitting the lospital, much pleased with our visit, we entered a broad street which led directly to the heantiful end of the eathedral of whieh I have before spoken. This must, in times long past, have been one of the aristocratical yuarters of the city, tiom the number of rinimous palaces it contains, of the same date evidently as the cathedral itself. Winding ont way among the most shady streets, wo then crossed the city to the north side, where, on the lighest proint of ground, stands a church, from which as lovely a prospect as any city in Portugil can borst is obtained. This buiding is placed in the centre of a circular terrace, which has a parapet wall lronnd it, with stone seats beneath shady trees. The view to the west extends over the city, and far down the smiling vale, with hills rising in the distance ; to the south, looking down upon the Campo de Santa Amua in firont nud on the hill-side beyond it uppeared the shrine of the Bom Jesus. To the east, directly below us, amid verdant gardens, was a convent, now used as an asylum for female orphans; and further to our lett, on the steep, sites of the Carvalho d'Este, was situated a large hilding belonging formerly to the Jesuits in their days of power, now the property ot a ginatleman of Braga. The immense thiekness of the walls, and the long airy corvidors and arcades, make it a delightfully cool summer resitlence, through the small cells and vast halls are not ealculated for the reception of a family. Behind us was a rocky and wood-covered mound, the most western spur as it were of the (ierez momatains. At the foot of this beantiful hill it is in contemphation to form a public walk and drive, where a band of musie will play in the evening, as an attraction to unite the people in one focus; and [ doubt net, from what I saw of the enterprise and pmblie spirit of the gentlemen of Braga, that this laudable purjose will ere long be effected.

We here prited from our kin! triend, who we snw was overcome with the heat and his exertions in our service, and returning to onr hotel, tound the rest of the party still at breakfast. They all then adjourned to my room, the coolest in the hotse, where, collecting the chairs from other romms, and throwing ourselves on them and on the beds, we spent $+1: 2$ hottest hours of the day in smoking our cigars and talking over our past adrentures, till the cool evening air tempted us again to sally forth.

We seon wandered to the Monte, the lovely spot above described, where we foind in fiw groups of people, and among them, to onr great pleasure, one of the kind and attentive friends to whom 1 had been introoluced. In the conrse of conversation hat made the following observations, on the correctness of which, as corroborated by the natives ot other places. I cim entirely rely. "I do not speak of the higher orders; they differ but little from each other in any country," he observed; "but of the second rank, for instance. It is said a native of Braga is always known at Coimbra, among other students, for the quickness of his parts, and for his applications; he generally earrying away all the honeurs. We have two sculptors in the city, whoso juvenile productions gave promise of the highest excel-

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

lenee: Hut, alas; here they have nomonds from whieh to study, and the erpense of sending them to ltaly is so great that no one is nble to nflord it."
"Then lot them he rent at the expense of the city !" I exelamed: "they will bring you honowr in return."
"You know what town-councils are," he answered, shaking lis heat und smiling as he continued: "Yon hear that piano being struck. Now the girds who are pluying nre my tailor's danghters: they play very well, as also do many of their rank." Not only were the tailor's daughters pertioming well, but their piano was a very fine one. "I know not if that piano was made here," lue continned ; "lout a native of Thaga has manufuctured several very good ones: he was uself-taught artisan, aml with one model only before him, ly several ingenious eontrivances he brought his work to perfection. Wi have painters also with considerable talent, but without the works of the great masters before them what ean you expect?"

I then mpoke of our visit to Salamondes. "Ah! well do I remember that tine:" ho exclatimed with enthusiasm, seizing my arm; "J was a boy then. I recolleet seeing the first wo soldiers of the Britinh army who contered the eity, They were two drageons with carbines in their hanis, who rode up that street withont uttering a worl to any one, and then latted like two statues. Som afterward others followed, amb then the whole of that gallime lost appeared. I camot express to you the , joy of our hearts-the enthusiasm wilh which rome comitrymen were reecived. Had a gorl descemilid on eath, he coukd not have heen welcomed with more thelight. My fither, who spoke Enoflish jerfectly, had received notien that Sir Arthur Wrellesley would take "y his quarters in his house, and diuner was purpared aceurdingly. it was towards the erening, and I was with ny father, when an offeer, wrapred in a large chat, entered the abloon, and tolt lim that he was come to remain there, 'I rugret,' sail my fither, 'that I canmot give you the best acemmmodation my house ationds, as the gemeral is eoming here limself.' 'I ann the general,' sail the oflicer; and tor the tirst time I saw yourgreat duke. Throwing off his clonk, and on urderly lringing in a cone of maps, he dexired miy fither to sceompay him into an inner doom, and there for two hours dhe they sit looking over them while my father was elescribing the comatry, Dubing all this time was dimer waiting ; but not a partic le of food would the general toneh till he had formen his phans. The following moming the army :ghin mavehed in parsuit of the robber-trops of the 'Fremeh gemeral, ant hand it not been for the sad necgleet in mut destroying the bridgen of the Saltalor and the Miserella, not a man of them would have eseajed. Ah! thuse were stirving times, ${ }^{\text {. }}$

Petween Braga and Guimaraens, the combtry is very pleasant, well wooled and in parts as well enltivated; here and there villages are seen on the hill-sines or in the valley with the monlest elmuel tower rising nhore the peasants' huts, but the road was in very had orter, or, to speak more corvectly, it never had been in goor order.

Guimaraens is seated in a beantiful valloy, where the learned pretem to have discovered the traces of the ancient Avadnea, sigualised ly l'tolemy, and whose inlabitants hat very wisely put thenselver under the protection of Ceres. Conguered in olden times from the Moors, ly the Kings of Leon, and of Oveido, the town rises at a short distance from the River of Azevilla, and on the right hank of the Ave, whose tronguil flood wends its way listlevisly to the ocean between the two stronglolis of Azuar und Villa do Conde. At first a comnty, amb erected at a later period into a duely, to become the hereditary domain of the cldest of the Honse of Braganza, Gumarnens is surrounded by fortitications due in part to old King Diriez, hedind which the renowned Marshal Soult ensconeed himself in modern times.

This very uncient city was the eralle of the Fertugueso monarehy and the residence of Connt Ilenrifue. Here his son A flimso Henriques was lom in in 1100. The name of Egas Moniz, tho celelnated Portugnese hero, is inseparably conneeted with Guimaraens. When the city, in 1127, was besieged ly Aflimsn VII, of Leon, the partisans of $A$ fonso J Eenrígues, linding themselves unablo to maintain an effeetual mosistace, leclared in the name of their youthful soverign, that ho should acknowletge himself a vassal of the erown of Leon. Egas Moniz, ,me of the most peworful of diee Portuguese barons, pledged himself to the fulfilment of this treaty. The King of Leon raised the sioge muld rutirel into Galieia; when in the following year Atlomo Inemrignes arguired tinll possession of the sovereign power, the pladge given at Guimaraens was torgotten by all but Egses Maniz. Followed by his wite athd ehididren, he went with hare fret aul a halter roumd his neek, to the connt of that monareh, professing that he eame prepared to atone by his death for the viohation of his ontl.

> Fi com sens tilhos e mulher se parte,
> A levantar com chles a fiampa
> Descraleos, o despides, de tal artc.
> Que maia move a piedhde, que a vinzança; Se pretemies, hei Alto, de vingar-te > De minha temeraria confianea,
> 1)iaia, eiz-atui venho otterecido,
> A te pagar co' a vila o promettido.
> Lasiad, Connto lii., 35.

The enraged kiug, struek by so singdar an instance on tidelity, allowed hin to depart mingmet. 'This story is eredited even by I[erculan (Historie re Portregal, i. 228, and mote p. 468), and may therefore lav considered as well anthenticated. If a lourtughene estalagem boasts any pictures at all, one of them is sure to be the surrender of Egats Moniz.

Dom Jow I. marcheil from this phace to $A$ ljubarrota; and, in conserneme of a wow male befor his departme, crected, after thas great vietory at that place, amme other edifices, the celomated eollungiat or catherlm? chureh of Nossa Suhanti da Oliveina, of which we give a view at prge 008.

The whole interver of this milding has heen reawemb in a modern style ; lat being tiee fiom the paint and gilaling so much in use in Portugal, it is a remarkably ehaste vilitiec. "T'o the right of the attar," Ih. Kingston relates, "I observed an Maborately chased silver shrine, which, ly wome mitucle, escalued the sharp eyes and pitlaging hands of the krench.

We then wandered into the saeristy, lut condel find no one to show ns the treasures it entains These treasures ar" called "Ihn. 'lreasures of Our Laty"Os Thesomos de Nossa Femboma. A roming lidy of my aequaintanee male an ould mistake on that sulject When visiting ' $\mathrm{I}_{\mathrm{n}} \mathrm{m}$ manens some time ago-a very nutural one, it must be confessen. On lar tirst arrival while dressing, the maid-servant at the hotel informed her that among the many wonderfid things her native om the River of Aze. he Ave, wheso tranquil the ocem hetween the Villa do Conde. At ter period intos a ducly, 1 of the eldent of the as is surrounded by 1 King Dirier, bedind onlt ensconced himself crmile of the: lortube of Count Henrique. es was lman in 1109. celelirated Portugnese th Guimariens. Whan 1 by Ailinso. VII. of mrifues, tinding themffectual resistance, ileuthful soveroign, that vassul of the erown of most jwworful of tie If to the fulfilment of raised the siege and following year Athono fion of the sopereign uaraens was forgoten wed by his wife aud wed by his wite and and a halter roum his ch, protersing that he leath for the vifilation

Ne parte,

urte.
ue a vinzanca;
ingurte
ch
do, an nettido.
iad, Cinto iii., 35 .
ngular an instaner of ingiutel. This story Cistoria le I'urteyal'? y ther fore $J_{n}$ conbortugure estalas. on rem is sure to be the licer to A Ijulumprota; lefor: lais departam; $t$ thatit place, anamar "flate in eatholmil veita, of which we 共 has been revanel tiom tha paint and , it is a remarkably of the alar," Jr. Mahorately ehased stacle, ciesined the wench.

sty, hat coukl find $t$ contains. Thene wi Our Laty ""ohng lady of my a on that suluject time ngu-a rery On lece linst arrival tho lootel informed thingrs her native city contained wero those in the cathedral, particularly "On Thenouros de Nomsa Senhora," whioh she uniler-stood-Our Lady's ncissons. When, therefore, she with the rest of her party visited the sacristy, and everal venerable priests, whose fuir round bellies were with fat caldo lined, were standing round, and politely exhibiting the holy treasures of their shrine, she, after all had been shown, with much hesitation, from considering that they might bo unwilling to allow eyea protane to behold so valubble in relic, begged to see "the scissors of Nossa Senhora." "What does the lady want to sce in $^{n}$ said one worthy priest, hohling his sides, whilo his cheeks filled out, his lips curling and a bright sparklc illuminating his eyes. "The scissors of Nossa Senhoru," suid the young lady quietly. "Tho ocissors of Nowsa Senhora! Hal hal hal Tho scissors of Noses Senhora! Hal ha! ha!" repeated the prients in chorus; and never was such holy cachinnation before henrd, At length the first who reeovered his breath and voice, with tears in lis eyes, explained, amid numerous bursts of merriment, that however much they should value so ineatimable a treasure, they did not possess it ; that they had uready exhibited "os thesouros, do Nossa Senhora," but that for "suas tesouras," they unhappily possessed them not. Ha! hal ha !" and again they all lnughed. Wheever visits the cathedral of Guimaraens, and wishes to hear a hearty laugh, let them ask to wee the "seissus" of Nossa Senhora. It should be explained, that thesouros are treasures, and tesouras are acissorn.

We did not then see them, though we afterwards did; and again windering forth, we exnmined the exterior of the builaling. The belfry is square, with beautifully-worked, delicate columus at the outsido corners; the windows of tho pureat and most elegant Gothic, ns is a vaulted apartment on the gromed-iloor, scen through them. The prineipal entrunce :and $n$ window over it are of the most daborately worked Gothic architecture, hut, ulas I one end of the editice, having fallen into dueny, has boen repuired with an Iouic column. How the man who ereeted that cohnon coulil be guilty of such a solecism in architecture, I know not; but yet noro dull aud destitute of taste were the whole band of reverend prebenta who allowed so barbarous an innovation on their elegant cathedurl.
To the right of the principal entrance was an inscription in motern and ancient Portuguese. Tho modern I copied, but lost patience before I had tinished the first line of the ancient: the tablet on which the latter was carved was surounded with small shields bearing the arms of Portugal.
The translation of the inseription is as follows:
"It was in the year ono thousand thrce hundred and eightyfive, on the sixth lay of the month of May, that this work wis begun by order of Don John tho First, king of this realm of Portugal, son of the very noble king Don Pedro of Portugal. This king Dou John engaged in a royal luttlo with tho king Don John of Castile, amit was the conuperor of him; nut in honour of the victory which the Loky Mary gave he ordered this work to be performed."
Nearly in front of the chief entranco stauds tho little Gothic shrine or temple of which I spoke. It is formed of four pointed arehes, with a dumed roof, and in the centre stands a highly carved cross. Near' it is also the ancient tree so much respected ly all the inhabitunts.
I had been examining its high pointed arches, and massive pillars, when I turned round to look at the tree which on a green mound sarrounded by iron grings stands nour it. I was wondering why it was thus carefully preserved, when I heard a voice in a low tremulous tone, with lout a slight touch of the beggar's whine, asking for nims, und taking a small silver coin from my poeket I let it crop into the withered skeleton-looking hand I saw extendod towards me. "May God mul the Holy Virgin and all the saints guard you from harm, my young fidalgo," said the voice, which I fonnd proceeded from a woman of advancel age, as her whito locks, her tottering steps, and her lent body, which she supurted by a long stick, fully declared ; yot she made no attempt to excite compaswion by a squalid or tattered dress; on the contrury, her clothes, though patched in many places, were as neat and clean as her circunstances would probably nelmit. She lut too, I donbt not, in her youth been lovoly as tho lily of the valley, a being on whom lordly mun might have set his fondest affections, or whomight have wamed his bosom with the most urdent damenow she was one from whom ho would tum aside with disgust. I judged this from the regularity of her thin parchment-like features, and the large eye now sumk and dim, which lud been cither of a dark blue or a purplish blue groy, a colomr so attractive among tho far Hiberninns.
"You are gazing at that little tree, Senhor, with at curions eye; yet, perchance, you have not heard the tale of its holy origin," she observed. I confessed my ignorance, and begget the old woman to enlighten me, if in her power so to do. "I ean, Senhor, and gladly shall I thas be ablo to repay you, though inadectutely, for your charitable feeling towards a poor forlorn old womm like myself-in Heaven must you look alone for your great rewurd." "I an eager to hear your tale, my good lady I" I exelaimed; " 1my commence it." "I will, I will, Seuhor. Youth is nlways in a hurry," she muttered.
" Fon must know, Senhor, that many humhed years ago-I might nlmost say thousands-there lived in this province a man of the name of Wamba. He was a jerson noted for his extraordinary piety, his bravery, and his lemong; for it was well known that althongh he could not write like the learmed clerks to be found in the monasteries, he was well able to read, and thus was ho reputed far and wide ly those of all ranks who knew him throughout the Peninsula. Tho former king of the country laving died, the prople were anxious to elect a new one, but hivl great ditienty in making their ehoice. In this chacrgency they tixed their eyes on Wamba. At that time the spot where we now stand was an open space, in a fine grove, where tho neighbouring propricter's used to assemble to exchange their eattle or corn and wine for what they might "mpuiro. There was one day a collection of people tar greater than usual on the spot, when the principal ones again began to discuss the suljeet of clecting a king; and at last it was agreed that no man was more fitted for that otlice than Wamba. He had not then made his appeanuce, but seareely hat he been manimonsly elected, when he was seen approaling the sput, driving betore him with his long stick a remakably fine piar of oxen. IIe drove them into the erowd, and oflered them in exchango for so much corn and wine and ail, which he was anxious to present to some holy monks who lived up in that sheltered nook in yonder monntain, which you see fiom heme: when what was his

THE PRIEST'G TOWER, OPORTO.
surprian on belolding all the surrounding people tako of their hats nud hitl him king.
own lint, entreated his friends not to expore him thins
"Wamba wis it jous mun, und mokest respecting his own virtuos and acquirements-a sign of true talent, it is said, Senhor ; he therefure, at onee taking ofl his to ridicule, hut if they wished to make a mockery of any one, to select some other rerson a; their langhingpost. They one und all deelared, that fine from wishing to moek the grod Wamba, they were never more serious in their lives ; again entreating him to necept the regal dignity. 'It cannot bo! it camot be!' he exelamed, - I am not fitted for so high an othee. Heavea has appointed me to the quiet life of an himble lavrador, and in that, please God, I will remain. Reeeive many thanks, my friends, for your good opinion of me, of which I an sufficiently prourl, and do you seleet some more worthy person.' 'No one is more 'vorthy than Wamba! no one is more worthy than Wamba!' was shouted among the crowd; and the chief people again stepped forward, entreating him with prayers to aceept the regal crown. Now Wamba, though a pious man, was a little impatient in his temper, as even the best of us are at times when tried; and he was anxious to dispose of his oxen, and to return home to his wife ; so when thus unexpectedly delayed, he began to lose patience. "It is enough, my friends; I beg you do not mock me,' be cried, 'I must away to my home.' But as he endeavoured to retire from the little mound on which he was standing, they throagel still more round him, taking huid of his robes to detain him. 'This is folly, my friends,' he exclaimed, striking, in his vexation, his long iron-pointed goad (his pau) into the ground with considerable foree. 'When uny stick, whieh I cut twenty years ago, begins to flourish, then, if it please Heaven, I will he your hing, or anything yon require; but till then $I$ swear on the four evangelists and the holy gospels I will neve $r$ make so great a fool of mys if.' At hearing these words the people were satlly disappointed, for they knew well that no earthly power would make him break so great an onth; and though they were determined to have a king, they knew not whom else to select.

They were all retiring disconsolate to their homes, and the humble Wamla was about disposing of his oxen, when a loud exelamation of wonder was heard from those standing round the little mound where in his vexation he had left his stick. They rushed to the spot, when what was their mazement to behold the dry iron-pointed stick, which they had seen thrust into the ground a few minutes before, now sending fosth green leaves in every direction! Wambu tlew townrds it, and his first impulse was to attempt to draw it forth, thinking it was the work of witheraft, but it resisted all his etliorts; it had taken too firm root-an emblem of the Portuguese monareliy. Overcome by his feeliugs of pious amazement, he fell on his knees, beseeching power might be vouchsifed him from above to fulfil the onerons and honourable task he now elearly perpuived he had heen espocially seleeted by JFaren to arform. Ite was at once problamed king with lond shouts from all the people as they rose from their knees, on which they hand fallen at sight of the wonderful miraele. He mo louger made a pretence of refusing the regal e Th. They immolintely wet to work to erjet a palne for him near the spot where Heaven 1 ad itself conferred this dignity on him; und that was the very first house built iv Guinuraens, which has since become so iuportant a slace. His reign was long and prosprons, nor were the people ungmoteful for the benctit. Hearen had confered on them. The tree, too, has always been preserved with religions enve by sheeraligy shmotions, hut lus never incomsed nor deerensed insize, being the first to put forth lenves in the early spring, winl the last to shed them int the antumn; n living manifestation of the truth of miracles which the most seepitical cammot donbt.

Ilaving thoroughly examined the enthedral, we strolled onward towards an open spuee, ealled the Praen da Feim, at one cond of which a most lovely view appeared before us. Over a small stream, by whose sides grew several large and graceftuly weeping willows, a bridge with statues at each end, half shrouded by the light green foliage, led to an elegant church. To the right of the chureh appeared a grove of olive trees, and further on to the left, on an clevated terrace, the palace of the Baron de Villat Pouca, while beyond all arose a range of richly elothed hills, dotted with quintas, nottrges, and convents. Passing the bridge we mounted by a flight of steps to tho broad terrace in front of the mansion of the baron. Having the hononr of his acquantance, and having but a few days previous reeeived a kind invitation to visit him at one of his many honses in another pirt of the comutry, I knew that he was not there, and conseriיently did not wish to intarude into the house. This mueh-esteemel and amiable nobleman is n it anly the senior baron of Portugal, but is also one of thin oldest fimily in the country. His father w, the is hereditary, the higher one not heing on

The magnificent view from the terrace amply repaid us for our walk. Before us lay the town, fill it convents, eburches, and steeples, and surromaled by gatdons; fertile tields stretehing away on every side, interposed with pretty quintas, groves, and orelumeds. In the centre apmeared on a rocky mound the laty square to vers of the enstle and palace of Alfonso IImrique, while around arose the green lamghing hills which form the sides of the buson in which stands Guimaruens.

On our walk through the streets we remarked that they were paved with very large that thag-stones, and $^{\text {and }}$ that aven the smallest howses were built of well ent syume bloeks of considerable size, mearly all having hrand balconies.

There wats to be no gest for us this day, so witha gride to saow us the lions, we sallied forth ugrin. Passing though a lone street with a haudsome numnery in it, thast of St. Clara, and several large honses belonging to tidalgos, we turned to our right, and ascending "rocky monnd through a grove of olive trees, we stood hefore the gites of the pralace, built, it is asid, by the warlike Alfinso Hemique, the first monarch of Portugal. It is yet very perfeet, and part of' it, of course rymiret, is ned ocemsionally as burraeks for troops. To the left ands the once proud castle ot Gnimarnens, yet a stalwurt ruin, refusing to sink into decny. The eastle was built by the gatlunt Uomnt Henri of Bosmeon, the finther of Kinig Alfonso.

This Count I Muri was a French knight, who marrying 'Teresa, the illegitimate daughter of' Alfonso V'I, king of Spain, the goverument of Portugal was conferred on him, in consegnence of the assistance he hat rendered his father-in-law (the famons eorqueror Toledo) against the Moors. Before that time, A.D. -1095 , that part of l'urthigal not iu possession of the Moors had luran sulgacet for several eenturies to loeal govemurs, drpendont on the comats of (tialicia. Connt in his second veas, hurner, whose minority the ndministration of the conutry wis nsmand by Tirese his mother. 'This boma Feresa aprems to have been a princess unt only of a tierce and warlike disponition, ber adilicted to the sufter passion of love, if the semalal relating to " eertaia Dom Fermando Jerea is to be en sace, called the ich a most lowely view mall stream, by whose raceftuly weeping wilch enel, half shironded to an elegant church. ared a grove of olive t , on in elevated terlo Villa Pouea, vhile clothed hills, dotted vents. Paswing the of steps to the broall the lharon. Having id having but a f.w vitation to visit him nother part of the ot there, and conseto the honse. This buan is ant inly the so ome of thin oldest fings so errice amply renaid e town, fiall it consurrommed ly garray on every side, roves, antel orehards. ky monnd the lolty cee of Alfouso Ilmcent lughing hills m in which stands wo remarked that lat flag-stomes, and Philt of well ent monly atl having this day, so with a thied forth again. 1 nt haulsome numeral large housus our right, and as. ove of oliso trees, ee, built, it is said, e tirst momarel of tad part of it, in $\gamma$ an barmeks for 20 proud castle it using to sink into Ie gallant Oount Alfonso. ight, who marry-- of' Alionso V'j. ortugal was contsmistanee he had mas con'ipueror of" that time, A.D. nossession of the nturies to loeal Piallicia. Connt 11, Alfonsio, only osity the athi1 by Tresa his to lawo been a liko dipposition, c, if' the scaminal J'erez is to be credited. At all events, her son quarrelled with her, and ronting her army moder the walls of this very castle, drove her to take shelter in that of Lanhozo. It appears he towk her misoner, and bringing her baok to Guimaruens, he shat her up within a lofty tower which has hut ono entrance, twenty feet from the $g$, ound. This ho did firom heing a great advocate of femate morality, and wishing that his mothei slunld set a better example to his sulyects than she hill previously done.

The Count Alfonso first assumed the dignity of royalty A.D. 1140 , alter his ever-memorable victory on the plains of Ourinue (in the Alemteju), obtaned over rio Doors. A winding pathwny amid rugged rocks and crmmbing walls conducted us to the narrow and strongly-ghamed gateway of the eastle. The walls and turrets are still perfeet to their full height on the outside; thengh within time has made greater ravages. The buileting is of an oblong form, with square towers guading the entranee, also one at each eorner and half way at eneh side. In tho centre rises the enomously high, dark, frowning tower, which formed the prison of the namghty Domm Teresa. It is said that for censturies no one hiss entered that prison tower. Climbing over a ruined whil, throngh a nurow doorway, we hokid up at the lolty keep, and there, surely enourh, appeared a narrow window, or doorway, full twenty feet from where wo were standing, while the other sides worr devtitute of my opening at all to a considrably greater alistance from the gromad. It is athimed that there whis no subtermeons entrance to this sume keep. 'This tower was probully intemed to serve as the last place of defence in case of the outer part of the eastle being stormed, and in the goorl ohd days, before gumpuwder was invented, it might have euabled the gurvison to bohl out tio a comsidemine lengel of time, till relieved hy their triends. It is more likely that it was built fir the athove purporse, than, ns the keeper of the castle informed us, to confine the liery Donin Teresit.

Besides the rooms of the keoper who has elbarge of the castle, wo tomul sevent of the turrets rowted in and inhabited. In one sefure tower, with stronglyanred windows, wretehed maniaes ot tho male sex are at times contined, mind an oplosite tower is destined luto a dark vant, the root wh whiel had given way, we broked down: it is mad to haw hem the durgen uf the castle, amd such prolnilly, from its contral position wht glomyy "plearnnce, was its use, thomgh a castle of that eobsideration must, in those times, hatwe contained many more prison-holds.

The view from the walls, nas we walked romm them, was benmiful in the extreme. Direetly behow us was the palare of Alfon*o, beyomb, the town, with the quintas of the Baren of 'Villa Penca mut ut Nenhor Aruselles, all which were surromaded by tields amd groves, interspersed with the cheerful white habitaticus of' men: therl, "gain, rose hosomy hille covered with trees and shrubs, among which conld ho diseconed the enment of da Costa; and uhove all, oll a werpated ridge, "premred the little clapel ot peolut, built yp there to tempt the pionsly inclined thas to win their way towade heaven.

We were much minsed liy the kerper's cheseripition of the eastlomand palaee. "Yom must know, Sulneres," he ofserved, "that yonder palnce was hailt by a eertain count, who cumo from a fin di-tunt equatry; a long way orer the sea; but what the dicbu was his name, 1 cannot recollect" - and he shrugged his shonlders, towk off his hat, and seratehel his head; but to no purpose; so we allowed him to contime his tale. "Know, Senhores, that in that very puhace was born, many years ago, one of the greatest kings the world ever saw-the mighty Allionso 1 femrigue, who, when a laby, was baptized in the little chapel below, whieh 1 am ahout to shew you. Now, the king Alfonso, when he grew up, had in wife, who, untortunately, was no better than she should be, so he built that high tower which nhmost breaks your neek to lowk inf at, and shat her up in it, which servel her right, and there she died : this is nil I koww on the subject. Let us now, Senhores, desoend to visit the chape!, which is well worth sceing."

A few steps brought us to the door ot' a small very ancient-looking clatel in the olive grove nextr the estatle. The interior of the chapel is of roughly-hewn stone, and contains nothing worthy of norice, except a printed paper in a frame, which the keepre nhowed us with great reverence, certifving that A.D. l1008, was here lmptized the great king Alfonso Hamique. Without the leave of the alcate, even the bishop, himself cannot enter the chureh. I'hroughout the halding everything was simple-tho chats on whiel the aleale sits, and the ronfessional hox, which was it mero sereen of thin wood with a seat hehind it, and at French print stuck to it. The edifice wan renewed in li!) Th This whe the first chmreh in finimamens.

We then entered the eourt-ram of the palace, and wished to penetrate into the ramed ehurch beyond: the tincly trelliced and highy-worked windows of which we conld seo through another window directly tueing us, also beantithlly earved ; but, mutortunately, the jernom who helle the key could nowhere be found. Mach of the patace was pulled down to bild the convent of the Cipuchins. 'Thus many of the most beantatal (bothic and Doorish semains haw heon seated, nad now, in their tom, the convents are being destroyed, or converied into dwelling-lunses, barracks, of stables.

It mant hatre been one of the most delighting residences in meciont days, for the rooms are large and lofty, with windows of good proportions, looking down upun it siew whece conth never have heen otherwise than lovely, It two corners of the hindinis wre turrets, with wimbing stairs leading to them, which establinhes the intifuity of that part of the building. some of the romis leme tire-phaces with enomous chimucys, and indeed so hat the eastle itself, which proves that Connt Hemi, thongh a great warrior, was tome of his comitorts. All the very ohel houses in Portugal have tire places, and those ouly of later days ar': withont them, for wat reasom 1 emmot understmed.

The cour-yard is a large square, with the walls of the palace and its ofliees on esch side, the elareh in front, and the gateway and towers on the fonth side: indeed, the whold pile must havo been in atyle of magnitie ence marly to be found in those ders, but worthy of the gallant wariors who inhabited it. Somo of the rooms hail theso bromd tables roumd them intembed for soldiers bed phees, us. hat others paillets for the num-comanimsioned otheers; but the wimbows were ppen and the thors swept, so that all lookied elem and in orter. Should the spinit of the war-hke Alfonso think lit to revisit his abode on earth, he vand at times tind some hundred men ready-armed to follow him at a moment's notice to battle-only, I suspect, he would experience considerable difficulty in mancuvering them.
We passed outside the ancient walls, which have, like those of Oporto, indeed of almost all the towns I have seen in Portugal, pointed parapets. They extend in a line of considerable length, part of them serving to enclose the garden of the convent of Santa Clara, After paying another visit to the garden of the Barou de Villa Pouca, we passed through several open spaces with churches in then, and entered the large square of the eity.
Here are numpers of the shops of entlery for which Guimaraens is celebrated in Portugal. The iron comes from abrond by way of Oporto, and being manufictured beth here and at Braga, is distributed over the eountry in the shape of every description of knife, spurs, locks, and carpenter's adzes. One of the party hought a most formidable-looking ent-2 spring and hilt, and as $a^{\text {tr }}$, the end of the hantle on which to place the that der to drive it with greater force into an antago linaly. The cutlery which was shown us, though uierior to the Eughish, looked well and neatly made, and the blades of the knives properly tempered. It is manutictured here on accome of the abundance of wood, and the consequent cheapmess of chareoal.

While the party were completing their purchases, I amused myself' by looking on at the procedings of people in the square. In the centre was mi eleggant fountain, firmed by a succession of shell-like basmens, placed one above another, decreasing in size towards the summit, whence the water flowed forth, splashing in sparkling showers over the lower ones, mad falling into a liuge circular tiank below. A pretty young girl sat with her basket hy her side on a stone seat mar me, her face so placid that I thought she could not see me as I stood :uthiring her beanty, till seeing a modest hilush rise on her cheek, her eves sparkle, und a smile wreath itself roumd ler hips, I iliscovered that the little rogue had been all the time aware of the admiration she had been exciting. Cosi, finno tutte. I leave it to my fuir frients to decide whether she was displeased. I whall not firget quickly that pretty face, alleeit Lusitamia contains so many, thac it would require a large albme to contain them. A clowd of lazy people had collected round to gaze at us strangers, when some respectable-looking men passing by, thinking we did not henr them, endeavoured to disperse the idlers, observing, "Why do you stand rudely gazing at these gentlemen! They do nat differ from us. Gin home, go home." Such is tho delieate civility which a stranger who comports limself according to their notions of propriety universally reeeives from all elusses; mad when I have heard of instances to the contrary I have invariably found that the first oflence has been conmitted by the stranger, sometimes, of cousse, unintentionally, through a misunderstanding of each other's Jauguage.

We now returned to our hotel to prepare for our departure, when our cicerone hurried in to inform us that if we would proceed immediately to the enthedral, we could see "the Treanures of Our Lady:" "On no nccount would wo miss se gratifying asight," we answered; and following the guicle into the sacristy we had before entered, we fiund two worthy priests standing before a large folling oaken door, who bowing politely as soon as they pereeived us, they threw open, and exhibited to our sight a cupboned filled with mumerous gold and silver ornaments. The most worthy of notice was a silver shrine, gilt, and beantitinly eliased. It served as the travelling shrine of Don Julin king of Castile, to be placel in his tent, and was captured from him on the field so glorious to Portugal, of Algebarrota, by the brave Joao I., king of Portugal, in 1403. Here nlso is preserved the very coat king Dom Joan wore on that bloody day-a thickly-padded silken jerkin, somewhat, as may be supplosed, the worse for wear. I remember, besides, another small silver shrinc, most beantifully workel, is number of cups and crosses, and a silver statue of St. Sebastian, slut to death by arrows. The mont valuable, however, of all the treasures is a crown of pure gold, used ons state occasions, an it was on that day, to adorn the head of Nossia Senhora herself, whom we had observell as we entered standing with regal dignity near the high altal: All these, and other treasures, having been exhihited, we also asked to see "the scissors of Our Lady." A smile rose on the lips of the grave and polite prics: who was acting as showman, when suddenly there entered the sacristy a long line of reverend canon, elothed in the riclay-worked vestments of their order, and whohnul just couchuled the performance of high mas. Immediately the smile vanished from the fitce of our friend, the portals of the treasure-house were closed. the priests commenced umrobing, and we bowed, and in return were bowed out of the lall. We forthwith repaired to the hotel, and packing our baggige, despatchel it towards Braga, we ourselves soon afte: momating our hores to follow in the same direction.

Few towns in Pertugal are more pleasantly situatel, on surrounded by a more fertile and lovely country than Guimaraens. In the orelurds in the ueighonorhoud grow those delicions phans, which being dried an" pracked in smanl round boxes ly the nuns, and unamented with silver and silk flowers. They are well known in England by the name of Gumarachs phms: I remarked particularly the great number of elegart crosses of every shape throughont the town, chictly of stone, the stens of a light spiral form, with merely a small eross-piece at the top; also in every direction the numernis slarines, the arelitecture and ormanents of which were tar from teserving of the same altuiration. I unterstand that there are many other objects to be shown in the town, which we did not see ; particularly various relies of peculinu sunctity, not exhibited except to devout eyes of true belicvers ; but 1 trust on a second visit I may bo considered as such, and mijuy the inestimable sitisfaction of riewing them, when I promisa to give a full mal exact deseription of their peculiar virtues.
There is a proverb which says that Guimamans has a cathedtal without a bishop, is palace withut a king, and a bridge without a river. The so-culled enthedral being in reality a collegiate church, and the river becoming dried up at certuin seasons of the year. The so-called Chsa da Camara stamels on a triple row of pillars on the right hund, as the visitor leaves the cathedral, or the left on entering. Not far ofl' is the Dominican convent, now belonging to the Thirl Ordor, which still exists. The eloisters, npparently of the fourteenth century, rum very beantifil, are the prope ty of the Cumam, and are lieing restored fir municipal purposes. The church to the right lanul, to which these belong, has a fine Elumboyant west enl, but is much Italimised inside. The clarel to cupboard filled with ents, The most woitly gilt, and beautifully at slirine of Don Johy in his tent, and wis g glarious to Portugal, ol., king of Portugal, ed the very eoat king lay-a thicklyrpadded fe supposed, the worse another small silver a number of eups and pt. Sebastian, shot to uable, however, of all b gold, used on state to adorn the licad of had observed as we fy near the high altar. iving been exhibital, is of Our Larly." A we and polite pries ven suddenly there of reverend canon. ments of their order. formance of high mas. from the lice of wa rehonse were closid. and we bowed, anil hall. We forthwith lig our bagginge, de. ourselves soon afte: de same direction. e plasantly situated, and lovely comutry ls in the neighbourwhich loing dricel ar" the muts, and ornaers. They are well f Gilmmruens phums. number of elegant the town, chiefly of form, with mevely a 0 in every direction ture and ornaments of tho stme almi3 many other oljects did not see ; parectity, not exhibited ers ; but I trust on us such, and rujuy ving them, whin i lescription of their that Guimaracus a palace withont er. The so-called te chureh, and the in seasons of the, stands on a triple 3 the visitor leaves Ig. Nut lar oll is fing to the Thirt ters, apparently of benutifinl, are the eing restored fir the right hami, Elumboyant west the left hand is not worth visiting, but the hospital to which it is attached is: it belongs to the Third Order, and contains some curious portraits, especially one of the meat and gool Archbishop-Primate D. Bartolomeu dos Martyres. The drawings of modern benefactors are so execrably bad as to be ludicrous.

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

Guimaraens was the birthplace of Pope S. Damasus, one of the two Portuguese who have attained that dignity : also of Gil Vicente, commonly called the Portuguese Plautus, the first, and it may be said the best, dramatic anthor his country has produced. The date of his lirth is unknown, and but few particulars of his life are recorded. A piece written by hin in 1504 to celebrale the birthday of the Infinte Dom Jean, afterwards Dem Joao III., is still extant. He was much patrenised at court, and acquired so European a fame that Erasmus learnt Portuguese on purpose to read his plays. He is supposed to have died at Evora about 1540 . See the Einsaio Biographico Critico of José Maria do Costa e Silva, tom. i. p. 241-295. The Testamento de Maria Parda, given in that essay, is an excellent specimen of the style of Gil Vicente. IHis works, which were extremely difficult to procure, have lately been reprinted in the Bibliotheca Portuguesa, in which they form three vols., and only cost a trifle.
Like other travellers we must acknowledge that we are indebted for this last tit bit of useful information, as well as for many others, to Mr. Muray's invalualile IIandbook:

V.

Porto, on Opomto - Its IIstomic.l Antecrdents-Topoorapmical Ramile - Puincipal streets - Suspession himoe - Foentains - Convent op San Bento das Fheiras-Locabities of Mifrerenet Trades-Praças, or Sqeares-Town Hall-Italian Otera Mouse-Stburds of Opoato.
A newly-constructed broad macadamised road establisles a commumiention between Gumamaens and Oporto. It is, however, badly made, full of stones and ruts, rugged and broken. Inckily, our stout aetive steeds diadained such trifling inpediments; and, eantering away gaily last green and fertile fields of Indian eorn, past villages and pine groves, and ultimately leaving the servated ridge on whieh the Miguelite entroneliments were thrown up in 1833 , we descemed into the roughly-paved streets of Oporto, We hat heen some sixteen hours on horseback, and it is almost needless to say with whint pleasure we gained the retreshing roof' of the Motel do Commercio in the Rur Nova dos Inglezes, of which we have given a sketch at page 209. There is also an English hetel in the city, kept by Mary Castro, and a Hospidaria Ingleza, in the Rua do Calvaria, both good. It is evident that the "Inglezes" are the grent npholders of tavern life in this grent wine mart.

The loyal and unconquered city of Porto-such is its oflicinl title-the second in the kingdom, one of the soventeen administracoes and an cpiscepal See, is sitnated on the north side of the Douro, and about a league from its month, and with its suburbs contains more than 90,000 inhabitants. Its extrewe length along the river, from the Pudrao de Campanhaa at the enst, to the Praya do Bicalho in the west, is abont a league; its extreme breadth, from the Lapn church in the north to the Pracn da Ribeira in the south, is about half a league.

During the siege it was divided into three Bairros-

Santo Ovidio, Cedofeita, and Santa Caterina; there aro at present four parishes within the city-the Se, San Ildefonso, San Nicolao, und Victoria; and eight in the suburbs-the Cedofeitn, Massarellos, Miragaia, Campanhaa, Sun Jono da Fez, Lordello do Ouro, Paranhos, and Bumfim. Porto, as we have seen, with its opposite suburb of Cale, gave its name to the kingdom. After being acity of grent impertanco during the domination of the Moors, it was utterly destreyed by Ahnansor of Cordova, in 820, and remained a desert till 999 , when it was refounded and re-peopled by an expedition of Gascons and French. Hence its name of Fortus Gallorum, whence some would derive Portngal. It was always a favourite of the Portuguese monarchs; its walls, 3000 paces in circumterence, and thirty feet in height, which wre still to be seen here and there, were constructed during the reigns of Dom Aflonso IV., Dom Pedro I., and Dom Fernando I. In the ancient Cortes, its deputies were seated on the lighest bench. In the civil war between Dom Diviz and his sen Dom Affonso, it took the part of the latter, and remained faithful to him when he, in his turn, was at war with his son Dom Pedro.

Purto has nlway been subject to sudden outhursts of popular insurrection. In 1628, on nceasion of $n$ tax imposed on all linen or woollen manufacturers, the women arose, routed the soldiess, and attaeked Dom Francisco do Lucena, the obnoxious minister, who narrowly escnped with his life. This is called the insurrection das Mactrocts. In 1661, a tax on stamped paper gave rise to another ontburst, whiela was not put down withont great loss of life. In 1756 , when the wine monopely was created by Pominal, there was an insurrection, which lasted only for a day, but for which twenty-six persons were put to death by that mprincipled minister, besides many sentences of confiscation und lesser punishments. In Jme, 1807, Porto set the example of attempting to throw off the Fronch yoke ; und on May 11 th, 1809 , it was rewarded by witnessing the successiul passage of the Douro, perhaps the most brilliant action of the Duke's whole career: So bold was the attempt, and so utterly impossible did it seem to the Frouch, that Soult, whe had himself superintended breaking m, the bridge of boats on the preceding uight, was actually sitting down to a banquet in the Carrmeas, when lie had to gallop, from the city, and to leave his dimner to he eaten by the Duke and his statl: Siuce $18: 0$, Porto has seldom been quiet long together. In that year the inhabitants proelnimed the Constitution, which, in 1836 , they again substituted for the Cliniter ; in 1842, they replaeed the former by the latter, and, in 1846, the latter by the tormer. The great event, however, of tho history of Porto, is the siege, in 1832 and 1833 . Dom Pedro, having landed at Arlosa, July 8 thi, 1832, at the head of an army of 7500 men ; mul, wnoting ahility to advance to Lisbon, shat himself up in P'orto, whice he was unsuccessfully besieged by Dom Mignel.
"The heroic and ever-uneenquered city of Operte," us it is grandiloquently designated, is built upon two granite liills at tho foet of which tlows the Douro. The Villa Novn de Gain (Portus Cale), whieh has become a mero amexation to the old Castrim Novun, oceupies tho left bank. The eathodmil and the episcopal pralace dominate the town ; the convent of Scria do Pilar, transformed into a citudel by Dom Pedro, in 1832, protects or threateus the suhurhs, accerding to circunstmees, or the relation of parties. Oporto is comeeted with Villa Nuva de Gaia by a suspensiou bridge. Vessels, with the flags of all nations, encumber the hiurbour, whilst streets, suceeding one another, like so many terraces, ant reached by as many staircases, rua alougside the hill, exeept when reliuved by the native rock, which, projecting like it side secne, impurts a most picturespue aspect to a view, the backsreund of which is formed by the Dono disalpearing in semi-obscurity.

It is furnable, however, that the citizens of $\mathrm{O}_{\text {gorto }}$ would willingly exchange a partion of their picturespue beanty for greater facilities of lucomotion. Mr, Kingston says, for example, it is one of the most irregnlarly bailt towns with which he was aequainted. Few of its strects are level, and tewer still rim at right angles with each other; indeed, its inhabitants seem to have an abherrenet of right angles; it is, howevor, a very picturespue, interesting phace. It well eamed the title of hrove from the gallant defence it made against the army of the usurper Dou Miguel, in 1832, when every military man declared that, accordiug to all the rules of military tactics, it ought to have been taken. 'lle armed inhalitants, the few regular troops, and the forcign amsiliaries, thought otherwise, or, being ignomant of the art of war, did not know when to vicld: su the city was jueserved, to prove the maclens whene the genial bems of towe linerty and enlightence vacation may radiate over the fair surtace ot Lusitania. As to its chim to the title of "the ever-memquered," the inlabitants, when they gave it, surely mol have firgotten the cireunstanees of its capture by soult, anli all tho miseries they sutlercol during the short time his amy hele pussession; as also too, probably, its relicf by the gallant British troops under our girat duke. The lortuenses have so well proved their prowess under their sreat duke (of Binganza), that they ought to in above any vaia loonst: they onght not to forget that the is re hosts of Gallia brought havoe, restruetion, and all war's miseries into their fair land-they ought to remember that the armies of britain bronght them sucentr, peice, and happiness.

The extreme width of Oporto is rather less than a mile from the river: it commenees about three miliss from the reat, and extends in length about one mile along the hamk of the Douro, up hill and down dale; half this space, too, being ocenpied by gardens, which few houses are withont, exeept those close to the river. It contains, if 1 an informed rishtly, about eighty thonand inhabitants, but nu one seems to be exactly certain on the subpret. The houses are built to the very edse of the water, whence the elty rises on two high stepp hills, which are themselves agnin lureken into smaller hills and valleys. (wee p. 216.)

It was onee surrunteded by a wall of harge square stones, tistened withont any eement-many sulphese built by the Hoors; but it is in reality of nmeh later date than the time of their whort sojoum in Uporto, Hough an imitation of thein style. The greater part of the wall still remains entire, but the city has grown very fin beyoud it. That purt along the side of the river is in jerfect preservation, with a walk extemeng its whole length, on which the dorers of houses open, flanked on the westem ennl lyy a low round tower. At ench end of the city it rums directly up the hill from the river, surmounted by u pointed parapet, and having a steup precipice on the outside. Two square towers, and some hundred yatrds of the wall, are also to be seen from the Rua de St. Antonio, which is now the very centre of the city. The irchitecturo of the houses varies very much: those on the wall ficing the river put me in mind of Havre de Grace, and similat Normatn towns, while others, in the oldest parts of the city, are of substantial stone, richly earvol, somewhat like the old town of Edinburgh; and others, anain, woukd almost vie with many of the latian palaces, in size, it not in elegance; but the buildings of a later date are of an arbhitecture peonliar to themselves, in which all rules and lians lave been entirely disearded. Inded, estreming the l'ortugrose as I dor, tor their many admirable qualities, 1 must say that at the present day they are the very worst architects I have in any comatry ever met. Lawking at the city from the river, the most conspicuous object is the episeopral palaee-it lange subare stone building with many winlows, standing on the smmmit of a lifl in the centre of the ohlest part of $O_{\text {porto. Near it is seen the eathedal. and a }}$ stantial editice of stone, whese towers rise above the surrombling houses, Asain is seen high abowe the hamy belfries scattered throughout the eity the arabergmelyenved tower of the Clerigos. (Sie 1. 217). To the extreme east is an clegant elain snspension-hridge, lately erected, eommecting the two banks of tho river, and just abowe it is one of the ancient towerx of the city walls, in later years emverted into a summer-hense tor the nums of Santa Clama, whose convont, built on the edine of the high :und rugged clifl on the sonth side stand the how dilapidated, hut onge rich emvent of the Soma, with its lofye cirenlar chured and domed roof. Wholow the convent, directly facing Oporto, and extonding down the river on the sloping sides of its banks, is the town of Villa Nova da that, the lomg low buildings serde in which are the wine-stores of the Oporto merehants.
Such is a rough sketch of Oporto from the river. We will now hand and wander through the city, tiret sotting feot on the uew, brond, humdsome shay near the Custom-house, at which vessels ot two humded tons' burden ean discharge their cargoes. Pissing up :s short steep hill among bales of goots ant ox-carts, with the Ctistom-house, a shabby-looking building, on the right, we enter the Rina Nova des Ingleza--tho New Street of the English. It is of no great longth, hut the bumblest in the eity, and contains some giond louses, the tinest of which is the English Fictory House. (Nee p.209.) 1ligh above it, at one rul, apmears the bishop's palace, looking down fiem its cyrice, and at the other is a enllection of chmelhes. Hure the merehants hold their exchunge, and empregate to talk of business, or the last new opern. At one cud a broad strect lins lately been opened, extenling up the slope of the hill, in which a tine stone front is being erected to the extensive walls of the suppressed comvent of St. Frameisro. It is to serve as un exelange, with rooms for otlices. Within the building a hambomo hall has ulremely been opened, on the phan of the commercial rooms in most large Euglish towns: here Enlso the Commercial Association hold their sittings. Close to the exclange another fine stone builing is mpidly rising, intemded for the bonking-house of the Heanch Bank of Liston. Both huildings will soon be completen, and will mid muele to the benuty and dignity of the eommercinl part of the eity. In the Rua Nova and its neighbourhood aro the countinghouses of the merehants; but their dwelling-houses are generully in tho ligher parts of the city, or in the hich is now the very ecture of the houses vall ticeing the river , and similiar Nolman parts of the eity; are , sumewhat likn the thers, again, wonld an palatees, in size, it - of a later clate are nselves, in which all disemrled. Inteal, lo, for their many that at the Iresent wects I have in any city fiom the river, episeopal palace-a eny winlows, stanlcentre at the ohdest lie cathedrall, a nubers rise above the igh abowe the many the arabesquelyc 1. 217). T'o the ension-bringe, lately $f^{\prime}$ the river, all just of the city walls, in -hanse tor the nuns on the edge of the on the summit of a inhe stantiv the now of the Sems, with rout. Below the 1 extending down banks, is the town buiklings seen in reto merchants. , from the river. agh the eity, firot dsome if tay mear ; oft two himdeal goes. I'issing up ods anil ox-ciarts, sing builuling, on dos Iugleze-tho nor great longth, atains some Forsi linglish liuctory it, at one cold, down from its ion of elmmehes. e, and congregite ra. At one end extenting up the e front is being Ilressed comvent exchange, with ing it handsomo he plan of the ish towns: here 1 their sittings. tone building is ng-house of the ngs will seon be le benuty and he eity. In the the counting-!ling-honses nre city, or in the country. The most regularly built strect is the Rua Sova de San Jaon, rising on a steep hill from the river; and crossing the eastern end of the Rua Nova dow Iaglezes. By a regulation, whieh has bren strictly whered to, each house must correspond with the me opposito tu it. to prevent wo may suppose, the one staring the of her out of eommemince, so that if the buiker of one side has disphaved any remarkahly bul taste (ne natommon occurrence), the builider of the other, though a man of superior jurlgment. has been whigen to initate him. As it is, the etlect when landing is trond, for the honses are high, with gaily painterl amd gilt Baleonies; a handsome stone fountain aghinst the gathe end of a house to the right, and reaching to the root, lirst meetine one's siofht. Had the suspminumbrigg been carmal moross the river from the fort of this street, as was tirst intemed, it would hawe Isena sight of which the people of' Operto might have been justly promd. As it is, the brilge is phaced eompletely out of the way, with a wretehed I! Moach at each encl. This finult was committed to take advantare of the solid rorks on each side, in which to tix the chanins, and because the river is there a few feet narower. It was ereeted by a Frouch agginerr, aml belongy to a rompany. liy its band position a large sum is lost, occasioneal by the number of pursons who cross the liver in buats who would otherwise have gene an fout.
The icle: of muking the opposite honses match, originated, it is said, with the Manquis of Pombal, who erdere several streets to be built, and phanned many others, of which the monuments remained for many years in the shape of very magnificent door-ways and lower window-fiames of highly carved stone, some covered with the humble rool of a eottage, and others vevitur ats walls to gardens. Of liate yeary, as the city bats incratsed in wealth, most of thene buildings bave been conmpted. Granite being the foundation on whieh the city stands, every editice has the window and loor-trames of well-carved stone, and is most substentially luilt: c.en the lowest cottage being fometel to embure for ages.

In all parts of the city are fountains, generally fonmed alter. Moorish models, in what I eall the athespur style. Some are built under nrebes, and unainst walls, as are to le seen in Italy-but all have mane carved work abont them, and are, at all events, far mow clegant and ornamentill to a eity than is the Ahgate [man], par exrmple! At every hour of the day they are surroumded hy dallagos with thein waterhurrels, and girls, some with pitchers, to feteh water, and athers washins elothes. 'The mbabitants of all Warm climates dolight in "untains, and lavish the greatest enm on their construction; indeed, when walking the streets on a hot sultry day, it is truly delightin! to see the pure loright water bubbling forth, and ruming over the stone liasons or tanks in every dircetion.

At the top of the Rim Nova ile St. Jono, turning to our right, wo enter tho lium dias Flores, the best paved street, und containing the richest merchandise of any in the eity. It is principally inhabited by the geliwaiths and eloth-merclunts: the shopis of the litter are dingy-looking places, withont glazed windows, the light being udnitteel by two open door-ways, in front of which the bales of cloth uro piled up. The goldsmiths' shops are very attractive, being filled with the most benutiful ornaments of light filagree work in gold, very similat to those made in Genon of silver. Even tho richest slopss are of small size: the conmoner ornanents are hang up in glass cimen ou each side of the windows, to attinct the peasintry is they paws on a market-day, and the comoters are clegatly deconted with the more costly jowels, also in glass eases. Tho grohl used is without any alloy, nor can that so called toy English jowellers loe worked in the sume war. The lourtugnere look upon it as some base motal, ninworthy of the mane of goll. Their precious stonesand jewels are also very heantifnl, ant are sold at a much lower price than is piad for inferion ones in Enghand.

At the end of this strect is the large and once wealthy convent of San hentu das Ereiras, the Nuns' Qonvent of St. lionos. A few mun mbanced in yeans still rexide tinere, wher employ their tine, and gain a livelihood, ly making sweotmeats and ormamenting boxes of dried fruit, which they sell chiefly to the English merehants. A flight of steps leads to a conrt-yard in front, through which is the principal entrance. It is a ligh white-washed editiee, full of clesely harred windows, whence in dins of yore many it fair face lans gazed forth with a hopeless, wistful lonk, longing to escape. The chatel is ont one side, amd hehime it is a sechuded giarden, of which the old wall of the city forms one barrier.

Turning to the left for a fow yarls, wo enter the Praca de Dom l'edro, at the font of two of the widest and gavest streets, the Caleadia dos Clerigos and the Hua le Sant Antonio, which fiee each other, rising ?n two steep hills. At the smmuit of the tirst is the churd and lofty tower of that name, of which I have before spoken, and at the top of the Fina de Sant Antonio is the Church of Sant Melefonso. The shops in these streets are ehiefly those of the linen-drapers, mercers, French lair-entters and milliners, and of French lijonterie. Here ate to be found the trunk and saddle-makers, and the manufactorios of hats, of which great numbers are exported to the linazils.

The people of each trinde eongregate very much tugether. The groenrs live in the Rua Novit de San Jowo, the shomakers chiefly in tho Bello Monte, the ironmongers in a dark, narrow, winding street, that of Sinta Anna, the tinmen in one equally dirty and obscure by themselves, the shops of the soco-makers are tounl in nunubers together. The soco is the wrooden shoe worn by all the lower orders: the sole is formed of orange-woud with a high heel, the upler part, generally of some bright lenther, is shaped like a slipper. As the wearer rums along the pavement they make a loud chattering noise, ind mo is sumgrised that they can be kopt on the tont: a novice attempting to walk in them will mast assuredly kick them ofl' at the tirst step he makno.

But to return to the shopkeprels. Unilise most other shopmen, they "ppear to he utterly careless whether they sell or not, throwing about their grools without seeming to know even the prices; genemally asking at first more than they will take, and inded being pertectly ignomint of the illustrions Nam Slick's of dealing in 'sol't sawider.' I have tremuently wered $n$ shop with the inteution of purehasing some article, and luve quitted it without getting what I repuired, merely from the peoplo not chooning to take the trouble to search for it, flthough 1 have limilno doubt that the ahop contained that, or something which would have answered my purpose. 'l'hey aw both in manners und nyparance the most disagreenble elass of the inhahitants of the city, ret even they at times are polite and attentive to a stranger. They are also alsurdly prond, and expect to be nddressed by the title of "O Senher"-as, "The gentleman will have the goodness to show me a pair of gloves." These remniks refer more to the shopmen, frequently raw lads from the comatry, than to the masters; though there is abundance of room for improvement in them nlso.
There are seven or eight large open spaces in the city rightly called Pracas, to which we in England should give the name of squares; though as few of them are built with much mathematieal preeision, they eannot lay clain to the latter uppellation. The largest is the Praca de St. Ovidio, one of the highest parts of the eity, whence there is n fine vicw ; the air also is execssiveiy pure and healthy: On one side stand the principal barracks, a fine building, eapnble of containing three thonsand men, the space in front serving as their excrcise ground : here also all grand reviews are held. On nunther side is the honse of the Visconde de Beira, with some pretty gardeus before it, which he throws open to the public every Sundny in summer. Behind the barraeks is the handsome chureh of Nossa Senlora da lapa, containing the heart of Dom Pedro; a broad well-paved space being in front, and a fine flight of steps leading to it. Near the ehureh is also a beiutiful terrace cut in the side of the hill, planted the exchange at oporto.

with trees, nud ornamented with n balustrade and stone seats. The view hence over the city, river, and ueighbouring country, eovered with pine-groves, fichls, and hametets-the isolated rocky height of St. Jeans to the right, and the castle and town of St. Joao da Foz in front, with the broml extent of the Atlantic beyond -is very beautiful. The ligh road to Braga passes here, and it is by far the best appronch to the city.
The next praca in size is the Cordoaria, or rope-
..lk, so called from being exclusively appropriated to the use of the rope-makers, who ply their trade across it. It was formerly surrounded by noble trees, three only of which now remain, the others having been ent down during the siege to form bnlustrades for the trenches; but it has ngain been planted with young ones. In every direction appent fine building, but so irregulaly placed thut their effeet is lost. On oue silo is the prison, a hundsome edifice of dark stoneoppowite is a college, iucomplete, but already ocenpied as a school of medicine, and behind it is the Foundling Hospital. In one corner is the lofty tower of the Clerigos, or of the Priests, and close to it the new market-place, in eonstructing which the useful has deeiledly been more consulted than the ornamental. (See 1. 217.) On the other side, townds the sea, is the fish-market, on the side of the hill, so that the roof nlone is seen. (See p. 225.) Near it is the small pretty church of the Anjo; und in another corncr the grand hospital, by far the finest edifice in the city, but much of it is hid from viow;
the ground sloping down to it, and a row of houses of the highest parts of view ; the air also is On one side stand the ig, eapable of coutaince in front serving as , all grand reviews are louse of the Visconde ens before it, which he Sunday in summer. lsome church of Nossa heart of Dom Pedro; in front, and a fine ear the ehurch is also le of the hill, planted fine buildings, but so set is lost. On one lifice of dark stoneit already occupied as $l$ it is the Foundling tower of the Clerigos, new market-place, in decidedly been more See p. 217.) On tho th-market, on the side s seen. (See p. 225.) 4 of tho Anjo; and al, by far the finest is hid from view ; nd a row of houses standing in front om a more devated sitc. The other sides of the Curloaria are filled with the houses of the rope-mikers, and by a number of miserable shels, which are locing grudually pulled down. If, however, the rope-walk were removed, as proposed, to a more proper position on the lanks of the river, this would be a very fit place for pmblie gartens; being in a central position, anit the approaches to it easily made grood. Jnst below the Cordonria is a very pretty spot for a pullic walk, called the Virtules-a terrace on the summit of a wall built up to a great height from a valley; but it is of small extent. It is ormamented with rows of lime trees, which in spring emit in most delicions ollour, and has stome seats along it, reposing on which ome may enjoy a view of the shipping crowd iug near the quays below, the shrubs of Nacarellos, the whole length of the river, with its rugted eliffs and slatlow bays, to the very mouth, the custlo of St. Joao, and the bright blue glittering sea beyond. Yet lovely as it is, from being open to the rond, few people except those living in the inmediate vicinity ever resort thither.

Leaving the Cordoaria, we descend the broad street called the Calcadia das Clerigos, and reach the square now called the Praca de Dom Pedro; but it has changed names with each revolution in the form of government. On one side is the Casa da Cumazia, or town-hall, exlibiting a specimen of the taste of the Cumaristas; it luing painted on the outside a bright blue and yellow. Some of the rooms are of considerable size, but as a building its pretensions to beanty are not very great. 'The side next is occupied entirely with the chureh and convent of the Cougregalos, now used partly as a tobaceo-manufactory, and part fitted up for private lomses. On the other side are dwelling houses and shops, and in one corner appents the old city wall. The entre space is perfectly level, and is surrounded by stono pillars, and an iron railing, with trees plantel on cach side, forming a neat and pretty spuare. This was formerly the place of cxecution, and here the ten constitutional judges who had formed the Provisionary Government wore put to death by Dom Miguel when he usurped the crown-two others who were respited being compelled to witness the death of their frieuds. So little did the unfortunate men believe in their dinwel, that though they might have escaped from prison they refused to do so.
Ascending the broal but somewhat steep street of St. Autonio, to the right of which, between gajs in the limses, is seen the old wall of the city, we reach the I'raca de Batalla, where, at one end, stands the church of'st. Ildefonso, aud, at the other, the Italian Oper:a house, a large pile linving not the slightest claim to uchitectural beauty, being a bigh oblong edifice, with pink walls, and crowded with windows
There are several large houses here, the principal one boing that of the Condessia de Pangin and Senhor Manoel Guedes her husband. This is tho mont irregular praca in Oporto: all the buildings appear to have started forward eager to reach the centre, but finding the ground too rough for their alvance, had remained twisted and turned in every possible diirection. At the cond of the street leading from hence is the Praca de Sin Luaro, the only one laid out in public gardens. They tre surrounded with stone-work and a handsome iron railing : the flower beds are in the French style, with mumerous seats, and a large circular bason with jet Ceau in the eentre: altogether a very pretty spot, each year improving as the trees grow up, and the resort ou it smmer evening of many respectable people; sentries being stationel at the gites. to pres int thave who are not so from entering. Two entire sides of the praca are formed by convents; one, the numery of Sant Lazaro, is still inhabited by a tew of ite fumer inmates: it contains also an establishment for young ladies who are left orphans and have no friends with whon tor reside. The other is now eonvertel into a puldic library and a picture gallery. A little way luyond it are some gardens, established by an Italian, the firmor impresario of the Italian Upera IIonse. He lans given the name of Tivoli to them. They are completely in the French tiste, enntaining a Montagne Russe, rouncl:bonts, swings, a shonting gallery, and other mems of anmsement: but are mot much patronised loy the fashiomables of Oporto society.

Turning down a narrow lane from the Batalha, we reach the beantifin but much-neglected wallk of the Fontainhas, ruming along the very edge of the clitls above the river. Few citics are alle to boant of a move lovely vinw than that seen from it. In the depths below, the dark-shining strean glides rapilly along, spmuned on the right ly the graceful iron suxpension brilge, above which, crowning rugged clitfs on the north side, appear the mient walls and towers of the city; and on the opposite side, on the summit of yet higher rocks, the cireular domerrooted church and "onvent of the Serra, now filling into decay. Berond, again, stretcling along the shore and up the hill, is seen the wide extending town of Villa Nova. Tu, the lett, between the high and bnrwen clitfs, we catel a glimpse of green and smiling lmuks covered with trees, :and the turrets of the picturesque palice of the Freixo in the distance. Here and there, ton, below $n $ a$ tiny cottage is seen on some jutting pint, or the white sails of a windmill-vines and shrubs growing mong the litoken crags, and many a sparkling streaun darting down over the moss.grown rocks. At the end of the walk, to the east, is a ruinell building called the Sominary, the first post the British gained at the passage of the Douro. A large spinee near it, formerly the gardens of the lishop's quinto, is now converted into a public cemetery -one of the most important improvements made of late years in Oporto.

Besides the pracas or largos I have mentioned, there are, close to the Cordoaria, those of the Ferradores and the Carmo, in whioh is the most frequented church in Oporto. 'The larrack of the mumicipal guard is in the convent to whieh the church formerly belongerl. In the former are a mumber of wine shops, and also the shops of the makers of deal boxes, chairs and tallesthe highest-pricel costing half a crown: they are formed of the pine of the conntry, fastencl together hy wooden pess, bat aro strong and serviceable. In the centre of the Carmo is the corn market, where the dealers in corn sit on the market days, hefore movable stalls, with trays, on which their samples are displiyyed, while their earts and cattle are collected around. Out of the Ferralores runs it long street, called the Celofeita, in which are several good honses, and from it numerous other new, well-paved streets branch off to the north, all the houses of which bave gardens: they may be considered the outskirts of the city. There are also several other pracas, the names of which I forget.

I must not, however, omit to mention a large open space, within the barriers to the west of the city, called frow up，and the re． v respectable peopli； tes．to prownit those wo entire sides of the one，the nunnery of a tiew of its furmer blishment fin young we no firiends with ow eonverted into a A little way hevoud on Italian，the former onse．He las given y are completely in htagne Russe，roumil－ and other means of patronised by the rom the Bitalha，we glecterl walk of the ：edge of the cliffs able to boant of a mit．In the depthis fides rapilly along， eful iron suspension ngged clifts on the sand towers of the the summit of yet fed chureh ：mul con－ to decay．Bryonil， and up the hill，is rilla Nova．＇Tut the n cliffs，we catch a covered with trees， alace of the Freixo too，below us a tiny it，or the white stils growing mong the lag strean darting At the rmel of the ng ealled the Sumi－ il at the passage of t，formerly the gat－ t converter into a mportant improve－ re mentionel，there the Ferradoces and quented chareh in pal guarl is in the ily belonged．In hops，and als，the lanirs and tables－ crown：they are fastened togrether d serviceable．In market，where the ys，before movable ples are displayed， tetl around．Out t，called the Calo－ uses，and from it ets branch off to ve gardens：they the city．There ames of which I tion a large open
the Largo do Torre da Marea，on the sumant of some diff overhanging the river，a roud rumning down at their base，It takes its name from it matrk which firmerly stood there for the entrance of vessels into the river，shaped like the gable end of a church with a lage arched window in it．The building was knocked dum by the cannon－balls from an opposite battery during the siegt of $U_{\text {ponto，and }}$ the materials were camperl oft to arect a hew mark in a more conveniont pasition，newrer the montle of the river．On ene side is a group of beantiful＇puintas，one below the other， nearly to the water＇s elge ；on the other，some bartucks for soldiers；indeal，this space is often used as their exercise－gronnd．Both up and down the viver the views are lovely ：to tho wost between the clife the entrance to the river is seen，with the castle of Nt，Jouo dar Foz on one side of it，and a loug sand－lank on the wher． between which the richly linden bark＇s dach bollly on from the wild wares of the ocean into the tranuual waters of the Douro．Tho tho cast the city is seen rising fiom the stream．lunio abowe home，many a church steophe elevatinu its heal among them，till ill are crownex by the clogitht tower of thic Cleviros．On Whe oplosite side is the now shatered，but pieturesput？ wurent of the serma the wide－smonling town of Sillia Nova extending in the form of a theatre no the hitl，while fir beyond are sedn ratige abowo range of mantain－clana，foth more blue and indistinct，till lost in listance．＇The river，takius at shat hemd some way higher up，grives the witer from henee the ：ty－ parance of some lamb－lockerl arm of the seat，increaninis its pieturesque beraty，Nemrly＂Iposite is the site of thenncient Calle，the hill on which it steral now erowned lyarmandignal－tower，and directly in forme the elatrel of St．Antonio，belonging to a supprased convent， Whase once pieturesulus grolens，fill of stathe aml Cuntains，are now roned mat aml detroyed．Wh the imerside of this beautiful spat is at fow ot ility loblars： bat 1 have heard it propmed to pall them down，and to build in their stead it tho erescent，such is wenn＇m sume of the hejishts an which Bath and Clition stanl． stoald such it phat ever to tollowed att，theremidenees here will be the mont hesirables in tometo fore erem in the calment day of smmmer the sea－hruze seldum tails （1）reath this spot．Behind it is une of the liurgest Anses in the eity，the rasidence of the（inude＇Terrent ＂tue comer：Near it is alsu another firge builinge，
 fices），where the Einueror bom Pedro towk up his ahode during the siage，and which sas suceessivoly ocepiad loy Marshal sumbtand Lord Wellington duriug the E＇eninsular Wins．＇This is the most airy and clemest part of the rity，and in this neighboultome the greater number of English reside．Ther of late years sevenal straight，level，and broud streets lave been opened，and a number of gesil．homses have pruig＂l－inded a variety of imporements are still going onl． for it considerable distance en math side of the primeipal roads；the honses being chietly small，but here and there a few of good size thpear．The chicf high roads are those of Viana，still lett in the ohl style of hatuess； to bragia，a fine bronl matadamized road；to Gini－ naracus，also a fine new romal to Anaranter，a colerable paved ruad for some distanes and to Vinlongn near the fiver，partly macadamized and partly pived－then across the river，fand throush Villa Nova to the moth towards Lishom，a tiae rond is progressing lapidly，

It may justly he suid，that in comparison with most other cities of the Peninsula，the stroets on Oporto aro light，clean anl airy，with the exemption of the most ancient，which run along the river within the wall， and thes which survourl the height on which stames the 施，心 cathedral，mul om which hill there is no hombt the first foumbations of the city were laid．These streets are，howerer，well worthy of an exphoring visit to those who have any thate for intiquarian dexcareh，as，though narow，dade and windins，the houses are lofty，of tine hewn stone，now hatekened hy time，and entain many chrious opecimens of that claborate carvinte with which one ancentors dedighted to adorn their donaciles． Inore，as in the old town of Elinburgh，many of the ancient fimm ；posess hutusions，buw mostly ahnu－ iloned fin arre airy situations，or inhatited only cluring their short visits to this the northern metro－ jwlis of I＇urtergal．
One of the must foreign－looking（it 1 may ho so nllowed tu call it）of the streets of Oporto，is the Ruia das Hhrtas，which is pated entirely aeross with litroo sumoth thag stones，and is of great length，extomling ＂川 to the Campu dosit．Ovitio．Like the streets in many Spanisla towns，it has no baised trottoirs：the lonses are hish，with several rows of projecting bateonies，and so narrow a space between，that people in them enn comsembatly eary on a converiation acress the strect．When on the day of some wrand promession，crowied with well－4｜rcsed haties，and hang with varims colomme flats and clothen，the promnd boing strewed with towers，the athet is exeessibely pleasing．Few of the houses in Oporto are without one or more rows of balconites，suphorted by brackets of carved stons，ami haviut ion rating panted and wilt，whell give them a very gaty ulpmance．

VI．

Socrety in worto－lssembly Roobs－the lonttgitese

 The fead－plekne，oh lisit of Cundorence．
Frw persons are nore yutalifed ly long residence me cirly impressions than Mr．Kingston to decribe the soelety in Oproto，ami yet he hinself prochins it to be in lelicate task；for，is he justly remarkin，jnime may be ronsidered as ilattery，and censure wonk be conderuned as ingratitate towiorls thase trom whom one has macived enntant attention and kindness．

Lord l＇orbester oberwe：Were I askad in what ennutry society hatd attaned its most polished form，I shondi say in l＇ortugal．＇This；perfection of manuer is pribites mont ippreciated ly an Euglishman，when secan in that portion of the aristucratie elass which has idopedel in minom prints the refinements of the first l：uropenn socinty．and hats retained the spinit，while it hats in some degree tholped the exaggetated eeremonial ul the ahd l＇ortugnese courtess．Portugucse proliteness is chelishtful，because it is by 10 means jurely intificial， but flows in agreat metsute fom a natural kindliness of tecling．A lurtuguese has a real rephranence to wount the feclings of the homblest indiridnal，and selulunsly avoils any expression which can pussibly have that elleee；mot maly beease it is ill－bred，bat because the ate of intlicting pain on another is ilisagree－ able to hinuselt：A Portuguese possessed of strong sareastic talent will seldom direct it. however veiled, against any individual present, and will use the utmost circumbention in conveying an umpleasant truth.

The restless fecling so often preceptible in English society hardly exists in Portugal : thero are no ardent aspirations after fashion; there is little prepared wit, and no one talks for the mere purperse of producing an effect, but simply beenuse his untural taste leads him to take an active part in conversation. In spite of mamers alparently artificial, society is more unuffected in Portugal than superficial nbservers would at first suppose.

Spenking of the finir Portuguese, lis lordship, ohserves : They do not possess, to the same extent the heady passions and romantic feelings of their beantiml neighbours; but they are softer, more tractable, and equally affectionate. Certainly, with somo few exeeptions, they are not highly edurated; they feel little interest on general subjects, and consequently have little genemal conversation. A stranger may it finst draw an unfavourable inference as to their natural powers, because he lins few sulyjects in common with them; but when onee received into their eircle, neguanted with their frien!s. and initiated in the little intrigues that are constantly playing along the surfice of society, he heoomes delighted with their liveliness, wit, and ready perception of character: The hest society in England is perhaps the best in the womld, because it comhines civilisation of manner with cultivation of minul; but withont refercnee to inteliectual culture, the last finish of polished hreeding distinguishes perhups in a still greater degree the higher ordens of Portugal.

With the above cobervatims of that highly-talented nud amiable nolleman, an able discriminator too of character, I, says Mr. Kingstem, most cordially agree. In one reesject he would find an improvement. E.lucation, now widely exteuding among all chasses, hats mot bew neglectel by the fair and youm tidalguia. Dimy with whom I am acepainted possess all the usmal accomplindments of our own fair cruntrywomen; they are well rad on many subjects, und speak hoth Frencis and Juglish with facility; somu also Italian. In a stranger they are as reserved as Englishwomen ernwrally ire, if not more so; and the iflea of displayins their knowldge never entering their heads, a s isitom to the country may remuin a considerable time, and depart, muder the impression that they lo, not posess it. Many English residents not mixing in the more select circles of their suciety, have been mald to fiom n correct opinion on the sulject; indeed, I know of few witers on the comitry who havo cenjeyed opportunitics of observing the highor classes correctly. The known character and rank of Lord Porchester at once gave him the entrée into the best society, aml he therefere hats described the nobility of Portugal in true nud very plensing colours. With few exceptions, thi P'ortuguese gentlemen of the present lay, whatever may be thair rank or fortune, are pinssessed of an cleganit education, thongh their classieal attuinments racly equal thuse which our universities atlord.

There are hut trifling ditlerences in the style of goneral society of the present day throughout alit the large cities of Europe, particularly where, as in Purtugsal, the aristocratical privileges,-those barriers which served to keep the different elasses asmoder,--have been completely overthrown. At the harge laills in Oporto all runks of gentle birth and clucation meet on epual terms ; the duughters of the highest noble giving their lunds in the dance to any gentleman, whatever may be his linenge, who elaims the honour, without waiting for the formal introduction of the laty of the house, or the master of the ceremonies. There are at Oporto two assembly-rooms, which the higher classess frequeut, being invited lyy the respective members of tho association to which the rooms belong. The oldest is the British Association, commonly called the Euglish Factory House, established some fitty years ago ly twelve or rather more of the principnl British meschmuts of the city. The bill-room is of most elegant proportions, with a drawing-room and supper-rooms on ench side; and I have seen it crowded with a brilliant ansemblage of rauk and beauty, such an few other esta. blishments of a similar nuture can boast of. Many royal guests have honoured it by their presence ; halls having been given by the members to tho Emperor Dom Pedro, the young king of Portugal, the young Prinee de Lippe, Lord Beresford, nul many other personages of distinction who have visited Oporto. I mention these nimper merely to shew the style of the suciety in there assemblies. At one time the fidalgos only, with few es. eeptions, were invited there, including the chier mill. tary and civil nutherities in the phace, with their ti. milics. Now, huwever, it would lo impossible to kop up such a distinction, and consequently all respectalle families, who mix in the general society of tho place, ure in tum invited.
That next establinded was the $A^{z^{-}} \quad$ a Portuens, or $O_{\text {prirto }}$ Assembly Roms. Livery an of what. ever mation is eligible to become in by hallot; most of the principal people in the phace belomgina to it. It is a regular chu-honse, with the aldition of a very hamsome lall-rom, hather largur than hat of the Factory. Honse, where six halls are given during the wiuter, linlies only luing invited; no went main who does nut liolong to the club heing admitted, uates he is a stranger: The greater number of the fidalguia frequent them, buel the music and refreshments ars yery gont. Thereare also several large prate homss in which balls are given, lut fir less requently than ficmerly.
It is lowerer on their own estates in the commer: summuled ly their relations and depudents, that the Portugnese ubbility are seen to the greatest :alsantage; and if a strmager is pleasul with their demanmme when mecting them in tha society of a city, he will be douldy sio (on suth wecasions. In the comitry that houses are יymen hearly every evening for the reeption of thair neighouring acquantance, who there mee and amume themselves mach in the same way that Dancing, of course, whero there are young pople, firms one of the princijal sources of amusement. Thuy lave a variety of games, such ns French blimiman'shuff, cross quentions and crooked answers, and one in which a person gives a line, and each of tho rost of the party mast adil mother rhyming to it. Then there are fiew young ladies who ion not play on the piant-gencrally very well. Most of them, us well as many gentlemen, tonch the guitar, with which they aceompany their voices in their exquisite modinhas, and they will frequently sit romud in a cirche, each of the party following the other, singing impreviso verses. Thure is also scarcely a neighourhood without its pout, who recites his verses on all great ocensions, without the slightest degree of mauvaise honte; and if thest noble giving their eman, whatever may he onr, without waiting for arly of the house, or the lere are at Oporto twe igher classes frequent, members of the asso. ng. The oldest is the y called the English ne tifty years ago by principal British murom is of most elegint in and supper-rooms on rowiled with a brilliant such as few other estaa boast of. Many royal presence ; lalls having e Emperor Dom Pedro, young Prince de Lijり", ersonages ot listinetion mention these manes society in these assethos only, with fow ex. louling the chict mili. e phace, with their firbe impessible to kenp quently all respectille I rociety of the place, a Portuers. an of what. ly ballor; a the plave belomgin; se, with the addition ather larger thate that balls aregived lumb wited ; wo prath man being admitterl, manes maber of the tidalguia mul refreshaneats aro al large private houses $r$ less frequently than tates in the romury I lepernelentes, thist this thes greatent mbim. with their dememnur ety of a eity, he will In tho conntry their imes tor the reveption nee, who there neme tho sime wiy that o with more vivacity. e are young prople, arces of amusement. ch as French blinetrooked maswers, anl and each of the rest hyming to it. Then do not play on the t of them, is well as 11; with which they exquisite motinhas, 1 in a cirve, eaeh of ing improviso verses. murhool without its all great oceasions, uvaisc honte ; and if there are two or more present, they will frequently enter into au amicuble contest tor superiority, like the bards of old. 'Ihe Portugneso lingnage is admiralily adapted, as well for temelermel pathetie (ot' which there exist as beautiful specimens as any language can pro. duce) as ter comio and satirical poatry, in which the people certainly excel; and on the oceusions of which I speak, much ammsement is afforded by the poets reeitiug verses of tho lintter style; for though they will generally mise a good-natured laugh against some of the party present, they take care never to anke use of expressions which can offent.

A
As in most continental comntries, it is much the custem for people to visit ench other in their hoxes at the Ojern-a very agrecalle way of passing the time between the acts, anil during the ladlet; thougl, they love musie ton well not to attem to the singing while that is going forward.
From what I lave sail, it may justly he supprosed that the best society in I'ortugal is most agrecallo and polished ; nor can even a stranger fail to be ploased with it. Of the second dass I know less, thonghi thero are two other assemhlyrionms in chab-honses, besides those I have mentioned, to which a great number of members belous, whero large halle are constantly given; one called the Civilizalom, the other Recreative. Many of the young ladies whose families frepuent them aro possessid of considemble beaty ; and though I cannot say how tar their mental elucation may lave been attended to, they all danen remarkably well, and most of then are very fair musicians: indeed, there is suatrely a house of any resprectability in Oporto which does not boist of in pianoforte. I spoak of the class of suciety-is vary large one too-whose members are not precisely the most wealthy merchants, wan who are yet thove trademmen or artisins-such as rich shopkecpurs, cherks in public otlices, brokers, Sc. In dress they sie with the higher orlem; the halies universally now appearing in Parisian costmmes, as do the men; a slight ditiorence only in the style heing dineromble between them and the higher orilers, and the men apparing with a greater profision of oily loeks and gold chains, according to the custom ot le joune France.

The only time dalies now wear the mintilla is when they go to mass, or mother to contession; on which occasions it is not the ctipuette for uny of their gentlemen acpuaintance to notice them, as they ure supposed to le incomita; even tlat constom is gratually going into tisuse, and I lielievo many limlies dor not even possess this articlo of dress. The richer fembles wear a mantilla of thick black silk; it eonsists of a jeetticont and a long hood with a triangular piece of pasteboard at the top bent over the heml. It is theu kept in front by tho hands of the wearer, nul is fur from an angraceful costume. The lower orders wear it made of a sort of cimlet. In a few years it will prohably entirely disaplear; for little girls even of tho lower ranks are invariably dressed in bonnets, though their mothers adhere to their whe style ut dress. The third class of the social bouly have also their peeuline anmsements; the prineipal of which is a visit on a loliday to some neighbonring village, where there is a rounarin, a festa or merry-making. (For an illustration of a romaria see that of the Festival del Pilar, given at jage 201.) A romarin is it fete held in honom of some saint, generully in an open spaco before the village church. Here booths and stalls are erected for the nale of fried fish, sweet eakes, and prints of the suint, with the latter of which the visitors adorn their hats on their retinn lione. The people from the neighlominod for several miles round sasemble in their gayent costumes, the young men with their lowerowned, broad-brimined hats, set jauntingly on one side, their jackets thrown over one shoulder to exhibit their bright-colunred waistcoats and white shirt-sleeves, most of them carrying their threestringed guitars in their hands; the yonag womeu in a far greater variety of dress-some with a white handkerehief thrown over thu hend, and a gay ono over the neek, with or without nny cloak; vthers weuring low-crowned broalbrimmed hats, from beneath which the most coquettish eork-screw ringlets appear. Then again others have high-crowned jonderous black hats, bedecked with flowers and ribands, and a bright shawl worn on the sloulders. Inat the most magnificent of all are the tirmers' wives, with the last-mentioned style of hat, and a blue riding habit, their neeks literally covered with gold chains, aul large goll rings of filagree work pendant from their ears. They generally arrive on the back of a mule, donkey, or horse, their lords tullowing on one of those mimals behind them; nor can the noblest lady in the land lonk more proud than they, as thoy retmon, havind their hats adorned with a print of the saint, and well filled with bacalhao, sweetmeats, and wine. The older men wear loug blue coats, carrying $n$ thin stick of considerable length in their hanils. Then come tho citizens-the wife with a bonnet of a fur firm fashionable shape : for want of style a profusion of thowers makes amends - a bright shawl covering all other defects-either on toot, or on a packsiaddle; the husband sometimes, it they are not blessed with ollspring, on a small donkey, or else carrying, with paternal solicitude, his last infint in his arms, and lending one or two other little eherubs by the hands; the mother and the maid-servant accompanied by a like momber each. The people on these occasions perform a small quantity of praying, a good deal of eating aull lrinking, and a vast quantity of danciug and singing: lat although nomberless wine-casks are brought to the ground in carts, drunkenuess is very rare; nor are there any of those quarrels or disorders which take place on similar occasions in most other countries. Tho dances consist (the partners first facing each other) in pertorming the figure of eight to a slow tune, with sundry hops and skips, but withont much spinit; their coantemanees generally wearing a grave expressionexeept perhaps when a witty observation is made by onf of the beans, on which the girls will elap their hands, and give way to a luarty shriek of langhter, uppirently almust uncontrollable. The castanets are peculiarly Spanish, I believe; at all events, I have never seen them used in Portugal. The gnitar is the instrument generally used, accompanied by the voices of the dancers, exerpt on grand festas, when large bands of musicians attend.

It is highly amusing to accompany a harge party of people returning tiom a romaria, in dozen or more men walking together with their gnitars, or rather violas, in their hands, with which they aceompany their voices, as one after the other they give torth extemporury pectical effusions; sometimes pathetie, and at others jocose, as their spinits incline theu; the women answering them in return. There is a monotony in their airs, which may at length fatigue the ear, but it is extraorlinary what beantifil images these rustic poets will inwent; mature-the grat mater-being their best instruetor. The bright akies ot day, and glitering stars of might, the pure sparkling atmosplere of their delicious clime, thiriv green firtile vales, their pietnresque mometins, their chear stremm, mat, more than all, their dark-ryed maide, the gallant sons of Lasitamia, and their livo of liberty, are in their tums the sulyeets of their muse. 1 have heast the same style of singing in Germany, and it must be confessed that the peasantry of that comity are far mone seientitic musicims, thangh I doult their lwing such gool poets.

In my walks I have frequently stopped at the door of a cutage, where a lage party have hem ansembled. amusing themselves with musie ant daming. 'The danes I have then seem performed have heed bery simila to quadriles, with all the gravity and decomm to be seen in mure brilliant assomblies: and I must to the preple the justice to siy, that 1 have newer sem in their behavinur mything at which the most fistidions persom combld eavil-except suld as would deprive the lmmble peasant of all light and innocent amusements suited to their tiste.

Fron dancing wr mavally turn to the sivin in which courthips atre arried an in lombugal. Hewe the gentlenan sidem enjors the sanve eqpormation of paying hin addreses to lif mistress an in Lugtame: but that lovematches are wot common, hat the :urrangements are more frequently mate hy the parats.
 of: With regat to the higher ranks, there is but litte difference, if inderel my, with the chatum on our own country.

The courtship condmade the matringe exomony takes plate, among the lower orkers in the parish clumen. The prises litematly ties the hame of the bethe he puts on the ring. De reads the wervion in Latin, the spectators all the time not thinking it neres. sary tu act with any great decorm, and as sonn ats it is aser they sulute the bride and britugrom with showers of hombuns, before even they call get out of the charel. I remember on we oreasion sering the the eve greatly to the ammement whently of atl present. The higher orders are maried in the private chapels belonging to their homser, tho ceremeny lowing the satbe ats in other catholic combtries; a ball atorwarls taking place at the homse of one of the garts. at which the bewlemartied conple are invarialy premet.

They freprently live on for sam in the hane either of the lady's me gentlemanes parents, till hair bumily increasing owe muld they sed wother home, thongh mand often till it heennes their nwn.

Christenings being frepuenty consegnent on mimrimen, it mext oreurs to me to deserilue them. Thuse I have sem have taku phace in private chands. I hand been replustend to stand grodtather to the chilh. The rebeste first asstmblel in the dawing-venn, when retrehments were handed romad, and we then repaited to the chapel, where each pretron was presentime with a long was tapere, with which in our landen we stomed ronilit the fint on the left side of the entranes. There wis only one wodhather and one whmothers 'they stowd dowe to the priese, whe, halited in tich vesibments, took the infint in his ams, mointing ite lips and cres with oil, and afterwaris made the sigh of the eross with water on it brow. A few prayers innickly hurvied over in Latill completed the cercmony, whe: we gave our tapurs to a scrant, and took on leare One important thing may he noterl, that peophe ean *arrely be called higoted who will minit of Protestant sponsons, for it is at once ackmowelging them eqnaly gonsl Chrintians with themselves; and I know anny Protestant residents in lortugal who have sermal Catholic trolehididen. Perhins, however, the wor rigin Catholics wond not allow it.
'The' only church cerememy which is in l'ortugil performen in an impong namer is the burtal of the dead : all others are harried ower an fint an the prients cam get through the work. When a person of distinction dies, fee is hial wit in state on the following day in his chaped, which is lighted up by cmadlos. In the evening the soppe in earied in ma "han cotin to one of the principal churches, where it is flame heneath a bhack whet conerg trimmed with silver, a bier covered with the sames tithe attendant menamers line the chareh, with long waven tapers in their hand, while the hutialsorvice is read, and some music purformed-frequently very fine, thongh the thates no nat always ?lympriate to the gravity of the onconion The restin is then elosed, and the kee handed to the personl of highnst ramk prescut, or to the most 'ntimate firiend of the decensad. whose duty it is to hand it $t$, the nearest relation. 'The mouncers then acempany the collin to at cemetery near at hami. The same coloural canopy is usel fir matrons, hat tor mailens. it is always blue and siber, and for young chitiren of varions bay colums. The ramopies I speak of might be called temples, mavel for the aceasion in the center of the clureh: the deviees are degant, und the pitha beine ormanentel with silver wombl romal them, thes have a very hamdolue apmatane.

The lorthruese give the very pretieal mane of anjinhos, little angels, to yomg children when they dio: and emsidering that they are at onec trandated puratore, instomb of momming tor them, they wojer, patting on their gonest attire: thas at dhor tanmal bin mie alpuas in hilati, and the parents are cons gratulated insteni of combled with. I remember at went ap to congratulate him, lee shonk his heal, observing, "A father feeln the wame whatever may he his chilits age."

Heares have lately been intomeerl at Oporthe which were buch regnimed, as the ceneteries are all now on the untakirts of the eils. Thembinut the comutry it is ponhilited to hury the dead in churehns; a wise regulation, which fillowed elose upon that made in Bughand to the sume eflert. 'lhe pose think nuth of the way their chikdren are huried, and will make imy meritive to got the little compes decked out pails. Gne trempently merts a woman with a sumall blat cothon "pren on her hemb, and a dead elifh, tressed in silk mul tinset, with its cheeks paintel, to give it the mparame of hife, I like the idea which prompte this, for at the hast glanco the mother takis of it, belowo it is chased lim ever from her sight, it apmene to her eyes to reain all its hame, and whe thus thinks of it only us a lovely nugel nixnit to enter the remims of hiss.
 which takes place after the death of a person of mis finmily, is the risit of condelence to the nenest rela.

A nrald the sign of the A few prayers quickly it the cremony, whets , and took our lexte. looted, that peopli eas ill aumit of Protestant whedging them equalby s; and I know hany gat who havo sewral finwever, the mor which is in lortugal $r$ is the buial of the ir as fiast as the priest hara a person of dis. stater on the following fited 口и by emadios. ruied in :1n! iopern cotin $\therefore$ where it is plateris immerd with silver,. le atteminnt nourners tajurs in their lanas, l, and sombe music though the theres ar wity of the aremsion. hue key hamled to the p to the most intimatu aty it is to lumel it : Hors than aceompany at hantel. Ther wilas: roms, hat for maiden, tor roung childrem at ies 'I yrenk of' mipl! reeation it the remter equat, and the pitlar mid round them, they ry poetical name it chithern when thet we at once translatuel but passaza therugh othem, they wioget: lus at dhair thmotal is parents are corih. I remember at ilal, hut whon jexplis shook lis lomul. obwhatever may he his rulucerl at Oportor crometeries now all

Throughont the: - lend in chamblus ; ase יypur that mande (e) prose think muel ried, amd will make as deeleel wit gails: In sumall blue couthen , hressocl in silk mol re it the al!unathe pits this, for at the heforo it is chmed to her eves to links of it culy as hins of hlins. Enhatid coremons f a prormon of mis. o tho nemest rehi tions of the deenased, calloil the premmo. On entering the house the visitor timels the labl and passage dimly lighted, and following in selvant lue is conducted into a room hung with black, with a singes small taper burning in it. Croping his way up to where he suppuses the owners of the house arr sitting, he bows and makes some appopriate speed-they rise, and bow in retmon, and he then retires from them, and finds a place on the seats armuged romud the walls of the rome among the other guests, with whom he may converse in whispers. We ourgt to sit there till some fresh whests move, when he may rise, make his how, and dep:at. I have always fommil these visits the greatest tax upon my protentsis and I shomlil think that, having thas to sit up for three evenings, must be excesively irksome to prople whose feelings lave just been ngitated hy the lass of a near rebatibe. Thee enstom arose from the wore intimate friembs ralling to eonsole those who were in affliction, hat at prosent it is comside ed incmubent on all frosons thereme even their common acyunintaner. It has now hecone the prachice to issue noter of invitation to funemats, and rather combons compositions they are. The paper anrounded ly a homd hate edge, and a print of a tomb at the top, wets forth, that as lleaven has pleasad mereifally no take to itsclf dae illustrious Sonlow Jose Antonio Teixera Pinto Alvmenjia ildaverde, his wilow repmests you will do your nimost in paying respect to his puemory, and accompany his body to the grave. 'I'hese invitations mre tirepuently issued by the umbertakers, who sud round neoorling to the lists they luwe had on firmer ocensions, withont reference to your negnaintance with the limily of the devensed, bint of rourse in sweh ease it is net neressury to comply with them.

A relation of mine, commanaling in this distriet, was one miked to take chnege of the kiy of the collin of some person of conseduebee, who hat tied, and to deliver it to the widow. Gue of his whicers, bud by cmiosity, appromeled the eothonter it lind ben locked, and examining it, tomme that there wero mu hioges. The afterwaris mentionsel the ciremmstanes-"Oh," silid someborly prosent, langhing. "of cunse the sidristan woulh never think of burying the fine elothes whe which the corpere is covered, mul that hambeme cotlin: the clothes lor will sull for a goun pries, for they will surse to dork same of wor city dandies, amb the modin will prohathly comtatia the remains of tifty "hhr ithestrims ן"reonitg the"

Tha truth is, that in gremern the fordughes think little uf tho huiles of their friomis after shath: the last obsemuies are paid-they lawe dowe the ir dutyand it is yiven oxer to the achernember of kings and laggatis, the hungry wome. It is fir the soul, tho ather up their prayers, and "xpend sums in maseses, th free it foon purgitory. Ihis idea, or tieding, is, 1 eoneerive, mote peneral athong the sondhery mations of mure philosophient than the ohe which ramens perpio implements which will they think be regnimed in the of the marion ly his site: tho sumblatvians did so also; the Sasons satiset magnificent monnments to the dead, whom they filly hedieved upperved often in thote bonlily forms ;-cern in late perent thy the Jiow ians, Swedes, Danes, Germans, und Binglish, tulk and lhink fir more of the hody of the deceased than of the spirit. We spak o: our departed trimmb-the Portugnese insaribly exmess themselves regembing the sonls of the dent. They phondee cach othere to the alma of the diparted. I remember particularly a firiend of mine relating a ciremstance to that efliet. During it pescimo visit the linly of the honse rose from her seat, and pouring out a ofase of wine put it to her lips, saying in a solem" voice. "Let us drink to the sonl of my seceased brother $t$ " The effect $\therefore$ "t the sperel may be more easily couedived than deseribed.

VIt.

 Lapa-The chaverita-Th: ©Lmages.
Tubare were, before the sife of thent", no fewer than twonty fome monastic estiblishmenes in Opurtu atul Villat Xowa, thomph here they at lut time fomrishen in the rich lasuriane to which they attainal in other purts of the kiughom; whish may wive ons a toldable sher of the vast munher seathmod wer the romitry. Not a town, searcely a villige, wats withat one or more in the meighomrhond ; and now alfhough not vary many vears have pasad awis! sinee, in perfect seremity, they dremmed not of de struetion, where are thy? Strom and vast as were those prome mifices of the monlis, they are now musses of bhekened stones on desurted ruins, in whose wide linls, where onee resounded the ringious lategh of the jovial friar at his bountiful repast, how llit the wreeding owl and the goom-loving bat ; ant as to the former inhalitants-who ean tell what hats beomar of them? Whaterers and outensts, they starve where ones they feasted, or, lawhess brigand-. they phunder where, a short time sinee, is lowds they gave in charity, Muy lave long sinee sunk nudere the hirdships they weri driven to enthes, and others still subsist at the houses of the religioum and eharitable of their purty, thourl perhaps their hosts have themselves but a pittance on with to exint.

One of the hargest mul most werlthy convents was thut of tho Serm, su called frem latist sitmated on the sumbit of some latty clift' werlonking the tiver on the sonthern bank. It contaned twenty dieght momks, "mons of the order of stant Augustin, called Fomes C'ma's; mone lut mon of moble rank loming admitted into the hrotherhond. 'Their revemues amomed to nhout fone thomsme a-yenr, exclusive of many other gains. The monks :lymed in the streets always on makes, and their bohes, of the lest materials, wore dean and pit un with a certain nir whish shawed them to lo the elavical dambers of the plater. 'Thongh not esteremed for the hepth al their khowletere or extratertinars talents, their aine was to shime in convorsation, :anl they thelighted to indulga in wit and sativieal nhervattimis an the rest of the world.
 with a domed toof, hailt alter that of tho Komet Mamit di fismat, called the lemboth, and was tidhly urnemeve ed: 'I'he cloisters are of the same shates, thed the domatorides me bemath the root of a low haidine nt thwor benta, finl of awertesmelling pland: suld sam-

extent on arehes brought the purest water to it from the neighbouring monatains. Indecd, the noble friars enjoyod the sweets of life, with few of its toils : they eat, drauk, nad grew fat-so fitt that it was truly a pleasure to behold three or four of them walking arm-in-arm along one of their terratess-for their walks were made broal on purpose. One felt as one looked at their tine purtly and dignified figures, their robes well filled out like the bulging sail of a slijp, before a steally breeze, that the food they hal eaten and the wine they had drunken had truly benefited them, forming a pleasing contrast to those ungrateful wretches who feed hugely, and yet grow hot the fatter.
The year which give liberty to Portugal brought destruction to these honest gentiemen. Some time elapsed alter the entrance of Dom Pedro aud lis little army into Oporto, before, at the carnest recommendation of Colonel Hare and Colonel Baderek, the Serria was ocenpied as a military jost. Then, like the unlappy Boubdil departing from his beloved Allambra, the last friar sighed as he passed through its portalsno more to return! The trees of the surrounding woond were ruthlessly out down to form palisadoes, and to prevent the enemy having a place of shelter behind them, the walls were levelled, rough entrenchments took the place of the liroad terraces, the neat walks, the pouls and flower-beds. The once pencefil garden, the abole of contentment and ease, became the scene of the most desperate and bloody encounters, and now, a straggling rose-bush, or a broken column just peeping nbove the carth, alone remain-sad epitomes of the richly-cultivited and highly-ornamented quinta which formerly stood there!
The strenuous endeavours made by the Miguelite army to gain possession of the Scrrat, proved the im prottince thry antached to it as a nilitary post ; indeel hadd it not been oeenpied in the first place, or had they sueeeeded in eapturing it, the fall of the eity, completely overlooked as it is by this convent, must have heen iaevituble. It was nost galluntly defended ly Col. Torres and Mijor Bravo, commanding the Queen's Volunteers, uided, whenever any impurtant movenent took piace, by troops passed orer from the eity. During the first attack the enemy suceeeded in gaining the threshing floor in the farm-yard on the cant side of the eonvent, when a desperate clurge made ly the commandant and his lientemunt drovo them baek again. After that time ihe entrenelments were much incrensed in strength, nud were never ngain ponsed.
The sput is now one of ntter desolution null disorder. Tho ehurch was so showered on by shot and slacll, that not a part remains free from their marks ; a largo aperture ulpearing in the domed roof throngh which entered a shot from a gan of vast size yelept Joan Puolo. The walls are shattered, and the dormitories, the splacions nassuges, the refectories and Jcitchen, are exposed to the rains of heaven. The now roud to Lislon, now in active progress further on, is to lend round with a gradual nscent benrath the Scrru ; yul I hope then to see the site of that ruin oceupied lyy sume useful and ornamental elifice.
Most of the other convents in $O_{\text {porto }}$ are either pulleel down, or oceupied in some useful manner. Tho grenter purt of thut of Sim Domingon, the most nucient convent in the city, las been pulled down ; a fine brond street leading from tho foot of the Bello Monte, over the spot where it stnod, to the Rua Novi. The rrmainler is now employed ns a bank and stornhouse.
The friars were ono and nill stumel ndrocates of absolutisun ; wnd what male them still moro hated and feured was, that beneath their convent were, it is siil, vaults intended for a brach of the Inquisition, in institution they were nuxious to re-establish. The convent of Sun Doningos was founded in A. D. 1239, nuil col.tained forty friats.
$\Delta t$ the foot of the new street is the former convent of San Frmaciseo, founded 1241 : it contained eighty friars, who went larefooted, and employed themsclvos his heloved Alhambm, through its portalsthe surrounding wooul rm palisadoes, and to ace of shelter behind rough entrenchments races, the neat walks, once peaceful garden, ease, bccame the scene cucounters, anil now, -n column just peeping -sad epitomes of the amented quinta which ade by the Miguelite Serrat, proved the im military post ; indeel he first place, or had the fall of the city, ascent benenth the he site of that ruin nental editico.

1 Oporto are cither asefitl manues: The gon, the most miecient ulled down; a fime of the Bello Monts, he Run Nova. Tho ank and stordionse. taunch wlwontes of still moro lated and vent were, it is suid, the Inquisition, mu re-establishl. The inded in A. D. 1239,

the former cenvent

 it contained eighty mployed themselvesin legging, whereby wc may cstimate the serviee they were to socicty. It was reducen nlmost to ruins by fire during the siege, but in now undergoing extensivo alterations, to make an Exchange. The church of San Franciseo has been lately repairel, and service is performed in it. The roof is richly carved and covered with gill ing, so that it has a handsome nppeatance, and is well worthy of a vivit.
The convent of San Berto, inhahitell by Benclictine monks, torty in mumber, wats decitedly the handsomest in the city. It stamds next to the prison, and is now employed ana barrick, though mass is still pertormed with military music in the rhurch attichent to it. It is sainl to have lieen built on the site of the symagogue, dentroyed by the wame gross highitry which banishent thonsandsuf its must usefinl un! enterprixiur inlabitints from the kingilom. The following Latin verses over the entrance refer to the circumstance of its foumiation:-
" Quar fuerat selles tenebratruin est regia sollis, Expulvis teneliris sul Beneclictus ovat."

Theconvent of San Antemio da Porta dosCarros contained lifty friars, and also possessed halls where lectures wero dolivered on rhetorie, philesemphy, and theology ; but, what was vulued far more thun human learuing, which the wisest must consider lut as vanity, lts chureh forch of the casa do capitulo.

contained, among other valuable relics, the ashes of Saint Severino, St. Engenio, and the holy martyr St. Clement, deposited in three uriss It is impossible to describe the miracles these invaluable remains have worked; indeed, I must confess myself not very learned in their history, nor am I quite confident that they were not carried off when the monks tork to flight. They were unwilling to leave such precious relics behind them-for the urns were of silver !

There were numerous other convent of monks, numbering twelve in all, and if we reekon fifty professed members of ench, there must lave been six hundred friars, and twice that number of lay brothers and servints in Oporto alone,

The number of nunneries whs about the sane, some of which still exist, others have been convertel into military ytorehonses, like then of Monchique near the river. It was founded A.D. 1:5j5, by Doma Dentriz Vilhema, to whom tho mansion lelouged; but on her husb:ad's death, having no children, she took the veil, and converting it into n convent, got it dedicated to the Mailrede Deos-the Mother of God. The convent of Sunta Clara on a leight overlooking the river near the Betalla, wus the wealthiest, the largest, and most ancient in the city, containing about three hundred inlubitants. Nono but daghters of moile families were received into the boly of this commmity, is appears to have been the rule of all the convents of that uame. They belonged th the striet order of St. Francis. A few still remain to dray ont a sad existence, one by one dropping off, with no young tresh titees to keep them company. The chureh is richly gilt, and at ono time contatined many valuable omaments, but they hate long since disilppeared. Their garden is bounded liy the old wall of the eits, one of its towers serving therm as a summer-house, whence they cam enjoy a most lovely view both up und down the river.

The convent of Ave Maria, commonly called Sun Bento, at the end un the Rua das Flores, is still inhabited by a few bims, adrancel in years, who are celdnated for the wery delicions swoetmeats they mannfarture, as much as for the size of their emsent and the richness of their charch. It was founded in 1.500 , ly the renowned King fom Manel.

Nit to cnumerate any more, there must at one time, no dent, have been in may noms as monks in the city.

The fintucial deprortments of aluost all the numeries throughout Portugal are in a very deplambe emalition; and some time ago I laratd of sevral in which the poor women were reduced to a state of abable staration, their ahlowates not luiag pail, and all their revemes being alienatel.

The difterent orders of friars were supposed to be distinguished from carch other boy ertain maracteristics. The Crmzes, eamons of st. Angustin, 1 have desseribed as wealthy and aristereratie, althongh their internal comatilution was on the repoblican principhe. The most civilised in somety, they wre fin from being learned, and huskands with joalons disponsitions were unwilling to leave then too much in the compmy of their "pouses.

The limadietines, on the contrary, prizel enlture of the intellect almase the gratitiontion of the ennec, Their almont mandated tignres, mul the asertie enst of their - Mantenances, showed that they hived if, to their rules, whel the guick penetrating glaners of their eyes proved that they were well able to real the chamenters of those with whon the convered. They aln, powsessed amplo fimbs, which pevental their resorting to mean di vies in order to incrase their revennes; and the were ramenguratly mine respected than ntiy of the other orders.

The Loyo were few in numbry, and wealthy, Their drens of bhe choth they wore taste fully disposed, and always ained at being considered as belonging to the arivacsary of the framely.

The Congregados, likn the Ben dictines, were highly edneated, but they were long regarded with snspicion, as being similur in their system to the Jesuits, who, nine they were hanished by Pombal, have henen looked Mon with the greatest dislike by the Portugnese. The eollege once belonging to this bitter order is rave the catherdral, wind has one of the thest churches in Oportorattached (1) it.

The Prancisems were a mendient body, hard-working in their vention. tolerably well informed, and mach ndilicted th joneme conversitiom, by means of which, and the cmphoyment of the mest prisusisive elognonce, they contrived to collowt an abmint sombly of the gond thing of this lifi.

The Bermurdines were the acknowledged jesters of the monkish body, and their wealth procured them an entrance into all suciety; of which they were ever willing to hecome the butts. They were celebratedtis: their mistakes and amusing stories, though more wero toll of them ly others than they themsilves related, Take them all in all, a mont weful sat of gentlenea were the erood friars of sis. Bernardo.

Then thero were the Cinmehins, the poorest of all the orders.

But of all the orders, the (cameites were reguried in Opurto with the most misersal dislike. They were mendieants, wearing a dark gown, a drab hond and eapr, with samdalled teet. Their eonvent is now converted into : biurack for the munieipal ghard, and their church is the most fishiomably attembel of ayy in the city.

Opurto is full of ehurehes, most of them of a style of architecture peenliar to P'ortugal-large, strong, and magnificent buillings; but, as Murphy wherves. totally devoid of everything that constituter sei mifitic architecture : theirs is of a spucies betwern the Tentomic and Tusean. Ther materials of which they are formed are excellent, and the masomy part not without merit. The cathedral is of great antiquity, having bech rebuit by Count Henry, father of Altinso I. It stauls or the sumuit of a hill, with a flight of strys lealling to it, as also a steep, windiug roanl. The root is supportel by columns of it reddish tint, which aro very pieturecput The scallop-shells for holy water at the catrame are elegant, und it boants of is silver shrine of great value. Near it is the bishop palace; the entrance-fall th which is one of the handsomest in the comutry, imil deeorated in a very tideh style.
Nussal Senhoma dia Lipa is one of the fine ent chuelne in the city; and stanling on it commanding leight, it is a conspieuous object fir out to sea. From :e hroal open space in front a noble wide flight of steps leals "11, to its principul entrance, the ficgade laing of tindy hewn stone, supported by Corinthi:m jillars. "liw interion is in a simpte and lamsome taste, of the same matrorial. It contaius in a stome surerplayus the larart of the heroie Dom F'edro, which he lett to the city a a remembance of the gallime mamer in which ahe inhathitante fought for his diughter, and foom it emtiHence that there it would ewer lu' survomad bs fire men. A mass is lare performeed on the elth of sinpember, the ammersaly if his death, and is ma imprang and interesting ser ion.

The most uncient chureh in "porto is a shall (hothis building to the north of the eity, ealled the Colufetia. It was founded by Theotomin, King of the Shesti, in the year 559, who leing, with his son Acianim, coliverted to Christianity, of the Arian chured, they were there baptizad. The canse if the kinges conversim Was, of course, buimuluns, its the story relates. Ite had a daughter, a very lovely maden, who was mizal with a maligmat , listemper, which the art of some of the prolesums of having in hifs court could conumer. St. Martin, 1 beliow, or somu other haly father of the church, was dortmately on a jomrucy tu gain promslytes Travelling that way, and haning of the circumstane, ho whired to the palare of tho sovereign. King Theolmmino taking him fier a diseiplo of Besculapins, whered him instuntly to exert his thlents in curing his huthore" "I work not lis such means, 0 king," answored the saint; "but it my payers and fasting will avail, thry matl not he whatime." It "pperrs that the prayets and penatuees of tha haly man had not the vealth procured them an which they were ever They were celebiated lic ories, though more wer they themselves related iseful sot of gontlome uarto.
ins, the poorest of all macites were recturley sstl dislike. They were own, a tral, hoid and Their comvent is nom c municipal guard, and nably attemelel of :m ost of them of a style of gal-large, strubg, and ats Murjlyy olwerves, bat constitates semmith es between the 'Jentarid which they are torned part not withont merit. ity, having leen rebuils finso 1. It stimels on lit of stops lewhing to

The root is supputitel haro vory pieturealue 1- at the entrawe ato - hrine of great value ; the entrane-hall th $\therefore$ in the country, and 'of the finest ehurchen commonding height, it P sear From :" lowad e Alight of stepsilemb fictale being ot tinely thian pillars. The in. me taste, of the sillice satcophayns the lient ho lett to lla city : nammer in whith the -r, and fom it pontisuromedal by tree. eed on the ofth lis death, am is an artoo jos at anall Guthis called the deduleita. Bug of the Shevi, in $x$ son $A$ rimmirn, conar churd, they wer 14) King's comversion - story velates. 11 i den, who was ricizel Ithe art of mone of mirt could conumer: r holy tiather of the $\because$ to gain [共:lytus of the circumastamer, , soverelign. King :iple of lisenlapius, alonts in cariur hio neans, 0 king," ant ers and fisting will It upears that tho man hal net the desired effect, as the invalid was nuthing bencfited by them; su, as a last resonuree, he proposed a pilgrinuage to Fome. The ling himself was unable to go, nor conlel his daughter be removed ; but le sent an ambassudor with rich presents in the saint's company to tho pope. A short tinue only lad the envoys departed, when, to the surprise of all the conrt, the maden recovered suddenly from her mulaty; and it was afterwards discovered that this haply event conineided with the very day on which the presents were laid before the feet of his holiness. 'the king, in gratitude, built a chureh, which he named, from this folicitons incident, Culoficita, which may he interpreted, quiek!y dune; and firm it a whole praish has takenit. name, and aldso one of the longest streets in Oporto.
The tower of the chureh is a solid mass of masonry, of a tlint-colomed stone, with two areles on the summit for bells. The whole lailding is of the sime clescription of material. A lamb is rulely chiselled ont on the key-sture of the arched doorway forming the principal entrance, which shows how slightly advaned the fine arts were in the country in those days:
The ehureh of the Clerigos, built in 17.48 , has the highost tower in Portugal attached to it, and under the same roof is an hospital for jwor ciergymen. The farade, with steps and latustrades befone it, woud look well from the street, wero not the halding erooked,

The ehnteh of the Misericordia, in the Ras das Fhores, is a handowne huilding, and the instithtion to which it belong the most u-enin and charitable in the city.

V'II.

Tus fullowers of ench tmble live very moll torether in $\mathrm{O}_{\text {pur }}$ or, and thas they are alife to combine, cither for their own protection, on to imperse on the conmunty. 'they have heen accused af being very bial Workmen: hut I will do them justice to suy, that, thongh siflom persessed of mach inventive genius, that they imitate :ay mond placel betore them with conviderable acematy. 'Jhe greatost inprovement has taken phuee in eabinet-making within the hast few yeurs, ath now every urtiche of furniture is made in the city, from the hest English or Ceman lntierns, with mich neatness mud strenglh.
There ure two irem-tumbliten, in which, thangh the dinctus are repuctively longlish and lowneh, the artisans are l'ortuguese, und hence grates, stoves, mad all , lomestic ntensils, we well tumed ant. Ju tho Englials wo the iron-work of the suspension-bringe was mantietured, and also the engines fin a small steamer lave beren supplid.
'I'le Porthguese make wery neat bouts man mbers, int land the prive that they cost in Englamd. As tuilons they exael tho rememb ion at linglish workmen; and well-fitting elothes. 'Jhere aro several hat mambice tories in tho eountry, which mot only sulp ly dhe gemater number for exportation to the Brazils. large qumitities of silk stafls are manutachured in and about (oporto, where there wre many handreds, I maty say thousand of looms; nearly every other small house in the suburbs containing ane. There are suanufactories, also, where a number are collected umder one root, but in general ach mechanic works in his own cottage, and is pail ly the piece. That these people are industrions I an convinced, for at whatever hour of the day or night I have passed their cottages, some of the homs have been going, one man probably relieving the other. A thick woullen eloth with a long map, somewhat like blanketing, is also manufactured, and being gaily tinted, serves for winter shawls. Glass is madn in Oporte, but the finer sort comes from a "1".antietory near Aveiro. An abundance of potteryware is produced in and alout the eity, some red and somo very thin and black, Which is well adapted to withistuml iutense beat.

The Portuguese linen cluth is very strong, and of many degrees of thenesis. Some is tine enough for shirts, but it is more particularly adarted for shecting and tewels: for the latter purpose I prefer it to anything I have seen elsewhere, Ihis thbrie is all mate from thrend spum by hand. In the country, it is the pratice of a tamer who possesses a loom to collect the. thared spun by his neighbours' wives and daughtur: and weave it into cloth. A Portuguese temale peasant is never seen without a distatl wher her arm. Even walking to market with a basket on her head she spins all the way, ath also in trading cattle or driving at eart hos tingers are actively enmpoyed.
'The Oprito eitizeus are very fond of what may be allow stambing jokes, as exhibited in the vigus wer their shop-thors. A carpenter has ower his derm, I'mosessen of boxes. Un a hat-makers bourd he anmonees himself th be the Editor and Publisher of llats, A vender of eombinds and spinits, more lamest Ghan many of his heothen, wittily declames that he is the tibricater of real Dutele gin; and another, that he owns a mannlictory of English butter: Most of the sherge have some sign hefore them. 'I'lie mentists hang wit rows of teeth, with emormans tangs; habers, invariably a Mambino: lachat; ghavers it golden glove: athel vintners, the ancient sign of the bush-it small brimeli serving the purpose. Hosiers sumend outsid. a whole row of thar articles they will; and hatters, an old hattered bearer-not as a sereinens of those they have within, but as a memento mori, 1 comblule, to remind the paser's-by of the state to which their own may soon he redued.

The grouts are genctally exposed in the door-ways of the shops, which eamot berst of mueh neatness or elogatere, though in that wepeet they have, during the list few yemrs, much improved. There are two or three hage haberdisherse shops with ghazed wiadows, as buse some of tha shomakers. Framerly, such a thing us a pastryeonk's slo川 was mot known- how there we saveral, where verv niee confectionary is vomed. Ihend was lomerly made with leaven, which gave it a bitter med taste, now genst is ascel; and it is imprasibh to have suceter or more wholesone hreat. toaves are male very suall, either in the shatere of twists, whiel are tho best, or in ohlong lumps,

Sere also are a mumber of boolsellerst shops: the but the greater number do mot lempe the passer-ly to enter, for, ble the cloth shops, they are small ame datk. Thure is " fruit shop, but gemembly tinut of every derepiguin is hawled abont the streets hy wemen, who carry it on their hemb in baskets. Fisin is sond in the same way by women, as is poultry, bnt wild-fowl and game exclusively by men. Houey is cried about the streets by a man who caries a jar of it on his baek. Vinegar is always sold by an old man, who has two small barrels of it slung on the back of $n$ decrepit donkey. His ery is amusing, and highly laudatory of the artiele he has to sell: "Beautiful vinegar, beautiful vinegnr-the richest vinegar in the provinee. Who has scen the like? It is just finishing, just finishing -come then and buy, come buy." Thus ho commences early in the morning, and continues all day, so that at some time or other during that period he must huve departed slightly from the truth.

The cones of the pine tree, which are much used to light fires, are brought into the city in large nets on the baeks of donkeys. There are pedlars who sell nothing but paper, a sheet at a time, if required : they carry their property in a dirty eloth nuder their arms. They are generally, I believe, Gallegos. A goat's milk cheese, made in the Upper Douro, is also sold by women in the streets. The most lemarkable are the chestnut women, who are to be found at the corner of most streets in the city, sitting on a low stool with a basket of raw chestmits by their side, and a little stove of black ellyy, with a round pot of the same material full of holes, in which the chestnuts are roastel. There they sit from morning till night, inviting everybody who jasses to buy a firthing's worth of their fruit. Boiled chestnuts are also sold by women who earry them about in a romm oblong jar, wrapped up in their cloak to keep them warm.

In summer, refreshing beverages are sold hy men, who earry a moveable table with a lemonade-fountain in the centre, and cups ranged romil it. In the nutumn the large henps of melons, piled up on the parement at the corners of varions streets, look most attractive, purticularly the cool juiey water-melon. Both sorts grow to a large size in the comntry. Melonsure here considered very wholesome, and a jerson may ent half a eommon-sized one without fear of disagreealle consequences.

Of all elasses of the commonity, the Gallegosare the most remarkable. There aro many thousands in the country employed in domestic service, while others gain their livelihood as porters and water-carriers: these wear barlges on their arms, and are very honest hard-working fellows. They carry the water from the fountains to the houses in high barrels narrowing towaris the top. Noborly says "Cill "porter," but if a parecel is to be sent, "Call in Gallego." "Oh Gallego!" is the mode of summoning one, and lie eomes immediately, to carry a note, or to bemr an hundred-weight. He would prefer the latter, for he expeets to be paid higher. They are most parsimonions, living on the coarsest food, clothed in the conmonest habiliments, and sleeping in some wretched lowel which they hive by elubbing together. When, after yenrs of toil, they have seraped together a few pounds, they return to their homes to end their days in ense.

Oporto is full of French milliners and dress-makers, who have abomdance of employment in adoruing the fair inhmbitants neeording to the latest fushions; and here also is a most enterprising perruguier of the same pation, who, lesides selting every article of bijouterie, imports live bears to turn into grease. Indeed, this place has in that respect filly kept pace with the age.

Notwithstanding the steepuess of the hills, enrringes are in general uso in Oporto, of many diflerent descriptions, from the antiquated family coach to the modern light britzkn. The former is a curions vehicle, all inside, without rumble or even a conch-box; for the driver is a humble individunl, very different from the sleek, fat, liveried, and bewigged English coachman. He is habited in a coat of straw, his hat is battered, and if he has shoes they are made of wood, while in his hand, instend of a whip, he carries a long thin pole tipped with iron. No horses could drag that huge, lumbering, rolling machine up the hills, and therefore a couple of patient oxen are yoked to it, who have probably been employed during the morning in ploughing or drawing eart-loads of mud.

Of long standing nlso is the calessa. It is in shape between a ehariot and a eab, partaking of the qualities of both, and hung excessively high, between large wheels. It is drawn lyy two horses or mules; and although, as I have watched one descending a stecp hill, I have thought it must inevitably break down or be overturned, necidents very seldom oceur to them. There are many English carriages in the city, both open and closed; and, as the roads in the neighbourhood improve, there will probably be many more. Horses are even now kept at a small expense, and of course, when the communication into the interior is facilitated, provender will be still chenper. A very tolerable horse can be hired for about six shillings a chy.

Litters are moll used for journeys. They are oddlooking mathines, gaily painted, nud with enrtains, carrying two persons uneomfortally und one toletably at his ease. They are something in slonje like smail Isle of Wight sociables, with shatts before and bohind, which rest on the shoulders of two mules. The mules employed for the purpose are of the largest size, and the strongest and most docile ; for if they fall, or ate vicions, the passengers' lives are in imminent peril.

Ladies generally pay their uvening visits in sedaneluairs, which nre precisely similar to those used in Eugland. The chairmen are always Gallegos, and wear a large livery cloak, and hat with a band, the servant preceding them bearing a torch. Nearly all the houses in Oporto having large entrance-halls, the ladies are thus carried to the very foot of the stairs.

IX.

Clabitable and Usefte Institutions-The Santa Caga ja Misricoomia - Colizor pon Female Obrhans Wbaltiy brotifhinoods - Fonndline Hospital-Ase. lums pon tife Aord-Itallan Opraa Hovse-Minob Theatars-liminting Opfiees and I'rbiodical. Wohrsl'unio limhamy-schools-Punic Cemetebibs.
Orouro contains four hospituls, mumerons friendly brotherhools, several sehools adminably conducted, varions asylums for deerepit age, or helpless clililhood; a medical college ; a public lilrary, of which my eity might be prome ; $n$ gallery of paintings adjoining, of which less must be said; a commercial assecistion, which poessesses a handsome hull of meeting in the New Exchunge ; four club-honses, not to mention the British Fuetory Honse ; two public han':s, of great eredit ; insurance offices, hoth for ships and houses; a Steam Navigation Company; several barracks, and n prison (a fine structure); a naval and military arseunal; markets, well supplied with all the necessnries of life; companies for the improvement of the internal communication in the country; several burial-grounds, on $y$ eoaeh to the modern curious vehicle, all ina coach-box ; for the ory diffirent from the ed English coachman. , his hat is battered, de of wood, while in arries a long thin pole ould clrag that huge, he hills, and therefore ked to it, who have he morning in ploughalessa. It is in shope taking of the qualities high, betweeis large corses or mules ; and te descending a stee vitably break down or eldom occur to them. yes in the city, both des in the neighbourably be many more. smull expense, and of a into the interior is till cheuper. A very - atout six shillings a neys. They are ods. , and with curtains, bly and one tolerably $g$ in shape like small Its hefore and bechind, vo mules. The mules the largest size, aul for if they fall, or are in imminent peril. ming visits in sedanlar to thoso usel in ys Gallegos, and wear a hand, the servant Nearly all the honses halls, the hadies are no stairs.
ons-Tur Santa Cagi - Fematr Orpilans ing Hospital - Asy. prera Hocse - Minob I'ralodicat. Wonkso Cemetehigs.
s, numerons friondly Imirably conducted, chelpless chilidhood; $y$, of which auy city intings ndjoining, of nuercial associstion, of meoting in the not to montion the blic hanles, of great ships and houses; a aral barracks, nad a and militnry arsoual; o nocessaries of lifo; of the internal comal burinl-grounds, on the ontskirts of the city, well laid out; un Italian Opera House of large size, and two minol theatres; many printing-offices; besides other associations for various ${ }^{1}$ urposes.
Such is Oporto at the present day; and it is worthy of notice, that except tho hospital, the barracks, the thentre, the prison, and perhaps one or two others, all these institutions have arisen within the last ten years of constitutional liberty.

Of all the institutions of Oporto the most admirable is that of the Santa Casa da Misericordia-the Holy House of Pity. It is under the direction of sone of the principul men of the place, who have very large funds at their disposal, to support hospitals, to send medical assistance and food to the sick, and to bury the poor. Among other establishments under their care is tho magnificent hospital of Santo Antonio, in the Cortoaria; one of the directors taking it by turns to act for a month as major domo. The hospital is attended by two physiciaus and three surgeons. The building is in a most airy situation, of vast size, and yet incomplete; indeed, the plan was fiu too great forthe necessities of the district. It is even now emrable of containing many hundred persons, The wards are lotty, niry, aud kept very clean. The food of the patients is of tho best kind; indeed, the Portnguese would be shocked at our union-louse rations. The dispensary is considered excellent. There are private rooms for invalids of a superior class, the charge for which is slight.

There is a eollege in the square of st. Lazaro, entithed Colleggin do Nossa Senhora dit Esperamea dits Orfins, superintended also by the Misericordia, into which girls of respeetahle families laft uphans are received and very highly edncated; those who ean athord it paying something towards their own maintenamee.

An asylun exists in Oporto into whieh hasbands may put their wives churing their absence from home. There is mother establishment where those whose couluct luss cansed uneasiness to their hasbunds, or who have proved faithless, are shut up. Thure irrealso two nsylums for ehildren abamdoned hy their parents. Two infant selools are in full aetivity, under the eare of some of the fiest ladies of Oporto, who take it by turns to inspeet the establishments, and many attend daily to givo instruction. Here is a college nlso for orphan hoys of the upler ranks, who aro instrueted in all the neomplishments necessary to tit them for society. Five or six wealthy and highly respectahle brotherhoods may likewise be emmerated, emmposed generally of all rmks, who have hospitals fic their poor and siek brethren, and sehools for the instruction of their elitilren.

Next to the Miscricordia, that of the Trinidude is the most important and wealtly. The clergy have also a brotherhood for the support of thome of their leoly who are old and destitute. Some are wealthyothers have but a precarions memus of existence.

The Foundling Hospital in the I'raea dia Cordoaria is in considerable request. Before it, at times, may be seen the nurses waiting to receive the little beings they are to bring up at their own homes; the greater number being nursed in this way. There is a wheel in front of the building for the reception of the mes-born infants. It is in the slmpe of a cylinder revolving perpendicuharly in the wall, with an nereme on ono side, in which the child is placed, and it then beius turned round a bell is rung to give notace of the arrival ol the little stranger. The number of those who grow up in comparison to those who die is small. Many of tho boys are apprenticed to the rope-mukers, who reside close at hand; all of whom, it is said, have come out of the wheel. They are generally a wretehed set of beings.

Advanced age is not neglected in Oporto. There is an anylum for old and decrepit women in the Praea da Corloaria, under tho name of the Hospital de Santa Cluar. Each old womam has a room, a dress once a year, one menl and fompence in money a-rlny; and if ill, is sent to the hospital free of any expense. Another of the same kind also in the Praen de St. Lazauo ; but I beliuve neither of them have sufficient funds for the support of the numerous elainants.
An hospital for British sailors and other subjects of Great Britain, is placed under the caro of an English plysician, Dr: Henry Jebb, It is now supported by private contributions, the govermment having withdrawn a subseription they formerly puid towards it.

Among the other establishments of Oporto, I must not forget to mention the Italian Operia Mouse, one of no little importance if considered rightly, and so the govermment lave at all times judged, as an aid in the purevention of disturbinces, revolts and revolations. People latve then the Opera Honse to which they may aljourn for most nights in the werk, and the other evermgs are employed in diseussing the entertaimments. The Portngnese government thereforo wisely bestows some thousume pounds ammally towards the mantenanee oí tiae Opera Houses of Lishon and $\mathrm{O}_{\text {porto. The }}$ performanes at the fomer are justly eelebiated all over Earope for their exeellence, nor are thoso at the latter, at times, much inferior.

Tho Opera IIouse at Oporto is : largu unsightly buikling, standing in the Praca da latalla. It was built, I believe, about sixty years ago, many English residents assisting the funds. 'The interior is handsome. It has five tiels of boses, closed like those of other "pera honses, and the most commolious pit of any I have ever been in, cold of the reats having wellshaped backs and arms. In size it is larger than any of the Lamion minor theatres, but rather smader than Drury Lame or Covant (iaden, Its wreat fanlt is that the stage is too shallow, and people in smme of the boxns do mot hear very well. It is tastefally omamented, and kept toleribly clean. 'The andience ano of the most respectable chas, and no temates are admitted into the pit. The prive of almittanee is very low. A box ean he himed in the hest cireles fin abont ten shilliugs a night, amd only three shillings is paid fur the pit-stalls-renen less, by taking oue for a month. Except on gal:a oceasions, when the theatre is lightert up, the luties do mot appear in full dress, and men in any eostume are admitted into the pit; fev upearing in erening dresses. The conseruenco is, the groater part of the nudionee walk, or ride there on clonkeys, in the most independent style; a very pleasint enstom during the ine evenings in spring. It is the enstom for puople to pay visits to eath other's boxes $\mathrm{s}_{\mathrm{o}}$ that altorether the $\dot{O}_{\text {porto }}$ Operti Mouse is 11 very agreenble place in which to suend an evening.

When there is no opern, Portugnese aud Spanish plays ure pertormed on the stage of the thentre of Saint Joao. There are few even tolemblo netors among them: the women are the wonst, for it is not eonsidered a very ereditable protession. The Spunish netors who have appented at Oprorto were very superior in every respeet, and always thew large andiences.

There are two minor thatress at Oporto. The Porthguese are pasionately tond of private play acting, and for anatems are almimble performers. there are numerom mall private theatres in the city, mat une of the largest companies hawe hiren a theatere, and mother acts frequenty in that of Saint Joan. The femal parts are, however, on theso puhlic occasions taken ly wen, which of enturse pyils any tragio piece. I few years aro the English possessel a very elegme private thatre, where phys were acted lev the young English residents, once a fortnight, to andianes smombing to maleratuol the lag age of the pertormers.
There are nine piatingeotices in Oporto, whene isuc daily live nowapapers, and two papars meaty for alvertiements. There are mumpors how sellas' sheps; be fiw the beest hing that in the Calowh dos Clerisnt, where most of the first-rater Preneh, Buslish, and lortugnese works are tu be finmul.
The Prublic Library of Oports, in the Praca de Gint hazaru, is will worthy of abamation. The walls on the lailding containing it finmed part of an wh convent. Tho roms are ment elogatly fittod up, of groat size, well wentilated, and lighted: indeed, I fear the literay taster of the iuhabitants searedy desorve so hambuther a lath. The womk of ath the PortaEnese authors are to br: fund thire, with many thomsum volumes of monkish lowks, intu which mobaty bi, one will wer look, collected trom all the supprosed emanents in the north of the conntry. There tre aho a gomi momber of Eingli-h. Fremeli, and Italimu works, whick I have homent ons.

I have. I helieve given a sketh of mealy ull the cotahishaments in "poath. I will now conciul with the hast seme of all, which cmils this "sthage wentthe history," the puldic cemeterice. Their est:Mishmeat was one of the greate it imporements muter the present rigius. The first formed, and whioh contains the grate est number of tumber, is that in the lapit ; the whels of the hapo. The harent emetery is in the armat formerly ocompon by the binnpis fuintizand the smimary, at tha ema ot the Walk of the Fon1. whats. The site is abmimbly chesen, as the gamm can low omsily dranted, and it commatud a bentitel ri,w. Nate the churn of the einketeit: thare is manmachts, shated by magitient liat trees.

X.

The Primion or Oparo-The Mhement Tmaghop Mato.

 San dow dia Foz, the Brightum of Gporto. I Lere pasrugurs are ladided trom the sthamer at the jetty ealled We rematacian. There are a great many new and comfirtable honses, insmbly-rooms, a cluh-honse, mul bil-find-tables. The hathing is excellant. There are fraches of tine sand betwern the rueks, on which are fitcherl : mumber of tents, intended for dressing-roms © & the Jathers. Ladies isne furth ina kind of Turkish trousers and very short iress; gentlemen wear the same tronsers, with seanty conts, mul calns lotig and hauging hown. Tho ladies are attended by bathingmen, and be wentemen by bathing women : and, with tho crowds of spectaters, seated on chairs fier their accommodition, the bight dresses of the hathere the hatghing aul talking, it is a very pretter, though to an Buglishman rather an extribordinary, seene. The Englishl ladies have a hathing phace to themselves at somg distance from the rest.

Close to Fos is the frightimi Mat of the Jome, on which so many lives have boen lost. The hathat and one af the must terrible aceitents happened on Nath 29, 1, isis. The l'orto atemer, on her worse tw Listran, but struck on a sumken rock, manhiped her rudier, laceme mumagealhe, driture un to the rockis, and was there knock the pisces. sixty persens prishod within a stome's throw of the castle, and within haring of the arowis, who wre uttedy mable to render any awist. ance. It was firm this catabtrepte that ane Ilumane Somety of Foz had its origin; a large preportion of the fimeds was enntributed by British honnes. It is at Foz that the various kinds of l'orthenese mats my be sern tu the greatest adramage. The catruit is the boat enphoyed to land the mails and pasechens; ahout thirty feri hug, shatp at buth cmots, with a buth-hang rulder, and with only one sail, curvind ly a wry lume slomer yard. In fine weather theos vesels will enry from twente-tive to thirty fas. mengers, with thir luggare, wer the Bar. The beron de thle is a kind of clamsy gondolit. Ther catigue is a dhat-hottomen punt. Then there are the in ino houst:, which have alrembly heen described; the rosen, the prottiost vewel th has sech :nywhere, emphoy in the enasting-twal ith thee little stumpy mat ts, anm a long taper baten sail: and the latue, a very mgly kind sharp at the forw, with siguar yards on raking mast, whinh are still emphoed in the slave-trable.
I'roweding thenee' abong the north share we visitent Matamimes ore Matasablas, celebrated for the most Gmons of the mitaculas imstore of l'ortugal: Bonon phbrimsammally visit the church in which it is bept. The logud regarding it is as fillows:-Nicmbmu, it serm, mate tive wrondon bangen of Dur Lord, which atre Orme, and this, the mot hatmons of all. Tlat imate was thrown into the sea ath Ahpa, in order than in being expored to podanation, flowed down the Dediterramom, was dabled against the Ahricun side of the straits of (filmaltar, amil low it.s left arm; wat thence thrown ashore har the wels called the heixus; ; and her they say moshipwerk hat necurred from that time 10 hiss. A charch haviug lown huilt for its reeption, it was endanomed to fit on a beft arm : but mome would ever mhere to the buly, and the inage theretine was left inperfect. Fifty years atterwardo mond woman, phekint 听 wond on the sea-shore, fimblan wdily-shaphed piece that bore some resemblanco to :an arm. When she attempted to light her the with it, to her astonishment it leapat nut into the midde of the room; and the prolipy having hern repated several times, whe very maturally took advice na to what it might mean. Sone one suggesting that it might posibly low the longlost arm of the miratentuas imitge, it was carrical to tho chureh, and there of its own aecord it was attracted to
: g gentlemen war tho $\therefore$;and cajs lons and attented by bathing-ing-women ; and, with on chairs for their acs of the hathers, the pretty; thongh to an ditu'y, seem. The lace to themselves at Pirn of the Tomro, (un lost. The litust and hitpened on Math her vojace to Lishon, *ed the bir in sutcty; nshipued her rudive, to the rocks, aud was ersuns probhol wihh within hearing ot the to rouder any uaint. phe that whe Ilmane wre indportion of the inli hounes. It is at dorthoulase labits my The cutratire is the ails :and pasechugs; t buth ents, with a nly one sail, curmal In fine weather tisers s-tive to thinty pros the Jan. 'Ince bero Fotuda. The' criqus there are tho invio deseribed ; the rosea, nywhere, empluyoul in estumpy mat to, an! a Site, a very nuly lind aen the low selumpors, ands on raking masts, a ve-trallo.

arth share we visited braterl for the ment of l'ortugtil: : 30,1100 I in which it is liopt. ws: — Nicul-mm, it ff Our Lurd, which atrs one at Lutigrs, one at s of all. Thar imatge Hit, in order th asing al down the DediterAfricun mide of the ft:mm; was thence 11: 3, A, D. 117, was cal the Jeixa's; aml -urred fiom that tine uilt for its reception, leit arm ; but hom? and the image thereurs atterwaris an med sea-shore, fonum an se resemblance to :un fer fire with it, to her mildlle of the room; terl several times, she flat it might mean. possibly loo the longit was carried to the l it was altracted to its natural plate, to which it has athered timbly ever since. And this is the trulition respecting Nostria senhor de Matorinhos or de Bences, from the name of the phee (ealled also Espinheiro) where the arm was ifscovered, which the visitur may hear for himself at trat length from the wortlyy siceristan, and whic! firms the subject of the followinit work of constant oocurreace in l'ortuguese book-shops-Jistoire e , IVilugres dat prodigiose Imatyene de. S.S. de boucets. It in also treated if by the following anthors: be Castro, fistic Dos Aajos, Jachim de Portugal, IN: ; and the Ridercto of T'avares do Carvallo, printed here in $164 \%$
the Leca is one of the prettiest little streams in Por-then the Luthe ot the Latin solliers. It timen the suljeet fon of the most chaming lyries of Si de Minamla. A little way up it is erossed by the Ponte de Leea do bulie, where is a deent estalign on inn, at which, having refreshorl ourselves, we proecterled to visit the moustery of leen, which lies about half a mile to the left.
This ancient monastery is mentioned in a domment of 1003 ; it was then Benelietine, and contained, as mas not unnsmal, a nunuery also. It was nuited in 1094 to the ree nt ('eimba by Dom Raymumbo, Coment of Galicia, ant eame iato prosession of the Maspitallers before 111 S . The present chureh was rrected by Hom Fr. Esterao Vaspues limental in 1836. The ereater part of the eloisters were demolished 1814. The buililint has quite a military allemance: the tower, whieh is at the south-west. is execedingly pieturespue, from the little gatiowies ioldly worthelled out at its angles. Within these are several curions tomis. In a uorth chapel is the kneeling tignov of Fre: Christuva Cernache: +1569 : he listinguished himselt in the gallant, though unsuecessfinl, lefoner ut Randearinst Soliman IT., laza. Th the Caprilu de Fum is the resting place of Fr. Fatevin, the foumber of the chureh: + May 14th, 1336 . The tomb wis "restorel" in 1814 ; but the braes legent, with its engravinge of the Ammanciation, &c., is very curious; it narrates ike good actions of the deceased, among which it recknes his prossession of tive commendams bexthe's this priory, ant ends thus:- > "Ct rom flos florum, sic S. Prior iste priorum ; Carmeu ini tumnlo sit silfi pro tituls.
> Mi) tereentenis et spoptuaginta cquternis lat 1:31 = A.D. 1336. In the sumo (lnapel is the +1515 . Obsevedon the north side of the nave the ex-rutos. Jle is still mpoken of in the neightombond is rery lambome, was the git't of Hu. Juan Cochlo. On the south of the priory are the remain of ans ald twer, called by the simgular anue of Tulha do Juferno -IIell's Wiekne Jasket. About one hamdred yands' to the mat of the chareh is a remakalily landsome eross of the sixtecuth centary. In this jurny the infamons marringe of Dom Fiomambo 1. and Domat Lemon Trelle\% de Mene\%es took place in I3ã.

> Hic sbiit undio mense quasy medio."

When Donn Frei Estevats Vispues. Pimental timuled this monastery at Leea, the conntry was linhlo at any moment to be maved by the followers of ( manm, the Inorish chief of Granada, and henee it was constructed as mucin with a viow for defener as to religims stelusom and ecemonial. The gates omly conmmanicater with the interion ly a morow winding staircats: ; and it was protected at its north-west angles by two stately romal towers, the vestiges of which now only reman ; ot herepacioushildings we dentroyed as late as in 1844 , but the mass of ineomernous buildingit that still remain "xeito the derpest feeling of inturest, ittached, ass their listery is, to shd event fill times us those of Moorish hasenien and kiarlits of tit. Jom, and laringing back as they do, in the most forcithe monner, iteas of mamids and customs lons gone hy.

T'wo leasues firther on is a sot ever to be rememberal by the constitutionalists, ealled Mindello, where Dom Podro and his linerating amy lamlal in 1830. A small stone whelisk was, somm timento, wected there ly pmbie sulner:phom: it serves an a momment to lis nomory, and to matk the gromm, which ought ever to he conserented in the hearts of those who would be firee. A little bay, with a beach of smonth sumb, and with lank rocks on eath side, a pille grose on a hill being Ir hinel it, was the spot chosen for tho disembarkation nd the troopis. The first who hmed having secured the lifl. protered the romander from the troops of Fantat Marta, who monaed them at tirst, lont afterwards retiret; ; ancl, withont any opposition, they marched in trimuph into Ojurto. Hial they at onee fillowed up thair sucens with energy, there is every reason to heliove the war would have quickly termiunted, instemb of which, shatitiyg themselves mp: hortly atter in "porto, they endured al siere of many months, and all the henrors which ean visit a city-not the lenst of which were shot and shell, starvation and phyme

Itwat four leagios from Oproto, yet further to the nortl, on the seatomst, is the town of Villat do Combe, on the River Dive, the entrance to whiel ju protected he a small fort, and it has a long woolen bridge wer it. 'lite ruins remain of a bridge of stume, which was overthrown by a flow, and replaced liy the one abowo mentionnil. The most conspicuous luikling in the town is the large convent of Sintal Clara, on the summit of sone precpitous rocks owerlooking the river ; and litring lanst lave boen the loving youth wha, to visit a min:tress, would hase attempted to gain an entrance on that side. It is suphlied with water ly an alueduct of lofty arelose, "xtembincs to some hills full is miles oft. This eonvent was built, it is said, under the direction of a brother of the hady abbess, who being sent to rise a regiment in the district, allowed the men exemption fom military serviee, provided they "marged to work on it fur a cortain tinns. None but daurhters of nohle damilies were :mmiterl into this mowent, as proteral moms, and it Was eonserpently onsidered the mont aristmeratie retimement in the province. The siew fom the windows wre the wide Ithantic, the firtty town below; the pieturespue river, mal the rich ematey lerond, must he very fine. Fillit do Combe, tice town of tho Count, takes its mane from a som of the ghot King Dom Jinis licaring that tith, to whon the survomlius lands were given. He haite it castle on the height where the convent now stands, and the town mainging up romm it, was called ather him. Itere a mambere of small erati are constructerl, of very pretty moidels, and eren brigs of eonsiler hale vize ; but the water on the bate is tor shallow to allow uf urge vessels crossing it.

Leturning to Oporte by way of Berga previonsly described, our next excursion was to Coimbra, between which and Oporto there is an excellent road and a swift diligence, dispensing with mules mud saving ull the usuml fatigues and annoyances of dilatory horschack travel. The Estrada Real, as the diligenee route is called, has, however, $n$ drawback, that it follows the shortest of the four lines that lead from Oporto to Lisbon, and the least interesting by Villa Nova-a long row of straggling bouses whence the traveller first loses sight of the Douro and of the city of imnumerable towers, ever conspicuous amoug which is that of the Clerigos.
Passing Oliveira d'Azemecis, a strong military position, which servel as hend quarters to Don Miguel in 1832, and to the Duke of Saldanha in 1847, we crossed the Antiea and soon renched Sardao, where the wine is grown, which, from being shipped at Figueim, at the mouth of the Mondego, is known in England as Figucira or Barraila wine. Leaving the menorable mountain of Busaco to our left, the towers and convents of Coimbra came into view, like some huge enstlo rising agninst the sky and passing through thic wide street of Sautn Sufin, lined on eaeh sido with vast convents we were ultimately comfortably housed in the hotel of the Passo do Conde.

Coimbra stands on severul hills, which rise somewhat abruptly from the Mondego, over which river extends a long stone bridge, built it is said, on the ruins of twe

TOWER OF BELEM.
tormer ones. On the southern side rise wood-crowned lanks, interspersed with quintas and convents. Among the former is the fur-famel Quinta das Lagrimas, and the principal of the latter is the extensive Convent of Sianta Clara. In the centro of the city the lotty and elegant tower of the Observatory shoots up, clove to the chief buildings of the Univensity, one side of which is on the summit of a precipiee directly above the river. Far round are seen the towers of muncrous handsome charches and vast monnstic piles.

The streets are narrow and strep, and are paved with small, round, clark tlint-stones, most disagreabble to walk on. Tho extorior of the private houses have no pretensions to arelintectural beauty, heing in gencral mean and shabby ; though their interior is tine supriur to their outside promise. A tree in the north part of the eity, of such vast dimensions that it requires several men joining hands to enbrace it, is one of the curiosities of Coimbra. It is, 1 believe, of equal antiquity with the city itsclf.

Coimbra contains a great number of eonvents, whose lotty and dreary walls oceupy one luntit of the city; the broad strect of St. Sofia having few other edifices in it. Solue of those formerly belonging to the frius are now converted into a variety of bencficial purposes, as public oflices, barracks, schools, and two ine employed us hospitals. It is inpossible to find

Saldanha in 1847, we ehed Sardao, whero the ng shipped at Figucira, is known in England as Leaving the meluorable - left, the towers and o view, like some huge nd passing through the 1 on each side with vast mfortably housel in the lis, which rise somewhat ver which river extends said, on the ruins of two benuty, being in general - interior is tar sumeriur cee in the north part of sions that it requires nabrace it, is one of the believe, of equal anti-number of convents, oceupy one halt of the Sfia liaving few other merly belonging to the a variety of bencticial neks, schools, and two $t$ is impossible to find uses for them all, so that mony are falling into decay, Some ground belonging to one las been employed as a Botamical Gurden, which is a credit to the city, mul to the members of the university, who support it.

The environs of Coimbra nfford a mumber of benutiful views, which I will deseribe in the course of my rambles. There are miny handsome churehes attaeled to the convents, and two cathedrals, an old and n now one, the latter a superb temple formerly belonging to the Jesuits' College. Indeed, Coimbin is a most interesting and picturesque city. Camuens thas describes it:-
> "IIere castle-walls in warlike grandeur lower,
> Here cities swell, and lofty temples tower:
> In wenlth and grandeur each with the other vies; When old and loved the parent-momarch dies;"

as Miekle elegantly translates the lines of the immortal bard. The last line refers to the good King Diniz, one of the earliest mouarchs of Portugal, who in 1306 instituted the University of Chimbra.

The University (See p. 232) was once or twice removed to Lishon, undergoing many vicissitudes, till the necession of the Marguis of lombal to power. It had at that time fallen into much decay and disrepnte, owing to the greater number of the professors' chairs being possessed by the Jesuits. On the banishment of that sect of religionists from the shores of Portugnl, the great minister completely remolelled the University; appointing the most learned mul enlighteved men to fill the vaean: chairs, It has ever since enjoyed a clesirvedly high reputation as a seat of learning, and as being the birthplace and nurse of liberal sentiments.

Hence we proceeded to the new Se, or Cathedral, formerly the chureh of the Jesuits' convent, one part of which building has boen converted into a musenm, anotherintoan hospital. The interiorarehitecture of the Sè is plain and handsome, free from that tawdry gilding which disfigures so many elurches. The arches nre romul ; the pillars of granite square and massive ; the altars and organ-loft are richly earved nnd gilt:

Thence we repaired to the College, entering a handsomer square through an archway ealled the Iron Gate. T'o the right is tharge building, a flight of steps leading to it, with nn degant colonnade in fiont, known by the elnssic name of Via Latinio. 'I'his buikling, whieh extends along the greater part of another side of the square, is the College, eontaining the residence of the rector, the halls, and lectuterooms. In front of us was the Library, a building with a handsome exterior: a view of the river and opposite hills was seen from the corner of the square, and on our left rose the lofty tuwer of the Olservatory.

Entering the College, we wero first shown the public examination hall, which has a roof ornamented with arabespue paintings of great antiquity, and is himg round with jortraits of all the sovereigns of Portugnl. Some of the portrits are well execnted. We then cutered a smaller hall in the sane style, for private examinations, containing the portraits of all the rectors; :unl grim-looking characters they were, all having been frims, except the tirst, anl the muel exteomed Conde we Terrenn. The floors of these halls are eavered with Indian matting; the furniture is of anciont form; the whole kept in the most perfect order, and laving a wery antique nppearance. Passing through several long galleries lined with paintings, we looked down firm baleonies above each, ato the different lecture rooms, eight or ten in numici; which open into a 'ruadrangle in the centre of the builuing. 'They are of elegant shape, groar size, and newly bainted.

We were shown the large hall in which Pombal hek n court at the re-opening of the University on its reformation. It is left precisely as it was in those days, and had been for many previous centuries. The colours on the ceiling have been admirably preserved. The ehapel contains a fine organ; the roof is painted in arabesque; the lower part of the walls is coverel with llue tiles; and on the wall of the gallery is painted an open door so well, that it is inyossible to discover the deceit till elose to it. The taste of this species of ornament is questiomable. In a corner of the College is a tower-the old observatory, I betieve,

The libury consists of three compartments, forming one lofty and beantiful hall. The roof is richly [rainted, a eornice of gold am] l'iue ruming round this walls; and though some centuries old, the colours retain their pristine brightness. The bookeases, which reach to the ceiling, are of bitek wood, ormamentel with arabes ${ }^{\prime}$ ue patterns in gohl, which give it a very handsome apjearance.

We next descendel to a story under ground, usel till 1836 as a prison for refractory students; but now, all divisions being thrown down, it is fitted up, as : library-itself a large hall well lighted, and full of Hooks. I ought to observe, that as the College stands on the edge of $n$ precipiee, the walls at the lack tun t, a considerable depth bolow the front. We were amused with the lines cut deep, into the massive slatters hy thr captives of former days. One ran thus: "Here thu lunet illustrious and most excellent J. J. N. P. wns musi unjustly confined. by the sevore tyramy of his j.s.me Think of it, ye Muses, and monm for his fate." Belon this story is another now fillod with nu immense number of useless theological works, brought from the suppresed convents, and here left to rot. This story is divide into dingeons, so artfully amanged, that they migh have defied the efforts of nuy captive to break fiom them. It was nt one time the prison of the city, wher the worst criminals wero capfined; a novel appropri ation of a portion of tho collegiate buildings ! The only entrauce is from above, into a hall, from which passugh with many turnings branch oft; there being at ench turning a massive iron door, and the dungeon at the furthest end.

Ascending again, we walked roumd the galleries of the hall, and thence on to the roof, whence we could examine the untique architecture of the college, imi admire a lovely view spread belore us. On one side was the city with its towers rand convents, glittrliug in the san, on the other, the silvery stremu of the shitlow: Mondecro, the convent of Sranta Clam, suroumlel by woody leeights, and the Quinta das Lagrimas. Looking up the stream was the Botaniend Gurden, the Eechesiastical Collegre, und a surgical hospital, fimmerly a convent, while hills rose above hills in long suecession in the distance.

The Ohservatory is a building perfect in its kint, and in exeellent order, furnished with all the best astronomical instruments. From the seromel story extends a broad terrace over the root of the lower part, from which the view is most lovely. The roof and part of the wall of the tower open, to allow of observations being taken; nud in the centre also of the roof is a circnlar aperture, tbrough which the transit of any planet is observed. Other olservatories ure, I believe, on the same principle.
building. They aro ewly painted.
in which Pombal held he University on its $y$ as it was in thase vious centuries. The admimbly preservel. a; the roof is painted the walls is covered vall of the gallery is at it is impossible to t. The taste of this able. In a corner of ,bservatory, I believe. compartments, form-

The roof is richly fue rmaning round the uries oll, the colours The bookeakes, which ck wood, ornamentri , which give it a very y under ground, usel ry stulents; but now, , it is fitted up as : lighited, and full of as the College stands als at the lack run t ont. We were annsed nassive shatters ly the thens: "Fere thr inner J. I. N. P. was most tyramy of his j.mme in for liis fate." Belos th mimmene number hit from the suppressed This story is divilet aged, that they might aptive to break fom ison of the city. Where d; a novel appropri e buildings! The only 11, from which passigew ; there being at euch ithe dungeon at the round the galleries of roof, whenee we could to of the college, iund ore us. On one side convents, glitterin, i" stre:tun of the shatlow Claral, survomided by is Lagrimas. Looking i Garient, the Eeclehospital, fimuctly : ills in long suecession

5 perfect in its kiul, fishled with :all the Fron the sectund over the rool of the is most lovely. The tower open, to allow in the centre also of , through which the Other observatoriss

Leaving the Praca do Collegio we proceeded to the Musenn, a very fino'structure, the architecture simple and chaste. Tho frout elevation contains abont thirty windows, having a goorl spuce intween them. Hefore the Museum is a lavgo open plot of grounil, well preed, and facing it is a builing avod as a lubotatury. This also is in excellent fiste, nul admimaly suiteil to the purpose. Having no uplere stury, it vevers a hwere extent of ground, the grand hall forming the centre. $\therefore$
I was much plensed when looking around as I stod in the sguaro, to discover -uothing which could in tho least offend the eyc. All was in perfect order, grood taste, aud uncxeeptionally cloan; the air blowing pure and fresh from the hills th the wath, on which side the praen is pertectly open. On the dwers of the labmatory being "penel, we entered the building. In the centre is an extensive and lofty lecture-roon, well arranged fir secing as well it hearing. On eveh sidu are hurge rooms, where in glassches the apparatus ned fer illustration is preserved. But the haloratory itselt, or experiment-hall, is most worthy of notice. It is a large loty room, fitted with stono tables, a variety of furnaces, lullows und retorts, a the grambest seale. The builing contains likewise a grological lecture-roum, nul rooms to preverve njecimens, besides a small smelting-room; which we serorilly inyweted.
We then erossed to the Mnsemm, enterin: first the natomical department to the right, which is properly kept seprate from the other part. 'The" leeture hall is very handsome, the seats for the pupila rivine in a circle ramd tho lecturer's talle, which is enonposed of a singlo Wh of fine marble, and turns on "pivot. In another apartment woro soveral wither anatomion tables and - ryieal apmaratus, swiuging beds, de.

Ly a decree of Pombal, all dead honline within three lagues of Coinbrit weec, if dem:mind, se nt to the Amtonical Musemu; lat now the mmoroms hospitahs : florl abundance of suly jects.
Returning to the xtrent, we entured the wentre hall. which is remarkably bandsone. A fine tlight of stips lads to the upper stary, onamented much in the sature style as the bank of Fighmul. A vat mumber of roms ruming tho whole length of this foor, und commaniating by sidedoors, have a tinn edfeet. The concholagical eollection is emsidered tho best. Tho entomologieal is incomplete; but a large number of inxects nte "specter from the Beazils. In minerals it is very tielt.
I was much interested with a misernlanems collection of curiosities, begun in the despotic days of Pombal, who orlained that anything passessing moro thau ondinary interest should he sent hither for preservation ; entirely regardlews of the owner's mwillingleess to part with it. Anong them is a maphet, satiol the the most fowertinl in the world: it lifts the enormons weighta of 2786 pounds. We eath of ux hung on to an iron ring attracten ly it ; thungh I camont sny it Hew the pu-knives from inu poekets. dfter witnessing its powers, one eould ahnost believe the womberfini asventeres of the renownel Sinbal. Thure is a small one lifting eight pounts. We suw a skein of theend, spun by a lacly of a neighlouring villuge, in the days uf Pombal, of as fine a texture as that prodnced by the silk-worm. How deliente indeed must have been hew sonse of feeling! There were the very muskerts with which the brave old Jown de Castro deliended Din against the infidels, mid, equally esteemed, the bolts of the aneient gates of the city.

When the old fortifications of Cuimbril were pulled down, the University demanded the gates, much revered as mies of lygone times : but finding them too largo to admit within the buidling, they were satisfied with the bolts alono. In the your $1243^{\circ}$ Unimbin was governer by a limave soldier, Doun Martin de Freitus, who had heen appointed to the emmand by his king, Suncho the Sceond. Alfonso, the brother of the king, having revolted ngainst his soveroign, whom he deposed, and doclared lisnoulf regent, haid siege to the city, which Don Martin infended for several months with the most Ietermined bavery, refising to aceode to all propositions of capitulation, till he had received orlots from his master to yield u, his commond. Sumber lying in eqpitivity cluring the euntinution of the contest, a 1 rniom of the event reacheal the eity; but the sturdy governor still vefised to yiell till he had useertained tho acenracy of the report. He demamped theretiore of Alfimsor a truce, which being obtained, he prueteded to Tuledo, where Simeho was buried, und having satisfied himself that his beloved master was no more, liy a sight of his inamimate body, he depasited on it the kogs of the eity, asking pormission of the dead king to present thern to the regent. Jnterpreting silenee into ae, esence, ho resmased them, and returning to Coimbra, opened the getes to Alfonso. The new king was no struek with the sallantry and loyalty of Freitos, that lue contirmed him in the governorship of the eity without exacting homags, settliny at the sum time a rich estate on his heirs. Don Mirtin, however, hooking on Alfonso as an invorper, ant considering that ho hall but performen his duty to his mister, mut only rethend to accept the boan, but laid his culse upm such of his heirs to the fourth generition as shoull talse allvantage of the grant.
We examined at large colleetion of Sonth Ameriean and In lini :ums, dresses, and other implements. I wat interested also with looking over 1263 simples of the beautiful wouls of Brazil; indoed, ther' were many wher objests well worthy of notiec, of which it was impossible to make a satisfactory exnmination.

We atterwards iscended a hill through the Pratea de Feira, to visit the Botanieal Gerlens, passing the picturesique oll sis, and beneath a lofty aqueduct, which leads trom the hills to the convent of Simtia Cruz. A hamdsoume iron miling with hrone ornaments, the work of a mative of Coimhat, surrounds the gardens; the gateway having then beon finished but a month. It is sitnated on the sides of a valley with numerous teraces, one rising above another, eovered with baro and tine trees. The lower anl warmer situations are devoted to tropical piants, many of which thrive here without the protection of glasu. On one side are the conservatories, some of large dimensions being in the course of erection. Alowe them is a convent, how belonging to the Butruical Seecety. On the olposite side, ma height surrommed liy trese, is tha hospital for surgical cases; also formerly a convent.

Neur the gariens, with a hoad space before it, is the Priests' Ublege, or rather seminary. The chureh attached to it is small, but richly ornamented; the ruof supported by tine marble colmmes. We entered at a side dom, beyoud which we did not advance, for the body of the ehureh was oceupiod by the students, sono thin'ty in mumher, who, habited in clerical robes, were on their knees with their lands raised before them, I [resune cither learning to chant the serviec, or at puayur.

Issuing thence, and leaving the youthful acolytes still uttering their monotonons chant, wo proceeded to a far diflerent scene, $n$ lovely terrace on the brow of a neighbouring hill, overshatowed by trees, and looking down upon a rich valley, fill of the dark-leaved olive, the gistening orange, and other fruit-bearing trees, surounding many a smiling cottage or country-house; the gardens and fields divided by hedge-rows of the prickly pear or cactus. Hither, their favourite resort on a summer-evening, conue the students to pass the short eool hour lefore night sets in, with their guitars, and to enjoy the fresh breeze from the monntains. I have betoro observel that the Portuguese of all ranks are passionately fond of music. It is also much practised ly the students, many of whom possessing fine voices, they have here, beneath the miconfined vault of heaven, full scope for their exereise.

Having still an hour of daylight before ns, I was anxious to visit the far-famed Quinta das Lagrimastho Garden of Tears-the sceno of the loves of Dom Pedro and the benutitil, though, alas! not guiltless Domma Inez do Castro, and of her early and tragical death. Proceeding down a steep hill, beneath tho walls of tho university, wo crossed the long stone brilge over the Mondego.

Close to tho river, near the south end of the bridge, are the ruins of tho ancient convent of Santa Clarn, founded by Queen Isabella. By a sudden riso of tho river, swelled by the melting of the snows of winter, the waters rushed in and overwhelned it; the gromend being now almost on a level with the arch of the front entrance. The present convent, a building of great extent, stmals considembly higher up the hill, with ono belonging formerly to an: order of friars just below it. The left wing was npproprinted to the reeeption of guosts. Till of hate years, there being but fow inns in the country, and these of the very worst description, nearly every monastic editice had a certain portion net apart for the reception of travellers, who were expected to contribute a trifle for their entertainment, probably in support of the chureh of the convent. Tho convent of Saista Clara receivel, like those of the same name at Lisbon and Oporto, none but the daughters of fidulgos, the nobles, within its walls. It still contains a large number of inmates, about fifty, including ladies and servants.

Turning to tho left, along tho banks of the river, we ston enme to the Camal dos Amores, "the Canal of Love," so called from a tradition thant Donan Inez used to send her letters down it, in a little boat, from the fountain whenee it leads, to Dom Pedro, whe anxionsly awaited then ly the river's side. Part of the garden has been lately inclosed, and a bandsome house built nenr the site of her residence, the property of Senhor Antonio Maria Azorio, a filalgo and peer of the realu, though he has ne title. He has attempted to inclose the whole, and to shut up a puthway from timo immenorial open to the public, lenting to that fountain by whose side the fair dame sat and mourned, hathed in pearl-like tears which rivalled in purity the drops from the spurkling strenm. The inhabitunts of the city resisted the sacrilegious nttempt, and when the owner found that he could not succeed. he allowed the spot to fall into negleet, heping the: io deprive it of its attractions.

Thither, skirting the walls of the garden, we next wended our way. I approached it with reverentina stejw, for to a lover of the versos of the mmortal

Camoens it is classic ground. The bright wates bubbles out of a smail cavern in a high moss-covered rock, overtopped by several magnificent cedars nnd a drooping willow, which throws n cool, thiek shade below and upon the silvery streamlet flowing from it. The streamlet falls into a tank, whence issues the Canal dos Amores, the conveyer, perchance, of many a tender epistlo from tho lovely lady to her lord. The very seat on which sho reclined beneath tho overhanging rock still remains, the hard stono (yet not so hard as the hearts of her ruthless destroyers), worn by the corroding offect of time. By tho side of the fountain is a tablet, with some of tho exquisite lines of Camoens engraved on it, erected by that galliant soldier, General Sir Nicholas Trant, when governor of the province.

Such is the Fonte dos Amores, the same which Camoens has deseribed in lines whose beauty nad pathos no poet lins ever surpassed. Tho view from the Quinta dos Amores, as seen from beneath the wide-sprending trees, is very bemutiful-the lotty walls and towers of Coimbra rising on the other side of tho Mondego, with the neightouring hills and far blue mountains.

Unwillingly I quitted it, but the shudes of evening wero fast approaching, and my companion was wearied, I suspuect, with his oxertions in my service. We sat for awhile to rest upon the hridge, where groups of grave priests ind masters of the colleges were collected, to enjoy the fresh air, which blew up the river, while my friend gave me much information regarding the University. It contuins at present about eleven liundred students, who have the means at their disphsal of nequiring every branch of human learning. There are professors of most of tho ancient and modern languages usually taught in our own universitiesone of English Litemturo anong tho number:

Besides the University thore is a fine building, called the Collegio das Artes, containing halls for the reception of the younger students. In this are tho chairs of six professons of langunges.

I rose by daybreak on Fridny morning, and walked forth alone along the willow-bordered bunks of the Mondego. The uir was pure and ceol, liko that of a fine spring morning in England; it felt almost frosty: tho dew-drops yot hung upon the lusughs, sparkling, us the mys of the rising sum first glancel upon then, and the birds sung with glalness, ns thoy fint his warming beums. I nat down beneath a willow, aul made a sketch of the pieturesque eity. The path led along the top of a high bank bordered by willows, between which on ono side was seen the river, and on the other the fertile green fields of the Mondego. Further on works of considerable magnitude are in progress to improve the navigntion, by narrowing the stream, under the direetion of Don Agostino. Along the banks also are mumerous water-wheels to irrignte the nutulows.
Returning to breakfast, I afterwards hasted with L- to visit the church of the Sunta Cruz, stunding in $n$ praç of that name, nud belonging to the enorsuons anil now suppressed convent of the same. A large stone sereen stands ontside, in frent of the chureh, und is of thut style of arehitecture to which I know net what name to give. The interior of the chureh is handsome, of the simple Gothic, with several fino tombs, the prineipnl being on each side of tho high altar; that on the right, of Sanche, Kigg of

The bright wate h high moss-coverel nificent cedars and a cool, thick slade let flowing from it. whence issues the perchance, of many dy to her lord. The boneath the overril stone (yct not so is destroyers), worn By the side of the - the exquisite lines ted by thant gallint ant, when governor es, the same which whose beanty and ed. The view from (1) from bencath the beautiful-the lofty ng on the other side ouring hills and tar to shutes of evening upanion was warimel, ny service. We sat ge, where groups of lleges were colleeted, w uj, the river, while antion regarding the int about cleven hunous ant their dispusal an learning. There ancient nad molern : own universitiesthe number:
is a fine builling, containing halls fir adents. In this are quages.
morning, and walkel rdered banks of the cool, like that of a it felt almost frosty: - Imonghas, sparkling, glanced upon theru, ess, as they folt his neath $n$ willow, and city. The path led corlered by willows, neon the river, and ds of the Mondege. e magnitude are in n, by narrowing the II Agostino. Aloug er-wheels to irrigute arwards hasted with Sunta Crur, stunding ouging to tho charut of the mame. A lo, in front of the hitecture to which 1 The iuterior of the Gothio, with several on each side of tho of Sancho, King of rortugal, nad on the left of Alfonso Henrique, both in the florid Gothic style, and much alike. I sketched that of Alfonso. On the lid of a sareophagus is a recumbent figure in armour, with a crown on his head, which rests on a cushion, and at his feet a hion couchant: nbove, in alto rolievo on the wall, hangs his helmet and gauntlets. A richly worked stone csnopy reaches to the roof, and is supported by delicate poiuted columns, having tho statue of the Virgin aud Child in the centro, with these of the Saints on each side and above. There is also a pulpit elegantly carved in stone. The walls are covered with blue tiles, on which are represented various scripturesulyjects.
We then, quitting the chureh, wont round the gardens, whiel, like the convent, have fallen into $n$ sad state of decay. The entrance-court is now used as a market-placo, and several of the buildings surrounding it were fitting up for some publio purperse. This convent is one of tho largest in Portugal: it appears almost a city in itself, straggling over a wide extent of ground, up and down hills, with oxtensive gardens stretching a cousiderable way to the east of tho city.
In our way linck to the iun we passel tho marketplate, crowded with women seated either on mats spremi on the gromed, or on baskets reversed, generally beneath large eoloured umbuellas, surrounden by their fruit and vegetables, fish, pottery-ware, or cheese.
The melons and oranges of Coimbra are remarkubly finc, and in proftuse abuadance. Two or three of the former wero sent up to us at dimere, to eut up, und select the one to our taste-their flesld was green and very wwect. la speaking of the markets, 1 must mention a privilege possessed by tho students, which, among may uthers grouted them by the Marquis of Pombal, would, in the present day, be emsidered very despotic and mijust. In the market called Feiri dus Studantes, opposite the new se, the students havo the first choice of all thut is sold, ; so that if they see ayything for which they lave a fimcy purchased by another person, they may compel hiu to give it up at the market price.
The Mondego oflers as great a variety of seenery as the Douro, though far iuferior both in sizo and beanty -lirst rushing through lofty rock-formed momitains, and then gliding ealnily between green meadows. It is navigablo fourteen leagucs (abouc forty miless) from its mouth; that is to say, seven lengues nhove Coimbra. Figueira, it tho nouth, is a fivourite bathing place of the inhabitants of the provinee, who resort there in the mutumn in great numbers. The society, it is reported, is then very agseenble ; for the fidalgos, who are shat in their country honses, far from ench ether all the rest of the year, then meet on social terus.

N1.

Visit to Conimpien, anomne Commba-Pombal and its stman lanhiscapr-Lblian-Castha or king minizMonastant of Hatallia-lts abchitscts=éhapbl of the Founurh-(inkat Cloistere and Chaptbr Hover-

We quitted Cuimbro at au early hons on the 4th of May, passing Condeixa, a pretty little town of 1200 inhmbitunts, the fenste portion of whon have no very gond reputation, owing to the viciuity of the University. Thence we turnod of to the left to Condeixa a Vella, where ure exteusive ruins of olden time. This was probably the Conimbrica of the Romaus which anteeeded and gave its name to Coimbra. The latter eity was liberated from the Moors in 872, reconquered by them in 982 , and finslly, in 1064, re-won by Dom Fernando the Great, assisted by Dom Rodrigo do Bivar, the celebrated Cid. There are still traces of this victory in the names of the Porta da Traieno, by which the conquerors enterel, and the Arco de Ahnediua, that is, of the "Gate of Blood, where the most desperato struggle took place. At the ereetion of Portugal inton kingdon, Coimbra beeame the capital of the monarehy, and continued so till the reign of Don Joso I. After the election of that prince by the celebrated Cortes held in this city, the nulility nad deputies requested him to transter the seat of Government to Lisbon, for the sake of the advantages derivable from the Tagas.

Heads of columns, fragments of wells, and hewn stones eropping out of the soil, seemed to accompany us all the way to Redina, whenee, joining the high road, we soon reached Pombal, in Estramadura. This town was founded by Dom Guallim Paes, Master of the Templars in I'ortugal, is 1181. The arms are-on a tower, between two doves ('omba), the angel Gabriel, a scrull issuing from his mouth, with Ave Maria. Here it was that, by the meditation of Santa Isabel, peace was made between Dom Diniz and his rebellions son Dom Altonso. A peculiarity in the reclesinstieal arrangements in this place was, that in one of its three parishes baptisms only were celebrated, in another marriages, und in the thind fumerals.

This town is principally known foom having given the titlo of Marquis to the must mprincipled statesman that Portugal ever possessel. Sebastitu Jose do Carvalho e Mello was born at Lisbon, May 13, 1699. He first distinguished hiuself as ambiswador in London; thence lie was sent to Vienua, where be meditated botween the Austrian Govermment and Beuedict XVI, Returning to Portugal, loe obtained the greatest influence over Dom Jise, and oceupied himself in all kinds of reforms, hoth goul tud bad. It was owing to his firmuess that, after the great earthquake, the seat of government was not tran-ferred to Lio de Janeiro, and he passed tomrteen diys and nights in his earriage, amidst the smoking ruins of the city, to preserve orler and to guarl the inhabitants agianst banditti. Ite has the credit, however, of the fimous specell, which he never made, when Dom Jove, helplessly inquired what was to he done? "Bury the dead and feed the living," was the reply; but it was in reality made by another nubleman who was present. To Pombal is due the expulsion of the Jesuits, under cireumstances of peeuliar cruelty, from Portugal; nad his whole doministration was a continued struggle against the old nolility and their rights. To revonge himself on their opposition, it is next to certain that he got up tho pretended plot of 1758, for which the Duke of Aveiro, the Marchioness of Tavira, and ethery, were put to death with great barbarity. Ile was, in eonsequence, raised to the muk of Comde de Ocims, sad m 1770 to that of Marguez de Pombal. On the denth of Dom Jose, in $177^{7} 1^{\prime}$ ombal was disgraed; tho sentence against the so-culled conspirators was revised, something too late in the cise of those who had been executed; the prisons were thrown open, and a great number of the ex-ministor's victims, in the hant stage of wretchedness, set at liberty.

Directly atter the death of Dom Jose, there arrived from Goa a vessel with an enormons sum of money, plate, jowels, and valualles of all kinds, from the suppressed convents of the Jesuits, which Pombal had quietly interded to appropiniate for himself; they were sent back to India ly Doma Maria I. Thero was a general ery for the trial and execution of the degraded minister ; but, out of respect to the memory of her father, the queen contented herself with banishing him to a distance of twenty leagues from the court. Followed by the execration of all Portugal, he retired to the plate whenee he derived his title, and died there in 1782 . That his talents as a politician have been very much ovirated there can be no doubt; that it would not be easy to overrate his total want of principle is equally certain. It is far clearer that he was a lad than that he was a great man. His remains were preservel by the manks when the chmrch of St. Frameiso, where they had been turied, was necidentally bunt, nad now lie imburied in a little chajel in the town.
The Igroja Matriz is 2 modern building; on the oppoxite side of the symare in which it stande is an inscription setting froth that, in that house, Charles, King of Spain (i. e. the Pretender to that monareliy, whose support by the lingling gave rise to the War of Succession), Aleit on Augnst 31, 1704. The eastle stands well on an eminener, and is an interesting min. The traveller should make a point of seeing the remans of the chmel of the Jrmplars, a very good specimen of Romanesque. Of the horrid atrocities committel by the French in this pher, Cobloll Landmanne an ryr-winces, has left a fiethtul acemut.
"The mithor had passed a week at Pombal, about two sears leffere its destraction, in the henese of : gengentleman at that phace, und was treated with great kinduess: the family consistel of in gentleman, his wite, one son, two daughters, and three young ladies, his nieces, all well elucated and very nmiable. Every evening luring the sail wark, little paties assembleil either at this honse or at that of some of the fricuds, and to these he, the anthor, went as me of the family: The hamony of these meetings and the plensantness of society were such as to bnfle ordinary deseriptions. The ecmmon prople, tor, appared in merh better circumstances than in other parts of the kingdon. In 1811, on revisiting $P^{\prime}$ mbal, after the terch and sword and done their worst, the author went to the house where le had experienced ro muln civility, bexions to bearn the fate of the family. On raching the dior, it nipented that the fire had heon less active there than in ather quartess: after lonorking several timesa fochle roice fie man upper windew inguired the lasiness of the stranger; on looking up he saw the well-known comitemmee of the mistress of the honse, hat she was deply wom big griat. The lady instantly deseembed, seroal minntes: nt longth, with at lad feream, she exclaimed, 'Oh! the Wrench have destroyed them all!" and elated the frollowing hent reming fecomat: 'On the retreat of the French amy from bear lishon, my fumily, "xepting my ther micees, thenght it most prndem not to fuit the homse, as the cheme hat nlways bell ont to us that cury home which the inhabitmits abmanoed thould hephamered. Uader this delosion, we wathral to remain liew in hops of saring our litth propry: wesaw them enter the town, mad all wat an toldably woll matil the last of them were nobat to depmat. Ola! then, what econes of bloodhad and murders of every kind! They came in and noked for my unfortunate husband; he no sooner appeared tham several solliers demanded money, plate, jowels, de., with their guns pointed at $b, \cdots$ breast, and threateming to shont him on the spot if he did not satisfy them: my unhapy son was at this time in the uper part of the house, and came down to defend his sisters, thinking that insult had been offered them; ns he entered the room the ruffians stabbed him through the heart: in au instant afterwards my poor hushand was shot, and this woise brought my daughters from a cmcealed place. Oh, God! how can I declare thirir fate? Yet why shonlal I cover the truth! They no sooner uphearel than the soldiers rushed upon them; one, thank Gool! eseaped into the yard, and, hy seeking hee death in the well, was saved from meeting the same trentment with her mingly sister, who was iletanined in this room with myselt, and there, before my fare, suffered on this very spot, pointing to the floor, 'every infamy which delicacy fortids me to mention; and then received the death-blow from the very men whe, had they lieen hmman beinge, ought to have looked ujon: her at least with compassion ; bat no, they seemed to rejoice in their guilt, and stripped both of us of ewry article of omr chithes; the house was then phundered, the furniture destroved, and set on tire.'
"The wretehed hidy, at this period of her narratinn, secmed to be almost deprived of her senses; hut, atter recovering, told the nuther that one of her nieces at the approach of the ememy quitted the homsin, and she had only just leem informed that a hody answering the deseription of her person had heen fomm deal and tloating in an mljacent lake; of the two others, mon had died ou board a vessel in Mondego Bar, either through want or from some other cnuse ; and the thirel, ather suttiring during several days muler a drealfinl state of mental derangement, had expired withat ouce reeovering ter reesm.
" l'rom this hense the antline went in quest of some place where his horses could be put muder cover during the ensuing night ; aul anuongst other luildings he entered a charel, which the enomy had evidently wel as a stable: the floor had been taken up to serm as fuel, or to sarach firg goll in the graves of the leat, mal was strewel with skills :mol other haman hones; the deemations of the inturior were totally dextroyed; and, on olserving some pieres of rope fistened to a high bemm over the principal altar, he was infinned that three of the friars lwolloging to the adjoining convent had been hung in their'sacerintal vestrients, lig the enemy, tro that beam. In short, wery church, luise, or other lmihling, was redneed to a state of ruin; and the mithor, in ramhling through the adiacent groums, ans. ticulaly near the atcient custle on the hill, in sumed of an idvantugeons apet whence he tomble cmiloy his 1"neil, was forced, ly the stench of the hallhimiond bedies, to hury away:"

On the oth we left Pombat for latibit. The heat was alrendy wery great, and the comitry sermeil to be pareled anil aris, nlmost desert, noul reminded an of may a Syrian lankean, millusion to which still greater etfect was impurtend hey the presenee lace and there of noras, or Mherish wellis, which the l'ortuguese have allowed to remmin just as they were when the Arabs dwalt in those comitrics. Noir were ofersiomal tmins of mules, hemring loiskets that hang down newly to the groumd, ont of keeping with the oricntal elsuate. ter of the lamestape.
hey canne in and anked e no sooner appeared mones, plate, jewols, bis breast, and threat$t$ if he side not satisfy this time in the upler $n$ to defend his sisters, offered them; as he bhed him through the my poor lusland was klanghtiters from a cunn 1 deelare their fate? uth ! They no seonut hed upen them; one, d, and, by seeking her om meeting the sanne er, who was letained thire, beforr my fice, ing to the lloor, 'every ne to mention; ind m the very men whe, ht to have looked yoon ut no, they sermet to ad beth of us of arry e was then phindereil, on tire.'
eriod of her narmation, her senses; lant, after ; one of hor nipees at ed the homses anl she a borly auswering the been formul lent and he two others, one hard go Bav, eitluer through ; and the thimb, witer ler a dheadtinl state of d withont once reco.

wont in quest of some

 mo umer cover durine st other lonildings he uy had evidently wed taken 1 tu serve as Erives of the dean, and Human lones; the otally destroyed; ; ind, oe fistened to a high vas informed that threr adjoining comvent had tments. hy the themy, hureh, lounse, of other ato if ruin ; and the adjacent grumids, $1^{\text {na }}$ uii thu lill, in veturth , he comble enuploy his aelo of the hatif hiarient for Leitit. The bent ceuntry secmed to loe - and reminuled us of Huxion to which still the prevence lowre and whieh the l'ortuguese 4 they were when the Nor were oernsiomal hat houg down nenly h the oricital ediurac.Gradunlly, howover, the eountry improved : verdure and cultivation succeeded to parched uplanels, and erossing the Lis, we entered the city of King Dinizthe Alfred and Charlemagne of the Portuguese. The situatiou of Loiria is very striking. The castle erowns an exceodingly steep liill, and the valley of the Li s both ways is very rieh and beautiful. The eathedral is quite modern, but haudsome in its way, mul in much better taste than the generality of Portuguese churches. The ether churehes are not worth a visit, thongh the city at first sight appears to ahound with towers, most of them belonging to suppressed monasteries. The cintle was founded by Alfunso Hemricue, and remains in telerably perfect condition. It commands an extensive view of the Serra de, Junter and the sea to the west. Leiria is said to have been the ancient C'allipo, Taken by Alfonso Henrique fiom the Moors in 1135, it was shortly afterwards retaken hy them,
It was a fivourite residence of Dom Diniz and San Isabel: the place where they resided is to this day called Monte Real. It was this king, rightly surnamed the Husbanlman, who tirst planted the extensive pine forests for which Teiria is famous. He thus put a stop to the incursions of the sand, which threatened to overwhelm the city, and provided an inexhanstible supply of the best deal for his kingdon. The original trees eame from Les Landes in Burgundy. It is worth while to tike a ride through the Pinhal Real; the deal of these trees is said to be the best in the world. Besides the traffic in this wool, there is a 1 . :ge manuficture of maphtha and of glass. $3,000,000$ reals are pail monthly at Leiria to the laboures in these two employments. Tho town was raised to be an episcopal seo by Doin Joao I11., in 1545 ; there is at present some talk of removing the bishopric to Thomar.

In.July, 1808, the inhahitants, meounged by the saceess that hal attended the patrintie iusurrection agalnst the French at Coimbra, proclaimed their legitimate sovereign before they had the neeessary meens of making their rising nuccessfni. On July $\tilde{0}$, General Margarot appeared before the town, and atter making a feebles rowistance the Portuguese fled, leaving 800 or 900 on the field. According to the Eremeli not a person was injured nor a house burnt; whereas the truth is, that the vietorions army began mindiseriminate butehery of old and young wonnen and infints in the houses in the churches, aul in the garilens. The most atrocious aets were not committed by the common soldiers ouly.

Leiria is honourally distingtished as heing the tirst eity in the Spains, and the fourth in Europe, whieh possessed a printing-press. In the year 1466 the Coplas of the Infinte Dom l'edio, of which only four or tive enpiess now exist, was published here.

In the liocio, nt the side of the rivir, there is a warm spring, which bossesses medieal virtues; and at the foot ol Montesio Miguel is mother fountain called the Olhes de Pedro, which semis forth trom the sime rock ono hot and one cold strenm. Hew, in li90, was horn the poet Frunciseo Nortrigues Lobos, who ranks next to Camoens and Sir de Miranda. ITis chief work is the Condestrube do P'utugal, a long historieal prem on the Lifer of Nuno Alvares Pereira; it is not with. ont great heantios in paricalar portions, but, from the Writer's lanving tied himseli' down to the task of an mualist, is on the whole very tedions. Lobe enjoyed the grentest popularity during lis life, num, when he Was drowned in the Therus neme Santarem, his death was regated as a public calnnity. He was vne of those who liad the moral courage to write entirely in Portuguese during the Castilian usurpation.

The River Lis, which flows through the eity, and gives it its name, is a fivourite of the lortuguese joets, and especially with Franciseo Rodrignes Lobo :-
"Formoso rio Lis, que entre arvorcdos lies cletenio as aguas vagarosas Atí que humas sobro outras invejosas Fiquen cobrindo o vao destes penedos."
We were, however, in a haste to get to Batalla-i spot well known to tourists as affording the greatest treat in its wondrous monastery, which has been described as "a momutainous confusion of spires, pinnaeles, piereed lonttlements, and flying linttresses," and which yot resolves itself into a very simple design, that is to he seen, perhaps, in ali Europe. The monastery was founded by Don Jono in consequenee of his many vows made at the Battle of Aljubarrota. The Dominicuas persuaded him to appropriate it to their order; and the letters of donation were issued from the camp before Melgaco, in 1388. From that date the works were carried forward, more or less continnously, till 1515, when, as we shall ste, they were given up for want of an architect.

The whole building may conveniently be divided into five portions: 1 , the otiginal chureh; ㄹ, the Capella do Fundidior, at the south-west end of the sotth aisle ; 3, the great cloisters and ehipter-honse on the north side of the nave; 4 , the smaller eloisters and nonastery itself, to the north of the great cloisters; 5 , the Capella Imperfeita (called also the Capella do Juzigo, and the Capella de Manoel), at the east end of the choir.
The original chureh was to all intents and purposes finished before 1416 . It is eruciform, with a very short ehoir, that has no aisles, aul two small ehapels at the east of each transept. There are neither side chapels nor side altars to the nave, minamgement which so remarkably contrasts with the usual l'ortuguese theory, and symbolises with our own, as not inprobably to he oving to the taste of Philippa of Lanotster, whom we know to have been consulted on the plan of the nave.

The traveller who enters the building for the lirst time towards evening, when its faults are to a great degrce hidden, will probably think it the most impesing cathedral he has ever liehehl. The total exterior length, howrver, reckoning from the extreme points, is only 416 feet, which is ahont that of Woreester; the interior length of eleir and nave only 266 feet; the height to the apex of the nave raulting is 90 feet. The nive has eight biys. The inmense height of the pier-arehes (they reached nu nltitudo of 65 feet) almost atones for the want of a triforinm. Though there is now merely a low mil to the choir, a tolerable rest for the eve is athored by the multifislation of the chatio areh, thas distinguished from the other eromingurehes. The piere themselves are exerelingly simple, mod in their tirst general ethect (though not in their monhlings) give the ilea (as do all lontuguese haildings of the same date) of transitioml work, The two chipels tos the eant of ench tmasopt are all similar, and triapsidal; the two cental ones with an eastern lancet; the two exterior mos with two lancets on the extermal sides. Thu first to the north is chedieated to Santa Jinhar:. Ihere is the tomb of the Duke of Averio, the tiathere of the nohleman exeented for Pombal's slmun plot. Its shimhls and inseriptions were deticed hy order of thats minister in hisattempt to root out the very uane of that lated tamily. 'Ihe next chatel is that of Nostra

Senhora do Rosario. Here was the tomb of Donha Isabel, rucen of Dom Affonso V.: it is now destroyed. The first in the south transept is Nostra Senhora do Pranto: here was the tomb of Dom Joao II. According to the infernal system which always has been adopted by the French expeeditionary armies, it was not only testroyed, but the remains of the monarch were exhumed and cut in pieces. The portions that could afterwards be discovered were buried under the miserable wooden case which at present exists there. The south chapel, dedicated to San Michael, is the burying place of the distinguished family of the Da Sousas.

The choir is painfully short, consisting of a pentagonal apse und two bays only, The whole of its fittings are in the most wretched modern taste. Before the altar' is the high tomb of Dom Duarte, son of the founder, and his queen, Donna Lianor. It is somewliat awkwardly inserted in the middle of the steps to the sanctuary, so that the foot of the monument is on a level with the sanctuary floor. The effigies were much injured by the French. The windows originally contained a series of subjects from the Ohl Testament in the nave, and from the new in the choir; a few specimens of the latter, as the appearance of our Lord to St. Mary Maglalene, the Annunciation, Visitation, nad Ascension, still exist in the apse lancets. The grenter part was irreparably injured by the French. In the yenr 1839 goveramint commenced the restoration of the fabric, appropriating to that purpose the annual sum of 2,000,000 r., i. e., alout $£ 420$.

MAFRA.

Froun the churech itself wo enter the Capello do Fundudor. Ou the death of Donua Philippa in 1416 she was buried in the centre of tho choir; Dom Jono gave directions in his will that ho should be luid by her side, till the new chapel which he was then erecting should be realy for their joint reception. IIe himself departed this life August tho 14th, 1434, the :anniversary of tho Battlo of Aljubarrotu. The ehapel was not then completed; he was accordingly buried in the choir, whence the remains of himself and his queen were trunslated with great pomp into the Capella do Fundailor. There they now rest; for the vault in which they were deposited fortunately escaped the diabolical outriges eommittel, after their usual fashioa, by the French, on the other royal personages buried ia Batalha.
Tho chapel forms a square of sixty-six feet, with a centrul octagonal lantern of forty feet in dinueter. This rests on oight magnificent piers, carrying most elegant stilted arches, thirteen foiled and reffilinted, the meuldings being picked ont in green, erimson, anul gold. Over ench of these, on each sile of the lantern, is a broul lancet. The vultting is most exquisite, exsp. cially the crown-like central boss, which has angels beuring the arms of Portugnal. No words call express the beauty of this lantern. In the ceutre is the ligh

ALI, ROUND THE WORLD.
taste. Before the Duarte, son of the nor. It is somewhat of the steps to the monument is on a he effigies were much lows originally cene Old Testament in choir; a few speciance of our Lord to ation, Visitation, and ancets. The greater French. In the yelur e restoration of the tunately escaped the er their usunl tashion, personages buried in ixty-six feet, with a ty feet in dianneter. piers, carrying most led and refolinted, the sen, criusoun, nul gold. of the lantern, is a most exquisite, espe. en, which has angels To words ean express the ceutre is tho high tomb on which repose the effigies of Dom Joan and Donna Philippa．The height of the slab is about seven feet from the ground：the efligies，which are very fine，are larger than life．At the head of each is an octagonal canopy；these bear on the other side the arms of Portugal，and of Portugal impaling England， respectively．At each corner of the tomb is a sump－ tuous stone socket for the cerges burnt at the anniver－ sary orbits of the founders．The tomb itself is quite plain，except for a rich wreath below the upper alab． This consists of briar－leaves，with the motto repeated， Il me plaît pour bien．The allusion is to the burn－ ing bush and to the call of Moses，the deliverance of Portugal from the Castilian yoke being thus typified by that of Israel from：Fegpt．At the east end of the lantern was an altar，wikh a most elegant triptych， destroyed of course by the French．

The south side of the chapol itself is taken up with the four recessed and canopied tombs of the four younger children of tia founders－their eldest son， afterwards the King Dom Duarte，having been，as was said before，in opposition to his fathor＇s express in－ junctions，buriod in the choir．These tombs are all of the same general design，and can scarcely be sur－ passed．The first，to the east，is that of the Infante Dom Fernando，grand master of Aviz，and conmonly called the Principe Santo，the youngeat son of Philippa of Lancaster．During his mother＇s pregnancy，she was informed by the physicians that if she wonld pre－ serve her life it was necessary to procure an abortion －a proposal which she rejected with great indigna－ tion．An expedition against Tangiers being proposed by Dom Duarte，it was put under the command of his brothers，the Infantes Dom Henrique and Dom For－ nando．The siege was formed with an army of 6,000 men．The garrison made a stout defence，and was soon relieved by the Kings of Fez and Morocco at the head of 130,000 Moors．The Portnguese．proposed to re－embark under cover of night，and might have done so in safety had it not been for the treachery of the chaplain，Martim Vieira．After resisting，for a whole day，the attack of the Moors on their entrenchmente， the Portuguese offered to surrender Ceuta on condition of being allowed to re－embark．Dom Fernando re－ mained as a hostage till the king＇s consent conld be obtained to the terms．It was judged that Ceuta was too important to be given up；but any sum of money was offered which Zala－ben－Zala，the captor of Dom Fernando， would name．The offer was rejected，and when Dom Juan of Castile threatened to take up armsin behalf of the Infante，the Moorish chiof transferred his prisoner to the King of Fe ，by whom he was promised every kind of honour if he would embrace the creed of the fulse prophet．On his refusal ho was shut up in a dungeon， withont light or air，where he remuined，in spite of the offer by Dum Duarte of Ceuta，till his death，June Dth， 1443．When Dom Alfonso V．had tuken Tangiers， and obtained possession of the wife and children of ita governor，Muley Zeque，he offered them liberty on condition of receiving his uncle＇s remains，which were accordingly given up to him，and trauslated with great pomp to this toul，June 17th，1472．Though nover canonisenc，Dom Ferisndo was vererated as a saint in many places；and a brief of Pope Paul II．，in 1470， was issued in his honour．

Tho sotfit repreats the motto，Lie bien me plait．On the sides of the tomb is the crows of Aviz，and foliage of the ground ivy．The second is that of the Infante Dom

Joao，soventh ohild of Dom Joao L．，and master of the order of Santiago．He married his nioce，the daughter of the first Duke of Braganca，and diad at Alcacer do Sal，1442．The motto is，Jai bion raison：the oma－ ments of the tomh are a pouch with scallops，aud foliage of the wild strawberry；on the wall above is repremented the Passion．The third is that of the celebrated Infante Dom Henrique，Duke of Visen， and Master of the Order of Christ，the father of Portuguese maritime disoovery．He was born in 1394，and died in 1460：His motto is，Talent de bien faive：the tomb is ornamented with the orler． of the Garter，and with folinge of theilox：his is the only effigy．On the other；tomles are phered a kind of cylinder ornamented with shields，in a manner clearly intended to represent a pall．The fourth is that of the unfortunnte Dom Pedro，Duke oficimbra，and after－ wards regent of the kingdom．He was borr in 1392， and fell in the Battle of Alfarrobieira，May 20th， 1449. Buried first at Alverca，his body was manved to Abrantes，thence to San FMoy at Lisbon，and finally here． The motto is，Désir：the ornament of the tomb is the order of the Garter and the balance of justice；tho foliage is that of the oak．

The east side of the chapel is occupied by the four altame of the four Infantes ：the first to the north，that of Dom Pedro，is dedicated to the guardian angel of Portugal ；the next，that of Doin Henrique，to Sau John Baptist ；the third，that of Donn－Jowo，to San－ tiago ；and the fourth，that of Dom Fernamelo，to the Assumption．Each had a fine triptych，peintel by Gran Vasco；they were all destroyed by tho Fropeh．

The west side is much plainer，and merely contains four recessed arohea，intended probably for the tombs of any future members of the royal faming．The win－ dowa on all three sides are the samo ：a large central one of eight lights and two side ones of four，tho tracery boing remarkably gool；theys were fillod with scenes of Portnguese history，from the battle of Cnupp d＇Ourique to that of Aljubarrota．The entrance from the nave，opposite the laat bay but of the south aisle，ia by a very fine ciuquefoiled and doubly refoliated arch．

We will now visit the clointerw the manl entrsnce to which lies throingh the socristy．The Intter，which is approached from the canturn chiapal of the nouth transept，is a good plain．but nowito remarkable buill－ ing，vaulted in two bays，north and wouth，and lightel by two two－light windows at the east．Mane they slow the holmet worn by Dom Jowe I．at Aljabacrota，and his sword．Hence wo onter the ohapter－house，an cx－ quisite building，hearly equare，but vaulted octo－par－ titely．This vaulting in perfoetly beantiful ；the cast window of three lighte resembles tho best Euglish middle－pointed．Opposite to this is tho ontrance to the cloistera，a nine－foiled rafoliated arch，deeply te－ cessed，of four orders．On enoh side of this is o large window of two lights，trefoiled and refoliated．The whole of this entrance，which，notwithstanding its massivencss，has an effect of extreme lightuess，is une of the most beantiful things in the olurch．In the ceutre of the ohapter－house are two woodon cases，re－ placiug the tombs of Dom Alfunso V．，and Dom Alfonso， the sou of Dom Joao II．

The chapter－house was probably the erection of Dom Alfonso $\mathrm{V}_{\cdot}$ ；if so，the corbel at its south－enist ungle， which is shown as the portrait of Alfonso Domingues， the first architect，muat be that of one of his succersors． ad master of the ece, the daughter d at Alcacer elo sion : the oma th scallops, nud ha wall above is 1 is that of tho Duke of Visen, , the fiather of (o was born in to is, Talent ds with the orler ilex: his is tho phened a kind of manner clearly urth is that of the imbra, and afterras borm in 1392, May 20thi, 1449 . was rumoved to 1, and finally here. f the tomb is the of justice; tho ipied by the four o the north, that aardinn. angel of Tenriqu, to Sau in' Jomo, to SanFerumado, to the tych, printed by by tho Froneh. merely contains ly for the tombs mily. The wina large central nes of four, the were fillad with battle of Caupo he eatrannce from of the south doubly refuliated

- rual ontrance

 the latter, which pel of the nortly emarkable buildvouth, and lightel IXere they show Aljubarrota, and pter-house, an exvaulted octo-parautiful ; the east he beat Enylish the entrance to arch, tleeply ieof this is a large refoliated. The twithstanding its o lightness, is one chureh. In the wooden eases, reand Dom Alfonso,e erection of Dom senth-enst angle, Onso Domingues, of his successors.

The cloisters, manifcstly (whatever Portuguese nntiquaries mny say to the contrary) the work of Dom Manoel, hare no rival in Europe. They are one hundred and aighty feot square, ench side enriched with seven windows, of lights varying from three to six, with tracery of the most wonderful richness and variety; sometimes wrought in mere foliage without any figure, sometimes arranged in bands and circlos round the cross of the order of Christ, sometimes encircling with its wreaths the sphere; no two windows are the same; scarcely any two based on the same idea; additional variety afforded $\cdot / 7$ the passage to the court itself throngh the centre: ${ }^{\prime}$ Jow on esch side. Nor are the monials less $n$. - ann the tracery; some are voluted, some. . me are checky; some are, as it were, wreathed $n_{12}$ sae leaves; some seem as if they were built up with $h$. cones; in some, strange lizards climb up and twist themselves in and out among the foliago of oak and ivy, and, what is here a favourite enrichment, young cow cabbage; some are dotted over with stars, some nebulous, and some ohevronnéc. It is wonderful that one mind could devise such variety and extravagance of adomment. The gem of all, however, still remains to be mentioned. At the north-west augle a most delicuta network of tracery projects inwards in two bays, inclosing a little squire for a fountain. The multifolintions and refoliations of this work far exceed evcrything else in the cloister; and the oblique view from the north to the west side of the cloistar, whero the aye takes four planes of tracery, each foreshortened, but all at a different angle, forms such a labyrinth of enrioliment as none can conceive whe have not seen it for themselves. The whole consists of three stages; nnd, though now dry, one may judge of its beauty when the rays of the sun fell upon its wators through the network, or, it might better be said, lacework, of stone that surrounded them.

To the west is the refectory, a very plain building; and to the north, the place in which the wino belonging to the convent was stored. At the north-east of the cast side is a circular-leaded door, extravagantly adorned; branches of trees, cables and lizards, twisted together, form the orders of its :w oh. It is now blocked, but originally led into the lecture room.

The cloisters of Alfonso $V$., now forming part of the barracks, are good, bit not vory renuarknble.

We will next visit the Capella Imperfeits. In order te appreciate the epoch at, anel the circimstanees under, which it was erected, we must remember that at the beginuing of the reigu of Dom Manoel, justly surnamed the Fortunnte, the discoveries of Vasco da Gama in the cast, and Nuno Cabral in the west, hal opened to Pertagal the way to conquests and to riches which the rest of Eurcje almost regnarded as fabulons. The wealth that poured in from Coromandel nnd the Spice Islands, und the yet unexplored regions of Santu Cruz, now Brazil, elevated Dom Manoel to a degrec of opulence which perhapsnoother European monarehever possessed. Abhorring war, and always on good terms with Spain, he was ennbled to inululge his passion for buikling to the fullest extent; and the twenty-six years of his reign filled Portugnl with a prorligious number of maguificent edifices. It nppears very probable, from the constant and friently intercourso cnrricd on between thint country anil Enghand, that. Duni Manoel concuived the iden of Imitating Henry VII.'s clanpel at Westminster, by the Cnpelln Imperfeita : both attneled to the conventual church which form the toyal burylng-place;
looth occupying the same position, the extreme east end; both built in the fullest development of their respective styles; and for the service of both, artists summoned from the furthest parts of Europe. It seems to have been tha design of Dom Manoel to translate hither the remains of the earlier Portugueso monarchs, and then to fix the place of his own sepulture among the tombs of his ancestors.

The chapel itself is octagonal, each side being triapsidal. Ench of those chapels was to be nppropriated to sume Portugnese monarch, or to some member of the roy al family. They are therefore furnished with piscina und aumbry: the netual place, bowever, in which the hody was to be deposited is not visible from the interior. Niehed in between ench two of tho chnpels is a kind of projection, furnished with a lnncet truceried thronghout. The entrunce was to linve been in the side of one of the adjacent chapels, hut it has never been opened. Each of these chapels has a thirteen-foiled and refoliated arch of entrance, the shafts having threo orders.

The glory of this chapel is, however, its western arch, smpassing in richness anything even in the cloisters. The west side of the areh hasseven orders of the mostelaborate folintion springing from hollow sockets : amongst knots, flowers, and foliage, the words Tanias el Rey are repeated over and over again. The menning of these letters has been much disputed. The tradition on the spot is, that El Rey is of course Dom Manoel, and that T'anias was his farourite chronicler: the only ohjection to this is, that there never was such a person as Thanins. Other equally inndmissible derivations have beon procosed by the antiquaries. Thie ehapel had advunced to its present condition when Mattheus Fernumdez died, April 10, 1515. It appears that he left no working drawings behind him. The design for the completion of the ehapel was therefore intrusted to his son. The new architect was a $\mathrm{m}^{-} \boldsymbol{r}$ of the new generation, and commenced on tho woot side in tho clerestory stage, by erecting two henvy Grecian arches, spotted and spangled with stars, and with n vulgar balustrale boncath. Dom Manoel, linpponing to pay a visit to the works, was so much disgusted as to give orders that they should instantly stop. IFe probably intended to provide himself with an urchitect more eapable of carrying them on, not knowing that Christian art had renched its extreme limit. Ife was ulso much occupied with the convent of Beleunt Lisbon, which, gorgeous nt it is, is immeasumbly inferiar to Batalha. It is necessary to procure an order fiom the master of the works to aseand to the roof. This is nemrly flat, and is very well covered with large and slightly convex tiles, firmly embelded in cement-a striking contrast to the generality of the Peninsular cathedrals, where, as for example at Burgos, the tiles are usunlly laid one upon another withoutany fastening whatever. There is a rieh piareed battlement of about soven foet high, with pinnneles, and a second pierced battlement of the same charncter to the nisles. This was a good denl injured in the great eurthquake; lut has been rentored and with very tolerable suecess. From the roof of the navo that of the choir looks menn indeed, stuntel, withont battlement or pinnaele, and merely strewn over with conrso red tiles. The traveller should pay particular attention to the west facade, remembering, however; tlint the lantern of the Capella do Eundader was originally cajpeet by a richly panelled octagonal spire, throw'n down in the grent enrthquake. The west door is especially grand with its six npostles on either jamb, its seventy-eight canopied saints in the arch, its tympanum representing Our Lord with the four Evangelists, and the Cororation of Saint Mary in its canopy.
The best external views of the whole building are1, from a little hill covered with olives abont three hundred yards to the south; and 2, from a tree that overhangs the right bank of $\Omega$ recky lane leading to the northwest. At some distance to the south-east of the convent is the original parish chureh of Batalha, now disused, the conventual church being appropriated to the parish. It has in fine west door, imitated from the entrance arch of the Capella Imperfeita, but mere arabesque. In the interior there is absolutely nothing to see. The parish was dismembered from that of San Estovao at Leiria in 1512, and the churel erected in 1532.

XII.

Alcobaca-Celebrated Cibtrictin Monastrar-Cutnen -Moorieh Cabtle-Nostra Senhora de NazaritinBattle of alnubabrota-Poetvouese Heroine-Cross the Serba D'albardos-Otrbm-The Templars at Thomat-Itg Wonderful Convent-Chureh of San Joao Baptista-Cotron Factoar-San (iregorio.
We liad started from Leiria on foot, laaving the arreiros to follow with the mules; nad when we had feasted almost to re]letion upon the exquisite details of the monastery, we mounted for Alcobacn, which we only reached aftor a somewhat weary and long ride. The fact is, we were tired before we started. Aleobnen is a large village, whieh would be passed without notice were it not for its ancient nubey, whose renown has, like Batalha, made n place of pilgrimage of it to all such as undertake an artistic tour in Portugal. The Cistercian monastery of Alcolaen is declared in the Mandbook to be the largest in the world. Nor is the history of the fuundation of this great structure without interest. Alfonso Henrique, when expelling the Moors from the country in 1143, having become master of Santarem, sent a deputation to Saint Bernard, at Notre Dame de Clairvaux, requesting from him a band of monks for the new foundation which be proposed to erect. Accompanied by the court and the newly arrived Cistercians, tho king searched out the most suitable situation between the Seria d'Albarios and the sea, and began to dig the foundation with his own hands. The first clurch was completed in four years. At a later period it served for the Igreja Matriz, till Cardinal Henrique, afterwards king, who was then nebot, rebuilt it in the wretched taste of his time. The aetually existing building was commenced in 1148 and finished in 1222 . It is said that there were for a long time 909 monks in this place, but that this number never could be exceeded. They were divided, according to the rule of Saint Benedict, into denneries: as soon as nu office was finished by one set it wis taken up by the next, so that praise was never intermitted. The abloot was mitred; he was ox officio high almoner, precentor of the Chapel Royal, general of the Cistercian order in Portugal, sulject to Rome only, and, till the reign of Dom Joao III., visitor of the order of Christ. The black death reduced the monks to eight, a blow from which the abbey never recovered: its revenues were partially seized, nud the income that was left was barely enough for a hundred monks. Still, however, Joao Dornellus, the tenth abbot, was able to send eleven lodies of his vassals to fight at Aljubarrota.

Cardinal Henrique was the twenty-sixth and the last of the abbets for life: then began the succession of triennial heads, which lasted till the suppression.

The chureh of Alcobaca, next to that of Batalha, is the most interesting building in Portugal. It is an excellent example of a purely Cistercian design; simple almost to sternness, it strongly resembles the abbey church of Pontigny near Auxerre, and is manifestly the work of a French architect. Its tetal length is 360 feet; its height is said to be 64 feet, though it is scarcely possible to help, believing that the latter is underrated. The twelve pier-arches of the nave are remarkable for their predigious height; there is neither triforium nor clerestory; the piers themselves are tho perfection of majestic simplicity, and the vista down the nisles, which are neeessarily the same height as the nave is, from their length and their narrowncss, exceedingly grand. The chureh itself has a circulnr npse, a prestyytery, or, as the Portuguese call it, charola, with nine elhapels round it, transepts with aisles, and a south-west chapel to the south transept. The choir of the monks oceupied the five east bays of the nuve, the screen being ut the end of the sixth. Notice more espeeinlly the tine effect of the nine windows in the apse, the two great marigolds in the transepts, and the exquisite manner in which the pier-arches are stilted. In the chapel of the south transept are the tombs of Dom Alfonso II. anil Dom Alfenso III., with their queens, Donua Urraca (eelebrated ia Sonthey's baliad of the "Five Martyrs of Morocco") and Donnn Brites. But the mest interesting monnments in the ehurch and in the kingdem are the high tombs of Dom Pedro and Ignez de Castro. Coutrary to the almost universal law of menuments, they are turned foot to foot, the king having expressly consmanded this, in order that, at the Resurrection, the tirst ohjeet that should meet his eyes might be the form of his beloved Ignez. Nothing can be more ex. quisite than the details of both tombs, more expecially that of the queen. The seulpture uader six straightsided arches on each side, the Crucifixion at the beal and the Great Doom nt the feet, are of the very best workmanship of the very best period of Christian art. Neither in the choir nor in its chapels does there nuw exist aaything of interest; the former was much spoilt by an Englishman named William Elsdea, who "beautitied it" for the monks about $\mathbf{1 7 7 0}$. To the east of the charola is the sacristy, 80 f t by 38 ; it was the work of Dom Manoel, nad is rather plainer than the crections of that king usually arc. The chapels of Nestra Senher do Desterro and do Prosepio are worth seeing. The west front of the church, with its two towers, is a barburous ereetion of the seventeenth century. Fortunately, the west door, which is of seven orders, has been left in all its original magnificence. It is worth aseending to the roof of the church in order to obtain a correct iden of the size of the monastery, now principnily used as barracks. It was almost dextroyed by the French, and rebuilt in the style that might be oxpected after thoir expulsion. The order for consigning it to the flames, signed by Msssena's own hund, during his disgraceful retreat, fell into the hands of his pursuers. The soldiers piled a quantity of intlammable inaterials round the piers of the chureh, but fortunatels, theugh for the depth of six or eight inches their bases were reduced to lime and crumbled off, their immense massiuess preserved them from further destruction. A ty-sixth and the list gan the succession of the suppression. to that of Batslha, is Portugal. It is an Cistercian design; trongly resembles the Auxerre, and is maniitect. Its total length be 64 feet, though it ing that the latter is ches of the nave are eight; there is neither ros themselves uro tho , and the vista down $y$ the same lieight as and their narrowness, a itself has a circular tuguese call it, charola, epts with aisles, and it ansept. The choir of bays of the nave, the sixth. Notice more nine windows in the in the transepts, and $h$ the pier-arcles are soutl transept aro the (1 Dom Alfonso III,, rraca (celebiated iu Martyrs of Morocco") ost interesting monnkingdom are the high de Castro. Contrary monuments, they are aving expressly consthe Resurvection, the is cyes might be the thing can be more extombs, more esjecially ro under six straightrucifixion at the head , are of tho vely best eriod of Christian art. hapels does there now de former was much William Elsden, who about 1770 . To tho sty, 80 f ct by 38 ; it nad is rather plainer ig usually are. The terro and do Prosepio front of the church, arons erection of the tely, the west door. n left in all its origial ending to the rouf of orrect idea of the size ally used as barracks. Freach, and rebuilt expected after their masigning it to the own hand, duriag the hands of his purantity of intlammable hurch, but fortuately, ight inches their bases lled off, their immense urther destruction. A similar tresiment would, in a few hours, have brought such a church as Lielem to the ground. The monastery was 620 ft . in width by 750 in dejth, and contained five cloisters. According to the Portuguese saying, its cloisters were cities, its sacristy a church, and its church $a$ basilic; or, ns it pleases Mr. Kinsey to describe it, a basilisk. The north-west end was the hospedaria or reception-house for guests; there were seven dormitories; the kitchen was 100 ft . in length by 22 in brealth, and 63 in lieight to the vaulting. The freplace which stood in the centre was 28 ft . in length by 11 in breadth, and its pyramidal chimncy was supported by eight columns of cast-iron. The refectory was 92 ft . by 68 , divided into three nisles by piers. The library, which contained 25,000 volumes and 500 MSS., was removed at the suppression to the Bibliothea Nacional at Lislon. The rights conferred on this monastery by Alfonso Heuriques, and somewhat curtailed by his successors, were again bestowed in full by Dom Jono IV. The only recogaition by which the abbey confessed itself dependent on the crown was the custom which compelled them to present a pnir of new boots to the king whenever ho visited the convent in person, and even this was abrogated by Dom Alfonso III. in 1314. It must be remembered, however, that this, like all the other great houses, paid three-tenths of its yearly revenues to the state. The foolish and fanatical hatred tisplayed by Camara towards the English is nowhero so conspicuons ns in his accombt of Alcobaca. Without mentioning the French, he simply says that the convent was burnt down, partly in consequence of the civil wars, and partly because the Eaglish troops set it on fire, from its containing a manufacture of cotton which rivalled their own. Here was preserved thecaldron taken by the victors at the Battle of Aljuburrota. When Philip IL. visited Alcobaca, he was pressed by the abbot to allow its conversion into a bell. Piqued at being thas reminded of the defeat of his countrymen, "Pray let it alone," he replied; "for if it lins made so much noise in the world as a calliron, who could ever endure it when it became a bell $1^{\prime \prime}$

From Alcobaca an excursion miny bo made to the Pilgrimnge Church of Nostra Senhor de Nazareth. The town of Pederncira, close to which it lies, is situated at the mouth of the little River Alcoa, and contains 2,000 inhabitants. It was to this plaee, according to Portuguese tradition, that Dom Roderic fled, in company with the monk Sin Romnno, from Caulinno, near Meridn, where he had taken refuge after the Battle of the Guadalete and the loss of Spain. Here they lsy hid for a yenr, at the end of which time San Romuto died; and the king, having buried him, fled to Sun Miguel de Fetnl, near Vizen, where he caded his wretched life. The hermitage was cruelly sacked ly the French in 1808, and there and at Pederneira jowels nod valuables to the anount of 600,000 crusndos were carried off. Of 300 houses at Pederneira, only four escaped destruction; und the soldiers made a point of burning all the bonts and nets which they could find. The tower of Nostrn Senhor de Nazareth serve: as a sea-mark. It was to this place that Dom Lourenco de Lourinhan, Archbishop Primate, was carried, when supposed to be mortally wounded at Aljuburrota, and here he recovered. Pederneira itself had its origin in the time of Dom Manoel, when the sea-side village of Paredes, which contained 600 houses, was overwholmed by the sand.

Aljubarrota, a name like Alcobaca, of comupt

Moorish origin, and still bearing the article al prefixed, famous for the great victory which decided the independence of Portugal, is close to the Cistercian Monastery, from which it is, indeed, only separated by a spur of the Serra d'Albardos.

At the death of Dom Fernando I., in 1383, there was no legitimate successor to the throne. Donna Brites, daughter of the late king, had, by her marriage with Dom Juan I, of Castile, lost her right of succession. Dom Petro, father of Dom Feraando, had left an illegitimate son, then Master of Aviz. At the Cortes held at Coimbra this nobleman's pretensions were so stror fly put forward by his partisans, and especislly by the Treat Constable, Dom Nuno Alvares Pereira, Dont Lourenço de Lourinhan, Archbishop of Bregn, and the great lawyer, Jono das Regras, that he was unamimonsly elected king. The King of Castile, who had previously, during the Regency, invaded Portugal, on receiving this intelligence, again put his army in motion, and advanced upon Lisbon. Dom Jono I., who was then in the north, hastily gathered such forces as he could, and followed the Castilian army. On the 14th August, 1385 , ndvancing from Leiria at the head of 6,500 men, he fell in with the Spanish vanguard at a place then called Canoeira, now better known as Batalha. The Castilians are reckoned variously at from 33,000 to 90,000 ; they lad the ndvantage of the field, occupying its west side on a hot Angust aftemion, and they had ten pieces of artillery, then called trons, the first ever seen in the I'eninsuln. Notwithstanding these advantages, the king, who was ill with the ague, was recommented not to accept battle, but overruled all objections. The armies therefore met at the foot of the ridge, where Batalha now stands, but something more to the west : the centre of the Castilians was at Cruz da Legon, and tbeir rear hand stretched beyond Aljubarmota. Just before the engagement, the Archbishop of Braga, ricling in fiont of the Portuguese lines, gave indulgences to the soldiers trom the true Pope, Urban VI. A Spanish bishop did ns much to his nation from the Anti-Pope, Clement VII. The Portuguese were in thrce divisious: the lett wing, which formed tho vanguard, was comnunded by the Great Constable; the right wing, commanded by Mem Rodriguez and Finy Mondes de Vasconcellos, consisted of the knights who took the romnntic appellation of Namorados; the third division, commnaded by the king in person, consistea, like the first, of seven hundred lances, supported by this best part of the infantry; the rcar-guard, which contained the inferior soldicrs, was nt a considerable distance behind. At the very moment of uttack a ball from one of the trons killed two brothers in the Portugueso army. A panie began to seize tho front line, when a common soldier, with great presence of mind, called out that, so far from being a bad omen, the shot was an capecial mark of God's favour, inasmuch as to his certain knowledge the two men so slain were desperate villains, who would not be allowed to share in the glory of the future victory.

The king himself and the constable performed prodigies of valour; the former was struck from his horse by a Spanish knight, and would certainly have been killed on the spot had it not been for the prompt nssistance of Dom Gonçalo do Macedo. The great staudurd of Castile was tinally taken, on which Dom Juan, in spite of his ague, mounted his horse, and never drew rein till he reachod Santarem. His tont, with all its furniture, fell into the hands of the vietors. The silver triptyeh of the altar is preserved in the sacristy of Gumaraens; and a largo bible, takon with it, was given to the Abley of Alcobaen, and is now in the Bilidintheca Niciomal at Lisbon. Other relies of ${ }^{*}$ the battle, of umbonbted authenticity, are the helmet worn by Dom Joao, in the sicristy of Batalha; it requires a stroug man to bear it on his heal; his sword, in the same place; his pelote, in the saeristy of Guimarnens ; mad, till the year 1834 , there wis to be seen, in a homse at Aljubarrota, an immense chaldron, employed in cooking beans for the Castilian army, Three of these were taken: this, that at Alenimen, which give riso to the witticism of Philip Il., and another, which disappeared soon after the lonttle. The Castilinu prisoners were qunerously used : the Portugrese engrged on the cueny's silte either fell in the tight or were put to death afterwards: a brother of the cunstable was among the latter uumber. Dom dona, utter remilining, as the custom was, on tho field of bathle three days, went to Alcobacit, where he celebrated the Festival of san Bernard (to wboso intervessiom, he attributed the victory) with great penu.

A pleasent ride amdst rooks and bushon, the tirmer of which kept increasing in size and confusicu, till we got into it real chnos of monntain, tolal us wo were crossing the Serm diAlhadis, and when we attainel the crest a splendid pmonama of magnificent mountain scenery mate us still more sensible of this fact. We could see before us where the sirra booke of on the one hand into what is called the Junto, which is por longed to, Cintrit, and was prolonged right into the Athatic on the other, and where it temmintas on the suporbly ahruit Cap Ioca. ly mistake we got tu Ourem instend of Thomar, our destiny, a misemble und desolate village which exowns a shater preak of the Serm to Junto with I'uinons walls and no hosteley.

Atter partaking of the luspitality of the worthy priest of turem, we proceedel the next day by a better road to 'llaman, n town which, situated near the ruins of the ancient Nabantia, is loy many dedamed to boone of the most interesting phaces which Iortugal can show tos the ecclexiologist. It. position on cither sitle of the Nuban, the steep hill that rises ta the west, and is erwwed with the chormons convent it the Order of Christ, the pilgrimage chapel of Nowsa Senhera dat Piedale, the very carious luridge, and the spire and tower of the two ancient parish eburches surphes even Coimbra.
No mulicient account of this wonterfal convent lias as yet been published, and even Comm Riwagnski dis. misses the subject in a very fow pages. laswing the charch of Sin doan laptista (of which presently), and the little l'mace heyom it, we begin to ascend the steep hill, the convent walls towering abow onv heads. Turning sharply to the left, we conter tho pastorn, and then the gate, of sontiage, coming out into what is now a wheat-fiokl, but which was formerly a court. Cluse to the walls are the remains of tho ehapel of Samat Caterina, built, as the guide will not fail to assure you, by Dom Caterima, queen of Dom Diniz; lutas the only Queen Catherine of Dor'tugal was the wite of Dom Joa III., local tradition does not preserve math aceuracy here.

Deseending the hill, we next visit the ehurch of San Jowo Haprista. At the west end of this is the Praci, with the Casa da Canama oprosite; above that the convont. Leaving the chureli nud retracing our steps to tho bridge, which is of good pointer work with openingsat the side, we get to the sonth-enst eme tho town, passing the cemetery. Itere is the church of NostriL Senhor chas Olivaes, or Nostra Senhor da Assump. cano: the rleseent to it is by nineteen steps. The tower is letached, ind stands some distance fiom the west end; it is Romanesque, low, and massive, and may possibly le referved to the times of Gualimi Paes. From hence we jrueced to visit the cotton mmufactory. Althengh, of course, it canuot compete with tho great Englihh mills, it is novertheless internsting to see how these things are done in Portugal. The largest in the king. dom is at Lishou, and is worked lyy steam. This, which is turned by water-power, is the second, and there is one neally as litge at Visella, near Porto. It, emplays 300 hands- 160 wonen, 1.10 men -besides 100 hands ontside the mill, in bleaching, do. The highest pry is 2's. a day, the lowest, half a testac, $\mathbf{2}_{4}^{9}$ d. Hence it is worth while to walk along the Levada, which work the mill, to the weir at its head, both for tho sake of the view and for the picturesque effect of the washing and bleaching earried on in grottos at the side of the Nabao.
hothaciag our steps, and again erossing the bridee, we visit the ehapol of Saint (imenmo, nu octagonal bnibline with a fine flamboyant door, Immediately e this, on the summit of a sterp hill, is the piloramage elatpel of Nostra Senhor dar Piodade; the arsent to it is by 2.j) steps in 9.4 tiors, the lanling place on each tici having on each side a semieircular stone seat : the eflect of the whole is bory tine, but indre a Portuguese'sum the ascent is rather trying, IHaltway up on the right-hind side is tho now ruined chapel of Nustria Senhor Jesus do Monte.

XIII.

Santamey-Cutremes and Winits-Portcgetse Ralitats -Chtoch snd Monastfin of Bflem-Bemfica Con-rbnt-l'abaip or quetidz-l'alice op Cintha-Cistle. Convent of tenia ds Gintha-The Cobk Conestpexila Veube-'ine sitimes-the Roek op LisbonPalace and Cunyest of Mafma-The Tonees Vearas.
We wre now in comparatively civilised countries and our journy from Thomar to Sintarem presented now of thone ditlicultios which had opposed themedes city is one the seventeen civil alministratcoes of the kiugdom, ame is situated on the light ground to the nord of the Tigns. It was the Seatabis or Prasidiun Jnlium of the liomans. Its present mame is derived fiom Sintal laia or Sinta lreme.

Santarem was taken from the Moors by Don Alfonso VI. of Cintile in 1093, lut it soon fell again into their pwer. Its tinal liberation by Alfonso Henrique $\mathrm{j}_{\mathrm{s}}$ one of the most interesting episoles in Portnguese listory: Santarem was the last strong place held by the diguelites in 1833 , and they oaly surrended it atter their three defeats at Pernes, Almoster, and Asseiceirin. To the ecelesiologrist, Santarem is a most interestiug town. The chureh of San Joao do Alpono, said to be a corruption of Alcorao, the building having originally been a mosque, is now used as a theatre, and miserably defaced. Tho tower is detached : there is a good denl of Romanesque work remaining. Close to tbis is the modern chureh of San Martinho. Next is the ehureh of tho suppressed convent of Graca, founded by the Count of Gurem: tho high tomb beneath which his remains rest is one of the finest in Portugnl. Hern d pointell work with sonth-vast eme of tho ere is the chureh of ra Senhor da Assumpan steps. The tower is from the west enl; it and may possibly be a Paes. From hence nufactory. Althongh, It the great Euglivi ug to see how these e largest in the kingy steam. This, which second, and there is ar Portu. It, employs - -besides 100 hands The highest pay is a!, 9.9 . Hewee it is Levada, which workx , both for the sake of efleet of the washing tos at the side of the crossing the brides, resmion, an octayonal dwor. Immediatedy sterp hill, is the pilnor dat Pichade; the 14 tiors, the landing h side at semicireular is very the, but muler her trying, Intlivay o now ruincul chapel
-Pontcgerae Mamitars Belem-Brmfica ConCe op Cintha-Clstles--Tie Cobk Cunbsti: lock of lisbox--Tue Tombes Vembs. Iy civilised countries, o Santarem preseated al oppased themselves yspust. This ancient nisistacoess of the kiug. 1 ground to the notith or Prasiditum Juliant bame is derivel from

Ioors by Don Alfonsin n fell again into their Alfonso Menrique is isodes in Portugues: strong place held be cy only surrended it Mes, Almoster, and , Sintarem is a most Salı doao do Al pata, p, the building laviag used as a theatre, anil - detarched : there is a remaining. Close to Martinlo. Next is ent of Graea, founded i temb beneath which t in Portugrah. Her is ako the chapel of Santa Rita, who is invoked against impossibilities: hev picture, by Iqnacio Xavier, " native of Santarem ( $17: 4$ ), is much almirel. I'lo church of the Jesuits, now prochialised, was exceedingly rich, and has some goorl mosuies. That of Santa Maria de Marvilla (said to be a corruption of Maravilha, from a mirachlons image sent hither by St. Bernard nfter the eapture of the eity) is asserted to dato from 1241 . 'The conventual ehureh of' St. Francis dates frem the 13 ll century.
There are sone remains of the ancient walls, which had formerly five gates. On tho opposite side of the river is the town of Almeinim, once the famous residence of the Portuguese monarehs during summer, when its precinets aboumbed with ginne. The town was built loy Doin doito I. in 1411, the royal eastle by Dom Mannel : here several of the Infantes were hori, of whom the most eelebrated was tho eardinal king DomHenrique. Herealso that monureh, when worn out with years and sorrow, held the Cortes $\mathrm{j}_{\mathrm{i}}$ which he male his timal decision of leaving the erown to whover had most right--that is, in plain terms, most power. He was buried in the chureh of this phace, though his body was afterwards translated to Belem.
From Eantarem we procended to Carregalo and thenco by Villa Framea, Alhumlar and Pavea to Lishon. A malway was at the time in progress along the valley of the 'liagus to Santarem, a line which will, it is to he hopel, lee prolonged to $\mathrm{S}_{\mathrm{p}}$ ain. The railway is indeed, now neen to santarem, and foremment is pmonoting ralway comnmancation fiom Lishon to upartoly it, throngh Thomar, Pombal, and Coimber, as also from Sintarem by Alnantes, Ciato and Portalogre, t" Batigua, where a junetion wonlal be eflected with the spanish, and consequently with tho Fremeh miluays. The rave leanties and exqusite relies of art contanind in Portugal will then tenuly ho opened to all the worde. Hi rearvo to ourselves the deseription of lishon, the mpital of l'ortugal, to another opportunity, when the illustrations, which must necessimily accumpany such descriptions slabl be in haml ; but we shall not part from the 'Tagus withont a word or two concerning thre of its chiet gems-the Churehand Monastery of Pelem, of which we have given a sketel at pioges 040 and 2 ( 1 - the Palace and Castle-Convents of C'intria and of Penlat dat Cintra, of whieh hatter we hase also given a sketeh at page 249,-and lastly of the comome labace and Courent of Mafra, for an illastration of which see page 248 .
We madeone way to Behna down the 'lagus by hoat, pasibur through a fleet of vessels of all nations, and landing at the foot of the celebuted tower, within a few paces of the no less celelrited convent. This manificent structure was intendeal as an expression of gratitule for tho suceessful result of the expurdition of Vase dit Gama. The site was seltectel, as being the place where that heso embarked, July $5,1.197$, on his adventurous experlition, and tor whieh lie returned July 29, 1499. Here originilly, when the place was called the Baro de Restillo, stoml a suall Ermita fomded by the Infinte Dom Henrique, for the conveniance of mariners. In this ehapel Vasco dia Gama and his companions passed the night previous to their elubarkation in praver. When it was determined to ereet a magnificent ehureh here the name of the loeality was changel to Belem (Bethlehem). The first stone was laid by tho king in person with great ceremony in the year 1500 . The stone, which is a eirbonate of lime, was obtained in tho neighbour-lunorl. It almits of exquisite earving and it is very dumble; origimally white, it lats now acguired a rich gellen hue.

The whole buidding is erected on piles of pine-wool. It sustained scarcely any dumage in tho great earthquake; an small part of the vanlting then injured, and sot attenien to, fell down alout a year after. It is entered on the south side under a rich poreh, which contains more thas thirty statues. In the ajex is that of Nostra Senlor dis lieges. The ioorway is double. Abowe the central shatt is a statue of the Iufunt Dom ITenigue in armour. The navo and transept are very rich specimens of the latest flambyant. The eastern arches of the gallery that supports the coro alto aro surerbly seulptured. The arrangement of the trinsepts is singular ; there is a kime of vestitule hetween ehoir and atave which would itt first siwht be taken frem thenn,-wherens they really form dwarfexeresennees at the extrensity of this. The choir is of later work, and "classical." On the nortl, we the tombs of' Dom Mandel and his Queen Maria; on the south those of Don Joao I. and lis Queen Catherim. They ne all plain sarcophagi, supported on elephasts. The cloisters are very rich aur wool.
leaving Iasbon by the north-west roal, we soon reach Hebntica, a vilhge coutaining ahout 3,500 inlabitants; on the way, the Aguls Livres and tho multiture of windmills are the prineipal objeets. bemfiea is prettily embosomed in orange-groves, gavdens. und orehards; aud near the Limangeinas stuads the once eelebrated Dominiern eonvent. It is now a manufuetory : tho chureh is presorved, and contains the elaupel uf the tastres, amb the tomb of the gront lawyer, Josit das Regras. The former has, among other monmments, the mansolemm of the everfumous Viceroy of Inlia, Dom Jono the Castro, iho men whom l'ortughl ean bunst. In the chareh is an image of st. Mary, brought from Thais by the Portusuese squmbron sent to the assistance of Chamles V. of Sjain, muler the command of Jom Laiz. Aseending the hill of lorcalhota, ame passing a somewhat desolate country, we resel theluz, at a distance of two leagues tiom Lisbon, : royal patace timuled ly Dem Iedro III., husbambot I Jont V I, and of Dom Migucl. Here is shown tbe bed in whieh Shom Perloo IV. expired; the room is ealled that of Don Quixote, from a series of paintings ocenping cighteen pancls, which represent the adventures of the Kinght of La Manclan. 'The palace is much like other palates; in the oratory is a monolithie Dorie eolumn of agate, found in Herenlanemm; it was a present from Lew XII. The gaxlens, which were modelled on those at Marly, are, in their way, very tinc. Hence, over a rough broken country, covered with heath, to Ramathos, mother royal palace, where the Queen Donna Curlottil was sent to reside in 1829 , in consequence of her refinsing to take tho oath to the Constitutiou, and where, in eonjunction with Dun Mignel, she plotted its overthrow. Dom Carlos of Spain resided here in 1832 . It is nuw destrted. Passing the villape of San Pedro, and turning the edge of the mometain, wo catel the first view of C'intra, with its erags towering up nbove the thiek folinge, the Cork eonvent, and the two large conieal kitehen-ehininies of the royal palue, which form so curions a fiature of the view from all parts.

This palatee was the Ion'tugneso Alhambin, "the bel" of the Moorish kings, and when, in after ages, Lishon was made the seat of the Christian Government, it became the favourite residence of its monarchs. Dom Alfonso V. was here born, and here died. Here it was that Dom Sebastiao held his last nudience, hefore sailing on his disastrous expedition; here, also, that the miserable Dom Alfonso VI. was confined for the last eight years of his life. The palaee is a singular mixture of Moorish and Christian architecture, with its fountains, terraees, gardons, arabesque windowe, slender shafts, reservoirs, and towers. The Sala das Pegns, the Magpies' Snloon, is a large apartment, painted all over with magpies, each bird holding in its beak the legend Por bem, "For good." It is said that Dom Joao I. was discovercd by bis Quefn, our Philippa of Lancaster, in the act of bestowing some very questionsble mark of attention on one of her maids of honour ; and that his only reply, on the principle of Honi soit qui mal y pense, was Por bem. In orter to show that he was not nahamed of the adventure, and to sativise the gossip of his court, he gave orders for paintiug tho Magpics' Salvon. Henee the visitor will be taken to the chapel, and to the rom in which Dom Alfonso VI, was contined. It is a miserable apartment, in which the brick tloor is entirely worn away on one side by the perpetual walking to nind fro of the unhaply monureh, like a wild benst in his den. He died suddenly of an apoplexy while hearing mass, September 12 th, 1683.

Hence we proceded to the Penha convent, built on the the very summit of one of the highest peaks, for the Jeronymites of Belem. (See page 249.) On the suppression of convents, the Penba was bought by a private gentleman, from whom it was shortly afterwards purchased by the King Regent Dom Fernamio. The view from the summit is exceedingly fine, embracing the Arrabida to the south, the mouth of the Tagus, the lines of Torres Vedras, the Serra Baragneda to the north, nud the huge pile of Mafra, rising from the plain, at a distance of about nine miles.

Another of the lions of Cintra is the Cork convent, founded by Dom Jono de Castro, and emsisting of about twenty eells, purtly built over the surthee ot, and jartly burrowed in, the rock. They are lined with cork for the purpose of keeping out the damp, whence the name; are about 5 feet stume, and have tlid doon so low that it is impossible to enter withont stooping. Cintra is thronged during the summer by Lisbon visitors, anxious to exchange the intense heat and sickening eloseness of the capital, for the fresh cool shades and breezy heights of these mountains. Lodgings are to be let in every part of the town; most of the Portuguese nobility resident in Lisbou, and of the British merchnuts, luve a yuinta here ; and, no doubt, the great tame of Cintra has partly arisen from the striking contrast it atlords them.

From Cintra we made an excursion to the Calo da Ross (the Rock of Lisbon). A league to the west is the beautiful valley of Verzea aud the town of Colares, celebrated for the wine of the same name. At the cad of the valley is a kind of lake, where there is a pleasure boat, and to which parties are often made from Cintra. A league to the west of Colares are the Fojo and the Pedra d'Alvidar, or Alvidrar. The first is a huge cavern in the roeks, tenanted by a prodigious quantity of sea-birds; the second is a headland, rising almost perpendicularly to the height of about 200 feet. The whole of this const is very grand : its highest peak, the Rock of Lisbou, attains an altitudo of 1920 feet.

From Cintra our way lay due north across a parched and desolate tract of gromd, close abutting upoon the Atlantic to Mafra. Villa Chilheros was tha only place passed on the way, and soon ufter passing it we ob. tainel a first sight of the enormous palace anl convent, which, acerrding both to our own natiomil Ifand book and tho Lisbon Guide, is "very striking"-and most assuredly it is so. (See page 248.)

The hustory of its fomudation is this. Dom Joan V ., anxions for an heir to succeed him in the throne, made a vow that, on the birth of a sm, he would change the poorst into the most maguificent monstery in his dominions. On the birth of an heir he caused inguiries to be instituted with a view of fulfilling his vow; and timaly seleeted Mafm, then a poor foumdation for twelve firiars, as the site of the future convent. In imitation of the Eseurial, he determined that it should entrace a palace ay well as a monastery. The architect was the German Ludovici : the foundation stome was laid November 17th, 1717, and this ecremony alone cost 200,000 crowns. Thirteen years were sjent in the erection of the prlace, and tho average number of work. men was 14,700 .

The whole of the edifice forms a parallelogram, of which the longest sides (those whieh run trom north to south) mensure about 770 foot. To the south is the palace called the Residencia on Rainla, to the north that amed the Residencia del Rei; both are four storics in height, and terminate in magnificent towers at the extreme angles of the edifice. It contuins 866 rooms, 5,000 doms, 2 towers 350 feet high, and 9 courts. The great fault of the whole is, that no one room is worthy, in its size and proportions, of the rest of this stupendons building. The Camara te Audienea is preserved as it existed when Don Jowo inhabited the palace; nud it is the ouly ajartmeut by which the triveller cin judge of the effict of the whole when it was the residence of a wealthy court.

The libmary is three hundred feet in length, the pavement of white and red marble, the roof stuecoed, and the bonkcases of the richest woorls. It eontains 30,000 volumes. The belfrey mud clocks are perhaps the most curious portion of tho building. The mawhinery of the latter resembles rather that of a Birminghum manutaetory than that of a religious edifice. The immense cylinders covered with spikes, which set the chimes in motion, are descrvelly celebrated; the entire wright of metal in each tower is reckonel at upwards of 200 tons. In the southern tower the lambls of the elocl mark the time in the common way; those in the north in the Roman sethod, with only six divisions in the circumference. The church surpusses in richness the rest of the edifice.

Close by Mafra are the commencement of the celibrated military lines or defences known as the 'Torres Vedras. They extended from Alhandra on the 'lagus to the mouth of the little River Sizandra, near Turres Vedras. The direct line across the country, between theso points, is about twenty-six miles; the line of defence was about forty.

Following the course of these lines to Alhandra and Villa Franca, through a delightful ceuntry, we returned ly the steamer to Lisbon, much benefited and in no small degree improved by our trip.
: its highest peak, the ade of 1920 feet. north neross a parched lose abutting upon the eros was the only place fter possing it we obus palace and eoavent, wn nationnl Ifanellook striking"-and most 8.)
is this. Dom Joao V., im in the throne, male a, he would change tho eent momistery in lis heir he caused inquiries fulfilling his vow; and r foundation for twelve convent. In initition hat it should ennimice y. Tho nreliteet was idntion stone wish hail s ceremony alone cust urs were spent in the erage number of work.
ms a parallelogran, of which run from north oot. To the south is reia da Raiula, to the cin del Rei ; both nro minate in magnificent f the edifite, It comtowers 330 fice ligigh, of the whole is, that no and proportions, of the ing. The Camara de kisted when Dom Jua it is the only apart:an judge of the etticet residence of $a$ wealthy feet in length, the parethe rouf stuccoed, and wools. It contains and chicks aro perlalifs building. The marlither that of a Birming of a religions elifice. I with spikiks, which set erveclly celebrated; the a tower is reckoned at outhera tower the lianls he common way; those hod, with only six diviChe clurell surpusses in nencement of the cellsknown as the Torres Alhandra on tho Taygs is Sizndra, near Torres s the comutry, between -six miles ; the line of 0 lines to Alhandra and tul country, we returned h benefited and in na trip.

A VISIT TO ATHENS.

I.

 Anthectit - Moblas Athens - P'ebric Buhbinasathens asit wis in the Tivis of the Trmis-its fiest Capitutation and Massacbe of the 'T'ukn-lisempition or Odissecs.
After sone months spent in exploring that hugest and most benutiful island of the the Mediternamean, Sicily, I embarked at Massina fin Gre Fromber

Spurtiventu, where we bade farawell to Italy, it is but twente-fime homse' rims to Cape Matapan and tho island of Cerigo, where the elassie land first presents itself in the slapre of of onny rocks with a nakel uncultivated soil. Evening was fast appronching, aind simple ar the serne was, still the setting sun, which cast a lurid red tint over the clitls, imparted to them a grambiose aspect, and seemed to redect in samguinary hates the reminiscencer of years of heroic confliots.
"A tree!" shouted an Englishman at our clbow, "a tree! I have been 'doing' the Enst thess ten years, and havo passed this point tweuty times, but never saw that tree lefore, I must muke a note of it." It was a tree, lout a sickly and stunted me, left there probably to show that whero one thinks avery thing has crumbled to pincex, a fragment still remains erect.

It was not till the evening of the next lay that we anchored in the hurbon of the I'inalus, now Drako or Porto Leone. Most of the pissengery hurried otl to Athens the same crening, especiatly our shapperyed compatriot, in the tly-lenf of whose handbook a considerate friend had written," Beware of the hotels of the Pireus."

Not so with us. The rocky island, which became comected with the mainland within historical times, with its Acropolis, temple, theatre and Hippodameina Agora-not to mention its many historical reminis-cences-had too many luints of interest not to attract us to it fir a day at least. The modern port does not prosent a rery inviting aspect (See above), and the mamy little ports of old-Canthans, Zea, now Stratiotiki, and Mmyehia, now Fmari-were only fit for trivemes, but as time revolves, so things seem sometimes to veturn to what they once were, only in a ditlerent shape ; and if $n$ turreted two-gun iron-boat can, in our own day, vanquish large men-of-war, why may not Greece also be once more as stont of defence as she was when assailed by the fleets of Tyre and Sidon?

The Pirens constitutes a gool introduction to Athens; sem first, there is much to admire; visited afterwark, the eye is a to rove from fiagmentary mins of when time to the ever-living elear blue ocenn, that laves its sides just as it did in the days when it was a rlouns belonging to the tribe Hippothontis. It was therefore with no small amount of zest that carly nest moming we started for the Castellia, the loftiest of the two heights that tower out of the peninsula, and at whese fart is the smallest of the three small harbours. Leake supposen this to be the site of the Acropolis of Plalerum, hat more recent anthorities eonsider it to be the site of that of Pirreus or Munychia, and which wats smroumed by Themistocles with a strong line of fortifications. So also it has been shown in reent times that whilat Themistocles fortified the livans, it was formed into a regnar plamed town by Pericles, who employed Hippodamns for this purpose. Hippodamns haid ont the town with broad straight streets, erossing each other at right angles, which thas formed a striking eontrast with the morow und enooked strents of Athens.

Stambing upon a fiagment of the fortress, from which Thutsybulus carvied on suecesstul operations against Athens, and which had harboured Autipater, Casinder, Demetrius Polioeretes, Antigonus, Amas, mod a host of great men of antiguity, or it may have been of' the temple of Artemis Munychia, the guarrian didty of the citadel, we could contemplate helow the slope where onee stood the Dionysiac theatre, identifisf, however, by some with the ruins near the hadenar ot Zea, the position of the broad street that led down to the Hippodameian Agora, the site of the telmple of Zeus Soter, the lesser loight terminating in the promontory Aleimus, where stond the tomb of Thenistocles, and oljowite to it, the tomgue of Getionif, where the Fonr Hubilred erected a fort n.c. 411 .

We notieo here muly what hy almost at our feet; bat a fir more comprehensive handsenje was in renlity embaced from the hill that was last militarily ocenpied by the Girecks, minder Genural Gordon, in 1827. A levid plain, in pmrt covered with olives, stretches hence to Athens. The Acropolis rises magniticently in the hatekground, projected on the horizon with sueh distinetuess in the blue sky of Greece, that all its edifices can be grnecally diseerned, though some miles distunt. To the left, the long valley of the Cephissus, torminating in the Phaleric Jay, with Phalerum at the point opposite to the Pirreni Promontory, is hemmed in by Monits Corydullos und J'weilum, part of the runge of Aegalos, on the ume side, and by Mounts Anchesmus and lyenbettus, with Atheus at their font, in the other. The sualler valley, which contains the frooks Ilisios anul Eriblanms, is just discermed as an opening lutwern the two last-mamol hills and the spurs of Mount II yonctons, celebratel for its honey. Several modern villages and vites of interest are na to bo detneterl, espeeially with a glass, aromud mad on the flanks of the hills, notoriously Jrumpalta, tho two Agryles, Aexono, I'hymeetin, Coryelalus, and Ihrmus. The whole, inded, of the centml plain of Atticn, which is inclosed by mountuins on every side, exerpt the south, where it is open for the sen, stunds like $a$ panorama before the Mimyehian spectator.

It recpuires an eflort to juss from so comprehensive $n$ seene to the details, to go downand peer ont tho chehe or moles formed by the prolongation of the walls, and

Which, with the towers upon them, onee male "closen ports" of the little harbonts; to seen for traces of the temple of Aphrodite, near which were the five Stoa or colonnades, bunenth whose protecting shades the merchants of old transacted business, or to andeatyonr to pieture to oneself what the armonry of l'hilo, or the Phreattys, the eomet of justice for the trial of homicides, may have been. Struck down by Sylla, aheady in the time of the Amasian geogmpher, Strabo, the Pirens was nothing but it small village, sitmate around the ports and the temple of Zans Suter. It is a little better in the present day, only its cmplacement has, changel.

In this latter respeet modern $A$ thens is staremy. happier than the port now called Mako, from the colussal white lion removed to Venice in 1687. Few worls have been more almsed and misuserd than that of "dhigon." lnstend of' sheltering their mewly-tomuded city behind the Acropolis towarls the sea, the lavarian dynasty lave exposed it to the biting winls of the north; and instead of innitating the ruspert of Hatrian for the city of Theseus, they have placul their heay constructions upon the ancient ruins as if to hear them down and crush them for ever.

There is uot a palm of land on this plain of Attica that hias not its significance. Let the wht have conse from Egypt, or from Aspyria, or from Lesser Asia, still it is there that that sublime expression of intelligence which, more than anything rise, indientes the perfection of cultivated minds, atnined its apogere; there is its real temple, ant it ought to lave been respucted. It is absurd to oppose the nourpation of ald systens by new ones, to condemu the supplanting of things that are gone by by new creations; but in a comotry whe everything had to be immgutated, what possiblo aeces. sity was there to phant the new enpital upon the very ruins of the old one? The grat heary modern $]^{\text {nataco }}$ of l'enthelic martile that now stands not fiar firen the Acropolis indicates precisely the distance that intervenes between an Hellenic and a Bavarian intist fee 1. 260 ).

The plan mpon which modern Athens is lnilt cam be best compured to a twelfth euke, cut into funr equal portions. I'he two ineisions corbexponel to the strets of llemmes anul Eole; the central ormament is the palace just mentioned, an ormment that eost the mation un chormous sum of money. With the exeeption of these two cross streets, the rest follow my rirection tint neoms to linve best suited then. Sill mure recently the grood taste of the pople has induced them to build at n grenter elistance from the Acropolis, and a new quarter ealled Nenpolis has arisen on tha side of Tyealnitus, which has the mlvantage overe tha other of rectilimenr, or at all evonts continumes streets, and which lienats of at least one resjuretable monlerin strueture - the University, built ly 1 hansm, a Dinish melitect.

Of other publie buildings, the less that is said of them, in tho prosenee of the momments of antiquity by whieh they me: sumomuded, the locter. There is a hospital lior the bliad, it sehool for orplans, a seminary, and an Amalion, mhiminle elanitable lommations, hat not works of art. Sums of money lave been put uside for the erection of maculeny, of whioh the foumdations linve bein liaid, as also of a museum; blut the ristless mul susceptible disposition of the modern Greek, lemshing them on to ineessant prolitionl insurrections, is fiur more fatal to the progress of the country than even the notorious inerpucity of the Buvinims. The foun-
m, once mate "closel secin for trieces of the were the fice Stoe or ting sliades the mer. , or to cmbleavour to oury of l'hilo, or the the trial of homicides, Sydia, ahendy in the $r$, Stribo, the Pireus e, situate aromad the Soter. It is a little its cmplacement has

Athens is seareely Hed Draka, fiom tha cuice in 1687. Few 1 misused than that of of their ntwhy fimmed o the sea, the Bayarian biting wimls of the The respuct of Madriau - placed their heary ins as if to hear then a this plain of Attica .eet thr art have cons from Lessel A sia, atill ession of intelligence indicates thre perfeeits aprogee ; there is ita been respucted. It jn of ohl systemes by wim ig of things that are in a combtry whete , what jossibli iteceseapital upon the very henvy modern pablace nds not fire irem the distance that intera Bavarimu artist (see

Athens is hailt cambe , cut into fone equal 'espond to the atreets trial ormament is the at that eost thin mation ith the exception of follow any direction them. Still mure plo has induced them in the Aeropolis, and arisen on the side of age over the other of ous streets, and which merern strueture-tha amish urehitect.
less that is said of tmucuts of antiquity e lextter. Thero is a orphans, a seaminary, cablo foumilations, hut y have been put iside it which the tomads. nuseum; but the restthe modern Grecks, tionl insurrections, is ho country tlan eren invilius. Tho founlations of a maval school have also been reeently lain. Instend of being siturted at tho onee celebrated port, the seat of a mama power which defied the greatent and most extensive state at that time in the world, the site selected for it hat lnen in A thens itself, where, awaiting the ereation of a nave, it has been converted into a gymnasinm.
If the aspect of modern A thens is lithe prepossessing in the prestent day, it ean easily be immuned what it was a few years ago, when in the hands of the greedy, ligoted, anid $t_{y}$ ramieal Therk. The Rev. I . Walsf, dhaplain to the britisul Embasey in the time of Comd smagtord. las left us a hidef, lint graphic account of the phace fot that epoels. The city, he sinys, emtains Atunt 1,600 houses, of which 1,000 atre inhativer? by hirecks. We first traversed these, and perham you wond wish to how a genmbl idea of theiv "ppeamee, thangh it is not ang to deserils a town where you sea wither sitrects nor honses. Conceive, then, it mad wall, or one not much hetter or stronger than that of aprislt pound, inclosing an arer of about two miles anciramberence. Conevive this areit to he tilled mal anterseeted with long, erooknd, nutwo, didey latnes, nut half so wilo or so eloaln as there of the worsu Whag-town in bughum: eonceive these dark and winding passurges, inelosen hy high mondering walls, in whith there wre sates like prisom-toots, inmared with bitil-learls, opening in the modile and :wo large rings on the outwile, as it the master, liko a suder, had takent cano to lock up all tha pusomess when he wout abromb: conorive exprothine silent and bifens in theer lanes, exerget at loug intervals a sumbe log uttering a diomal howl, a mblitary 'lurk loosening (4) hastoning a cluin to lat himself in or out, or a wman cationaly prepring thomgh a dreviee beside the gite ; aml this will give yon it pempal imporsion of the purent rity of Alimerib. It is but to tre imagined what a montrast panta I etwern its actual state and what your repere to fiml it. Moblern Lemme so sutty athth and "vidoneses of its pristine grambur ; lout Athens is a mismblald hase of lowent, anong which the few trexgents of it that remain mo to ha songht antwide the city, and for these I rober you to the dedails of nere erompetent temedhers.
ain wonder, however, that the liedy spirit of the Areck, however long sulnherd, shonh have ono day broke forth trom so igheble a bondage, so shatmeless and oppreswive. It was very shortly (ouly onto year) atter the above sketele of X Lhems under the 'turks "as penam, that the pront-rip emirgies of the Greeks hroks ont into opra insurrection. Tho popmhation of Athens consisted at that time of 11,000 tireeks and 2,000 'Indks, of which latter 500 were well-armed soldiers. The town necupied a sumidivedar space, direetly under the Aerogolis, which rixes in a steep precipice above it, and entirely eommands it. A whll inclosed the town, rmuing from the face of the precipice till it again met it, nud this sas furnished with gites, which the 'lurks curnfilly "losed every night.
$D_{1:}$ George Finlay, writing of this first outhurst in 1801, in his Mistory of the Ciretk Revolution, Vol. I., 1. 199, says:

Athens was a town of secomdary inportaneo in Fircee, fidlen as the other towns of Greece then were.

In popalation it was equal to Livalea; hat one-jal was of the Albanim tace, and both the 'luristian aml Mussulman inhabitants were an impoverisheal community, consisting of torpid landed proprietors and lazy petty traders. Yet Athens enjowed at milder local alministration than most towns in Greces. It formed a fiseal appunge of the Serail. Its atheient funce, imf the existing remains of its furmer splentone, rentered it the resort of truvellets, and the resitienes of fireign consuls. who weremen of higher attainuents than the comnercial eonsuls in most if the pon'ts of the Ottoman embure.

The Mussulmans of Athens formed about one-fith of the popmlation. They were an matarlike and inorlensive mee. 'Ihs. Voivole's gunted comsisted of sisty Mnssuman Albanians, who were the mbentiers in the place. The (ireeks were not mase cutcrinising on canragous than the Thrks.

The linst reports of a geneml insurrection of the Chnistians amsed the Mubammadans to trmaport theid tamilies aud their valualile moverbles into the Aeropolis, and to fill the empty and long-nemented cistems cleven of the princigal Chwistians, nme curvan thent "p tu the Acerpolis as hosteres. This act imitared the Athenims, who sent messmuers juritine the Jhbmian villagers of Mount l'anes to eome to thene assistance. Un the night of the Stlat othy, the joply of Jenidhi and Khasin, wher repesent the A hommans ot ohe, thongh they are Albanian eolonists of th wernt date, by the foral stables. Abont vixty Slu-ahmans were surprised in the own ath slats. Next day the deropolis was clonely bhekabed. Jhunger anit thint com-adramed, int they lekd ont whsthately, and on the lst of August, lioll, they were inlined loy Oner Vrimi.

Oner Vifoni had reliaverthe depopohis in the antum sun with provisions and military stanes. lint the bea stiphly of watur. 'They dide nut elatu our their eisterms during the winter, and they trusten to the imperfiect inchmare of the. Sepmblyee fore the defenco ol' tho unly good well they prasersed. The winter proved watienty dey. The timeks dowe the 'lumes from the Eerpendife: on that when the suply of Water in the eisterns wha mhatasted, the garrison was forced tor cipitulate.
'Ihe eapitulation wats signed on the 21st of June, 18:2, 'Ihe 'lurks surpondered theid arms, and the Gredes engagad to ennvey them t" Awia Ninor in nentmal ships. The Tarks hy the waty wero allowed to retain mochalt of their money and jewels, and a portion of their movable properts: 'The bishop of A(hens, il man of worth and chameter, who was presjdrat of the Arepmgas, compelled all the diene civil mud military muthorities to xwen ly the suered mysteries of the Orientat ehareh that they wonld observo strietly the artieles ot the eaprituhation, mind redeem the grod fitith of the mution atainal by the vimation of mo many tr"aties.

The Mussuhmas in the Acrophlis consisted of 1,150 souls, of whom only 181 were men capalto of herring arms, so obsimately hat they defombed the
After the sumemer of the fortress, the Mu - fimilies were lodged in cxtensive buikling withan vins ruins of the Store of Hadrim, formerly occupied by the Voivode. Three days after the Greeks had sworn to observe the capitulation, they commenced murdering their helpless prisoners. Two ephors, Andreas Kalamogdartes of Patras and Alcxamder Axiottes of Corfin, lad been ordered by the Greek govermment to hasten the departure of thie Turks. They ueglected their duty. The Austrian and Frencle consuls, Mr. Gropins ind M. Fausel, on the other hand, did everything in their power to save the prisoners. They wrote to Syria during the negociations, to request that the first European man of war which tonched at that port should hasten to the Pirens. Unfortunately, before any ship of war arrived, the news reached Athens that the Ottoman army had firced the pass of Thermopyle. Lekkas, an Attic pensant, whose courage had raised him to the rank of eaptain, but who remained a rule Albunian hoor, excited the Athenian populnce to murder thir Turkish prisoners, as a proof of their patriotic determination never to lay down their arms. The most diegracefill part of the transaction was, that neither the ephers nor the demugronts made an effort to prevent the massacre. They perhaps feured the fite of the Dlowhat of Smyruar. A seene of hurror ensuen, over whirl history may daw a veil, while truth olliges the historim to reord the fact. The streete of Athens were stained with the blowl of fint humbel men, women. and chiddren. From smo rise to -mbet, doring a hons summer day, the shrieks of tortured womband wihern were heard without intermission. Many fimilie were savel by timting shelter in the homes of the Eurnpem consuls. But the consuls hal some diflinulty in potecting the fugitives: their thage and their perans were expoend th insult: and che tiveds: wem threateming to renew tho masacre, when two fremh whand a corrette and a

 th the l'inus bey a pary of marisea with handel

 the when and child tan who the French protected, while mowds of Ath nime eitizns followent the sehtiems Whoting like demoniaes. Whath thin paty of pisoners was sately combukel the the Fremeh vessels saital, the the Turks who remaineyt in the Antrian and Dutch on this becasinh. Lokkus, whi was tho tirst ter urge this massacre, was taken frimmer loy tor Turks visiting Attica as a mp, after the cuphenation of the Aeropelis in $1 \times 27$, and was impalel ut Negropunt.

The misconduct of the embral givernment man the crimes of Odyssens left biotern tirece in a state of anarely during the summer of 1822. Even at Athens order win not established, thuth the secinl rombition of the inhabitunt aflime ed perentime facilities for organising a reyuher udninistration. Thare were ump primates in Attien who exerowal an inthene like Thrkish 1n'ys on' Christian Thuks-1") mell who, tike Zaimes bull Londor in Achaia, comble waste the matiomel reve.
 from the sceno of actual hastilities; nor was there any militury intluence povertill chough to reduce the province to the condition of an armatolik. The Greck population of the city of A thens was unwarlike. The Albanian population of Attica served in several bands under local captains of no geat distinction. Many of the native soldiers, buth eitizens and preasants, were small landel proprietors, who hall a direct interest in opposing the introduction of the irregular militnry system, to whieh Grecee was rapidly tending. They nuited with the local magistrates anel the well-fisposed civilians in striving to organise a local militia capmble of preserving order. Power was very much disided, and alministrative talent utierly wanting. Fiery mun who possessed a little influcnee aspired at command, and was inditlerent to the means by which he might acquirs it. Athens, consenuently, became a hotbed of intrigue ; but it would be ar waste of time to chatacterise the intriguers and to describe their intrigues. Something must mevertheless be twh, in order to explain the result of their finly and selfisiness. An Athenian citizen employed by the central govermment to collect the publie revemes was mus. dered by the soldiery, who wished to seize the national resonces, and make Attica a capitmalik of amatuli.
 puis, and displayed more insolmee and tymayy than had been recently exhibited ly any Thukish ivarar. Ite was driven from power by another Athenian; hut agninst the muthority of his snceesor constant intrignes wore carried on. The shopkerpers of the city at bast imagined that, like the 'Turkinh janissarien at Constantinople, they could mite the wecunations of helinters mal soldiers, and mader this indusion they umidertonk th girrison the Armpulis thmolves, insteal of finming a cong of regular troops. As might have been toresern, mel man dinl what seemes ;ond in hid mythine to lose sent a seputation to l'rine binetrins Ilypilantw, havitus him to come mad take the command of the Acropulis. Ife arriacal at Maga, lont tibe sodiery in the Acropulis refused to meriy him as their leater, nat in onder to serne a powertal hastemed to soize the inize, ant hurrying to Ahons with only a humbed and lifty mon, was admitted into the Aeripulis on the Ead if Soptmber, ls2.2. The anthority of Olyselts wan recegnised ly the Shomians as the spediest way of patting an end fo a theatrming state of manchy:

Atticer was thme losit to thone whin, firm thens "phinions and interests, wrop anxions to remplay it central alministration, and was thanw into the seale of the Alhanian military systrm, whin sorm extmond its fower over all likerated Greece.

As seon as Dilysens fruml himself tirmly establinhed as eaptuin of Atticu, ho persuaded the peophe of Bastern Grese to form n provineial asscmbly at Athens, where he belld the members moner hix mintrol. 'This nssembly dissolved the Aredrigus, med appinted Olyasenc eommanter-in-ehief in Patcra Grece. Withomt wniting for his comfirmation by the contral exemise, he assumad the ahministration of the revenues of Attien, und compellend the municipatily of Athens to sell the molivided hooty surrendered hy the 'lurks at the tuking of tho Aeropolis. 'This many he employed in paying his followers, and in hying up stores of provisions and ammuntion in the Acrupolis, armatolik. The Greek s was unwurliku. The served in several bands distinction. Many of ns and peasants, were ad a direct interest in the irreguln! military apidly tending. They sand the well-disposed a local militia eqpable ras very much diviled, erly wanting. Every rence aspired at come menns by which he onseguently, beeame a ald be in waste of time and to deseribe their wertheless be tohl, in their folly und seltisiiploged hy the colitral ic memente was butrel to sedze the mational :apitanlik of immatoli, usecssion of the Aeroace amot wamuy than y any T'urkish lisdar, nother Athenim: lat essor constant intriyuts mils of thon city at last junissambent Constancupations of hacksters lusion they nulartouk remaelses, instcul of mpls. As might lave ant soente , unal in his I the perworn [usseroning tion to frimere lame. to comu amb lake the le arivel ut Megm, dis refused to rewise 3 to sembe al juwertal as their genwal, and In of the ferters. Ile I horrying to dohens oh, was mbuited into ept mber, 1N2. The aised liy the . It hemans to end to : dreatening wase why, firoll fle in nxions to mmpley its Whawn into ther xale , which sum extondent re. himself' tirmly estaersuaded ther prophlo of wrincial assembly at mbers muley his consthe Areoprigus, and r-ithechiot in Phastera is confirmation by the ، alminist ration of the al the municipality of nonty sursendered by eropulis. Thismony vers, and in laying up tion in the Acropolis, which all parties hur hitherto neglected. He subsequently adiled a strong angular wall to the Acropolis, ia order to inclose a well situated below the northern wing of the Propylea.
But whilo he was making these prudent arrangements, he also gratified his malicions disposition by a cruel as well as a vigorous use of his power. Three persons were brought bufore lim recused of treasonable correspondence with the Turks. The truth was, that they favoured the government party; but the aceusation afforded Odysseus a pretext for revenging privato opposition. He remembered the lessons of his old patron, Ali of Joamina. Two of the necused were hung, and the third, who was a priest, was built up in a square pillar of stone and mortar. As the mason constructel the wall whiel was to suffocate him, the unfortunate man solenmily invoked God to witness that he was imocent of the crime laid to his charge.

II

Tae Risptians ocevif ties Monea-Sieae of Mrsolonohi -Athens invented by tie Teris tnder Rebild Dasia - i)gati of Coura-Griolottes tinhows Mimely into the Achorolis-liahaiskaki's Operations to raise the Siegr-Fahimil uefforees the derofolis-State of Gheece deming the: Wisten of 1806.27.
Tue state of his relations with Russia, and the destruction of Ali l'asha's power, was what had enabled Sultan Malnuud to make his tirst great effort in 1 N2: for reconymuing Grece, mad which led anong wher episodes to the eapitulation of Athens and to the usirpation of Olysens. A new phasis was given to the war by Mnhmmad Ali of Egypt, engaring to assist the Sultan in 1893, und the landing of Inralim Pasha at Sadon, Fummary 2 thl, 18.55 , with fume thousame regular infintry and five hundred eavaly. The first marked fenture in the campinign, after the clefeat of Kolekotrones, at Makryphugi and at Trikorphas, was the siege of Mesolonghi, eclehrated in connection with the heroism of Lord lByron, by the eombined Thrkish and Fayptian forees, and the fill of which place was followed by the invertment of Athens.
As soon ns tho nffairs of Western Greece were settled on $n$ footing that promised at lenst $n$ temponny security for the restoration of order, Reshid marched iuth Pastern Greece, wecupient the passess over (Eta, Knemix, I'urnassus, und I'mos, strengethened the farrison a: "incens, and orgmised reyular commmaneations by land hetween Larissa ame? Chalcis in bubuna. He shtered Attica lefore the eropso of 1826 were gathered in.

The exnetions of Coma lial execeded those of Olyssents, fer Odyssens nllowed nu extortions lint his own, while (iomara permitted his mercenaries to glemafter the harvest ol his own rapaeity had heen gathored in. $\Lambda$ great proportion of the Attic peasantry was driven to dhspair, und the moment Roshid's forces nppeared in the Ratadema, or hilly dintriet leetworn larnes mal tho chunnel of Linbara, they wero weleomed us deliverers. On mbracing into the plain of Athens, they wero openly joinel by the warlike inhmbitants of Menidhi and Khasii, who vigoronsly surported leshid's goverumont as long us he remmined in Attica.

The contributions which (fonm levied under the pretext ot prepuring for the difence of Attica were exclusively omployed for provisioning the Acropolis, and in garrisoning that stronghohl with four hundred elosen mercenaries in his own pay. These men were selected from those whom the eivil wir in the Morea had inured to acts of tyranuy, and they were taught to look to Goura and not to the Greek government for pay und promotion. The citizens of Athens were not allowed to form part of the girrison of their own citadel.

The Turks took possession of Sepolia, Patissia, and Ambelokepos withont eneountering serious opjosition. On the 28th of Jume, Feshid arrived from Thebes, and established his head-rpuarters at Patissia. His arny did not exceell seven theurand men, but his cavilry, which umountel to eight hundred, were in a high state of efficiency, and he had a fine train of artillery, cousisting of twenty-six guns and mortars. The siege of Athens was immediately eommenced. The hill of the Muscion was occupied, and batteries were erceted at the little chapel of St. Demetrius, and on the level above the lnyx.

He soon obtained a lrilliant victory over the Greeks. Ahout four thousond armatoli had been concentrated at Eleusis. The Greek ehiets who commanded this army proposed to foree their way into tle town of Athens, and expected to be ahbe to maintain themselves in the honses. Reshid divined their object, and forestalled then in its execution. On the night of the 14 th of Augnst he stormed the town, and chove the Athenians into the Aeropolis, into which Goura could not refuse to indmit them.

The Grock troops presisted in ndvancing from Elensis, though thoy seem to have formed no detinite plan. Their numbers were insutliciont to hold out any reasonable probability of their being nhw to reeover possessinn of Athens. Tho irregulars amountel to two thonsund five hundred under the eommand of Karaiskiki, the regulars to one thousand tive hmohred under Fubvier. The (ireek force crossed the momitains by a pathway which leaves the Sacred Way and the monastery of Diphuie to the right, and took up a position at a farmhouse with a suall tower catled Khaidari. Instead of pushing on to the Olive Grove, and stationing themselves among the vineyards, whero tho Turkish cavilry and artillery would have been useless, they awaited Reshid at Khadari. On the 20 th of Augnst the attack was made, and the Greeks were completely defenteal. The two leaders endeavoured to throw the whole blane of the disaster on one nother, aud they succemed in convincing everyhody who paid any uttention to their proceedings that both of them had displayed great want of jubligment. Noborly suspected either of them of want of persomal energy and daring, but both were motorionsly deficient in temper und prudence.

Kamisknki soon regained his reputation with his own soldiers, by sending a large botly on a successtinl foray to Skourta, where they captured a mumernus hurd of enttlo destined for the use of the Turkish arny, Gubvier withlrew his corps to Salamis.

Leshial bomburiled the Accopolis hotly for some time, but secing that his fire lide tho besieged little injury, he attempted to take the place by mining. 'Ihongh he made little progress even with his mines, he persistel in earrying on his operations with his clmractoristic proverance.

A body of Creek troons, consisting of Ionians und Romeliots, made twa ussnecessful nttompits to relieve the besieged. The sminser Jrigged on withont anything decisive, when the death of (ionra drew publie attention to the dangerous position of the garrison and the negleet of the Greek goverument. Ther suldiers in the Acropolis manifesterl a mutinoms spirit in cense. quence of the ineflectual eflirts made to relieve them. Many suceeded in deserting during the night, hy ererping mobserved through the Thrkish lines. To prevent these desertions, Gumat passed the night among the soldiers ong gram, and in order to seente the assistance of the enemy in preventing the eseapu of his men, he grnerally lirought ou a skirmish whieh put them on ther alert. On the $1: t h$ of October, white exchanging slasts witin the Thrkish sentinels, he was shot through the hain. Ilis opponent had watelent the alash of the powder in the thelthole of Geman's rifle.

A cry of indignation at the incaraeity and negligene of the members of the Greek gevermment was now raised both in Grever ame the Ionian Salands. Girecer had still a numerons body ol' men under arms in emtinental Greace, yet these troopw wher intetive sheetaters of the siege of A thens. Cimeml Corlon, who had recently returnal to breece, reoreds the wemeral opinion when he states that these trups were condemnel to inaction he the beckerings of their laders. Some attempts were at last mow to intermper Revinls oproutions. Pabvier advaneed into Beentia with the intention of storming 'Theloes, but being deserted by his soldiens, he was compelled to fall bnek withont attempting mything. lie-hid, who was well informend of exery movement mate by the Greeks thengh the Attic peesmats whonated as his seonts, sent forward a buny uf cavaly, which very nearly succected in orenpying the passes at Citheron, and conting off Fal, wier's riteat to Megara. On his return, Fathior was lett he the Greek govermment withont provisions ; and attempts hejug male in the name of Karaiskaki and Niketas, perhins withont their suthority, to induce his the remblar arp to Methann in order to present its dissohtion.

Kumaskaki mbancel a swom time to Rhaidari. This movenont omabled drigiotens to lamd umbersed in the Bay of Phnherm, near the menth of the tephis sus. and tio mareh Mo to the Arropolis, into which he introducer hinself mad fime humbed and difty men withuit liss.

As Athan was now sufic tor some time, Kamaiskaki mosen ofl ro Mome Haliron, where a few of the inhabitants still remainel faithfill th their cometry's came. He oxpectel to surceal in empturing some of the 'Turkish magaziuss in lhentia, mol in interepting the anplits which Reshid drow from Thessaly by the waw ot \%eitmi.

The Acropris was now garismed ly nlont one thonsand sulititre, but it was ememmbered by the pre-
 The surply when and harley was abminat, bint the chether in the soldiers wew in rags, and there was wo fuel to boke lowat. Reshis, who determine to prove senento the sisor during the wintor, male arrangements for kepping hix tropgs well stpplime with provisimes and military storis, and for alefending the posts which protretend his eommmicntions with 'Thessaly.

Thu Turks nergected to keep a musal spmation in the chmmed of Eubea, though it would always haw fumb satio barlwurs at Segrepont and Vols, The Givels wero theretore cmabled to thanport a large fored to attack any point in the rear of Reshids army, It was in their power to cut off all the sumplims $\mathrm{h}_{\mathrm{a}}$. reecived by sea, and, hy veeupying sone defimsibs: atation in the northern cinumel of Eabaea, to extiblish communications with Karaiskakis troop on Mrmet Helicon, and ferm a line of posts from this delingsibie station to mother of : similar kind on the fulf of Corinch. Talanta and Doherona were the stations indicated; but instrad of attempting to aide the army. the Greek navy either remained inlle or maged in pirac:. J'action also preventel a great part of the fireek amy from taking the field, and the assintanct which tho Philhellenice semmitte in Paris tramimited to Greee was emploved low its agent, Mr. Mailly, is feeding Kolokotrme's soldiers, who remamel inle in the Morea, withont marching cither against the Egy. tima or the 'Turks, Kondumothes and Kolokotrones, formerly the deallient chemies, lwing now hath ex. chaded from a plawe in the "xeentive whemment. were lambed tugether in a most mumatrintio and hi..
 govermunt, composel of maty a dozen mamers, many of whom were ntterly matit for peritieal empley. ment of:ay kind. Some fieble attempts were mak to orgmise attacks on Rewhil's rear, hut eath labat was allowed to form an indepement selome of opera. tioms, and to abanden his cuterpuise when it suitel lis convenidece.
The command of onc expelition was intrusted to Koletere, an man destitute hoth of physion num mas cour:ige, though he looked a very truenlont persomes. mul nourished a bomalless ambition. The fivel, govermment was anximu to prevent his allying hitasily with kimduriottes and Kolokotrones, and to efleet that olipect he was placed at the heal of a lowly if tray. destined to destroy the magnaines of the 'harks in the northern ehamel of Binbea. Nubody "xpected much from a military molortaking eommanded by: Foletter, lunt the sellish members of the pxerentive bonly, as usaal, comsulted their persomal mad party interests, and not their conntry's advantage, in making the mumination.

Foblettes collected the Olympian armatoli whan hat
 skyos fire two rems. The asputs of the Prenel Phillarllenie comminteres supplail the experition with porisinns and military stores, and Kalerge, a weathy tareek in Jinsuia, paid ia comsiderable sum of mony intu its militing chost. Kobette.' troops landel wern' buti in order to gitin Inwsesviom of the margimen in that town, hut the Jurke, thang murh ingingu is Ther armatoli nseapod in the shipa, and Koletre alat doned his military enreer, mud returned to 19 . congenial oxeupution: of serking importane live in triguing at Nompliat.

Kamiskuki aboat the same thme heman adise opromo tions at the hom of theen thensand of the hom trank in (irwes: Though ho was compelled to renthr:all hio navements submerimato to tho manner in which his tromp conlal be supplied with provisions, he displayed both artivity and juigment. His ohiget was th thow his while fince on the rem if heshiid's irmy, mester his line of communientions, and destroy his namamer, The diwesiom, whieh it was expetes whath has made by Koluteres expelition, womh enubl Kumakaki"s troope to draw supplies of provisims nad mmumition from the chamel if Einhem through Gastims Lariv, ns o rear of Rexhids ammy. off all the sulphirs h. (11) ying some defminil) of Euboes, to extablish Enki's troops on Mannt posts fiom this defey. imilar kind on the Gent? rema were the stations lapting to nid the numy nel inlle we engaged in ad at great purt of the field, and the assistane tre in Pariv tramsuitten ts agent, ir. Brilly, it whe remaines illie in ither ngainst the Vizyt thtes atul Kolakutrones. x, lwing maw looth ex executive whemment. ost mymantie and diak lout not ill-riapmeent rly a dozen zombers fit for palitical cupley. le attemptes ware mind I's rear, lut each leala ndent selocme of operaurise when it suiteol hi ition was intrusted tw of physimal mul moral ry traculent presonare anbition. Thu firn vent his allying limastit trones, and to eflect that cl of a borly of troup dines of thi Thris in mia. Subaly "ypuetel aking comunamed ty bers of the expentivis ir personal mad proty 's melvantage, in making pian armatoli who band ikiathow, Skinnders and ygrats of the Prencel if the experition with mil Knlergy, a wealthy allo sum at mone inta oops lamdel meir ta11 of the numquaine in magh mach intertur in 20 h Nownial, 1:2
 returned to "1 It importaner he in thil of the here trons: melled to remider all hiz manner in which his rovisions, he diap tayed is oljeeet was to throw Reswhill's army, mester lentroy his magnzine, retel wonld lam male enahlo lintaimakits whes nal mumanition wh Eintern Lumiv, us well as from Merara and the Gulf of Corinth. The victory of the Turks at Talanti oceuring before the Greek troops had entered Ploois, Karniskaki determined to cut ofi the retreat of Mustapha Bey, who hal defated Kolettes, ind proposed falling back on Sadme. Both Turks :und Greeks were endeavoming to be first in gaining possession of the passes, between Mounts Cinghis und Parnassus. Karaisknki sent forward his adraneed grard with all speed to occupy A machova, and his men had hardly established themselves in the village befine they were attacked by a corps of fifteen hundred Mussuluam Abbanians, Mustaphar Bey hat united his force with that of Elmas Bey, whom Reshiil had ordered to oceupy Arachova and Bulunitza, in order to securo his communications with Zeituni.
The beys endenvoured to drive the allameed guard of the Greeks out of Arachova before tho main boly could arrive from Dystomo to its support; hat their attaeks were repulsed with loss. When Kamaiskaki heard of the eneny's morements, he took his measures with promptitude and judument. He ocenpied the Trionlos with a strong body of men, to prevent theAllamimas falling back on Livader; ; and he sent another strong holy over Mount Cirphis to take possession of Delphi, and prevent them from marehing on to Salma, While the beys lingered in the hope of destroying the alvancel gutarl of the Greeks, they found themselves blockated by a superior force. They were attacked, and lost the greater purt of their baggage and provisions in the engagement. During the night after their defeat they maide a bold attempt to escappe to Saloma by climbing the precipices of Pamassus, which the Greeks left migurded. The dirkness and their expromee in ambuseales enabled then to move afl from the vicinity of A rachura unoheserved, but a heary tall uf suow surprisent them as they were seeking pathe ulf the roeks. It sumise the Greeks followed them. Escape wat impossible, fir the only tracks over the precipiees which the fingitices werb endeavouring to asend, were paths along which the shepherd findows his gonts with difliculty, even in summer: They were all dentroyed on the Gth of December. Their ilctence was valiunt, but hopeless; 'puarter was neither nsked not given. Many were frozen to denth, but three humbed, protected by the veil of falling show, sateeeled in elimbing the preeipieces ant renching shatona. The heals of fune beys were sent to Fgina as a token of victury.
Karaiskaki was umalle to follow up this sucenss; want of provisinus, more than the severity of the weather, kejt his troppsinactive. Reshicl priflted ly this inuction to strengthen his pust.s at livaden mill Bulunitza. l'art of the Greek troups at liast mumad northward to phumer his convors, white the rest sprend arer thu whale comatry to obtan the menus of sulnistener which the tirem sovermant nombed tor sumply. 'The 'Iurks intrenched themsedons at Dantion Gmerlashaof Segrepment hastat tackenhe theok omply at Dystonn, nud this attack comprdled Kamiakahi to returen mall reeall the greater part of his thalis. Ifter many skimishes the Turks mato angmeal attank on the (ireeks at Dystome en the 12th of lebnary, 1827. which teramated in their defent. Bint the comatry was now so completcly exhamsted that Karamaki was comperled to athaton his cump und fill biek on Negura mal Blensis, whe the prescues of his army wash omed ancessary to emonnate in a divert athem on heshinds firces before Athens.

After Gouro's denth, several officers in the Acropolis pretended to equal authority. Grigiottes was the chief who pussessed most personal influence. All meanures were discussed in a council of chief, and instatility of purpose wals as mueh a characteristic of this small issembly of military lealerss as it was of the Athenian Denus of old. One of the chiefs, Makriyames, who distinguished himself greatly when Ibrahim attacked the mills at Lerma, was chargel to pans the Turkish lines, in order to inform the Greek govemment that the supply of powder was exhansted, and that the gatrwithout eldey. Makrivames quited the Acropplis on the 29th November, 1826 , and renthed Egina in safety. His appeamuco awakened the mepest interst. Hi" had distinguished himself in many sortics during the siege, and he was then suffering from the womds be had reerived. His frank and hagal character inspired general contidence. The members of the exceutive government again felt the neressity of inmediate aetion.

Columb Fabsier, whe had hought the regular coms into some state of efficiency at Methama, was the only oflicer in Greese at this time capable of taking the fieh with a foree on which the government emht phace any relimes. He was not personally a fatcomrite with the members of the excentive body. They tomed amb distrusted him, and he despised ind distrostell them. Fortmately the news of Karaiskilki's victory at Arachova rendered him extremely eager for immediate action. The fanc of his rival ieritated his jewhens disporition and excited his emulation. He therefore aceepted the offer to command an bxpedition fion the relict of A thenes with phensure, and prepared to carry succour to the Aeropolis with his usinal promptitude, and mure thon his usual prudenee.

Fidivior lambed with six hundred and filty chosen men of the regular comp in the Bay of Thaterum, ithout midnight on the 12th Decomber, 1826. Eath man emrinion his bark a leat her samk filled with gampowher. The whole bolly reached the Turkish lines in good onder mad without being ohserved. They were formed in calumn on the roul which leals from A thens to the Haberum, al litthe larlow its jubetion with the roul to Suman, and rushod on the Turkish gman with fixed baynuets, while the drums somuled a lome sigunt to the路rimon of the Acropolis to divert the attention of the bexiegers by it doperite sorti". Fabvier elenved all before him, leading on his troops rapidly and silently own the sare that separated the memy's lines from the theatro of Herones Attiens, amber a shower of prape ami maset balls. Top prevenz, his neen from drPlyyms their nureh, and rexchange, shots with the ont of their maskets. A bright moon cmabled the troms of Reshial to tuke aim at the Greeke, but the within tho wath of the Achapolis, with the lo. ne mily six kithed and fintern wombed. In such onterpuisere. where the salame of the chlilier and the activity of the londer were the mly qualities wated to insmre smerese, Fibulon's pursmal combuct shane to the greatest mipationes and probenco were the publitios popured in the genwal.

Ifis men earrod nothing with them into the Acropolis hat their arms, ami the provere on their hacks. Ben thin greatenats, wero beft behind, for babrier proposed returning to the vessels which brought him on the ensuing uight. The garrison of the Acropolis was sufficiently strong, and any aldition to its numbers would only add to the difficulties of its defence by increasing the nomber of killed and woundel, and exhausting the provisions. Unfortunately, most of the chiefs of the irregular troops wished to quit the place and leave the regular troops in their place, and they took effectual measures to prevent Fabvier's departure by skirmishing with the Turks, and putting them on the alert wheuever he made an attempt to pass their lines. It is also asserted with confidence, by persons who had the best means of knowing the truth, and whese honour and sagacity are unimpenchable, that secret orders were trinsmitted from the executive government at Egina to Grigiottes, to prevent Fabvier fiom returning to Methana. This unprincipled conduct of the Greek government and the military cliefs in the Acropolis caused great culnmities to Grecce, for Fabrier's presence hastened the fall of Athens, both by increasing the sufferings of the garvison, and by his engerness to ruit a fortress where he could gian no honour. After the nomination of Sir Richard Cb:reh as grneralissimo of the Greek troops, Fabvier' ampatience to quit the Acropolis and resume his separate command at Methma was imnoderate; and Gordon asserts that, had only Greeks been in the Aerepolis, it might have held out mutil the battlo of Nivarin saved firece.

THE PROPYLfEA.

Grece fell into the chronic state of politicul anurchy during the latter part of the year 1826, which perpetuater the social demoralisation that continued visilly to influence her histury during the remainder of her struggle for indipudence. The executive hody, which retired from Nauplia to Fgina in the month of November, was the legal government ; but its members were umacrous, selfish, and inengable, nud fir more intent on injuring their rivals in the Peloponnesus, who estunhished a hostile executive at Kinstri (1 Termime), than on injuring the Thuks who were besieging A thens

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.
attempt to pass their onfidence, by persons owing the truth, aud unimpeaehable, that from the executive s, to prevent Fabvier his unprineipled connd the military cliefs amities to Greece, for all of Athens, both by ar 1820, which perpwthat continued visibly the remainder of her executivo lonly, whiels , the month of Novembut its members were e, and fir more intent Pelopomesus, who nt Kastri (1Lerminn), were besieging A thens

Kolukotroncs, who was the leader of the faction at Kastri, finmed a coalition with his finmer enemy, Konduriottes, and this munincipled allianco endeavoured to weaken the intlueace of the government at Egina, by preventing Greece from profiting by the mediation which Great Britain now proposel as the most effectual mems of saving the Greek people from ruin, and the iuhabitants of many provinces from extermination.

The treaty of Akerman, conclualed between Russia and Turkey on the Gith of October, 1826, put an end to the hopes which the Greeks long cherished of seeing Russia ultimately engagel in war with the Sultan. But this event rather revived than depressel the Russian party in Greece, whase leading nembers believed that the emperor would now interlero actively in thwarting the influence of Englamil. At the same time, the agents of the French Philhelhenic committees displayed a malevolent hostility to British poliey, and seized every opportmaty of encouraging finction, by distributing supplies to the troops of Folokotrones, who remainel itle, and withholding them from those of Karaiskiki, who were earryiug on war against the Turks in the tiell.

The netive strengtl. both of the army and mavy in Greeee began to diminish rapidly about this time. The people in general host all contidence in the talents and the honesty luoth of their military and political lealers. The havest and most patriotic eliefs had fallen in battle, Two names, however; still shed a bright light through the mist of selfishuess, Kauaris and Minoulis, and these two naval heroes belonged to adverss parties and difierent mationalities. The Greek navy was memployed. A small part of the mrmy was in the tield ugainst the Turks ; the greater purt was engaged in collecting the mational revemes, or extorting their subsistence from the untortunate peasautry. The shipownens and saibus, who cond no longer find protitable omployment lys verving aganst the Turks, ongaged in an extensive and orgaised system of pinacy against the ships of every Christian power, which was carried on with a degree of cruelty never exceeded in the ambals of crine. The peasantry alone remained true to the cause of the mation, but they could do little more thai dixplay their , emeverance by patient suder. ing, mil never did a people sutler with greater constancy and fortitude Many died of hunger nather than subuit to the Turks, particularly in the Morea, where they fearell lest Ibrahim should tramport their families to Egept, elneate their boysas Mulammadans, mad sell their girls into Mussulman lurems.

The Philhellenic committees of Switzerham, France, and Germany redoubled their activity when the proceeds of the English loms werc exhausted. Iargo supplies of provisions were sent to Greece, mul assisted in maintaining the trops who took the tiehl agininst the Thurks, and in preventing many familios in dillerent parts of the comitry from perishing by starvation. The presence of several foreigners prevented the exeentive govermment at Egina fiom diverting theso supplies to serve the ambitious schemes of its memalers, us shamelessly as Komariottes' govermbent lad disposed of the English loms, or as Kolokotrones' faction at this very time employed such supplies as it could obtain. Colonel Heitleck, who acted as the agent of the King of Bavaria; Dr. Goss of Geneva, who requesented the Swiss committees, and Mr. Lymarl ; Count Porro, a noble Nilanese exile; and Mr. Koering, an experienced German alministrator, ${ }^{1}$ set the Greeks an "xample of prudenee and of good conduct by acting always; in emeord.
Two Philhellenes, General Gorton and Captain Framk Abney Hastings, had also some influence in preventing the executive govermment at Egina from completely noglecting the defence of $A$ thens.

General Gordon retumed to Greece at the invitation of the government with $£ 15,000$, saved from the proeeeds of the second loan, which was placed at his absolute disjosal. He was intimately aequainted with the military character and resources of both the belligerents. He spoke both Greek and Turkish with case, and eould even carry on a correspondence in the Turkish lauguage. His Ilistory of the Greek hicolution is a work of such accuracy in detail, that it has: servell as one of the sources from which the principal Greek historian of the Revolution has compiled his narrative of most military operations. Gordon was tirm and sugacious, but he dill not possess the activity and decision of eharacter neecssary to obtain conimanding intluence in comenc, or to initiate daring measmeres in the field.

Cilptain Hastings was prohnbly the liest foreign otheer who eanarked in the Greek canse. Thongh calun and patient in comeil, he was extremely rapid and bold in action. He brought to Greece the firt steam-ship, whieh was armed with heave guns for the uso of shells and hot shot; and he was the first offieer who habitually made use of these engines of war at sea. At this time be had brought his ship, the Kiterteria, into a high state of cisciplitue.

Mr. Gropius, the Austrian consul at $A$ thens, who then rexided at Egina, wats also frequently consulted hy individual members of tho executive boly. His leng residence in the bast bat rendered him well acquaintel with the elaracter and views of the Greck and Turks, but his long absence from Western Earope hatl prevented him from acquiring wy protomd polftical and adninistrative views.

Mavrocordatos and Tricoupi wero gencrally the medium through which the opinions of the foreigners who lave been mentioned were transmitted to the majority of the members of the executive boly. Mavrocordatus possessed more administrative enpacity than any of his comatrymen connceted with the government at Egiaa; but the errors into which he was led by his personal ambition and his phanatiot ellucation had greatly diminished his intluenee. Trieoupi was a man of eloquence, but of a commomplace mind, aul destitute of the very elements of alminintrative knowledge. These two men served their country well at this time, by conveying to the government an eeho of the reproaches which were loully uttered, both at home and abroad, against its neglect; and they an: sistel in persuading it to devoto all the resources it

1 This singular mun eame to Greeeo with 1)p. Goss, who assisted hins in escaring from tho Continent on receivine his word of bonour that he was not flying from any fear of crimitul haw: yet even 1)r. (Goss never knew his real nume. He was if great uso to Dr. Goss in organising the manner of distributin: the stores sent by the varions conmittees, and he displayd at degree of alministrative experlence, and mu uepuintance with govermmontal business, which could hardly have been aryuird by serviee in an inferior position. To wealth or rank, even to the ordinary comforts of life, he scemed to luve reslgned all chaim. Though of some uso to Capodistrias, he was maglected hy that statesman, who feurel him ns a liberal; mad he died of fever durling the president's administration.
set the Greeks an exmeluct by acting ohwiys;

Gorrlon und ('aptain lso some influence in monent at Egina from e of $A$ thens. reece at the invitation ), saved from the provas placed at his abso tely acquaiated with rees of beth the belliand 'lurkish with correspondence in the of the Greek Revoluin detnil, that it his in which the principal tion has compiled his rations. Gordon was ot possess the activity ssary to obtain comor to initiate daring bly the lest forcign freek cans: Thongh was extremely rajid $t$ to Grecee the firt th heavy guns for the nd he was the fint e of these engines of had brought his shij, disejpline.
misnl at Athens, who frequently consulteil executive body. His rendered hime wrll atviows of the Girek. from Western Eurupe ng any profomed poli-were gencrally the ions of the foreigners e transmitted to the the excentive body. ministrative enpacity etcel with the goverato which he was led planariot education nee. Tricoupi was a momplace mind, and ulministrative knowleir country well at vermment an ceho of Hly uttered, both at grlect; and they as9 all the resourees it
e with De. Gors, wion timent on receiving his om any fear of crimhat real иame. He was of e manapr of distributiv: teen, and he displayen a l an neptrintanse with ly lave been aepurred by tith or rank, even to the havo resignell all claim. e was megleeted by that nut he died of fever durcould command to new operations for the relief of Athens.

It has been already olserveci, that the simplest way of raising the siege of Athons was by interupting Reshid's communications with his magazines in Thessaly. The Greeks could easily loring more men into the fick than Keshid, and during the winter monthas they commanded the scti. An intelligent government, with an able general, might lane compelled the momy before Athons to have elislanded, or surrendered at diseretion, even without a battle; for with six thousand men on Mount Parnassus, and u few ships in the northern and southeru chamels of Eubæe, no supplies, either of ammunition or provision, could have reached Reshid's army. The besiegers of Athens might also have been elosely blockaled by a line of posts, extending from Meginn to Elenthera, Phyle, Deceleia, and Rhamos. This plau was rejected, and ammber of denultory operations were undertaken, with tho hopo of olstaining the desired result moro speedily,

The first of hese ill-jinlged expeditions wats plateen under the command of General Gerdon. 'Lwo thousand three hundred men and tifteen guns were handel on the night of the 5 th Februmy, 18:7, and took possession of the hill of Munyehia. Thrisybulus liat deliverel A theas from the thirty tyrants by ocenpying this position, and the modern Greeks have a perlantic lore for classical imitation. In spite of this alvantage, Reshid secured the command of the limans by preventing the Greeks from agetting pessession of the monnstery of St. Spirition, and thas remiered the perminent uccupation of Munychia utterly useless.

While Gordon was engagel in fortifying the descrt rock on which he hial perched his men, the nttention of the Turks was druwn ofi by another borly of Greeks. Colonel Burbaki, a Cephaloniot, who hat distinguished himself us a cavalry olficer in tho French service, offered to heal a diversion, for the purpose of embling Gordon to complete his defences. Burbaki lescembed from the hills that bouml the plain of Athens to the west, and advanced to Kamatero near Menidi. IIe was aceompanied by eight hunded irregulars; and Vasses and Pamayotaki Notaras, who were eneh at the head of a thousame men, were ordered to support him, and promised to do so. Burbaki was brave and enthusiastic; Vassos and Nutanas selfish, and withont military eapacity. Burbaki pushed forward mashly iuto the plain, and before he could take up a defensive position in the olive grove, he was attacked by Ieshid Pushat in person at tho leead of an overwhelming force. Burbaki's men behaved well, and tive hundred fell with their gallant leader. The two chiefs, who onght to huve suppredthim with two thomsint men, never cunc into action: they and their fillowers fled in tho most dastarilly manner, alnandoning all their provisions to the Turks.
After this vietory Reshid marehed to the Pirmes, hoping to drive Gordon into the sea. On the lIth of February he attacked the hill of Munychin. His troups mbenneed boldly to tho assanalt, sipported by the tire of fone long five-ineh howityers. The attack was skilfinly combucted. About three thonsand men, scattered in loose order round tho base of the hill, elimbed its siden, covered by tho steep, deelivities which sheltered them from the fire of the Greelis who crowned the summit. Several gallant attempts were made to reach the Greek intrencliments; but as wou as the Turks issued from their eover, they were receivel with suel a fire of musketry and grape that they fled hack to some sheltered position. A diversion was made by Caytain Iastings, which put an eud to the combat. He entered the Piraus with the firteria under stean, and openet a fire of grape from his 68 -pounders on the Turkish reserves nul artillery. The troops flenl, one of the enemy's guns was dismonnted, und the others only escaped by getting maler cores of the momstery. 'The Tarkish artillervmen, however, nothing danited, contrivel to run out one of the howitzens muler the protection of an angle of the buileling, and opened a well-mivected fire of tive-inch shells on the Karteria. Every boat belonging tu the ship was struck, and several shells exploded on boatd, so that Hastings, unablo to remain in the Pirens withont exposing his ship to serious danger, eseaped ont of the port. His diversion proved completely suceessful, for Feshinl did not attempt to renew the attack 0:1 Gordon's positions.
Reshid had some reason to boast of his suceess; and in order to give the Sultan a corvect iden of the difficulties with which he was contending, he sent to Comstautinople the 68-1b. whot of the Rierterice which had dismonnted his gum, and is bing of the white bisenits from Ancom, whieh were distributed as rations to the Greek troops. At the same time he forwarled to the l'orte the latal of the gatlant Burbaki and the cavalry helmet he wore.

III.

Espedtions ismer Gordon, Bremaki and hmideck Generah. Smi Richand Citurci-Lomb Cuchuane (Eabis of Dendonaly) - Babetion of Capodistrias as Presidest of (herece-Naval Eximdition under Captain Ilastings -Oprmations of Cudrch asd Cochmase to melieve Athens-EVacuapion of the Achuruals and fall of the City.
The failure of the double attack on Reshid's front persuated the Gieck government to recommence operahions against his rear. Genemal Meideek was uppointed to command an enterprise similar to that in which Kolettes had fililed in the disgracefin munner previonsly reconuted. But Orpmos wis selected as the print of attack insteme of 'Tilinati. Oropos was the principal magazine tor the supplies which the army besidying Athens received by sen. These sup!lies were conveyed to Negrepont by the northern chammel, ame sent on to Oropos in small transports. Hedieck sailed from the Bily of Phalerum with five luudred men. 'lhe naval foree, consistiog of the Melles frigate, the stemm corvetto Fibrterit, and the mids Nelson, was tommanded by Mitunlis. On arriving at Oropos, tho Melles mehored abont a milo from the Turkish hattery ; and I Instings, with tho Kiarterie, steamed to within musket-shot if the Turkish grms, silunced then with a shower of grape, and took possession of two transports laten with flome. One of the enrenss-shelis of the Kirterias 68 pounders set tive to the finscinss of the 'Turkish bittery, destroyed the earringe of a gan, mul exploded the fowiter-magazine. The evening was alrealy dark, but Minoulis urged Heideck to land the troops immedintely and storm the memy's position, or at least endeavour to burn down his ungarines, while his attention was distrated by the fire in his battery. Heideck dectincd to nuke tho attempt on accomet of the darkness, whieh tho ulmintal thought finvoured his uttuek. Next ilay the Greek troops landed in a disorderly momer, nor did Meideck himself put his foot on shore, or visit the Karteria which remained at auchor elose to the enemy's battery. The Turks, however, contrived to remove a gun, which they placed so as to defend their position from any antack on the side where the Greeks had landed. Nothing was dono until, a body of cavalry arriving firom Reshid's camp, Heideck ordered his men to be re-embarked, and sent them back to the camp at Munyclia.

The conduct of Heideck on this occasion fixed a stain on his military reputation which wats extremely injurions to his fature intlucuce in Grece. It furnished a parallel to the generalship of Kolettes, and encouraged the enemies of militiury science to express their contempt for the pedantry of tacties, and to proclaim that the maxims and rules of Europem wartine were not applicable to the war in Grecee. It was in vain to point ont to the Greeks, immediately after this unfortunate exhibition of military incapacity, that it was by gradually alopting some of the improvements of military science, and establishing some discepline, that the Turks were steadily nerpuring the superiority both liy sea and land.

Iumediately after Heideck's fitilure, the affurs of Greece assumed a new aspect by the arrival of Sir Richard Chureh and Lord Cochrane.

Sir Richarl Chureh had commanded a Greek hattalim in the British army, lut had not risen to a higher ramk than lientenant-colonel in the service. After the peace he had eutered the Neapolitan scrvice, where he attained the rank ot lieutenant-general. Ile now came to Greece, at the invitation of the Greek government, to assume the command of the army. His popularity was great muong the military chiefs who comnected his name with the high pay and liberal rations which both oflieess and men has reecived while serving in the Anglo-Greck battalion.

The purninent political as well as military position which Sir hichard Chureh has occupied for many yours in Greece, and the influence which his personal views have excreised on the public athins of the country, render it necessary for the historim to scrutinise his conduct more than once, hoth as a statesman and a general, during his long carecr: The physical qualities of military men exert no triflime influence over their acts. Church was of a small, well-made, active frame, and of a healthy constitution. IIis manner was ngreeable and cass, with the polish of great social experience. The gooducss of his disposition was admitted by his enemies, but the strength of his mind was not the quality of which his friends boasted. In Greece he committed the common error of assuming a ligh position without possessing the means of jerforming its duties: and it may le questioned whether he possessed the talents necessary for performing the duties well, bad it been in his power to perform them at all. As a military man, his carecr in Grecec was a signal failure. His plans of oprerations never led to any successful result; and on the only occasion which was nfforded iim of conducting an enterprise on a considerable seale, they led to the greatest disaster that ever huppened to the Greck army. His cmips were as disorderly as those of the rudest chieftain, and the troops mider his immediate command looked more like n casual assemblage of armed momutaneers than a body of vetermu soldiers.

Shortly after his arrival, Sir Richard Church obtained from a natioml assembly the empty title of Archistrategos, or Gencralissimo ; and often, to win over independent chicfs to recognise this verbal rank, he sacrificed both his own personal dignity and the chamater of the office which he aspired to exercise. He succeeded in attaching several chiefs to his person, but he did so by tolerating abnses by which they profited, and which tended to increase the disorganisntion of the Greek military system.

As a councillor of state, the career of Church was not more successiful than as a general. His name was not connected with any wise measuro or useful reform. Even ny a statesman he clang to the abuses of the revolutionary system, which he had supported as a soldier.

Both Church and the Greeks misunderstood one nother. The Greoks expectel Church to prove a Wellington, with a military chest well supplied from the British treasury. Church expected the irregulars of Greece to execute his strategy like regiments of guarls. Experience might havetaughthimnnotherlcsson. When he led his Greek battalion to storm Santa Manra, his men left him wounded in the breach; nul hayl an English company not carried the place, there he might have lain mitil the French could take him prisoucr. The conduct of the Greek regiments hat been often disorderly ; they had mutinied at Malta, and behaved ill at Messina. The military chicfs who welcomed hira to Greece never intended to allow him to form a regular army, if such had been his desire. The: helieved that his supposed influence with the British Government wonld obtain a new loan for Grecee, and for them high pay and fresh sources of peculation.

Sir Richarl Church arrived at Porto Kheli, near Kastri, on the 9th of March, and was warmly welooned by Kolokotrones and lis faction. After a short stay he proceeded to Eginn, where he found the menlers of the executive dissatisfied with his laving first visitel their rivals.

Lord Cochrane (Earl of Dundonald) arrived at Hydra on the 17 th March. He had been wandering about the Mediterrancan in a fine English yacht, purchased for him out of the proceeds of the loan in order to accelerate his arrival in Greece, ever since the month of Junc, 1826.

Cochrane was a contrast to Church in appearamee, mind, character, and political opinions. He was tall and commanding in person, lively and winning in manner, prompt in counsel, nud daring but cool in action. Endowed ly nuture both with strength if character amd military genins, versed in maval science both by study and experience, and acquainted with seanen and their lialits and thoughts in every clime and comntry, nothing lont an nutimely restlessness of disposition, and $n$ too strongly expressed contempt for medincrity mud conventional rules, prevented his hecoming one of Britain's maval heroes. Unfortumately, accident, and his eagerness to gain some desired ohject, engaged hin more than once in enterprises where money rather than honour nppeared to be the end ho songht.

Cochrane, with the rye of genius, looked into the thoughts of the Grecks with whom he came into close contact, and his mind quickly embraced the facts that marked the true state of the comutry, and revealed the extent of its resources. To the leading members of the executive body he hintel that the rulers of Grece ought to possess more activity and talent for government than they had displayed. To the factions op-
; and often, to win ise this verbal rauk, pnal dignity and the aspired to exercisc. 1 chiefs to his preson, uses by which they rease the disorganisaareer of Church was cmi. His name was sure or useful reform, to the abuses of the hand supported ns a misunderstood one urch to prove a Welell supplied from the ed the irregulars of regiments of guarls. notherlesson. When -m Santa Maura, his reach ; and lial nn lace, there he might take him prisourr. ents had been often Malta, and belinved is who veleomed hirn low bim to form a his desire. They ace with the British lonn for Grecee, : mind es of preculation.

- Porto Kheli, near vas warinly welcomed After a short stay found the members is havidg first visitel adonald) arrived at mal been wandering English ynelit, purof the loin in order eversince the month mrch in appearance, nions. He was till cly and winning in daring but coul in h with strength of sed in maval scinnce ad açuuinted with ghts in every chime nely rextlessumess of ressed contempt for prevented his lneUnfirtouately, a some desired oi, 11 enterprises where d to be the end he

18, looked into the he came into clase aced the fiects that ' $y$, and revealed the eading members of he rulers of Greee talent for governo the fuctions opposition int Kastri he used stronger language. Ho recommended them, with bitter irony, to real the first philippic of Demosthenes in their assembly. His opinions and his discourse were soon well known, for they embodied the feelings of every patriot, and echoed the voice of the nation. His inflnence became suddenly unbounded, and fuction for a moment was silencel. All parties agreed to think only of the nation's interests. The exceutive boily removed from Egima to Poros, and a congress was lich nt Damala, ealled the National Assembly of Trezene.

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

The finst meetings of the national nssembly of Treezene were tumultuous, Captain Hamilton fertunately arrived at Poros with his frigate the Cambrian. His influcnce with Mavrocordatos and the executive, the influenee of Chureh with Kolokotrones and the Kastri factiou, and the authority of Lord Cochrano aver all parties, prevented an open rupture. Matters were eompronised by the election of Count Capodistrias to be president of Grece for seven years. Lord Cochrame was appointed arel-admian, and Sir Richard Church arch-general. As the national assembly could not inwat them with ordinary power, it gave them extran linary titles. As very often happens in political compromises, prospective good govermment was sceured by the resolution to remain for a time withent anything more than the semblance of a government. A commission of three persons was mpminted to conduct the executive matil the arrival of Capodistrias; nud three men of no political talent and no party inHluence, but not behind any of their predecessors in cerruption and misgoverument, were sclected.

TEMPLE OF WINGLESS VICTORY.

The clection of Capodistrias was proposed by Kolo-kotrones and the Russian party; in orler to comiterbalance the influence which Englime then exercised in Grece in conserpuence of the enlightened zeal which Ciptain Inamilton displayed in favour of Greek independence, and the liberal policy suphorted by Caming. A few men among the political leaders, whose incapacity and selfisloness had rendered a free government impracticable, endeasourd to present the clection of Capodistrias without sucecss. Captrin Hanilton observed a perfect neutrality, ind would not nuthorise any opposition by an Euglish party. Gordon's deseription of the seene on the day of the ulection is eorrect tud graphic. He says the Anglo-Guecks lung down their heads, and the deputies of Jyina, Spetzas, and Psara walked up the hill to Damala with the air of criminals marching to execution.

It has heen said already that the Turkish army before A thens drew the greater jurt of its supplies from Thessaly, These supplies were shipped at Volo during the winter, and forwarlenl by sea to Negrepont and Oropos. It was at last decided that an expedition should be sent to destroy the Thurkish magazines and framsports at Volo, and the command of the experlition was given to Ciptain Hastings. He sailed from Poros with it small symadron to perform this serviee.

The (inlf of Voln resembles a large lake, and few lakes suppass it in picturesque heanty and historical ansociations, Nunt Pelion rises boldly from the water on its eastern side. Tho slopers of the mountain are studdel with many villages, whose white dwellings, imbeddel in luxuriant folinge, reflectend tho western sum the the Greek squatron sailed up the gulf on the afternewn of the 20 th $\mathrm{A}_{\mathrm{pril}, 182 \%}$.

The fort of Volo lies at the northern extremity of the gulf, where a bay, extending from the ruins of Demetrius to thuse of Pagase, forms a good port. At the ,oint hear lagase, on the western sido of the bay, the 'lu'ks had eonstruetel a hattery with five guns, These gems crossed their fire with those of the fort, anl commanied tho whole anchorage. Eight transports were moored as close to the fort as possible. The Kiat tia anchored hefore the first ut half-past four in the afternoon, while the corvitte and bris anchored before the five-gm lattery. The Turks were soon Wriveri from theiv guns, $A$ few roumels of grape from tho hertraia compelled them to abandon the trankports, which were inmediately taken possession of by the Greoks. Five of theso veswels, which were heavily bulen, wore towed out of the port, but two, not haring their stits on hoard, werr hamed; und the eighth, whish thre Turks contrived to run agtomen within musket-shot of their walls, was destroyed by shells. About nime b'lowk a light brecze from the land enmbled the Groek sifuadron to corry ofl ita prizes in trimulin.

Aftre carefully examining evory ereek, Instiugs guitted the finlt of Vols on the exgnd. On entering the Northern chanel of Euben he diseovered n lange brig-of-wir mad three schooners in a hight near the seala of Tricheri. This hrig mounted fonrteen long $2.1-$ pounders and two mortars. It was mule fist head and stern to the rocks, and planks were laid from its deek to the shore, A inattery of three guns was constructerl olose wo the bows, and several other butteries wero placed in difinent prostions mungeg the surromming roeks, so that tha bivis was defiented nont anly by harewn brome side and four lamiled Allanian marksmen, but alse by twelva ginns well placed on shom. llastinge attromped to engturo it by boarding dinring tho night. The' Greak houts moved silently with mutleel oars, but when they had npromeled nemply within masketshot, hemps if diuggis blazed up at diflerent phees, rasting long streitus of light ovir the water, while at the snme time a henvy fire of round shot und grape proved tha strengeth whe watelifilness of the menny, Fortumaty tha'luks opened thin fire mather too soon, und Austings was ambled to regnin tho Kiuterius withont losn.
the the following slay the attack was renewed from in distance in order to destroy the brig with hat shot, fin the alisjersed positions of the batteries, mill the eover which tho ground afliyded to the Albanian indintry, rembered the gtape of the frarteria's ghms useles. Seven GS-pund shot wero leated in the tires of the engine, bronght on aleck, and put into the guns with an instrument of the eaptain's own invention; and us the Krarteria steamed romed in a large eirele nbont a mile from the shore, her long ghas were discharged in succession at intervals of ton minutes. When the severt shot were expended the Karteri : steamed ont of range of the chemy's tire to await the resuit. Smoke soon issued from the brig, und "groat movement wat observel on shore. Hastings then steamed neme the land, and showered grape and shells on the Jimks to prevent them from extinguishing tho fire. A shell exploting in the brig give him the satisfaction of secing her abnatoned by lier crew. Firo at last burst from her deck, and slee burned gradually to the watee's edge. Hev guns towarls the shore went uff in sueerssion, and cansed no inconsidernble confusion mong the Albanians; the shells fiom her mortars momited in the nir, and then ber powder-magnaino exploded. The LFarteria lost only one mun killed, a lirave Northumbrian quartermaster, named Jumes Hall, and two wounderl.

Experience thus confirmed the sommbese of the views which Hastings liad urgen the Grovk roverument tu mojet as anrly as the yerr 1823 . It was evident that he had practically introlnced a revolution in naval warfure. He had nlso proved that a Greck erew conld use tho dmagerous missiles he employed with lurtert security. Sixty-eight pound shot find been heated helow, carried on deck, imd loadel watl great rase, while the ship was moving under the fire of loastih. Bntteries. The Karteria herself had sufferel neverely in her spars and rigging, and it was neecsary for her to return to Puros to refit,

In pussing along the enstin'n emast of Euben, Hastings discovered that JRoshid Pashn did not depend "ntirely on his magranes in Thessaly for kuplying his army before Athens with provisions. Severul vessels were observal at anchor ofl Kumi, ant a amminv of boats wero scen lhawn up on the hemeh. Though the place was eceupied by the liuks, it was evidently. the centre of a ommindemblo trude. It wis newessary to ascertuin the nuture of this trade. لiastings "ppronched the shore, nud a few Turks were ohserved escuphing to the town, $w^{\prime}$ ich is situated nlunt two niles from the prot. The vessels at unchor werr found to be laden with grain, shipped by Greek merchnnts at Syra; and it whe aseertained that both Reshiil and Onar Pasha of Negrepont hat, during the willter, purchased largo supplies of provisions, forwanded linssian colours nud a l'surian schenoter just begitning to hand thein rargoes of whent. A hatge magavinu was fonnd full of grain, mal other magnaimes wem snil to be will filled in the meighboming town. Abnat onem third of the grain on shore was trunstermel to tho prizes takin at Volo. Yha liussinn lnig nas mot molested, but two vessels, fully lmben with whent, were taken to Poros, where they were condemmed by the (irwek adminalty eourt. On his return llustings utged hoth Lord Coelarnur ant the Creek kovirnmosit to miopt measuris for putting an end to this disgrnecful truflie; but the uttention ot Jord Corehrane was called ofl to other matters, und there "eru some scominels brig with hot shot, fin tteries, mul the cover se Allanian infintry; ortericis gims usclens. ed in the fires of the t into the guns with nn invention; and as Jarge eirclo ahout a us were disclurged in minutes. When the arteri istemmed ont of the resnit. Suoke great movement wats ell steamed meir the ells on the Thrks to ig the fire. A shell in the satisfaction of Fire nt last burst adually to the water's re went off in sueceshlo confinion among ler mortars momated $r$-magazine exploded. illed, a lrave Nuth. ames Hall, and two whumbesw of the views Srock govarmment to It was evident that revolution in naval to areek crew conld ulowe with 1 rertect oot had been hested wled with great alase, er the tire ut hostile lind sutlered serverely: was necossary for her nast of Eulicen, Mastlim did not depend saly for sulplying his mus. Sueverul vessels Elumi, anel a number tho loweh. 'lhough whes, it was evidentiy e. It was uecessary is trade. llastings Thks were olseerved situnted almint two els nt muehor werr iljed by tiroek merned that looth Resllid lad, during the winrovisions, forwarded formil a lirity mulde Homer just beymming A lat ge mutakinu was guzizes were stial to \# town. About meis tranmerred to the cussian luig was mot - lailen with whent, - were condemnet by his return Ilastings e: Greek government end to this disgrneeful Cuehrane was enlled " crus some seoundrols who possessed considerable influence with the Greek govermment, and who profited by licensing this wefnrious trallic.

Military operations were now renewed against the Turkish army engaged in the siege of $\mathbf{A}$ thens. Karaiskaki, utter his retreat from Dystomo, established his forec, amonnting to three thousamd men, at Keratsina, in the plain to the west of the l'irans. Repeated letters lind been transmitted from the Acropolis, written loy Fabvier and the Greek ehiefs, declaning that the garrison conld not hold ont mach longer.
Sir Richand Chmreh commened his career as gencralissimo by establishing an army at the Pirreus of more than tell thousund, with which ho proposed driving Reshid from his positions, He cansed, however, considerable disantisfaction by hiring a tine armed sclewner tu surve us a yucht, and establishing his liead pharters in this commodious but most unmilitary hathitation. ${ }^{1}$

It was decided that the navy shonld co-operate with the army, so that the whole force of Greece was at last rmpluyed to raise the niege of Atheos.
bavil Cochrme hoisted his thag in the Jellas, but contimed te rexide om board his English yncht, not deming it pradent to remove his treasure, which anomatell to $x^{2} \mathbf{3} 0,000$, from muder the protection of the British flug. De morolled a emps of one thonsand llydrints to serse on shore, and placed them muler the commund of his relation, Lieutennent Urynhurt, who wan uprointed a major in the Greek service. Thet molnent of these Jlydriots was a very injudicious :umasure. 'They wero thable to perfirm the service of' amatoli, and they were quito as undiseiplined ats the most disurdery of the irregulars. When lauded at Muncelia they excited the enntempt of the Romeliat reterand, strotting abont with bras humederbuses or light donhle harrelled guns. Thearny had adsoreasonahle gromme for complaint, for these inctlicient troops reedived higher pay than other sohlings.
Lord Cochrancis own landing at the Jirnus was sigunlised by a luillimen axploit. On tha ezth of April, while he was reeonnoitring the positions of the two hostile armies, a skirmish musued. He observed $n$ moment when $n$ daring charge would insure victory to the Greoks, mid, durering on tho tronpren neme him, he led them to the attuek with nothing but his telesoope in his hand. All eyes hat lreen watehing his movements, and when he was seen to ndvanee, $n$ shout min through the Greek army, and a general attuek was made simultaneously on ull the $\rho^{10}$.itions ocenpied by the 'lurks at the lirmus. I'he finry of the massult persuated the Mulammadans that a new enemy land taken the fied uguinst them, and they absindoned nine of their sinnil redoubtes. Three humbed Allmnians threw themselves into the momustery of St. Spirilion; the rest retired to an eminence beyond the head of the prott.

The trongs in the monastery were without provi-

1 Cordon blanes Chureh for rembining too much on bourd this schoomer, and not exhibithing himself suffleientily to tho troops, and ulso of helug too fund of emptoylug his pen, whieh was a very undens lastrument with armuloll. Cordon himself set tho fishion of generals keeping ynchts in Greece, but (turiton lived on shoro while ho eommunded nt Munyehin, mudsent hils yaelit to Sulumis. The inneenracles eontained in the publisherd do gpatelies of SIr Michard Chureh were enused by hils isolation on beurl.
sions, and only seantily sinpplied with water. In a short time they must have attempted to cut their way threngh the Greek army, or surrendered at diseretion. Unliurtunately, it was cletermined to hombard the huibling und earry it ly storm. In order to breach the wall of the monastery, the IEelles cemmomaled it for several hours with her long 32 -pounders, The buikling looked like a heap of ruins, and the Greek troops made $n$ feeble atternpt to carry it ly sterm, which was easily repulsed by the Albaninus, who sivang up from the urched eolls in which they had fonnd shelter fiom the fire of the frigate.

Attempts were made next day to "pren negociations with the Albuthinns, who it was suppesed would be now sutbering from langer ; but a Greek soldier who earrial projosals firr a capitulation was put to death, and his head was exprosed from the wall; aud a luat sent from Lorl Corhane's yacht with a flage of troee, was fired on, and an English sailar dangerously woundel. The frigate then renewed her fire with no more effeet than on the previons diy. The warison fomed shelter in a diteh, which was dug during the night behind the ruins of the wher wahl, mil its comrage was increased by observints the trithing loss which was caused by the tremendons fire of the broatside of a sixty-four gon trigate. The Turks, havines now placed four gans on the heright to which they had retired on the $2.5 t h$, opened is plunging fire on the ships in the Pirans, and by a chance shot cot the mainstay of the IIellus.

There was little commanity of views betwen the lord high almiral amd the genembissimo. Cuchrame wijected to granting a eapitulation to the Alhanians in the momstery, as tending to encomage olstinate resistanee in lesperate cares, and he repmathed the Greek chicfs with their cowardice in net stoming the building. The irregulars refised to moldrtake any operation until they gianed possersion of the manastery. There mould be no doubt that a stominig farty, suppurted by a eomple of howitzers, mught to have cuirried the ptace withont dikiculty. Chureh detromined to make the attempt, and lividon, who commanded the artillery, was wrdared to prepare for the assant on tho morning of tho 2sth of April.

In an evil hour tho penomissimo elanged his plans. Surrounded by a multitude of commsellors, and lestitute of a firm will of his own, he enneluded a enpitulation with the Alhanians, without comsulting loud Cochrane or commmicating with Genernl Gordon. Karaiskaki was intrusted with the nerocintions. The Albinians were to retire fiom the momastery with urms nul butgage, Severnl (ireek ehiefis necompanied then ins hostage's for their safety. But the generalissinn took no preemtions tir enfercing arder, or preventing un undisciplined ralible of soldiers from crowiling round the Mussulmons as they issued firom the monastery. He must have been grossly deecived by his agente, for his report to the (reok government states "tlut no measmros had been meghected to prevent the frightfil entastrephe thint ensnod." Nothing warrunted this assertion but the fhot thut Kuraiskaki Djuvellas, und some other chicis, nceoupuaied tho Alhunians us hostages.

As noois as Lord Cochrane was awne that the com-mander-in-chiof of the army had opened negotirations with the Slbunians, ho ordered Major Uipuhart to withinw the Mylriots from their post near the monastery to tho summit of Mmyehin.

The Alluaniams had not advanced fifty yards through the dense crowid of arned men who surrounded them as they issued from St. Spiridion, when a fire was opened on them. Twenty different accounts were given of the origin of the massacre. It was vain for the Mussulmaus to think of defending themselves; their only hope of safcty was to gain the hill oecupied by the 'Iurkish urtillery. Few reached it even under the protection of $a$ fire which the Turks opened on the maxses of the Greeks. Two hundred nud seventy men guitted the monastery of St. Spiridion, and more than two lundred were murdered luefore they renched the bill. "The sluin were immediately stripped, and the infuriatecl soldiers fought with ench other for the spoil," as we ure told by a conscientions eye-witness of the scene.
This crime converted the Greek camp into a scene of aunrchy. Genvral Gordon, who had witnessed some of the atroeities which followed the snck of Tripolitza, was so disgusted with the disorder that prevailed, and so dissatisified on aceount of the neglect with which he was treatel, thut he resigned the command of the artillery and quitted Greece. Reshid Pasha, on being informed of the catastroplie, ruse up and exclainued with great solemnity, "God will not lenve this faithlessness unpunished. He will pardon tho murdered, and inftist some signal punishment on the murrlerers. ${ }^{1}$

Nothing now prevented the Greeks from pushing on to Athens but the confusion that prevailed in the camp and the want of a daring leuller. Some *kirmishjug ensued, and in one of these skirmishes, on the tha of May, Karaiskaki was mortally wounded. His death inereased the disorder in the Greek uruy, fir he exereised conviderable persomal influence over several Roneliot chiefts, and compressed tho jembousics of many

I The author was serving ae a voluntecr on the sitafl of (ieneral Gordon, und nceeupanied him to join the storising-purty on the 28th of April. It liad been observel from (iordon'a yacht, which Fas anehored in the l'ireua, that communications passel between the Albanians and the Greeks during the wholo morning. The Mydriots were adso seen retiring to tho summit of Munyehia, As Gorilun passed in his bont under the stern of Lord Coelirane's sacht, the nuthor prevailed on him to seek an explanation of what was going on. Cochrane said that he, as arlmirnl, hat zefased to concur in a capitulation, unkess tho Allunians hind down their arma, nad were transported an prisonire of war on board the theet. He nildell, that he fenred Chureli had concluiled a capitulation. While this conversation was going on, the nuther was watching the proceedinge at the monastery with his g!ass, and secing the Albunians insuo from the buithing lito the armet mob before the gates, he could not refrain from exclaiuning, "All those men will le murdered!" Lord Cochrine turned to Gordon and sath, "Do you liear what he nuyap" to which the gotworn replied, in his usual deliberate manner, " 1 fear, my leend, it is too true." The worls were iardly uttered when the massaero commencel. The author landed immediately to examine tho effect of the frigate'n fire ou the monsstery. Ife witnessed a strange scene of anarely and disorder, und wh'e ho remained in the building two tireeke were killed ly shot from the guna on the hill. The Hydriots under Mujor Uryuhart mutinied at being deprived of their share of the spoil. Lord Cechrune ment Mr. Masson to pacify them with this mbersage, "My reason fon ordering the Itydriota to muster on Minychita wa to remove the ferces noder my command from participating in a capitulation, unlews the Turka surrendered at diseretien. Sy objecte were to preserve the honour of the mavy nusullied, und nt the same time to secure an agual distribution of the prize-money." The author visited the yacht of tho generalisstmo mhortly after, and found the staff on board in high dudgeon at what they called the treachery of the Groeka. He did not tee the generalissino. Tho feeling among the Philliellenes in the cump, and there were many oflleers of many nations, was rmazement at the urglect on the part of the generalisslmo.-MS. Journal, 28 th April, 1827.
captains, who were now thrown into direct eommunication with the generalissimo.

Karaiskaki fell at a moment favourable to his reputation. He had not always acted the patriot, but liss recent success in Phocis contrasted with the defeats of Fabvier, Heideck, and Chureh, in a munner so llattering to national vanity, that his name was iclolised by the irregular troops, - He was one of the bruvest and mosit active of the chiefs whom the war had spared, and his recent conduct on nore than one occasion had effaced the memory of his unprincipled proceedings churing the early years of the Revolntion; indeed, it seemel even to his intimate acqusintances that his mind hart x panded as he rose in rank and importance. llis military talents were those which a leader of integy: ar bands is called upon to employ in casual emergencits, not those which qualify a soldier to command the numerous lodies rcipuired to compose an army. Ife never formed any regular plan of eampaign, and lin was destitute of the coolness and perseverance whieh sacrifices a temporary advantage to secure a great rind. In personal uppentance he was of the middle size, thin, dark-complexioned, and haggarl, with it bright expressive animal eye, which joined to the cast of his countenance, indicated that there was gipusy blood in his veins. His features, while in perfect repose, wore an air of suffering, which was usually sueceeded by a quick nnquiet glance.

Sir Richard Churel now resolved to change his base of operations from tho Pirmens to the cipe at the eastern chil of the Bay of Phalerum. Why it was si!posed that troops who co:ald not advance by an rud where olive-troes, vineyards, and ditches nfforded them some protection from the encmy's eavalry, shonld be expected to sneceed better in open gromil, has never been explainerl.

On the night of the 5 th May, the generalissimo transported three thousand men, with nine tield-pieces, to his new position, but it was nearly mayhreak before the whole were landed. It was then too hate to reach the Aeropolis before sunrise, and the roal lay over open downs. Gordon calls the operation "an insane project," and says that "if the phin deserves the severest censure, what shall we say to the pitiful methoul in which it was exceuted ?"

Farly dawn found the Greek troops posted on a low ritge of hills not more than lulf-way between the place where they liad Innded and the Acropolia.' A strong body of Ottoman cuvalry was already watching their movements, and a body of infuntry, accompranied by a gun, soon took up a position in front of tho Greek advanced guard. The position occupied by tho Greeks was far lieyond the range of any guns in the Thrkinh lines, but Sir Richard Chureh, who had not examined the ground, was under the erroneons impression that his troops had arrived within a short distunce of Athens, and counted on some co-operation on the part of the garrison of the Acropolis, Ind he seen the position, lee could not have allowed his troops to remain ou ground so ill chosen for defence against cavalry, with the imperfeet works which they had thrown up. The advance-gua'd had not completod the realoubt it hal commencel, and the main body, with the urtillery, conld give no support to the advanced-guard.

Reshid Pashm made his dispositions for a cavalry. attack. They wero similar to those which had secured lim the victory at Petta, at Khaidari, and ut Kamatero He ascurtained by his feints that his enemy had not a $t$ favourable to his repucter the patriot, but his casted with the llefeats of , in a mamuer so dlattering tame was itolised by the of the bravest and most war had spared, and his one occasion had effaced x proceedings during the ; indeed, it seemel even $s$ that his mind hiel 'xand importance. His hich a leater of irtegilar oy in casual emergencies, soldier to command the compose an army. lie lan of campaign, ind he: and perseveriner which age to seenre a great cond. $s$ of the middle size, thin, garl, with it bright exoined to the cast of his there was gijwy blood in e in perfect rejose, wore usmally succected by a solved to ehauge his base mas to the caje at the lerum. Why it was supnot ndvance by a roul nd ditehes aftorded them emy's cavalry, should be topen gromml, has never , the generalissimo trangwith nine field-picces, to nearly diyhreak before ras then too lute to reach and the rual lay over be operntion "an insane plan deserves the severto the pitiful methorl in ic tioops posted un a low If-way between the place We Laropolis. A strong already watching their fantry, accompanied by a 1 in front of the Greek a occupied by the G'reeks any guns in the Turkish 4, who had not examined rroneons impression that short distunce of Athens, ation on the part of the ad ho seen the position, his troops to remain oll ce against ravalry, with cy had thrown up. The eted the relloubt it lad ody, with the artillery, divanced-guard. ispositions for a cavalry. those which had secured haidari, and ut Kamatero hat his enemy had not a single gun to command the ensy slope of a ravine that let to the crest of the elevation on which the ulvanced redoubt was placed. Two successive charges of cavnlry were repulsed by the regular troops and the Suliots, who formed the alvoneed-guard of the Greek foree. Butthis small body of men was left unsupported, while the Turks had collected eight hundred eavalry and four hundred infantry in a zavine, by which they were protected until they charged forward on the summit of the ridge. The third nttack of the 'Turks aceided the contest. The eavalry galloped into the imperfect redoubt. A short struggle ensued, and completed Reshid's vietory. The main lrorly of the Greeks flod hefore it was atticked, and abandoned the gans, which remained standing alone for a short interval before tho Turkish eavalry took possessions of them, and turned thera on those by whom they bin heen ileserted. The fugitives endeavoured to reach the beach where they had landed. The Thrks followed, entting them down, until the prosuit was cheeked by the fire of the slips.

Sir Lichard Chureh and Loml Cochrane both landed ton late to obtain a view of the battle. The approach of the Turkish cavalry to their lamling-place eompelled them to regain their yachts. Teeshid Pasha, who direeted the attack of the Turkish envalry in person, was slightly wounted in tho haml.

Fifteen humeded Grooks fell in this disastroms lattle, aad six guns wire lost. It was the most romplete deteat sustaned by the (irreks during the comre of the war, and "fliced the memory of the route at Petta, aud "f the vietori's gained ty lbrahim Pashat in the Morea. The Turks took two hondrexl anil torty prisoners, all of whom were behealed exerpt General Kahergy, who was releasel on paying a ratisom of 5000 dollars, amd whe lived to obtain for his country the inestinable hoon of renesentative institutions by the Revolution of 18.43 , whiel put an end to Bavalian dominntion, and eompluted the rstablishanent of the inderendrnee of 'rerece.
The lattle of Phalerum dispersed the (froek army at the Pirans. Upwards of there thomand men deserted the canp in three days; :med the gremeralissima was so diveouraged hy the uspect of atlitiss, that ho ordered the partison of the Aerpurlis to etpitulate, ('aptain Leblame, of twe Fremoh firigate ,/moon, was requested to mediate for finvourable torme, and was furnished with a sketeh of tho proposed mipitulation. This precipitate step on the part of' Sir Rieharil Chureh drew on him a severo reprimund from the clisel's in the Acropolis, who trented his order with eontempt, and rejected Cutatin Seblanc's ofler of unediation with the bonst, that "We are Creoks, and we aro determined to live or die tiee. If, therefore, Reshid Pusha wants aur' arms, he may come and take them." These hold words were not bneked by deeds of valour.
Churel nhmuloned the pusition of ALunyelin on the 27th of May, mus the garison of the Acropolis then laid aside its theatrieal heroism, Captain Corner, uf tho Austrian lorig Verelo, renewed the negociations for a capitulation, nud the nerival of the Freneh ndminal, Do Riguy, brought them to n sucedy termimation. Ille eapitulation was signed in tho 5 th of Jume. The garrison marched out with urms and baggive. Ahout fifteen hundien jersons quitted the phace, inchuding four lundred women and chikdren. The Aeropolis still contained a suplly of grain for several months' consumptlem, anne about two thonsand pounds of powier, hut the water was searee and bad. Thero was no fuel for baking breal, and tho elothes of the solciets were in lags.

The surrender of the Acropolis, following so quiekly after the bombastic rejcetion of tho first proposals, cuused great surprise. The conduct of Fabvier was severely criticised, amd the behavion of the Greek chiefs was compared with the heroisu of the defenters of Mlesolonghi. The sulferings of those who were shat up, in the Acropolis were undoubtedly very ereut, lut tho winter was pist, and had they been inspired with the devoted patriotism of the men of Mesulonghi, they might have held out until the Pattle of Navarin.
The conduct of Reshicl Pashiel on this occasion gained hin immortal honour. Ife showed himself as much superior to Sir Richard Church in comsel, as he had proved himself to lee the fiek. Every measure that pindence could suggest was adnpted to prevent the Turks firom sullying the Muhammadan character with any act of roveuge for the bad faith of the Greeks at the Pireus. The pashat patrolled the ground in person, at the luad of a strong bouly of cavialry, and saw that his troops who esecreal the Greeks to the place of embarkation performed their daty.

The fall of $X$ thens emblel Heshid to complete the conguest of that purt of continental Greece which Karaiskaki hal oceupied; but the Trurks did not advance leyound the linits of Limmelia, and the Greeks wre allowed to romain mmolested in Megara and the Dervenokhoria, which were dependencies of the pashalik of the MLurea, and consenuently within the jurisiliction of Jhahim Pasha. Many of the Rumetiot ehiefs now subuited to the 'Turks, and were reeognised by Reshid as eaptains of urmatoli. In his despatches to the Sultan, he housted with some truth that be had terminated the military operations with which le was intrusted, nut re-established the sultam's authority in all that part of eontinental fireeco placed muler his comumand, from Mesolonghi to Athens.

$1 V^{+}$

Batrie of Navarin - Fhencit Expeintion to the Moaea -Ophations in Jastem wid Whisen Gmeece-Tlamination of hosyihities-Pbince Lfoomod-Assissina in Ubeece-Estahlimamery of the Bivaman Dryasty.
IIus elestruetion of the Ottoman and Egyptian fleets at Nuvarin (Octolner 9Och, 1827 ) mate no change in tho hetermination of Sultan Midimurl, nor Wiss the courage of Ibrahion I'asha depressed by his defeat. The netion of the thlies was eripuled by misumherstandiugs among themselves. Whilst England and Franee wished to preserve tho Sultan's throne, as well as to establish tho inderendence of Greece, Rusian was even more enger to destroy the Otteman emprire than to navo Greces. Hence it wis that there was not wanting those who looked upon Navaria ns "an intoward event." Tho weakness of the British cabinet allowed linssia to assume a decided politieal supriority in the Eist, but after the conelnsion of the war between Russia nud the Porte, in 18:8-99-at wat which relleeted little honoun on the armies of the Emperor Nichohs-tho lirench govermment molertonk to selld marmy to expel Ibrithim, for the utter exhastion of Civeece proveated the govermment of Cigmodistrims from making nuy effirt to expel tho Ebyptimes from the leloponmens, whilst tho mutual jealonsies of lingland and Russia theatened to retard the paeitieation of Greece indofinitely. On the 19th July, 1828, a protacol was signed, accepting the ofler of Frameo ; and on the 30th Angust, an army of fourteren thousind men, miler the command of General Maisom, landed at Pretalidi in the Gulf of Coron. The convention concluded by codrington at Alexandria land been inetlie tual. It repuired the imposing force of the Fronch general to compel Ibrahian to sign a new convention for the inmediate evnenation of the Moren.
 18 Es, and the first division of the Efyptian army, consisting of five thensand tive humbed men, sailed from Navarin on the l6th. Ibrahim Pabha sailed with the remainder on the 5th October; but he refused to deliver up the fortresses to the Fromel, alleging that he had found them eccugied by Thrkish garrisons on his arrival in Greese, and that it was lis duty to leave them in the hands of the Sultan's otlieers.

Afier Ibrahim's departure, the Turks refused to surrender the firtreses, and General Mason indnlged their pride hy allowing them to elose the gates. The French troops then flanted their ladiers, sealed the walls and openel the gates without my opposition. In this way Nuvarin, Molom, amd Coron fell into the hands of the Frenela. But the eastle of Rhion ottered some resistance, mad it was found necessary to lay siege to it in regular form. On the 30th Oetober the Frenela batteries opened theit firr, and the garrisou surrembered at diseretion.

Frmee thes gained the honour of delivering Grecee from the hast of hor conyueros, and she inereased the debt of gratitude due by the Greeks by the admirable conduct of the French soldiems. The fortrewses surreadered by the Turks were in a ruinous condition, :and the streets wers encumbered with filth neenmulated daring seven years. All within the walls was it mass of putridity. Maligument tevers mud plague were endemic, and had every year carried off numbers of the garrisoms. The Froneh troojs transormed themselves into :an army of pioncers; and these pestilentind medienal eastles were converted into habitable towns. The principal buildings were repaired, the fortifications improved, the ditehes of Mulon were purified, the citadel of Patmas recunstructed, and a road for whecled carriages formed tron Molon to Navarin. The activity of the French troups exhe "ited how an army raised by conseription ought to be omployed in time of pence, in order to prevent the labour of the men from being lost to their country. But like most lessons that inenlented order and system, the lesson was not studied by the rulets of Greice.

The Morea lacing thas liberated, nothing remminel for Capulistrins, who hat hern rlected l'resident of Gresee on the 1 Ith $\Lambda_{\text {pril }} 1827$, but to elear the remainder of the comutry of the 'Turks. The Russian war compelled lieshid l'asha to lenve continental Greec and Epirtis nlmost destitute of tropis, and he was threatencl with an insurrection of the Albanian chicftuins in his own pushalik of Jommina. In untumn the (ireeks mivanced to Lombotim, fimmous for its applos, and drove the 'Turks into Lepmanto. Hypilantes ubout the same timu weenpied beotian and Phocis, nad on the 29th of November the Turks in Saloma eapitulated, and the cupitulation: was faithfinlly ohserved by the (ireeks. On the Sth of Decemher, Karpenisi was "vachated. A fiow insignifiemut skirmishes took place luring the winter. The 'Turks were too weak to nttempt myything, anl the marely that still prevailed ir oug the Greek ehief prevented the numericil sumeriority of the Greek firces Fom bemg available.

The army of Western Grecee was not more nctiv, than that of Eastern during the summer of lsas. Capodistrias visited the camp of Sir Rieharel Churol, mear Mytika, and he declared that, on inspecting the troops in Acarmana, he fomed less order than in thase he had reviewed at Troezene. This visit gave the President a very umfavorable opinion of the gomatissimu's talents for organisation. In Septemiler the Greeks advanced to the Gulf of Arta, and ocenpied Loutraki, where they gained possession of a few hoats, Capodistrias ummed lasano, a Corsican adventurer, to sneceed Hastings as commander of the naval forces it Western Grecce. Pasano mude an masuccessful attempt to force the passage into the Gulf of Arta, but some of the Greek officers under his commum, consilering that he had shown both cowardice and incapaeity in the nflair, renewed the enterprise: without his order, and passed gallantly mader the Latteries of Previsa, This exploit sceured to the Greeks the commind of the Gulf of Arta. Tasano was reenlled, and Admiral Krízes, aHydriot officer of ability and conrage, succeeded him. The town of Vonitza, a ruinous spot, was occupind by the Greek troops on the 27 th Decenber, 1828 ; but the almost defenceless Venetian eastle did not capitulate until the 17 th Mareh, 1829 . The passes of Makrynores were veempied in April.
Capodistrias, who had blamed both IIypilhuters and Church for incapacity, now astonishod the world by making his brother Agostino a general.

Count Agostino C'apurlistrias, besides not leing a military man, was really little lietter than a fool; yet tho President, hlinded hy fratermal athection, mamed this miscrable ercature his pleaipotentiary in Western Greece, and eapowered hin to direet all military and eivil business. The plenipotentiany arrived in the Mellas. On the 30th $A_{p}$ ril, 18:5, the garrisen of Numpaktos (Lepunto) capitulated, und was tramspurtel to Previsa. On the 14 th May, Mesolughi and Anatolikon were evneuated hy the 'I'urks.
Reshid Pashar escupeil the mortitication of witnessing the loss of ull his conquests in Cirreee. Llis prudence and valour were rewarded with the rank of dirum Vizier, and he quitteel Joamina to assume the command of the Uttoman army at shamlat before the 'Turks evaluated cominental Greece.
The war terminated in 1820. The Allied l'owelx fixed the frontier of (irecece by a protncol in the month of March. Yet the Thurk would not yield possession of the places they still held in Eastern Greace, and somo skirmishes ensued, in which a great deal of powder was wasted, mal vers littlo blood was shed. A hody of Alhmians, muder Aslan liey, marehed from Zeituni by 'Thernopyla, Livaden, and Thebes, and reached Athens withont eneometering opposition. After learing a small nud select garrison in the Aeropulis, A.lan bey collected all the Thuks in Attien and Dienotia, and commenced his retreat. But on arriving at the pass of Petra, between Thebes mud Livadea, he fomm a body of Greek troops strongly posted to dixpme the passige. The Turks, mahlo to advance, conchaded a capitulation on the 2 ath of September, 1829, by which they engury to evacmute nil bastern (ireece, except the Arrophlis of Athens and the fort of Kaeababa on the Earipus.

The sovereignty of liberated Greece curtailed ly the saerifice of Acarmania and gent part of Et.lia, was oflered by the protecting powers, and aceppted by tel the numerical sneribeong available. ce was not more active ; the summer of lsos. of Sir Rieharal Chumed that, on inspecting the lese ordir than in thase
'Ihis visit gave the opinion of the remetalon. In Septembier the ion Arta, and accuphed ossession of a few heats. Corsican alventurer, to of of the naval forces in - an masnceessful attermit ulf of Art:a, lant sume of momand, consilering that e and inempeity in the withont his order, and teries of I'revisa. 'This the commind of the diulf , and Almiad Kriozes, conunge, suecceded him. is spot, was occupied by h December, 1828 ; but I castle tid not capitu. The passes of Jakryal both Hypuilantes and atonislued the world by genernl.
is, besides not being a lietter than a fool ; vet terual atliection, named aipotentiury in Westem 0 direet all military and entiary arrived in the $18: 9$, the girrison of and, and was tramsported , Mesolonghi itul Anato. urks.
rtitication of witnessing (irreee. Ilis prutense ith the rank of (irand to assume the comamad umlit ocfore the J'urks 9. 'I'he Allied Powers it protncel in the mentis anld nut yield possession in Eastern Greoce, and ch a great ilenl of powder borl was shiel. A bady , marehed from Zeituni 1 Theles, mud renched opposition, A ter learin the Aeropelis, Aslan Attien und liowtia, and on mrriving at the pass Livallen, he found a hoty 1 to dixpuite the prissige. concluiled a capitulation b, by which they engaqual (c, except the A monolis baba on the Liuripus. Greece eurtailad by tho at part of Etolla, was it part of Etoln, wels, and aceppen by

Prince Leopold of Sixo-Coburg, who however sion wearied nut by the intrigues and dissensions that pervaded the country, lift it a prey to the monemeealed tymany of Cajudistrias. lasurrection, the matural consequence of such a state of things (as it has been, in our own diss, of the incapanity of the lavarian king) was, as lins also been the erse in tho present instance, pint down hy the intervention of the Allies. more especially of liassia. ('ipoodistrias fell, however, shortly afturwneds liy the hands of assassins, nud direece, which hat been depraved by his tyrimay, only beeane more utterly demomised liy his denth.

An interval of amarehy succueled. Agostino Capodistrias was reveded to the Iresideney, only to be ejected hy an insurrection of the Romeliots. The French ocenpied Nimplia to nurest the progress of disorder and civil war ; Koloketrones mallied the Capodistrims, whilst Ijavellas wecupied Patras, and at the end of the ycar 1832 Grecer was in a state of almost miversal decor prosition. The government ncknowledged by tho hree jwwem exereised litto anthority lnyond the walls of Nimplia. The semate was in open rebellion. The ('ipodistrians under Kolokotrones and Djavelles had nover recoguised the governing commission, A conferleration of military chiefs attempted to rule the conntry, and blackided the existing governterat. The commission of threc members, which exercised the executive power, nlarmed at the prospeet of being excluded from jower lefore the king's nrival, implored the rexidents to invite the French trouns to sarisum Argos. Four companies of intiantry and a detachnent of artillery were sont from Messenia by Gemmal Guchenene th effect this olyect. In the meantime, Ceneral (Oorbet, who eommanded at Nathplia, letached two eompmaies and two mountain-guns to take possession of the cavalry barmeks at Arpos, in orker to secare guarters fir the troops from Messenia. The town was filled with irregulat Greek soldiery, under the nominat commanil of (irigiottes and Tzokres. These mun boastexl that they wonld drive the Fremeh lack to Nuyplia, and that Kolokotrones wonld exterminate those who were molvincing from Messenia. The pralent preanutions of the Freneh ofticers prevated the troops heing attacked on their mareh, and the whole forer mited at Arges on the lieth of damary, 1833.

On the following ding the French were suldenly ittacked. The treeks commenerel their hostilities so mexpretedly, that the enlonel of the troops, who had artived on the precerling evening, was on his way to Samplia to make his report to Cioneral Corbet when the attack eommeneed. The Freneln soldiers who went tomarket innarmed were driven lauek into the harrucks, and a few were killend and wounded. But the hostile condict of the (ireek solliery lut premared the Fremeh for my sudilen ontbrak, mil $n$ few minntes sutliced to put their whole force muter arms in the sefuare before their quarters. The (Greek troops, tristing to their anmisers, attempited to aeenpy tho honses which commanded this spure. They were premptly driven back, nud the streets were chenred by grapeeslont from the French guns. 'The Greoks then intrenelied themsolves in several homes, and tired trom the windows of the uprer stories on the lireneh whe ndvaneed to dislouge them. This speeies of warlare conhlat not long arrest the progress of megular trons. The French succeeded in mpuronehing every house in succession with littlo loss. They then burst open the doors and winclows of the lower story, and, rushing upstairs, firced the armatoli and klephits to jump out of the winlows, or tinished their career with the bayonet. In less than three hours every house was taken, and the fugitives who laul songhtit a relinge in tho ruined vitatel of Larissal were pursued and thiven even from that stronghohl.

Never was victory more complete. The French lost only forty killed and womuled, while the Greeks, who fought chiefly under cover, ha a hundred and sixty killed, and in all probability a muelı greater number wounded. Inigiottes was taken prisoner, but was soon meleasel. A Areek oflicer and a sohlier, acensed of an attempt at an assassination, were tried, condemnerl, and shot.

While the Greek tronps were pluntering their countrymen and murdering their allies, the three protecting Powers wero latouring to secure to Cirecce every advantage of political indelיndence anil external peace. A treaty was signed at Constintinuple on the 2 lst July, 1832, hy which the Sultin recognised the kingdom of Greice, and ceded to it the districts within its limits still oceupied by his troops, on receiving an indemnity of forty millions of piastres, a sum then equal to $\pm 462,480$. The Allied Powers also furnished the king's government with mople funds, by gnarantereing a loan of sixty millions of francs. The indemnity to 'Turkey was paid out of this loan.
The Allied Powers also secured for the Greek monarchy an otlicial ndmiswion among the sovergigns of Europe, hy inviting the Germanic Confederation to recognise Prince ()tho of Bavaria King of Greece, which touk place on the 4 th October, 1832. The protectors of Grecee lave often been reproached for the slowness of their procendings in establishing the independence of Areece; yet when we reflect un the anarehy that provailed among the Greeks, the difficulties thrown in their way by Chaodistrias, the desertion of Prince: Lepold, and the small nsistance they received from Bovaria, we ought rather to feed surprise that they succeeded at last in establishing the Greek kinglom.

The King of Bavaria concluded a treaty of alliance between Bivaria and Greece on the Ist November; 1832. He engaged to send 3,500 Bavarian troops to support his son's throne, and relieve the French urmy of necupation. This subsidiary force was paid from the proceeds of the Allied luan; for Bivaria had neitherthe resources, nor, to speak tla truth, the gencrosity, of Fronee. A convention was signed at the sumu time, nuthorising Greeco to recruit volunteers in Bavarin, in order that the subsidiary force might bo replaced by (ierman mereanaries in King Otho's sorvice.

On the 16 th Janumy, 1833, the veterans of the Greek Rovolution thed before a few eompanies of French trongs; on the lst of Fobruary, King Otho arrived at Namplia, necompanied hy a small army of Bavarians, composed of a the proportion of infantry, cavality. artillery, nud engimeers. As experience hal proved that there were no statesum in Greece capablo of governing the comitry, it was absolntely necessary to semil a regener composed of foreigners to administer the government during King Othis minority. The persons chosern were Count A mansperg, M. do Maurer, and Cieneral Heideck.

The Bavarian troops landed before the king. Their tall persons, hright uniforms, and tine music, contrasted greatly to their advintage with the small figures und well-worn clothing of the French. The numerous momated officers, the spleadid pltames, the prancing horses, and the numerous ilecorations, crosses, and ormanents of tho now comers, produed a powerful fliect on the minds of the Greeks, taught by the castigation they lad received at Argos to apprecinte the value of military disciphine.

The peoplo weleomel the king as their saviour from anarely. Even the mombers of the government, the military chiefs, and the lighl oflicials, who hand been devouring the resources of the country, hailed the king's arrival with plensure; fior they felt that they could no lenger extort nuy profit from the starsing population. The tithe, however, whiels tho Bnarim prinee ass'uned-Otho, ly the grate of God, King of Green-excited a few neers even anong those who wero motrepublicams; fur it seemed a clam to divin. right in the throne on the part of the house of Wittelspach. But every ohjection passed unherded ; and it may be nately nsserted that few kings have moment their thrones amidet more general satistaction than King Otho.

As leng as the literature and the tiaste of the ancient Grecks eontinute to murture selablars madinspire artists, modern Greceo must he an olject of interest to cultivated minds. Nur is the history of the mondern (ireeks maworthy of attention. The inportance of the fireck race to the progress of Eurpean civilisitiont is nut to be m+no...l by its numerical strongth, but by its. socia ligions influence in the East. Yet, even genge ' $y$, the Greeks occupy a wide extrnt of seaconst, dhe :he combtries in wisis they dwell are so thinly peopled that they lave nupte roon to multiply and torm a populous nation. At present their inthence extands far beyom tho torritories ocempied by their race; for Gred priests and (ireck tomehers have transfused their limgnoge and their inlens into the greater part of the Christian puphation of Euronem Turkey. They have thas constituted themselves the representatives of Eastern Christianity, and placed themselves in prominent opuosition to their con fuerors, the Ottoman Therk, who invaded Enrope as apostles of the religion of Muhammal. The Greeks, during their suljection to the yoke of a foreign mation and a lastile religion, never forgot that the land whieh they inhabited was the lame of their fithers: and their matugonism to their alien and intidel masters, in the home of their most aljecet servitude, presided that thicir oprosition must emd in their destruation on deliverance. Tho (inelk Revolution camo at last. It delivered a Christim mation from subjection to Mohmmadanism, fimuded a new state in Einrope, and extented the advantages of eivil liberty to regions where despotism hand for ages been indigenoms.

Yet if we are to bulieve our great authority in the matter, mad me to whin we are so largely indebtedDr. George Finlay-the Greek Revolution was not nn insmrectional movemont, originating solely in Turkish oppresiom. The tirst aspinations for the delivery of the orlades church from the saltan's yoko were inspired ly husxia; the projects for natiounl independance hy thu Fromeln Revolution. Thu Greeks, it is true, were prepared to receive thess indeas by 14 waw in the clemunt of hutam progress that had previously speme civilisation am, ng thar inhabitants of the ottoman ('mpire, whether Mussulman or Clnristian.

The origin of the idens that produced the Greek Revolution explnin why it was pre-eminently the movement of the people; und that its success was, owing to their perseverance, is poved by it. whoic history. To live or die free was the firm resulve if the native peasuntry of Greeee when they touk up arms; and no sufferings ever shomk that revolution. They never had the goonl fortune to find a leake: worthy of their enuse. Nos eminent man stands for ward as a type of the mation's virtuen; tow many ars fimous as representatives of the mation's vices. Frons this ciremmanare, the records of tha Gre⿻k aro destitute of ono of listory's most attractive cha. nacteristies; it loses the charn of a hero's biography. But it possesses its own histinction. Never in thin records of states did a mation's success depmim mare entirely on the compluct of the mase of the jopulation; never whe there a more clenr manitistation of tivel providence in the progress of hunlan society. Som can regard its success as the result of the military ani naval exploits of the insurgents; and even tha. Illied powerw, in creating a Greck kingom, only manlitial tha politieal results of a revolution which hat inter ocalit: sepmated the present from the past.

Let us not: examine how far the Greek lisolutio: has succereded. It has crablished the indenandene of Grrece on a tirm basix, and ereated a five govername in regions where eivil liberty was makown fir tw, thousand yars. It has sechred pupular inatitations. a considerable portion of the Greek mation, and given to the perple the power of infasing mational lific at national terlings into the administration of King othakinglum. These may be justly wonideret by th Grecks an ghorions achievements for onn genemation.

But yot it must be confernel that, in many thins: the Grack Levolution hat, fuild It has not cratem? growing population and an expanaling mation. Bind. macy has tirmed a diminutive kingelom, and no Tho mistodes has known how to torm a grent state ont of so small a commanity. Yet the tiank wis not aliliculn the lesson was taught in the Vinted states of Amoris and in the colonial empire of Great latitan. Pat it the ( reeck kingion, with evoy elenent on sucial and political improwenent at ham, the aqricultural jol': lation and the native implatry of the comery bane incrasing, mad merchante nre gaining muncy; lout the hrave pasamtry, who formed the natimin atemeth grows neither richer mer more momernts: tha promber of their laknore is of the rudeat kind: whole itistrit. renain uncaltivated; the wealthy Greeks wher pidk ip moncy in foreign traflic alo not invert the capital the! aecmumate in the hand which they pretemb to call the: comerry; and mo stream of Greck chicrants thow from the millins who live endared in Curkey, to enf: liberty hy settling in libented areoce.
There can be undoubt that the inhabitunt of tiree maty, wer in spite of past failures, liow with hop"t the future. Whan a few yome of libery law prow soriety trom the tralitiond conruption of servitub wise councils may enable them to renme their to gress.

But the friends of dreecer. Who believed that the Revolution would be inmediately followed liy the mul tiplieation of the tireck race, mil hy tho translusion Christian civilisation and political liberty throgghat all the regions that surromed the Segen Sea, cemus hedp regretting that a generationi has inem allowed th pass awny moprotitaldy: The political pusition of the Ottoman empire in the international yst om of Eirrop is alrendy changed, and the condition of the Clristans
s, is provel by its whon c was the firm resolvo of reee when thes took पן er shork that resolution. tortune to find a leade eluinent man stambe fir a's virthes; the wany arn the mation's vices. I'rou s of the Grerk Revolution ory's most attractive chanin of a hero's biugraphy. stinction. Never in the fin's niereess deprond mure (1) mass of the promituion (ir manitestation of sudi humam society: Nu mo result of the militayy an ats; and even thes. Ilied Eingrlom, only malifing the ion which haul irrevotall: te past. fir the Greek Rexoluti, limhet the indepurndence reatel a the goverama ty was mknown fip tw, real I"prular institutions to Greek mation, :my gise intising mational lific a: inistration of King Oelhi: justly consilereal loy th mits for the genematim. ef chat, in many thins lod. It hats heot wratel) eppanding mation. Tipher ve kingelona, and on The. oforma agrent stato ome , if tho tink war not lifliens, Vinited states of Amortion f Great bitain. Pat in "ry elotwent of sucial and al, the agricultama 1 m try of the comutry lante Fhe towns, it is true, ats saining money; lat tho ol the mation' stenget - numerons: the prowture kimy: whon ditric. Why Greek whur pick in ot invet the eapital thens they pretemin to coll thes eek chingmints thow frot ed in Turkey, to engin 1 fireece.
the inhabitunt of ireea lures, look with loplu't $x$ of liberty lawe pury conruption of servitulin to resmue the ir pow who believerl that thir oly tillowed ly the mul nd by the trasstiasion tienl liberty throughoit the Fegral Sua, canms in' has ine allown th political ponition of tha tional wystrm of Europ Idition of the Christia population in Turkey is even more elanged than the position of the eapire The king last tho opportunity of alluring cmigrants by goon government. Feclings of nationality are awnkened in outher Oriental Christians under Ottoman domination. The Greeks can henecforth mily repose their hopes of power on an udmission of their intellectual and moral superiority. The Albanians are more warlike; the Sclavonians are more latorious; the Rummans dwell ia a more fertilo land; mud the Turks may become again a powerful uation, by being delivered from the letiargic indluence of tho Ottoman sultans.
The Ottonam empire nuy soon be dismembered, or it may long drag on a contemptible existence, like the Greck empire of Constantinople under the Paleolorues. Its military resourees, however, render its condition not diswimilar to that of the Ruman empire in the time of Gallienus, and there may be a possibility of finding a Diocletian to reorganise the administration, and a Constantine to relim the religion. But should it be dismenbered to-morrow, it may ise askel, what measures the free Greeks have alopted (1) govern auy portion better than the otlicers of the Sultan? On the other hand, several juwerful states and more $j^{\text {mopulons }}$ nations ure well prepare⿻l disjointed empire. They will casily find legritimate pretexts for their intervention, mad they will certainly obtain a tacit reognition of the justice of their procerdings from the public opinion of civilised Earope, if they sueceed in saving Turkey from anarchy, and in averting such scenes of slaughter as Creece witnessed during her Revolution, or as have recently occurred in Syria.
It is never too late, however, to commence tho task of improveruent. The inheritance may not be open for many years, and the heirs may be called to the successsion by their merit. What, then, ure the merits which give a nation the best claim to greatness? Perional dignity, domestic virtue, truth in the intercourse of society, and respect for justice, make nations lowerful as surely as they make men honourel.

V.

Habmony betwzen Atinmian abchitectere and the Sof and Chamate - Thi acrorolig - Tie phoplea on poaticoes - Temple op tue Wingliks Victory - Tum Pabtarvoy, "Tife Virois's Horse" - Cohossal. Statex jp the Vingin Goddegs-Wasit containen within the building, of did it stasd oct above it?
It has been justly remarked of the eelebrated Mount Lycabettus, now commonly called the Hill of St. George, and which used to be identified by typo graphers with the Anchesmus, that it is to Athens what Vesmeins is to Nupies, ir Arthur's Seat to Edin-burgh-the most striking feature in the envirous of the eity (See p. 2(05).
South-west of Lyeabettus, ant at the distane of a mile from the latter, is the Acropolis, w Citalel of Athens, is simate craggy woek rising ahrittly abont one luadred and fifty fiot, with a that smamit of about a thomsand feet long from enst to west, by the hambed fiect broal from north to sonth. Inmediately west of tho Acropolis is a secome hill, of irregulat fime, the Areoppgos. To the sonth-west there rises a thiril hill, the P'nys, on which the assemblies of the citizons were held ; mud to the south of the latter is a fourth hitl, known us the Museum.

The phan of Athens is larren and dentitute of wrgetation, with the exception of the long lino of olicewhich stretch from Mount Parnes by the side of Cephissus to the sea. "The tuildings of the eity possensed "property produced immediately lay the Athenian soil. Athens stands on a bed of haril limestone roek, in most phees thinly coverell by a meagre surface of wil. From this surlice the rock itself frequently projects, and almost always is visible. Athenian ingenuity suggented, and Athenian dexterity realised, the adiptation of such a soil to architectural purposes. Of this there renains the fullest evidence. In the roeky soil itself walls have been hewn, parements levelled, stepe and seats chiselfed, cinterns excavated, and nickes scooped; almost every object that in a simple state of society would be necessary, either for public or private fabries, was thas, as it were, quaried in the soil of the eity itself," (Worlsworth, Athens und Altica, p. 62.)

Not ouly did the Atherian soil, but its configuration also, and equally so the climate, exoreise an inportant influence upon the builitings of the eity. They are clunneterised by Milton in his uoble lines:

> "Whero on the .E.zean shore n eity stnnds, Bnitt nohly, pure the air, and ligthe the goil."

Mr. Pennethome has only recently explainel the secret of that beaty which at onee awakens enthusiam, without its the sumree being always fithomed. Mr. Pennethorne, and since him Mr. Penrose, have subjected the Athenian monments to minute measurements, and they lave fomd that in this arelitecture, as in nature, all the lines fullow a curve or an inelination. It can then now be understool how the Greek monaments tally with nature, iunl it is from this perfect hammony of their lines with the lines that surround thens, that has sprung that fulness of charncter which no urt has been able to attain. It is as questionable if pure Greck architeeture, harmonising as it does with the limestone hills and villees of (irrece and Sicily, is my more at home on the bonlevarls of Paris, or the streets of London, than a pyrumid or ohelisk torn from the vast open plains of Egypt would be transplanted to one of our green parks, whose intricate foliage might find some relief in Guthie tracery ; but is oniy placed in rude contrast when interrupted by a simple monumental shaft.
Wordsworth accomits in part for the practical defects of the domestic arehitecture of the Greeks, the bainess of their strects and the proverbinl mear ness of the houses, even of the noblerst individuals among thent, to the same surpassing beauty and clearness of the Athenim athoriphere, und which allows the inhalitante to pass mueh of their time in the open nir.
Hence it was that in the best days of Athens, the Athenians worshipped, they legislited, they saw dramatic representations, under the open sky: Tha transparent clearness of the atmosphere is uoticed by Euripides, mul modern travellems have not fiiled tio notice the satue peculiarity. Mr. Stanley speaks of "the tramparent clearness, the hilliant colouring of an Athenian sky; of the thool of fire with which the marde columes, the mometanx, and the sea, are all hathed and penetrated by mu illumination of as Athentan sunset." The "pinhet whill Uvid applins to Hymettus, "purpureos colles, llymetti," is strichly correct, and the writer whon we have juist quoted mentions "the violet lue which Hymettus assumes in the evening sky, in contrint to the ghwing furmace of the rock of Lycabettus, and the rosy pyramid of Pentelicus." (Stanley, in Classical Mus*um.)
Mr. Mure, in his Tour in Greece, has also ably depieted the harmony that exists in Atticu between arehiteeture and soil an: climate. The great national amphitheatre, he reuarks, of whieh Athens is the centre, prosesses, in addition to its beauty, certain leatures of preuliarity, which render it the more

MUSIC THEATRE OF HERODES.
dithenle to form any adequate idea of its seenery hat from a personal view. The chief of there is a eertain degree of regularity, or mather of symunetry, in the arrangement of the prineipal parts of the landseape, which enables the eye the better to apprehend its whole extent and variety at a single gha:ce, and thus to enjoy the full etlect of its collective exenhenee more ferfeetly than where the uttention is districted by a

The great mational which Athens is the to its beauty, eertain 1 render it the more 5初边 ins to apprchend its Sugle ghatece, and thus cotive ex hence more on is districted by a less orderly aecumulation of even beantiful objects. Its more prominent characteristies are-first, the wide extent of open plain in the centre ; secondly, the three sepmate ranges of mountain-Hymettns, Pentelicus, :and Parnes-to the cye of nearly the same height, and hounding the phain at anequal distances on three sides, to the south enst, north-east, and north-west; thirdly, the sea on the remaining side, with its islands, and the distant mainland of Peloponnesus; fourthly, the eluster of rocky protuberances in the centre of the plain, the most striking of which either form part of the site of the eity, or are grouped around it; and fifthly, the line of dark, lense olive groves, winding like a large green river through the heart of the vale.

Any formality, which might be expected to result from so symmetrical an arrangement of these leading elements of the composition, is further interrupted by the low graceful ridge of Turcvouni, extending behind the city up the centre of the plain, and by a fow marked indulations of its surface abont the Peirens and the neighbowing coast. The present barren and deserted state of this fair, but not liertile region, is perhmps rather favourable than otherwise to its full picturesque effeet, us tending less to interfere with the outlines of the landecape, 11 which its bemuty so greatly consista, than a dense popmlation and high state of eulture.
The Acropolis of Athens wis at one and the same time the fortress, the sauctuary, and the muserm of the eity. Although the site of the original city, it had ceased to be inhabited from the time of the Persian wars, and was appropriated to the wowhip of Athem and the other gnierdian leities of the eity. By the artists of the age of l'rricles its platform was eovered with the master-pieees of ameient art, to which additions continued to be made in suceeeding ages. The sanctuary thas hecame a mnsenm, and in order to form $n$ proper illea of it, we mnst imugine the summit of the rock stripped of everything except temples and statues, the whole forming one vast composition of architecture, sculpture, and painting, the dazzling whiteness of the marble relieved by brilliant colours, and glittering in the transparent elearness of the Athenian atmosphere. It was here that Art nchieved her greatest triumplis; and though in the present day a seene of desolation and ruin, its ruins are some of the most precious relics of the ancient world.

The Acropolis stood in the centre of the eity. Hence it was the heart of Athens, as Athens was the heart of Greeee. It was to this snured rock that the magnificent procession of the Panathenaic tistival took phace wnee in four yens. The chief object of this procersion was to carry the Peptus, or cmhroidered robe of Athena to her temple on the Acropolis. In commection with this sulyject it is important to distinguish between the three dilliwent Athenss of the Acroperlis. The tirst wan the Athem Potian, the must ancient of all, made of olive wool, mad sitid to have fallon from heaven ; its sanctuary was the Erechtheium. The speound was the Athena of the l'arthenon, a atatuo of ivory will gold, the work of Phichias. The third was the Athena Promachus, a colossal statue of bronze, also the work of lhidins, stmuling ereet, with helmet, sprar, ant shieh.

The surface of the Acropulis appears to have been divided into platforms, commuicating with one unother oy steps. If ${ }^{m i n}$ these platforms stood the trmplex, sanctuaries, or monmments, which ocenpied all the munit.

On the ascent to the Acropolis from the modern town our first attention is enlled to the angle oi the Hellenic wall, west of the northern wing ot the Pro pylea. It is prolnable that this wall formad the exterior defence of the Acropolis at this point. Following this wall northwards, we come to a bustion, luilt alynt the year 18:2 by the Greek General Odyssens to defend an aneient well, to which there is access withit the hastion by an antique 1 massige and stairs of sume length cut in the rock. Turning castwards round the corner, we come to two caves, one of which is supposed to have been dedicated to Pan; in these caves are traces of tablets let into the rock. Lenving these raves we come to a large luttress, after whieh the wall rumupon the edge of the nearly vertical rock. On pasing round a salient angle, where is a small huttress, we find a nearly straight line of wall for abont 210 fret : then $a$ short bend to the south-enst; afterwards a further straight reaeh for abuit 120 feet, neurly praalle to the former. These two lines of wall contain the remain: of Dorie columns and entahlature, to which reference has alrealy heen made. A meliav val huttro. about 100 feet from the angle of the Erechtheium, forms the termination of this second rench of wall. From hence to the north-enst angle of the Acrunlis. where there is a tower apparently Turkish, ocerr several large square stones, which also appear to have belouged to some early temple. The wall, into whish these, as woll ths the before-mentioned fragments, ato built, seemss to be of Hellenic origin. Tho cantern fice of the wall appars to lave been entirely buile in the Midelle Ages, in the whl foundations. At the ontis. east angle we timl the Irllenic masonry of the suthem or Cimonian wall. At this spot twenty-nine courses romain, making $n$ height of firty-five feet. Wistwarl of this point the wall has beca almost entirely cased in medieval and recent times, and is further sulprowl by nine buttresses, which, as well nis those on the north and east sides, appear to be medieval. But the Hallenic masenry of the Cimonian wall wan be traced all nimb as far us the Propylen muder the ensing. The south. west reach of the Hellenie wall terminates westwial in a solid tower abont thinty feet ligh, which is surmounted by the temple of Nike Apiteros, lescriled below. This tower commanded the unshicltow side of any troops approaehing the gate, which, there is good reason to helieve, was in the same position an the present 'ntrance: After passing throngh the gate, und procecting lurthwards underneath the wost face of the tower, we cone to the Propylaa. The etfiect of emerging from the dark gate and narrow passige to the magnilieent marble stairease, seventy teet broul, surmounted liy the Proplam, must have been exceel. ingly grand. A small portion of the ancient Petargic wali still remains near the south-east ungle of the southern wing of the Propylam, now orellyind lay a lofty mediaval tower: After passing the giteways of the Proplen, we come upon the area of the Acropulis, of which considerahly mone than lanf has beon excavated under the anopises of the Greek gevemunut. Upon entering the inclonnre of the Aeropolis the colossal stutue of Athena Prombehus was seen a i.m to the left, and the Purthenon to tho right ; loth offiring angular viow, aceorling to the nsum curtom of the Grecks in arranging the appronehes to theis pullic buildings. The roud leading upwards in th: direction of the Parthenou is slightly workel out of the roek; it is at tirst of considerable beaulh, and opolis from the uotern led to the angle of the rethern wing of the lro. his wall formed the ex $x$ ut this point. Following to a bistion, lmilt ainut ek General Odyssens tu ch there is necess within assage nond stairs of some ing eastwards roumd the one of which is supposed ban; in these caves are pek. Leaving these caves fter which the wall mo ertical rock. On parsing 0 is a small buttress, we wall for about 210 tret ; fouth-east ; aftriwarls a it 120 thet, mearly paralle lines of wall contain the nid eutablature, to which nle. A mediseval buttron gle of the Ereehthecinm, is second reach of wall. at angle of the Aeronnlis. parently Turkish. Nem which also nupear to lave le. The wall, into which mentioned frugments, ar origin. The eastern fice been entirely hailt in the udations. At the sontlic masonry of the swothern sput twenty-nine contses arty-five feet. Vistwam almost eutirely cased in and is further sipportel well nis those on the north edieval. But the Ineilenie 11 ean be traced all ably - the easing. The sotthall terminates west warlfeet ligh, which is autNike Apteros, Iescrihed uded the unshieltenl side the gate, which, there is a the same position as the sing through the gate, mui eneath the weat face of the ropylea. ' 'The ethect of te and namon jussige ta rense, seventy fect broul, b, must have been exccel. 3 of the nncient Polargie south-east nugle of the ylarh, now oceupided by at $r$ pissing the gitewnys if the area of the Acropelis, , than half haw heves. of the Ctreek governmant. are of the Acropolis the omatelins was reeun whi enon to the right ; loth riling to tho usind custon the apluromehes to their $x$ leading upwards in ti. is slightly worked out of considemble brendtl, and afterwards becomes narrower: On the right hand, as we leave the Propylar, and on the road itselt, are traces of five votive altars, one of which is tedieated to Athena Hygieia. Further on, to the left of the road, is the site of the statue of Athem Promaehms. Northwards of this statue, we come to a staircase clese to the alge of the rock, purtly built, purtly ent out, leading to the grotto of Aglamrus. This stairease passes downwarils through in leep cleft in the rock, nearly parallel in its direction to the outer wall, and opraing out in the face of the eliffa little below its foundation. In the year 1845 it was possible to creep into this passage, and aseend into the Acropolis ; but since that time the putrance has been closed iup. Close to the Pirthenon the original soil was formed of made gromed in thre layers of chips of stone, the lowest being of the rock of the Acroprilis, the next of Pentelie marble, and the uppermost of Peiriac stone. In the cxtensive exeavation male tu the east of the Parthenon there was found a momber of drums of columns, in a move or less perfect state, some mueh shattored, others apparently rough from the quarry, others partly worked and disearded in consegnence of some defect in the material. 'Tho gromed ahout them was strewed with marble chips ; and some sculptors' tools, ame jais eontaining red colour, were fomm with them. In front of the easteru pertioco of the Farthenon we find comsinkerable remains of a level platform, partly of smoothenl ruck, and partls of leiraic paving. North of this plationm is the lighest part of the Accopolis. Westwards of this spot wo arrive at the area between the Parthenon and Ereohtheinm, which slopes from the former to the latter. Near the Parthenon is a small well, or mather month of a cistern, excavated in the rook, which may lave been supplied with water from the rouf of the temple. C'lose to the south, or coryatid purtico of the Freditheimm, is a small levelled ures, on which was probnhly placed "be of the many altars or statues surromuling that tomple.

Mr. Pיnrose has further calles attention in his impirtant work, I.1 Investigation of' the Principles of dthemian Arhitecters, to the remarkable absence of patallolism mony the sevend huilioss. "Vxcept the Propylan and I'arthenm, which were perlaps intemed to bear a iletinite relation to one anothere, no two are puraltel. 'This usymmetria is pronlactive of very grat hemuty; for it not anly ubiates the dry unifurmity of $t(n)$ many parulled lines, but nlan problees exquisite varieties of light and shade. One of the most happy instnnees of this hatere efleet is in the temple of Nike $A_{\text {pteros, in }}$ fromt at the sonthern wins at the Propylare. I'he facale of this temple anel perlestal of Agrijpm, which is oplosite to it, remain in mhate for a cousislerable time after the front of the I'roplati has been lighted up; mul they aradually recoive every variety of light, matil the sun is sufleciently on the slecline to shime nearly equally on all the western tinces ot the rutire gromp." Mr. Penrose obe rese that a similar want ot purallelism in the sepmate parts is found to ob tain in weseral of the dinest medieval strmetures, and may conduce in some degree to the beanty of the mag. nifieent l'asa of Nt. Mare nt Venies.

Poricles mived the mugnifiont momment ealled tha. Propylan it the top $0^{\prime \prime}$ the rond which led from the agora ill the western slope of the Aeropolis, mul was paver with slabs of' Pentelic marhle, and eovered the whote of the western entl of the Aeropolis, which was 168 feet in breadth. The central pist of the building eonsisted of two Toric hexatyle porticoes, covered with a root of white marble, which attracted the particular notice of Pansanias. (nf these porticoes the western faced the city, und the eastern the moterior of the Acropolis: the later, owing to the rise of the gronnil, being higher than the former. They were diviled into two merual halves by a wall, piereed by five rates or doors, by which the Acropolis was antured. The westurn portien was 43 feet in depth, and the eastern about half this rlepth; and they were called Propylas, from their forming a vestibule to the five gates or taors jut montioned. Each portico or vestitule consisted of a front ut six Huted Duric columns, sulporting a jediment, the colnmens being $4 \frac{1}{2}$ t'eet in diameter, and norly 20 fect in height. Of the five gates the one in the contre was the largest, and was equal in breattly to the prace bint wen the two central colnmus in the portico in front. It was by this gate that the carriag's and horvemen entered the Acropolis, and the marks of the ehariot-wherels wom in the rock are still visible. The doors on either side of the central one were mueh smaller twith in heisht and breadth, and designed tire the ahbiesion of foot-passenters only. The reof of the western purtion was silphortel by two rows of three Ionic columus each, between which was the roan to the central gate.

The central part of the bailding whieh we have been deseribing, was 5 s fiet in hreadth, aurl consequently dill not cover the whole width of the rock: the remainder was oceupied by two wings. whirh projucted 26 feet in front of the western portico. Ench of ther" wings was built in the firm of Dorie timples, and commmieated with the adjoining amely of the grat portico. In the northern wing (on the lett hime to a person ascenting the Acropolis) a porel of 12 teet in depth conlucted iuto a chamber of si. teet by 30 , usually ealled the Pi meotheca, from it $\alpha$ walls being eoverel with paintings. The somthern wine (om the right hame to a jerson asemuling the Acropolis) consisted ouly of a porch or "prai gallery of as teet ly 17 , which ilid not comduet into atuy chamber behimi. On the western front of this sinthern wing stond the small temple of Nike Apteros. The sont oecupied ly this temple commands a willo prosper of the sea, anl it was here that Airens is said to hase watehed his sun's retmon from Crete. From this pritt of the poek he threw himself, when ho waw the batack will on the mast of 'Thesens. Late writers, in wrder to areount for the name of the Aigean sea, relate that. Fuens threw himselt fiom the Aeropolis into the sea, which is thren miles off:

The Propilat, which constituted wa suitatile an ruteanee to the womlerthal works on arehitacture and senlpthe within, were, althuyg the idea was lomrowed fiom Egypt, eonsidared one of the master-pirecs of Athenian art, and are montionded along with the larthemon as the sreat arehinectumal shory of the Periclean age. Whon bipaminumdas was urging the Thebans to rival the glase of Athens, he told them that they must ipront the 1'ropera of the tha Athenian Acropolis. mud plant them in tront of the Cmimean citadel.

There are still considerable remane of thr l'ropylan. (wee p. 26.t.) The antem portien, together with the atpacent purts, was thrown duwn about 16.51 by un explosim of ghypowdir which harl bren dhemited in that phae ; lint the inner wall, with its tive gateways, still exints. 'lhe morthern wing is tolembly perfeet, but the smuthern is nlmost entirely destroved: two celums of the latter mesen imhediled it the riljucent walls of the mediarval tower. These walls attest the astonishing precision with which the (areeks piled in their stomes withont mortur. The enormous blocks seem an it superposed a fin whes ngo, and the gigantie chamacter of the construction contrasts strungely with the little temple of Wingless Vietory to the right.

In the time of Pericles, Nike on Vietory was tigured as a young fomale with golden winger, but the more ancient statues of the goddess are satid te have been withont wings. Nike Apteros, me the Wingless Vietory, was alvo identified with Athent and called Nike Athem. Aceording to whers, the figme indicated that Thesens returning from (rete, did not send news of his victory betore he came himself, and again it has been opined that the tempie was raised to Vietory never destined to fly from Athens.
Standing as the wingless deity did at the exit of the Acropolis, her aid was implored by persmens starting on dangerous experditions. Hence the opponents of Lesistrata are deserihed ly Aristophanes, mpon reaching the top of the ascent to the Acropuis, as insoking Nike, before whose temple they were standing.
This temple was still in existence wind Spon and Wheler vixited Athens in $] 076$; but in 1751 nothing remained of it hat some trites of the foundation, and fragments of masonry lying in the meighbeurhoond of its former site. 'There were also fomal in tha neighboreing wall four shats of its sculptured frieze which are now in the British Musetua. It sermed that this temple had perished utterly, hut the stones of which it was built were discovered in the excavations of the year 1835 ; und it was relmite with the original materials by the Archeologiend Sueiets of Athens, atter the phans published by $\mathrm{S}_{\mathrm{g}} \mathrm{m}$ and Wheler, and moder the anspiees of Rass and Schanhert. 'The greater part of its frime was also discovered at the same time. The temple now stambs on its original site, its laçale being compused of four nonolithic fluted colames surmounted with lonic capitals, and at a distance it look very thueh like a new buiding with its white marble columus glittering in the sum. (sve p. 269.)

The frieze, which roms round the whale of the exterior of the building, is one tout six inches high, and is adorned with semptures in hiens relief. It ariginally consisted of furteren pireers of stone, of which twelve, or the fragments of twelw, now remain. Severn? of these are so mutilated that it is difficult to make out the subijpet, hat some of them evilently represent a battle between Grecks and l'ersians on other ontintal nations. It is silpluseid that the two long sides were ocenpied with combats of horsemen, und that the western end represented a battle of fint soldiers.

The original bilding, it has heren further remarked, must have been reacesi atere the liattle if Salamis, sined it conld not have eseapeld the Propians, who destroyed everything mon the Aeropolis; and this style of art shows that it conld not lawe been of the age of loriedes. lhat as it is never mentional anong the huildings of this statesman, it is generally nseribed to Cimom, who prombly buile it at the same time on the sonthern wall of the Acrepenis. Hence its semptures have been supposed to be intembed to conmemsrate the resent vietories of the Greeks over the lervims.
There stiunds at present on the western frome of the morthern wing of the Propylma a lifty pedestat, ubont 12 fect square uad 27 high, which supported some tigure or figures, as is clear from the holes for stanchinns on its smmit. Morcover, we may conclude from the size of the pedestal that the figure or figure on its sumnit were colossal or equestrinn. Pansianias, in deseribing the Propylan, preaks of the statury of eertain horsemen, resprecting which be was in donht whether they were the soms of Xemophon, om made for the saki of ornament; and as in the nest clanse he procerds to speak of the temple of Nike on the right hamd (or sonthern wing) of the lropylea, we may conchule that these statness stood in front of the morthern wing. Now, it has been well ohservel ly Leake, that the donbt of Pausimias, as to the persons for when the equestrim statnes were intended, rould not have heen sineere ; and that, judging from his mamer on other similar ucemsions, we may eonclude that equentrian staturs of CGryllus amd Dioderns, the two subles of Somophon, had beron eomverted, by means of new inseriptions, into those of two Romans, whom I'mamias has not named. This conjecture is contirmed liy minseription on tho base whieh records the name of M. Agrippa in his third consulship; mul it may be that the other Roman was Angustas himself, who was the colleagne of $A_{g}$ rippa in his third comsulship. It appearthat buth statues stool on the same pelestal, inid ace. cordingly they are so represented in the accompanying restonation of the P'ropylam.

Thero is also an neerture in the walled indosure of the Acropolis, in front of the l'ropyhan, upon which is the following inseription, in Cireek and French. "Fraice discoveren the gute of the Acropolis, the walls, the towers, and the stairease. Bemle. 1853." Some arehoso logists think that this marture, only about fine fert wide, conld searedy lave harmomised with the plam it the Propylia, and Mr. 1'roust donbts tho existence of a stairense, and he desigmtes the P'elangic wall of M. Bende as an "opus incertum." was the great glory of the Aeropmis, and the most prefect production of Grecian arehitecture. It derixed its mane from its heing the temple of A thena P'ath mos. or Athem the Virgin, in mane piven to her as the invincible godeless of war. The lathenon was erveted mule the ulminist ration of leriches, amil was completeni in n.e. 438. It was sometimes ealled Heratompurime, the 'Temple of One Humdred Fiet from its hreadth. It has heen smposed to have heen built un the situ" of an marlier temple, destroyed hy the lersians, and Mr. Pentoso fomd, indered, the foundations of mother and much older bilding under the stylolate of the present Jarthenon.

The Pirthenon stood on the highest part of the Acropulis. Its architecture was of the Dorie ouder, and of the purest kind. It was built entirely of l'entidic mabhe, and rested umon a rustic hasement of ordinary limestome. Thu contrast betwern the limestome of the hasement and the apleadid mathe of the shperstrone ture rahamed the beanty of the latter. Upin the hasiment stinod the styhinate of phat form, hailt of l'e...".nice mande, five teet and a-half in height, and composel af three steps. Tho temple was mised so highe athen the entramer of the Acropulis, hoth by its site and by these artificial meras, that the pavement of the peristyle was nearly an a livel with the smmuit of the Propylana. The dinenvions of the I'arthenom, taken from the upper stop of the stylolnte, werr about 228 feet in lengh, 101 feet in breudth, nud 66 fert in height to the top of the pediment. It consisted of $n$ eelli, surremuded the holes fir stimelions may conelude from the fyrure or tigures on its rimn. Vausamian, in de. $f$ the statues of cortain Was in toulit whether n, or made for the sakis xt clatise he procerns to on the right hand (or , we may conelule that of the northern wing. orl hy Leake, that tho persons for whom the al, could not have lemin at his mumber on other nolude that erpuestriam cris, the two sulls of d, by menas of new inonnens, whon l'ansanias 0 is contirned bin ineeords the name of II. $p$; and it may be that as himself; who was the I consulship. It appearsume pertestal, and nis. od in the accompanyum the walled inelesinre of ropylam, upou which is k aid French. "Franer ropulis, the walls, thi" - 1853." Some archero re, only abont fime lent unised with the hlan of loubts the existence uf the Pehasuric wall of II.
 copoutis, and the most rehitecture, It iterised le of Athena P'arthemos, given to luer us the in. Puthenon was erectend celes, thul was completed s ealled Heratompridas, Fuet from its brealdh. lneen huilt on the vitu I ly the Persians, ani foundations of another $\because$ the stylubate of the ne highenst part wis the as of the Dorie mind, onilt יutively of Pentrlis: 6. Lasembent of ordinary on the limestone of thi le of the sipuerstrmeture peters. Upuin the hase thorm, hilt of P'e.. ${ }^{\text {anlies }}$ height, und eomimsed Is misiel su high uhon woth by its site and by wement of the previsive umint of the Propylan. n, tuken l'rom the upher at 228 feet in lenuth, -t in height to whe top of a cella, surromuded by a peristyle, which lun eight columnsut either front, amd seventern at cither side (reckoning the corner columns twice), thens containing forty-six colamms in all. These columns were $\mathbf{6}$ feet $\mathbf{2}$ ineless in dianeter at the lusse, and 34 feet in height. Within the peristyle at either ent, thoro was an interior range of six columus, of $5 \frac{1}{2}$ fret in thaneter, standing before the cud of the cella, and lorming, with the prolonged walls of the cella, an apartment botore tho door. These interior colnmas were on a level with the floor of the cella, and were ancendel by two steps from the peristyle. 'The cella was divided inco two ehambers of unequal size, of whieh the eantern chamber of mos wer about 98 feet, ind the western chmber or opistharlomus about 43 feet. The ceiling of both these chimbers was supported by inuer rows of colamns. In the eastern chamber there wre twenty-three columus, of the Doric arder, in two sturies, wo over the other, tell in each sidh, and three in the wextern retirn: the diameter of theso columns whs about $3 \frac{1}{2}$ teet at the base. In the wostern ehamher theve were four columas, the position of which is markel by tour large stabs, symmetrically placed in the parment. These colmuns were about four fieet in diametur, and wero probably of the Ionic order; as in the l'ropylara.

Such was the simple structure of this magnitieent buiding, which, by its mitell excellencin's of materink, theign, and decorations, was tho mont prifect "wor excented. Its dimensions of $2: 28$ fent by 101 , with a height of 66 feet to tho top of the perlinent, were sufficiently great to give an appeammee of gramen and sublinity; and this impression was not disturbed by any obtrusivo sulalivision of parts, such as is found to diminish the eflect of many larger motern builitings, where the same singheness of design is not nplarent. In the I'arthenon there was notising to divert the spectator's contemphation from the simplicity amel mujesty of umas mul outline, which forms the first amd mont remarkable object of admiration in a Greek temple: for the statnes of the pedinents, the only decuration which was very conspienons hy its magniture and position, having been inelosed within frames which formed un essential part of the designs of either front, bul no more obtrixive ofleet than an ormmented eapital to an mundorned eolumn. 'Jhe whole buikling was mlorned within and without with the most expuisite pieers of senlpture, exreutar under thi direction of lhidias by diderent artists. Tho various arehitectuma members of tho 1 mper part of tho building Were euriched with positive colons, of which taves are still fomm. The statues nul the reliefs, as wall in the membors of architecture, wero enriched with varionts colours; ame the werpons, the reins of the borses, ant other necessories, were of metal, and the eyes of some of the figures werv indatid.

Ot the seulptures of the Parthenon the gramlest and most celcbrated was the colensal stntine of the Virgin Goddess, executed by the humed of I'hidias himselt. It stoed in the anstern or prineipulapartment of the eella; amt as to its exact positions some remurks aro mudo below, It belongenl to that kind of work which the Giroeks called ehryselophnatino; ivory being elmployed for those purts of the stature which were unclothed. While the dress mul other orumments were of solid gold. This statue represented the gothess stanuling, chothed with f a dic reachug to the nukles, with her spenr in her let. samb, nad an inuge of vietory, four enbits high in her right. She was ginded with the ugis, and hud a helmet on her head, and hor shield rested on the gromme by her sill. The height of the statue was twent $y$-six eubits, or many finty feet. The weight of the grith upen the atatioe, which was so affixed as to be removalhe at phenatre, is sad by Thuevolides to have: heen 40 talents, fy Philochums 44 , aum by other writers $30:$ probalily the statement of Philochoros is correet, the whers boing romul numbers. It was timally robbed of its sund ly bathores, who matr himself tyrant oi Athens, when Demotrius was bexieging the city.
'There has been a great controversy amons seholins as to whether any prart of the roon of the eastern ehamber of the Parthenon was lyprethal, or piereed with an opening to the sky. Dost Enerlish writers, following stuart, hat arrived at a conchasion in the athimative, but the disenssion has been recontly reopened in Germany, and the author of the meticho "Athene," in simith's lictionery, says that it seems impossible to arrive at any detinite emolnsion upon the sulgeet. Set the same writer, after rlisenssing the matter, is clecidedly against the hypethmi theory.

Wo know that, as a sencrall sule, the Grecion temples hal no wintows in the walls; and ennsequently the light was admitterl either through some openingr in the root, or thengh the clore alone. The hatter appears to hove been the case in smaller temples, whieh eould obtain sutheient light from the open door; lint larger temples must necessarily have bem in compurativo darkness, if they raceived light from no other guarter. Amb although the temple was the alode of the rleity, and not a place of meetinu, yet it is inpossible to believe that the tireeks heft in eomparative darkness the heantiful paintings and statnes with which they decomend the interior of their temples. We have morenver express evidence that light was admitted ints temples thengh the ront. This appers to have hen done in two wiys, either by windows or openings in the tiles of the roof, or berving a large purt of the latter open to the sky. "The former was the ease in the 'Remplo of Elensis. There cun be little donbt that the now or cintern ehamber of the I'arthenum mast have obtamed its light in one or other of these ways ; but the testimony of Vitronas eamot be guted in tivour of the l'nthenon being hyprethral, as thera mer stome reasons tio believing the passage to be corrypt. If the l'arthenon was really hypethral, we must place the oproning to the sky between the statue und the enstrin llont, since we canuot suppose that such an exipuisite work as the chrysolephantino statue of Atheun was not protected by a covered root.

The most satistimetry explanation of the real state of thans is pubably that wiven by Mr. Ealwind Falkemer in hix mdinimble work, hetedetus; or, the C'auses and Irineiples of the Lixcellence of Greck Newlpture: a work which revives and even excels the hest days of Wiakelatam; and hat more regard heen had to the necessories of soil mal elimate, wonkl hive heen perfeet in its way, Mr. Falisener, in his restomation of the Diarthemon, stypliecs for the tirst time it (ireek temple with a vantend eciling, with an hypuethron or skylight in the "untre-the whime sulle iently lofty to have enntaned the celebrated Minerw of Phidias, her xperr tonehing the eciling, As Mr. Fulkener sensibly remurks, "Animated, as all antiguaries shomble he, by the like zeal tor tuth mul love ot art, a ditlimenee of "pinion in details must get always be expeeted." It is, however, no slight difference of detail to deeide whether the colossal statue of the virgin serididss stood within a covered tomple, or her head and bust rose abue it intu open space; and my theory that would exphain awny the alsurdity of the latter supmenition, without intringing historienl data and ameint canoms of art and architertme, as fir as ther are known, was a real boun made to commun sense and to miversal tiste.
Before quitting the Parthemon, there is ome interesting point commertel with its emmentuction which must mit ln . 1 msed over witho... notier. It has been discowred within the lant fow vears, that in the larthenon, and in some others of the purer specimens of Grecime architecture, there is asystematic deviation from ortinary wetilinear construction. Instead of the straight lines in ordinary arehitecture, wo find varions deficate eurves in the larthenon. It is observerl that "the most important curves in print of extent are thoze which form the horizontal lines of the building where they wecur: weh as the edges of the stipls, mut the lines of the entaliature, which are usually considered to the stright level linw, int in the steps of the Jarnhenom, and some ohher of the best examples of theok horic are convex enrves, lying in vertifal pains: the lines of the entabature vertical plain." The exivence of curver in tircek haildings is mentioned hy litruvins (iii., i), but it was mot matil the yem 18:5, when bund of the rubbish whinh rimmbered the stylohate of the l'arthenom had loen removel hey the oprations carriol on by the (iretk wermmont, that the warature was discovered ly Mr: Genorse fommothore minglish ardintent wen at Athens. Sulsignently the curves wren noticed iy Masers. Iofer and Schabort, German arehiterts, and communicated be them to the Hiener sount of thase farves hats hell given hy Mr. Denrase, wher went to Athens mader the patronige of the Society ul Diletanti fire the purpose of inventigating this sulupent and who has publibhed the remoles of his researches. Mr. Promse mandse that it is not sumprining that the curvere wre mit sonace discovered from :an insucting of the laildins, since the amome of enrwature in sa expuisituly managed that it is not frome; and that hefive the exeavatims, the steps were so mueh ancumberel as to have, provented anyone lowking along their whole length. 'He envature may now be encily remarked by a peren who plawe his stip on entablature from end to cmb, which in areliteetura! lagnang is ealled "Inming."

The Partlienoln wan conserterd intu a Christian charch, tedicated to the Virgin. Mother, pmombly in the sixth eentury. Upon the compurst of Athen by the 'lurks, it was changel into a mownes, amel lawn tu the your fisa the buidding remained nhuost metire with the exemptian of the ront: Or its emalition befine this yate we hate more than me aceome. In 1674 drowings of its senlpturew were mold by Carrey, an artist emphyed fin this purpose ly the Murpuis de Nointel, thes Pronch ambassumor it Constantinople. Theve diawinge aro still extant, mad have heen of great sirvies in the restoration af the wollotures, cmpeinlly in the jediments. In 1676 Athens was visited ly spon and Wheiter, eneh of whom poblished wn account of the Parthenon. In 1687, whan Athens was hesicged ly the Venetians muder Morasini, a shell, falling into the Iarthenom, influmal the gurpowder; whio haa heen phacell by the Turks in the eastern chamber, and redncedi the eentre of the Parthenon to a hrap of ruins. The walls of the eastern chamber were thrown down, together with all the interior columas, and the aljoining columus of the puristyle. Of tha northern side of the proristyle eight rolumis were whilly or furtinlly thenwn down; and of the nouthern, six colnmes; while of the promes only one column was leit stauding. The two tronts escaped, together with a purtion of the wentern chamber. Mornsini, after the capture of the cite, attempted to carry oll sume of the stathes in the western pediment ; lot, owing to the unkilliunese of the Venatians, they were thrown down as they were being lowred, mil wore dashed in pieces. It the beginning of the present century, many of the tine-t scibpture of the larthenom were removed to Eneland ly Lord blgin. In 1827 the Parthinon received freh inimury, from the bombardment of the eity in that year; but ceren in its present state of desolation, the maignitieence of its ruins still strikes the opectatur with astonishment nud admiation.

VI.

The Einchtimitiolagenin of Enecuthecs-Forsmathos
 'TEMPLEG of Antemis and of frome and AtGeytio-fige
 Hhle or the Nimphs-Mosiment of Thbssintrs-Tue Mrese Theathe-Caye or troho and Pan-Tine sasc. rtany of hidaches.
Tue Brechtherim was the most revered of all the sanctuaries of Athetr, null was closely eomectol with the earlisest legends of Attiat. Erechthens or Bixichthonims, fir the same person is sigmtion muler the two mames, weropies "most important poition in the Athenimn veligion. His story is related varinaly; lut it is only neensary to refle to those portions of it Which serve t, iilustrite the following nermint of the miditing which bents his mame: fomer reporsemts Brechthens ay lam of the Earth, and hrought mig the gethems. Athem, who adepts him ms her ward, and instals him in her temphe at Atheres, where ther Athonitumotier to himanual sartitives. Iater writers all Erechthens or Erichanhins tho son of Hephasths and the Barth, but they also relate that he was hought up ly A hena, who masle him her compunion in lare trmple. Aecording to me form or the lagend he was placed by A thoma in in chest, which was cotrusted to the clarge of Aghums, Pathrosus, and Herse, thi daughters of Cerreps, with striet orders nut wopen it; lout that Aghamens and Herse, mable to control their aniosity, disoleyed thu commad; and umon recing the ehided in the finm ol' $n$ serpent ent sined with a selpent, they were sizal with madness, and thew themshlus down from the steppest art of the Acropulis. Another met of traditions represented Erechthens as the god Poxailon. In the brechtheinm he was worshipged mader the mano of Joseindon Sirechthens; mad (oun of the fimily of the Butade, which traced their Weseent from him, was his hemelitary priest. Hence we may inter, with Mr: Grote (Ihistor'ty ${ }^{\prime}$ Grecee, vol L , 1. 246 ), thint "the first and oldent conerption in' Athens and the sacred Acropulis places it under the specinl proteretiom, mad represents it as the setthement and fiavourite abote of Athem, jointly with J'meidon;
, when Athens was beMorosini, it shell, falling the gumpowder, whic in the eastern chamben, parthenon to a heap of on chamber were thrown aterior columns, and the atyle. Of the northern mins were wholly or ןure southern, six columus; olum was left stauding. ure with : pertion of the ifter the capture of the me of the statues in the ; to the muskilfulness of wh down as they were hed in pieces. it the ury, many of the binet cre removent to Fughan arthenom revivel fresh of the e city in that sear: f desolation, the magnithe - fuet:itur with asto.

Ereciotuect-Forwatug of Atuess Proniche:tome avo Argestro-Thy ent or Timasyids-The most reverell of all the s closely comneetell with Esuchelheus or Erichsigntiond under the two ortant pavition in tha $y$ is related varimsy: ir to those portions of it ollowing acement of the m: Tlumer represints rth, :mil brought up liy ts him as her ward. and it Athens, where the sarritices, lator writers is the som of lhepherstus late that he was brouglit her companion in lur mo the logent he was which was rutrustel to drosus, and Ilerse, the et orlers not to open it; mable to control their nin id : and unn recius ant ent, fined with a ser? wherss, and therew themat part of the Aeropulis. oresented Erechtheus as rechtlecium he wats worseidon Eirechthens; mul tale, which tracei thoir ruditary prient. Hence (Ilistory of Girece, vol i. d dhent conerption if dis plaeen it unler the nts it as the setthoment u, jointly with I'oseidon;

the latter leing the inferior, though the chosen companion of the former, ind theretore exchanging his divine appellation for the cognomen of Erechtheus."
The foundation of the Erechitheium is thus connected with the origin of the Athenian religion. We have seen that, according to Homer, a temple of Athena existel on the Acropolis befere the lirth of Erechthens; but Erechtheus was usually regarded as the fumder of the temple, since he was the chief menus of establishing the religion of Athena in Attica. This temple was also the place of his iuterment, and was yumel after him. It contained several objects of the greatest inter st to every Athenian Here was the mont aracient statue of Athema Polias that is, Athena, the ghardian of the city. This sta ne whs made of olive wood, and was said to have fallen down from heaven. Here wats the sacred olive tree, which Athena called forth from the earth in her contest with P'oseidon for the $ן$ nessession of Attica; here also was the well of salt water which Poseidon producel by the stroke of his trident, the impression of which was seen upon the rock; and here, lastly, was the tomb of Cecrops as well as thut of Erechtheus. The building also contained a rparate sanctuary of Athena Polins, in which the statue of the goddess was placed, und a separate sainctuary of Pandrusus, the only one of the sisters who re. mained faithful to her trust. The more nisual name of the entire structure was the Erechtheinu, which consisted of the two temples of A thema Polias nud Pandroms. But the whole building was also frequently aalled the temple of Athena Polias, in comsispuenco of the importance attached to this part of the edifice. In the nucient inseription mentioned below, it is simply called the temple which contained the ancient statue.
The original Erechtheium was burnt lig the lersians; luat the new temple was built unn iha ancient site. This could not have been otherwise, since it was impossible to remove cither the silt well or the olive tree, the latter of which sacred objects had been minituculonsly spared. Though it had been burat atong with the temple, it was found on the second day to have put forth: a new spront of a culsit in length, or, aceording to the subsequent improvenent of the story, of two culids in length. The new Erechtheimu was a singularly beautitul building, ant one of the great trinuphs of Atheni an arehiteeture. It was of the Ionic oriler, and in its general "proarance formed a striking contrast to the l'arthenon of the Doric order by itw side.
The Erechtheinm wits situated to the morth of the Parthemon, mul close to the northern wall of the Acropulis. The existing ruins leave no dombt as to the exact form and appearance of the extrion of the building; but the arrangement of the interine is a matter of great uncertainty. The interior of the temple was couverted int" a Byzantine dhureh, which is now destroyed; and the inner part of the building presonts nothing but a heap of ruine, belouging paetly to the mucient temple, and purtly to the Byzantine chnrel. The difficulty of understanding the intangement of the iuteriur is also increased by the ulscurity of the deseription of lansmins. Hence it is not surprixing that almost every writer upon the subjeet han dillered tiom his predecersor in his distribution of some parts of the building; though there are two or three important points in which most mundern scholats are new agreed.

Tl : form of the Erechtheium differs from every other known example of a Grecian temple. Usually a Crecian temple was an oblong figure, with two portieoes, one at its eastern and the other at its western end. Tho Erechtheiun, on the contrary, though oblong in slape and having a portico at the enstern front, had no portico at its western end; but from either side of the latter a portico projected to the north aud somth, thus forming a kind of trausept. Conserguently the temple had three porticoes, and which may be distinguished as the eastern, the northern, and the sontheru prostasis, or portico. The irregularity of the building is to be accounted for partly lyy the differeuce of the level of the ground, the eastern portico atanding umon ground about eight feet higher than the northern; but still more by the necessity of presurving the liffercut sanctuaries and religious oljects belonging to the ancient temple. The skill aut ingenuity of the Athenian areliteets triumphed over these difliculties, and even converted theus into beanties.
The building has licen frequently examines and deseriberl by arclitects, by none more minntely than ly M. Tutaz in the Revue Archoologique for 1851, mad the different objects in the buiding and comnected with it. The temple of A thena loblias, with the altar of Zeus Hypatens in front of the portien-the altars of Poslidon Erechtheus in the portico itself-the Pallitthinm or statue of the godidess, memr the went a wallthe golden lamp with wick of Carpasian thax (asblestus) -the statue of A thena l'oliak of olive woul-the wive tree and the salt well in the l'midrestimu-the Eirechthonian serpent-ilre Temenos or sncrel inclosure, with its numerous statnes and its mysterines Arrephorimaidens who conveycl their annual hardens to the subterraneous natural cavern mear the tomple it A phrodite in the gardens-have all been subjects of emrions and interesting discussion, and in some instances, as that of the statue of Athena Polias, ewn remacitated by the ingenity of Muller and Selart.

The Propylat, the Parthenon and the Erectheium were the thite chicf buildings in the Acropulis; but its smmait was covered with nother temples, atitars, statnes, :uml works of aut, the number of which was so grean as almost to excite our astmishment that space cond la finund for them all. We shath only notice here the most important.

The stathe of A thenis Promachus, one of the most celebrateel works of Phidias, was a eolossal bronze tignre, and representend the grodess amol and in! the very attitude of butte. ILence it was distinguished from the statues of A thema in the lirethenon and the Ene chtheimm, by the epithet of lromachus. This, Athema was also calleel "the Bronze, the Great A thema." It stion in the open air nenly opiosito the Propylen, ant was one of the first objects seen atter passing through the gates of the latter. It was of gigmitie size. It towered even ahove the roof of the Parthom; and the point of its spuar and the crest of its helmet were visithle off the promontory of Sunium to ships approaching Athens. With its pedestal it mast have stood about seventy feet ligh. It was still standing in A.D. 305, and is naid to have frightened away Alaric when he came to sack the Acropolis. The exnet wite of this stae is now well ascertained, simee the foundations of its pedestal have been discovered.

A brazen Quadriga, dedieated from the spoils of Chalcis, stined on the left hand of a persom an he rintered the Acreprelis through the Propyhen.

The Gigantomachia, a compasition in sculpture, stood upon the sonthern or Cimonian wall, and just above the Dionysiac theatre; for Plutareh relates that a violent wind precipitated into the Dionysiac thentre a Dionysus, which was one of the figures of the Gigantomuchia. The Gigantomachia was one of four compositions, weh three feet in height, dedicated by Attalus, the other three representing the Battle of the A theuians and Auazons, the Battle of Marathon, and the Destruction of the Gauls by Attalus, If the Gigantomachia stooll towarls the eastern end of the southern wall, we meny conchade that the three other compositions were ranged in a similar manner upon the wall towarls the west, and probably extended as far as opposite the Puthenon. Mr. Penrose relates that sontheast of the liarthenon, there has been discovered upon the edge of the Cimonian wall a platforn of l'itaic stome, contaning two plain marble slabs, which are perhaps comnected with these seulptures.

The Temple of Artemis Bramronia, stauding between the l'ropyla and the larthenon, of which the foundations have beea recently discoveret. Near it, as we leurn from Pansmias, was a brazen statue of the Trojan horse, from which Menesthens, Teucer and the sons of Thesens, were represeated looking out. From other anthoritics we learn that spears projected from this horse, and that it was of colossal size. The hasis of this statue hats also been discovered with an inscription, from which we learn that it was dedicated by Charedemus, of Coele (a quarter in the city), and that it was nade hy Strongylion.
The Temple of Rome and Augustus, not mentioned by lausanias, stood aboat minety feet before the costem front of the larthenou. Leake observes that, from a portion of its arehitrave still in existence, we muy infer that it was circelar, twenty-three feet in dianeter, of the Ionic or Corinthian order, and about fifty feet in height, exclusive of is basement. It was deeticated to Rove and Augustus, becuuso this emperor formate the provinees to raise any temple to him, except in conjunction with lime
The Areopagus, or Hill of Ares, was the rocky height exactly opposite the western end of the Acropolis, from which it was separated only by some hollow ground. Of its site there can be no doubt, both from the description of Pausanias, and from the aecount of Herodotus, who relates that it was n height over against the Acropolis, from which the Persiuas assailed the western extremity of the Acropolis. According to tradition it was called the Hill of Ares, because Ares was brought to trial here before the asseubled gods by Poseidon, ou account of his nuurdering Halirrhothius, the son of the latter. The spot is memorable as the place of meeting of the Comucil of Areopagns, frequently called the Upper Council, to distinguish it from the Council of Five Hundred, which held its sittings in the valley below the hill. The Council of Areopagus met on the south-eastern summit of the rock. There are still sixteen stone steps cut in the rock, leadiag up to the hill from the valley of the Agora; and immediately ubove the steps is a bench of stones excavated in the rock, forming three sides of a quadrangle, and fuciug the south. Here the Areopugites sat as judges in the open air. On the eastern and western sides is a raised block. Wordsworth supposes these hlocks to be the two rude stones which Puusanias saw here, and which are described by Euripides as assigned, the one to the accuser, the other to the eriminal, in the causes which were tried in this court. The Areopagus possesses peeculiar interest to the Christian as the spot from which the Apostle Paul preached to the men of Athens. At the foat of the height on the north-eastern side there are ruins of a small church, dedicated to St. Dionysius the Areopagite, and commemorating his couversion here by St. Paul.

At the opposite or south-eastern angle of the hill, forty five or fifty yards distaut from the steps, there is a wide chasm in the rocks, leading to a glonny recens, withiu which there is a fountain of very durk water. This was the sanctuary of the Eumenides, commonly called by the Athenians the Semna or Veuerable Godiesses. The cavern itself formed the temple, with probably an artificial construction in front. Its position is frequently referred to by the tragic poets, who also speak of tho chasun of the earth. It was probably in consequence of the subterrancan natare of the sanctuary of these goddesses that torches were employed in their ceremonies. Eschylas described the procession which escorted the Eumenites to this their temple, as descendiag the rocky stepw above deseribed from the platform of the Areopagus, then winding round the eastern angle of that hill, and comducting then with the sound of music and the glare of torches along this rocky ravine to this dark inclosure. Within the sacred inclosure wist the monument of (Edipus.

The Pyox, or place of assembly of the Athenim people, formed part of the surface of a low rocky hill, at the distance of a quarter a mile from the centre of the Areopagus hill. The Pynx may be best described as an area formed by the segment of a circle, the radius of which varies from ahout sixty to eighty yards. It is on a sloping grour I, which shelves down very gently toward the hollow of the aneient agora, which was on its foot at the north-east. The chord of this semicircle is the highest part of this slope; the middle of its arc is the lowest : and this last point of the curve is cased by a terras wall of huge polygonal blocks, and of about fifteen feet in depth at the centre: this terms wall prevents the soil of the slope from lapsing down into the valley of the agore beneath it, The chord of this semicirele is formed by a line of rock. vertically hewn, so as to present to the spectator, standing in the area, the face of a flat wall. In the middle point of this wall of rock, and projecting from, and applied to it, is a solid rectangular block, hewn from the same reck. This is tho celebrated bena, or pulpit, often called "the Stoue," from whence the orators addressed the multitude in the semaicircular area before them. The bema looks towards tho north-enst, that is, towards the agora. It is eleven feet broud, rising from a graduated bacis: the summit is broken, but the present height is about twenty.feet. It was accessible on the right and left of the orator ly a tights of steps. As the destinies of Athens were swayed by the orators from this pulpit, the team "the stone" is familiarly used as a figure of the governinent of the state; and the "master of the stone" indicates the ruling statesman of the day. The position of the bema commanded a view of the Propylma and the other magnificent edifices of the Acropolis, while bencath it was the city itaelf atudded with monuments of Athouian glory. The Athenian orators frequently roused the national feelings of their andience ly pointing to "that Propylea there," and to the other splendid buildiugs, which they had in view from the Payx.
the causes which were nagus possesses preculiar e spot from which the en of Athens. At the -eastern side there are ated to $\mathrm{St}_{\mathrm{t}}$. Diongrim orating his conversion tern angle of the hill, from the steps, there ing to a glomeny recess, lin of very dark water, Eumenides, commonly Semina or Veuerable ormed the temple, with ion in front. Its posithe tragie puets, whe irth. It was probably ean nature of the saucrelees were employed in lescribed the procession to this their temple, as ve described from the en windin! round the conlucting them with ro of torehes along this are. Within the sacred - Edipus.
ubly of the Athenian ince of a low rocky hill, mile from the centre of : may be best described rment of a circle, the nhout sixty to eighty al, which shelves down of the ancient agora, rth-east. The chord of part of this slope; the and this last point of rall of huge polygonal in depth at the centre: sil of the slope from 'the agors beneath it, ormed by a line of rock. sent to the spectatior, of a flat wall. In the $k$, and projecting from, ectangular block, hewn re celebrated bema, or ie," from whence the in the semieircular area towards tho nortli-tast, [t is eleven feet hroad, the summit is broken, t twenty. feet. It was of the orator by a tlight 1 thens wero swaycd by tomm "the stone" is he governinent of the stone" indicates the The position of the Propylnas and the other polis, while beneath it nonuments of A thenian frequently roused tho ce by pointing to "that aer spleudid buildings, ${ }_{10}$ Payx.

The area of tho l'nyx contained nbout 12,000 square rards, and could thercfore ensily aecommodate the whole of the $\boldsymbol{A}$ thenim citizons. The remark of an ancient grammarian, that it was constructel with the: simphicity of aucient times, is borne out by the existing remains. Wo know moreover that it was not provided with seats, with the exception of a fi'w worden inenches in the tirst now. Hence the assembled citizens either stod or sat on the baro roek; and accondingly the Sansuge-seller, when he seeks to umbermine the popularity of Cleon, offers a cushion to the demas. It was uot provided, like the theaters, with myy spocies of awnins to proteet the assembly liom the rays of the sun ; and this was dunbless vie season why the assembly wis held at day-hreak.
It has been remarkel that a traviller who mounts the bemat of tho fluys misy sitfely saty, what porhaps tamot le sibd with enpal cortanty of any other spot, and of any othor homly of groat men in :mathuity : liere have stom Wemosthemes, lirvicles, Themistorles, Aristides, and solon.
The Itill of the Nymphs, which lay a little to the north-west of the I'ny: ned to be identified with the cederated Sycubetus, but its proper mame has been restored to it, from an insoription fonnd on its summit.
The Anseian was the hill to the sumbewnst of the Aeropolis, firm which it is soparated by an intervening valley. It is only a litelw lowor than the Acrupolis itsedi. It is described ly l'amamas as a hill within the city walls, "phosite the Acropelis, where the pret Dusseus was huried, and where a mommment was not mention. 'There are still remains of this monument, from the inseriptinus upon which we le:rra that it was the momment of lhilopappens, the grandsom of Antiuchas, who hatvine been dopened hy Vespatian, catue to Fomme with his two soms, Eiphanes and Coblinieus. Epiphanes was the fither of Philepappus, who had become an Attie citizen of the demus lhest, and he is evidently the Syrian to whom J'ansunias alludes. The part of the monument mon remaning eomsists of be central amd eastern uichere, with remains of the two pilasters on thate side of the contre. The statues int two of the niches still remain, but withont leends, mad otherwise imperfect ; the ifyluts of the trimuph, in the lower compurtment, are not much letter pressured, This mombuent aprears, from stan and Wheler, to have been nearly in the same state in 16.6 as it is at present; and it is to C'iriceor d'Aneunt, who visited Atheis two conturies anlier, that wo aro indebted tor a knowledge of the cleticient parts of the monnoent. Of the tortress, whieh Demetrius Polineetes erected on the Museinm in nes. 209, all trace has disappenred.

The stone theate of Dionysus lay bencath the southern wall of the Acropolis, near its eastern extremity: The midalle of it was excavated out of the rock, and its extremities wero supported by solid piers of hasomy. Tho rows ot seats were in the form of eurves, rising one above another; the dianoter inereased with the ascent. T'wo ruws of seates at the top of the theatre are now visible; but the rest are concended by the atemanation of seil. Tho aecurate dimensions of the theatre eamot now be aseertaned; thero ean be no question that it must have been subliciently barge to have necommondated the whole body of Ithenim citizens, as well us the strangers who flueked to the Dionysiae festival. It las been supposed from a passige of l'lato, that the thentre was expible of containing more than 30,000 spectators, since Socrates, speaking of A gatlion's drimatic vietory in the theatre, says that " his glory was manifested in the presence of more than three myrials of Greeks." The magnifieence of the theatro is attested by Dicearchus, who describes it as "the most beautifil theatre in the world, worthy of mention, great and wonderlial." The spectators sat in the open air, but jrobably protected from the ruys of the sun by an uwning, and from their clevated seats they lad a distine view of the seat and of the peaked hills of Salamis in the horizom. Abose then rose the Parthenon, and the other buildings of the Acropolis, so that they sat under the shatlow of the aneestral gods of their eountry. This theatre was commenced b.c. 340 , but was not completely tinished till b.c. 330 , eluring the idministratim ut Lyemrgus. A theatre might, however, like a Gothie chareh, be used for centuries witlout being quite tinished; ant there can be no doubt that it was in this theatre that all the great productions of the tirecian drama were performod.

There is a grotto above the uprer seats of the theatro and the Cimonian watl of the Acropolis, which was convorted into a small temple hy Thasyllus, a victorinus chmanhe, to commemomate the vietory of lis chorts, bic. $3 \% 0$, as we learn from ats inseriptiun upon it. Ilence it is usually called the Chomgie Honument of Thrasyllas. Within the eavern were statues of A pollo anil Artemis destroying the elifdren of Niohe : and unne the entalature of the temple was a colussit tigure of Dionysus. This tigure is now in the Liritish Museum; but it has lost its head aud arms. Ihis eavirn was subsequenty couverted into the chureh of Panaghia Spiliotissi, or the Joly Virgin of the Grotto; and was used as steh when Dodwell visited Athens. It is now, however, a simple cave; and the temple and the clarch are both in rains.

The Uleium or Musit theatro of Rugilla (Sce p. 280) ala) lay beneath the southern wall of the Aeropolis, but at its wentern extremity. It was built at the time ot the Antonines by Merudes. Ittieus, who culled it the Bheimm ot luegillit in homotir of his deceased wite. Pitusimian remirks that it surpassed all other Odeia in Greece, as well in dimensions its in other respects; and its root of eedar wood was particularly admired. The length of its diameter within the walla was about two homedred and forty feet, and it is calculated to lave furnished accommodation for about six thonsand persons. There ate still eonsiderable remains of the building ; but, in spite of their extent, good preservation, and the massive material of which they are composed, they have a poor appatame, owing to the defects of the Roman style of arelitecture, esprecially of the rows of small and appurently useless arches with which the more salid prortions of the masomry are pertorated, and the comsequent number of insignitionat parts into which it is thas "mblivided.

The Cave of $\lambda_{\text {jollo }}$ and Pinn, more usually called the Cawo of l'an, lay at the base of the north-west angle of the Aerupolis. It is deseribed by Hevodetus ass situated below the depopolis, and by Pinsimias as a little holow tho l'rophliad, with a spring of Witer near it. The womhip of Apollo in this cave wis probably of great untipuity. Here he is said to have visited Crensa, the mother of lon; and hence the rave is frequently mentioned in the Ioic of Euripides. The worship of l'an in this cave was not introdued till after the battle of Marathon, in consequence of the services which de rendered to the Athenians on that uecmsion. Hiw statue was dedicated by Miltiades, and Simmiles wrote the inseription for it. A statue of Pam. now in the porblie Jibrary at Cambridge, was discowed in a gamen a litte lelow the cave, mal has heen supposel to be the itentical tigure deliented by Miltiades. The cave masumes about eighteen feet in length, thirty feet in height. and fifteen feet in depth. There are two excarated ledger ent in the ruck, on which we may suppose statnes of the two deities to have stond, and alsir namerms niches and holes for tho reeption of votive cfirmings.

The fomentan nem the case was ealled Cleprsydra, more anciently Emperio. It derived the name of Cleprydar tiom its bring suppoat to have ham a sul)terraneons communication with the harbour of Platerum. "The only are", to this, fountain is from the inclosel phat form of the Acrepolis abose it. The appromel to it is at the north of the northern wing of the Prymica. Here we hegin to dewend a tlight of firtyseven teps ent in the rock, hut partially casen with slabs of uarble. The deseent is arched wer with brick, and opens out into a suall subtertanenn chappel, with niehes wht in its sides. In the chanel is a well, surmunted with a !eristmantum of marthe; below which is the water, now at a distance of about thirty feet."

Thu sunctuary of digherns, on of the three diughters of Cecrops, wats also a eavern sithated in the northern the of the Acropulis, It is evidut, from suveral pasagges in the Li, of Ehripides, that the Aglaminm was in some part of the precipices called the Lome Rocks, whidh ran motwand of the grote of Pam. It is said to have leen the spot from which Aghams amb her si-ter 1 here ther themsidves from the rows of the Acropulis, yon upening the chast which contamed Brichthonims; aul it was also near this sillethary that the Persian gatinel aceess to the Anmplis. Wra leato from lamanias that the eave was situited at the stecpers pant of the hill, which is. also anecribed by Horolatus as precipitonsat this puint. At the ilitance of :anout sixty yarde to the cast of the cave of lan, and at the bose of a prowipe, is a remarkable ratern; and firty garls finther in the same direction. there is auther eave moll smaller, immediately under the wall af the citalel, and unly a few yarls distant from the northern portice of the Ereelstheium. In a he later there are thirteren niches, which prove it to have licen a consecrated spot: and there cam he no loubt that the larger was allon a samotury, though miches are mat squally alparent, in consequence of the surfice of the rock not being so well preserved as in the smallir cavern. One of thuse two carem was undoubtedly the Aghuminm. Leake ronjectured, from the accoumt of a atraturem of Peisistratus, that there was a commanication from the Agharimen to the plat finm of the eitadel. Ifter Jeisistratus had seized the citalel, his mext inject was to disarm the Atlenians. With this view he'sent for the A thenimes in the Amecinm, which was to the west of the Aglaminm. Whige he was adressing them they hail down their arms, which were seizol hy the partisans of Peisistratus and conreyel into the Aelaurim, apparently with the view of "ibue carind into the citadel itself: Now this comjueture has beren contimed by the disenvery of an aneient light of stairs near the Erechtheinm, leading into the cavom, and from thence passing lownwards thrugh a lecpe cleft in tho roek, nearly pramallel in its direction to the outer wall, and opening out in the face of the cliff a little below the foundation. It would therefore apper that this cave, the smaller of the two above mentioned, was the Aglaurium, the neciss to Which from the Acropolis was clove to the nonthern porticu of tho Brechtheium, which led into the sanctuary of Paulrosus, the only one of the thre haughter of Cecerons who remained faithful to her trust. Luake eonjectures that the Aglaminm, which is never lesscribed as in tomple, but only as a sametuary or sacred inclosure, was used in a more extemed signification to comprehend linth eaves, one being more expially sacred to Aglaurns and the wher to her sister il cese Accorling to one tralition Aghaurns precipitited herself fiom the Acropolis, as a sacrifier, to sive her comery: and it was prohable on this account that the Athenim ephebi, on reeniving their tirst suit of armour, were acenstomed to take min math in the Aghariman. that they would defene their comery to the last.

VII.

The Templef of Thesers - The Texpliz op Zees Oery-ples-The Temple of the Winds-The Lastehs of Dreag-Tue Agona, on Maket-place-1,fpe is Atiens -The Cansival.

Tire trmple of Thesena in the best preserved of all the mommane of of $A$ thens. It is sitnated on a height in the north-west of the city, nurth of the A reopragus, and near the Gymasiom of I'tolemy. It was at the same time a temple amla tomb, having been built toreceive the hamo of Thesens, which Cimon hul hrought from scyrus to Athens in me. tea. The temple appears to lave been commencol in the satne yan, and allowing fire years for its completion, was probahly tinished abum: 165. It is. therefiere, about thiery years ohlere than the Parthome. It powereme the privilege of an asym, in which romaway saves in particular were acci-tomed to take reflige. The tempha of "llusens was hilt of Pentrlie untrhle, and stands "ןwn an artiticial fimmaltion formed of lage quadnamban blacks of limestane. Its arelitectury is of the burim order.

Although the temphe itself is mealy perfect, the seulptures have sustained great injury. The figures in the two pediments have ontirely disilp aned ; and the metopes mat the friege have been gromty mutilated. Enough, however, remains to Now that these smil. tures belong to the highest style of (ireciam art. The relief is bold ani salient, mprom hing to the prype tions of the cutire statue, the figures in some instantes arpearing to be ouly slightly attached to the table of the marhe. The seupptures, both of the metopes ani of the friages, were pintw, and still preserve remainof the colnurs. Lalike obsurves that "vestiges of hazen and gollen eoloured arms, of a blue sky, and of have green, and red drapery, are still very ilparent. I painted foliage and marauler is seen on the interion: cornice of the peristyle, nuld painted stars in the lam: naria." In the British Musem there are cavts of the greater portion of the friceres, and of three of the metopes from the northern sile, luing the first, secombl. and fouth, comurneing from the north-tast mggle. They were mande at Athens, by direction of the Bath at Elgin, from the scuptures which thene existel mon the temple, where they still remain. The suljeets of the senlptures are the exploits of Thesens and of Hercules; fir the Theseium was not only the tomb of Thesem, but also a momment in honour of his friend and congmion, Hereules.
the smaller of the two daurimm, the necess to close to the nowthey hich led into the sumeo of the three elanghter ul to her trust. Leake Im, which is never dea sumetuary or siterel xtemded signifieation t" being more "swally (ev to her sister is we Aglauras precipitated a sacrifice, to sawe her "1 this necoment that tha+ heir tiest suit of armonr, math in the $A$ glandun. nuntry to the last.

Templer of Zecs Olfy-inds-The: Lantens op iv-Ontestah. C'ushatite DCIETY-Apreikisch: and r-place--life is A Inevs best preservel of all the. uated on a height in the the Ateopragus, aus hear $t$ was at the same time a Dinilt toreceive tha hane Arought from scyrns to emphe appeats so have ean, and allowing tive podally tinishen abouts irty yars ohber then the rivilege of: an astlun, in icular were nech-tumed t Thesens was lmilto of on :un artiticial fimulalat blocks of lime tume. omiter.
is hearly prefect, the injuy. The figures in "lisilipented; and the been srently mutilited. how that these sull)" e of Grecian art. The ron hing to the propargures in some instimes tieched to the talble of the of the metopes and still preserve remainThat "vestiges of" hazen lilue oky, and af hlue. till very apprent. i is seen on the interime inted stars in the hact1 there are casts of the nul of three of the loing the first, seenoul, the north-east anyte. lievetion of the Bant is It then existed mon the
The sulbjects of the respus and of IIcrendes; the tomb of Thesens, of his triend and com-

The Theseinm was for many centuries a Christimn chureh, deliated to St. George. When it was comverted into a Christinn church, the two interior columas of the pronans were removed to make room for the altar and its semicircular indowne, enstonary in Greek churehes. A large door was at the samo time piereed in the whll, which separates the cella from tho opisthodomus; when Athens was taken by the Turks, who were in the habit of rilling into the churehes on horseback, this dior was closed, and a small one was maite in the sonthern wall. The roof of the cellit is enticely molern, and the greater part of the ancient beams and bacumaria of the peristyle are wanting. In other resprets the temple is complete. Tho building is how converted into the National Mnsenm of Athens, ami has been restored as wearly as possible to its original condition. The vaulted roof of the cella has been re$f^{\text {liceed }}$ by one int aceordanee with the original hesign of the building.
The ilentitication of the chureh of St. George with the temple of Thesens has atways beon considered one of the most certain points in Athenim topography; but it has been disputed hy hoss, in a panplilet written in modern Greek, in which it is maintitined that the building nsually ealled the Theseimm is in reality the temple of Ares, mentioned by Pansanias.
The site of the Temple of Zeuns Olympins, or of the Olympic Jupiter, is indisaten by sixteengigintic Corinthian columns of white marble, to the south-rist of the Acropolis, and near the right $\mathrm{l}_{\text {sink }}$ of the Ilissus This tomple not only execeded in magnitude all wther temples in A thens, hut wals the greatest ewir delicated to the supreme deity of the Greeks, mul me of the finn most renurnal examples of architecture in marble, the cther thre being the tomples of Ephesus, Branchide, and Elensis. It was commenced hy Peisistatatis, and finished by Madrian, after mayy suspensions and interruptions, the work oceuplint it perinh of nearly $\mathbf{T 0 0}$ years. Hence it ix called by llhilostratus "a great strughle with time."
This magniticent temple boasted once of $1: 0$ columns. Of these sixtern are now standing, with thuit arehitraves, thirteen at the south-enstern angle, and the remaining three, which itre of the interior row of the southern side, mot fir trom the sunth-western angle. These are the largest columns of marble now standing in Europe, being six and a lalf fert in liancter, anil almes sisty feet high. A recht thaveller remarks, that the desolntion of the spot on which they stand aldes much to the effect of their t.ill migestic finms, and that searedy any ruin is more calculated to excite stronger emotions of combined admiration and awe. It is difficult to conceive where the emormons masses have disappeared of which this temphe was built. Its destruction probably commenced a tan ently perion, and suppliel from time to time building miterials to the inhabitints of Athens during the Midule Ages.

The building, vommonly called tho 'Temple of the Winds, from the figures of the Wimls upon its fivers, but more properly, the Horologium of Androniens Cyrrhestes, is situated north of the Aerojolis, mud is still extant. Its date is uncertain, but the style of tho senppture and arehitecture is thought to belong to the prioil alter Alexander the Great. It served both in tho weathercock and pulhic clock of Athens. It is an oetagonal tower, with itseight sides facing respectively the direction of the eight winds into which the Atheninu compass was divided. The directions of the several -ides were indicated by the figures and names of the eight wins, which were seuptured on the frizezo of the entablature. On the summit of the building there stond wiginally it bronze tigne of it Tritom, holding a wand in his zight hand, and turning an ap pivot, so as to serve for a weatherooek. This monument is ealled a horologiun by Varo. It firmed a measure of tine in two war. On cach of its eight sides, bencath the tigure of the Winds, lines are still visible, which, with the gnomons that stool out above them, formed a series of wathals. In the centre of the interion of the buidiny there was a elelsydha, or waterechek, the remains of which are still visible. On the south side of the builing there was a cistern, which was supplied with water thom the oping called Clepsydra, near the cave of Pan. Lake states that a portion of the aqueduct existen not lomg since, and formal part of $a$ mendern conduit for the conveyance of watere to a neighbouring mosque, for the srriee of the Turks in their ablations.
The elegant monment, calle ! the Lantern of Demonthenes, but mowe pryerly the choragie monument in n.c. 33.i-4, as we ham tion an inscription on the architrave, which meords that ${ }^{-1}$ Lysicrates, sin of Lysitheides of Cicyma, lel the clams, when the bors of the trile of Acamantis conquered, when Theon phiyed the Hute, when Lysialen write the piece, and when Evenetus wasardhon." The monment of lasierates in of the Corinthian order. It is asmall circhar buildigona spmare bascment of white marble and coverel hy a cupola, supported hy six Corinthian colmms. Its whole height was 31 fiet, of which the -quare hasis was 14 feet, the body of the building to the smmmit of the columas 12 fiect, and the entablature, wogether with thar empola and apex, 8 fect. There wan no acess to the interior, which was muly 6 fert it dianeter. Tho frieze, of which there we casts in the British Musemm, represents the destruction of the Tyrhenim pitites by Dinuysus and his attendants.

The fombtan of Callirrine was the only somece of goul drinkilhle witer in Athens. It thewed from the finat of a brond ringe of rocks which cruses the bed ot the flisms. The stadimu used for the gymuic contests of the Pathemic sames is mow only a long hollow, grown wer with wan

The arch of Ifauriath, which is still extant, is opposite the north-western :ung ut the Olymuchm, and firmed an entrance th the peribolns of the temple. It is a paltry structuro ; aud the style is inded no miwnthy of the real enlargement if triste which Hadian is acknowledged to have divpryed in the tine mets, that Mure conjectures with much probability that it may have been a work erected in his honour by the A thenian municipality, or ly some other chass of ahmirers or ilatterers, rather than by himself. The inscriptions upon either side of the frieze above the centre of the arel, describe it as dividing "A Athens, the nacient city of 'Theseus" from the "City of Hadrinu." We know that a quarter of Athens was ealled IIadriathopolis in honour to 15alkian; and the above-mentioned inseription proves that this mame was given to the funirter on the southern side of the arel, in which stooll the mighty temple of Zens Olympius, completed by this emperor:

Much disenssion has arisen as to whether there were two abota or market-places in Athens or ouly one. The anthor of the article "Athene" in smitlis

Dictiouary, and to which wo have so firquently referved, after entering upon the sulpjeet it length, decides in favour of Forehhammer's view, that there was only one.
While we were at Athens, M. Pittakis, conservator of antiquities at Athers, was carrying on excavations in the Olleium of Heroules or Hegilla, and he hat brought many interesting relies to light. The Pinacotheci, a mokern museum of A thens, contains indeed now an immense collection of monmuents and relics of different kinds illustrative of Grecian art, from the sarliest days down to the time of the lamans. Father Simen, chicf of the Gipmein friary, is said to have purchased the choragie monment of Tasicmaten for 150 crowns. Thas the only remaining minment in the "Street of the Tripods" which now adjuins the Queen's Bonlevard, halonge, as does also we lulinve the Horologinm of A adroniens Currhestes, to France.
The manners of the modem Creeks bave remainul essentially oriental; their inlens nere patriarchal und demuratic, and deply imbuad with the reminisences of Asiatic rivilisation of which Homer was the representative, as well isw with those arly Chriatian preecpte of which st. I'aul wats the most illinstrinus apostle. It is now nigh half a rintary since the West has been lahmining to limmonise Grece, Int to wery little parpoue. Fiven in tha sators of Athons, the assumptinn of western manur is as manifest ac it is superficial, but go inte the eomery, visit the cotteges or the peasant's hat, nothing can he mere devide illy oriental; may, simply walk out of the metropulis, amil axcembing the flakk of Mount Parnes, cxamine a gromp of peamats-shephards: whil otherx-with the love of the opell air common to all orientals, comking their dimer in a cavern on the roggel mountain-side (See p. D88), with the ruins of when time below, ane the true and ineflamble charactor of the Cireck eomes ont in umistakeable relief. Tho Athanians always xpak of the Euglish and Fromeh as Eurromum, as if they themselver dwelt on the other vile of the Figenthe White sea of the 'lurks. The fiect is that all the pepulations beyond the Adriatie dither much from thenso to the west ward, and shade off gradually from Europen to Asiatic habits.
The nutagemism of the Greeks and latins is henee most marked, and it extends wen to their religions feelings. With the Greek the true charactrosties are the sentiment of equality, self-reliance, aud a profomed nutipathy for social diseipline. The Latin races fillow one another like shep, cringe to power, wait till those in authority do what they ought to do themsilves, :unl convenicutly shelve their refigions respunsibilitiox on an infallible hierarchy. It is that spirit of selfer miane that makes of the mentern (ireek a grow sailor " ${ }^{2}: 1$ a not very inefficacions pirate. Jlis daring is not however always equal to his ambition, mad b, ing ingennity to his ais fir more frequently than da, h.

Athenian machty traned to Europern fialhons resemblex a garden of acelinatisation, in which nothing is as yot acelimatised, anl yet from whence all mative produce hate buen expelled. The first who motelled themselves after the Europeran lishions were the Phamarints. Ihese families who took refuge after the conquest of Constantinople in the Phunr or Fanar, a guarter of Stamhul (Isliun-pul or city of Islamism), hecome omonled in the (ipmatie, thancial, andadministrative service of the Usmanlis, and adopted the himbits and manners of the Wext. They even presmand to found a kind of aristocracy, by making their moministrative titles bereliary. Dut the shan only succectinumong aluhatory forcigners, the Greeks themselves hagi at such pretensions. An exarch comes to the "en? and culls hisuself "his grace," a bey or a lhyath is proclained to le a "prince :" it is the translation, bat by no means the equivalent to his ramk at home.

The mental qualities of the Greek have remained the sume: ho is apt to muderstand well und yuick, und expresses himself eloruently and metapharically. All Greeks "thee" and "thon" one another. ILis excellemy "thens" his grocer or his tailor:

The Greks are fir more serions nud reflective thas wonld be inagiard from their excitable and generally hopacions charater, mad the turn of their mind is decidenly rritical, amatical, amblypicions. Theas vanity is moturions, and their dissimulation litth se, hat thet latter las been exagerated. The bumad siln rionty of the tireek has cansed him to be disliked hy all surrmading $\mathrm{p}_{\text {nophens. }}$ Hence the Purk reprowhes

Greck with mistrastfulucss and diasimalation.
whe ophomed cmaning to firce; the Jevantims a me them with want of principle in commerciad transwetions, weamse they monle.fleol their practiers aftu theirs, :und sometimes sumpensed then; the Voudish combats haste ly prukene. This mily of the mimide. classes: among the mere range of the midnle chases in Greece as perfoct gentemen in thought and manare, and as linglike in act and ticling, are to be bere with ns in any part of the world. The Greme is anaynto be listinguished by his time , pen forehatal, his hamy some acenthated feathres and expression in puirk intelligenee, from the Alhanian with murrow tempho ant turnect-if, noses, although hoth wear the salue dress.

The hamty of the Grevian yomg ladiex is dementhy renownel, and has been surg in every burroran mut in hast Asiatic lamgonges. That beanty lan played :m impmetant lart in the history of the Gommali sultans as well as of O:manli, bashas. It is deeply t." be regretted that the vanity of the French- the Cirerks and lersians of the Wrest-will induce them to fonce their inleas of civilisation upon the wh Hellenic tratitions, which were in vugue whin Gate anll Frank were clan in shew skins. The tiay, with its golden acorn w tassel, is still worn; the fystan or kilt itill prodominates; the conbroilered gaiter is met expluden, and the talagni still mantles over Gha Grech forms in the winter-time; but ulas, every day the Iturable mambectures of the bast ure giving way to the inferior hut cheaper articles of the West. Athas has now so wonty tailors inm tifty shemekers, who powse to follow European fashime, to six national tailors sud nationd shomakers. Ther, are sixty-two mayanas de nomveantio for the ladies, but excepting the gherns laties of homem; who are abliged to wear the mathal costune, tew nuw adhere to it. Even thuse who ilo su mily retain a portion of the mational costumek, 路 the opn waisteont and the taktikios or red cap. (sia 1'. 981 .) 'The arizin of this lies in the poverty of the Grems. Travellers remark that in Grece they are always eivilly recived, and kindly treated, but there is a diflicalty in lrcoming intinate. There are no dijeuners for the tonrists, dimners for the Einghish, w putit soupers for the French. Nor for want of will,

[^14]the shan only succenis o Greeks themselvess huy urch coules to the west "" a bey ur a Buyatlot it is ther translation, but lis rank at home. Greek have remmined the nd well and guick, uat ad metapherically: Al another. ILis exeelhany rious and reflective thas excitable ani intherally - turn of their minn is and sumpicious. Thein dissinmiliation lith, :Hgerated. 'Jlae wrnad atised him to be diondioud - new the Turk repowise ness and divilunlation, (1) furce: thr hev:antits ninciple: in cotuns rectad - lle their practiens afte red them; the Vimplish ate at cheat, beratuse be This omly of the minill. e of the midille clases is n thought and mamhers liug, are to be but wit The Grow is nimags ? "en fomelnead, his hathe if exp ression of yuith a with marrow craphes It louth weme the same mag ladien is demmeally
 "latt beality ham plinge? distory of the Gmamal athas. It is revply z. $y$ af the Frebeli- the 'ust-will inder dhem lisation upon the wh - in vogute whon Gimat wins. Tlee foxy, with II worn ; the fystam or borvidered giviter is mot mathtes over tian Greek t alas, evory day do the giving way tu the the West. Athents lais hoemakers, who prole's six national tailors :und re sixty-two matyasias excepting the ytur ais Il to wern the hatienal Evere those "ha do national costumes, us ikios or red eap. (が s in the proverty of the at in direece daey are lly treated, but there mate. Thure are no rs for the Euglish, ul Nor for want ol will, le oribine illutre.
but because the modern Athenians cannot affori it. Ald to which, the Greek is extremely suserpitible of the supercilious manner in which so many travellers put down (like some novelists at hone) all domestic practices which do not precisely tally with their conventional notions. There eannot be a narrower minul than that which would ent and clip all the world precisely to its own notions of rectitude. The men, therefore, initate the Westerns, because they have not the cournge (which wealth would give them) to disregard criticism; and many of the fair sex would rather wed rich young travellers than their own poor conntrymen, and hence they also Furopennise themselves. And fo they get reeommentations in return? M. Proust says: "Oriental nonchalance imparts to them n charm unknown in cur rountry, lut they walk budly, und ignore that correctness in their tournure which the French laties possess in so high u degree." A traveller's ideas never can get out of the national groove.
The prettiest Greek girls are mainly Asintic and belong to the Phanariot class, anong whom the blomal has remained most pure. The two classes-the Gruek and the Phanariot-constitute, inteed, two very distinet societies at Athens; the Doldo-Wallachian "princesses," for exunple, eonstitute n portion of tho Phamariot society. They ure quite Furojenn, sometimes toon much so; taking it intu their lemeds, from reading the worst Freuch lovels, that many things are permitted in Furopean society which are rigidly exchuded; they all speak the lirenela language, and are tolerably well infumed; the other chass have no in. stinctive good surne, a jerfect tact, and a simple talent in pleasing, that more than makes ap for their ignorance of lialzac and Paul de Koch. Absurd stories are current of young men trapjed into matrimony in Grecee; the family if Athens is both respected and highly respectable, and the exlucation of girls is as free as in England.

T'usee the peasant girl the turist must visit the A gora, not the ancient Agora of the Cemuncieus-the prittery or Tuileries of A thens of old, according to soure, but called Ceramic, aecording to Pansanias, from the king of that mume-a miscrable and truly oriental collection of wooden stalls, protected from the sun by torn patches of cunvas (See 1. 273), and where are to be purchased Snyran tigs by the side of P'arisian porfumery. Two spectres of antipuity ndorn this marketplace, the Temple of the Winds and the portico of Minerva Archegetis. The female peasants of Greece are, bowever, rarely pretty, and there is little that is picturesque in the dress or apjearnnce of the men. But still the scene is worth seeing. The national dish of mout ma la pallikare and yairt, or the skim of milk remued when just about to boil, with stratw. brries and sugar, are tu be eaten thre in the open air; and many at phass of fragrant scio ant fruity Cypros are tossed off fiom the eomuter: The enromey if the country is, however, rather tromblous. It is in drachums, of which we extract the following explanation from a French tourist :-"La drichne vaut un pence et demi, un jeu moins qu'un frime, un felu phes qu'un swanziger." Tenpence half-penny is what was meant, but how can that be rather less than a frame? The streets of Athens have their own peculiar physiognomy. There is neither the mony disorder of the streets of Nuples nor the methodical netivity of the streats of London. Athens has the appearance of a $t_{1}$ wis where no one has noything to do; the male portion of the prpulation take up their phaces on the sumay side of the street; tradesmen have one foot in the shop, the other without ; and every one las a word or twe to may to the other. For teurists, Alexander's establishment is the great centre of gossip. The Café de la Belle Grece is, however, the place in which to mect notabilities. If the Greeks themselves were to be believed, every official man is sold or for sale, althongh his price is not ticketed on his buck. Great anmes, Canaris, Chriesis, Metaxas, Mavrocordatos, Rangavi, Minoulis, are spattered with dirt. The Sciot bankers are expecially envied. The lonians dominate the erowd by their tragic vehemenee. The Athenian population altogether presents a curions study. On the Sundays it leaves the square of Belle (irece, to walk on the I'atissin (corruption of Pulishah), where a military lnad plays, and thenco they return quietly home in the evening; but when it is hot, many camp out of doors, when their presence is revealed by the noise prolonged even into their sleep.
'The Carnival is a great day in Athens, only that instean of being held, as in Latin or Romanist countries, before lent, it is lield on the first day of Lent. The phace selected for the public games upon this oecasion is one of singular beauty. (Wee p. 289.) In is the open space $l_{n}$ tween the Stadium and the Arch of Hadrian, at the foot of the musnificent temple of the Olympic Jupiter, and in front of the Acropolis. The loug lines of dancers unfol! themselves, serpent-like, to the sound of the lyre anll of drums, and, atter the dance, Lent is imugurated hy a reprast of olives, eaviare nod ruast grains of nuize-the most popular articles of food with the Grieks from the Danube to the Euphrates. "This fist," Mr. Proust says, "which the Greeks semunlously olserve, does honour to their stomachs and to the firmness of their belief." The ceremony that follows this, that which represents the Resurrection, is avowedly as solemn as it is picturesque.

There call, indeed, be no doubt as to the genuineness and the dejth of the religious feeling in the Greek. It is in him allied to his politics, and not to talk politios in Greece is to hold one's tongue for good. Unfortumately it is too often conbined with a profound igioranee, but the heads of the elaurch say: "Su long as the Turks have a foot in Europe, we shall not tight against either the ignoranee of the clergy or the superstition of the people. We should be tur, much in fiar of weakening roligion by jurging it ; but uno: the (ireaks at St. Sophiat again, bo fear natel he apmehembed of a prople foregoing its national religion."

It is no donbt for similar reasons that the Greeks insist $\quad$ !en their Prinees alopting the orthodox taith, an abligation which has already given rise to grave ditheulties regarling succession, and lats been one of the causes of the late insurection.

TIIE BERMUDAS, WEST INDIES, BRITLSH GULANA, & ISTIDIUS

 of pavali.
I.

The Remmedas-Tue Ports Islands-Wilale FisimeryA Cobal Reff-Stuhy of a licmp of Anberghiscolonisation by the Vibginia compiny-Nember of l:mands-Tows of st. lieohge's-Fohtifications of Iheland- ('onticis-Scpinisess of the colonists.
Tue Dermudas have long been celebrated for their beatuty, richness, ami silubrity-admantag's which time, howrer, has served to diminish rather than confirm. 'Their climate is that of a perpethal spring, mihl, genial and salulnions, though during sumtherly winds, which are most provalent, the atmosphere hecomes charged witl a homidity unfwomable to constitutions predisposed to sheumatism, gout, or $j^{\text {nul- }}$ monary afiections. The fieds and trees are always green; and the predominance of the ecdar-Juniperis

ST. PIERRE, MARTINIQUE.

Bermadiena (a tree which mast mot he confommen! with the cellar of Letbanon, which is a Lerixis), nud from Which mall switt and very durable vemels are eon-wheted-white it refremes tho air with ity frazumee, imparts according to some its diak hue to the landsentu, mot relieves neconding to others the dazaling whitemess of the comine rock.
Tha Burmadas, so called from han Bermude\%, a of to it is in May's nccomin, from a S'pumish ship called hircmadas being cast away there; and also called Smamers on Sommers Ishams, from Sir George Summers or sommers, whon was driven unan them in 160!, (11) his ravage to Virginia, were great favourites with the Euglish poets daring our Augustan age. Thes have been shlposed to havo heen the seene of Arides tricksy doings, and that Slumsjuse may have heard of" them so " indistinct surmives, sutficient to luse (natbled him to speak of the "still wesed Bermsothes." ('rotain it is that the ishands mere very suliden to teme pents, thumdesturms, and hurvicmes, especiaily haring the minma, a ciremastance that may be nttributed to their situation on the verge of the trade-wind, where variable and disagreeable weather always occurs at certain seasons. Waller wrote of them as follows :-

" Bermudn, walled with rocks, who does not know?
That happy island where huge lemons grow, And orange trees, which golden fruit do bear, The Hesperian garden hoasts of nove so fsir ; Where shining pearl, coral, and many a ponnd On the rieh shore of ambergris is found; The lofty cedar, which to heaven aspires, The prince of trees! is fuel to their fires; The sinoke thy whieh their londed apits do tarn, For incense might on sacred altars hurn; Their private roofs on odorous timber borne, Sueh as might palaces for kings adorn.
The sweet palmatton a new biscehus yield, With leaves as ample as the hroadest shield, Under the shadow of whose friendly boughs They sit caronsing where their liquor grows. Figs there unplanted throngh the fields do grow, Such as fierce Cato did the Romana slow, With the rare fruit inviting them to spoil Carthage, the mistress of wo rich in soil. The naked rocks are not nnfruitful there, 1hat, at some constaut seasons, every year Their harren tops with luscions fooil nbound, And with the eggs of varions fowls are crowned. Tobscen is the worat of things, which they To English landlords, as their tribute, pay. Such is the mould, that the blessed tenant feeds On precious fruits, and pays his rent in weeds. With candied planiains, and the juicy pine, On choicest melona, and aweet grapea they diae, And with potatoes fat their wanton awine. Nature these cates with meh a lavish hand Pours out nmong them, that our courser land Tastes of that bounty, and does cloth retarn, Which not for warmth, but ornament is worn ; For the kind spring, which but sulutes $n s$ here, Inhabits there, and courta therr, all the year. Ripe fruits and blossoms on the same trees live; At once they promise what at once they give. So aweet the uir, so moderate the clime, None sickly lives, or dies bufore his time.
Heaven sure has kept this spot of earth uncursed, To show how all thinge were createl first.
The tardy plants in our cold orehards placed,
Reserve their fruit for the next age's laste;
There a suall grain in some few monthe will be
A firm, a lufty, and a spacions tree.
The paima-christi, and the fuir papi,
Now hut a seed (preventing nature's law)
In half the circle of the haty year
Preject a shade, and lovely fruita do wear."
Waller's poem, The Battle of the Summer Ishenets, is descriptive of the whale fishery, and the Bermudians are genernlly considered among the most dexterons of fishermen, move particularly with the harpoon. Tho whale fishery is carried on at a tritting expense, aut employs nbont twelve whate lonets and their crews three monthe in the year. One groul fish covers the cost of the whoth seasou, and sonnetimes twenty or more are taken, yielding one thousand gallons of cil. The flesh is sold in the murket, and enten by the natives. The season commencers in March and ends in June ; the whiles n!pronell the islands elose con the sonthern side, und men are stationeel on the cliffs te givo notico of their nppearance.

Waller has lieen generally supposed to huvo visitel the Bermudns himself, but Mr. Rubert Bell, in his annotated elition of the Emylisk I'octs, utterly lissents from this view of the case, and justly remarks thant the descriptions, us far an they go, inighit have been easily drawn up from published materials. The aspect of the Bermudas has much ohanged since those descriptions were written. The practice of entting down the codars for firewood has not only diminished the pieturesque beanty of the Bormndas, but greatly reduced the produotiveness of the orange plantations, by depriving them of the sholter uecessary to their cultivation. The cedars are in fact mere low bushy trees, much resembling stunted firs. Ot lemons nad oranges there nue now actually none in Bermuda. The trees suffered a blight $n$ few years ago, and no effort has been made to restore then.

Marvall also wrote a little poem called Bermeda.

The oysters found in the rocks rometines contain good jrearls yet, and as to coral, the Rermudas ure essentially coral islands. The rocks are all composed of comils and shells of differomt magnitudes, more or lens consolidated by a calcareous eement; and it seems probable thast the Bermudas owe their existence to the accumulation of nueh matcrials on a coral reef, reprosing on volcanic rocks below. The longthened narrow shape of the islunds gives, however, so much the character of a coral reef, as to have led Captain Vetch to look upon them simply as such.

There is not, indeed, un insular group in the whole glabe so protected by nuture from the effects of a hoisterous crean as the Bermudas; they are surrounded by dangerous rocky reefs, extending in some parts ten miles from the islande, which render them very difficult of access. The few channals through the recf are thickly studded with coral rooks, but the water is so heautifully clear, that they are vinible to the eye; and the negro pilots, looking down from the bow of the vessel, conduct her through the labyrinth with a skill and confidence only to be nequired by long labit.

Thery is a rather curions story connected with the existence of ambergris on the islands, as noticed by Willer, nud which als, involves the " wanton swine." Sir George Summers, who we have hefore reen wis driven on the islands, in 1609 , mado his way with his party to Virginia in two small cedar-built vessels, construeted by his men, of which that in which Sir George embarked did not contain an onmer of iron, except one bolt in the keen. At the time of his arrival ill Virginia, the colony was much distressed by famiae, and the acconut given by Sir George of the aboudunce of large black hogs (auppowerl to have belonged to the Spanish ahip cast away there), inlucerl Lord Delnware, the Governor of Virgixia, to somil lim buek for a supily. Sir Georgi ied on his arrivnl nt the islanis, und his crew, in spin, of his last orders, procer led with the veenel to Englund, instead of returning to Virgiaia. I'wo mailors had been left behind at the time of thr wreck, and one remmined from this experlition. A quarrel arose among the three tir the sovereiguty of the islands, which had mearly terminated fatally. lambling aloug the shove, they found a piece of aim. bergris, weighing about 80 lbss and as this treasure wis valueless in thoir present situation, they formed the scheme of sailing in an open bout, either to Virginia or to Newfoundland to dispese of it.

II" the mean time, the Virginin Comprany, who elnimed the islands as the frist diseoverers, sold their right to a company of 120 persons, who, obtaining from King James, in 1612, a charter for their settloment, sent out sixty settlers, with Mr. More as governor. More found the snilurs hoalthy and in good condition. Tho new eolony was formed in St. Geurge's Island. which was laid out and fortified; and, in the eourme of aterials. The aspect of ged sinee those descriptiee of eutting down the only diminished the Bermudas, but greatly the orange plantations, olter necessary to their in fact mere low bushy d firs. Of lemons and ally none in Bernuda. few years ago, and no othem.
ocks sometimes contain the Bermudas are esmen. ks are all eomposed of nagnitudes, more or less cement; and it seems we their existence to the on a coral reef, reposiag ongthenert narrow shapre much the eharacter of a ain Vetch to look upon ular group in the whole from the effects of a as ; they are surroundel nding in some parts telt ander them very difticult through the reef are oks, but the water is so visilule to the cye; nad from the low of the e labyrinth with n skill ired by long habit. bory connected with ther islands, as noticed by es the " wanton swine," a lanve liefore seell was , made his way with his all eedar-built vessels, hich that in which sir atain an onnce of iron, the time of his arrival ch distressed by famiuc. reorge of the abundance to have belonged to the indueed Lord Delnware, soud him luark for $n$ is arrival at the islands, torders, procer led with $t$ retarning to Virginia. ind at the time of the in this expedition. A fis the sovereiguty in ly torminated fatally. y found a piece of nu. and as this treasum situation, they formed bout, either to Virginia of it. rginia Comprany, who diseoverens, sold thicir as, who, olitniniug from er for their settlement, Mr. More as governor. und in good condition. in St. George's Island. ; and, in the conree al
the same year, a seeond party arrived with supplies of all kinds, when the town of St. George was commenced. Captain Daniel Tncker succecded Mr. More as goveruor, in 1616, and, during his time, some rats, which had eome on shore from the ships, increased in such it degree, as to destroy almost everything in the islands, cvell making ilecir nests in trees; but, nfter five yeurs, this dreadful annoyance sutdeniy censed.
The General Assembly was establishel in 16:0, at the town of St. George, pursuant to the Company's instructions in England; and many of the nobility at that time pureliased plantations, and their cultivation was highly eneouruged, so that prosperity continued to increase for many years, and was greatly fivoured by the Civil Wars, which enused many persons of character and opulence to take refuge there. Such, indeed, was the influx, that the number of white inhabitants at that time has been estimeted at 10,600 .
The inhuds have always inmained in the possession of the British, thongh, towards the close of the first American War, Genernl Washington contemplated thair eapture, as a station for vessels of war, to the auncyance or destruction of our West India trade. For this purpose nothing eould be more eligible, is they lie directly in the homewarl-bound trick.

Ineluding the small ones, the number of islands is very great; it is common to say that there are 365 , or as unay us there we days in the yeur, but the large ones may be reduced to five, viz.,-St. George:s, St. David's, Long Island, or Perviula, Sumerset, and Ireland. They lie in a north-anst and south-went direction, iucluding a spaee about twenty miles in length, and more than six in the greatest brudth; they we all low, the highest point, called Tibli Hill, at the sonthern extremo of the large islaul, being only 180 feet above the level of the sem. 'There ato no springs or fresh-water stroams in the islands, and but few wells, the water from which is brackish. Fach house has its own tank, to which the roof serves an a conductor for tho ruin; and, on the Island of St. George's, are large tanks for the suplyy of shipling.

There aro two towns, each of which has its mayor and civic atfecers; St. George's, on the island of tho same mane, nud Inmilton, bin the largo ishad abont the entre of the gronp. They are hoth well built of comblag; St. Georeges, which is the larger, contains about 500 houses, a chureh, the town-house, in whieh both bameles of tho legishature loold their sittings, $n$ library, and other publie buildings. The whole group is divided into nime gurishes, eneh of whidh semels tom members to the Homse of Assembly. The senttered houses and homlets are so munerous that the whole island has the urmarance of one eontimed vilhage.
The soil, unfortunately-onee enpalle of producing every article of West lndia, und of home prodtsec-is now genemally exhansted. Cotliee, cotton, indign, and tubaceo are no longer cultivated. Of the 12,1000 neres which bermudn is said to contain, only 456 are under eultivation. There are $:, 070$ neves of pastare. Live stock and flom ure imported from British America. Arrowroot and hides nee now, with West Indi: produce, the chief artieles of export.

Nothing, says Mr. Nore, can be more romuntic thun the little biny of St. George's, the mamher of little islets, the singalar elenrness of the water, and the inimated play of the gracefil little hoats ghling for ever letween the islunds, and seeming to sail from ono colargrove to another, form ultogether the sweetest miniat.
ture of nature that can be imagined. In the short but hemutiful twilight of their spring evenings, the white eottages scattered over the islands, and but partially seen through the trees that surround them, assume often the appearance of little Grecian temples, and embellinh the joor fisherman's hut with columns which the peneil of Claude night imitnte.

There was formerly a small doekyurd at St. George's, but it has been renoved to Irelani Island, on which lirge sums have, of late years, heen expended, in order to render it a strong port for a naval and military depôt. The whole ficeo of the ishnad has been changed, hills removed aml phais made, and all the ingenuity of art, and the latwor of a harge eonvict establishment, have been expended to strensthen this important station ever since 1824 , as also in ennstructing a breakwater. A rovolution in wirt us the introduction of iron-elad slips, or an earthquake, may render the labour of all these years of no avail.

As a fortress, says the most recent traveller who has published the results of his observations-Mr. Authony Trollope-nu cloubt it is very strong. I hive no donbt on the matter, seeing that I am a patriotie Englishman, und as suel believo all Englisha fortitiations to be strong. It is, however, n matter on which the opinion of no civilinn ean be of weight, unless he have tleeply studied the subjeet, in which case he so fur eenses to ho a eivilian. Everything fooked very clenn and applejpie; a great many flags were tlying on Sundays and the Quern's hirthdny; and all seemed to bo ship-shape. Of the importanco to us of the position there can he no ruestion. If it should ever come to pass that we khould be driven to nse an armed tleet in the Westorn waters, Bermmala will be as serviccable to us tleere, ins Malta is in the Mediterranean. So muel for the fortress.

As to the prison, I will say n word or two just now, seeing that it is in that light that the place was chietly interesting to me. Bit first for the colony.
Snow is not prevalent in Bemmadn, ut least not in the months of May and June: lout the tirst leok of the houses in enel of its two small towns, and indead all wer the islant, gives one the iblen of a snowstorm. Every loose is white, up from the ground to the very point of the roof. Nathing is in so great demand as whitewash. 'They whitewash their homes incessantly, and always inclule the roots. This beeomes a nuisunce, from the ghare it occusions; mud is at last painful to the ryes. 'They moy threr that it is cleanly mal cheap, and no one man deny that eleanliness and economy are important domestic virtnes.

There uro two towns, situated on elitterent islamicalled St. Georgo and lamilton. The former is the hemd-qumters of the military; the laterer of the goveruor. In spoaking of the phee as a fortress I should have suid that it is the summer hemb-guarters of the arlmiral in commanil of the IFalifix station. The dockyard, which is conneeted with the conviet estr-blishment, is at an istand called lrehnd; but the residence of the admind is not far from Hamiton, on that which the Burmulinus mall the " Goutinent."

I spent a week in ench of these towns, and I em hardly say which I found the most triste. The island, or ishunds, as one nust always suy-using the plural number-have many gifts of miture to recommend then, They are extremely fortile. The land, with a very moletato amount of cultivation, will give two crops of ordinary potatuen, and ome erop of sweet potatoes in the sear. Moot truits will grow here, both those of the tropies and of the more northern latitudes. Onuges and lemons, peaches and strawlemies, hamanas and mulberries thrive, or uculd thrive equally well, it they were even slightly cheomagen to do so.
So elimate in the world probally is better adapten for beetroot, putatues, onions, and tomatoes. The place is so circmantanced grogriphically that it should be the early market-garden for New York-as to a certain small extent it is. New York eamot get her early potatnes-potatoes in May and Jme-from her own suil ; hat Bermula cam give them to her in any quantity.

Arrowroot also grows here to perfection. The bermudians claim to siy that thein arrowroot is the liest in the worll; and it lublieve that none hears a higher price. Then the land proluces harley, outs, and hudian corn; and not only produes them, but pro. duces two, sometimes thre crops a yerr. Let the Euglish tarmer with his tallow fivll think of that.

But with all their aikantages bermulat is very porn. lerhaps, 1 should and, that in the whole, she is contented with her puverty: Amiffo, why disturb such contentment?

But, nevertheless, one cimmot teich oneself mut to he desirons of progress. Une cammet but fiel it stil to see pupple arglecting the good things whiel are umber their fict. I saw no fruit of any deseription, though I am told 1 was there in the priner season, and hearid much of the fruit that there need to the in finmer lays. I saw no vergetables but putatues anl ominus, anl was tohl that as a ruld the prople are satintion with them. 1 did not once enerminer a piece of mat fit 10 be 'aten, "xcepting when I dined in mations silpl' 'hy the Convict estalilishment. The poultry was stmeiWhat hetter than the ment, hat yat of a very puor description. Buth broad and butter are had ; tha later quite uneatalle. Buglish prople whim i met declared that they wrom naibla to get anything to eat. The perple, hoth white and hate, seemed to be only latf awake. The land is only halt cultivated; anil hamedly half' is tilled of that which might her tillod.
This was all very well as long as the land hand no ancial virtur-as long as a market, sueh as that aft forded by New York, was wanting. lint now that the hered, noturly does doubt - hat in the lame were chamed it money value wombl be steatly more than it now in, Bery one to whon I apoke minitted this, imel comphancal of the batkwarloess of the istand in imporements. But no me trjes to remery this mow.

They hat a tommor there some yearin ay whe did minch to eure dhis state of things, who dial show them that money was to be mate by producing jus tatoes and sembling them out of the inhmo. This was Sir W, Raid, the man of storms. He seems to hate had some tolembly thecent jhea of what a Govmor's duty shomld lue iif such a place as bermadia. Tob heljud tirst at every table, an! to be called "Iour sixeellency:" and then to rectim some thonsinnts a year for undergoing the dhe dies is sll very well; is very nice fier a militury gentleman in the decline of yenss. It is reey well that Eaghand can so provide for a few of her old military gentlemen. But when the military gentlemen melected can do something elsen lesides, it iteres make kuelh a ditterence ! Sir W. Reid dind do much else ; and if there emald ber fomen another Sir W. Reid or two to 1- ne their Luras in Bermuda for six years each, the serubing busles, would give way, and the carth would bring forth her increave.
The slecpiness of the people appeared to we the most prevailing characteristic of the plate. Thewe seemed to be no energy among the natives, me ideal of going ithead, none of that priniple of constant motion. which is found so strongly devoloped ammeng their great neighbours in the United States. To say that they live for cating and drinking would be to wrong them. They want the energy for the gratitication of such vicions tastes. To live nad din would serm to be enough for them. To live and die as their fathers aml mothers did before them, in the same houses, using the same furniture, nurtured on the sane food, imblenging the same immunty from the dimgers if excitement.
1 must confiess that daring the short purion of my sujourn there, I myself was completely wertaken lis the same sort of lassitude. I comld not walk a mife without fatigue. I was always anxions tu be supiue, lying down whenever I conh time a sefia; ever ansum for a rocking-chair, and sulicitons fin a quick arrial of the hour of bed, which nsel to her ahout hald past nine o'dock. Indeed this ferling hectume su strong with me that I feared I was ill, and hegan to ape whate" as tu the eflects and pleasures of a low fever and a Bermuda doctor. I wats comborted, however, lig ana as surane that everymaly was suftiring in the sime way. "When the someli win. blows it is always su." "Whin seuth wiul must be very provalont then," I sugented. I was toll that it was very prevalent. Iharing tha perion of my visit it was all snuth winl.

The weather was not hot-nne hat at least ta me who had just come ul from limana, and the tiery furnater of Axpinwall. But the air was damp mil mugay and lisagromble. 'Io me it was than mot trying climate that I had rumentered. They hate hat yellow fiver there twie within thr lant eight yanc, and huth oceasions it was very fatal. Sugularly vomeh on its latter coming the mitives sulfered mind more than strmgers. This j : altogether "pposed to the nsial hathite of the yollow fever, whied is iungined to he ever emtins ins suriug thase whate indizo' is to the lame it visits.
 I Nambersy that this is chite as muel a ruln here on in my of the West lowlies. Of conrse there athe they are not mombous, as in banaica; ore, if son they are su maty akin to the negro as not to he obsemmid. There are, I thimk, mone of thuse all hat white lantins

 Es. Gol a diy, from that to ds. For exeeptional joma, wates they enu live well her working thre days a werk, anil such nquars to be thoir habit. It seems to me that no enframblised negro entertains an inden of haly work. Work to them is an exaptinum ciremmstmec, as to us may be a spell of tilteren or sixteen ham in the serme thy, We do suth athing oreminatily for certain olpiects, ame for eertain objeets they athe willing to work occasiomalls.

The population is alsut deven thousmad. That of the negroes and coloured people dhes mot much exteal that of the whites. That of the femmes greatly oxereds that ont the males, buth among the white mid cohnured people. Among the negrees I notieel this, that if mit y bushes would give $g$ forth her inerease. appeared to we the of the plates. There ${ }^{5}$ the matives, no ider principle of constant ngly devoloped amurg Juited states. To say drinking would le to cuergy for the gratifilo live amd die womb Co live and die as thin re them, in the sime ', murtured on the same manity from the dian-the short priot of my mpletely wertaken liy wuld not walk a mite ansious to be supine, ad a sofin ; ceremams ins fore a quick arrival to low alout half p ant ling lucame so strung and hegran to spuetulite falow feveranda berel, however, ly an: irfing in the same way. t is always sn," "Thi" lent then," 1 angeretal. mevalent. During the the wind.
wot hot at least to min Pamana: and the tiery the air was damp mil me it wals the mont atered. They lave land in the lant eight yemp, ital. Singularly chamid es sutfered mind more gether "pmoel th the eer, which is imagined ose who ate indigne sis
:av : aluost all mumews as: much a ruld here in Ot comers thes : an of mixerl breat ; hate amaicar ; or, it' so, they a an at to be olment? we all hut white lathos 11 life is son instes ing a rule they com carn For exequitial jnls, king there dhys a week, habit. It seems to ate ertains man ilen of staily cuptimul circmastimec, fteen on sisteen hami In a thing oceasionally rtain objects they are en thonsand. 'Jlat of dues not much exreal females greatly exceeds the white and collured notieed this, that if int more active than their brethren in the West Indies, they are at least more civil and less sullen in their manner. But then again, they are without the singular mixture of tim and vuity which makes the Jomaiea uegro so amusing fer a while.
These islands aro certainly very pretty ; or I shombld promps say that the sea, which forms itself into bays nul ereeks ly ruming in among them, is very pretty. The water is yuite clear and transparent, there being bittle or nus samb on those sides on which the wema makes its entrance ; and clear water is in itself so beantiful. Then the simgular way in which the land i h hoken minto narrow neeks, islands, and promontories, ruming here and there in at eapricious, halfmysterions manner, creating a desire for amphibiosity, netessarily creates beaty. But it is mostly the beauty of the sea, and mot of the lame. The islamds are that, (1) at any rate there is no comsilderable elevation in them. They are eovered throughout with those serubby little trees; and, aithough the trees are green, and therefore when aren from tho sel give ia frembess to the landseape, they are minteresting and monotonous on shore.

I must not firget the oleanders, which at the time of my visit wre in fill thower; which, fir atught I know, may be in full flowe during the whole year. They are so genema through all the inlands, and the trees themselves ate so coverel with the large straggling, lut inghat blusome, is to give quite a chamacterto the neemery. The lermudas might almost be ealle the olmuler isles.
The govermment emsints of a Chovemor, C'onseil, amd House of Asemily; Kins, Lorls, and Commons again. Twenty years as, J shomlid thoughly have aproded of this ; but now I am barilly sme whether a population of ten or twelve thonsand individuals, of whom much more than half are women, and more tham half tho remainder are negroes, require an composite a ennstitution. Woull not a strict Governom, with due rifernee to Downing Street, do ahmont as well? But then to make the change ; that would he dilliculty.

ISLAND OF ST. THOMAS
"We have them pretty well in hamb," a sentlemen whisperd to me who was in some shape eonnected with the lonse of Asmembly. Well, that is a cumbort. A sonl majority in the lawer llonse is a comert to all men-axeept the minority.

There are nime parishes, eteh returning four members to this Jonne of Assembly. Bint though every parish requires four members, if alserve that half it clergymun is enouglo fin mont of them. But then the Hergymen mast be paid. The conncil here consists chicly of gentemen holding government olliest, or who are in smo way commeted with the fovermment ; so that the Crown can probahly contrive to mange its $l_{1 \text { ttle }}$ athiars. If 1 remember righty, (ibhaltar and Malta have no Larls or Commons, Thiy are fortresses, anl as such mudur military rule ; and su is Bermuda a fintress, Independently of her purely milita. importance, lue wize and population is be moms equal to that of Malta. The pepmation of Malta is whetly native, and foreign to us ;-and the popalation of laremuda is chieds black.

But then Malta in a conpucred colong, whereat Bermindit wats "settlal" hy hitons, as the word feres. That mases all the ditierence. That such a little phot as homma wealil in real fact be better without a constitution of its osa. if the change comblaty ond managed, that I intuge will be the opinion ot inest mell whe ha.e thought about the matter.

1 I.

 Packer statox-Mother Porchron.
Tme Wext Indian INands or Antilles stretch out i the form of an arel between the two comtinents of America. The ampect of these intands is in geteral ruggel and highly elerated; where low they are hounded by thick swampy forest. In the former ease, the aljacent sea is open and of great depth, so that an anchorage is praeticalle only very close to the shore, ahowe is lothom of hack sand or rock; in this latter the somudiags show a mulliy bottom, and the eoral reefs compel ships to keep of the shore. This observation holds equally true of all the Arehipelago of the West Imbiar Ishads. The volcmoes and coral veefe, te which these inlands owe their origin, open their mouthis chiefly towards the weot, which side is rugged, and disphays all the disoriter incident to voleanic regions. The vast bays and ports are msually situated between the voleanoes. Such is the superb lay of loort Royal at Martinique, of Marino, of Kingston in Jamaica, ind of Siant Christopher. There are shme exepptions to this rule, however. A grami hagoon now oweapies the place of areef which anciently existedin the month of the Guaturani valley. At Matinigue, the alluvial phains formed in the hay and hasin of Port Royal, at the manouchure of Monsien liver, and of others mathe ley their rapiol progress, that fur fiw ages they will exhinitit the eflects ohserved at Trinidad, of closing up :an acens from the sea into these rivers. The great isolated roeks, which show up in the sen at varions distances around the Wiest lndian lalands, with a bold and pieturesque andert, have hat a similar origin as the 1. Aands themselves, and have been formed by submarine voleanoes. The most remakable are at Saint Lacia, le (Gross Ilet; at Martinique, be Diamant, the Isle of Ramiers, the Devil's Tuble, tha INe of Suint Aubin, the Curavelle, and the Perle; and at Gumbeloupe, the Isle of Guyave, the Cameme and the Grenada.

The Royal Mail Steam Packets, that ply between Southimpton, the West Iudies, and the spanish Main, go to the little Danish Island of Suint Thomas, where their freight and passengers are distrihutem to other vessels aceording to their desting. Wherefure a Danish Ishand shonlil be thas favoured, wheu Tortola, ant Virgin Gorda, two of the Virgin Islands, both belonging to ourselves, and situated efpually well for the required purpose as is Saint Thomas, has hattled many others hersides ourselves. There is a well-known admilable hadruar at Tortola, the stroughold of the Duteh buccancers. The Islants are alsis preferable to Saint Thomas on the impentant seore of superion hanthimess.

The history of Suint Thomas, and that of its neighbour Sunta Cruz, for thin fortumes have ever been the same, present the same changing somes as most other West Indian INhas. They were first oerapien in 1643 hy the Britshl, und the Dutch: lat jealousies having arisen among them, the Dutch were Iriven out, atter it very obstinate engagement, in 1646 . In 16a0, the bish were in their turn attacked amb overmastered oy the Spmaineris, but the latter hand not possessed the island a single year betore they hal to give way befure thu Freneh, what were sunt out from saint Christopher for the: purpose of serizing it. The West India Iskands hawe always locen hamam as well ats geolugical volemoes. What will be their tuture in the age of iron-chad war vessels just being inaugnrated?

In 1696, the colonists, with thair wives and children and their negroservanto, left the islands, after demolishing the forts, und went to st. Domingo. Thus the islands remanel without colonists, amel without cultivation, till the year 1733, when they were sold by Frauce to a ompruny of Danish mcrohauts. They contimued in the possession of this company till 1801, when they were tiken by the British, by whom they were restored to Denmark in the sime year, somater the 13attle of Copenhagen. The British again took the islands in 1807, and then again restored them in 1814. The Dan's and Swedes now rank among their possesssions in the West Indies, Santa Cruz, Saint Thumas, St. John-whose pretty little town has with charace teristic West India luck been a martyr to tires-and St. Bartholomew, an islet that lus changed hamels as often as a young laly in a country dance. The gronp indeed no longer despre the name of Virgin Stanls, in the sense used in the orient in their Kiz Kalansis, "virgin or uncaptured fortresses," or by the Greeks in their " virgin golless," the Mincerva of the larthenon, "the virgin's house.

Mr. Authony Trollope has so very sketchy and amnsing ill account of his visit to this fivmered, :lehough sickly flace, that we must failn oner more make free with his pages, premising that the prot itw.lt is tipmrel at prige 301 .

As St. Thomas at present exists, it is of consideable importance. It is an emporim, not only for many of the ishands, but for many also of the places on the const of South and Central America. Guiana, Vearzuela, and New (iramala, dend there largely. It is a deprit for cigars, light dresses, brandy, boots, and tall de Colugne. Many men therefore of many mations go thither to make money, and they do make it. These are men, generally not of the tenderest cliss, or who have probilly been nursed in much early retinement. Few men will select St. Thonuas as a place of resilence from mere mbinssed choice and love of the livate. A wine merchant in Lomdon, doing a good trade there, would hardly give up that hominess with the objoct of personally eqeting an establishament in this island: nor would a well-to-do milliner leave Parin with the same object. Men who settle at St. Thomas have most probably roughed it elsewhere unsuceessfully.
These St. Thomas tradesmen do make mouey, I believe, and it in certainly due to them that they shomal do so. Things ought nut, if pussible, to lee all bat with any man; and 1 cannot haggine what gonl can accrue to at man at St. Thmas if it lac not the stoot of the mont matrealdhy inots anming alf these hot and unhealthy regions. I do mot know whether I should not be justified in saying that of all such spots it is the most hot and most unhoulthy.
I have said in a previons chapter that the people one ments there may he deseribed as an Hispanm-Dano-Niggery-Fankee dondle popmation. In thiw 1 referred not only to the settlers, but to thase also who are eonstantly passing through it. In the shops aud atores, amil at the hotels, one meets the sime mixture. The Spmish elment is of course strong, for Vomezuela, Nuw Gramada, Central America, and Mexico are all Spanish, as also is C'uma. The prepple of these lands speak Spanish, and hreabouts are called spmaiads. To the Dheses the island belougs. The soldiems, oticials, and enstom-lfonse prople are bancs. They do not, how ver, mix modh with thin eustomers. They aflect, I beliese, to say that the island is overrnum muldestroyed by thene strange comers, fund that they would as lief be without such visitors. If they are altugether indifferent to nowney making, such uat be the use. Tha labouring people are nill black-if these blaiks can merohants. They conompany till l801, when h, by whom they were we year, som atter the British again took the restored them in 1814. ak among their posses. a Cruz, Saint Thumas, town lats with chatace - martyr to tires-and hais changel hamely as try dance. The group ame of Virgin listamls, in their Kiz Katalsis, s," or by the direks in werva of the l'arthenon, so very vkthely aml isit to this fivoured, must failn oncer more fing that the juite itsolt sts, it is of considerable a, not only for many of the phees on the crast Guiana, Yenezuela, largely. It in a deprit ly, bouts, ami talu de cof many nations go ey to make it. These tenclerest class, or who nuch early rothement. as a place of residence love of the licale. A ig a good trime there, less with the abject of homent in this islanst: $\because$ leave Paris with the St. Thomas have nost usuceessfully.
n do make mouey, I , them that they shath aible, to be all Ind with - what gowl can :urve bhe not the sund of ho hot tent :and wie of Hig :ll thene lout and wo whether 1 :hould nll surf spots it is the ter that the prophe our on. In this I referred a) those also who are Ithersopes and atores, , stane mixture. The troug, for Vicuezuela, 1, mil Mexieo are all people of these lands are ealle ol spaniards. Tho soldierse, otlicials, Daues. They to nut, istomers. They affect, overrun mand ilestroyed it they would us lief be are ultugether indifHay be the casse. Tha -il' these blawks can bo called a lubouring people. They do conl the vessels at about a dollar a day each-that is, when they are so circumstanced as to require $a$ dollar. As to the smerican eloment, that is by no means the slighest or most retiring. Dollars are going there, and therefore it is of course natural that Americans should loc going also.
I saw the other day a map, "The Unitel States as they now are, and in prospective;" and it included all these places-Mexico, Central America, Cuba, St. Domiugo, aul even poor Jumaica. It may be that the man who mude the map naderstool the destiny of his country; int any rate, he understood the tastes of his countrymen.
All these people are assembled together at st. Thomas, because St. Thomas is the meating place and depôt of tho West Indian steam packets.
"They canuot understand at home why we dislike the intercolonial work so much," said the captain of one of the steam ships to me. By intereolonial work he meant the different hranch services from St. Thomas. "They do not comprelenen at home what it is for at man to be burying one young officer after amother; to have them sent out, anil then to see thom mown down in that acenrsed hole of a harbour by yhlow fever: Such a work is not is very pleasant one."
Indeed this was true. The life cannot be a very pleasant one. Theso captains themselves anm their senior ollieers aro woubtless : teclimated. The yellow fever may rewh them, but their chance of essape is wherably goul; but tho young lats who join the service, and who do so at an early age, have at the first commencement of their eareer to make St. Thomas their residonce, as fir as they have any residence. They live, of conse, on board their ships; but the peculinity of st. Thomas is this; that the harhour is ten times more tatal than the town. It is that hole, up by the conling wharwes, which semis so many English lads to tho grave. If this he so, this alone, I think, constitutes a strong reason why Ni. Thomats shonld not be so fatwoured. These vessels now lorm a considorablo theet, and some of them spend nearly a thind of their time at this place. The number of Englishmen so collected and malangered is sufficient to warrant us in regarding this as a great thawhack on any utility which tho islaud may havo-it' such utility there be.
As seen from the water, the view Sit, Thomas presents is very pretty. It is not so much tho general soenery of tho island that pleasos us, as the aspect of the town itsolf. It stands on threo hills or momits, with higher hills, green to their summit, rising behind them. Wheh mount is toppod by a pleasimt, cleanly odifice, ant pretty-lowking houses stretch down the side to the water's edger. Tho buildings to look pretty and nive, and as though chance hal armaged them for a pieture. Inded, as seen from the harbour, the town looks like a pamornma exquisitely printed. The air is thin and transparont, ant every lino shows itself olemrly. As so seen, tho town of St . Thomas is certainly attractivo. But it is like the Dead Sea fruit ; ail the elarm is gone when it is tasted. Land there, and the beunty vanishes.
The hotel at St, Thomas is quite a thing of itself: There is no fair ground for compluint as regurds the uscommolation, considering where one is, and that people do not visit St. Thomas for pleasure ; but tho pople that one meets there forms as striuge a eollection as may perhaps lue found anywhere. In the first plate, all languges seem alike to them. One hears Eaglish, French, German, amd Spunish spoken all mound or 3, and nplurently it is indifferent whiel. The waiters seem to aprak them all.

Tho most of these gursts I take it-certainly a large proportion of them-are revidents of tho place, who boad at tho inn. I have heen there for a week at a time, and it seemed that all then aromed me were so, There were halies among tholn, who always came punctually to their meals, amd went through the long conse of breakfist and long courso if dinner with admirable perseverame. I never saw eating to equal that eating. When I was there the hume was always fill; but the landlorl told the that he found it very hard to make money, and I can beli, we it.
A hot elimate, it is gememally thought, interferes with the "Ipetite, affects, the gastric juices with lassitude, gives to the stomach vome of the apmethy of the booly, and hessens at any rate the comsamption of animal food. That charge camut be made against the air of St. Thumas. Tho whatever swden changes the health may bu subject, no lingering disinelination for fiod alfeets it. Mheneat there as though it were the only solate of their lite, and women also. Probably it is sio.

They never talk at meals, A man and his wife may interolange a worl or two as to the dishes; or men coming from the same store my whisper a syllable as to their colinary desires; but in an whinnry way ther is nu talking. 1 myself genemally am not a mite person at my meals; and haviug dined at sumbry tables d'hote, haver got ower in a great degree that disinclination to speak to wo neightom which is attributed-I believe wrougly-to Euglishmen. But at St. Thomas I tork into my head to wait till I was spoken to; and fir a week 1 sat, twier daily, between thre sume persons, without receiving or speaking a singlo word.
1 whall not swom forget the stout lady who sat opposite to me, and who was married to a little hookednused Jew, who ulways areompanied her. Soup, fish, and then ne:at is the ordinary rule at sueh hampets; but here the tishion is for the guests, having curried favour with the waiters, to get their phates of food lrought in and put round hefore them in little cireles; so that a mam while taking his soup may contemplate his tish and his roast bref, his wing of fowl, his allotment of saliat, lis peets and potatoes, his pmiding, pie, and custard, mul whotover other good things a henerolent and well-tieed waiter may be able to collect fur him. This somewhat crowds the table, und oceasinmally it becomes neeessary for the guest to guarl his treasures with un ongle's eyo; -hers also with an eaghe's eye, and sometimes with un eagle's talon.

This stont lady was great on sueh oceasions. "A lit of that," she would exelnim, with hend half turned roumb, as a man woukd pass behind her with a dish, while sho was in the vory not of unloading within ler throat a whole kniteful chargel to the hilt. The etforts which at tirst athected me as almost ridiculous adraneed to tho sublime as dimner went on. There was no shirking, no lulf measures, no slnekened pnee as tho hreath becemo short. The work was daily done to the final hadf.pound of cheese.

Cheeso and jelly, guava jelly, were alwnys eaten together. This 1 found to be the general fishion of St. Thomas. Some men dipped their eheese in jelly; some ate a bit of jelly und then a hit of cheese; some topped up with jelly and some topped up with cheese, ull bnving it on their plates together. But this lady -she must have spent years in acpuiring the exercise -luad $a$ knaek of involving her cheese in jelly, covering up ly a rapid twirl of her knifo a hit of about an incl thiek, so that uo cheesy surface should touch hor pulate, whd then depositing the pareel, oh, ever so far down, without Iropping above a globule or two of the covering on her bosom.

Her lord, the Inraelite, used to fight hard too; but the battle was always over with hiul long before the lady showed even a sign of distress.

Over and above this I foumd nothing of any general interest at St. Thomas.

III.

Lefeward Islands-iaint Cumistorifer-Nevis-Antigua -Cartbbean lilanis-Gudalotpe-Martinique- D ). minica - Saint Lucia - Saint Vincent-GrenadinesGrenada.

Tue Virgin Islands are at the head of what are designated as the Windward Islands, or the Lesser Antilles; and the British possessions of Saint Christopher, Antigua, Nevis, and others, censtitute a group)

POINTE A PITRE, ouadaloupe.
between them and the French group, of which Guadaloupe is the most important.
In the good old days, Mr. Anthony Trollope remurks, when men ealled things by their proper names, those islauds which rum down in a string from north to south, from the Virgin Islands to the month of tho Orinoco River, were called the Windward or Caribbem Islands. They were also called the Lesser Antilles. The Leeward Islands were, and properly speaking are, another eluster lying aeross the const of Venezucha, of which Curacon is the chicf. Oruba and Margarita ulso belong to this lot, among whieh, England. I believe, never owned any.
After leaving Saint Thomms, the first island seen of any note is Suint Christopher; commonly known as 92

Saint Kitts, and Nevis is elose to it. Both these eolonies ure prospering fairly. Sugar is exported, now I am told in increasing, thongh still not in great quamtities, and the appearance of the cultivation is good. Looking up the side of the hills one sees the sugarcantes appurently in cleanly order, and they have an air of substantial confort. Of course the times are not so bright as in the fine old days previons to emaneipation ; but, nevertheless, matters have been on the mend, and prople are again beginning to get along. On the jommey from Nevis to Antigua, Montserrat is sighted, and a singular island-rock ealled the Redonda is seen very plainly. Montservat, I am told, is not prospering so well as Saint Kitts or Nevis.
These ishands are not so beautiful, not so greenly beautiful, as are those further soutl2, to which we shall soon come. The mountains of Nevis are certainly fine as they are seen from the sen, but they are not, or do not seem to be covered with that delicious tropical growth which is so lovely in Jamaica and Trinidad, and, indeed, in many of the smaller islands.

Antigua is the next, going southward. This was, and perlaps is, an island of some importance. It is mid to have been the first of the West Indian colonies which itself advocated the abolition of slavery, and to have been the only one which adopted eomplete emancipution at once, withont any intermediate system of apprenticeship. Antigua has its own bishop, whrse diocese includes also such of the Virgin Islands as belong to us, and the adjacent islands of Saint Kitts, Nevis, and Montsertut.
Noither is Antigun remarkable for its heauty. It is appronched, however, by an excellent and picturesque harbour, ealled English Harbour, which in former days was much used by the British navy; indeed, I believe it was at onc time the head-quarters of a naval station. Premising, in the first place, that I know very little about harbours, I would say that nothing could be more secure than that. Whether or no it masy be easy for sailing veasels to get in and out with certain winds, that, indeed, may be doubtful.

Gaint John's, the capital of Antigua, is twelve miles from English Harbour. I was in the island only three or four hours, and did not visit it. I am told that it is a geod town-or city, I should rather say, now that it has ite own bishop.
In all these islands they have Queen, Lords, and Commons in one shape or another. It may, however, be hoped, and I believe truated, that, for the benefit of the communities, matters chiefly rest in the hands of the first of the three powers. The other members of the legislature, if they have in them anything of wiedom to say, have doubtless an opportunity of saying it-perhaps also an opportnnity when they have nothing of wisdom.
After leaving Antigua we come to the French island of Guadaloupe, and then poessing Dominica, of which I will may a word just now, to Martinique, which is also Frencl. And here we are among the rich green wild beauties of theme thanice mantififul Oaribbean Islands. The monntain grouping of both these illands is very fine, and the hills are covered up to their summits with growth of the greenest. At woth these islands ane is struck with the great .unperiority of the wrench Weat Indim towns to those which belong to us. That in Guablaloupe is called Basscterre, and the eapital of Martinique is Saint Pierrc. (See page 296). These towns offer remarkable contrusts to Rispau and Port Castries, the chief towns in the adjacent Euglish Islands of Dominien and Saint Lacin. At the French ports one is landed at excellently contrived little piers, with proper apparutus for lighting, and well-kept stejs. The quays are sladed by trees, the streets aro neat and in good order, and the shopss show that ordinary trade is thriving. There are water conduits with elear strcams through the towns, and every thing is slip-shape. I must tell a very different tale when I eome to speak of Dominicn and Saint Lacia.

The reason for this is, I think, well given in a useful gaide to the Went Indics, publishel some years since, under the direction of the Royal Mail Steam-Packet Company. Speaking of Saint Pierre, in Martinique, the author says: "The streets are nent, regular, and eleanly. The houses are high, and have more the air of European houses than those of the English colonies, Some of the streets have an avenne of trees, which overshadow the footpath, and on either side are deep gutters, down which the water flows. There are five booksellers' houses, and the fashions $\varepsilon: e$ well displayed in other slops. The French colonists, whether Creoles ${ }^{\text {a }}$ or French, consider the West Indies as their comutry. They cast no wistful looks towards France. They mariy, educate, and build in and for the West Indies, and for the West Indies nlone. In our colonies it is iliflerent. Thay are considered more as temporary loiging-places, to be deserted as soon as the occupicrs have mado money enough by molasses and sugar to return home."

All this is quite true. There is something very cheering to an English heart in that sound, and reference to the word home-in that great disinclination to the ilea of lifelong banishment. But nevertheless, the effeet as shown in these islands is not satisfactory to the amour propre of an Englishman. And it is not only in the outwari: appearance of things that the French islands excel those belonging to England which I have specially named. Dominica and Saint Lucia export annnally about 6,000 hogsheads of angar each. Martinique exports about 60,000 bogsheads. Martinique is certainly rather larger than either of the other two, hut size has little or nothing to do with it. It is anything rather than want of fitting soil which makes the produce of sugar so inconsiderable in Dominica aud Saint Lucia.

These Freneh islands were first discovered by the Spmiards; but since that time they, as well as the two English islands alove named, have passed backwards and forwards between the English and French, till it was settled in 1814 that Martinique aud Cuadaloupe should belong to France, and Dominica and Saint Lucia, with some othors, to Eugland. It eertainly seems that France knew how to take care of herself in the arrangement.

To my mind, Dominica, as seen from the sea, is by far the most picturesque of all these islands. Indeed, it would be difficult to bent it either in colour or gronping. It fills one with ardent desire to be off and rambling among thowe green morastains-as if one could rambie through such wild, bush country, or ramble at all with the thermomoter at 85 . Bnt when one has only to think of such things without any idoa of doing them, neither the bushes nor the thermometer aro considered.

One is handed at Dominica on a beach. If the water be quiet, one gets out dry-shod by means of a strous jump: if the surf be high, one wales through it ; if it be very high, one is of course upset. The same things happen at Jacinel, in Hayti ; but then Englishmen look on the Haytians as an uncivilised, barbarous race. Sceiug that Dominicn lies just between Martinique and Guadaloupe, the difference between the English heach and surf and the French piers is the more remurkable

And then, the perils of the surf being passed, one

[^15]
ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

nd have more the air the Englishi colonies. venuo of trees, which either side are deep lows. There are five ns $\varepsilon: e$ well displayed aists, whether Creoles ${ }^{1}$ idies as their comerry. wards France. They for the West lndies, In our colonies it is more as temperary soon as the occupiers nolasses and sugar to c is something very in that sound, anil hat great disinclination nt. But nevertheless, nds is not satisfactory shman. And it is not ce of things that the ging to England which inica and Saint Lucia gsheads of sugar each. 00 hogsheads. Martihan either of the other ng to do with it . It is ttiny soil whieh makes crable in Dominica and irst diseovered by the they, as well as the two have passed backwarls lish and French, till it tinique and Guadaloupe I Dominica and Saint England. It certainly - take care of herself in een from the sea, is by these islands. Indecd, it either in colour or 1. ardent desire to be off In mountains-as if one bush country, or ramble 85. But when one has thout any idea of doing - the thermometer aro in $\mathfrak{n}$ beach. If the water i by means of a strons wales through it ; if it pset. The same things it then Englishumen louk vilised, burbarous race. st between Martiaiquo between tho Eaglish piers is the more re-surf being passed, one reole is a person born in the as to the islunds. They may blaek Creoles. People talk those namely which have not It have been bred from in. ord Creole is, I think, some-walks into the town of Roseau. It is impossible to eonecive a more ciistressing sight. Every house is in a state of decadeuce. There are no shops that can properly be so called; the peoplo wander about chattering, idlo and listless; the strects aro covered with thick, rank grass; there is no sign either of money made or of money making. Everything seems to speak of develation, apathy, and ruin. There is nothing, even in Jamaica, so sad to look at as the town of Rosean.
The grenter part of the pepulation are French in manner, religion, and linguage, and one wonld bo so glad to attribute to that fact this wretehen look of apathetic poverty-if it were only possible. But we cannot do that after visiting Martinique and Guadaloupe. It might be satid that a French people will not thrive under British rule. But if so, what of Trinidad? This look of misery has been attributed to a great fire which oceured some eighty years sinee; but when due industry has been at work great fires have usually produced improved towns. Now eighty years havo afforded ample time for such improvement if it were forthcoming. Ahas! it would seem that it is not fortheoming.
It must, however, be stated in farmess that Dominica produces mure coffeo than sugar, :unt that the cuffee estates have latterly heen the most thriving. Singulayly enough, her best customer has been the neighburing Freneh ishands of Martinique, in which some diseme has latterly attacked the coflee plants.
We then rach Suint Lueia, which is also very lovely as scen from the sea. This, too, is an island French in its language, manuers, and religion; perhapa more entiryly so than any other of the islands belonging to ourselves. The laws even are still Freuch, and the people are, I believe, blessel (?) with no Lords and Commons. If I menderstand the matter rightiy, Saint lucia is luld as a colony or possession comquered from the Fromelh, and is governed, therefore, hy a quasi-military governor, with the aid of a council. It is, however, in some measure dependent on the Governor of Barbados.
To the outward physical eye, Saint Lucia is not so triste as Dominica. There is gowl laudiag there, and the little town of Castries, though anything but prosperons in itself, is prosperses in appenrance as compared with Rosenu.
Saint Lucia is peculiarly celehrated for its suakes. Oue cannot walk ten yards ofl the rond-sa one is toldwithout being bitten. And if one be bitten, death is ecrtain-except hy the interposition of a single individual of the island, who will cure the sufferer-for a consideration. Such, nt least, is the report made on this matter. The tirst fuestion one should ask on going there is ats to the whereabouts and ustal terms of that worthy and useful practitioner. There is, I believe, a grent deal that is remarkable to attract the visitor amoug the momitains and valleys of St. Lucia And then in the usual counse, ruming down the island, one goes to that British iulvaneed post, Bar-hados-Barbados, that lies out to windward, guarding the other islands as it were! Burbados, that is aut ever was entirely British! Barbados, that makes money, and is in all respects so respectable a littlo island I King George need not have fared at all; nor yet need Queen Vietoria. If anything goes wrong in Eugland-Niapoleon coming there, not to kiss Her Majesty this time, but to make limself less agrecublelet ILer Majesty come to Barbados, and she will be safe! I have said that Jumnica never boasts, and have on that aecount complained of her. Let such emmplaint be far from me when I sjeak of Barbados. But shall I not write a distiuct chapter as to this most respectablo little inland-an island that pays its way?
St. Vineent is the next in our comre, and this, too, is grem and pretty, and tempting to look at. Here aiso the French have been in possession but complaratively for a short time. In vettling this island, tho chief difliculty the English hate was with the oll native lulians, who more than once endeavourel to turn out their British master:. The contest ended in their being effectively turned out by those British masters, wha expelled them all bodily to the Island of Ruatan, in the Bay of Honduras; where their desceudants are now giving the Anglo-American diplomatists so much troulho in deciding whose sulijects they truly are.

Kingston is the eapital here. It hooks much better than either Roseau or Custries, though by no means equal to Basseterre or St. Pierre.
This island is snid to be healthy, baving in this respect a much better reputation than its neighbour St . Lucia, aud as far as I could learn it is progressingpregressing slowly, but progressing-in spite even of the burden of Queens, Lords, and Commons. The Lords and Commons are no doubt considerably modified by otticial influenes.

And then the traveller puns down the Grenadines, a pretty eluster of i ilanls lying between St. Vincent and Grenada, of which Becquia and Cariacou ubo the chicf. They have no diret eomection with the mail steamers, bat are, I lelieve, under the Governor of Barbalos. They are very pretty, though mut, as a rule, very produetive. Of one of them I was told that the population were all females.
Grenadia will be the last upon the list; for I did not risit or even see Tohago, and of Trinidad I havo ventured to write a separate clapter, in spite of tho shortness of my visit. Grenala is also very lovely, and is, I thiak, the head-quarters of the world for truit.

The town of St. Georges, the capital, must at one time have beren a place of considerable itquortanec, and evin now it has a very different apparanee from thoso that I have just mentioned. It is more like a goolly Euglish town than moy other that I saw in any of the sualler British ishands. It is well built, though built up and down steep hills, and contans harge and comfortable honses. The market place al-o looks like a market-place, and there are shops in it, in which trade is apparently earriod on and money made.

Indert, Grenada was ouce a prince among these smatler islands, having other ishands under it, with in Governor supreme, instend of, trihutary. It was fertile alsin, and proluctive-in every way of insburtance.
Bit now here, ns in so many other spots among the West Indies, we are driven to exclaim, Iehabord! The glory of our Gremada has departet, as las the glory of its great mamesake in the whe word. The honses, though so goodly, are but as so many Alhambras, whose tenants now me by mo means great in the world's esteen.

All the hutels in the West Indies are, as I have satid, or shall say in some other place, kept ly ladies of colour : in the most part by ladies who are no longer very soumg. They are generally called familiarly by their doublo name. Betsey $\lambda$ usten, for instance ; and Caroline Lee. I went to the house of some such lady in St. Georges, and she told me a woetul tale of her.
miscrics. She was Kitty something, I think-anom, npparently, to become Kitty of nnother world. "An hotel," slie said. "No; she kepic no hotel now-a-days -what use was there for an hotel in St. Georgen 1 She kept a lodging-honse ; though, for the matter of that, $n 0$ lodgers ever eame nigh her. That little granddanghter of hers sometimes sold a bottle of ginger beer; that was all." It must be hard for living cyes to see ones trade die off in that way.
The Island of Guadaloupe has somewhat of the form of a crescent, and may be consulered an rather consisting of two islands than of one; for it is divided into two parts by a narrow strait called Sult River, navigable only ly canocs. The sen on the north-west commanicates by this remarkuble channel with the sea on the north-east. The north-west nnd most fertile ${ }^{\text {nart }}$ of the island is divided into Basse-terre and Calms-terre; the eastern and more samly division of it is named Grande-terre. That portion of the island from which the whole takes its nume, is towards the midelle, full of high and rugged roeks, where the elimute is so cold, and the soil se harren, that little vegetation is to be seen. Over the summit of these rocks, the momenain called La Nouftiere, or the Sulphur Mountain, rives to a height of 1,557 Froueh yarls above the level of the sea. This mountain continualy sends furth; through various apertures, a thick black smoke, freymently mingled with sparks of fire. The principal harbourr is called Point ia Pitre, of which we give a skutch at page 305.

Guadaloupe produces sugar, coffer, rum, ginger, cocon, logwool, \&c., and is well stured with horned cattle, sheep, and horses. The prulation "xceeds 100,000 in the relative propurtions of nbent 90,000 negroes, 13,000 whites and 8,000 crecoles, The "xports present a comparative value of 8 to $10,000,000$ lls. of brown and other sugars, $1,000,000$ gallons of $\mathrm{rim}, 1,500,000 \mathrm{lbs}$. of coffiee, 2 to $300,000 \mathrm{Hs}$. of cotion, and 900 to $1000 \mathrm{llis}$. . of cocon. The sketeli we lave given at page 304 is that of a French sugar fictory and its arpurtenanees, with the owher's residenee, in olden times. Windmills have been now generally succeeded hy steam, where there is not water f"wer, and varions otherelanges and improvemenis have heen introduced with the progress of time. We shall, lowever, give some itea of the slow progress with which improvenents are introduced into the West ludin Isliands, as depieted by Mr. Anthony Trellope's graphic pen, in our next chapter, when treating of Barbados, where tho windmill is still in full play, as it is in many of the French Islands.

IV.

Birmados, "a mbspeotable cittle Islant"-Bandertown -les-hoesfs-Hotels and tilig Landianies-Nzonors, Bims, on Creoles-Svoar Plantationgand Factohisa.

Barinados is a respectable, a very respectable little island, and it makes a great deul of sugar. It is not pieturesquely beautifnh, as are almost all the other Antilles, und therefure has but few attractions for straugers.

But thits very absence of scenic beauty has saved it from the finte of its neighbours. A country that is broken into landsenpes, that boasts of its mountains, woods, and waterfalls, that is regarded for its wild loveliness, is seldom propitions to agriculture. A portion of the surface in all such regions defies the inproving firmer. But, beyond this, such ground under the tropics offers every inducenent to the negro squatter. In Jamaicu, Dominica, St. Lutia, and Grenarla, the negro, when emaneipnted, could squat and mnke himself hupy ; but in Barbados there was not an inch for him.

When emancipution came thero was no squatting ground for the poor Barbatinn. He had still to work and make sugar-work quite as hard us he lutd done while yet a slave. He had to do that or to starve. Consequently, labour bas been nbundant in this island, nad in this islund only; and in all the West Indian tronbles it lus kept its head above water, nul male sugar respectable paying twenty shillings in the pound, supporting itwelf, and carning its bread decently ly the sweat of its brow. The pity is that the Barbadians themselves should think so much of their own achens. ments.

As to its appearme, it is, as I have said, totally different from any of the other islands, and to an English eye much less attractive in its character. But fer then hent, its appearance would not strike with ary surprise au Englishman aceustomed to an ordinary but ugly ngriculturul country. It has not the thick tropical foliage which is no nbundnnt in the other islands, nor the will, grassy dells. ILappily for the Barbadians every inch of it will produce cunes; nul, to the credit of the Barlmdians, every inch of it does so. "'her island is something over twenty miles long, and something over twelve miles broad. The roads are excellent indeed, hut so white that they sadly hurt the eye of a strunger.

Brilgetown, the metropolis of the island, is much like a sccond or third-rate English town. It has whe of the gencral peculiarities of the West Indics, except the heat. The strects are narrow, irregular, aid crooked, so that sit first a stranger is apt to miss his way. They all, however, converge at Trafalgor Siguare, a spot which, in Barbados, is presumed to compete with the open simee at Churing Croms hearing the same name. They have this rexemblance, that ench contains a statuo of Nelson. The Marbadian Trufalgar Squre contains also a tree, whish is wore than can be said for its mamesake. There arr good shops in Bridgetown-goonl, respectalle, well-tiolo shopw, that sell everything, from us camlle up to a coffin, incluting wedding.rings, coruls, and widows' canw. But they are hot, fusty, erowiled places, as are such places in third-rate Eaglish towns. A purchase of a pair of gloves in Barbalos drives one at once into the ice-house.

And here it may be well to explain this very peculiar, delightful, but too dengerous West Indian institution. There is something cool and mild in the uame, which makes one fancy that hadies would delight to frequent it. But, nlas I a West Indian iceheuse is but a drinking.shop-a place where one goes to "liquer," is the Americans call it, without the knowledge of the feminine ereati $\cdot \mathrm{n}$. It is n drinkiag shop, at which the irnughts aro all eool, aro all iced, but at whieh, alas! they me also strong. The brandy, I fenr, is as essential as the icc.

There is a mystery about hotels in the British West Indies. They aro always kept by fat, middle-agcl eoloured ladies, who have no husbands. I never found an exception, except at Berbice, where my fricud Paris Brittain keeps open doors in the city of the slecjers.
nd this, such ground ducement to the negro aica, St. Lucia, and ipatel, could squat and arbados there was not ere was no squatting He land still to work shard as he had done do that or to starve. bundant in this island, a all the West Indian above water, and made shillings in the pound, * bread decently by tho is that the Barbadians h of their own adhere:
an I have snid, totally lauds, and to an Englisila hatncter. But for the strike with any surprise an ordinary lut ugly not the thiek tropical the other islands, nor ily for the Barladians anes ; and, to the eredit it does so. The ishand is long, ant something he roads are excellent sadly hurt the ege of a of the ishanul, is much glish town. It has wne the West Indies, excent narrow, irregular, and anger is apt to miss lis convergo at Trafalgar ludos, is presumed to it Cluming Cross leariug this resemblunce, that Jelson. The Barbadian o a tree, which is more revake. Thero are good resplectable, well-ti-do in a camille up to a coffin, uls, and willows' cup. viled $p^{\text {laces, as are such }}$ owns. A purchatse of a ives one at once intu the to explain this very dengorous West Iudian ing cool and mild in the aney that ladics would alas I a Wust Indian ice--a place where one goes cans call it, withont the sati $\cdot n$. It is a drinking. are all cool, aro ull icel, ilso strong. Tho brandy, c. rotels in the British West apt by fat, middleaged no husbands. I never Berbice, where my fricud doors in the city of the

As a rule, there is not much to be said agninst these hotels, though they will not come up to the ideas of a traveller who has been used to the inns of Switzerland. the table is always plentifully supplied, and the viands gencrally gool. Of that at Barbados I can make no complaint, except this; that the people over the way kept a gray purrot which never ceased screaming day or uight. Otherwise than on this score, Miss Caroline Lee's hotel at Birbados is very fair. Aud as for hot piekles-she is the very queen of thom.
The inhabitants of Barlados are, I believe very nearly 150,000 in number. This is a grenter population than that of the whole of Guinna. The negrocs here differ much, I think, from those in the other islands, not only in manner, but even in form and physiognomy: They ure of heavier build, broaler in the face, and higher in the forehead. They are also certainly less grod-humoured, and more inclined to insolence; so that if anything be gained in intelligence it is lost in conduct. On the whole, I think thant the Barbados negroes are more intelligent than others that I have met. It is probable that this may come from more continual occupation.

But if the black people differ from their brethren of the other islands, so certainly to the white people. Ono soon learns to know a-Bim. That is the name io which they themselves delight, and therefore, though thero is a sound of slang about it, I give it here. Themost freculiar distinction is in his voiee. There is nlways a nasal twang about it, but quite distinct from the masality of a Yankee. The Yankee's word rings slarp though his nose ; not so that of the first-class Binu. There is a soft drawl nbout it, nud the sound is seldom comphetely formact. The effect on the ear is the same as that on the hand when a man gives yon his to shake, and insteal of shaking yours, holds his own still.
The Bims, as I have said, are generally stout fellows. As a rule they are larger nul fairer than other West Indinn Crcoles, less delicate in their limbs, and more elumsy in their gait. The male graces are not much studied in Barbados. But it is not only by their form or voice that you may know them-not only hy their voice. but hy their words. No people ever pruised themselves so constantly; no sut of men were ever so assured that they and their uccupations are the main pegs on which the world hangs.

It is certainly the fact that they to make their sugar in a very old-fashioned way in Barbados, using wincmills insteal of stean, nud that you see less here of the improved machinery fur the manufacture than in Demerara, or Cuba, or Trinidad, or even in Jamaica. The great answer given to objections is that the old system pays best. It may perhaps do so for the present moment, though I should doubt even that. But I nm certain it caunot continue to do so. No trade and no ugriculture can ufford to dispense with the improvements of science.

I fund some here who acknowledged that the mere produce of the cano from the land had been pressed too far by mous of guano. A great crop is thes procured, but it appears that the soil is injured, and that the sugar is injured also. The canes, moreover, will not ratoon as they used to do, and as they still do in other parts of the West Indies. The cane is planted, nad when ripe is cut. If allowed, another cane will grow from the same plant, and that is a ratoon ; and agaia a third will grow, giving a third crop from the same plant ; and in many soils a fourth; and in some few many more; and one hears of eanes ratooning for twenty years.

If the same amount and quality of sugar be produced, of course the systen of ratooning must be by fir tho cheapest and most profitable. In, I believe, nost of our colonics the seeonl crop is as good as the tirst, and I understand that it used to be so in Barmados. But it is not so now. The ratoons almost always look poor, and the seeond ratoons appear to be hardly worth cutting. I believe that this is so much the case that many Barbados phanter's now look to get but one crop only from each planting. This falling off in the renl fertility of the soil is, I think, owing to tho use of artificial muure, such as guano.

Thero is $n$ system all through these sugar-growing comutries of lurning the ungiss, or trash; this is the stalk of the came, or remnant of the stall after it comes through the mill. What would be said of an English agrieulturist who burnt his straw? It is I believe one of the soundest laws of agriculture that the refuso of the crop shonld return to the ground which gave it. To this it will be answered that the English agriculturist is not called on by the necessity of his position to burn his striw. He has not to boil his wheat, nor yet his heef nud mutton; whereas the Barbados firmer is obligel to boil his crop; At the present moment the Barbados farmer is unler this obligation; but he is not obliged to do it with the refuse produee of his fields. He cannot perhaps use coals immediately under his boilers, but he can heat them with steam, which eomes pretty much to the same thing.
Even in Barbalos, mumerous as aro the negroes, they certainly livo an easier life than that of an English labourer, earn their moncy with more facility, and are more independent of their masters. A gentleman having one hundred and fifty families living on his property would not expect to obtnin from them the labour of above ninety men at the usual rate of pay, and that for not more than five days a-week. They live in great comfort, and in some things are beyond measure extravagant.
"Do you ubserve," said a lady to me, "that the women when they walk never hold up their clresses."
"I certainly lave," I nuswerec. "Probably they are but ill shod, and do not care to show their feet."
"Not at all. Their feet lave nothing to do with it. But they think it coonomical to hold up their petticoats. It betokens a stingy, saving disposition, and they prefer to show that they do not regard a few yurds of muslin more or less."
This is perfectly true of them. As the shopman in Jamaica said to me: In this part of the world we must never think of little economies. The very negroes are ashamed to clo so.
Of the coloured peophe I satw nothing, :xeept that the shops are generally attended by them. . They seemeid not to be so numerons as they are elsewhere, and are, I think, never met with in the socicty of white people. In no instance did I meet one, anol I am told that in Barbudos there is a very rigid adherence to this rule. Hucled, one never sccms to have the altermative of sceing them; whereas in Jamaica one has not the altornative of avoiding them. As regards myself, I would rather have been thrown among them.

I think that in all probability the white settlers in Barbalos have kept themselves more distinct from the negro race, and have not at any time heen themselves ' so hurdened with coloned chiliben as in the case mese where. If thia he so, they certainls weserve ardit tor theiz prudenet.

Here aldo there is a King, Lords, and Commens, or :a governor, a comeil, and an assembly. The council consists of twelve, and are either chosen ly the Crown, or eni y their seat by virtue of office helit loy apmintment from the c'row. The governor in peran siat in the comeil. The assembly consists of twenty-two, who are ammally elected by the parishes. Nom hat when men do wote at these clections, though no doudt a black man emble ote, if a black natu were allowed to ohtain : frechoht.

Here, as elewhere through the West Indies, one mento with monomded hoppitality. A man whe dimes ont on Monday wilt receise probably thee invitations for 'Inesilay, and six for Wommshay. And they ratertain very well. That hauneh of mitten and thrker which are now the bughar of the English dinuer-giver do not seem to trumbe the minuls of lamet the talle of West Indiau housts.
And atter all, harbalis-litth Enghanda it dhbles
 It owes no man anything, pays its own way, and never makes a poor monith. Let us say what we will, seifrysyect in a finw quality, and the Darbatime certainly enioy that. It is a very tine quality, and amemblis leals to respert from others. They who have methine to say for thamander will sellomi fime wher to way much for them. I hereftere repeat what I said at tirst.
 sidering the limitell extent of its acreage, it the make a great deal of sugar.

V.

 geesthes of Comite fmmobalos ast lathote - fiob.

 Lake.
Nosemery ean he mow pinthrespue than that aftorded by the entrance to Port of Spain, the chaef town in men donbthess know. is the semblummont of the Wiat hidian inhums, and lies acerose the delta of the Oriunco that it bearly rembers with twe horms two difloment

 in betwern the is!and and the manimal annewhat an j- han (iulf of Shexico ly the i wand of enba: only that the froprotions heve ure mull has in size. This inclosen sea is calloul the ciulf if louria.

The two whet town- in Triminal are sithated in this bay That which in the lar ger, itul the seat of govern.
 northern hom. Sian Fermumb, the other, whin is anroumied by the finest sugar districts of the ianam, is on the other side of the lony and new the wher hom.

Tho piosares intu the inelosed sert on either sile ate ardinary appond, from binglum on the other ishants is be the mere notherin entrane Were there are hame basuges, of which the midn'lo the largest onv, the ishad is need ley the whuners in fine weather, mol i ly fir the prettiost. Through this, the Roma di Monat, or monkey's month, wo approachel Port if spant These merthern ontrances are malled the Dragen's months. What may be the natieal didionme bet ween the mouth of a dragon and that of a serpent $\lceil$ did but learn.

On the manland, that is the land of the main ishand, the wost is precipitons, hat elothed to the very the with the thickest and mont maguificent fuliage. With an operaghas one can distinutly see the tres coming forth from the sides of the rocks ans though nowil were necessaly for them, and not "reu a shelf of stome mented for their support. And these are not shruts, hat firest trees. with grand sprading bramehes, huga tronks, and brilliant eoloured foliage. The small islame on the other side is ahmost "pually wowden, hat is lows peripitons. This: little islamel in the goond ald day, regretted by mon a few, whon phaters were phands, and slaves were slawes, problucel eutton up to it ary hill-tops. Now I believe it yiedds othine lout the grass fire a liow cattle.

Gur stemerer as she wot will into the low drew mom th the shome of the large island, and as we paswe along amoks made themolves visilh ledow the rock the very spots for picnics. There wats me narrow shaly valley, into which a rerek of the sea ran up, that mas have been math liw such purposes, vither for that, wh fir the hess misy jova of sone P...n of Trinilad with his ('reve Virgima.
$\Lambda_{r}$ we steamed om a little liuthre werme to , whaling estahlishment. Ldens of whalinge etabli-hnentunturatly connect themselses with iorteregs :mbl the North Pok. but it secons that there are rawe of whates as there are of men, proper to the trephes as will nes to the poles: and some of the firmer here romer me therir aily tributes. From the look of the phace I sh mhl hot say that the temde was homishing. 'The" whaling huts are viry picturesque, but ho motsig moll fio the commeresial coterpisis of the proprictors.

From them we went on through many smaller islamk to Port of Spain. This is a large + wn, exallatly well haid out, with tho streets romining all at right anglesto tach wher, as is now so comment in buw tom no. Tha spaces have lwon prepared for a mueh layger pumber tion than that mow exinting, su that it is at preand straggling, mufillow, amd full of gaps, But ha, dime will come, and that leffore long, when it will be the best town in the Rritish Wost Lndies. Thame is at present in lort of sipin a degree of remmerpial enterprise puite milike the shapliness of Thasicit on the "pather of the sumber inhends.

Trinitad is a large ishat, great portions of whim am hut wey imperfectly kmow ; of which but rumpat tively a wey math fart has been cultivated. Daring the last tight on ten yars, tom on twolse thomand inmigrants, chantly rooslies from Matras :mal 'aldenten.

 its aports ly two hiarda:
lmmediately romal Part on'spain the combitry imagnilient, num the viows from the town it whe aro very lovely. Exactly behind the town, presminy the sea to bue the frome, is the Sivammath, a large inelowed.
 l'ark of 'rimidal. I was bid that the drive round t

Es, the Roma di Mona, ched Port if Spuin. called the Imagnis ead ditlernom bet ween of a serpeat $I_{\text {did }}$ lout mit of the mair istand, thed to lhe vory tup aifient folliage With see the trees roming 1sis thongh mosoil were 1 shelf of stona neraled not slarulus, lant tirent -hes, luge trunks, ime small island on the meel, lat is less per I the frowl ald diys, l:aters wern platers, cuttorn י! to its wer elds. .othinis liut the to the loora drew now had as we phsemb alongs es, Soft-yren milions low the roclis the wers - urrow shady vallos n up, that must have her firy thiat, we for the rinidal with his (Crendr firther we exme to , whalinge establi:lune nts. ath iowherers :cml the at there aro races of turmer har momber ul leark at tlue filate l wats thombling. 'Tla e, hut du mut sily mach tho proprinters. ch many smaller islamds - wn, veroll utly well all at rioglt amging tor in nuw tumas. The much larger pumbat that it is at preont gips. lat tha time is wlon it will lo the ; Imbies. 'I'lurre is at logrea af cmaturextial u'se of' Jinn:ix: on the tportions of whidn ate - whied hut complasi 1 cultivated. Waring twolve thotsumd imWmiras and Colcuta. d, forming mow ubove ulation : wand the conINs, from | asid by comethed and

Spain the rombtry io the town it:sif :m - town, patsuming the mata, it large ine lomed, ruce-conse and Ityd hat the drive rownd t was three English miles in length ; but if it besumeh, the little pery which took me that drive in a hired buggy must hiave lne en a fast trotter.

On the further side of this lives the Governor of the island, immediately under the hills. When I was there the Ciovernor's renl house was being repared, and the great man was living in a cottage havi by. Fere I that great man I shonld le tempted to wish that any great house might always be under repair, for I mever satw a more perfect specimen of is pretty spacions cottage, opening as a cottage se mhe do on all sides and in every direction, with n irnat eomplexity as to duors and wialows, and it delicious ficility of losing one's way.

On the other side of the Savannali nearest to the town, ind lirectly upposite to those luvely hills, are a lut of villat residences, and it womld be inu, wsible. I imarine, to find a more lovely site in whin't to tix one's bonse. With the sivannah for it foregromul, the rising gardens behind t'to Governor's honse in the midillo distance, and a panomma of magnificent hills in the back of the pieture, it is larrlly within the eompass ot a nims eve und imugimation to add anything to the scene. I had promised to call on Major -_, who was then, and perhipos is still, in eommand of the detachment of white troops in Trinidid, and I foumd him ind his young wife living in this spot.
"And yet yote abuso Trinidis]," [ said, pointing t" the view.
"Oh ! people ean't live altogether upen views," "slie answered: "and besides, we have to go latek to the barmacks. 'l'he yellow fever is over now."
The only phea at which I cane ancoss any vestiges of thi yellow fever was at Trinidad. There it had been makinis droadfin havoe, and chietly among the white sollierx. Aly visit was in March, and the virulence of the elisease was then just over. It had hren raging, therefore, not in the sammer but during the winter monhis. Inteed, as fax us I couhl learn, sumume and winter hal very little to do with the matter.

At this time a part of the Navamah was covered with teats, to whieh the soldiers had leen moved out of their barmaks. The hameks re lewer down, near the showe, at a place enlled St. Jiumes, und the loce lity is suid to be wretchenly unbealthy. At any mate, tho men were stricken with tiver there, and the proportion of them that died was very great. I believe, indeed, that handly any recovernal of those on whom the bever fell with my violence. They ware then removed mon these tents, inid matters began to mend. 'They were now about to rehurn to their barracks. and were, I was told, as unwilling to do so as my fair triemed was to leame leve pretty house.

It certainly seems that no eare las been taken to select luenthy aboides for the tronpes at Trinidal. 'The barmeks are flaced very low, nul with hills immediately aromd them. The good efferet prodneed by remosing then to the Navnomh-a very inconsiderahlodistanes; not, ns I think, mueh exceeding a mile-proves what may be done by ehoosing a healthy sitmation, lint why should not the men be taken ily to the momitains, is has been done with the white soldiers in dannacia! There they wre phaced in burracks some three or four thonsand feet above tho sea, und are perterely healthy. Tint in 'l'rinidad this may be done quite as casily, mid indeel at a lesser distance, and thereforo with less cost, than in Jumaien.

Under such circumstumes white men must, I presume, do the work. A shilling a diny is an object to them, and they are slow to blow ont their own brains; hat they shouk not be buracied in swamps, of mule to live in in air more pestilential than necessary.

My hostens, the lady to whon I have allmided, had been attacked wost virulently by the yellow fever, and I hand he vil in the other inhands that she was dead. Her caso had in wed been given ap as hopeless.

On the morning aitur my arival $I$ took in ride of some sixteen miles through the toming before breakfist, and the same laty accompanied me. "We must start very carly," shos saill ; so as to avoid the heato [ will have tollee at halt-past four, and we will be on horsebnck at five."

I have had something to say as to early hours in the West Indies lectiner, and hardly emedited this. 1 moraing start at dive asmally means half past seven, and xix oclock is a generic trim for moviug before nine. So I meekly asked whether half-past four meant halfpisti four. "No," sulid the hushamd. "Yes," siad the wife. Sol 1 went away declitring that I would present myself at the lonse at any rate not atter five.

And so I diel, acembing to my own very excellent wateh, which had been set th: day hefure hyy the ship's cinonometer. I vole up to the deor two minates hefare five, proteotly certan that 1 shonld have the pleasure of watehing the sum's enty manomares for at lenst an lour. lbut, alas! my friend hand been waiting fin mo in her riding-hahit for more than that time. Our watehes werr frighthally at varialles. It was purticetly clear to me that the 'rimidnatians do not take the sun for their guide as to time. J3ut in such a plight as was then mine, a man enmot in into his cvidence and his justitictition. ily only plea was tor meley; and I herelly take it on mysulf to say that I do not know that I aver kept any linly wating betore-mecept my wite.

At five to the moment-by my watel-we sarted, and I cortanly never rode for thre houss carough mome lovely secuery. It tirst, also, it was delicionsly conl, and ts our roal lay entixely through wooks, it was in every way delightful. We went back into the hills, and retumed agnin townds the sea-shore over a break in one of the prurs of the momatain calles the Sambe; fiom whence we hath a distant viens into the istand, as fime as ally view I aver sitw withont the adijunct of water:

I should inagine that a tour thomerh the whole of 'lundal wombl richls repay the trouble, thagh, indead, it would be trombhesme." The tomist must take his own provisions, undes, indeed, he provided limself by meins of his gun, mul most take also his bed. The musipuitues, too, ne very vexations in Trinidud, though I harrlly think that a ley come 11 in in vom to their brethren in Lritish (Guianit.

The tirst portion of our ride was delightful ; bit on onr retarn we came down upon a loot, dusty roab, and then the loss of that hour in the mor ing was deeply felt. I think that in, th that tim, I hationever encomitered subl heat, und eertanly hal nevil met with a mores disigurecable, troublesome amomut of hlast, all which wonld have been avoided had 1 inquiwed over-night into the eiremmstanees of the Trinidal watches. Dut. tha lady mid never a wond, and so hea mater of time on my heme, in adelition to the consuming tlanes of that evre-te-he-rmembered sun.
 that the $\mathrm{p}^{\text {rophle menk Euglish; mal one's seeond inlea }}$

when that other one as to tho English has fallen to the gromul, is that they should speak Spuish, seeing that the name of the place is Spanish. But the fate is that ther all speak French; and, ont of the town, but fow of the matives preak anything else. Whether a Parisim would admit this may be doubted ; lint ho wonld have to acknowledge that it was a French patuis.

Aud the religion is limmu Cathodic. The island of eonse did lubong to Fince, and in mamers, habits, language and religion is still Freuch. There is a Roman Catholie archbinhop resident in Trinidad, who is, 1 helieve, nt present mat Italian. Wie pay him, I have been told, some sal.n.". which he declines to take for his own use, but app is a Roman Catholic e. noses of charity. There very ngly building it is.

The form of govermment wo is different from that, or mather those, which have been tulopted in the other West Indian colonies, such an Jamaisa, Barmulos, amid British cinima. As this was a comperem echany, the people of the inland are not allowed to have so potent a voice in their own management. They have mo Hotse of Commons or Legislitive $A$ ssembly, hat take suela rules or laws as may he meensury tor their guidance dirent from the thown. The govenm, hawever, is assivtel by a comacil, in which sit the ehef executive ofteers in the islime.

A seientific surver has just been completed of this islaud, with reference to its mineme proluctions, and the result hats beed to show that it contains a very large guatity of eoal. 'Therw is also here in 'Trinidan a great pitel lake, of which all the world has heard, and out of which that indetiatigalle old here, the late Lord Dundomid, tried harl to make wax candles and oil tin burning. 'The oil and candies, indeen, he did make; hut sot, I fiar, the money which shouk have been conseguent upon their fabrication.

V1.

mitish guiana.

The Besh-Mocstaliss - Simannalls - Lake Annuent -
 - miman heroolyhie-Catamacts - cumak ponon-Nambis-listomical. Dipsodis-Aninal Lepe- quad. nevels-Mians-Merthes-Insects.
It is surprising how little is known of British tiniana. Take up any modern work on geography, and you will find something the following elliet :- "Tho whole const is so that, that it is seareely vibibe till the shore lias secen touchen; the tops of the trees only are seen, and even sem to be growing ont of the sea-nothing of varied seenery is prexented to the cye-little is beheld but watur and wood, which seem to conceal every appemante of had. The same sombre aid monotonons apmatace is presented in the interior to those fow curinus indiviluils who have endeavoured to penctrate intu those recesses of the torest, by the mumeroms opruings which nuture has made by the strenns which sucessively augmant the Curentin, the Berbice, the Deneram, aul the Essegueho."

Suelan piet, re of Guinm is perhaps the lenst correct that could bi ossilly given. True it is that this extensive territ y in lagely oncircled aml intersected by ifvers, whin present the ahmost mparalleled hydrogiaphie phenumelous of flowing in alnost uninterripted communieation throughout the land. But, notwithstanding this peeulinrity, the iaterior of Guana presents a very diversifiod surfaeo, and muoh contrinted configuration. Sueh ignornnce of the cembtry is would describe it either as an ishomed or a mud-that is now no longer tolerable.
"Before the arrival of the European," says Dr. $1)_{\text {alton, }}$ "the lofty mountain heights of the interior, the fertile and unduhating valleys of the hilly region, and the borders of the illimitnble forests and sarnmmahs, were alone teamed ly the various tribes of Indians who were scattered throughont this vast domain. Their fiagilo canoes were occasionally seen gliding along the large rivers and the numerous tributary streams which intersect the comentry; a dense mass of murivalled foliage, comprising palins mangroves, comridas and ferns, fringed the banks of tho rivors and the margins of the consts; while a thicker bush of an intinite variety of treas extended inhand over an uncleured territory, where the prowling beast, the demuled reptile, tho wild hird, and the noxious insect rommed at large. But when colonisation commenced and civilistiou progressed, the that hands bordering on the coasts and rivers were cleared and rultivated, the satage toment and their ocenpunts retreated before the enornaching step of civilisation and the march of industry, plantitions were haid out, cmats and trenches elug, roals fommed, and houses ruised over tho level plain of nlluvial soil, whieh, without a hill or elevation of any kind, stretches fir many miles betwoen the sand-liill regions and the Atlantic Ocean."

Once in sight of the land the seene rapitly change. in appeazanee-from a long, low onthine of hush to the diflerent objects whioh chatacterise the attractive scenery of the tropics. The bright green tralat trees, with their huge leaves fanned briakly by the sea breeze, and the lofty silk cotton-tree aro plainly vi, ible; while a contised, hat picturesque group of treas and phants of tropical growth, with whito and shiming houses interspersed among them, present to the Nt rauger rather the appeazance of a large gavden than the site of 'an extonsive and busy oity.

This low wooded alluvial traet extonds inland to variablo distanees, fiom tem to forty miles, and is almunt level throughout its whole extent. It is suceremed ly a rango of umproductive sand-hills mod samil-tidges, which attain an olevation varying from thirty to ons humdred and tweuty foet. These sand-hills rejose upon roek, mad beyond thom the land is covererl with trees auch shrubs, constituting what is calleal the "Tho Bush."

The monntatins of British Gruana "re so the remored from the const, and we so dittieult of necesm, as to he rarely sevol liy the inlmbitants. Yet ne there many dillerent mages and gromis, for the most pirt granitie, norn or luss wooded, and varying in devation from one to four and even tive thousand feet. Anung them is the fimmons Romima, or "red roek," a romirkable samlstone group which rises 7500 feet above the mecipice. These shaprombens walls mons perpembienlar as if ereeted with the plumi-line: nevertheless, in: some parts they arn overhung with low shruls, white

1 The History of British Guianct eompuishg a hemernl Deseription of the Colony; "I Nmativo of Nomo of the I'rineryal Svonts from tho Barderst lewiod of its Bisenvery 10 the lbwent 'Time; togother with an Acemat of' its Climate, (Zeology, staple I'rouluets und Natural Ilistory. Isy Itenry (I. Malton, Ni. U., de: 2 vols, Longmin, Hrown, Hiren, and lomganis, land. But, notwithaterior of Guima ne mid much eontmintel of the country as would or a mud-liat is naw:

European," says Dr heights of the interior, ys of tho hilly region, forests mud savamahs, crions tribes of Indinns this vast domain. 'Their' seen gliting along the cributary streams which se muss of univalled ngroves, comridas and rivers aul the margins $\mathbf{r}$ bush of in infinite and over an unelared past, tho clecaded reptile, insect roamed nt large. enced anal civilisation ring on the coasts and ted, the savaige forests before the enorraching rels of inulustry, plantitad trenches dug, roads or the level plain of ill or elevation of any * between tho sand-hill
o scene rapidly change. low ontline of bush to meterise the attractive wight green palm-trees, ne hriekly by the sea -tree are phinis , isible; que group of trees :mul ithl white and shining 1. present to the strauger ga garden than the site tract extends inland to forty miles, nud is :lanust mit. It is suceeroled by hills und sandrritges, ying from thirty to own se sand-hills repuse upon ul is covereri with trees s ealled the "The Burh." riana "re so fiar remoren icult of access, an to he Yet are there many for the most part grial varying in clevation theusund feet. Anumg r " red rock," a romark\%os 7.500 tret nhove the fent presenting a mural alls, me as perpemtionlar Hine: nevertheless, in with low shrubs, while mat sompnislur a liehrpal wo of some of the 'rimeyal its bireawery to the l'rusemb its thimate, (feoloky, stryitc Henry U. Dalton, M.D., At ad lougglumbs,

In their face rush mumerons ensemles, which, filling from this enormons hotght, flow in tifferent directions fo form the tributaries of threr of the largest civers in Sonth Americar ; mamely the Amazon, the Orinoce, and the Esscinela.
Rumantio nom pootical as are the sublimities of nature, they are duty apreceiated by the . Inclims. Tleeir traditions and angs bear comstant allusion to this magniticent seenery: Tn their lances they sing of "Romima, the red-rorked, wrapped in chouls, the everfertile somren of streatus;" and in conseynunce of the darkness which frequently prevails when thick elomes hover abont its smmit, it is likewise eallhel the Night Mountain; "of Romina, the rel-rocked, I sing, where with laybreak the night still prevails."
These mommain ranges are inhabited by varions tribes of Indians, who lise chistly by hunting; and inclosed betwen the same roeky regions, the rest of the fice of the countre is maked by a fiew, liut grand fertures-snch as wife-sprent savmuahs, illimitahle forests, undulating phain, ind gigantic rivers.
There are several kimls of satamabs. Some are merely harge tracks of wwimpy lamd, covered with tall rank grasses, the alonde of reptiles and alpuatic himp: but some of them are also well whapted fir grazing. A seend varioty are more inland, of greater extent-extending to about 14,410 spmare miles-numatains sur-lew stimed troes, traversed hey tortnoms stremme whise of trees, ainl with here and there tufts of trees like verdant inles in tha phian.
Upon thene anvimuah in the celebrated Lake Arnum, whose water doring the spasinn of inmation ane said to thay eastward and westwam, and which, necording to Sehomburgh, wat oner the bued of :an indand lake, which, hy une of thene eata-tryhno of which even hater times give us ex:mples, broke its farier, fincing for its watern a $\mathrm{P}^{\text {ath }}$ to the Athantic.
A third deseription of savamals are of varging extent, lint are marked $1, y$ an entire absenee of hills or irvegularitien ot any kinh : buce the term lhans. or phins, which have fieron applied to thou bey some:

 punpas of Sunth Ameriea). They present a rich cowring of verdure during the ming senson, hat in the monthe of drophtt the rarth asomes the "plyanme of a desert. The turf becomes redned to pawder, the carth gapes in huge crack. The crocodibs and prent acrunter liw in a dormant tate in the drien mud, until the return of rains and the rise of the waters in the great rivers, which thoolitig the wat axpmese of hew surfice, awake them then their slumbers. These sterile savamels are the deerts of the American continent.
"Fur difliment to the barren savamman," Dr. Daltum remarks," are the mugntiont forests which prement to the eye an manding garment of green, varying in tint from the darkent to the ligh est hus: Hern are to he seen majestie trees, larew and statelior than the oak; lere entwine in volupthan- numbence numerons phant vines, interlacing and emerelmg the harger trees, and numed by the emonists lmshi-mpers (lizues). Ihere slomish the varietios of the forad-leaved palms, the numerous mative fruit tree. whd a host of others posimesaing medicinal and other calmble perperties, whilst minute moses, inmmetabla lichens, mud a variety of ferns and parasitic plants erowi together in sociad luxurianer ; orehideons plants in annaing numbers, perched on the gigantic and forked bramehes of trees, seeking only for" a resting place, appear to inhale from the air ahne (though so densely crowded by inhabitants) thin pabulam which supports their eapricions and singuar existence:"
Not alone are trees, and shrubs, and plants glorying in cexistenee, hat the forest, still and silent us the grave, is yet a city for the reception of all things living, savo man. Yet anill this appareat silenee, should one listen attentively, he luars a stiled somal, a continmed murnur, a hum of inseets that fill the lower stratit of the air. Nothing is more alipiped to excite in mam a sentiment of the extent and power of arganic life.

Myrinds of inserts crawl on the gromal, and flater mond the plants seowed by the sun's heat. A confused noise issues from every hush, from the deenyed tronks of trees, the fissures of the rocks, and firm the grom, which is undermined ly lizath, millepoeds, and blind worms. It is a vice proclaining to us that all mature hreathes, that, mader a thomsal diflerent forms, life is diffised in tha eracked and dusty soil as in the Insom of its waters, and in the air that cirenates atromel us.
Timber trees in every varioty, finit trees in anstonishing profinion, modicinal plants of singular ellicacy, shoubs and tlower phants in inexhanstibl momhers, an fomi within these fruitful forests, in whose hamehes nesthe a world of birds. The shitll serean of the parrot at morning amb evening rembs the nib, while phaintive and slow strains may be heard at times from the mann and the prwie. The rich phanage of the momerons bid trimes, and their peenliar and varied mites, form a marked conthatst to the mute lant grand assemblage of hiving phants, 'The magnitude and graubur of these vast forents are ahost incredibhe, wite to eye-witnesses. Tho Indian, the melamholy. lond of the soil, atone appreciates their gorgeous benty and sunthing solitules.
Next to the homdless forests come the magnificent rivers of Ginima; with their moble expmase of waters, their heantiful wonded ishimds, thair picturesime catamets, their londy but rombintio semery, and their sedmed creck, the resort of savag bamminm.

But it is mot in the neighbumbinal of the consts, nor near the kanks of the rivers, although even there the luxurime of the foliago and beadth of water are very striking, that the most remarkahle seches and ohyects which are mot with in the intering of British Guian present themedse to natioe The traveller must pass by the maritime portion, mul heave hehind hin the interminable forests; he must asemal the rivers, and summent the namemestapids and cataracts; he must quit the eppable but renervating temperature sumbtone leeights, in arder to anpreciato all the gramdeur wad hanty of the seencery ; and to traer with awe, stud the wonled plains and wandering stream:

Aceoreling tor Sir Rokett Sohomburgh, the greatent seolygieal wonder of Guiam is the A tataipu, or Devil's Rack. This singular tow is wor the lim about 3.0 fiet, almere which rises a mass of sumite devodid of all vegetation, in a pramidal form, for nhont 550 teet mure. At another ynt, a remamble hasulic eoham, Piaph, or tho Pedted tree, oceppies the smant of a small hillork, about 50 feet high. A portiun of another group of columnare basalt, which also terminates on the group of columnin basalt, which atso terminates on the summit in one abrupt pillar, about oo feet in height, has hoen assimilated hy the Indians to the Maroca-a large rattle male of the fruit of the calabash-tree, filled with pebbles, feathets, and smake-teeth, and which is the indispensalice instrument of the Piathary, Piai-man, of Indian sorcerer, during his conjurations. Another group of columar trap-rocks has been eilled the gravatree stump. The Indians have a very primitive taidition of a good spinit turning everything to stome which he thached; henee every roek whioh is of more than ordinary size, or tantastically shaped hy nature, is compared to some hiri, imimal, on tree, petritied by the powerfiul Makunama.

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

Granite roeks, well known for the fantastic shapes which they assume in varions comentries, and for their peculiar decomposition into globnlar masses and rocking stumes, present the same peenliarities here as Msewhere, and to a rather remarkable extent. Pilos of granite are met with on the Esequelio rising to a height of 140 to 160 fect. One pile cemsists of three hage hoeks, resting mur ahove the other. Another of a promidad shape attains nearly to the height of 200 fiet. These "giants of the hill," as Mr. Witerton has termed then in his Wianderings, are hoth of them inaecessible.

It is in this mighbourhool that the rude ani fameiful hieroglyphics, ealled "pieture-writiug" by the Indians, are met with. "The figures represented are of the most variel and singular deseription-rude outlines of birds. animals, men and women, and even large vessids with masts. Characters have a! buren met with which have been supposed to ben a renote resemblance to the IIebrew.

It might he remarkel uren this that eatarats are just the places where hard roeks, such as granite and greenstone, are met with, alapted fir lasting seulptures: the natimal beauties of the spet, t." which the lulim is never insensible, and the meighbonthond of water, would lave constituted firther temptations to the lingering humter to practive there his ruband ehmentary art. We have given a slopteh, at page 313, wf one of these pieturesque waterfills, which helps at the same time to consey an idea of the magnitient scenery of British Guiana,
'The Indians of (Guima are of a roldish-l, rown cedour, ami somewhat ghasy, not unlike new and chancoplere. They are as grave and anstere as Amblis, exhihiting mach dignity in their walk and bearing and an imperturbable calmuess aud self- $\mathrm{l}^{\mathrm{w}}$-s.s.s.ion. They are divided into tribes, having different mames, habits, language, and even moral mil physical qualitics, although apporently descending fromi the same parent stork, which is Mongolian in its charater. Aftir mintercourse of three hundrod years with the white man, the modes and halits of the mative have undrume litth or no change. With the exeeption of the etlorts matle by a few zea'ous nissionaries, no attempt has heren made to civilise and inapreve him ; while the intrusion of Europeans into the enrritories which onee belonged to his: forafithers mpidij; theaterns to extinguinh tha last remmuts of his mee.

The tribe ealled Macnsi has the credit, if' any, of preparing the fumons womali or curari poison, the various ingredients of which he ohtains firen the depths of the forests. The principal, necording to Dre. Daltom, is the womali vine, which grows wild. Having pro-eurd a sullicient quantity of this, he next serks a litter root, and one or two bulbous phants, which cmtain a green aud ghatinous juiee. These being all tied together, he searehes tor two speeies of vemomnis iuts: one large and lilack, the "munery," about an inell lony, and foumd in nests near to aromatio slurubs: the other a smath redi one, foumd under the leaves of several kinds of shrubs. Providing himself now with some strong Indiam pepper, and the promed filugs of the "calamri" and coma-conchi smakes, tho manaticturre of pison proceeds to his deadly task. He serapu- the" wourali vine aml bitter rout into thin shavings, and puts them into a kind of colander, male of baves; this he holls over an earthen pot, and pours water on the alavings; the liguor which comes through has the appearance of coffer. When a sullieient quantity hain heen procured, the shavings are thrown aside. He then bruises the bulbous stalks, and subuezes a proportionate quantity of their juice through his hands into the pot. Lastly, the smakes' fangs, ants, and prellys are brused, and thrown into it. It is placed then on a slow tire, und as it bwils, more of the juice of thi" wourali is added, according as it may lne fimud neeres. sary, mul the scmu is taken of with a leaf; it remains on the tire till redued to a thick syrup, of a deen brown colour. As sum as it las arrivel at this state, a few arrows are poisoned with it to try its streugth. The manner in which the strength of the pmison in testen is said to be by womding trees, and if the haves fall othor die within three days, they consider the poimen sufficiently virulent, but not otherwise.
barturition is attended with fiow inconvenientes the the female Indian ; as soon as ih. child is born, it is not an umemmon thing to see the mother proceed to a neighburity stran, where she $\mathrm{p}^{\text {werforms the ne- }}$ cessary ablutions for hergelf and infiut. There is little in the way of dress to give her much tromble: bur does the ocenrrence occasion any interruptint to her usual duties. The husbani, however, is not let ofl wo easily ; the ctiquette of savage life requires that he shombla take to his hamoock for several diys, where, with solemn comutenance, and an apperance of suthring, he reedives the visits of his icopratintandes, whe rither comblate or rejoice with him, an the ease may be
The history of Guiama comprises the first liscovery hy the Spmish mavigators at the end of the fiftwenth und beginuing of the sixteenth centnry, fillowed by tho numerons nlventurons and romantic expedition made in seateh of the El Doralo of the West-a rich city abomatimg in gold, silver, and precions stones, situated on the horders of tho Lake l'arima, and of whose fibhomes wealth the Spaniaris had obtained tepurts as carly as in A.D. 1500 -it story which in athertimes kindled the rommatic spinit of the chivalric Laleigh.

The settletuents of the Dateh sneceeded in 1580 t. these dreans of wondrons wealth; methodical nub mimaginative, the Dutchman left to more credub, and sueculative individuals the task of exploring the interior of a comutry euveloped in mystery and harnels The mbenturers from Spuin, Portugal, Eugland, mul France lett little hehime them loat the history of their misfortunes nued disuppointment. The Dutch, who settled down in contentment upou tho madrained banks of rivers and sea-coasts, construeted camls, upon whase phatid waters they tritticked in their harges, and which have been totally neghected by their successors; they introducel the cotton-plant, the coffee-plant, nud the his, he next seeks a us plants, which cons-

These being all tied cies of veuomontanats: "ury," about an inch aromatic shrubs : the ar the leaves of xeveral mself now with some pounded fings of the Kes, the mannticturer task. JIL sectitur ther nto thin shavings, and nder, mate of leaves; t, and pours water on comes through las the sutficiont quantity hais e thrown aside. Jle and squeezes a proporthrough his hamis into
 It is placed thell on ore of the juice of the tmay be found necers. with a leaf; it remains thick syrup, of a dep es arrived at this state, it to try its strength. ength of the poisou i, trees, and if the leaves hey consider the puiven herwise.
few ineonrenienter to hor child is born, it is the mother proceed to whe 1 wrforms the neand infint. There is give her much tromble : ou any interuption to , however, is not let of te hife requite's that he or several days, where maperarance of sutidshis meytuintances. who im, us the case may be. rises the first diseovery he end of the fitcometh In centiry, followed by 1 romantic expedition do of' the Wext-a rich r , and precions stolns. o Lake D'arima, and uf niartls had obtained re--a story whieh in attw. spirit of the chivanic
h succeeded in laso w enlth; methodical anI left to more credulom e task of exploriug the in mystery and marwed. Portugal, England, anl but the history of their nt. The Dutch, who on the undrained banks eterl camals, upon whose their harges, and whinh ; their suecessors; they ie coffec-plant, and the sugar-cane ; they haid out beautiful gindens, where groves of orange and lime-trees mingled their slade ad perfume with plantains and other iudigoneus tropical fiut trees. They also introlueed slaves.

The epoch of Duteh eolonisation of Guiann is fiversified by several invasions by the English and French, till Demerara and Essequele, were finally surrendered to the former in 1803 , an oecupation which was followed subsequently liy the introduction of European women. The population had till that time been kept up by mulatoes, terceroons, quadroons, quarteroons, and quinteroons, or mustees, as they were called, accorling to the amount of white and black admixtme of hood, all difterence vanishing in the last.

Tho history of English tenure presents the usual colonial varieties of a long suecession of governors of varions tempers and abilities; of disputes betweren the new governow and the wherestahlished order of things in the shmpe of a buteh fisenl; of disputes about the administration of justice and thor momopuly of officers ; of insmrections fimned by missionary interferene: and the negro approutice act ; of the emancipation of slaves, the apmintment of stipundiary magist rates, and the eneouragement of free immigration of lortoguese and Coolies.

British Guinna has argnired an menviable untoriety loth in Europe and the West Indies for the insolubrity of its climate, and for the mortality which has oceuserd among Europeans and others who have visited its madarions shores. But Dr. Daltom argues, that the temperaturn is very equalle, ami even alvantageous for a certain class of comphants, ami the greater amount of fatality is inheral by the recklessuess of the colonists. In taet, if the natmal law is emrefully observed, a person may live as long in Guiant, with very little more sickness, than elsewhere.

In a comotry constituted as Guima ir, amimal life naturally alrounds. Voxinus inseets intrume into dwelling-lonses, the rivers temu with fish, binds and reptiles people the savamahs, wihl beests ruam undisthrod in the fornst. The monkeys are londs of tho forests- the suaks alone dioputing with them the dominion of the wooded workl. 'they live on high lnumeles of lofty trees, where they consider themselves to be tolerably sate, exeept from the hunter's gum in ladian's urrow, and their greatest cnemy, the smake. There are howling monkeys, weeping monkers, nul proming monkeys, spider monkers, fox-tailed monkeys, squirred monkers, and monkeys with all kinds of tiees and beards. The threst in shme respects resembles a large conmmity of men. There are sampire bats that suck the blood of prixons asleep. There are wild dings that live on crabs (Procyon cancrivorus). There are skunks, which bid detiance to all enemias, driving lack dons and men by their intelerable foetid odour.

Domentic cats and dogs removed to Guiana do not thrive; they have fits and die: but wild dogs an. eats abound, and commit great depredations. 'lis. ats may be seen elimbing the trees in the stobubs it the cities, and the tavomite fied of the jagum are the ping and eows of the colonist. The most impudent thieves are the opossums. The sportsmm's great resourees are the haba or puea, the watereheg, and the neourysthe Amerienn hare. There nee nlso deer, wild bonr, tupirs, sloths, nrundillos, ant-enters, and a varicty of other strange creatures. Naturo in such regions appears positively to luxmriate in the most fancifnl and curious creations. That great unwielde-looking animal, the sen-cow, is met with at the outlet of the lurger streams.

The variety and mumber of hirds fonnd in Guiana, the richness and beanty of their plumage, the surprising, and in many cases melexlions, tomes of their voices, and the curious and singular habits of mont of them, offer a large fioh of inguiry. Possibly there are few persons who lave not at times felt the wish to have their curiosity satistiel regarding the habits of those hum-ming-lirds, parrots, maenws, shrikes, tanagers, manakins, tronpiakes, jacamars, amb other birds of brilliunt phmage, which attrict the eye in almost every colleetion. Guiana has also its useful hirds-its turkeys, pheasants, partridges, , igeons, plovers, snipes, ducks, de.

Needless to suy that tortoises, crocoliles, smakes, and other reptiles abound in a country so firvourable to the develepment of amimal lite. There are many kinds of turtle and tortoises, from the edible to the ferocious, and whieh themshes prey on other reptiles. Allizators are even to bo seen in the eamis and trenches about Georgetown. The largest preies is the black alligator of the Essequebo. Among snakes, there me the lons, the largest of whieh, the bon-constrictor, is ealled the bushmuster. There are great numbers of venomus smakes, and others that are not so, and which latter are chietly arhoreal or water smakes. Frogs are among the most noisy denizens of the colony. The number and size of tishe's in the waters of the coasts and the rivens and cands is truly ustonishing. One fresli-water tivh-the viudis giyas-attains a length ot from eight to foutcen fiet, and weighs from two hundred to thro handred pomuds, and is excellent food, A species of silmis, called lam-lan, is also often eaptured ten or twelve feet long, and weighing two humbed pounds. Common eels are three or four feet in length.

The inseret nuisances of the tropies are in foree in Gnima. burry hounc has its econtipedes; but tleas and mosquitoes are tho great hame of confort. Guiana is also mueh infested by the ehigoe, or jiester, whieh burrows in the thenh, especially of the twe-nail. Seareely does the sim go down then thonsamds of beetles crowd into the deawingrooms of the Iwelling-honses. Others of the inseat triber set into all descriptions of fool. The common biate bertle here, as in China, nibhles the tone of pervons. In rany weather large erickets alight on the hand of hands, irritating the skin with their rough lens. Ants nut only abound, hat are also venomuns. 'Tho samidty pesters human beings, as well as the mosquito, and is su small as to dety detection. Common flies alss, by their numbers, add to the insect niidanees.

In it land of unsurpassed vigour in the production of buth animal and vegetablo lite, where the nir, the gronnd, and the waters aliko teem with living things, it is maturally to bo expected that magnificent and curions flowers shouk also ahound, ornamenting the plains, decomting tho wools, mud enlivening the dark exprinse of waters. On tho lofty momentains amd in the quiet valleys, in tho fertile phans and grassy markhes, minmmense garden, stored with infinite variety, is prosented to the alserver. Raisel and cultivated alone, $y$ nature, thousands of plants, the most rich and rure, spring up, blossom, and die.

From these ontlines somo extimate may be formed of the matural wonders of Ginima. The little that has been seen has struck all beholders with astouishmeut and admiration. There may be monotony and sameness in the wombirfal extent of its perpethal forests, but to the lover of niture ame of science there is rich reword. There may be alifienty and damere to eneomer in its fin-stretehing savamalis ind granite momatains, bit to an enterprising spirit there are luth interest and homone to be derived by gathering and reording his trinmph over the eayman amd the solpent. lationce and rodurance may be required to trace its mumeroms streams, and their verdint banks hung with garlamis of flowors tu the witer's eige, but to the prot and the naturalint they are inspiring themes. Industry amd persoverance are, no doubt, refuired ly the man who desires to anial himenlf of the singubariy fortilo thact of alluvial land which las passed throngh so cmided a conso of ingienlture innl fultivation, but ample treanmos await the individual who proseseses sum phalities.

VII.

ISTIDUU OF PANAMA.

(hagris - The Ammacin Tuws and the Tows of the Natinks-Monivg Cohormed Porilation-Casthe of Nis
 - l'anama-Tobmiu-linet foh tixghin Dackets to Pebe aso t'mlit.
It will be at enrious thing; to compare the Istlimus al l'anama, as it was a few yarars ign to what it is in the present alay. The extinetion of whl mones of eonvesane by the introntuction of steam, and the supphating of sigantic men-of-war by ironetat gmo-bots, No not present a more antomuding metamorphosis than what is sometiones hrought about by revolutions in lines of commmaication. Wre shall refer to dulius Froded, who tratrelled in 1850, for our tirst picture. It was on the ith of November of that year, towards the "roning. that the momatains of lhe lothmas of l'mann tirst :ppeared in sight of the hamed and intelligent (ierman, in the white of isolated conses of at truncated form. On the next morning, he redates, a hilly const extemed before us, showing a long line of ernintey envered with tomest, and a ehain of monntains in the rens.
liy and lis, the mastle of sian Larenzo, rising almone the month of che Lior do los Lagimdos, lexame visible : a few hours later wr andured in the roadstemb, at its lave; wne on tho following morning we sucerderl in safely entering the tiver, whem we moored our lirig Close to the bank, fust in front of tho frame-buiding which eomstituterl the soe ealled "American" purt of thagres. The reader, I supponc, is aware that throughont $A$ meriea the term "Americnn" is ahnost exehnsively aprial to the people of tho. Uniten states, a pactie" by which the "manilest destiny" of that compunaw of the most active elements of the present generation of mankind is thoughtessly recognisenl, "ven liy those whon are most immoaliately themtened by it, for in ull Sthindi-Amorican countries "los Americathos" menns the prople of the great Northern liepublic.
This "Ametican town" of" Chagres, then, whieh must likely has consed to "xist since the opening of the Fumana mailroad, when $A$ spinwall has taken its phace as the Athatie terminus of the lsthmas ronte, was sitmated on the lel't lank of the river; whike, en the opposite side, in a nook formed hy the hill of Sim Lorenzo, stemed the " illage of the: matives," which, as it exinted before the tinte of Californian tomat, may be sipposed to hare watlived its go-aliend rival, and to be still the home of a few fumilies.

In eloosing the place of the Ameriom sotthement, the "xelusive considentions of a mekless lowe of gain must have decided. In a locality known to he sickly in the highest deurre, it was huilt on the wateres elper on a low and mulily ground. Pat it stuod on the leyp water side of the river, and higs and selmoners comlid umhad a few humbred stepes from the homses. Tlieso had all heen sent ready mate from Nrw Iork. Thes most prominent among them was the Irving Ionsiethe principal "hotel" of the place. At New Yuk I had seen it advertised and rerommended us at sumpur establishment, "in whaso spaeious haths the trivellur was sure to fiml the comfints amb rommonlities of civilisation as it exists in the temprate zane, combinand with all the luxurjes of the tropies." It was at largo barm-like fumhonse of two storios, eath of them forming onn single undivided rom. In the how story a humdred in mono travellers, sitting on thar lons benelies of romgh boinels on hoth sibles of two lonis tables of the sambe material, wrov treate:d with salt pork and dried beans, while in the upper roon seval hundred persons, sick with tever, were vither nhaking from lirest on lurning in the parosysin of lant ; inil those who were able to kerp up were sitting on their boxes or trinks in order to semo them firm heins remosed by the nomerons thinses and mblers who at that time invosted this dangerons highway of thatelling mbentmers. Betworn the mul-lules and fetid withr.
 tables surrommed ly dirty ruthans, and lere and then the slom of a linnor shop was lelt open, and aroms of bearded and long-laired unwashed and micombed palefaced and hollow-ugal men wem seen, some of thas cantious! holding their hatals over their purkete, hervily louded with the proceeds of it mininer masum in California, and tow havily altogether for the cownit condition of their ragged apparel.

None of the toreign ressilents of Charren han thought of cultivating the smallest piece of lamb, o: evan ot making the natural prolations of the meightomentoo! available to that daily wate of life. For the two or three eows whinh were kept loce, the food was bromplit from the United states, iunl so was the find for the daily uses of the kitelen, while the truse wit the forest stood close to the honses. Tho mest communt rege. tables or fromits of the tropirs, such as plantains. Damanas, yams, manlioca, rete, were miknown on the tahle of the "lutel." 'The natives did not eultivate mome ul" these articles than they wanted fir themselves, ami noholy thought of an oseupation that world not promise an instantaneons reward.
Such, in 1850, wis the North Nomerican setthoment at Chagras-a phace whore, as Cuptain B, of our ling observen, wo other than an ntterly reckless man eomhi be smplosed to live of his own the mecold. This opinion may have contand too severe a judmment. As tome, howover, never more forcibly that at thanes did the inlea strike me, how much the development of many of the noblest pualities of our moture is dopondent upon the influence of a lome that is more to us tham a tit place for cloing business-to which, on the contrary, we feel attached-whioh we rejoiec in improving and adonning, and in which we like to recognise, more or less deeply impressed, the traces of onr tante and eharacter; onr thought and aetion. It is not from men alone that we rere entifled to expect a recipro. eation of our afleetans. Natmer, ton, and all the thmes around us, give us io roward line the interest our lieart

Amerian sothlement, at meklesx low" of gain ity known to he sickly it on the water"s wide, but it stoned on the sey as and sehooners comblal om the hunses. These rom Niw York, Tho as the Irving Imoneace. At New York 1 mamended as a suprow Gous halls the travellor 4 'ommenlities of "ivilary rate, zune, comblived "piocs." It was a harn -tories, each wi them romin. In the bwer ors, sitting on tinu leng oth sides of two long vero treatelel with salt the upher room seseral er, were cither shalking nroxysm of hatat ; ind 1 were sitting on their eure them from beng ces and robbers what as highway of thavelling 1-holes mid fetid wator. hoursc stonl in milling ons, and here and ther. elt opm, and gromes an ed and ancomben! poleeve seen, some of thron $\therefore$ ower their purkets, s of a mining sutan in gether for the unowill of Chatren hatd thoughit ee of laml, we exen of $\therefore$ of the neightamention - life. For the two or e, the fond was homuhe , was the furl for the the: trees of the firest w most common bigs has plantains: humats, owa on the table of the cultivate more of thess hemsitver, and molualy would mit promise an

1. Ameriman settlement Captain 1\% of our hriz erly reekless man muli wn free accord. This oo severe a judgament. orcibly than at Thayre ach the dovelopment of four mature is drpenme that is mone to as ness-to which, on the ch we rejoice in improvI we lik! to recumise, the traces of wir taste netion. It is not from 1 to expect a reciphu, too, mul all the things ot the interest our heart takes in them, by exerting an emobling influence npon the mind; not men alone, but even things camot be negiected amd degraded by us, without the bad consequences of such an oftence against the deeper laws of the nornl world talling lack in just retribution upon our own characters. In neglecting and degrading the things noome us, we mavoilably neyleet nul degrade ourselver, At a bluce where everybolly was but a tempoary residont, ittracted by no other motise but the lust of gain-where everyboly, from the very day of his arrival, impatiently eounter the time to the moment when he wombl have gained enough to justify his depurture, a result for which, at chasres, a tew years were thought mather a long periul-at such a phare life must have been a mean and delassed aspect, withut much hepe of improvemint. I lo not know what may have become the chanacter of Aspinwall, to which place many of the inhabitants of Chagres have removed not long after my visit: nor am I informed of the merits of social life in the gold mines of Australia. As tu Califermin, however, a considerable number of those who went there from all parts of the word, have fustly fomm it so desmather a home from the very begiming, that even the mining regions of that comtry have somen lwen graced with the charms of home life ; and nowhere it has loen better undestood than in California, that one individual intending to make the country his permanent lume, is worth mure to the community than a mumber of temporary ridnats, howerer important may be the business they come to transict for a while.
I passed the river to examine the village of the natives. There is a swamp, on one side of it, the fetid exhalations of whieh, mingled with the dew of the evening, we.e so think mid smistantial, that beyom! their affecting the olfictory sonse, I had the taste of thom on my tongue; nevertheless, this part of Chugres made a far more favourable impression on me than the American town. The habitatiens, standing on a more or less elevated gromed, nently built of cuns, mul covered with palm leaves, were extremely clem. Sem from the iprosite side of the river, they represented a wery pieturesigue view. A grove of puin-trets surrounds them in the rour, at the frot of a steep hill eovered with a dense linest of exogenous treas, some of them of a gigantic growth, wuving their wide-spreal umbrella-shuped erowns high ovar the rest. The inhalitants were a mixed ruce of Indian, Afrioan and Spminsh origin, using the Spanish langugge ns a conmen medium, though some of the nogroes or mulatores living there were from Jamaica; they, tom, having hertin attructed by the experetation of extmomary gain. 1 had a enversation with one of thase mens, in intelligent and fine-hoking lumatto, who told me that, indeed, he conld make a good deal of money here, late that the elimater was too sickly, so that whatever he grined he heol to pay to the doctor: It is not without interest to snow buw sneh a climate as that of Chagres is looked upon by a coloured native of Wanaica; and at the same time I an tonching here the fact of the existenco of a moving coloured popmlation congregating herr and there ns cirrumstances may iuvite thein, on the consts aromen the Caribbean: Sea, and which promises to becone of imprortance in the fiture lintory of the West Indies, und of Central Amerien, ns well as in the development of the coloured ntees of the Nuw Worhl. Of this class of the eolonved population of Chagres, the greater number are from Curacan and Cartagena. The natives of the place itself seemed to be mure of a Hispano-Iodian caste, extremely strong inil well formed, some of them with very intelligent and plasing eountenances. I found that perxonal elemininess and neathess were marked traits in their character, by which they were most tianourably distinguished from the inhalitants and the travelling crowd on the other side of the river. On every murning luring the eight days of ome stay, men and women, as they passed the river in their suall canoss, alpwared in a clean snit, although the whole dress of the fomer consisted only in a straw hat and r $1^{\text {nair }}$ of white trowsers worn over tho skin. Ilore I hat the tirat oprortunity of seeming that peculiar style of halforavige elegance which characterises the femate dress aul deprriment of the lower chasses of Spanish America. Indeed, these women, with their flounced skirts of striped mushin, fistened round their nuked waists, their busts loosely covered with the flying quipil of white maslin glitteriug with gohd or silver paillettes, or the long striped reboso, stylishly thrown over the left shoulder, a paid of small white satin shoes, embroiderel with silver or gold, on the maked feet, the jet hair tastefully adorned with white, yellow, or crimson tlowers, just taken from the shrub, made altogether a conuettish appearance, as they would walk along in assumed dignity, with a defying swing of their nums, or would negligently repose in their gently moving hammocks. I ibserved that a perfect politeness of language prevailed nonong these mople, in whose conversation the address of "Senor" and "Senora" was rarely omitted. Only the men who were rowing the eanoes on the river, or were ocenpied in unoouling the vessels, matually aldressed themselves in a less formal manner, calling their companious by the simple designation of " Homlue !"(man)" Mulatto!" "Cuadron!" "Zambe!" according to the gradations of enste.

Petween the inhabitants of the two villages a little war had broken out during the time of my visit. The matives hal offered to forward the travellers up the river at a lower rate thim the Americans would allow. And, as the former ueglected 'the prohibition, one of their eamuen, fillenl with travellers, was fired at from the Amerionn side. To these high-himided proeerdings, the natives respomed by similar acts of volence; some wounds were received on both sides, mud there was a good doal of excitement tor a few days.

Momuting the steep hill on which the eastle of San Lorenzo is situated, I baw, as a plysician would say, a iplentid specimen of dephamtiasis, in the shape of the mometrus leg of a negro, sitting at the sido of the footpaith. The castle, which once difended the urthern entramer to the pasatise across the lathmus of Pamama, is one of the most remarkable moumments of spanish domiaion in thase parts of the werld ; though, from the efteets of the excessive dimpmess of the chimate, and from want of repair, it is almost a ruin-its material being it variety of simdstone which is unfit fur withstanding the attiacks of atmospherical influences. In one of the courts stool a wooden luilding, the residenco of' a solitary otheer, styled the "commandante ;" but I saw no trace of a garrison, not even a. single guard to preveut me and my compmions trom entering a vault which we fomul to contain, I camot tell how muny theusand promis of moist gumpowder, in open boxes, which some of us investigated with in lighted cigar in the month, before reeognising the dangerous nature of the substance. Old pieces of artillery, some of very heavy calibre, and pyramids of piled-up, balls and shells lay ahout the ground. Besides a large number of iron guns, I connted ten guns and mortars of bronze. T'wo of the litter, of beantiful workmanship, reeiproenlly bore the inseriptions: "El Escorpion, Sevilla, 1749;" and "El Dracon, Sevilla, 1742 ."
The view from the eastle is grand and beautiful. On one side is the sen, washing the foot of the hill on which it stands, and which is very preeipitous in this direction. A line of coast, eovered with forest down to the beach, extends from henee in a long sweep. Towards the interior, a country of woolled hills mufolds itself, aml leaves a passage to the river, which may be traced with the eye for a considernble distance as it takes it comse throngh the dark shales of the forest.

Behind the castle is a deep ravine, through which a clent brook rushes down to the sea, hetween majestic trees. A erowd of half-naked women were oectpied here in washing their linen. As we approached they made signs that we should not come near-a rare instance of feeling which in generit seems to be almost unknown amongst the lower elaswes of Spanish Ameriea. As we proeeeded in our walk we eame to a grove of coces-nut trees, and on a small sfuare bet ween them saw the remains of a sugar fitetory, with several large kettles, in good condition, lying about. The bay of panama.

extablishment seemed to have never been in a working state, and uudoubtedly has been one of the many unforcmate neculations begun in those regions of tropieal Ameriea without $n$ due appreciation of the diflieulties and obstacles inseparably comneeted with the uneivilised state of the conntry. I have sren alike result of a similar speenlation in British Honduras, where, in the wilderness surrounding the Manatee Lagoon, I fonad all the improvements and costly machinery of an inttended sugnr plantation overgrown by the rank vegetation of $a$ forest.
The next day I took a walk along the const, and after having followed it for two or three miles to a beantiful spot, where, uenr a projecting rock, a little river empties into the sea, I trok a footpath lealing into the forest. This, after the distance of a milh, bruight me to at mumber of hats, eonstructed of eanes and pulm leaves. Brown women, in all the finery deseribed above even white satin shoes not excepted, were swinging in their hammocks in the open doorways. What might have induced these peopie to ereet their habitations in the midst of the forest, I could not learn. P'erhaps, they wantel to be neme enough to the port to protit by the neighbourhome, without having their dwellings, exposed to the looks oi the passing "Amerieanos." river, whiel may be denuble distanec as it shates of the forest. vine, tlrough which a sea, between majestie women were ocenpied s we aphoached they come near-a rare inanal seems to be almost clasises of Spanish our walk we eame to a a small square between ur fictory, with several n, lying about. The projecting rock, a little wok a footpath lewing the distamee of $a$ mile, uts, constructed of ennes men, in all the finery watin shoes not escepted, feks in the opers looraced these preple to erect st of tho fiorest, I could nted to be neare chough neighbourhood, without fed to the looks of the

Our second picture is borrowed from the lively and sraphie puges of Mr. Anthony Trollope.

Cartagena was once a ilourishing city, great in commerce and strong in war. It was taken by tho English, not however without signal reverses on our part, and by the speeial valour-so the story goes- of eertain sailors who dragged asingle gmin to the summit of a ligh nbrupt hill, ealled the "Iujn," which eommands the town. If the thermometer stool in thoso days as high at Cartngen as it does now, betty nenly through the whole of the year, those sailons ought to have had the Victoria Cross. But these deeds were done long years ago, in the time of Drake and his followers; nul Victoria Crosses were then chielly kept for the officers.

The: harbout of Cartagena is singulanly situated. There are two entrances to it, one some ten miles from the city and the other elose to it. This nearer aperture was blooked up by the Spaniards, who sank ships across the month; and it has never been used or usable since. The present entranee is very strongly fortified. The fortitications ure still there, bristling fown to the water's edge ; or they would bristle, were it not that all the guns have been sold for the value of the brass metal.

Cartngena was hotter even than Santa Martha ; but the place is by no menms so tesolate and death-like. The shops theie are open to tho streets, as shops are in other towns. Men and women may aceasiomally he seen abont the square; and there is a trate-in ponltry, if in nothing else.
There is a cathedral here also, and 1 presume $a$ bishop. T'he former is built after the Spanish tashion, and hoasts a so-called handsome, large, marble pulpit. That it is harge und marble, I rontess: but I venture to question its claims to the other epithet. There are pietures also in the eathedral ; of spirits in a state of torture certainly; and, it I rightly remuluber, of beatitied spirits also.

From Cirragena I went on to the isthous: the Isthmus of limmma, as it is called hy all the world, thourh the American town of Aspinwall will grathally become the name best known in connection with the pasage between the two oceuns. This passage is new made by a railway which has been opened by an Americin eompany between the town of Aspinwall, or Colon, as it is culled in England, and the eity of Pamama. Colon is the local mane for this place, whieh also bears the denomination of Navy lay in the language of saitors. But our firends from Yankee-land like to earry things with a high hand, and to have a nomenclature of their own. Fere, as their cnergy umd their money and their habits are undmbed in in the ascombant. they will prombly be suecesstul ; and the place will be called Aspinwall in spite of the disgotst of the New Grimadians, and the promiety of the English, whe choose to adhere to the names of the existing government of the country.

A rose by any other namo would smell as swect, and Colon or Aspinwall will be equally vile however yon may call it. It is a wretehed, unhealthy, miserably situated, but thriving little Ameriean town, ereated by and lor the railway und the passenger tratlie which cones here both from Southampton aul New York. That from New York is of eourse immonsely the greatest, for this is at present the main ronte to Sun Franciseo and California.

I visited the place three times, lor I passed over the 93 isthmus on my way to Costn Rica, and on my return from that country I went again to Panama, and of course back to Colon, bat I can say nothing in its fiwous. My only dealing thero was with a washer. woman, and I wish I conld place betore iny renders a pieture of my linen in the condition in whieh it eame back firom that artist's hands. I confess that I sat down and shed bitter tears. In these localities there are but two luxuries of life-iced soda water and clean shirts. And now I was deharred from any true enjoyment of the latter for more than a fortnight.

The Panama railway is certainly a great fact, as men now-tidn say when unything of importance is accomplished The necessity of some menns of passing the istlmus, and the question as to the best means, has been delated since, I may say, the days of Cortes. Men have foresecn that it wonld beeome a necessity to the world that there shonld be some such transit, and every eonceivable point of the isthmus has, at some period or by some nation, been selected as the best for the purpose. This railway is certainly the first that can be regarded ns a propenly organised means of travelling; and it may be donbted whether it will not remain as the best, if not the only permanent mode of transit.

Very great difficulty was experiencel in ereeting this line. In the first phace, it was neeessary that terms sloould be made with the government of the country throngh which the line should pass, and to effeet this it was expedient to hold out great indueements. Among the chief of these is an understanding that the whole live shall become the absohite property of the New Granadian government when it shall have been opened for forty-nine years. But who ean tell what government will prevail in New Granala in forty-uine years? It is not impossible that the whole distriet may then be an ontlying territory belonging to the United States. At any rate, I should imagine that it is very fir from the intention of the American Company to adhere with rigid strictness to this part of the bargain. Who knows what may oceur between this and the end of the century !

And when these terms were made there was great alithealty in obtaining labour. The road had to be cat through one contimous forest, and for the greater fart of the way along the course of the Chagres river. Nothing could be more unlealthy than such work, and in consequence the men died very rapidly. The high rate of wages entied many Irishmen here, but most of them found their graves amidst the works. Chinese were tried, but they were quite ineffiencions for sueh labour, and when distressed had a habit of hanging themselves. The most usetul men were to be got from the coist round Cartagena, but they were enticed thither only by very ligh pay.

The whole road lies through trees and bushes of thick tropical grewth, and is in this way pretty and interesting, Jht there is nothing wonderfnl in the scenery, muless to one who has never before witnessed tropical forest scenery. The growth here is so quiek that the strip of ground closely adjacent to the line, some twenty yards perhaps on eneli side, has to be cleared of timber and foliage every six months. If left for twelve mouths the whole would be eovered with thiek bushes, twelve teet ligh. At intervals of four and a half miles there are large wooden houses-prettylooking houses they are, luitt with much taste-in each of which a superintendent with a certain number of lubourers resides. These men ure supplied with provisions mad all necessaries by the company. For there are no villuges here in which workmon cam live, no shops from which they can supply themselves, no labour which can be hired ns it may be wunted.

From this it may be imagined that the line is maintained at a great cast. Bat, nevertheless, it nlrealy pays a dividend of twelvo and a half per cent. So much at least is aeknowledged ; but those who pretend to understaud the matter deelare that the real profit acerung to the sharcholders is hardly less than five-and-twenty per cent. The sum eharged for the passage is extremely high, being twenty-fivedollars, or five pounds for a single ticket. The distance is under fifty miles. And there is no class but the one. Everybody prasing over the isthmus, if ho pays lis fure, must pay twenty. five dollars. Stecrage jnssengers from New York to San Fruncisen are at present booked through for fifty dollars. This inclades their food on the two sea royages, which are on an average of about eleven days cach. And yet out of this tifty dollars twenty-tive nre paid to the railway for this conveyanco over fifty miles! The charge for luggage, too, is commeusurately bigh. The ordinary kit of a travelling Englishmm-a portmintera, bag, desk, and hatbox-would cost two pounds ten shillings over and abovo his own fare.
But at the same time, nothing can be more liberal than the general management of the line. On pisssengers journeying from New Yorls to California, or from Southampion to Chiti and l'eru, their demand no doubt is very high. But to men of ull classes, merely travelling from Aspinwall to l'anama for pleasure-or, upparently, on business, if travelling only between those two places,--free tickets are givell almost without restriction. One train goes cach way daily, and as a rule most of the passengers are carried free, except on those days when paekets have arrived at either terminas. On my tirst passago over I pail my fare, for I went across with other passengers out of the mail packet. But on my return the superintendent not only gave me a tieket, but asked me whether I wanted others for any friends. The line is a single line throughout.
Panama has donbtless become a place of importance to Englishmen and Americans, and its name is very familiar to our ears. But nevertheless it is a phaco whose glory has pussed away. It was a large Spunish town, strongly fortified, with some thirty thonsand inhalitants. Now its fortifications are mostly gone, its churelies are tumbling to the ground, its old houses have so tumbled, and its old Spanish population has vanishel. It is still the chief city of a State, and a congress sits there. There is a governor and a jodge, and there are elections; but were it not for the passengers of the isthmus, there would soon be but little left of tho city of Panama.

Here the negro race abounds, and among the common people the negro traits nre stronger and more marked than those evon of the Indians or Spaniards. Of Spanish blood among the natives of the surrounding country there seens to le but little. The negroes here are of course frce, free to vote for their own governors, and make their own laws; and consequently they are often very troublenome, the country people attacking those in the town, and so on. "And is justice ultimately done on the offeuders?" I asked. "Well, sir; perlinps not justice. But some notice is taken; and the matter is smoothed over." Such was the nuswer.
There is a Spanish cathedral here also, in which I heard $n$ very sweet-toaed organ, and one magnificent tenor voice. The old charch buildings still standing here are not without preteuce, and are iuteresting from the dark tawny colour of the stone, if from no other canse. I should guess then to be some two centuries old. Their style in many reypects resembles that which is so generally odious to an Englishman's eyo and ear, under the title of Renaissance. It is probably an offshoot of that which is called Platerespue in the south of Spain.

Daring the whole time that I was nt Ianama the thermoneter stool at sonething above ninety. In Calcutta, 1 helieve, it is often as high as one humbed and ten, so that I have no right to speak of the extretae heat. But, nevertheless, Panoma is sopposed to be one of the hottent places in the western world; and ) nim nssured, while there, that weather so coutinuously hot for the twenty-four hours had not heen known during the last nine years. The raiay season should have commenced by this time-the carly part of May. But it hal not done no; and it appeared that when the rain is late, that is the loottest peri ' of the whole year.
The heat made me uncomfort int never made me ill. I lost all pleasure in nud iuded in everything else. I nsed to feel . oug for may frod, but no appetite when it came. I was lethargic, as though from repletion, when I did eat, and was always ghad when my watch would allow me to $\mathrm{g}^{\prime}$ to bed. But yet I was never ill.

The country round the town is pretty, and very well adapited for riding. There are large open sivaunals, which stretch away for miles and miles, and which arkept as grizing farms for cattle. These are not that and plain, but are broken into unduhations, and covered here and there with forest bushes. The harsees here ure tuught to pace, that is, move with the two off lege together, and then with the two near legs. The motion is exceedingly gentle, and well fitted for this hot elimate, in which the rougher work of trotting would be almost too much for the energies of debilitated munkind. The samee pace is common in Cuba, Costa Rica, and other Spanish countries in the west.

Off from Pansma, a few miles distant in the western ocean, there are various pieturesque islands. On two of these are the dopotsts of two great steam-pachet companies, that belonging to the Aniericuns which carries on the tisule to Culifornia, and an Euglish company, whose vessels run lown the Pacific to l'eru and Chili. I visited Toboga, in which are the headquarters of the latter. Here I found a amall liuglish maritino colony, with a little wwn of their own, composed of captuids, doctors, cugineers, officers, artificess, and sailors, living together on the company's wages, and, as regards the upper classes, at tables provided Ly the compmay. But i saw there no women of any description. I beg therefire to suggest to the company that their servants would probably bo. much more confortable if the institution partook less of the monastic order.
If, as is probuhle, this becomes one of the high roads to Anstralia, then another large ship company will have to fix its quarters here.

- notice is taken; and Such was the answer. here also, in which I $n$, and one magnificent buildings still stanking nd are interesting from stone, if from no other o be some two centmies ts resembles that which glishman's eye aul ear, cee. It in probably an led Platerespue in the $t$ I was at I'amama the ghbove ninety. In Cal. igh as one hundred and speak of the extreme ama is supposed to be: western worhl ; and 1 weather so continuously s laul not been known The rainy season should —the early part of May. tappeared that when the peri ' of the whale year. or ${ }^{+}$but never made and indeed ia .ang fior iny food,
I was lethargic, as I did eat, anel was always allow me to $\mathrm{g}^{\prime}$ to bed.
n is pretty, and very well e larye ojen sivaunalis, and miles, nul which ar" tttle. These are not that to undulations, and corest bushes. The horses is, move with the two with the two near legs. entle, and well fitted for rougher work of trotch for the energies of tiepace is common in Cuba, sh countries in the west. les distant in the western uresque islands. On two two great steam- رracket to the Andericans which lifornia, and an Euglish lown the Pacific to Peru in which rre the heade I found a small Engtish e Lown of their own, colugineers, officers, artiticers, on the company's wages, hassen, at tables provided w there no women of any e to suggest to the conwoulel prombly be. much tution partook less of the omes one of the high roads large ship company will betakes himself to a sofia. In the morning we were awoke by the noise of anchoring in the harhour of Korsur, a small and ahnost forgoten city of the Damish dominions, me the capital of an ant on province, later dimprachised, but now romed tor activity by the oproning of the railway to Copmagen. Thie hotel, as its affiche amomeces, is mont conveniently situated for those who thavel aither ly lonat or rail : and so it is. A cold loullit is in constant requisition from smarise till smaset, and from sumse till sumise. Four stemers, independint of our own, lie in the harkous: 'Two mere are visild, on the harizon in their inward passage. They stath, they arrive, at all hous oft the tweuty finn, fir Kiel, Aathons, Kolding, Fomen, everywhere. Inalge then of the aniet of this chem hotel. On one side tho stemurs ever pinting and whazing: you tly to the opmente-irom Seyliato I 'harghan-the Joconotives shriek, bustle, and roars.
Of the ancient fortrens of 'Tammorg, on the site of that foumded, says thadition, hy swemd (irathe, long since sacked and distryed by the Wiomlish pinater, one sumall tower atono remains. During the was of the Combs, in 1535, the inhabitate of Skjelsker, purtisans of Christian II.. gained ossession of this rastle he dennaled andience of the castellan, fio the furgme it diselamging the enstom dues presions to cmbamation for Funco. Un the apleazaner of the bastillim they the castle fir some vears, mutil thes were expilled hy the forces of l'ater Skram, a celchmited uolle of those days, surnamel Vow-hals, or lisk-neck.
The Zaman! railway ean he taken here to Copenhagen, a journey of the and athald hones permaned for abont mine shilling, Einglish in the first chass, hat our ronte lay across the direat lift to Nyoburg, ne of the must important towns in the kinghon in the thinternth and fourtenth matmins. Dalfowa terost the belt is the tranmission of news when, loring the wiater, the ice compeds the mail to stop there: and there is :aka in the same prodiament. 'That it is not a sery emsiathe rume tu ine in, is slawa ly the lamish provert, "I wish lue were at sprugue"

Nyburg was fortitiol ly Chrintian N. and lirederick III. In liffy, the lames chtamed at decinise vetory ower the swedes, who secmipiod the lintrens, which liberated bemand from the suke to whirl the ambition of the Swelish momary hat tried to suljeet home Jeas, Nyelumg was agan, fir at the hass, in the hands of a timeng pewer, the spanish ( Cenemal haman, Who was then gharturol in Eunen, having thown oft his allogiture to the Fremeh, took pessex.ion of the fortress allid of all the latemens on the liond, and hedr them matil, atided by the Buglish, la was able to reis said to have taken jatare umen this oreasion om the beath ontside the lint. Whan embarking on band of eavalry, were obliged to lome their homses behime them; and these ammale, athambent to themselves, stan (mgaged in a most satmginary combat, which lastad mintil abmost all were killat. 'Ther lew that survised were catpened hy the banish pasants, mal the mastare ef Andadusian lond is atill vivilde in the breal of horses m this menghtwomborl.
Marryat writes in his hsual athlum stele of Nyborg or Nylorg: We have passed some days, he says, at Nylume too glal to meruit our minds and hodies in the comtiortable post-hanse-inn im of times gine by-nat all peturespur mid dry rut like that of Ringkjoping, hut a homse built with gond large rooms, bofore he wond bugan to remmaise space; very rowl amblomatiotable. Sir our cight days Iled rapielly by ; we strolled on the momart herights, we hathed in the waters of the fiord, lonated aud fishuld werasionally, and thoroughly enjoyed oursitves.

Nyburs is not a town of rast protemions to amiaquity ; it dates its urigin from the "New 'asthe", homg sine gatherol to its sistor" "horgs." Valdemar the Groat (though lua lid beat poor Liden Kirsten to death; was a very geoh son of the Church atter his own peculiar manner, ant, like many wothy peoplo of the prent. century, very fome of promeliting. He promed thristhaty church militant-wise, tire amdsworl, imbers the lanathens of lingen. Prixhas, own brother of pasan King Nuslat of the irrmols, embraced Christimity, and King Valdumar gave him as a reward his sister Gatherime in mariage, with Lallam as her dower. Her son Kumb thmuled lere his castle of Nyhorg: lue did not, however, mioy it much, for he furmal monk for very pame sake, and Nyborg fell into the hamde of the trown. King Jolni much lowed this reval resithenes Here wer lown Christian amel Protentant Plizalieth of Banderbing, who comsidered twenty-two tamily. The days of camonsation were oser, and an hand mo fancy to bea martyr.

In later diys Nymerg, with its stand and hofty tower, fillower the fatte of other roval huilingse ; it was pulled dewn fon its materials, nut ly that whe chathesman, the steomil Preeleric, but hy the bigamons fourth Prederic, to huild up his trumary pabace of Whense.

 well as in its ithation, and muldgraded; it was mbe
 the inom "anme, batring the letters of her mant

It wimber that, mome fornty-fur yeare later, bilien sear. Wir visited the elapel-splendid in its earsed mak littings ; and there on the wall's side lames the sisen-mo longer E:len fair and dimpled, as at Roseno rathume of the print, with an peakeol hat, like that of Monhershiptha-a mant intreseting pieture. It liet death-ane lins lumien in the village charel of Nourth fiair likame Tlfind ; then mume conlisentim, and the glow of the Mmakites was at :an coml.

by the sithe of all Ellen are two lill-lenghth portails, these of "Entit\% and Eleanor.

Livery town in bemmek pignel itself on sumething in the gocel wh days, and Nyhorg nppars th havi sambed lom and high its salutary lyge law - so metes the waring of swoms nt parties-sineh a chaping of of' hands lim next to mothing-Stur Chmoner a juke th it. The wonen, however, were trented with heemmint rexpeet, fore is one artiche it is coneted "thate ewery
e days, lie says, at Nyfand hodies in the comtimes gone by-mot all ou' Ringljopiug, hat a poms, betorr the wold eorl amil comfortable $y$; we strolled on the he waters of the tiora, and thoroughly enjoyed st pretensions tu antihe "New I'astle," long horgs." Valdentir the diden Kirsten to deathj hafter his own jhe uljar propho of the promt tising. Sle promelowl are, tive and sword, inmons v, own brother of jagin embraced Christianity. as a reward his sister lamd as her dower. Hew the of Nyhorg : lue did or he turnal monk for fill into the hande of a loved this rusal resiristian and l'rutertant. - considered twenty-tw: king-11 [ "nough for , wh tion were wer, and sho is hatiml and lufty tower, hniblinge ; it was palled that alde clothesman, tha gamons foumt Preditic, e of thlemse.
nising mowd whert at ur whiks to the whominis ritu lnumtiful in itself melegraded ; it was une alt by Ellew Marvian, at te letters of her nane,

I - -four reatr later, Fillow life in hire suchty righth -splemplial in its carmal thue watl's side hang the erl at the are of sevorty. ul climpled, as at Rometho is at Norlamel, but lillen g, grearl, alil age-ill the leakial hat, like that of mesting juetmes. It liw villige clameh of Nouth dwig Munk-Ellenshut, Whagan to her atangiter ane contisention, and the all enul.

- two full-length portrats, iqued itself on something Nyburg appeates to has utary bye law-sos.sem, " made ine let my lowse, tios-surh n chopping ull —Star Chamber a joke to ere treated with heromims $t$ is enneted "that ins?
quinde" detected in stealing or luejng in combinance with at thief" shall be eombemmed to bo hanged, but the sentence, on meeount of her " woman's modestr," to be commoted to being " biuried alive."
As for the laws of adule death: hut, in case of detiction, the otlenders were allowed to deciale the mattor by arms. Faney a Lombon grocer and twolve of his shop-boys engiged in single combat, in the precincts of the Grem l'ark agtinst twelve adulterated householders, citled umon to avenge the hansekeeping grievances of their whtragel housewives. In aldition to the losing of heals, whipinggs, ame such like, all adulterated gooils were declined to be confisented, and wero solemmly lmont in the presence of the injured eitizens. Sueh a derere might be formd adimatarens exen in the pesent diay.
These hye-laws were just, hal they extember to all dasses; but the migistrates themselves were exempt from their severity : for, says the ohl Dituish rhyme, -
"When, the mayor ot the eity sells ale and wine, And the magistrate he kills the sheep and swine, When the haker weighs limselt his brent, The citizens might all us well te deme."

It is rvident enporation monopolies were not approved of.

In a letter existing from King I'zus to Rent lilde, Governor of Nyborg, he writes:- "We intend, phase Gum, to visit chumelt with our tear wife tho Sumaliy next to St. Olat's dity, and liave our young danghter ehrintemod. And we heg you to be present at that time and the same day with your dear wife, ind enjoy pourselves with us and sevenal friends whom we have invited."

We were homel to diorup, one of the beantifinl comntry residemes that dut the ishand of limen. Three open ciminges awaited on the quay to anver us thither. The drivers were in livery with cockales and the hamess was deromated with ribands. Our ronte lay

CASTLE OF PLOETS, hOLSTEIN.
along the sea-const, the country umblating almost as sutly us the wea itself, and the lamd divided into cultivation, masture, and wool. A Freneh tourist, D. Dargand, says of limen that it resemble's linghand with its rick: cultivation and well-stocked pistures, only it is an aretic liaghand without its finetorios and with forests which it has mot.
tilorup semed, as we mened it, like a prinerly abhey of the Mindle Ages on the verme of a fiembal fiment (Neer p. 329). Within it is a vast 'Trimon, las' a 'lofinom in Denmark, with all the laxmies tlas eoulat be insomed by Sennlimutan imagination. The building is puadmagnalar, no that whan the visito has pased the iron miling, with giltarrowhends, and the great oakeng gitoway above which rives the dome, he finis himself in an interior court bomal hy four wings of the mansion. Suelt is Clorup, A bright-eolowred Ampturotservimed n welcomin from benenth wwo ilags that floatel alowe, the one with the mational tha other with the limily colours. The Danisli nationnl colours area white cross oll a red gromid.

We were conducted, som atter our armival, over the gamlens, with their termees, poms, basins, aviaries, and flower-beds, and thenee to the stables, where wore fiftern horses of linglisli, Dinish and Norweginn breeds; and where the sleighs ar sledges, outmumering tho carriages, spoke of the sesurity of the winter climate. I whelwright, a blacksmith, it baker, anul othor hamdichates, wre atticher to the establishment, alding to the alranly lage murher of attendants and kediers. When one of these bembers of the househohl is disabled by age, he is provided for in theighhoming village, which is a mere almonry, 'Tlus this tine residenee sutliees for itself; and constitutes, as it were, a little world with'n itself: 'I'hese Danish elateans, or country mathsions, are either femblal or persomal. When they are fendal, they enamot be nlienated, but pass to the ehdest son; the others ean bo sold on dixpusidel of like any other property. Glorup is attached to the fief of Maltkenhurg, to which also belong the property and chatemu of Rygrated (wee p. 329) mul that of Antiof.

One of my finst occupations, after a night's rest nt
this charming old fendal mansion, was to pay a visit to the doctor and to the minister, who were best cadenlatel, by the nature of the ir prosmits, to give me an insight into the labits and mamers of the people. Ductor Winther resided on a small property near the village of svimlinge, having his own cows and horses. He was a man of liheral education. enlanged ly travel and expericace. 'The pastur, M. Biering. was a most praisewortly minister and an execllent man, The detruils he communiented to me in reppert to the pregress of edncation in Demmark were quite astmmeting. In addition to the gymmavia, which the little Scandinavians enter at ath to lenve at cighteen, aud Which are the provineial vestilules to the University of Copenhagen, there are also selomels in wery village which the soms ami danghters of peasants are cilliged to attend. "Then," I snid to the pantor, "all bames know how to rend and write." "Yes," hu replied, "almost withont an exeeption: and more than that. they are acquantell with ecourally, thithmetic, mal history, mere especially matimal histery."
Marryat also visited Glormp, and thus spuak of it : We are of for Svondlorg this morning, a drive of sixteen miles, lont stop half way to visit the manor of Glornp, the eomitry residence of Coment Molthe, fimed for its English gatens. Euglish gardens are tor be mistrusted even in Demmark, where the dimate assimilates somew hat to our wh. The velvet turf is alwas wanting-turt of ages- uever to le replaced by suwings of common grass. Dissect fir sour musement a small die of our finest Noep fid English sward, compressed to dwarflom : you will tind naty une hundred varieties of phants in the sm.dl square; it in the work, the progress of years of vagetaion, not to he productd by an aunual crop; added to which, dill they poseess the turf itself, the Danes would never understand how to take care of it, or allow the time necessary to the gardener for bringing it to perfection.
Glorup is a fine old place, with lime-avennes of half-n-mile in length, nnrivalled even in Denmark. A long oblung fishpond, all in character with the old-fishioned building. As a whole it is leantiful, but ruined ly an Anghthanic taste badly carried out. The house was mailt ly the enlehrated Wialkemberf, minister to Chris-the photed from the lay of the "dogesene" in the 1No of 16 wom. Itis purtait is in the villate church, hege ther with erarly thmbes of his ancient honse. Some carvings of merimaids nat mermen support the valtings of the roff, a stange desice, as these marine monstara were held in the utmost herror liy the tharels of olf. In the ballad of Agute, when hev merman comes to the Englinh church to fetch home his sumse, it is sting-

$$
\begin{aligned}
& \text { "When the merman into the elmedrenap trands, } \end{aligned}
$$

but they were English saints, nad knew how to cumpurt themselves.
 rom lay wom. It is at once a charming yet anstere old edities, in the style of modiarval manor-hemses. The low dugern-ike vailes that open upom the luke, resembling those of Chillon, will long dwell in my memony, The su-called rom of the knights, of which all the windiws operied unen the ren, was the most splentid. 'Ihe Gothic chimerephere wan of inspiring magnitude mad good derign. Acenriang to tradition, the Chatelaine of Rygaard, whe first iwelt in this feudal residence, nsed to sit in a corner ut thix chimere, awaiting in wain the return of her haslmad, a followery of King John, son of Christian I. There she span from her distaff, seated on a chair of tapestry, withont looking at the Belt, or swerving from her melinelaly thonghts, and her servauts grew ohd nround her seateif on wonlen stools at their tire-places ake, where they would consume, at times, the trunk of a whole tree hat boisteroms gaicty was ever banishel from that illfited homse.
We also visitel several remmants of grenter autiquity in the meightomenencl. Among these was a Scmudinavian elolmen (der, wable; men, stone), comporen of tive colossal monoliths, summmed by one gigantio steme. It is said to be the lust of a riking, whese ramins were tirst hurnt ou the stane table, and then phated in an urn. Which was dug ont of the gromm helow. It belonged th the surnd age, or that of thana: ins Sent dinas zam Areheolegy-maw abo ablepted in sombimit. Thure are many thimali in the same mightumband, most of which have been opened, and ams math hatio sils in stome, broma, and iron have luen obtainel trom them. These relics belonged to the three difliment nges, which have heen limited by somer the tivet to ten thamsand yens; the second to twenty centuries: and the thiril to two centurise befine Clirist.

The stonn momment abowe deserilied is near Svindinge, and thare is nem Tanrup a tumulus to which a tairy legernel attaches itselt: A beamiful young Damish princess set forth to visit her amot, Esa, who was married to the Sason hro Wittekimb, amil who elwelt in the cistle of Wittekindsberse near Aimen Une of Wittekind's sons fell in love with the somig princess. He was a tiry and andacions pagan, and she was mexlest and aCluintian ; so she lecame terrified at having attracted his notice. Yet it was not eany to withdraw, and if she diil he wonld follow, so in such a predicament she appealed to the Virgin fir nial. This was granted to her, and she was changed into a doe, and in that shape Prineess Vola (for such was her name) thed over the lills and valleys, acrose plains and through firests, as fiur an the Baltic Sea. But she was followal ley the emumured 'Thomam, an Witteking', alhernative hut to eant hermelf into the sen, which sho did: and sher swam sor eftectively that sher wathest Langeland, and thone her matise comety limen, where she resumad her natmal form. Thomsime, on hispart. hail done the sane. Ho hat thrown himsilft, whith his steral, into the sea, mad arrived in saffety at funm, shintly aiter the prinerese lint when she saw him tiatigne, yot inthexithe in his heve, his stred shaking the bring thial from his homg mane null gory damks, ha: hemrt was moverl with the passion that had promptend such dowion. Fola recoived him, and listemed to him Iu louger in fear, that in interewt. Thare was only mu ditlientry which remained to he overome. Thominm was an we have meren, a pagion; to win fitir Vola, lu' not only hemone a thristim, hut memonced his contry with his pugamism, and lised to earn distinetion he well as lowe in Eumen. Ho was, it his lecemse, buried in the fomulus of 'Inarup, atong with the lurse blat had so succonsfully bromsted the lhatie, his arms and Vola's hatadet.

hor first dwelt in this, corner at this chimers, uer husband, a followit in I. There whe spin ciir of topestry, withumt $g$ from her melancholy - ohl around her seated places nlso, where thry trunk of a whule tre banished from that ill-uts of greater autiquity these was a semulinitone), composed of tive I liy one gigantio stome. riking, whose romans he, and then placed in the gromen below. It that of heromes, in Same $u$ arlopited in scoalimel. e same maidhhourlanul, od, :and arme and utenave leecn obtained trutu tu the three dithownt I ly semm: the tiret to ul to twanty eonturies; betime Christ.
we described is near : 'Tanrup a tumulus to es itselt. A lematiful ito visit her ambt, Bia, on hero Wittekiml. and kiudsherg, near Aluthen. a love with the yom, d audacions pagnu, and II ; so she hecame terrinotice. Yet it was not d lie wonld follow, so in d to the Virgin tor aid. dhe was changen into a - Vola (for such wats her alleys, acroses plains and Baltic Sen. But she was momann, in Wittckim1, lis fistluer's lacit hemone arl rutuwal with maper losely jumsumal. lawl wis into the Ne:s, which :has tively that she machal ive combty Fumen, whow 'Thormsinn, on his puty. thrown himselt, with his eed in satity nt finworn, lut whell shee sitw hime lit, wholl with thil amb Et, his nted xhaking thes tio. aut gory flatuk. lur ssion that hat promptend him, amb listemed to him wh. There was only nhe a overcomes. 'Thorinuman ; to win fitir Vula, las tut renomed his comery to cam distimetion a ${ }^{2}$ an, nt his devernse, hmried ug with the horse aloat tho Bultic, his urmes nul

II.

Middhlpart - Odense and Odin - Misdebds and Suppeginas op Cilbistian If, -Ploughino Gifosts-Mtrder of St. Knel - The Traitob Blakee - Feseral of Ciristina Menk-Tife Lady who Danced meliskle to Dratit -Tirs Prt Cats of Mis. Mouse - Kino, Joiln axd lis Famili-The Leab of Odense and his Davohtris.

Turene is a very good road from Glorup to Middelfart, amid lakes, villages, fields of wheat, of barley and of onts, woods and pastures. Yet it is a long journeysome thirty miles-to tho last-mentioned forest and maritime town, whence wandering in the woods, or loat excursions on the Little Belt, may be enjoyed in perfection. The maner of Hindsgave, situated upon a small but thickly-wooded promontory, about a quarter of a mile from the town, is consilered to be one of the finest seats in Denmark. On the old castle hill ere the mins of the royal castle of Hegnasgave, celebrated in Danish history, and which was destroyed by the Swedes in 1659.
Two miles from Middelfart, on the romi to Olense, the little village of Visenberg, situated on theminence, commands a tine and extensive view of the fertile and highly-eultivated country, which bears some resem Wance to parts of England, this being the only province of Denmark proper where the fields are inclosed by living hedges, chietly of lilac. On the same road is llolsten Honse, one of the residences of Baron de Holsten-Carisius. The baton is a noble-looking uhd man, with a most intelligent expression of countenance, a kind heart, and ambiable in eonversation. Desides his fief of thlense, lie hiss ot her temures in duthand and in Funen, whe partienlarly at Faborge from whemee a most compreleusive riew is obtained of the Baltic its numerous islands.

Odense is the eapital of the provioce of Funen, stul the most ancient and considerable of tho provincial towns of llenmark. (Sie p.336.) Iy popplar tradition it derives its name from Odin, the chief of the Asas, who is said to have founded the town, and whose sepulchral tumulus is shown near the little lake of the Nasbyhnvet, a quarter of a mile north of Odense, where are also the remains of the very ancient Custle of Nreshyhoved.

The Cathedral of Oilase, one al the fuest in Den. murk, was fommed by C'mute, of Kinul $1 V^{\text {., }}$ in 1080 , in honeur of the English Saint, Alhun, who was a great fivenurite with the king. Afte Kinul was mumbered, and the - Danish clergy, anxions to have a mational suint, hat provailed upon the l'ope to eanonise him, his remanins wore deposited in the ehureh oft St. Albm, wheh thencetorward has horme the name of St. Kinul. Annexed to the chureh wis tormerly an abbey, founded by Erik, Kund's lyother and successor, for twelve Eughish monks, whom he brought over from Evesham. The elmrel was cousumed by fire in 1247, and was restomel in 1300 ly bishap Gisico. Several of the monuments in the interior of the chareh are very interesting. In the town hall (Rambuset), an ancient buiding, wore sometime hehi the diets of the nobles, which sunerseded the mational assemblies of Denmark. It was at one of there diets, in 15007 , mbler kirelerick 1. , that the ruformed party in Denmark gained its tirst victery over the Rommn Catholies.

Odense Castle, built by Prederick $1 V$., is the seat of the governur of the province ol Fyen; this uppointment boing genemally held by the lrine Roynl, who hohls his court at Olinge.

Our excellent friend Hans Christian Andersen, whose aminble conversation once relieved the tedium of a long quarauine at Orsova on the Danube, and Jerichnn, the sculptor, are both natives of Odense. It was near Otense that was fought, on the 14 th of November, 1659 , the battle which placed Funen in the possession of the Dutch, the Imperialists and the Danes commanded by Shack and by Ahlfeld. Charles Gustavus of Sweden heard the firing at Forsor, and he was joined thero the next dity by General Stenbock and the Count Palatine Sultabael, who passed over the Belt in disguise in a fisherman's boat.

The chapel of the Ahlfelds, or Ahsefelds, with its bronze figures, ita steel coats of armour and marble tombs of most original design, constitutes one of the greatest curiosities in the cathedral. The chapel of the Walckendorf centains the elobalmed borly of Christima Munk, the semi-oflicial wife of Cluristian IV.-the Beamnis of Denmark. There are also some bas-reliefs over tho mansoleum of Christian II. ; a Count of Rantzan sculitured in relief in granite, and a figured brass, behind which are the bones of a Prince Cituute, who was assassinated, that are well deserving of attention.

The little river or eanal, seen in our sketeh, page 336 , is both animated and pieturesque. The harvests of almost the whole island are exported by this waterway. I'he streets are alike remarkable for their picturestueness and for their extreme cleanliness. There are new honses and new streets that are straight, and old houses and old strects that are erooked, and there are fronts of all colonus-grity, white, brown, green, red, and lilace. There are flowers in jots and birds in coures at every bateony and every window. Funen is called the gardin of Denmark, and Odense is, to all

The eathaylad fumbed hy Jlamhl Dlantand in 980 and whinh riginally belonged to the convent of Recolets, coutans the sebulchres of Juhn as well as of his $\operatorname{son}$ Christiun II. John ase sed the throne in 1481 , on the death of his father Christian 1., and in 1497, renewing the union of Kalmar, obt. ne'\} the crown of Sweden, which the Swerles, howe ver, did not long permit him to enjoy. Hu died on the 12 th of lichrunry, 1513, having on his liath-bed :umonished his son Chistian II.; admoninmens which had no etlect on at brast ahrendy corrupted ly power, and impatient for dominion. John, says the fuatint trawether Coxe, weuld liave aeted more wisely had ha' a deavoured to render the infint mind of his pans -1 w receiving the im[usasions of virtne, and | nut shametully neglected his elncation; a crime hizhly reprehensible in a father, hat unpardotable in a novervign, who is perhaps rearing a tymont for his sulyerets, and contailing on his conntry a series of evils for which he is himself chiefly accoutatile. Historians agree in representing John as a wise and prulent prince, inclined to peace, but entorprixing in war ; mad as generally moterate and lumane; almitting, however, that he perpetrated occasional acts of violence and ernelty, derived from a species of melameloly monduess, that preyed upon his mind, muld at times deprived him of his senses.

His son, the cruel and antortmuate Christian II., lies entombed near his father, under a $1^{\text {bain grave-stone, }}$ somewhat misad, lut withont inseription. He was born at Nyborg, on the smi of July, 1481 ; and discoverd in his youth symptoms of a lively genius and good malerstanding, which, if properly cultivated, might have rendered him the ornmment, instead of the dishonour, of his country. The young prince was entrusted to a common burgher of Copenhagen, and afterwards removed to the house of in sehoolmaster, who was a canon of the catheliral. In this situation his chief employment consisted in regularly necompanying his master to church, where he distinguislied himself beyond the other scholars and choristers in chanting and singing psalms. He was afterwards consigned to the tuition of a German preceptor, a man of learning, but a pedant; muder whom, however, he made a considerable proticieney in the Latin tonguc. From this humble edueation Christian imbibed a taste for bad company, and was accustomed to haunt the common taverns, to mix with the populace, to scour tho streets, and to be guilty of every excess. The king at length, informed of those irregularities, reproved lim severely; but as the prince had alroady contracted habits which were grown too strong to be erudicated, these admonitions were too late. He feigned, however, contrition for his past behaviour, and again won the alleetions of his father by his military successes in Norway, and by an unwearied application to the affin's of government.

During the first years of his reign, which commencel in 1513 , his administration was in many respeets worthy of praise ; and the oxcellenee of many of his laws has indoced Holberg to affirm that if the character of Christiun II. was to be determined hy his hws, and not by his netions, ho would merit the appellation of good, mather thun of tyrant. Huppy would it have been for himself and his people, had he continued to reign on the same principles.

At first all his enterprises wero crowned with suecess; le abridged tho power of the Mainh nulility; and exalted the regal prerogatives; he obtained the crown of Sweden by conquest, und was even prochamed hereditary sovereign of that kingdom. A prudent and temperate aso of these ndvantages might have ensured lim a long and undisturbed possession of the throme;

KIEL.
but his natural disposition, now freed from nll restruint by prosperity, harried him to the perpetration of the most flagrant acts of tyramy. The dreadful massatere of Stockholm, in which six hunctred of the prometpal nobility were put to the sword, mader the semblhance of law, und unid the rejoiciugs for lis cormation, whibited such a striking instance of his maligunt ant inpheable character, that, on the success of Gustavus Vasa, the spirit of resistance diffused itself rapidly from Sweden to Denmark, where ho had exnsperatal his subjects by his repeated oppressions, und the conlidenee which he placed in the lowest and nnost worthless favourites. ${ }^{1}$

> TThe first of these fivourites was the infiunous Sigredit, mother of the king's inistress Diveke. This erfful woman, who wis a native of Holland, nnd had kept un inn nt Hergen In Norwny, ever after her daughter's denth, retained suel power that she might ho atyled prime minister: sho was the ouly chanael of favour, transmeted all affuirs of Importance, had the care of the finances, superintended the eustoms of the sound, and had, In a word, nefuired kull a womberful nsemadaney over the infatuated monareh, that her induence was atribated to fascimation. On the king's dep.sition, Sigrebit was so muel detested, that, from apprehensionso of the pupular fury, she was conveyed in a chest on Dosard the vensel wheh earrled Christian from themmrk. Hollewg udity, she consoled the king for the lows of lis crown, by nssuring him that, throegh the emperor's interest, he could int fail of bing chosen burgomaster of Amsterdin. The partienturs of this womm's hife sulsequent to hor esenpe from Denmark, nre not known. The other livourite of ('hristian, no lese infanous than the fermer, was Nichodas Slugebeek, originally a barber of Wesiphalia, and reeonmended to the kling by his relation Sigrobit. It rendered himself' oo useful to Christinn ty his sabguinary mitviep at tho massacre of stockholm, and by being the instrument of his ernelty, that he was rewarded with the arehbishopric of Lambin. Not long atherward, however, the king threw on his fivouriteal, the olinm of the mussucre, and snerithed him to the publice vengenners the usfortunate vietim was first racked, and then burnt ulive, exhibiting a melanchuly example what little conflienec is to be reponed in the tiveor of a tyrmit.

In 1523 Christian was publicly deposed lay the states of Demuark, ant tha crown transfermed tis his uncte

Frederick Duke of Holstein. This deposition was ncither the consequence of Frederick's intrigues, nor of party spirit ; but occasioned by the just and universal detestation which pervaded all ranks of people, and had more the appearan - of a new clection on the demise of the crown than of a revolution which deprived a despot of his thronc. Christian himself was sensible of the general odium, and, though hy no means deticient

CHATEAU OF GLORUP.
in personal courage, made not the least eflirt to retain $\mid$ Isabellat he had married. Ater many delays and solipussession of that throne which lue had often dishonoured. Quitting Copmbagen, he reprired to Autwerp, under the protection of Charles ${ }^{\prime}$., whose sister attempts, howover, proving unsuccessful, he fell, in 1542, into the hands of Frederiok $\mathrm{J}_{\text {, }}$ and was convigned a prisoner to the castle of Sondeborg, a strong fortress in the Isle of $\mathbf{A}$ isen.

Isabellit he hatd married. Alter many delays and solicitations at the different courts of Europe, he at length collected, by the empror's assistance, a flect and amy, with which he invadel the Danish dominions; lis

The place of his confinement was a dungeon, with a small window, admitting only few mas of light, throngh which his provisions were conveyed. Having entered this gloomy eell, with a fivourite dwarf, the sole eome panion of his misery, the door was instantly walled up. Even the horrors of this situation were aggramated by the denth of his only son John, who expirel at Ratisbon in the fifteenth yesr of his age, and on the sumo day in which his father was taken prisoner. The premature decouse of this accomplished prince, whou he tenderly loved, and on whom he rested his sole hopes of enlargement, reducell him to a state of despondency. After mach anxious solicitude by what means he could convey intelligence of his dreadful situation to his daughter, the Electress Pulstine, and to the Emperor Charles V., the king jrevailed on the dwarf to conuterfeit sickness, and solicit his removal from prison for the recovery of his health. If snceessfin, he was to seize the first opportunity of escaping from the Danish dominions to the court of the Electress, that she might eugage the Emperor to intercedo with the King of Deumark for some alleviation of her tather's sufferings. The dwarf accordingly feigned siekness, was tramsferred to the neighbouring town, eluded the vigilance of his gusidx, and made his escape; but was overtaken at Resburgh, scarcely a day's journey from the Danish confines.

Christian, frustrated in this attempt, and deprived of his faithful associnte, fingered for some time in total solitnde, until mold soldier, worn ont with the fatigue of the war, offered to share the king's imprisonment. The veteran beiug immured in the dungeon, monsed the royal prisoner with varions ancedotes on the diflerent princes and genevals under whom he had eulisted, and by deseribing the expeditions and hattles in which he had been present, and as he han served from his earliest youth, was a person of much observatim, and by mature loguncions, he assisten in relieving the tedium of Christian's captivity. Nor did any event, scarerly the loss of his som, more sansibly affect the deposed sovereign, than the death of this soother of his misery, who expired in the dungeon.

After a confinement of eleven years in his original cell, Christian was at length removed, through tho intercession of Charles V., to a commodious apurtment in the same caste, provided with suitable attendants, aud indulged with the liberty of visiting in the town, attending divine service in the public church, and hanting in the neighbouring district. Yet even this chunge of situation, which had heen so long the sole object of his wishes, conld not make him forget that he was still a prisoner, the recollection of which affected hinn oceasionally to such a degree, that he would suidenly burst into tears, throw himself on the ground, utter the most bitter lamentations, and continue for some time in a state appronching to insauity. However deservedly odions Christian II. may have sppeared in the former parts of his life; yet lis sulwequent suftierings raise compassion; and it is a pleasing natisfaction to every humane mind, that he recovered from his lespondency, and acquiesced in his finte with perfeet resignation.

In 1546, after in confinement of sixteen years and seven months in the castle of Souderborg, he was conveyed to the palace of Kinllenborg, in the Isle of Zeabiand, a phace to which he was purtienharly attached. Chnistian 111. repaired in person to Assens, received his fallen rival with great marks of attention, and promised him every combert which conld tend to alleviate his sitnation. These musual homomes, joinel to his remuyal from thate where he had experienced so much misery, and the prosprect of again inhabiting his favourite palace, excited transports of joy, and he compared himself to a person recalled from death.
Being conducted to Kallenborg, he had the antisfiction of tinding these promises religiously fulfilled. He survived this harpy change ten years; and his mind was so softened by adversity, that, old as he was, his death was hastenced by afliction for the loss of his benefactor Christian III. He died on the 24th of Jaumary, 1559, in the seventy-eighth year of his age, and in the thirty-sixth from the period of his deposition.

Marryat likewise proceeded from Middelfirt to Odense, and he thus relates his experiences. We lund at Middelfart, and, whilst our carriages sro preparing, wander down to the shore-side. The "red eibbbage," sprung from the blood of of Sir Niels Bugge, was not, however, there; perhaps we may next time be more lucky. Then on to Odense, twenty-four English miles, over a road straight as the crow tlies, a hill always before you, and, when you are at the top, another. The land is rich and highly cultivated, bat you sigh after the expansive wastes of Jutland. It is divided into small fields-like England, were the hedges of quickset; here they are mostly of lilac. This division was rendered necessary by the diabouesty of the inhalitants. "Cursed is he that removeth his neighbour's hadaark," we all know, but we are ignorant ef the punishment assigned hereafter to those who commit this crime. The Fionese declare that the ghosts of the culprits are compelled to plough the fiedds from which they ualawfully removed the stones, to all eternity; and in the villuges of Ryslinge nul Lorup they may still be leard of a night speeding their ploughs for the benctit of no one. Across a hill, too, ealled Graibjerge, the geanant will tell you it is dangeroas to pass after nightfall, for the mary pedestrinn may suddenly find a ved-hot rein poked into his hand, and be compedled to plough ats longe is the turtured spirits care to repuse themselves. In this case there is bat one resombe: kick ofl your shors-sabots, if you wear them-and, when you turn back, shove your fect quickly into them, and take to your heels.

Oh for the meadow of Menved ! its eight square miles of haycoeks! Stully, oproressive Fumen! We may grow hed to it, bath at present we despise her "prettiness" from our heart's core. At last comes Oileuse-not a had town, with long streets and fine churches. A caual alone connects it with the fiord. Despicable place! a city-cupital, too, of a Danish iwland-and no water anve a murmuring brook I No historie interest can ever make up for such a disappointment, so the sooner we are off from the clean bat noisiest of all noisy post-houses the better.

Don't inquire the etymology of the city's name, and raslily plange into the vortex of real Odins and false Odins. It won't pay. The statue which once stool on the so-called Odin's höi, has long since disapnuarcd. Let un tarn at once to Knud the Holy, of whom we have heard so much—not Knud, flashed with the hopes of victory, alnut to sail with his mighty fleet to wrest his relnellioas province of England from the Normansnot Kund, prosperinas lord of tho castle of Sjorring, which we visited together one windy day-but knud, in the fiair Isle of F'men, with a few followem, a fugitive from thone opror-ions of all sulijects the Vemblel boers. On his journry none succoured him, sive one, and that one " granite boulder: The wenry king, on his way from Midelfart to Odense, samk down from wheer fatigue on the rock which lay by the way-ts of joy, and he comfrom death.
5, he had the satisfacigiously fulfilled. He years; and his mind at, old as he was, his for the loss of his died on the 24th of th year of his age, and d of his deposition.
from Middelfart to is experienees. We st our carriages aro hore-side. The " red of of Sir Niels Bugge, ps we may next time Odense, twenty-four ht as the crow tlies, a en you are at the top, highly eultivated, but stes of Jutland. It is gland, were the hedges ly of lilac. This divithe diskonesty of the removeth his neighput we are ignoraut of $r$ to those who commit that the ghosts of the the fichls from which tones, to all etemity; and lonup they mily or their ploughs for the tos, ealled (iraalyjerge, langerous to pass after -ian may suddenly find min, anil be eompelled I spirits eare to repose is but one resource: you wear them-and, fret !uiekly into them, ved ! its eight square [ressive Funen! We resent we despise her core. At last comes long streets and tine ects it with the fiord. pital, too, of a Danish lurmuring brook! No e up for such a disapoff from the clean bat the letter. of the city's name, and of real Odins and false tue which onee stool long since disapnared. the Moly, of wiom we flushed with the hojes is mighty fleet to wrest id from the Normansthe castle of Sjorriug, windy day-but Kumd, a few followers, a fugi1 sulojects the Vemdel accoured him, save one,

The weary king, on dense, sauk down firon lich lay by the way.

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.
side. Tonched, says tradition, by the sozrows of the unlucky monareh, the hard granite softened, and the king enjoyed an undisturbed rejose, as on a bed of down, till the morning dawned, and he continned bis journey.

A mong his suite was Earl Eshern, ealled Blakke, ov the "red-haired," from his shining loeks. Knud loved him much, but he proved a traitor. He assured the king there was no danger; that instead of passing neross the Great Belt he might repose at Odense. When the king was in the sanetuary of St. Albnn'sehurel_-English St. Alban's, a fivourite saint of our own Great Canate, and founder of the edifiee-Blakke persuaded him the Vendels had returned to Jutland, so he slept puietly together with his two brothers. Blakke then ealled to the peasants," Go romed and shoot the king through the window." They did so. Kund was kneeling lefore the high altar, with his brother Benculict, when a javelin, hurted through the window, laid him low. The king, feeling his end was nigh, prep lared, his arms folded, to meet his death with dignity. He prayed for his enemies; but he was very thirsty, and deminnded to drink; thereon a young man ran to the fonntnin in lie market place, and tilling an earthen pot with water, gave it to the dying king, jassine it through the window on his sjear ; but an old peasiat with his axe struck it down. 'Hhe king looked up; their eyes met, amd a few moments after the king expired. That nan was never again tanquil ; the alying gaze of the king, wer metient and so sad, for ever hannted him, and he died shortly atterwards in great ngolis.

It is related in the sime Chroniele how, while the small lout trinsty hand of the king clefended his pierson, the fulse Blakke killed the groml Bunedict. brother of the kiug. Blakke himself was slaiu in the tight ; mad when the hattle wis over, these two were temul lying side by side. The bluod of the prine flowed in a long strem of reeking gove along the pavement to the right, that of the traitor to the left : even in thenth theio life-blood would not mingle. Ahout the year 1100 Kund was canonised, and his hody is interved within the ehurch which hears his mame in a plenelial sherine above the high altar. His hrother Bemedict is allowed to repose by his side. You may see them now, nach in a earved oak box, Benerliet's liy far the smartest. He and the holy Kund remain, no longer regarded as relies and holy, in a chapel of the huilding, and their mondering legs, oner the ndmiration of thousimuls, may still be diseerned, half powder, through the ghass apritures of their coftins. There is mo image of St. kinud here extant, but in the village of Branninge, by Ribe, yon may see one, a very aneient earved figure, in the fill armonr of the day, his had covered with a monk's eap.

Adela, his widowed quep, wanted, on her retirement from Denmark, to carry off these procions relies to Fhnters. Harl she persisted in the execution of her whim, she wonld huve met with the same fito as the saint himself: Deprive Odense of hur "apothek" nud head doetor! Furious, the inhahitants resented the iden. "Did he not eure every disense! $A$ most skilful eculist, ho restored sight to the hiind! For rheumaties, he land no equal! and for the purification of the blood, never talk of la moutarele blanche, when St. Knud is to be got at!" Though a saint, ho had his spécialité, and particularly prided himself on his success in all cutaneous disorders.

So Qneen Adela, who bad no particular faucy for being proked with a javeinin, retired to Flanders, and left St. Knud to the adoration of the multitude.

His church is a dine building of exquisite proportions, spuiled by the motern fittings and loggie of the last centuries, used by the monarch and the heir-apparent (who genemlly held the post of governor of Funert), us well as by their guests; for Ollense lass had a world of tine eompany in hev days of splendour, Our cwn George I., anong the number, in the old Electress's lifetime paid a visit to Denmark, to ChristianV.,-came to see his old aunt the dowager queen-always kind to the Palsgrave fimily. But Odense is out of fashion now ; her palace unteranted. Next on our list of royal fulks appen's Erik Lam; he turned monk. I've no patience with your rois fainéaus who turn religious to get out of this worll's trondes. It is not religion at all-all sneaking, uothing more nor less.

Then comes Kiing Joln, whose splendid sepulehral slab, removed from the extinct ehureh of the Gray Friars, lies imbedded in the wall-a tine specimen of its preriod: the king arrayed in his royal robes, and good Queen Christina, who here died $15^{\circ} 1$, standing by his side; leetween them their youngest son, I'rince Franraseus, a small boy, in full costume, with golden chain. to which hangs a promant rose, some old Poje's present. Within the same vanlt, but no momment ereeted to his mennoy, lies Chistian II., together with his father and mother, at last at rest. Marl by stands the cont of arms, in carved wood, of young Prince Franciseus, bearings of the house of Oldenborg; observe the sup,porters, wild men not yet monlted, well eoated with hair-lanir, however, we nll know, will not last for ever, and the savages of the Danish arms have, like the rest of the world, become liahd.
hefore we close the lint of ruyalty, observe that velvet cotlin- plain, simple eoffin-a duchess's eoronet, " C. M." the initing-worthless Chistina Munk. We have visited ler birtloplace, assistol at her marriage, her disgrace, hor death, and now she lies interred, or rither exprest, in the chapel of St. Knual's church of Odenst-requiescat in paces! Christina had the good lack to die at the moment when Ulfed and his wife were at the height of their prow-so on her deathhed sle was attended hy the hof-preacher of Genemal Wraugel, as woll as hy the king's doetor. Her coffin was brought to Odense, met outside the town by the malility, inm buried in the fresence of her children and gramelibder ull arrayed it white clothing. So aiter all she was inierted as a countess, and hot as Mis. Christina of louller.

We will first enter the splendid chapel of the Coments of Ahlefeldt, ateally moble dormiturine. Look at the lmmers, the amomr, the eollins, all gilt and engraved; mothing in death and dust cin be nomo magnifieent. Thirteen warriors of this house fell in the Ditsinark combat, when the sacerd baner of the Dauehrog was lost to the Inanes fir ever.

Uliserve that figure of a lady in a dark broemde deess and tight cossage, with ehoking rufl. No beantyLady Margaret Skovgaud is her name, a lady ot great pussessions. Sho was young and finir, and loved the revel nul the diance. At a bill at Odense she danced with twelve suecessive knights - hanles, comantos, and what not; dances not like our calm meanderingr quadrilles of the minetcenth eentury. she daned, and would not stop, till she eould no more, and fell exhamsted, clemi, at the feet of the twellth kniglat, her partner. He-for the age of chivalry was not yet aver

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

-cansel, at his own expense, this stone to be erected to her memory, und, like the rivals Cap met and Montague, hau it richly gilt. "Stuff and nonesense 1 " cried fourth Christian, when he saw it (he was elected to his throne in Olense); "bring me a tar-barrol. Tako a lurosh anil tar the jade all over. I am not going to lave my devotions (Christinis levotions l) disturbed by her gold and glitter." But Christinn comnted without his host, old Time; for, nfter a huse of more thun two centuries, the tar is peeling off; the gold reuplearing, and jerhups she will again rival the gingerbread of the eomitry tairs in her glittering tivery. Scaudulons prople dechare that the Lady Margaret hal rufused to lend money to Christian during har lifetime; it was on this necomit that he revenged himself. For the credit of St. Kund, all coffius are elosed to the publie, even that of Mrs. Muns, wife of the tirst protestint prilate of the diocese, whet, in orter to prove she was above the prejulices of her "race," caused herself to the buried along with her four pet eats, each grimulkin elothel in grave-clothes of white satin, with a little black velvet eap and feather phacel on his teline hemb-a story muel in tasmur of the endibacy of the elargy, if bishopis wives made such fools of themselves.

I have done my best to like Odense, but ean't. I have monnted the lofty tower of St. Kmul's chareh, and num not enthusiastic about the view, though anything like the steepness of its lalden I never canme neross. In the chureh of Our Jady is the splendid altar-piece, hrought from the longsince destroyed convent of the Gray Brothers, executed in the town of Odense, nbout the year 1520, by Clius Berg, whose name deserves to be handed down nomong the artists of his aye. It was a present from good Queen Christina to that fraternity, a body much patronised by the enrly minnhors of the Oldenborg tamily. In the lowest division, ranged on ereh sillo of the tigure of Christ, stand King Joln ami his family; the likenesses, if the portraits of the day aro to be trustel, are almimble. To the right bemels King $\mathbf{T}_{\text {ohn }}$ himself, followed hy his simsChristian II., the fac-wimile, heard and all, of the portrait of Christimsborg, a rathialy-looking fellow, and his younger brother, the youthful Franeis. On the female side, Queen Christina; then young Elizabeth of Austria, the fair sjouse of neglectfil Christinn. And last, mother Elizalieth, known to readers of CarlyleElizabeth married to the elector of Braadenbirgprotestant ways inelined-caught by one of her unmusous danghtors tripling in her creel, receiving the commmaion in both kiads. "I'll lrick her up," roarel her husband in his ire. Elizabeth was too good a Latherim not to hite lreal and water; so off she sets, with not a change of linen to her lack-mends her broken asletree with her veil-travels night and day till she gitus the dominions of her mighbour the protestaut Duke of Sixony, and never returns to her lushand more. Joachin dechared he meant nothing; but as his wife was well out of his reach, it was all very tine-she, for one, never believed him. There she bends - nice-lowking, with plaited tresses - the only representation of her extant in the Danish dominions.
I am perfectly aware that Palnatoke, founder of the Hvide finnily, whom we have had hefore it Marienlyst, uproarious like the rest of the warriors in Mamald Bhetooth's time, got himself slain somewhere by here; and I have remi a description, to whieh only Froissart or dear Miss Stricklund could do justice, af the fendal homage done by the Dukes of Holstein, Johu and Adolf, to our good King Frederic, in 1579. Anything so smart as they all were no one can imagine. But the noise and the dust of Oilense, nothing will ever make up for it.

Though Augsburg enn boast her Fuggers, Odense can boast her Bagers; but in this latter case I am afraid virtue becomes its own reward, and the Bager family maks not high among the counte of the Danish dominions. Olaf Bager was a rich merchant, und a man of noble and generons sentiments. He lent money to his king, the second Frederic, who when he visited Odense never failed to sup at the honse of his friend and subject.

Pudling and sweets, ns you well know, are servel anyhow in the northern elimes, in the middler of dimener, an the cook or honsewife wishes it. One night at stl|per King Erederic praised highly some conserv's of apricots. "What a bouquet, too, they have !" axclamed the king. "Wait," replied Bager, "till the dessert; I will give you some incense which will smell tar sweeter." The sipper over, an incense-burner, laden with perfumed cedar-chips, was brought in, min the top of which was laid a mass of papers.
"Will your majesty deign to light the pile ?" mequested Bagre, offering a matel. His majesty dil so most armeionsly, and with quiet satisfiction saw relucel to cinders his own bonds for sums so enormous he haw little hopes of Iefrayiug the delt. This is historical; but here the Danes were not tirst, for Fugger lised in Charles V''s rei~ , some years previons. Time rolled on, and Bager has - numerons fumily, some twolve or fourteen-you may see them all upon his epitaphinn. He portioned his danghters, got ruined later, and hal, tike King Lear, to come to his chilltren for help and refuge; lat they treated him badly. "Ho had much hetter," satil they, "have kept his honds, insteal in' ruining himself tor his sovereign's sake, and becoming a burden to his timily." So Olat, sick at heart, determines to try a ruse. He goes romel to his varions friends and merchants with whom he hat once hat deaings, and reterns with a heavy cofler, which he deposits in a phace of safety, well closed with wroughtiron lock and key. He has, he says, received gitts from some, from others the payment of debts long dur. The contents of the cofler he intends to leave by his will to the child whe trents him best.

A change comes over the spirit of the ungratetel offening ; it is now who shall treat the old man best -ill love and filinl alliection. So Bager, langhing in his sleeve, cuds his days in pence and comfort. Hecan make no distinction at his death; all have been kind to him, "his dutiful children;" the contents of the eoffer are to be equally divided amongst then; it is heary enough for nill. Olaf bager is condueted in pomp, and honour to his last abode, followed by his sorrowing descendents. Tho will is rend-the cofler opened-and lo ! they discover, what ! a heap ef stonces, a just requital for their undutiful behaviour.

The schlos: gardens form the favourite promenade of Olense. ILere the military musie plays in the eveuing. But notwithstanding its position ns a eapital, its putron saint, its eathedral, and its bishop (there was a dance nt the bishop's lant night), we were very ghad to momit the carringe, and move on along the tiresome claussíe, its dulness nieve relieved by un occasional jicturesque old church nestling among tho treess ule to justice, of of Holstein, Jolin ic, in 1579 . Any. o ono can imagine. e, nothing will ever

- Fuggers, Olense

 s latter case I am rd, and the Biger punts of the Dimish 1 merciant, and aHe lent money (1) when le vixited house of his triend
l know, art served he midille of dimter, One nignt at supsome conserves of p, they hive !" exod Batger, "till the se which will smell an ineense.burner, was brought in, on papers.
kight the pile ?" reHis majesty diul su sficetion saw reluced wo enormous he hat This is historical ; st, fur Fugger lived evious. T'ime rolled ily, sonse twelve or pon his epitaphium. ined later, and hal, ihlilen for help :and y. "Ho hat muth is bonds, insteal of sake, and hecontint siek at heart, detrunnd to his varions mise hal ance hat eotler, whicl he delosed with wroughtsings, rocioivel gifts nt of debts long dur. ends to leave by his est. rit of the ungrateful out the ohd man best Bager, laughing in nd comfort. He can ; all lave been kind the contents of the mongst them ; it is ger is conducted itt sode, followed by his 1 is rend-the cotler nat l a heap of stenes, behaviour. vourite promenade of de plays in the evenition is a capital, its is bishop, (there was t), we wero very ghal on ulong tho tiresome ed by un oceasional nong the trees

III.

Stenbora-Pio Castle-Pieturzsque Islands-Island op Thorseno, tue Appbndiog of Count Waldemar-C'hris. than IV.-Nicnolas Jueg-l'ortraits op the Hocse of Oidenneao.
From Oilense we proceeded to Svenborg, to explore the lovely environs of that pieturesquely situnted little town; the narrow winding streets lying upon the sides of the liills that surround tho bay commanel extensive views of the innmmerable ishumes without it. (See p. 344.) The spires of Nicolni Churel, and the Klosterkirke or Convent Church, tower above the red roofs, and are not withont interest within. There wore thirteen islanls in sight from un. heights nbove the town whence our sketeh is tukeo. First comes Thorseng or Tansinge, with Stynu nad Strynokalo beyond it ; to the lett, were Thoro, Langeland, and Lolland or Laland ; to the right Skaaro, Dreio, Als, Aro, Avernako, und Hierto. Some of theso islands were principulities: Funen has 200,000 inhabitants ; Lanland, 60,000 ; Tangeland, 20,$000 ; \mathrm{Als}, 18,000$; nnd Thorseng, 5,000 .

We navignted from ishand to island, from gulf to gulf, umid the luhyrinths of this arehipehgo so clear to the hero-god Thor. The firmament of Otin was over our hemds, t'ae sen of Wigir hemmath outr feet. Bays, hills, woods, villages, nud linmlets, rivalled with one another in f icturespue beauty. Tho one that pleased us most was 'Thorseng. It belongs to the fanily of Juel, und is the reward of their heroism. It was formerly it tief of the Crow: and Christian 1V. erected a mansion there for his son Waldemar, one of the ehildren her had by Christima Munck. The king was particularly attached to this boy: He wished to marry him to one of the daughters of the Grand Dake of Muscovy, hoping therolay to associate him in a leugue against Swedin; hat this mion, whieh was to lanve insmed the happiness of Wallemar and the preponderanso of Demmark over the eabinet of Stockhohn, was firustrated hy the premature denth of the young man. The eastle of the Ishand of 'Thoreng has preserved the romantic and tagic name of Waldemar:

Wo mudo an asernt of the hill of lbegningo previons to visiting the castle : the churel on this hill is the fantily mansoleum of the Juels. 'Their tombs of anormons gruy stones, are urianged in succession beneath their feudnl vaults uccording to their dntes. Tho view from this hill is, if possible, still more eomprehensive and benutiful than that obtained from Svenborg.

A succession of woods mul com-fields took us to the mansion of Whldemar, luilt as a residence for a priner to whom it was only a sepulehre. Thero is a fine portrait of Christian IV. in this mansion, momed on his celebornted black horse. Ho is depicted ins tall, with an aguiline nose, 1 on oren expansive forehend, and a martial air ; his ryes and month smile at danger; his whole pliysiognomy breathes with eonfidence and trankness. He is a huro leforo leing a king. No wonder that Christian IV. shoule bo the Henry IV. of the Dimes. Victor at Kalmur; he not only commanded his urmies but also his fleets. In 1644 , in a unval engagemont, he was severuly wounded by a splinter which struck him on the fiee nad threw linn on the deek. "The king is dead!" ejuculated the bystmun.urs in their horros. "Nu!" exclaimed tho king, recovering himself, " ho is not diral, but remains to do lis dity." Thero is a pieture illustrative of this incident in the Royal Paluce of Copenhagen. Cliristian was as great a diplomatist as he was ugenerul. His treaties, which he drew up himself, were worth so many victorien He Wis also ns good as he was inrave. His fimons ediet of 1627, in which he forbate all belligerents interfering with non-belligerer.as, is well known. He was magnanimous nuel also magnificent, nnal yet he was economical and orderly in his expenses. His popularity was intmense with the people as well as with the army and navy, and ull the vational songs of Demmark are baset upon his fime.

In nnother roons is the portrait of another heroNiels (Nicolas) Juel. He was the Ruyter of Denmark under Christian V., grandson to Christian IV. It was to him that tho 1sland of Thoreng was given for his bravery nad victories; and ever sinee the pulace of Waldemar has been their residence, and the church of Bregninge their family mausolenm. The palace is full of reminiseences of this hero. The grent sculptured seaelest in which ho put his elothes and linen when on bonral ship, even his little medical chest, are preserved as almost saered relics. A fine painting is also devoted to one of his naval victories, the decisive battle of Kivegebrigt. It was on that day, that his vessel, the ('Iristiau $V$., lueing about to sink: "Genthemen," said Niels Juel to his ofkeers, "the Christian V. has been a noble traget, bring up tho Frederick III., we shall be well anywhere undur the Danish tisg," and ehanging his ressel, withont losing his courage, the intrepid Niels Juel remained master of the field, or rather of the sea. There nre several portraits of this Dinish Nelson. In oue he is in eonrt-dress, with the blue corion of the Elephant, but he looks hest in his leathern jerkin, with his pistols in his waist and great sword by his side. A gold elatin is then his only omament. He has a coloured tace, a mauly expression, a quick bold look. His attitude is commanding, his body robnst. The ishat which ho conquered for his descendauts, surroumed as it is on all sithes ahmost within the runge of the cye by the sea, seems like some linge vessel at anchor. It was a most appropriate gift for a maval hero.

When Marryat was at Svenborg, the place was finll of hathers, the hotel noisy, nul ho seems to have been as little impressed with its beanties as he was with Olense, hut still he uhmits that the town itself, perched on a hill-sidc, must tell better fiom the Ishand of I'horseng, on the opposito sile of tho fiord; but nothing more soft, more pretty, can ine well described than the wood-clothed banks, extending towurls Christinnminde. Onr first stroll did not however run that way; we hetook ourselves in the opposite direction, seduced by the tower of a milk-white chureh rising fiom the woods whieh cmbower it: St. Jorgens it is callend. Here the wickerl Dines declare that St. George fought the dragou. Our English St. George! a great fiblas all men know the combat took place somewhere nenr Tripoli. Dragon or no dragon, it is a lovely spot tho village of St. Jorgens. There has been in former times nn hospital attached to the ehirel, and the view from the ecmetery is eharming. We stopled to gize at the old square court of tho prestegnaril, the entrance-door shaded hy two limes of glorions growth; und were in fill admirution of its pieturesque appenrunce, linyloaled cart nud all, when the son of the pastor came ont, aud begged us to walk in the garden and seo the new house his fathor had lately completed. The ohl garrd was to come down. It was an excellent modern honse-of grenter appearance, and not ugly; no house in Deumark is ever ugly-with its high-pitched roofs und gables, hut a sad exchange for the old limes, the square court, und the parlour-windows on the other side, with the open balcony commanding the blue waters. "Chacuin a son goût, et tous les goûts sout rexpectables;" so say the French.
These villages of Funen, with their abundant fruitgardens nud orehards, remind me of Calvados, and sometimes of our own more primitive hamlets of Devonshire, ly the coust-side: it is rure elsewhere to meet rich cultivation and sea combined. The peasant-women, too, wear an eccentric enp-not like the Cauchois, but much frilled behind-and such a bonnet; like a japamed coul-senttie, formed of glazed nad painted carton, bent; you may purchnse them flat in the shops.

This is a splendid place for bathing, and the esta-blishments-flonting baths, with cradles for non-swimming females-well artanged und niry. Jelly-fish the only drawback; beautiful to gize upon, but most disagreable to the touch; added to which they stingnot anything dire, but a prickly, di a agreeable sensation.
Svendborg rather piques itself on its godf, ther King Svend, though in old documents of the Middle Ages it is more frequently written Sviin, or "Pig Castle." Orthography, we all kuow, was.very fallty until the present century; and the same name, be it town or family, yom frequently find written in ten or fifteen different manners. Still the inhabitants appear to have been so touchy on the snbject, and somebody, to elench the matter, composed some doggrel, which he cansed to be hung up in the church, that I almost believe there to have been some truth in the assertion.
A town planted on a hill is always picturesque. It is something plensimt to overlook your neighbour's chimneys; and when the buildings are of ancient date, queer and rambling, with sterks' nests and fruit-gardeus, it adds to the charm. As you pasy down the street you may read-if Danish be, like the French of Paris to Chancer's Abbess, "to you nuknown"-in the Latin tongue many a wise saw, many a gool old proverb, inscribed above the doorways, coeval with the buildings themselves. Old saws, proverbs, and such like, are now esteemed vulgar ; but many a good principle, many a donestic virtue has soaked into the mind of man as well as womankind, solely from the fact of its being phaced for ever before their eyes. Svandborg was a boyal town to the house of Oldenborg, and Christian III. cvinced his gratitude for her fidelity in 1535 ; "What can I do," he asked of her head magistrate, a priest, one Hans Gass, "to reward your finthful services!" "How," answered the magistrate, humbly, "can a poor goose (Gias) like me have doue service to so great a sovereign ?" Nothing like humility in this world; the Geese became eanohled, and Hans, Archlishop of Tronyem.

We pass through the post-gard garden, luxuriant in trees buden with uripe applss, to the detriment of the stomachs, I should imagine, of the tribs of bibbling children who dwell within - seductive too with skittles and swings; turn into the road through n gate, and by a sharp descent gain the hittle jetty where the ferry-boats already await the passengers for 'Thorseng. A ten minutes' sail brings us to shore. The sma is high in the heavens, and we have an long walk before ns. Svendborg looks better from the other side. Then too you liave St. George's church and wood, and Christiansminde as well; bit our tirst excursion leads us to the elhurch tower of Bregninge, the highest point in the island, from whose summit you gnin a panoramic view of all the Danish archipe-lago-Lolland, Langeland, Funen, Firo, and balf a dozen other Os, small fry, unknown to the world in general-all very flat, very green, very blue, and satisfactory to those who care for bird's-eye views, without a background beyoud the gray horizon.

This Isle of Thorseng, fat though it be, is fair and finitful, the possession of the noble house of Juel, descendants of the gallant Admital Niels Juel, whose tomb we visited in the Holm church of Copenhugen. A pleasant walk ulong the water-side leads to the residence of the lord and master-smiling villages, with gardens, woods, hops, and orchards-a prosperity to make the heart jeytul. Vuldemar Slot, it is called-a huge pile, with gate-houses spacious enough to furuish a residence to any moderate-minded man, built by the fourth Christian, who gave it, with the rich broad lamils surrounding, to his eldest son l'rince Valdemat (by Christina Munk), that good-looking fellow what hatys in the Royal Gallery of Copenhagen, painted by Cill van Mauder. He appears to have been a spoilt buy; as most handsome children are, and later in life rin wild, causing his father some trouble. Christian writes word to his son-in-law Corfitz Uifeh,, in a letter dated 14th September, 1643: "Count Valdemar Christian leaves this to-merrow on a journey through Denuark. God grant him a happy journcy. He has cost me mucle money. Pray Heaven this may be tho last. If yon don't make him careful, he will som spend all the money I bave giveu him hefore he cotnes to Copenhagen, notwithstanding he has got here all that he wanted ; besides which he owes the tailor 20,000 specie." An extravagant dog was Count Valilewar. He endenvoured to persmade Cortitz to go security for him, and "back his bills." So, to keep him out of scrapes, his father sends hita off on an embassy to Moscow, an I negociations are entered iuto for marrying our scapograce to the Rinssian Princess Irene; when all was arranged, Valdemar refused to be baptised according to the Greek Church after the Museovite uanaer. On his tirst introluction into the Czar's presence, by waty of seeking favour with his future father-in-litw, ho kissed the nceptre. The Rassians deelared that from henceforth he becme the vassal of the emperor. When Valdemar disoovered this, he dutermined to leave seeretly; accompunied by three of his attendiants, hu tried to escape through Poland. On arriving at the gite of the eity affer dark, he was recognised and stopped; and, after a pitched batlo between his servants and the Muscovites, was taken prisouer, and kept necure until the death of the Euperor Michel, when he was set ut liberty. On his way home he carried oft a young lady from Warsaw, deserted her, und she drowned herself in the Suund at Elsinore. After Ulfeld's rebellion, disgosted at the colducss with which he was treated by his half-hother Frederie IIL., lie joined the party of his brother-in-law in Sweden, and died in Poland, an otiieer in the Swedish service.

Vuldemar Slot is an ugly pile of brickwow externally, unch degraded, and now, alas! in Chancery, it lawsuit between two brothers. It is, however, worthy of a visit, with its gallery of portraits, one of the most interesting in Denmaris, but fearfully neglected, being uatppreciated by the poseressor's. In one of the: great saloons are hung those of the early sovereigus of the housu of Oldenborg, from Frederick II. down-rom whose summit he Danish arelipe. Aro, and half $n$ $n$ to the world in ery blue, and satis. eye views, without on. it be, is fair and $a$ house of Juel, deNiels Jucl, whose ch of Copenhagen. -sido loads to the hiling villages, with s-a prosperity to Slot, it is called-a enough to furnish man, built by the he rich broad hands ance Valdemar (by gr fellow wha haurs en, painted lyy $\mathrm{C}_{i \prime \prime}$ abeen a spoilt bo", d later in life ran Christian writes l, in a letter dated Taldemar Christitu through Deumirk. Ce has cost me much e the last. If you so on spend all the te comes to Copenth hero all that he ailor 30,000 specie." Hemar. He endercurity for him, and out of serajes, his sy to Mosenw, an I narrying our scapeene; wheu all was baptised accordiag covite manner. Ou r's presence, by way re tather-in-law, ho declared that firom the emperor. When etermined to leave - his attendints, he On arriving at the wiss recognised abl Latle between his taken prisoner, and a Einperor Mieh sel, his way home he arsaw, deserted her, Sound at Elsinore. ed int the colilness y his half-brother of his brother- in-law of an ollicer in the of brickwosk exteralas! in Chancery, it is, however, worthy aits, one of the most fearfuilly negleeted, ssors. In one of the: 10 early sovereigas of Frederick II. downwards, all on horseback, each horse, however, follows that of his predecessor, giviog the whole the appenrance of a royal carousal or merry-go-round.

It was Frederic III, whe, as cadet du sung, commenced life as Archbishop of Bremen-a world of trouble his father had to get him uppointed. There he is; most ecelesiastical too he looks-as like a bishop as the Duke of York did of Osnaburg-a cheval, armed cap-it-pie, distinguished alone from his brethren by the starched plaited ruff of the Lutheran clergy. His duties cannot have been onerous, though to me the wearing of the frill would have been worse than all the penances and fastings of the Romish Clurel. We mount the staircase; on the landing-place hang all the family of the fourth Christian-henvy, drunken Prince Christian, who made way for his brother the bishop and his wife Madalena of Saxony, she with feather-fin in hand and lapdog by her side; Prince Vallemar, tho possessor, though he never resided there, a fine boy-a child to be jroud of, as indeed all Christians werc. And those fair ladies with golden powdered laair, high ruffs, and somewhat nncovered, looking-ghasses and pearls. Who be they? "Those," replied the conductress, "are the twelve frills of King Christian." Powers above 1 twelve! Lump together all the demi-monde of that immoral courtall the Kirstens, Karens, Vibekes-you can never number twelve; but they aro very pretty women, much siperior to the portraits of Rosenborg. I must take the liberty of vindienting three from this sweeping verdict, rhose three exquisite creatures whe hang below teis' $;$ to another period, nomowhat later, and are, if 1 mastak not, authentic copies of some of our English beaucic. © Marnpton Court. One I imagine th be the Princess of Usincre, Mary Stuart, dnugbter of C"iarles I. -she wus good nt inv inte; a second, highly ronged, not unlike the hagghty and inioprious Custlemaire, whom I have alrealy met wiu: in Rosenlryg ; the third, a lady of King Charles's court, surpasvingly lovely. Not to linger, we have, among many others of interest, Queen Louisa of Bagland in all her youth and beauty. What majeaty! what a presarce ! Her portrait is not rare in Fonen. Then there is Niels Juel, tirst as a boy-hofjunker to Duke Frederic-in red jacket and silver buttons, something like that worn at a Spanish luall-fight; ngain repeated, surrounded by his vietories, as Admiral, Knight of the Elephant, Sce., a table with the nanes of his vessels, his eaptiinas, lieutenants, and officers, down to the lowest grade. But of all the portraits of the Juel house, there is one most charming, a laty of the last century, missal in hand, coming out of church, the light of a setting sun firling on her dress through the mullions of a Cothic window, one of those effects of - light so much loved by seme of the Dutch painters; the master unkbown.

My opinion is that to see these islands in their fullest beanty we should have visited them in the month of Muy, in the new-born luxuriance of early spring-time, before the harvest is gathered in and the green fields become stubble. In these northern elimes the summer is bright, but short. The months of May and June, though the days are prolonged till miduight, and twilight is only a clond passing over the fair face of nature, yet are but of thirty days, and soon fly by. Could we extend the year to fifteen months, one nore summer quarter, it would be a great convenience.

IV.

Hew the Goddegs Gefion plovehed the Great and Little Brlts-Slagelsk-Sobo and its Acadeyy-Saxo Geammaticus-Stoey of Hamlet-Legrnd of the Two Cufrer Towers-Absalon, tie Warhioe, abchbishop, and Stategman-Ropae Toubs at Soro.
We had to cross the Great Belt again to pass from Funen to Zealand, and that by the usual ferry, too, from Nyborg to Korsor. It is as on the cuast of Norway, where a relay of boats succeeds to a relay of horses quite as a matter of course along a so-called postal line of communication. There is no getting on in Demmark withont taking to the water every now and then. The great learned nntiquarian, Rask, whose native cottage was pointed out to us near Svenborg, and who lias published the best editions of the two Eddas, explains how it is that Denmark is indebted for its Greater and Cesser Belts. It is all owing to a little arrangement hetween the great persons of the Scandintivian mythology. Odin, carried away by his affection for the groddess Gefion, promisal her one fine day all the land that she could encompass with a furrow in the course of twenty-four hours. The beanty of this cosmogonic poem, who must have partaken as much of the Hercules as of Venus, forthwith harnessed four wild bulls to her plough, and she never ceased to ply its share till she had effectually cut off Funen and Zealand from the mainland. "That is how," said Rask, siniling, "we have these straits and these islands, which once constituted part of the continent of Sweden on the one side, and of Jutland and Slesvig on the other. The world," he added, "has forgotten the goddess Gefion, but the world is ungrateful."

The first town on the way to Copenhagen from Korsor, and the first station on the railway is Slagelse, a lively little town with 3,200 inhabitants, and a fine church of the eleventh contury. In the forest of Antvorskov, immediately beyond the town, was formeriy situated the abbey of Antvorskov, founded by Valdemin I., in 1177. Of one of the monks of this monastery, hu: Anders, the patron saint of Slagelse, the most marvellous :maditinns are still extant. To him, it in said, the town was Erriebted for the extensive lands annexed to it, for Valdemar in=ing promised the town as much land as Holy Anders couis ride round on a new-born foal, the pious monk is said in have mule such speed, notwithstanding his strange courser, thiat the courtiers kept running to the king, who was in his bath, to implore him to stop the progress of the holy man, or he would soon ride round the whole island.

Holy Anders further enjoyed the privilege of hanging his hat and his gloves on the sunbeams, while performing his devotions in the open air, in circumstance which brought him into great repute. An eminence in the neighbourhood of Slagelse, where Auders is said once to have fallen aslcep and to have had a vision, is still denominated the resting-place (Hvilehoion).
Two miles from Slagelse the road passes the lovely Lake of Soro, on the borders of which rises, in noble and elegant simplicity, the Academy of Soro. Seven hundred years ngo, when the town of Soro was but a little hamlet, Asser Ryg, the father of Denmark's greatest statesuatn, Bishop Absalon, erected on this spet a Bermardine convent, which, by the munificence of Absalon, and of his brother, Esbern Snare, soon became one of the richest and most distinguisherd abbeys in Denmark. Here it was that Saxo Gram-

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

maticus wrote his Damish Chronicles. After the introluetion of the reformed religion, Frederiek II. (1586), transformed the nhbey into a foundation sehool, and in 1623, Christian IV., anxious to prevent the Dimish nobles from lenving their own country to prosecute their stulies at fireign universities, us was then very much the fishion, foumded, richly endowed, and connected with this school an neademy for young noblemen, and appointed many foreign professors to instruct them in difterent sciences und languages. The schnol tounded by Frederick II. being not exelusively desigued for noblemen's children, it was considered meeessary to lay down ins a rule that "the children of nobles, who may frequent the sehool, shall hereatter, for several reasons, at meals, in the hours of instruction and of recreation, as well as in their bed-rooms, be sepmatel from the other children who are not noble." This is one of the many instnnees of the profomid enntempt in which the nobles held the other classes, and the utter uneoneern with which they gave utterance to their feelings, circmmstanees which in less than half a century afterwards led to the complete overthrow of their power, and to the estnblishment of the absolute power of the monarehs. In 1754, Soro Acadeny was further endowed by Baron Ludvig Holbers, the Danish historian and dramatio writer, whe at his death broqueathed to it the whole of his property. The spirit of the academy has, of course, in later times, unlergone it ehange, aud the nobles have here, as elsewhere, lost their exclusive rights. Among the present professors are Ingermann und Estrup, whose names rank umong the first in Danish literature. A lovely little cottage on the banks of the lake, and immediately adjoining the nendemy, is allotted to ench of the prefessers, anil the whole character of the place is perfectly suited to tho calm pursuits of seience. The old acalemy was burnt down in 1813, and was replaced by the present building, but the churela of the Bermardines, a very fine ( (othic building, is still extant, and contains within its walls the ashes of Absalon, of Jolberg, and of King Vialdemar IV.

OdENSE CAPITAL OF FUNEN.

The Arademy of Soro boasted a yoar or two ago of 183 students, if whom 64 were warders. This is something hetter than the Qucen's Colleges in Ireland. The wooden gates of the old monastery are still visible. The church is of clarming proportions. It contains several monuments of antiquity, and has two wooden erucitixes, one of the twelthl, the other of the sixtenth century. The most remarkable tombs are those of Waldemar Atteriag, of Bishop Absalon, and of his grandfather Huide. There is also n curious carved chair of 1650 , rather diflic ilt to move.

Suxe Gramaticus, abow $!1!. .1$ - 1 to, was descended from an illustrious bunish family, was lorn about the middle of the twelfth century, mal, on accoment of his uncommon learning, distinguished by the name of Granmantieus. Some authons have erroneonsly conjectured, from his name Sixo, that he was born in Saxony. Ho was provost of the eathedral elureh of lioskild, the Westminster of Denmark, and his tomb is still shown there by the side of that of the Damish princes; but Mallet nrgues from Sperling, a writer of great erudition, that the provost of Roskild was another person, and that Saxo wils sueretary to Absulon, tho celebratod Archisishop of Lenden. It seems certnin that he wis much patrouised by the lemed und warlike founder of the Aeademy of Soro, and it was at his instigation that he wrote his history of Denmark. This history, consisting of sixteen books, begins from the enrliest ern of the Danish nunnls, and concludes with the year 1186. It has long ago been shown by Holberg (to whose memory an anmal funeral oration is made nt sorol, that the fisst part of this history, which relates to the origin of tho Danes und the reigus of the ancient kings, is full of fable; but the eight last books, und particularly those which regurd the events of his own times, deserve the utmost credit. He wroto in Latin, and the style, if we consider the barbarous age in whieh he flourished,

1 they gave utterance hich in less than half ompleto overthrow of hment of the absolute 4, Soro Acadeny was ${ }_{3}$ Holberg, the Janish who at his death berproperty. The spirit later times, undergone are, as elsewhere, lost the present professors e uames rank among I lovely little cottage immedintely aljoining of the professors. ani is pertectly suited io The oll academy was placed by the present e Bernardines, a very ch of lioskild, the Westmb is still shown there ish prinees; but Mallet 'great erudition, that the r person, and that saxo celebrated Arclibishop that he wis much pawarlike founder of the this instigation that he This history, consisting the earliest em of the vith the year 1186. It lberg (to whose memory nade at Sorol, that the h relates to tho origin tho meient kings, is full jooks, und particularly of his own times, deserve in Latin, and tho style, o in which he flourished, is in general extremely elegant, but rather too poetical for history. His epitaph, a dry panegyric in bad Latin rerses, gives no necount of the date of his aleath, which happened, according to Stepbens, in 1204.

94

Sinxo Grammaticus possesses more real interest, however, in the eyes of Englishnen, from the circumstance of his being the original marrator of those events upon which onr immortal hard foumded his great workInmulet.

His neconnt is extracted, and much altered, by Belleforest, a French author; an Enghish translation of whose romance was published muder the title of the Historye of Mamblet, and firm this translation Shakspere formed the groundwork of his play, though with many alterations and alditions.

Acecrling to the Danish ammals, long before the introduetion of Christianity into Demmark, Horwendilius, prefect, or King of Jutland, was nurvied to Gerutha, or Gertime, danghter of Ruric, King of Denmark, ly whom he had n von, called Anlettus, ur Hamet. Fengo murders his brother Forwendillas, marries Gertrade, and asvends the throne. Hamlet, to avoid his uncle's jealousy, counterfeits folly : and is reprosented as such an abhomer of falsehood, that, thongh he constantly fimmes the mest evasive and even absurd answers, yet artfully contrives never to deviate from truth. Fengo, suspecting the reality of his madness, endeavours, lyy various nethods, ${ }^{1}$ to diseover the real state of his mind: amongst others, he departs trom Elsinore, coneerts a mecting between Hmmlet and Gertrude, coneluding that he would not withleld his sentiments from his own mother, and orlerx a comrtier to concerl himself, maknown to botl, the the purpose of owerhearing their conversation.

The courtier repais to the pueenis apartment, and hides himself under a heap, of straw. Hamet, on entering the calinet, suspecting the presence of somo spy, imitates, after his usial affectation of folly, the crowing of $n$ cock, and, slaking his arms like wings, jumps upon the heap of straw, till feeling the conrtier, he dirns his sword, kills him, cuts the loody to pieces, boils it, and gives it to the hogs. Ile thell avows to his mother, that he only personated a fool ; reproaches lare for her incestuons nurriage with the murderer of her husband, und coneludes his remonstrances by saying: " Instead, thewfore, of condoling my insanity, deplore yom own infamy, and learn to hment the detormity of your own mind."

The queen is silent, but is recalled to virtue by these ${ }^{1}$ Among other attempts, Fengo orderad his companions to Jonve him it a retired spot, and a young wown was phaced in this why, with n vicw to extort from him a confession that his folly was counterfeited. Inmet wookd have fallen into the snare, if a friensl hal not seeretly conveyod to him intelligenee of this treselery: he carried the womun to a more secret plaee, mad obtained her promise not to betray him, which she readily gave, as she had leen brought up with him trom har infoncy. Being asked, on his return home, if the had indulged his possion, he answered in the nffirmutive; hut rendered bimself not believed by tho most artful sutterfuges, which, though truc, suemed evidently to mark it disordered undorstanding, and by the positive denial of the woman. "Upon thls woman," as Cajeetl observes, "Is grounded Shakspere's Opilelin; und his delivernnce from this anare by a friend, saggested his Horatio ""-." "he rudo outlines," as Mr. Malone renarks, "of thome charnetr, 's." "luat in this phece there nre no truits of the charaeter of Polonius ; there is, indeed, $n$ counsettor, and he jhuets himeelf in tho Queen's cham. ber behind the arras ; hut this is the whole. The Ghost of the old Hamet is, llikevise the otlispring of our anthor's ereative imagination."
adnionitions. Fengo returns to Eisinore, sends Hamlet to England under the care of two courtiets, and requests the king, by a letter, to put him to death. Hamlet discovers and alters the letter; and on thin. urrivial in England, the king orders the two courtiens to inmerliate execution, and betroths his daughter to Humlet, who gives many astonishing proofs of a thal seculent understanding.

It the end of the year he returns to Denmark, and alarms the court by his unexpected appearance; as a report of his death had been spread, nud prepurations were making for his funeral.

Itaving reassumed his affecterl inssunity, he pros. posely wounds his finger in drawing his sword, which the bystanders immediately fasten to the sealamid. He afterwards invites the principal nobles to mu antrtaimment, makes them intoxicated, nnd in that stat" covers them with a large cortain, which he fantoms tu the ground with wooden pegs; he then sets fire to the palace, and the nohles, enveloped in the curtain, perist In the flames. During this transaction he repuirs " Fengo's upartment, und taking the sword which hay ly the side of his bel, puts his own in its place; he instantly awakens and informs him, that Hamlet is come to revenge the murder of his father. Fengo start. from his bed, seizes the sword, bit unible to draw it, falls by the hand of Hamlet. The next morning, when tho populitee were assciubled to view the ruins of the" paluce, Hanlet zummons the remaining nohles, and, in a masterly speech, lays open the ratives of his own conduet; proves his uncle the assassin of his father, and concludes in the fillowing words.
"Trearl upoit the ashes of the monster who, prolluting the wife of his murdered brother, joinel incest in parricide, and ruled over you with the most oppressive tyranny. Receive meas the minister of a just reveng: as one who felt for the sufferiugs of his fither and his people. Consider mo us the person who has purgel the disgrace of his country, extinguishend the infany of his mother, freed you from the alespotisn of a monster; whose erimes, if he lund lived, would have dily inoreased, and terminated in your dentruction, Acknowledge my nervices, and, if i have deserved it, present me with the crown ; belold in me the nuthor of these advantages, no legenernte prwon, no parricide, bat the rightful successor to the throne, und the piens avengel of a father's murder. I have resened you from slavers, restored you to liberty, and re-established your glory ; I luve destroyed a tyrant, aud trimuphed over an assussin. 'The recompense is in your hunds; you can estimnte the value of iny serviees, and in your virtue $~$ rest my hopes of roward." This apeect had the desired eflect; the greater purt of the assembly shel tears, and all who are preaent unanimonsly proclaim him king amil repented ncelnunations.

Hanlet, soon after his elovation, sails to Enghand, and orders a shiedd to be made, on whieh the principul actions of his life are represented. The king receive him with feigned demonstrations of joy; fulsely assures him that his dangliter is dead, and recommends hin t" repair to Seothnd as his ambussador, und pay his al. dresses to Qucen Hermetruda. He gives this insidious alvice with the hope that Hamlet may perish in the uttempit ; as the queen, who was remarkable for hil chastity und elinity, had such an aversion to nll prob posals of marriage, that not one of her suitors hish esenped falling a sacrifice to her vengennee. Hanlet, in opprosition to all diffienties, performs the emlansg;

Elsinoro, sends IImaldt two courtiers, and reo put bim to death. letter ; and on thin ers the two courtiens rothis his daughter to hing proofs of a triul-turns to Denmark, ane cted appearance ; an a read, and preparations tel insmity, he purving his sword, whicl sten to the scahburd. ipal nobles to an ontir. aten, and in that stat" n, which he fintens to he then sets fire to tho d in the eurtain, perisls nsaction he repuirs til The sword which lay ly wo in its phee; he in$m$, that Himlet is come father. Fengo start. l, but umble to draw it, The next morning, when - view the ruins of the emaining nohles, and, in the rootives of his own e assassin of his father, words.
the monster who, jrollutrother, joinell incest I. with the most oppressive inister of a just revenan. yçs of his father and lis person who has purgel extinguisled the infiuy te despotism of a monster, d, would havo datily in' $r$ destruction. Aeknow. ave deserved it, presen! ine the author of these son, no parricide, Int the $e$, and the pious nemg resened you fiom slavery, erextablishel your glory: nul trimuphed over an in your hands ; yon en ioes, und in your virtue ? Chis speedh had the de. of of the awsembly shel at unanimously proelaina mations.
vation, sails to England, e , on whieh the principal ited. The king receiveons of joy ; fulsely nasurt and recommends him t" bassador, und pay his al.

He gives this insididus Tamlet mey perish in the wus remarkablo fur liwt an aversion to nll pros ; one of her suitow hal her vengennce. llamlet, es, performs the embuss:
and, by the nssistance of his shield, which inspites the lady with a fivourable opinion of his wishlonn and courage, ohtains her in marriage, and returns with her to England. Inlormed ly the princess to whom he is betrothed, that her father meditates his assassination, Hamlet avoils his fate by wearing armour under lis robe, puts to death the king of Eughand, and sails to Demmark with his two wives, where he is soom atherwards killed in a combat with Vigletns, son of Rarie. Hamet, adds the historian, was a prince, who, it his good fortume had heen "upal to his deserts, would have rivalled the gols in splendour ; and in his actions would have exceeded even the libourns of Herentes.
Maryant, when at Feggeklit-sacred, Jae says, in the eyes of all Eughishmen ths the hirthjlizee of our Shakspere's Manlet (Ambeth, as he is called in Demmark) rolates the story in is slightly diffirent way. It wats at Fergelilit, in the lsland of Mors, in the wery caty ages, dwelt two brothers - 1 Hardevembel, fithor of Hamlet, and his hrother bengo. For many vears they lived in amity, renting internately, ciech for the space of three yeas, while the other weut on a pirate expedition, When Fougo witnessed his hrother return laden with spoils, iun the joy ol his wite (ieruthe, Fongo's heart humad with jeilonsy; he determinol to remain at home, aud get possersion mot only of his brother's wealth, but also of his wifi, Protemiding that Germone is ill treated hy her Insband, fengo shay his brother. After their marringe, Ambeth, fiaring for his life, feigns mathess. He rolls abont in the nud, and replies in a ridiculous maner to the questions put to lim. The king, suspicions, endeavours, by mems of is woman's art, to dhaw the truth frome him. Amleth, on his. ga:ard, that day indulges in un-hambl-of vagaries, lle rides out in the finest with his face townols the horse's tail, pretends to mistake a wolf for a horse, mad wishes Fenge hat many sueh chatgers. Now eomes the story of Tolonims. Fengondsents himself, and gives orders to it contidiant to watel Ambeth, and ronema hinself in tho rom when he is atung with his mother. Ambeth, whor has his wits abmut him, BeGore entering intu conversation with his mother, runs, as was his habit, romul the room, flapping his amemal crowing like an coek. Iumping on $n$ heip of straw (in her majesty's bellroom!) he feels something modernenth, runs his sword through, and withdraws the dend borly of the spy. Me cuts it into piews, boils it, mad gives it to the pigs. Them, tuming to his mother, who was weeping over his mathess, he tudtresses hel the most violent repromehes: "Ii yon will prieve, wop not over my malness, but over your own shame and dishonous:" Fengo, atter the disappearmee of his ent of his stepson. He then sembs him to lingland; and herre Shakspuro lus followed the true story: Ambeth malds to the instrmetions for the death of his companions, that the king of Bugland is to give his daughter in marriage. Ampeth is still very queer; he refoses to eat or drink at the Eughish kingis table, ton inguiring, savomes of blood, the beer of irom, and the lard of dend men's carvion;" he mbles also (very ill bred) that the king lens eyes liko a bomesum, mid that the green, in three things, belaved herself like a rervant mad ; but after a sharp elisenvotion the ling diseavers Ambeth was right in his suppusitiom as regands the food ; for blase; the pigs had eatena dead man's carrien; und in the fomatain of tho brewer were diseovered saveral rusty swords. The Enghish king now beecmes uneasy, and, taking his mother to task, forces her to own that a bondman was his father. Later, Amleth deelares that (shoeking had manoms) the queen is not of higher migin herself; for, first, she hides her heal in her cloak; secondly; in widking she lifts up her kirtlo mader the girdle ; and, thirdly, ifter eatiug she pieks her teeth with a tish-imue-all decided proots of low birth; "but perlaps," he aded by way of a sop," "her mother was at misomer of war, which fally acemuta for her low habits." The king (a most undutiful son) praises lis wisdom, and gives lim his daughter in marriage. A buleth now denands rempense for the death of his companions, and receives at considerable sum of gold, which he melts down inter two hollow sticks; and, after a yemres absence, begs to rotura to Jutliand on "important fimily athius." On his arrival he is asked after his two companions: "Here ther are," he replien, exhiliting his two sticks. His answer is received with shonts of demision, and they look on him an mad as ever.

On his arrival at the palace of King Fengo, situated on the lake lard ly, he fimul the fimily in full emorse, a wake subserpent to the celehation of his awn finemal. Disguised, ho joina the party, drugs the liguor of the earousers, mud, when they ire all intoxieated, first setting tire to the honsir, rishles to the room whero Fongo lay atseep, awakend him with these worls: - Fenso, your gool men are hurnine to ashes; and here is Auleth, who will revengo the death of his thther!" Ind then shays him. One hombed and filty years since Fengo's grave wat upenel and on iren sword taken firm it ; what beane of it none can tell.

The legend of the momastery, now the Aeademy of soro, is related by the same traveller , as given in the halhal of "Tlue Two thureh Towers." Sir A.ker liyg, son of Akialu Itvide, was a knight of barge possessions, and wele near tho village of Fiemexleville. One day, whom abom to start for the wars, le first want into " the little chureds to pray," and geratly semdalised was ho to find the doorway so luw her wis compellen to how his heal on entering therein; the roof, too, whe of hack straw, and the damp and green monkd lume to the ermbiline walls, ('reatly whoked was Sir Asker Reyg; perhaps, had he berol more regular in his attendaner, he would have alremly diseovered the dilapidated state on the building; so, previnas to his starting, he gave dientions to his wife, the tait laty inge, at that time in an interesting rondition, to robuild the churels during his absence, and it she were hornght to bed of a boy, to erent it bety churd tower ; if wuly a wirl, a spires. The Lady luge promised ubedienee to the wishes of her lord, and wif he sous, followed hy a mumerons train of spuires, ta light the battes of his eomenty, mad perform prodigies of valour. When the war is at men end he bends his way homewnel, and in appothing F'inmeshevilla his impatienee is so grent he ontstrips all his train, and arrives first alone on the how of the hill which overhangs the villates : he strains his eyes mad sees not one tewer but two,-the Lady Inge has given birth to twin buys during his ahsence,-and on neriving at his castlo half mad with any (ednemtion eost nothing in those diys) hee embned his wile, exelaming, "Oh, thon noble Lady lage : thrien lomonred be thon: thon art a Damiewif"!" (a womm who dirst bears twin sons to her husband is termed a Damowif). And these twins grew up to be the most celebrated eharacters of their century-Absnlon, the warrior Arehbishop of Lund, friend and adviser of Valdemar the Great, and Esbern Sinare.

It was Arehbishop Absnlon who, in conjunetion with his brother Esbern Suare, rebuilt null enlarged the convent of Soro, whieh grently tlomished during the Valdemarian dynasty, but later fell into decadence, as the epitaph of the list abbot in sulplosed to express, though I reully see no reason why it should more allade to the state of the monastery than to the general trausitory events of this world. It runs-

" Quicquis es humanis noli confidere rebus,  Jam mibi est magaum quin quod esse nilit."

In 1580, the convent was wholly suppressel, and added to the fiefs of the crown, and a sehool founded for thirty sons of the nobility. Among the many personages of note who have been here educated may be enumerated Frederie III. hinself, at thant time not heir presumptive to the crown; Irinee Valdemar, eldest son of Christion IV., by Christinu Munk; and many others.

Charles Gustavis of Sweden, too, here received his early instruction ; and when, in 1659 he had redneed nearly the whole of Zealmind under his yoke, with n proper feeling of gratitude towards the "almu mater" of his childhood, he exempted Soro from military contrilntion, and extended to it lis royal protection against all outruge.

You enter the university by the Gothie gateway of brick work, now whitewashel, helonging to the ancient convent. An avenue of trees lemeds to tho chureh, surrounded by a small cemetery, and in front stands the college; on the other side nhandsome binilding of the present century. The original edifiee was eonsumed by fire in the year 1813. As we enterel the con't some very small boys were indulging in the recrention of shooting stones and horse-chesnuts from a sling, the traditional anusement of boys of all ages and conntries, from tho time of Davil to the present gemeration.

Wo mount the steps and enter by a long corridor, hung with square portaits of the kings of Demmark from the earliest ages, like those we see on the tables of our kings of England. 'They are, I fancy, copies inken from $n$ series of engravings 1 lave since seen in the Muller collection at the Rayal Libury nt Copenhagen.

A glass window in the door of earh selool-room nllowed us to perp at the boys engaged in their studies. We then momited upstais, und were introlnced to their donmitories-large airy romes with mumberhess small beds arrangeel in rows, the windows "proning wide and overlooking tho lake helow. Ont the first flow were a well-filled musenur of natumal history, o delating mud lecturo room. In this room stands the chair of Hollerg the historim, and also the Sheridan of the Danish shma, by whou the aculemy was riehly endowed. Several full-length portraits of the kings of Depmark hung on the wulls: Christian I V. and V., and Frederie V. and VI , arrayed in their whes of state. Frederic $V$. is the bean ideal of dandyism of tho last centmy, a launlsome young man with tine lurge dark cyes. Ho married first a danghter of our King Gemge 1I., the I'rineess Louise, a rame still loved and remembered throughout the comntry ; und to her, I am sorly to suy, he made a very bad hushand.

As we left the building tho hoys were nssemblen in the court yard, busily enguged in the purchase of bums from the old woman who, I suppose, enjoys this monopoly. They uppeared a gentlenarlike set of youthw, nud saluted usas we passed, taking their eaps off-more than the Enton or Harrow beys wonld have done. Wo rested in the pretty garden of the nendemy, still a blaze of autumn flowers; a splendid weeping Cratagus quite dazzled the eye, londed with its scarlet berries. The trees and flowers seed more abundantly in the north than in the more southern latitudes.

Among the royal personages interred within the abbey eliureh of Soro is Valdemar Attordag, who died in 1375, fither of Queen Margaret : the full-len.th figure of white marble, placed there by the piety of his daughter, whom he hated, has long sinee disappreared.
But tho first olject of interest is the sequlehral stume of Olaf, King of Norway and Denmark. Un a shith is insoribed the liom of Norway, benring the liatelict of St. Olaf in his paw, surmonntel hy a skull. King Olaf died early, and was sueceeded by his mother, tho great Margaret. This youthful Olaf was tho tirst of the Danish rulers who assumed the title of King of tho Wenls nud Goths, and eansed the custom of praying for the king and queen in elmrelies to be established; a very wise precuution on his purt, for his successons were sadly in want of the prayers of all good men here below. Some time after his denth there arose a filso Olaf, who declared limself to be the son of the queen; he whs in reality the son of King Olnf's nurse, and divulged many secrets which alone the queen would know, by way of proving his identity. Bet Margartot declared him to be nu impostor; beetnse, us sho said, "My son died in Falsterbo palaee and was huried in Soro abbey church, and 1 myself seut his entruils to he interred in tho ehoir of Land enthedral "-a very goond argument on her part; "but," alded she, " let him he examinel; if he be my son, you will find in mole betweon his shoulders." The mole was not there, and the false Olaf was burnt to cinders the day lefore Michaclmas, near Fulsterlo, in Sweden.
The most beantiful numg these monuments is that of Christopher 1I. and his Queen Euphemin, Chughter of Bogislans, Duke of Pomerania. The reemminent figures of these sovereigns, lying side by side, wre of great beanty and exquisite workmanship. 'Plat of Christopher reminds me forcihly of Edward Il.'r, in Glomesster emhedral. He, as well ns his queen, is arrayed in his robes of state, his hair tlowing long, his hemal peinted ufter the fashion of our early I'lantagencts; lis hend is encircled hy the rogal erown, his sword hy his side ; his fentures are regular und expressive The queen boasts of little benuty; her nose, en ésentail, hetrays her lomernim origin; her long wavy hair fills on her shoulders from beneath the regal circlet; her sureont is rieh in jewellery; and her eornage ornamented with oetagonat bosses, niternately bearing the lion of Norway nad the wingoll gritlin of the Wends, Betwern these two reemment ligures lies that of a little ehikl, eornneted like its purents, Erik, their non and heir, who preeeded them to the tomb. Hehind the hend of Christopher stunds the lion of Dommurk on his four legs, as unlike a lion an may be, from whose luck rives in sort of Gothic piumuele, tupering to n point, mude hollow so as to hold a wax-taper of large dimensions, to he hurnt at the tomb of depurted royalty on eertuin vigils of the Church of Rome; while behind the queen stands in similar strueture, rising from the shoulder of the griftin of Pomermin.

Let us now turn to Archbishop Absalon, who lies e, enjoys this menoalike set of youths, their caps off-mere uld have done. Wo cademy, still n blaze ping Cratregus guite carlet berries. The dantly in the north interred within the Attordag, who died ret : the full-lempth - by the piety of his ; since disnppearol. the sepulchrial stone mak. On a shithl is rring the hatehet of l ly a skull. King 1 by his mother, the Oluf was the dirst ol ${ }^{\circ}$ a title of King of the he custom of praying les to be established; t, for his successon: of nll good men here h there arose 14 filse he son of the queen; Olat's nurse, mul dibe the quen would itity. 13ut Margaret becuuse, as she sail, e und was buried in sent his entrinis to le redral "-a very goorl tider she, "lat him you will find a mole ,le was not there, and ders the day letore verlen. se momuments is that Bupheman, danghter Tho recumbent 3 side by slde, wre of rkmauship. 'llat of y of Ealward 11's, in as his queen, is nrrayed owing long, his hemed arly I'lnintugenets ; lis wh, his sword ly his and expressive. Thu her nose, en éventail, ; her long way hair eath the regal circhet; and her corsuge ornaItternntely bearing tho grittin of the Wends. figures lies that of a monts, Erik, their sen to the tomb. 1hhind he dion of Denmate on w may be, from whose slo, tapering to "puint, -taper of largo climenof departed royalty on llone; while behind eture, rising from the unin. Mop Absalon, who lies interred under a sepulchral slab near the high altnr; the original tomb, of white alibbaster, no longet exists; the present slab was plneal here by Bishop Une in the sixteenth century. Not many years since in the old Chamber of Art at Copenhagen existed a skull and tibise reported to have belonged to Absalon, When these relics were shown to King Frederiek VI, one day, he was greatly scandalised, and exclained, "Absalon deserved better of his country thin to he made the gaze of fools," nad straightway gave orders that the head should be replaced in his coffin at Soro. So tho great, and the learned went down to Soro, and with much ceremony the saroophagns of the departed prohte was raised from the vault and the lid anclosed, when, to the amazement of all present, thero lay Archbishop Absalon with his head well fastened on his shonderes; the skull which hud so long passed current as that of the warriue prelnte was no moro than some memento mori of a Cistercinn monk of the convent; and as for the tibie, they proved, on examination, to belong both to the right leg. The searehers, however, removed from his finger tho pontifieal ring of goll, enriehed with the sipplire, as well as a chalico of silver-gilt which was placed upon his breast. These muthenticated relies aro preserved in the ueristy of the chureh of Soro. Though Aichtrishop Absalon dues sleep sound, he uppenrs to be inuscible oven in cleath. This, the following story, related by Hans Jansen Bishop of Ribe, once roctor of the Acadomy, will show, at the same time that it gives some iden of the superstition of the clorgy. The rector wns aceustomed to pace niter sunset the Allée des Philosophes-as the line-tree walk is termed-solacing himself with the musie of his thageolet. One evening, nceidentally finding the doots of the chmeln open, he entured, and, stambing before the tomb of the bishop, nfter playing him a favourite air, exchaimed-" Well, Absalon, what ilo you think of that?" Seatedy luth tho words "senper his lips, when out of his grive hounced the infuriated prelate, in finll prontificals, crozier in hand. The rector took to his heels, pursued by the ghost, nud gained the churehdoor just in time, lunging it behind him, for Abston struek it such a violent blow with his erozier, the very walls trembled. When the collin of Absalon was opened, ono hundred and twenty yenrs afterwards, the crozier was found smuperl in twain.

V.

Hingatrd, the Westminstell of the Valdmamas-sefplacullil Iltasa op Eilk and Ingeboho-Tonha of quebena Dlomall and lienknoama-Morskrle (Hoe's Wgla) Stony of Brahor Withiam and Kina Sybnd-Tomins op Query Mahoaher and ithu Sucerssons-bohothea, Wipg of two Kinas-quern Juliana of Bnunswick-Pilome magr on James the Flast to Ruegkilde-Cuaistian ther V.'s Sword,

Anout half-a-mile from Soro, is the village-church of Fenmeslov, the sume to which the story of Sir Asser Ryg's twin-towess attaches itself to, mil beyond this we crossed is green tielal before urriving at the deserted eity of llingsted, founded, so snys truelition, by a certain King Ring, ${ }^{1}$ in the darker prevod of Seandinavian

[^16]history. A grass grown miserable place it is, with a barrack-like hotel ; but we lave several hours to wait, so must make the best of it. To the left stands the convent church-the Westminster of the Valdemerian dynnsty: so wo euter and look around us; but there is little to see and admire; for though twenty kings, queens, and princes here sleep in peace, they all died, unfortmately, before monuments came into vogue, were bricked up somewhere in the vallts below, and execpt for the flat stone slabs which record their memory, might just as well be anywhere else. Let me except, however, the splendid sepulchual briass of King Frik Menved and lis queen Ingeborg, the sole remaining specimen of the engraver's art now oxtant in Denmark, and this is supposed to be of Flemish workmanship. Bya whimsical faney, the faces of the monarch and his queen are, or rather were-for that of the king is wanting-formed of white marble, overhid with plates of silver; on the whole, theso brasses are in goal condition, miuns some pieces broken ofl; as curiusities, by the English solliers during their occupation of the abbey. This Erik Menval, an he was eallod from his eonstant reply of "Certainly"-like the "Est-il pos. sible ?" of our Prince George, his descendiant-was an unlucky sovereign, though not a bad one as times went. His wife was n Irincess of Swoden ; and great was the joy at their marriage, bearing pace, as the people imagined, to the tormented country-
"They blessed Goi-both queans and men,
Many times-that fugebord hand como to this land!"
The relics of St. Erik wero cirried from Slessig to Ringsted, and the English soldiers destroyed his coffin and scattered the bones ; but it was not of much consequeuce, for, on examination, two which romained proved to be those of an ox. The monks of Slesvig were too wily to part with relles of so great a value.

For a place of such historic interest, I know wo duller one than liingsted. When tired of the brasses, 1 was reduced to mulnire the bier of elaborately-carved onk which has borne the deceased iulnbitints to their liast resting-place for some centuries.

By whom the convent of Riugsted was founded would be a matter of small import to us, had it not been by a purty of English Benedictine friars brought over by our Canute the Great.

It was in the year 1131 thut Duke Knad Lavarl wis murdered, in the forest of Hamuldsted hard by, by his cousin Magnus, son of King Niels. Now, this duke eujoyed so great a popularity, that, to avengo his dentl, his murlerer was straightway bunished from tho king. dom, and never isecended the throne. The people had decreed that the body of kinul should be interred in the cathedral of Roeskildo ; but King Niels, fenring a untiny, refused. He was therefore buried without pomp in the uljoining chureh of Ringxted. Before long, storics grew rife-how a spring of pure water hat sproug furth trom the place whero the duke was murdured, as well as where his boily had rested bat one moment on its way to the church. Mere was founded n chapel ; and King Erik Emm gave later large extates to the convent in honour of his nurdered brother.
l'ussing over the puzaling and troublous times of the disputed succession, we find King Valdemur I., son of the ns yot uncunonised suint, cuusing his fither's body to. be exposed, by way of exeiting the people in his favour: und, in the yenr 1699 , Stephen, Bishop of Upsula, hoing nt Rume, procured his cunonisation from Pope Aloxander III., ut the request of Valdemar, who, with all speed, placed his father's body in a shrine of great magnificence, and, when times beenme more tranquil, the ceremony of his canomisation took phee. King Vallemar mpeared surrommed hy all that was greatest in the land; and, the enslurinement onee over, the history of his sanctification was read alond, after which the people sang with great joy, "Praise to the Lord, who lass ordained St. Knud to be the patron of Zoalimal!" and the king, by way of killing two lirds with one stoue, caused his son Kinud, a child six years ohl, having first arrayed him in purple robes, to lee at the same time elected his successor.

The cenvent assumed the title of the abbey elureh of St. Knud of Ringsted ; aud fiom this peried hecume the favourite lourial-place of the Valdemerian lynasty. So great was the suceess of the sainted shrine, that Bishop Alsalon, jealons of the inerensing prosperity of the convent chareh, by way of making a diversion, caused an old cousin of his own-who lad been assassimatell hy her hushand, nothing more-fo te ronted out from her grave, and canonised (not at liome) by the name ot'st. Margaret, and phaced in atherine in the elanrel of Our Lady at Rocskilde.

Some few years since, at the restoration of the church. the tombs of the carly sovereigns were opned in the presence of his present majes, and a long nerount has heen pulished by Professor Worsare of the fiscoveries made; the skeletons were measured from heal to toot, and-the fingers, the shalls-muthing escipeed the oln. servation of the learned antiquaries.

When the tomb of Valdemar the Grat was first mo covered he was still perfeet, hut immediately crmubled to duet-so I was since toll by an ere-witness: the measure of the body answered well to the eleseription given hy the choniclers of his time, when the (iermans cricd, "He is a real king, worthy to possess an cmpire, hat our emperor is a prine ling amil a manikin." They were splendid men these Valdemerimes, and it was not until the marringe of the second of his name with Derengarin, l'rineess of Portugal, that the race hegran to degenemate.

In carlier days the bexlie's of the departed great were envelopel in leather shruuls, as wo comstantly timed mentionel in the ancient ballads. Indeed, sometimes the ghasts make theirappemmee fiesh fiom the charehyard, bearing their cotlins on their bneks ly way ol a covering, becanse they hat no ". Nkin." In latio day silk was mbpted as preferable. No deseription of Skanderbugg womld be complete withont the listury of Queea Dagmur-Joy of the Danes-ats she was termed, for her real hame was Margaret. She was a Princess of Bohemia, daughter of $\mathfrak{k i n g}$ Ottoear. You recollect the okd ballad,
"in Ringsted reposes Guen Dugmur."
We le to King Vademar riling ofl' post haste to Like ; he arrives in time hefore she diend, and is met at the palace-gate by little Kiisten, "sister of Sir Churges of Rise."
"Now hear yon, gracions lord mad king;
Yoa mast neither gricve ner hament;
Fer to you this day a son is born, Cut from Ihymar's sitle."
Dugmar is made to prophesy all kerts of evils, which later oceured to the realin nfter the king's second marringe with Iferengaria; but as tho ballod was comjused for her, we may believe as much as we please on the sulygeet.

Christiun humility was mot the fashion of the day; for when the dying queen saw her attendants shedling tears around her couch, she consoles them with the following worls:-
" Let no man dare have fear for me; I have no that things done, Save that I my small silken sleeves Have laced upon a sunding."
A lucky woman was Qucen Digmar, who could say so much tior herselt: A saying of this queen to a mensenger who bronght tidings of the cessation of a blowily war is still remembered:-" How benutiful are thy feet which amomee the glad tidings of peace?" The memory of hermgrin, on the other hamd, is as much execrated as that of her predecessor is revered. Thuy slow side by side, and so great was the hatred of the proph, that, alter weath, they severed Barengiria's heal from her boly, mad, when her eotlin was openem, a harge round stone was foum in its place on her shouldis. She, tow, was the first of the whole party whose body was fomd enveloped in silk. But it Berengaria, or limgjerd, ws whe waterled-the term is now symum, fior a bad woman, as we oursthes derive an of prohtinns epithet from the name of the Conyueror's mother-if lerengaria was aletested in her lifetime, the beaty of leve seleten, the exquisite smalluess of her hame ame feet, sent the whole of anatonical Demmark into a frenzy of blelight. Strauge it is how in this traditumary land ohl customs are handed down, anul, like a machine, the peasant does what his father has done iefore him, without eren asking the reasom why. Hvitfeld relates how in his time the proplo still sung a song the beftam of which tath-
"Shame te to Beugierd, and honour to the king."
And in much nows mondern lays my old friend l'rufesson Thonsen told me, that. When a young man, whilo lingering in tha abbey church of limenteif, he ohsernal a peapant, on entering the sacred buidding, to drop on and then, rising with a " (iod bless you, gool quen!" ho turnel slarply romel to the other side, and spat on the sepulchral stone umber which Berengaria shmbers. He conlel give ne explanation, he said : he fullowed tho enston of his forefather*.
The ranl Westminster and St. Denis of Temmark is, huwerer, Roeskidch, a charming site a little further on menury, attracted by the guthing fombtains of pure erystal water, which diee, limper and plentiful, on all sifes from their matural somrees, fomuld the ancient capital of Demmark, the time-honoured city of Runskilhe, which once boasted of its thirty churches mat thirty cenvents, hat of all the pist glory of which the eathedral ulome remmins.

William, un binglisham hy birth, bishop of line kilde in the days of King llambl, hrother of Camen the Girent, tiest constrmeted berea small wooden churech, whinh he dediented to the Holy 'rimity, and in the time of Sweyn-Svenil Eistridsm, as the Dumes call him - one of stone was erected in loonour of $\mathrm{St}^{2}$, later in SL. Lucius, pope mad martyr, whose skull is stith preserved in the Scamlinaviun musemur of Comalugen. How the chureh hecame dedicated to St. Luce iostend of the Holy Trinity I will now exphin. In those enrly times there dwelt in the fiond of liowkilde a homibh sen monster, who ravagel the comutry, feeling on majuers and yonng maidens. In vain the holy brethern of the 'rinity implosed him to depurt, only to go just attendants sinedling wles them with the
for me;
in sleeres
gimar, who conle suy this queen to a mescessation of a blowly w benutifal are thy ags of peace?" 'The her himed, is as much or is reverenl. 'lhuy ans the hatred of the severed Bereligatrias a cotlin was aprened, at alace on her shonlen's. party whose body Was Berengaria, or Iblysis now symuymons derive ath "मysolnings mueror's mother-if fitime, the beanty of ess of her hambs and ical Demmark into a w in this traditionary n, aud, like a machine, hus done before him, hy. Hvitfolil rolates any it sous the refran nour to the hing."
my old friend l'rufes on a young man, white lingentell, he olsomed buiklinge, to drop on the tomb of 1 ,ingur, css yout, good quern!" ther sitle, and iphat on Berengaria slumburs. sitid: he followed the

1) Wois of Temmark is, site a little further on ing line, ut tabulum ing fembtains of pure and plentiful, on all , foumbid the ancient ommured city of Ruess thisty ehurebos and est glary of which the"
birtli, bishop of lionslal, brother of Camut" a slanll wooten church, ly 'Irinits, and in the 1, ns the Danes call hian bonour of St. Lace, "I hose skull is still jurc. asemm of Copu-nhusel. ted to St, Luce iontead xphin. In thosevaly ff lioeskilde a lurribli , comutry, lieding un a wain the holy bretlien dejurt, only to go just a little higher up some other fiord; a change of air might be of serviee to him. He resisted all entreaties, all conjurations of bell, book, and candle, rectarol he would remmin there in secula seculorum, and gobble them up into tho barginin, unless he were straightway gratified with the head of St. Luee the martyr, for which he folt himself seized with a most uncommon "longins." The monks, not relishing the iden of being devoured, at onee despatehed an embassy to Rome to implore the lonn or gift of the holy relic, to deliver them from their pain and terms. Their request was granted, and permission given to retain it. The monks, not too much at their case, in grave jrocession bore the skull to the lanks of the fiord, and pheing it on board a boat, lefts it to the sea-monster, and then, taking to their heels, seampered oft to their convent as fust as their legs conld carry them. The precious relic had tho desired eflect; the monster was never heard of more : lout strange to say, he went off on his travels, lewing the: lead behine him. So you now ene why st. Luee became the potron of the cathedral chureh of Ruexkilide.

Within the walls of this stont" ehureh was interved the boly of King Svend, and Bishop Willian himself slept near his friend and master. In proness of time the church was onlarged by a succeeding bishop; and whon the new building was well nigh tinished, the tomb of Bishop. Willian was removed to make roon for the cohmens of the ohoir. Now the prelato waxed wroth in his cerecloth at this indignity put upn him, the fommer of the sacred edifice; but he remainod quiet until night, when he apponed muayed in his robes before tho siacristra, who slept within the buikling. "The bishop might well lave contented himselt with the honour of lrikling the choir," exclaimed he, "without clisturhing my bunes, and removing me from the neighboushood of my beloved triend and companion King Svend. On nccemt of his picty 1 refiain to avenge mysulf on him, but the chureh shall fuel the effect of my wrath." So saying, he struck the walls with his ervaier, and down they fell about the ears of the alarmed sucristan, who esenterl, by a minacle no doubt, seatheless from amoug the ruins. Seeptical peoplen pretemded the wills were Indly constructed, while others hail the lilame on the impinty of the mehitect, who hud neglected to bury it liviug homb bemath tho altar-stome, without which, as all men in Kenland well hiew, the building was sume to sink.

But whother it was the finlt of the bishop or the lamb, the choir hal to be built ur uguin. All Bishop Willian requived was to be hoft ahome, amd ill camo on thoses who interfered with him. When, in the sixteenth eentury, Bishop, Urue, a most moddling prelate, catused his bones to bo disinterred and placod in a fowter cottin in a hole of a pillay of tho choir, wer which his portrait was paiated in fieseo (yon ean see then thero now through the grating), the workmen diposited his remains profanely in a comer, Then, suddeinly, there exuded from the relies a smell-mot of ohl bones, but a perfune so divine all men dectared it was too clelieions. They sumtled at his skint, they smelt his eross-bones-it was a fascimation too powerfibl. Sitrange to say, wash, serub, do what they wonkl, the pertinne clang to their hanels-inpossibie to free themselves from it ; nul now commencer the pmishmont of their mulneity. One of the oflendow; beemone dumb, and died at the ond of threo days in exquisite tomment, of a malinly which commenced by his nose ; another in vain slid penance, and publicly confessed his finult; nono of the offenders escuperl ; the last died aftor three months' unhenrl-of' sulliering. So yon see Bishop, Wilham, friend of the gool King Svend, was not a person to be tritlod with.

We have all read the rory of the sucrilage committed hy the above-mentioned monmreh - how, enraged at tho hacmoss jest of his conatiors at a hampet, he emused them to be slain next morning before tho altar during the performance of mutinsong; how Bishop William, horror-struck at this iniquity, jublicly excommunieated the King at the chureh foor as he was about to enter ; how the oflieers of the king would hive slain the bishop, but. Svend, seized with remorse, forbade the deed, and, retiring home to his palace, clad himself in rags, and returned next day to the chureh, lumbly ilomanding permission to conter therein, kissing the very steps of the holy editice; how Bishop Willium wept at his pitiahle state, and went ont to meet him, and, aftor a public confession and the pryment of a large sum of mones, nlosolved him from his sin, aad from that time a groat friondship was struck up between the two, and the bishop vowed he would nover survive the death of his firiend and sovereign ; and when the news of King Srend's denth reached his ears, and the body was on its roal from Jutland, he went forth to meet it, and when he came wigh he loft the carriage and govo up the ghost on the wnyside. No wonder, after such a proot of atlivetion, Bishup Willian slid not like beiner removed from the neighbourhoal of his meient companion.

Lenskilde, atter a priod, suceceled the abbey of Riugaterl ats the royal phaco of sepulture, and lins so continued ever since. 'The reason given fir this clango is simple. After the time of the reemid Valdemar; alabaster momuments cone into vogue, iustend of tho brick sopuldires of the enrlier ages, and the chureh of St. Kinud was fuund too smull to contain them; addod to which the Abbot of Ringsfed, in the time of Christopher II., took purt with the rival, Duke Valdenar, in comsequence of which he mud his queen were buried at Soro, where Olaf lies nlso: Queon Margaret herself was, by order of her suecessor, removed to Roeskilde. Still thore was for some time a fecling in favour of st. Kinmi on the part of the monateds, amb Valdemar himsilf bequeathed a sum of ten marks in white metal to say a daily mass and to keep his ammal festival, on which dity the momks of tho cheister were to be regaled with a tun of (fermm (hestock) beer and three "stront tlenh ropasts."

The whole length ot tho buidding is minterrupted, except ly the altar which stands umiler the centro of the further transept, which ahls mullh to the genemal effect ; enved stalls of great originality und quaintuess, put up ${ }^{2}$ y Queen Darguret, on each side of the choin, dimplaying the propretions of the enthedrul to the greatest manntage.

P'ussing behind the altar of rich Duteh workannship, wo come to a minblo salreophangus, on which lies extended the elligy of the great (Queen Margaret, who tirst unted muler one secptre the theo Scambinavinu kingdoms: the most interesting monment of the royal serics, erected to ber memory by ber nephew and successor, Drik. Over the tomb of Queen Jhargmet hangs the hook fiom which was sumpembed the stome vent by Albert King of Sweden to that gucern to shapen her seissors. This was ramoved ly theswedas in 1659. Murgaret lies extended on her back, her hands meekly folded across her bosom. At her feet are placed a skull and cross-bones. Her features are regular and of great benuty; the compressed lip expressive of determination of elaracter. She is small in stature, somewhat below the middle height. On her hend she wears the regal cirelet; a roulean of hair, twisted with goll, binils her brow ; two short bandeanx, brought down on each side of her face ; a long veil haugs peadant from the circlet; massive gold bracelets adorn her wrists, and she wears a girdle of the same precions metal, with five pendant chains, from each of which is susjended a ball, or pomanderlox, to contain perfumes and other matters. The broken alabaster figure of her brother, Duke Christopher of Lolland, only son of Valdemar, lies umrepaired in one of the mijoining chapels. He is satid to have died from the eflecess of a wond in the head from a Lombard in a naval elngagement in 1359 ; hat it is certain he lived some years liter, half-witted: his brain never recovered from the efficets of the injury.

The sword of King Christian I. still hangs in the chapel of the Elephant. He lies interred by the side of his predecessor, King Christopher the Bavarian, whose widow Dorothea he had esponsed "to make matters right," thereby saving a jointure to the Crown lands of Denmark. Some years later his cotlin was openel: folks were not quite certain as to his whercalouts or whether it renlly was him, when a learned historian, who was present, exelaimed, "Are three of the front teeth wanting?" On examiuation of the skull such was found to be the case. "That will be the mark!" exclaimed the savant; "King Chistian the First lost three of his front teeth in the battle of Brunkeherg."

The splemelid monumental tombs of Christian ILI, and Frederick II., father of Queen Anne, wife of James I., ly Floris of Antwerp, resemble mueh those of Francis i. and Louis XII. at St. Denis, but are finer still; and that of Frederic IV, and his gueen is ly a sculptor named Gerken. This momument, as well as that of Christian $V_{\text {., are ford }}$, flecimens of the allegoric taste of the last century-uflective as a whele, but as a composition ludicrous. Our own Queen Louisa has a momment exceuted by Stanley; and from that time the coffins stand manged in the chapels, eovered with monldering black velvet, powdered over with the crowns of Seandiuavin. A statue ly Thorvaldsen, cast in hronze, hus lately been erected to Christinn IV. It is utine work of that illustrions senlptor's chisel, but ill ndipited for a chureh. Whilo the great Margaret lies with closed eyes and meekly clasped hauds, a waiting the day of judgnent, Christian stands looking thanderbelts around, with one legs stuck out, as if nLuct to stary, from sheer impatience. It is charmeteristic of the man, but better suited for a publie place or bridge. Many are the Northmen who lie here interred-Saxo Grumaticus mong the number, ald monk of Soro, chronicler of the Valdemars. When I visited Roeskilde, 1 found Professor Worsare and at knot of saviunts busily enguged in grubbing for his tomb, hut without suceess; the coflin of the humble monk had, in earlier days, given phace to some liter eomer.

SVENSORG.

Before leaving the cathedral, the guide will leal you down the stepls inte a vinult below, and dinplay to your view the six colfins of the infint children of Kinf Froderic VI., and some lystander will look mysterions, and dechare how they all met an untimely end through the intrigues of Julinat of Branswick, tine wilowed queen of King Frederic V., shee who causen the disgrace and fall of Carolme Matilda. They will tell you -some, that the ehildren wero changel; others, that they were put an end to; how the nmbitims queen, desirons to seenre the suecession for the oflipring of her own son, having already fitiled ia her culdenvours to deatroy King Frederic himself in his childhoul, guined the lady of hemour of the Crown Princess anul others, and so attained her oljecet. They will reliats to you that the Frue von Munster-this same lulyfately committed suicide (which is truc') by hanging . still hangs in the interred by the side bher the Bavarian, spoused "to make inture to the Crown later his cottin was tain as to lis whereim, when a learned med, " Are three of" examination of the ise. "That will be t; " King Christian eth in the battle of is of Christian ILI. eon Anne, wif? of esemble much those . Denis, lut are tiner nd his queen is by: mument, as well as coffin of the humbla placo to some later te guide will lead your r, aud dioplay to youd unt children of King r will look mysterious, mutimely end through nswick, tie widowel (0 who causel the dis. They will tell youl re changel ; others, ; how the ambitinus ession fin the ollsurin? iled iu her emblavom's elf in his elithlhoul, - Crown Princess an! ect. They will relat ter-this same ladyis truc) by haugiug herself in the corridor by the ehapel of Frelerikshorg; will relate to you all this and a great denl more, as an untimely end by their own hands; nud then tell not one word of the stery. The youngest son of King you astory of "pretender who, nrose and proclaimed Frederic VI., who lies in the little coffin here before himself King Frederick's son, changed at nurse. 'They you, was lorn one yeur after the decease of the Dowager

DIVECKE'S HOUSE, MARKET.PLACE OF AMAK.
Queen herself. Chiddren, if not well eared fir, did- of Juliana's own son, the Arve Primds, died when even in tho entier part of this present century, as we inlunts also.
all know, before ealomed was invented-alrop oll liko thies; and if you look at the genealogy of the house of Oldeaborg, you will find that the three eldest ollippring

No; Juliana lans enough to maswer for without alding the crime of child-murder to the list. Still yon will timd muy people who yet credit the assertion and will molate it as a fiet; myonlt, after having studied tho puestion prolly decply, dismiss it as unworthy of Lelief.

When dunes 1 , of tingland visited Copmhagen, he mate a special pilgrimige to Romesilak, in order to converse onf matters of theolegral doetrime with Nichulas Hemming, a eclebrated theolosian, who, wh aceount, of his t'abinistic temdeneies, hatd heen removed from his allice of I'rotessur of the Univetsity of CapenJogen. 'Then lishop l'anl Wathhas putached betore him at leaned diseomer in latin, with which, ats well an with the assemblige of priests of the dionese, wha came to do hin homour, King James expressed himself much gratition.

The bishoprie or stitt of Poseskidie was suppressed at the Sidfumation, and hater a Bishop of Zealaml appeinted. 'This city-in oht lroks written Fothsehiht -thonishes : patronymic to the Rothsehind fimily, whe, in the last econtury, emigated trom lenmark. A Jew, ou zoing to another land, where Sohnons and Levis wrope pleatiful an strawberies in Jone, was called, to distinguish himself, solomon of bamberg, Levi of iramktort, anf su on, till he ended lyg assmang as a stmbitute the birtliplice of his ancestors.

Ferguson in lis Illasticted Mrandbow of Architectuie, l. !30, says of the original chmelh, completed in the vear 1086 . muder Fivend Estridsen, whose problereser, (anute the Great. lad rachly endowed it, to atone for the murder of his brother-in-litw, Ulf Jarl, wher hal taken sumetnary there, and was shan in the eluir in luez. "It wasipparently eircular, and of the sane dimensions with the east and of the present editice. 'This hatter was commenced ufter the middle of' the twalfth century, and probubly aot completed as we now see it, till tuwards the eal of the thirteenth. The enst emel is [robably on hatf of the ohd mound chureh rehuit, the repuired cnlargement of space laving been ohtained liy a considetable extension of with towards the west."

A Dinish writer, speaking of the warlike emblem that derentites the cotion of Christinu IV., says, "'That aword with which he mo valinatly secured the peace of Denmark; a tan more honomrable ormament to the hero's grave than the costly mansolemn of many an unworthy prince, where the senlptor has plawd the genius of his comntry wephing, not for his death, but for the misfortunes which his folly on viech haurfit upon his mative land." However, Dematith has thought its well-beloved king worthy of is moro bompons monwnent; anal shortly betore his death, 'Thorwaldsen completed a line statue of this monareh, which, cant in bronze, is now phaced in one of the Hapels of the cathedral, bearing the name of Caristi,u IV., and in which are at present deposited the remmins of Christian VIL. imb of Erederiek V1., the two last decensed kings of lomanurk, abol of several wher members of the royal famity. 'the simple, volvetwovered collin in this chaper form it striking contrast to the rostly marble matisulemms amb samephlatgi in Ahristian I. and Preteriek Vis ehapela, and trll at tate of the derelining limmers of the combtry:

The indident which is at ance so illathative of the "alifere. .me of the mingled piety and ferocity of the pler form in Dunhanis litistory of lemmetil (vol. ii., 1. 180).

In $10 \% 10$ as serno wemred ath this eathedial, strongly resembling that which took place at Mitan in the fourth eentury, hetween St. Ambrose and the Finpegor Theokosins. King Swoyn II. (son of Ulf darl, whas was murdered in the choir), "pon some renarks bein! reported to him which hat hero made mpon his consluct the night hefore, by some of his guests when luated with wine, in the imitation of the monent, wdend them to be shan, though they were then at mass in the eathedrat. An Anglo-Stwon, hamed Willian, and who hat been secretary to Camote the Great, was then Bishop of lioeskilde. On the disy linbowing this drealtind tragedy, the king procemed to the eatheilial. He was met hy the hishop, who, elevatine his cruzier, commanted hin to retibe, and not to pollute with his presence the honse of Goil-that honse which he hat lesecrated with bual. The king'sattendants drew their sworls, bat he forbade them to excreise any violenee towards it mant who, in the discharge of lis dhty, delied wen kings. Retiring mournfully to lis pialice, he ansmued the gatb of penance, wept, and ]nayed, and lamented his crione duriny three days. Jle then prescutel limself, it the sume menn uparel, before the states of the cathedral. The bishop was in the midst of the service; the "Kyrie Eleison" had beell chated, and the "(iloria" ahout to commence, whan he was informed that the royal proitent was oatside the gates. Lanving the altar. $\mathrm{h}_{\mathrm{h}}$, repared to the spost, raised the silpliant monarch, ant frected him with the kiss of prace. Then, bringing him into the charch, he heard his eonfession, remumil the exconmunication, and allowed him to join in the service. Suon afterwarils, in this cathedral, the kins sutule a public contession of his erime, asked patdon alike ut God and man, was allowed to resume his royal aprarel, and solemnly absolved.

Vi.

 the Mhitresbl: Mèle-Edrcation op Chastis. It.I'ter l'fo, ul Mones-bon-Forsidation of Cophnhagen-Castigathan-grien Phimita of Enghand-Her fal.
 -Tine Eximavoe.
Wi: left the Westminster of the Dines by sunset, and we hailed Copenhagen ly sintine There are certan cities marked, as it wrre, with I le finger of (in!, on the spot which they shall oecupy tio many centurion. Such, in ohlen tines, were Babylon, Nineveh, Mumphis, Thebes, Jerusaleu, Athens, and Alesandrin; such, in modern times, are Constintinople, Jonw, Vienna, Berlin, Madrid, Lisbon, Piris, Loudon, Naples, Venien, Genou, ind many others; some, as it were, fresh risen in the New Worli, and alrealy, like their ancestors, toru by the convalsive pasaions of munkind ; others constituting, like Constantinople and Rome, it common ground where the past lias passed into the present. Of all citics, Constantinople is the nost fortunately placel in regarel to Europe, Axia, and Atrica. Copen. hingoll is a city just as privileged by its position in the noth ; aml of this, a fitmer Samelimavin, it will as assumily be its capital, in l'esth will be wi a future Slavonia. (see 1. :3:
 sun cannot do beiter thansant direct from the railway station, and procerding towards the sates of the eits, pass though in touble avenur of ehas by the obelisk erected to eommemorate the abolition of fendal servitude by King Cluristian VIl.

ose and the Eimperor

 n of Ulf Jarl, whe some remarks belus mule mum lis rent of his grests when ion of the moment, do they were there at anglo-sixon, named vetary to Cimate the hile. On the day fal:ing procemed to the inlouj, who, elevating cire, and not to pellof ( forl-that hous lonel. The kitu's athe forbade them to man who, in the rixa kings Retiring 14יd the garb of pented his erime daring limself; in the same - the cathedral. Thes serviee : tho "Kyrie I the "Ghorin" about rued that the royal larving the altar ${ }^{\text {hat }}$ inliant monarch, and cace. Then, briusing a contession, remaval al him to join in the is cathedral, the king 4 erime, askud parion ed to resume his royalCArenbtakop-Storntr, on of ©herstion II. iation of Copinhagex-
 M Fineland-Hir Cialaid: uf Cinhetianshoede

Who Dimes by sunset, sumrise. 'There are with the finger of (Gun!, Iy for many centuries. on, Nineveh, Memphis, Alesitultrin; sueh, in aple, lwome, Viema, andun, Naples, Venice, as it were, tresh riseu ke their ancestors, toru ankind ; others constia Rome, it comulin swed into the present. ithe most fortmately , and Africil. CoperI by itw position in the samblintin, it will :s sth will be ot' a finture dibeet from the malway s the sates of the cits, of elins by the obelisk bolition of feudal ser-

On either side of the why stame the Tivolis, Alhambas, and varions plates of anasement in which the Dumes su dearly delight in the stmmer season, and which aboum in the subums af ('openhatigen.

Whe now traverse the Vesterlmo, aros the mont. which smomme the ramparts, mul enter the rity, pissing under a swing bridge which comeets the fortitientions.

But finfore eontinaing our walk, to preme disapprintment, lat meput yon on your gitarl not to axpert (to much, mur he guiled hy your tirst imomession of it was wot until 1 grew acpuainted with the aity in Gatals alive with sippling rumium op into it a vers lumats of an hambane entry. The parment, yon will have alromly fomal ott, is atrocions, and steth ant ohl bateket (thambeltorv), where omere stomed the small conflatations from which the town has anfliorel. In the erontro at:mets at tumatain in metal, which now ne shlipet-is berther imponine mor beatiful.

It was un this diammaltory that took patae the exerotiont of the well-known bietriek slasherk. Areht lishop of lamb, Christian II.'s most mwortly minister. Alrangerv in all ages haver risen to the hishest poste in the staperatit of his master. When on his way to the Manter Jatiar latehman, whe of the eommed. to whom mo," replied the "hamberlain, horsitied at the beleat uf

 un: the panishment of your sim- fla pumishment of yunt sims, If la hegan lifo as a harher, for died like a prelate. clat in mhes uf velset mal se:phe hom: On momenting the sablend be was fintened to al hoder, and then tumed aflinto the thans. Kinus Christim, not stite at his rass as regats the jutive of the whterner, Alowe unt of tuwn for at day's chatige ot air, ant sighrit beredt meveryend her window turan the whele dise. which mate folls remark, " It was gueer she, who bied beou hameht up to tried herrinus silt fish, and mel like, shonlal he squenmish cumerming the stumell ot a roseterl archis:

O11 we continue down a street giper and more freptented than the hast, till wo arrime at the lleiherphats, commonly ablas Amengertors, where the vegetable market is leble, and the Imak and Zedand perasats bany heserin in their proty contumes-somu it their stalls, others momet on their rustic enrtis.

The sheprese in wo, way renamkinhe; lat you will almire the prulteress ceilars hans with a prond cailate.

The lofty embattled tower of St . Nieholas overtoms His sifure. On it the watehmen keep nightly gumel, and give thatam in case of tire: nor is this servien at sineence, tor seare thre diays elape withont a ennHigration breaking rat in some gatrer of the town or other, and ift in tho leme of niedhe the slumberers are awaknem by a hom shrill whistlo, and the repated ery of" "Band": brand! bram!" aboug the street. Then "Where"" and if in the neighbontions, they turn out of hed and piewe at tuh of water berfen their doors: if the answ or the Vesterthe, or Nomphro, or some place fir avays they dose their easements and quintly restum their slop, whes curiosity leme them to visit the serme of the emblagration. Tlacse watchan were dirst establinted hy King Praleric I1, ame the songe they chant the night long was omposeally bishop King.

The Amadertor is pietmespue ats a whole, and you must mot fail to remart a sabled remaissunce dwellinerhunse, with the hate 1616 , buit liy a hurgomenter of rine that of : hackster (huyproste), is she is termen hy the historims of Amatedian, in whieh city she tirst suld aphles amil whatathe romes. And querrer still it must have ben fo have seen the nohles of the realm this very Ilad, waitins tha in turn to gim an andiones. A clever womatan wits indane sightrit, an the Dames call lues, stipmosing her Duteh patronymie of Willums; fir sha mit only regned : mprene isu the king, but Was men muth thonght ot by his consort Queen Elizaluth, whe :"preciaterl her devotion to the reval family. Then, tike, she was a Dutelawomath, is nation for which the pucen whays shwed a grat preference. To her "are "hey rondidel the edneation of their edest son Prince folm. Lint ir se was likel by the royal family and toradial by the oflicers of state, she was detested by the peophe, who. after the mamer of the day, looked щки her as a witch. Thbey deedred how une day hev intle which stoed on the window, in owder to examine its contents, when it fill one nf his ham and broke ; the desib hew out of it , anl at storm of thmuler horst owe the whole cit?, Her groat unpuphanity was emand lyy the "rmare" tas, placed by her atriee on the had of every livigy ferm (a somewhat Trixh procenling) ; added to which she chared the town of or chak open at one side, and bore so had a teputation the prowerh went, "So many coats, sermy thieves." The King, ly her advier, issued the ordinane hy which litw own expenses, and hatd all the others driven out of the town.

Whon in the sear 1.5日e the Lanheckers aprared beline Copmangen, Sightit, in the ahneme of the kine went unt with her matid to see the tleni ; but when hy the wat r-side she met two drmken comblrymen, wha fill umon her, heat her black and hlow, amd, reproaching her for having misled the king, wit her out to son and derked her wedl. Lackily, the king pased hy on his return frem Solisergand saved her; lint on entering the gatere of the city several men of lioerkilde, whe lay in wait, thed at her; however, she escaped withont dimage, and the trunken peasunts were beheaded.

When the king went to Norway he carried ofle everything, even to the copper ornaments on the spire of the palace. Sigbrit, to avoid being tom to pieces by the penple, was conveyed on boaril ship in a wooden chest. Christian apporesing out of spirits at the ugly state of his atfints, she consoled him, sayint, "If you em no langer be King of Denmark, I will make you burg)mister of Amsterdam"-a tine promotion, venarks Ivitfeldt in his chatonicle.

What became of her nome can say-she disippears entively from the fite of history; but when Frelerie I. besiegel the eity of Mihm, he excepted Sigbrit fiom the genceral pardon conferred on the inkabitimes, in "ise she should be still there. Ho might have savel himself the trouble, for she hit long since escapert, and no one comild tell of her whereabouts.

To the left runs tho Ostergul- - the Boni-strect of Copenhatgen but wo will leave it tor its thamens and continue one conese, first starting with astomishment at a well-known somal whispered in our ears, wery like "Old do," "Gumel kloeler:" it is shortened and compressed, till it resembles tho w $1 /$-known ery of our Lambon lealers in disearded vestments.

It was in this Woibrophitds that Christian I I. received dis early education, and thent one it was and curions, as displaying the simplicity of the times.

At an carly and a tam of topmazen, Jom Ifyndze, was appointed his thtor, and the prince himself wis sent to lodge in the honse of 14 ins the lowk himber, whose wife, Bridget, a worthy oh som, looked atter his, health and persomal comatiots, and here he wat wisited by the emm daily.
"A stramg elncation fior a king's som," observes IEviteldt, "and very dillirent from that of our day, when nothing ean be fonnd gond enongh fire the aff--pring of royal parents."

It appeats the young prince played about with the other buys of his age in the streets; so to keep him ont of mischief the eanon mold him aerompany him to matins and evensong and there he stom in the choir, he the heir to there mighty kinelome, along with the per chilitren. When it cume to Kin's Joh's ears that his son stome and some in the cloni with others as a "fattig Pebling," he waxed wroth, and a short time later the prince is hamded aver to a new tutor, fiumished ly his brother-in-law, Joachim of Brmbenhorg, who terms him "a beatiful learned man." The boy would climb, up to the roof's of the hemses and weer the highest walls. In vain his tutor bade him "take eare"; he who climbis the highest will fall the lowest." Ite roplied, "Low phates mbly suit low phople, but high hiaces are fine the high." Whan he wan righteren yemes of age the prince declared himself y ${ }^{\text {rite }}$ sick of lenruing, and we find him, "brihing the palace ghand" to lawe ogen doors at night, whilst, like our own l'rine LLal, he went knocking about in the burghers honses, wherever he combl tinl "the best wine and the prettiest girls to talk to." When this cance to, his fither's ears, he summonel the yombs seapugrace before him, and nolusinisterol him such a dose of ghod advice, followed up by a sever thogying with whip, that tho prince fell down "pat bare kne", and, imploring pardon for his offerees, declared himself reformed for ever.

But we approach the Slotsholm on " Ile du Chitenan." On either side of the bridge the tishwives hoh their conrt, and goseip and spmable monch like theire sisterhoud of other lands. 'Ple boats crowd up to the very Inidye, some laden with sand, some with satmon fresh from the coast of Swolen, the former an untidy commodity to sell so near a royal residence ; others nguin with pottery, commom pottery fire household use, firont the Island of Bornholin, tho darker kind the produce if' Juthand. Two littlo children, satelel on back, ileseend the steps of the yuay, enter the boat, and timilly amonnee their wants to the owner of the wares. The man point to a basket in the corner of the vessel; they investigite its contents, und, after much hesitition, return, each triumphantly bearing a "junl swiin" (yule pig), as it is ealloul, with a slit down the midno of his back; this maclean beast serves as a money-box, but the money onee deposited therein cmant be reenvered withont its destruction.

Bufore us rises the palace of Christimbung (Chistimbory Slot), a vast, heary, maxightly pile uf mildings, th med on one side by the Thorvaldsen Musthm; to the left of the palate stands the Chancellorie, anm beymil the Exchange, with its quaint spire of twistel dragons, the pide of the apital (See p. 3.) 2). But we are guing tho fist, and before proceding further it is ats well you should hern shanething of the maty histe, of the town yon are now visiting. We stani on : ic ground ; and if you do not mind resting on tho banks of the Inay, i will endeavour, while som repuse, tur give you some slight information ats to the origin and fomalition of the capital of Demank.

On the ishand where we nowst und, in the yrar llis, our oh friens Archaishay Absalon constracterl a fortress, which bore the mume of Axcllmus in compliment to its fimmer. It was later changel to that of Stoiln. lury, or Wheel Castle, from the tiat of the straml before its gates being sefocted at the phace of excell-tion-breaking on the whol, or some such pleasumt "pretion-of the pirates from lingen and "lowhern, who infested the northern seas and laid waste the: Danish Archipeligh. One of the towers of the origime buibling existed in the earlicer part of the last century, and servel as the royal kitchen previous to the dustruction of the palate by King Chinstian VI. and his villase arose romel the fortress, which, in the yous 10.51, wedwed extensive priviluge from tharistopher 1 . and was ereeten into a city; lint Roeskilde rontinnal the eapital of the Fslame of \%ealinud until the reign of Christopher the Bavarian. This sovereign exchangel certain lands with the bishop of that diocese, amb, comsidering the locality admitably alipted fur the intement: of shipping num commeree, he estabitished himisidf there with his comet, made it his cippital, amel from that prown it has been called Kjobenhasm, or the Merelant's Haven. Hav amoient rival gedually welined, the whirlwind of the Reformation giving a coup de grice to her existence.

Smong the earlice events of interest which tow phace at Cinenlagen, I find mentioned how, in 1363, there was : "right goodly royal party of prindsen, kings and illusthipus princen, as well as moiles from all garta, mssembled to wituess the muptials of the Irinecss Margaret, daughtere of King, Valdemar Atterdag, with Makon, King of Norway." Siwedish historians deetare Margaret to have been of a dark complexion, by no means well-looking. After her marriage she wemt, aceompanied by her hasband, (1) Norway, where on necount of her tender years, a governers was $1^{\text {hiacond }}$ over hor, the Lady Martha, daughter of St. Bralget; very striet, too, she was, and often made Mangaret, " married queen, smart mader the rod. In after life a or an untily eomnee ; others agrin puseliold use, fl'ont - kind tho pronluce atchel on lanek, alee boat, and timilly of the wares. The ner of the vissel ; fter much hesitaing " "junl witin" down the mindle es as a money-bux, rein emmat bere. ristiamhorg (Chrisphtly pile of Imill. orvalusen Musemu; - Clancellarice, and nt spire of twisted (See p. 3. 3). lin weeding further it thing of the maty isiting. We stamil at mind resting an deavour, while yom formation as to the of Demmark. 1, in the yom lhos, constructed a forlums in ermpliment al to thit of strile. thet of the st timil lue plate of execusome such phaturt gen and isewhere, and laid waste the owers of the origimal of the list century, previons t, tha dishisti:n VI. and his rates a thomishing? which, in the your from Christopher Roeskilde eontimund nomil the reign of avereign exchitugel nat diocese, aml, conpted for the interest: bished himself there and from that prominl or the Merelinnts dhally declined, the: ing a coup de grice rest which took plate how, in 1363, there f prindsen, kings:and es from all $1^{\text {nittos, }}$ ass of the lrineess. M armar Atterlag, with ish histurians lecliare re complexinn, by no marringe she went, Norway, wher 'ill goverates was plicerl iter of St. Whilget; a made Margiret, a rod. In after life a steady affection continned to exist between the queen and her enly emstigatrix.

Of the endless and inmmerable sieges this devoted eity has mulergone, I will merely eall to mind ti:nt which took plaee in the days of P'hilipua of Englami, worthy si-ter of the hero of Agineourt. Philipha was second daughter of our English sovereign, Henry of Lanconter, and was maried to Erik the l'omoranian, a match whieh Queen Margaret gave herself much tromble to bring about.
Copenhagen was attacked by the IIanseatic League, and the town would have fallen had it not been for the courage of Plilippa. "Queen Philipha," says the chroniches, "beld l'rines' Day ut Cropenhagen, mul invited to the castle the soldiers and young ment of the eity, who had fought against the Wruds and Inansentikers, and, atter comselling them to remder good service to the lord their king, lismissed them to enjoy semething which we ennot find in the dietionary, but inagine to he a "regular gool blow-out." Her conduct ing ifred the citizons with such enthusinatu, the ememy were eompelled to retire. Joyful at her sucesss (Exik was then absent in Sweteln, or, as Swedish historians nssert, lying enncealed in the coment of Sorn), Phili in a invested Stralsmed with a fleet of seventy-five ships; firtume declared against her; after ahard-iought battle she returned to ('numhagen, her spuadron destroyed; and now it is related low Erik, umindful of har fimmer sureess, in his rage struck the queen, at that time alvanced in pregnaney. Indignant at this treatment, sher retired to the convent of Vadstena, whitye she died some few months after, and was luried in the chand ot St. Ame, which she herself had fomded, and where here sepulehral slab may still beren.

Erik cansed a Donkirke to be built at Vadstem in her honour, and gave one thomand one hundred mobles towarls the expenses of its erection, with particular directions for masses to be said and sumg for her "soul"s wral," to say nothing of 1 walms selected ly himsilff, about Regina cerli. The way of the worth, nothing mure. The worse a man treats his wife in this lite, the finer the monmant set up to her memery after death.

Some historims affiet to dhy this story, or mur in Erik's defence the Juthand haw, by virtue of which a man was anthrised to tlog his wite and children with his hauds but not with weapons. As IPhilippa left no heirs, King Christian 1., atter a lapse of marly twenty years, inherited the remains of the "rowe moble," long sime ennvertel into small chage.

Notwithatanding the ill tratment of Queen lhilipha, the English Govername appears to have continacl on comfortable terms with Erik, In 1431, Hemry V'. sput an emhassy to Dommark-Master. William Surech, dertor of Loth laws; Sir John Grimsby, Knight: ther plenipotentiary pwers are dated Westminster, Norember 27 th , ninth year of the reign, and signel by Thumprivey Duke of Eloneester, Enghand's "enstos." There was some little grievaners to settle, int I don't see the King of Enghand got mueh advantuge by it ; for though he is very civiland talks about the relation ship through the high-lom Philippa, consort of his. "good friend" Ling Erik, ime a lot moro besides, he is met ly a storm of eomplaints against the English shipowners, who, for the last twenty years, have sailed and fished in unlawfinl sens, and tratheked with the ishurds -Ieeland, Faroc, Shethaml, Orkney, (Greeuliund, \&e.fancy Demmark forbidding us to sail mind thade to the Orkneys, or anywhero:- the complaint ended in a sumanarizm of the damage cansed during the sainl $t$ wenty years, which momots to $2,3: 2$ " loster fink"fumats of fish-weh pound heing equal to sixtern of the fresent day; whe to this at few mure "damnges," ant the summa summariam of the bill prestinted is $217,34 \mathrm{~s}$ rose nobles. Strange to relate, the Euglish Gencrument devined to liquidate the delt. Some two years liter, however, Heny VI. forms a treaty of allianer with "his deurst uncle, the King of Denmurk ;" nu, end of matters promised on hoth sides, to which, in all probulility, neither paid the slightest attention.

But to riturn to the Slot. Molesworth, in speaking of Conconhagen, suys, with the exepption of the buildings of Christimi iv's time, they are all memn and ois " care work," half timber, half plaster. The palace bur describes as the worst in the word, inferior to those of the nolility; it was a tine uld fendal sehloss, nlayitel to the trublous times in which it was construeted, as yon may still swo ly the old engravings, thenth certainly not in the style of Sir Christepher Wren, then the architect par exerllence. In the year ISOO, the old whifice was demolished by Frederie iV., and while yet semtely raised trom its ruins, was ngain hain hw to satisty the craving for magnitiecuce and luxury, the Lexetting sin of Queen Sophia Madalena. That this fuir prineess lavished the public money with a reckless hand no one can leny, but it should be burne in mind that she was not only the wife of an absolnte sovereign, hint alas the wife of one of the most consummate botes that wer existel. Tho queen from very wariness landed out into extravanace; palaces of mprecedented grameler rose at her heek and nod; she did too much, but all she did was well done and in good taste, and, in this partieular, it is to be regretted that later monarelis have not followed her (xample.
The palace of Madalena was eompleted and taken paseswion of by the emurt in 1740 , maidst the greatest p,wsible rejueings of the perple (so at least asserts the Dani:li Vitruvius), and medals were struck in henour of the event. This palace also was consumed by fire in the year $175 \%$, and fir some time remained $n$ heap of ashers. It has aften caused mueh antonishment how Frederie VI., considering the dilapidated state of his finames, should have rebuilt this editiee in so costly a style, too large fir the neessities of his eourt and kingdom. He had mueh better have reconstructed it atter the earlicr design of his finir pretecessor; it wonld have than still remained an ormanent to the eity and a credit to the arehitcet; it is now neither one nor the ather: lint Frederic VI., it appears, hat received a promise from the Emperor Napolcon, that in reward for his so-called neutrality he should reeeive the kingdom of Sinclen, and be erowned king of all Scandinavia. "King of Seandibavial" exelamed his Majesty, "anul no palace to live in I send tor the eomrt "rehiteet at ouce." His orders wero obryed; they 1) haned amel phanel, and the present masighty lalace of Cluistiansburg is the result of their consultations. Lucky had it been for King lirederie if Mrs, Glasse's well-known recipe had been then published, or at least translated into Danish; he would have saved a mint of money to the country, and the pangs of disappointed ambition to himself. The crown of Scaudiunvia was never fated to rest on his royal brow. The elected honse of Bemadotte reign supreme in Sweden; and

ALL ROUND THE WORLD.

Norway, after an maion of zune than to0 yeats, was wrested form the bimish emow mud hathed over to the pussession of her rival. Lhe I must not bo muphst $t_{n}$ the memory of lireherie: to hina the perasiats ot' like many others lar was mubitions in entry life, and sullered from it : he lived much mong his jeophe, and metaned their ableetion to the hast. Fion what I have hered whted, he resembled much his maternal indede, George III, of Finghat, in chatantory anialle and kind in dispositin, with a certain tonds of his Tritamic Majosty's alstin:uy.

 state apartament , not wfen weupiod us the royat fimily, it homons within its walls the two Chanhers ing aport, the lioyal lifinaty. Is we no here, you maty is well pass throurh the orreat compt of the palaw, lusisy, cumbrons: and ungtaceful. The ontur comt.
 Pulalena. Vou "un vivit the roval stahhes and inspet the white horses, tha alhimos, with loseate vers and franto tails, amd matues. 'lis the right lios the phomelid riblingrespanl. This comrt is bund is in winter and

 "मammatation of thar eapital. A fomatain, howner, has lately beent vected in the ematre, and dat lines time, will take away form the alenerted lowk of this diaretion of Probsson 'Jomman, whe, with ether

 Mablatuat mant have plamed amb dreamed the finture magniticencre which sion so woll unle estamel to pilt into exreution. In tha moming fonm lathe is sitnatori with that ar the University: 'The rollection ol' Northeru their smamer : mil winter phanage, as wall as the ducks from the islanin, we interesthig to the eprortsmath or che learmed in ornitholusy.

Lat us now ruturn for the Bomes. Stop tirst amb almire ita gracotul twisted pire, unigute in Fimone.
 wer-sume siy the fome dramons, othery the stome tratition is ajt to mulullish, anul I an alwatys scoptical ats regatals Dinhish legends abome swedinh abliairs, imel viec vervit. 'The buibling, howrer, is a ghorious memento un the cra of Claristian IV. Well did that monateh bumberstaml the styln of a diateretmre mapted and his works latw lasted, aum will hast for uges th come, when these of nure modern mehinets hawe long since pissued away.

Bint lefure we minter, notice low well the spine of St. Swimurs, with its winime extermal stail ator, stamks

 ment ly tho merehants of Cipmenligen, with the express comblition that they shonld phace it in at thomod sate of repmix, mil never makr any ahteration which shonhl hetract from the ehamotere of the edilior, nud well they have redeemed their pledres 'The the brion : wer the firphlue stambs a bronze stathe of Ein: Chostim himsulf; similar to that in the amd in lepping with the bulaling. 'Thw pands ut the firsuns, fo: of whith were rompleterl when 1 last vinitel the introlin of the builling-whe an allene ry, tugnther-"Anelhis:"mblinavian."

VII.

 its such a comant to have slone the town, and to trod Wherever indination lanls us. 'lomanes down the tha rigeche of the varions enterns anchomed in the ans artint! Vinn will not cirre tu walle thmoleli the difterl your uwa beasts. Wra mant tazn to ther right, whore stamble the Jolme Kirke, of work of Christian IV., but sully manded since hiv time. The dompay abne gives any tokson of the Ranassance perion ; Put the monarehos cipher still abums tho haibling, ami his spirit of cuntrmidection so miversal in all commtrits, translaterl, since the days when dablabena neaterond the pmblie monty with no livish a hame, as " lijeret litte's l'ange" ("I hie kinglom misses the mentry"). In the morthary chaped attached to this chareh are nomanuents to the twocelebrated amimals- Juel and T'melenskiahl. Almial eluel stands within agrille; on eath side ate biss-reliefs of white marble representing the naval artions in which he fignod, with long complimentary verses ly Bislaり ハiuso.

Smaller, aml fir less infosing, is tho modallinm, on it paintol wooden framework, erveted by Frederick VI. to the momory ot' 'Tombenskiole, the englavings of whose :mbitable portrait liy Dumer you thaty see expread fir satle in the printshops of Copenhaistell. Hs is the bean idedel of northern beanty, with long flowing

Well dial that viitwerture moptap h.mih for buxterity; will liest fin mes to wehi, wets have lons woll the stive of mal stail can, stamis Nhave (xice p, 3is:) is from the Cownenrulagen, with the? mble place it int it $r$ make any alterathe chatactive of tha "I thin phentre. The tored in the tyle of uls : bromze stathe ar to that in tha e it is woll jlamed, The pithels of the with wellowemter pletent when I list H-Mne an allegory, miniug seent, with -uning hasl at work min-Death of FiesThusal op teras Tuk Furs Kıb"usorse or the Kisi's

ixht sun-we eamnot anade of renterilat; he town, :hal to fiol Tarning hown the ment man the hrials "g out from am, "ry andumen in tha rs-what a stmily fir 1) walk thantis tha 11 agriculturiat, ath it tuent to the right, - work of Chrimm time. The donsway issance perion: : Init ho luilifins, amil his al in all comatries, alah hat acatured the III, as " liiget fittess ne mun'y"). In the ureh ure monuments断: :nd 'Turdensk kul. lle; an wath side are esenting the haval long complimentary * tho murtillim, on ad ly Fruderick VI. the cugravings of ner yon may see exf Copentagen. He $y$, with long flowing mate. 'The history of 'Jordenskiold is tom romantic to be prased over, anil jutst sucha story as all Linglishamen delight in.

In the hatere purt of the seventernth eentury there lived at Tronvem a burgomaster, John Wessel hy mame, with a flourishing fitmily of cishteen chilhren, ami stratitued means 'l'welve werr sons, of whan Feter, the tenth in number, and hero of our story. was bonn in 1 69, Hard wre thestruredes of poor dinh Wessel aml hia wife to mantain thit numerous olivelramelos, and I an atrial young lioter proved himself at tailur, but at the mad of a firw welk he was dismissead ats inempighe. When our hambatataned thenge of thirtene, Frederick IV. paid a vinit to Norway. J'eter, whase time lay heary m his lmols, make amanamee with the survants of the kingis homsiduld; sat when the reyal corterge departed, ho suddembe lisappeated to grepman shorty a vagahom and friendless in Copenhagin. The tale of the Nowerginn lay who hate panceater himsilf in the hold of a ship came to the cars of the royal confessur, who, takin!g compuasion on hims, omplosed him as: servant abont his person; but diter han inwardly determinal to enter the havy. Nothing damertl, ber wrote to the king, and was soon inserileel :ss an aprentice at the royal whits

After several voyages he was so highly prased by his captains, ho liecame milshipman, but still in the merehant servies. ILr is desoribed as a very "Mother Carey's chicken ;" his spinits rose with thio tempest itself, am, when fiar anil tomor agitated all minds, te alone appeatel to dive gratitication from the turmoil of the elmomes. When the war brokoont betwern bemmerk and swohn, ats it invariably did sume fifty times in the comer of each century, Peter domander permission tu anter the royal nawy, and was at once nplpointed to the comminul if at versel called the IForm, benting fiur gus. Fintless al: the :necdotes relatal of his thring ; on whe neeanim the met with an Euglish privateer: "If that frigite were swedish," he exclain mi, "I shomblake ta; but the E.glish have tow mech practice and fight ter well fire me to hope for an easy conguest." 'The vessils engaged, and a huridfinught lattle chsined, sueh as alway tomk plate, and will take place, when Dauses and English meret in maval wartare. "! have no mere powider," crias Tortenskioh; he senuls a flag of truce on board repuesting the Englis... captain to lend him some that he misht contimue the hattle, or, if he womld mot, heot-
 th sin gallant an enemy. The Englishman de linem, no they dramk to emblher from their rexpective vessils, amid cheers rose from the banes as the captans raised their glassns, vocifernaly returned by the delighted Mintish sailors.
In 1716, Viter uxchamen, by a patent of mobility. the phelntian patronymic of Wexsel for the higher shield), and was hater named Ahmiral.

After the pieen of Promerikshorg he visited (eepmany; and havine called to aterome a wrinin (indmel Stahil, a shamper, who had theered one of his comentymen at carls, hy intlicting on him :a somul thatishing: hee was alterwards inducet to give hime satistaction. 'Tle morning of the duel 'tordenskinld rost eool and careless as ever; in vain his servant implore. him to take a swom of greater bength than the small mime he wore iy hiv side: Lue reftised. The duce tenk plice, and, matecnstumed to the jitersse of a fenero, he fell, piercel lyy the mipier of his athersaty, in the twentyminth year of his ase. He was the bimish haymul of his "comitry - stas pe"t; and I believe also stans reprocke.

 Let cach to heaven comument has semil ant ite :"

Fit le it from me we treat with disrespect the memory of his bother Ahmimal, ithetrinus Juel ; lont Juel was a man tif molle parentage, and sulfined in early life mone of thase difliculties ont hero so hatwly wereme; allen to which, le it Diek Whittiugton or King Birnalutte, 1 nlways do dolight in lim who fiom mes hegiming. miso himsilf in thit wom, and dies at the top of the tree, la it masal ark on hmble hean-stalk.

Wr follow the cmurs of the dull, hathess Holm cuma, on the opposite sile of whieh rise long, low, high-pitchud roush, yotlow hindings, with mysterious hlack shutters, ewrebosed-woncthing to do with dock-
 Here the cemal turas off at vight anghes, mal disumears among the " back slums" of the ohl what: The Opera Honse is a slupeless building, half-rebuilt, half-pilled down, to be eased with stone or stucemel mane diay. I beliove Denuark to be the only combery where tho stage is perfectly respectable; to play or dance at the Ruyal Opera Honse, a woman, like Ciesar's wift, must unt evin be suspacteri. We now stand at the antrance of the Kougens Nyturv, or King's Now Matk:t (fornurly eatled Hallands Aas), thrigh no market at all is cree heh thute. It is shapeless, but the general atliet is imposing, and mast have been more so in warlier days, hafire the destruction of the donble aveme of cut limes which formerly sumomed the grorden, in the eentre of which stimis the "questrian statue of Christian V., erectes in 1688. 'hhis stathe is allegorical aud reguires it keg. The horse is trampling on a monster, which was onee callon Swolen; hat is Danes no honger thample on thair neighonens, hat live in prace and muity, the monster is now styled Viec, or something this. At the bominarlanent of 1807 a (amon-ball struek the right arm of the statue, siace which time the king hulds his seeptre downwards.

Passing !y the ugly Military Ifigh Sehool, about to be removed, we arrived at the Chalotenborg Shet, a building of $m$ great leauty, but iuteresting, in an historical joint of iew, to us Eughish; for here resided our Jrincess I misa, with her haskand, then Crown l'rince; and here was born her eldest diaughter. Fophin, the lnamtinal Qued of sweden. Charlotenbug was Matshat, halfowther of thristian V., who contereal upouhim the castlowthalo (which we paseed on our way from Aarhnu), where he only slept, hewerer, one night: disgusted :at heing survounded by an immbation, he hurrioul ull' is fast as he combl: mill earrying his costhe, or rather the materials, with him, emstrinetel the prossent palitw'e, which he later sold to the widnwed quen of Christim $V^{\prime}$., from whom it derives it appelhation.

The Newhaven (Nyhavn) canal, crowided with shipping, ruas up the the viry entranere of the palace. l'assing hy the Thot Baliee, now the hotel of the Russian minister, a milling of some arehitectural pretensions, within whose walls are contanined the small lint valuable cabinet of pietures, chietly of the Duteh sehool, the property of tho Moltke fimily, we reach the St. Anna Plads, a promenade lately planted with trees, at the end of which is a wooden jetty, from which the stemurs emiark and lisembark passengers for Labee, Kiel, and titty otter localities. Copenhagen, hike her sister London, is sally in want of quays. Fon arrive anyow, nohow ; but great improvements are contemjhitel.

Observe that tower in the dockyard opposite, surmomented by a crine. There, after the hombardment of 1807, stowd the English admital, while he supurintromed the destruction of the Danish vessels still uncompleted and in the stockes. A splemdid eighty four was destroyed among tho rest, and from its remains found tlonting about the water the Danes construeted a small brig, elaristened by the appropriate name, the l'henix.

Proceeding down tho Amaliegade, in which we ate now located, and which boasts three stripes of thagstones inserted in its trottoir, we arrived at the Amallienharg Plaks, which might bo mado one of the prettiest squares of its size in Europe. The original Amalinborg Slot underwent the usual fate of all edifices, royal and phebeian, in Denmark - it was destroyed by fire in 1689 , during the performance of an Italian opera. A large coneourse of people lan assembled to witness the representation, as well as the court and all the royal fimily; a lamp, was aceilentally overturned, the fire caught the wood-work, and in exchange at copenhagen.

moe moment the whole boilling wis in a blaze. In the eonfision and orush of the exit nearly three hunded persons purished; and when Molesworth visited Coprenhagen, he delares there whas searely a family of conswpunee in the capital that was not in mouning tier me of its members. The fime pretty palaces which rephed the earlier bminding were built ly the families of Sehnek, Moltke, Brockeluetf, and Lavetzan, who again sohl them, after the conllagration of Chinstinnsbuy, 1794, to the royal fimily, who foum themselves without a roof to cover them. One of them is now ocempied ly her majesty the preen lowagry, the muiable and virtums widow of Cluristian VIII. ; a seemul ly the Lamigrave of Itesse, hashund of the Prineess

Charlotte, mad 'spother to the Duchess of Cambrige ; the third was offered to the Prinee of Bemmak, who deres not at pursent oceupy it ; whila the finurth dees duty an the Foreign Othee.

On the wholo it is a charming little place; and were not the pavemant the mast athenons in all Comenhagen, and the space around the statue of livelinic V., erected to his honome liy the merelmists of the celpital, too ronfincal, I know bew of its size equal to it.

In the you 1s:34 a silent mul suldered multitule stond hamethless mid maxinus liefore the windows of the palace whow frederic VI. hy on his bed of agony. He was mush helowed, and a ganeral lieling of sorrow prevaled the whole $f^{\text {mopulation, who awaited with }}$ appropriate name, thu gade, in which we are - three stripes of thagc arrived at the Amamado one of the pretEurope. Tho original the usmal fate of all in Demmark - it was ing the performance of neonrse of people lian entation, as well as the ; a lamp, was aceidentthe wood-work, and in nelhess of Cambringe ; cer of Demmark, who whiln the fimuth dues littl" phae; and were ons in all Copmenhagen, if Wrelaric V., ereeterl ts of the capital, tro "pual to it.
I saddencil multitude re the windows of the. on his bed of ugony, erall feeling of sorrow Who awaited with maxicty the termination of his sufferings. Sudtenly of juy and enthusiasin grectel the accession of the new the window is unchased, the grand maskial alpears on montreh to the theone. the baleony, and, breaking asmoder his rod of otlice, exdams, "Le Roi ent mort, wive le Roi." Alas for the feebheness of haman sentiments! The l'rince hy the myad crown and eipher, on which the sparows Hereditary, now Christian Vili., inhabited the palaed hohi their court in large numbers, squabhling and which stands on the opposite side of the octagen; volte lighting for phase and precedence bike their betters. fice turned the assembled erowd, and hazzis and eries One pant of this hoppital is set, aside for the higher classos, who ean thero ubtain rooms fire a reasomble smu, mud are mbinably attended, withou deranging their own extablishments, on, in ense of infiections ilisorders, sprading death and dismase mong their fimilies mand iomesties. Luving the vilhmms pavement and erossing the equineme of tres, we arrive at the Jango Linea, one of the prottiest promenaler possensend ly my capital of Linspe ; se fiesh is the air, so bright and whilurating the seene along the hamks of the Somil, im some days tereming with ships from all purts and climes. Tho the hot rises the ritudn, with its monterand firtilieations; you ean visit it if $\because, n$ will; it alfords a charming walk. Fonewned is, "racel, saith the movern; ;ad before trasting your ... . . a sednction of its tamparts, call in minel that it is cirentar in form, and wander not sound and romed (as I did on my first visit) like a horse drawing water in a well, or a hewiddered coekney in the maze of Hampton Court.

At in distance from the land may be diseerned tho far-timed battery of the Thre Crowns (Trektoner), the construction of which was searcely eommenced in 1801; it rose only it fleur deate. Guns, however, were flanted on it, and did good execution against the fleet of the empluy.

Wir return again ty the Toldhoden into the Bremgade, near the centre of which stand to the reght, in at rast deserted phace, now used nis a stonemason's yard, the ruins of the mathe Freletiks Kirke-remaning, and ter wom 1 imagine likely to remain, mampleted. This church was commeneed in the reign of Frederic V., ather the splended designs of Jardin, a French architect. The state could ill afford the crection of No expensive a building, and struensee stopred the works, actnated, doulthess, by praiseworthy motives of conomy; as it was, he only disgusted the pulblie by the dismissal of some humbred workmen, suiluid the ill will of the clergy, and the sums of money "commised by him were wantonly lavished by Comut biamit in illuminations and court fites of wnwoutel phleulour and extravagance. Thu architect, too, was dismissed, umpaid and ungratified, in a manner whinh ramsel universal indignation. Strucusee was, there is no hombt, beyond his age. He dida great many woul thingw, hut in a most lisagretable way, was eareless if womling the prejudices of others, mul in all his dotims showed a violence and want of tuct which soon wilterd him most mpopular thronghout the conntry' (1) wither side of the street leading into the Amalicnbeng stanl two $1^{\text {nulaces-one the property of Irince }}$ Frederic of IIesse, the other of the Irinee IDereditary; and hishur up, moljuing the Butish Legation, stands the indsome hotel of Comut Schimmehman. A Saxan I) himh, he conmmenced lite as a batman on the Elber, fhing his trade between Dresden and Manburg, mad rose to beminister th Christian VII, and comit of the "maire. We pass down the brominge Twergade, by
 ! !uwn duliani, on onr way to the Rosenborg Gardenslimt we munt stop hulfoway.

If Pompuii em boist her street of Tombs, Cupenhasen can same her street of Cotlink-Adlergade hy manc. Turn tho eye where yon will, black fimeral vellands meet the eye; idvertisements of "Smakke liskistu" (pretty coffius) to he sold, all ready, or mate to measure. Ghazed frames expowe to view shomls and graveolotbes, pinked out ready, and Nanupel in homes, like the hroderie Anglaise in a workShep window; from the shon't petticont of the little child, to the cravat with tlowing how of the male melult. Late ns tly fom this seene, and breathe fresh air monong the limes an! limes in the Rosentrorg Gardens-bot the ohl parden it once wat, with eropled yew, and gay phat handios, fombtans, and omage-trees, but a, wihas.

We have still mueh to nec. I will lear you to the I'lace of the (itay Brothem (Ctabirolretors) where within whose chareh reposed the intant eliddren of King Christian IL., Maximilimand Ihilh. Queon Filizabetha bore three sons in one year, Johm the eldest, mill these twins. Sighrit, who wis present at the "Bitsel" of the gueen, and not over particular in her speech, lost her temper at the sight of thom, and remarked loudly in the henring of everyhody present, "If the gueen goes on in this way, the comery" will bee neither rich nor harge mongh to sulport so many Iteerkens," which, I believe, in old Duteh, signifies "little gentlemen."

Later on this Place rowe the stately palaco of the minister Corfit\% Ulfild, som-jn-haw of Christian IV., razed to the gromul at the period of his diserare, nom on the spot as small whelisk was raised, the inseription on which prochaimed "shame and ignominy to the traitor Ulfeld." This monument was again mumeal (it now lies hid somewhere in the cellars of the semulinavian Musemu), and gave phace to a buteher's marked. What a matter-of-fict age we live in! Wr next 1 wieced towards tho University, hy the strere in which the post-office is situatel. Mark well that cerner honse-a wine-shop from time immemonial. Here wats bred and born the boy Schumacher, son of the promintor, a winc-vendor, later koown throughout Eur" $\boldsymbol{n}^{\prime}$ as Count Grillenfeld, the minister and :mviser if Christian V.

Tacked on to tho church of the Trinity, emectinl hes Christian IV. for the University students, the liomil Tower stands before ns (See p. U60), built ly the cugineer Steenwinkel of Emalen, itself intended for int wi. servatory, though now no longer usel as such; :unl here, previous to the fire of 1728, was preservent the: celebrated globe of' Tycho Brale, together with his mathematical instruments, brought over from (irmumy by Prines Ulrik. You guia the summit by a browl spitat an incliued phane, along the sides of whel. : remped mumerons Runic: stones, recklessly remosen trom thin original localition. Withont inseriptions to tell whonew they came, or what they signify, they stand lirty, weless, and neglected, Int are to be removed to the turw garder:d of the University Library when eomplatiol. Opposite to these Runic stones is the sepulelural shat of Dyveke. Up this spiral staircase Caar l'iter is satil to have driven four in hand; how he turned at the tul is a mystery to me, but so tradition dechures. In the roof of the chareh is contained tho library of the University, rich in lichandic Sngas and treasures of itentimable value. At the bombardment of 1807, a cimum. ball struck and passend through the roof of the limatry, knocking to shivers an ancient treative of Hug, lir tilis - Do l'ace et Bello. Adjoining stands the Ringenz, tho residence of some limudred Danish students. In ibur ecutre of the quadrangle rises a splendid lime tres, mil from its churt you gain a beter view of the mand toww, and Christim's colebrated "rebus" inseribet thown, earved on atone, the joint olnmay work of that momardi and sundry lenmend profensors of his favourel Uniser-sity:-"Dootrinan et (written in long letters willout istop), Justitime (representel in Webrew chamachers) ; Dirige-Johnsal (in Itebrew eharmetres) ; " hatint; Christian IV." In phan English-" May tion difont juntice and lenming in the homet of Christim IS."
Gontinuing nur conser werrive at the "hiversity; a hideots, monstrons building, whose ugliness is only nurpussed by that of the nedjoining elareh of Our latly (tho Frwe Kirke), a huildine mworthy to contain those expuisite proluetions of' Thorvaldsen, his thrist, the Apostles, mad the Kneding Angel-chefseliwure 1 will not insult, by deseribing within their prisen. To this merited abuse tha Danes will reply, "Why did you bombard the old chatech $l^{\prime \prime}$ I almit there is some ight of thom, and reeverybody present, cy, the conntry will he, to supprort so, many old Juteh, viguilies
: stately palace of tho -haw of Christian [V., al of his disweme, anl raisent, the inseription and jgrumany to tha, he was again mowerl re cellars of the Suanlie to $n$ batehurs market. ive in! Wr next prom $y$ the strent in whide lark well that corme mmemorial. Tele wats ber, son wh the jureprievin throughont Pumpn nister and miviser oil the Trinity, eroetwl ly $y$ students, the liomol 360 ), lmilt hy the engielf intended fire an wh. gel used is such; ; :mal 728, was proserved the ahe, ugether with his sht over from linum:my cummit by a lonols spinat of Ambiose-mosteps, les of whiel. re ramged asly removes! trom their seriptions to tell wherne $y$, they stand dirty, "aebe remowed to the now brary when ermmpotal. $a$ is the sepulelaril slab, irease Cant Peter is salil ow he turnel at the tol dition rleclares, In the the library uf the Uniand treasures of inestiaent of 181$)_{7}^{7}$, : ctanlum the root of the libray, rentive of 1 hngul (irntitis stande the liwollo, the: stixh studhents. In the aplendid lime treer, and view of the ronmel (owe Pr, bus" inscribed theroon, sy work of that numatroh of his favoureal Univer' in long letters withont in Tehrew chasteters) ; chametors); n lasint; lish—" Il:y IGod limet ot of Christian IV." rive at Ihe l'aversity whose urginess is ouly ing elimeh of Uur lanly aworthy tu contuin thoss chlelsen, his Chuist, thu Angel-chey's teunare! vithin thein prison. Too a will reply, "Why did $I$ mhinit thero is some logic in this; lut the kindest act we could now perform to their capital wonld be to return and knock over tho new one and tho University into the burgain. It is incredible how so much ugliuess cane to be eoncentrated in so small a sprace.
The earlier ehureh ol Onr Lady was tommed-or, at any rate, eompleted-in the reign of Christian II. A. short time hefore the boity steeple was: finished, at quarrel took place between the woster carpenter and his journeyman, who ilechareal himself to be as gool a workman as his mastor. When the ornameat was to be phated on the extreme end of the spire, the mester cimpenter ordered a boand to be mate fist and lad acruss. Je then went to the end and dill what was neersmay, leaving his axo hehind him. Mo moturnes, and ordered his jonemeymat it he considere I himself remal to him, to en and tetch the axe: The mon complied, fost his balance, cane dawn heallons, and was killed. In conseguence of this aceident the ormaments of the spire were bally ficel, atml fill the following year-an ourth whith, in the superstitions feeling of the age, wis regurded to have reference to the tinture latl of the monareh himself: The Firne kiake, wioh the execption of the choir, wis destrayed in tho tire oft 17es, which eonsumerl the University, tivo ehurehes, the llitel de Ville, and libio homses. Writhin its watls twok place the coronation ot thr earlier sovereigns of ${ }^{\circ}$ the Wonse of Mldenborg, as well is the installathen of the hishops, which eeremony wis emmlucted with ereat ponp in the preseney of the Court. In 1716 the C'an l'eter of lilissia assisted at ome, to bis ergot satisticetoms 'fliss chureh coubiasd may fins momanents. The fower was an mimirable sporimula of the liamassance, surmounted has one pante I thelse, spitted with erowns and fantastic ormaments, like tratles on an aiguillette.
Whed, when the steeple of Our Lanly was out of (0) to see with his uwn eyes how the mater remod (no one else wonld), and bater gave direstions to the workmen how it should bo t.xstened together and sustamed with bron emapions. But now for the sal matimely lite of Our haty's ehurels. In 1807 there hombe fom the hostile battery struck her gratedil pime; the whols instantaneonsly fell with a daslo, ant the first knowleage of tho mischiet perpectinded wise converad to tho imbabitants by tho shentes and hombeles which posedrowning even the roar of the emmom-forn thase remukahly mischicuons spocimens of hamanity our British mulurs.
'lhere is wind phongh in Cuproharen, Heaven knows ! bui the the ernes of the date by the frome Kinke suore than anywhere, and 1 will toll you why. 'Ther Wevil and she Wind weat wat one dity tequther, and when they came to the porner of thin Place, satid the Bevil to the Wimi, "Witit a littlo tor me, firs J have an rriand in the thishopis phlace." Ifo went in, l'omeranim, perlmps at the s.ugrention of his theern Ihilipint. Ibefore thes period tho Danos stadied at l'arim, whoro they hand rapecial eolleges for their use, I'he required sanction was obtained from P'ope Dattin I., und the Arehbinbop of Lamil, metropoliath, was desired to seleet $n$ fitting sito lor its comstrmetion. Veither bisik nor his successor, King Chistopher, fond time or leisme to follow up tho idga, and its firse interguration took place: in tha reigat of Christian l., on his return hom it visit to Rems in $1 \pm 74$. The Popre then reigning at the Vatican, Sixtus, fonth of thit ninns, renewel the promission. 'Lise papal city apperse $t$, have been mach editiod by the hamility of the I) mish moniuch, as wall as delighted by the ravity of his sifts, which consisted of hluod horrings and es.ltish, foth most valualble for Fridu's consmaption. and the seson of L ant, ans of a glantity of ermingskins, it thet time most rate pal hesions; indeed, two-themselves with $p$ \%he ds ched. Tine gits were ensill yed wabl ehowen and acesptablo, aud Christion rotumas not omly proviled with leave to cat blish is University, Lut enl wed with a "solden rose" it provent tron th: louting himselt, to say nothing of numberless retios nt inestim whe value.

'The tirst iden ol estathishines the Uhiversity of'

The insuqumation of the University toak plase, witit apent prop, in the rials Kirke; the statutes were |cobme, Nu'wiy, and Nuth Germmy, ats well as D.mes without number - inshopi, protomore, motle-ytueld-in the enchusition of the manent insubibed dation. The Univer ity respivel protestion trom King in therign parts. At the timo of tho Notomation it fill ints dway, min in the your loss wasalm sit closol. Climistian III., however, sijpmoted it, and atiled by tho sipnort ; he alse docided thit tor the futme the Giamd (hamedif of the kingem shond hs styled "Pro-(-nen) " ut the Uaiserity.

'I'he U'uiversity engeyed the throur of Christim IV., nni w him the studentis owe, bessides the luiginget of Enelimi, on his visit to the University, presented it with it siker cup, the molded rearins of which, consumal by tho botore-mentioned tire of 172 S , mity still Ine seren in the simatinavian Masoma.

Withont Mpromatimg tou next-for the boilding itasht is ot brick, mutilated, chmbled down, derinded let ut arms tor anr minute on the imposing tower of mehitarture, not very purs, of tho uxisting periokl. It has, howover, a merit of its own, ami lises majestio with its enpola-shaphe siter resting on masoive golden bitlls. 'This chmen wita stully dinnated during tho bombariment of LSot, and muy yele chapsed betoro it was rextored so tion as an ber arialable tor uxe.

Hwing "timived the interior of the eity emsientionvy," Inefore wa tako onr ovening stroll atong the whervatuons an the heiore-ntentionel ant otedn much Hhanol "hmomalment of the city of Coprenh:ygen."
 sinco my resilomee in bemmath have corefally stand dae mamemas pramphety publishal at Cupenhagou shombly atior the event, as well as several of nore reent date L have no naional projudice on tha sulpeet : on the comtrine, rowibing in tho eity itselt, Triste sompemir-inserted in the way masoury of the house wo inhabit, I almost feel as though bombarded myself.

Under the then existing circumstances, I eammot seo how the English govermment could have acted wherwike. It was a painful neeessity. They hat recoived from the most reliable somees certain information that the Emperor Napulcon, about to oceupy Holstein with his amy, would, if onee master of Zealand, seize the Danish fleetand employ it against our comentry for the invasion of Great Britain aud Irelamd. The demand made for the depmsit of the Danish Fleet under our care until the conclusion of the war was perempterily refused to Lords Gambier and Catheart: perhaps tho terms in which it was made were sumewhat gilling to thae xpirit of Danish independence. They were, howaver, not only refinsed, but followed ap at onet by a froclamation on the part of Count Mrockitorfl, declating the contiscation of British property, the ammument of debts due to British suljeets, and forlidding, ins illegal, all correppondence with them. Jhis was not likely to mend matters.

Frederic, the Crown Prince-malike his heroie anrentor King Prederic III, wha, when adrisel to guit the Lesiged enpital in 1659 , replied, " 1 will remain and die in my nest "-demandell his passport and rejomed the royal family loented at Kicl. Of the corps diplomatique, the French legation alone remained.

For $1: 3$ own part, I shall always belieso that the Crown Prince, then legent, sacrificer his eapital to his own liepes of persomi aggrandisement in tho fora mition of a kingdom of Seardimasia. Strames to say, thee inhatistants themselves, though theatemeif fir thee werks, rould never bring thenselves to belin wat the hombardment would take phace, The first rocket thrown in the town killed a little girl, sitting working at hu C hedhom wimlow; the second killed her mother, nursine hor childat the strectorer. 'lluse missiles swemed th have a jarticular pita agimet the temale sex. Fires bwe ent in every direction ; the comber fiw, wry few, survised to tell the the tulh. On tho mended day the inhahituts fley to Christimanam in tha Brand of Amak, 100 pasons lolging in the somo hene: BCJ houses were consumed hy the thanes, the cathiteal was totally destroyth. Of the mamber of wrim, chidern, and the ngit whe fell victims to the w,wer of onr enne, withont cometing these who died in delowing ti.e city, I lecline giving any aceoment the statisties sury, aid ate, we may hare, exagerated. On the fimeth day, at ellabu welock, the capitulation of the city was signeel ly diem ral liomam, who was atherwards dispaced, depriwd of his decosations, nall di miserd the Javish serviee ly the fotulant Crown frimes, as a momal for his contimed bravo alefene of the enpital, nal his hammity in preventing int her losis of life, and its entire reduction to ashes liy the camon of the enemy-a capital, too, which the prinee himself hand dwerted and hift to walergo its fite, masumorted in its calamity ly the presenco of its actum sovercign, tim thrintimn land long hefore sumk into astate of lunary and meatal mberntion. Whateser may have bean the combuct of the English Govmment, that of the Crown l'rince tells-mid will tor ever tell-madly in the pages of modern history.

Permission must be ohtained befine visiting the Doskyard mut Arsenal. Tha former is someswhe panchions for the size of the present mary; but there are sigus of improvement going on; a new dock of stone has been lately completel, capable of containing a manof war of the tirst magnitude, and now honoured by the occupation of a disabled Russian frigate. In comparisun with the doekgards of England and France, there is, of course, little to bo seen, but what there is is well mranged, anil the work well executed. The Arsenal combains a large collection of guns, sworls, enthasses, halberts, &ce, from the carliest ages, arrunged in chronological order. The similarity of terme naed in the two services cannot fail to interest the Finglishman: the jolle banal-jolly-boat; narc-oars; at ro-to row; om horil-overhmird; mast, &e.

High in the roof of a mysterions-looking elifice is precruel a eollicetion of models of frigates, &e, from the emricst times downwaris. Among them are two, hang with smull faded gulands, constructed by the royal hants of King Christim IV. himself. Like the Czur Peter, he entered thorongly into the mysteries of shipbuilding, and his mavy protited by his knowledge of its techmicadities.
We leave the Doekyarl by the gate which humb to the sepmate town of Christianshavn, founded by Chriotian IV., on the Inhud of Abak. Christianshana has a sand, leserterl ap pearanee-nan air of having sem better days. Many of its honses have in their time bom inhahited by people well to do in the worth. The palate of the long-since extinet Oricutal company hooks degrated anel fierlorn. It is built of red brick and white stone, and has some architectural pretensions. Christiun IV. sent an experlition to the Fast Lumior, muler Ovo Giedde, a mobleman of ancient family. Giedde megocinted with the King of 'Ianjore the ces. sion of Trmunebar, where ho built a citadel, mall formed the only Dminh setthement in tho East. Ife returned, sitwe three yous' absebse, with the treaty engraved upon plates of siver. The charch of st. Snsiom, designed ly Christian IV., was completed during the reign of Clmistian V. It took three kins to build it. With its extemal spimh stairense, in the antanee it lowks well, but, once arpmoth it, an ugher: brick alitiee, the tower exeepted, can searedy lee emccived. Tho interior is vast aml loty; it contains: sphembid organ, riehly carved, supported by two dephants. The balustrude which surmomats the gite ly tho white marblo figures of small ehithlen, erying laughing, praying-doing, indeed, nhost overyihin; that little chidren can di-mand, unlike thow of Thorwalisen, andat disereetly dessed. (See p. Siou.)

The (slanci of Amale (Amaget), on whith wo binw stame, was is you have, I dure saly, hearal, ewl ats tin 1516 by Chinstimn 11 , who extablished here a garty of Dutch, hoping, ly their example, to encomage the with justice ther jeredia pr,tugre of Copenhagen; the inhabitants still retain tho anclent costume as worl by their fireshand foretathoss.

On Shrove Thesday, up to the days of Kins Christian V., mill may be latur, the Court wero acenstomed to hold a enruival in the Ishand of Amak, diaguising themselves in tho labits of Nurth Hollame hoors, with great trouk hose, short ferekets, and largo hue capers ; the ladies in blan petticonta and ond hembAresses. 'Ihns accontred, they got up into cummon comutry waggons, in ench a man befurt buil "1 women there dimeed to the sinnut of bagipes und fiddes, n new dock of stone le of containing il mand now honoured by the ian frigate. In comEngland and Frouce, cen, but what there is - well executed. The etion of guns, swords, "arliest ages, arrunged ilarity of torms used in terent the Englishman: -oars; sit ro-lo row;
rious-looking elifier is Is of frigates, Sie., from Among them me two, ds, constructed by the IV. himself. Like the bly into the mysteries dited by his know ledge the gato which lends to minu, founded hy ChrisChuistianshitw hats air of having seen hetter e in their time been inin the wortd. The Oriental company looks Luilt of red brick :mod ehitecturnl pretensions. ion to the Fist Indic, bun of ancient limuly. ug of 'Tanjore the ces0 built is citudel, :mal nent in the Rast. Jte mence, with the maty

The chareh ut si. "IV., was completel

It took three kines spiand stairease, in the oneproach it, muybur d, can searesly lee con. mul lofty; it contains : supported ly two ebch smmemuts the gilt11 collefption, suppurte! small ehihdren, cryine. leed, nlmost everythin? I, unliko those of thurl. (Sec p. 3is.)
ger), inn which ". 1 luss Naly, heard, ch in in atished here a fonty al mple, to enewarnio tha jeets. It has becurtylyl $r$ of Copenlagen ; the ent costume as wom ly
o the days of Kires latere, the Couts werr "the Island of Amak, abits of Noutl| II allanul short jrekets, mud ling etticonts ame ord hemiy got 1 l ' into eonmmon IIt before and a woman -house the tho dsland, and " bogpipers and tiddler, laving first partaken of $a$ country dimner off earthen platters and with wooden spoons, all etiguette being laid aside, and little regard paid to majesty or quality. At night they drove homo by torehlight, and were entertained at the Comedy, and partook of a grime supper, spending the evening in the same habits, which they never put off till the next day.

Two bridges comect this island with the town of Copenhagen: one leads into tho street beline the Bourse. You shonk ohserve tho arms of Christianshava over the areliway : a blue tower, three erowns, the cipher of King Christian, its fommer, supported by two lions. The view from the eanal on this site of the bridgo is novel to the eyo; yon take the eity from a dillerent point, bnekways. Bint we will eross owr the second lnidge, and so gain the ramparts, by which tho whole eity, ineluling Christiansham, is surrommed.

It is a pleasint stroll on a finc bright moming along the rumparts of the eity, laid out with avemues, and commanting the adjacent country. If the wather is hot, you bend your course under the shate of the thickphanted trees; in coliler weathor, the sun is alwings there on tho lighest embinkment, and the wind too, sometimes. Should you wisl to prolong your walk by one thirl, take in each bastion within the rompass ,if your jremonade: you ean measme your exircise by rule, and all without absenting yourself from the urighbourhood of the eity. On entel hastion stamds at sigantic windmill, ever had at work; for wind is not to be classed among the watuts of Copenharen : a lional ateh lies below, allording mbinable skating in frosty weather, and drowning, ton, when the ice is rotten. The country, thongh llat, is not ugly ; the linergomme is composed of water and wood, with the tall houses of the newly huilt suburbs in the distance, together with Nourebro church: all these objects combined remind you of an old Flemish lankeage ; and more so in the winter sensm, when the show lies thick uron the ground and the eliteh is frozen.

Concerning the construction of these rampatets there is told a story so homibhe I ean hamelly givecredit to its touth, hat the Dames thomselves relate it. It ;1ppents that the earth cromhbod down, giving way as fast as the workmon luilt it up: the engineers themselves were nt fand, so they determined tu eomsult it wise womatu, who decherel the momels would always contimo sinking unless a living chilh was bumed undersuath. So they prepared a reess of hriekwink madop llowers, and placed therein a little table and elatiss with toys, and dolls, mulsweetmeats, and it tre lighted with muny litto tapurs; unt lowing enticed a litelo gitl of fivo years ohl, they elothot her in new gumoter, and bousht her to the bower aecompanimel ly a band of masie; nud whilat the ehild in hev selight playmal with the clells and toys, the unsons guickly closid IIJ the apertare with solid brickwork, and shavellod the math over it from that time the rimparty sumk no more.

In tho angmaings of Copenhaten, of the year lose the walls, mehicolated and embellishod with number less round oxtinguisher-xpped white towers, still "xistal. They now extemel from the sintana to the lurbour at Úlutatimeshave opposito the Langa-linest, until they join the citarlel on the uther siden of the tuwn.

Within that heasy-looking ohe red lriek house, with massive stone window-eppituse, reminhing you of the Diteh architecture of Willian's dity, once resided Tyelo Braise, the northern luminiry of his century. This almost sole remaining house of historie interest in Copenhagen the Dames have shown the grood taste not to destroy. It is converted into an almshonse for aged mon and women. The building is now muder repair, and is being considerably entarged, in a stylo of mehitecture similar to the original construction, I diel not visit tho interior.

As we continue our ramble, the houses in the streot below appear all windows. 1 defy the oecupiers to wash and dress unseen, they aro so overlooked from the heights above, and possess no retreat. Now eomes the Fosenborgs slot, with its three weathereocks, which always point it ditherent directions; sometimos, thongh ramely, a reconciliation is effected between two of them, but it is of short duration, Down the street the the right, at the corner of which studs the splemelid hatrracks of the foot-guitrls, is in small low-buitt houses, eallal "The Golden Mouse," whero in the ditys of" Kiug Frederie III., dwelt the king's aldyynist, Burthi by name, as necessary an appendige to nothern royalty of those days, as dwarif, court fool, or nogro page.

We now apyroach the end of out stroll. Look on that little guartier, consistiug of twelve streets of toybox houses, rimgid in symmetrical regnhatit, the domicile and pépiniere of Demmank's navy, fommided by t'luristian $1 \mathrm{~V}^{\circ}$, who loved and protected his sailors. Nince the reign of that monarel there they awell, live, and thenrish, is the erowds of small hoys, tightines, wrestling, and playing in tho diconlandgade, to which wo now leseend, will fully teatity.

VIII.

Castee of Losmbborg - Tlies Iforn of Ornennoad-Mat:hifos Cellestoniala of Chastran tI, - Hadais of rits

 (Qeenn Lotisa of Enolinn - Juliana Mama-tiate of Tha: Castle of Rusenborg (Nee p. 368), huilt by Christian IN., is of red brick and stone, in the style of Italian Remaissance, gratted on the ancient fothic of Northern Furope. It is a the specimen of the perionl, and is unpoiled ly mondem improvements either within or withnut. An itlen generallyprevaikamong the English that it. was constrinted after the designs ot Inigo dones, but of this there is no prowt vither by plom or reoded. It is "Mtan that Jhigo was attached to the person of Chris-brated visit to his brother-in-haw, Janes I., and then introdnem him to the netice of the Einglish sovereign; hut whether laigo firmished the plam for Rosenborg is enlightent tis. . It the poriod of its eonstruction the babace stood in tho centre of spacions gatdens, at it flistanes from the eity. On the extension of the tortifleations it lneamo inelased within the bastions, unt is now, thliortumately, on the rampant side, olsembed by ugly modern elifices, while a fighting gram-honse, tacked on to the orlyitul gatewny, fistignmsthe eatrance. The juwels, miniatures, and portrits hava bean rem atmageal in ehronolugieal order, mader the direetion of ${ }^{\text {a }}$ Professor Worsae, lately appointed warden of the eastlo. Ituspmberg is now in desertal palnee, a fulci commissum and museum of the house of Olfenburg. In the last centiry it formed the first halting-plaed of tho king, who inhabited it for a fortuight in the early spring, previons to continuing the hoyal progress to Fruderiksborg and other residenees.

You cuter the palace by a lous corridor, with richly wronght ceiling ndorned with pendants, sulh as one sometimes meets with in the old country houses in England of the same or of a previous dinte.

Fassing through the auticence-clamber, empanelled with pictures by Duteh artists, you come to the rumm in which Christian IV. died-a room whose Cytherem decorations seandalised Wiaxilll when ho visited the palace. In this and an adjuining ealinet are preserved the valunhles of the sovercigens of interiur date, as well us those of the founder limselli.

First on our list comes the celdebrated horn of Oldenborg, the work of a Gernam artist. Dimicl Aretens ly name, a native of Cervey, in Westythalia. exceutco alont the year 1450, by cemmanil of (Christian 1 ., whose intention it was, had he suceeedell in his effice of mediator hetwen the Chuiter of Cologne and their arehbishop, to have presentel it us a vitive allering to the shrine of the Magi in that eity. The nescreation failed, wad the hom renained an herimen on to the humse of Oldeulerg, in the empitnl of which duchy it was preserved until its thal remuval tu Copenhagen, It is an exfuisite eprecimen of the ghtismitho ath, of silver gilt, enriched with nmamentatione in s.on and viedet enamel, wipesenting scous illustrition of tembal domestie life in the tiftenth eentury. An mevent guld sing, enriched with a rough sulphire, oue surved ns the multital ring of Pizanheth, daughter of Phitip le liel of Anstrin, wite of King Clristian 11., who eettainly, on leng a disconse, that the rain fatling lavity-it lastell the gratir pout of the day--king, (ment, and siathers were gtoidel. At the time of her cerrmation, teo, Flizalseth was sidk of a tertiun ngur, bu she was erowned at hame in the ante-chander, where num two hohind. The cerconemy, not willstanding, nplears to lawe leen grand curngh, and the luagine the which it was succereded hasted finur hemes. An regirds the anchu, thene were hirty-there dishestat talke, tire of which, howeser, wre mily made fir flow, het to be tulter.

Curious and rich are the epeciman of the 'cwrilesy

 by a crown ; the ether of eqmily hantitul worknanShip, intcruixed uith phited liair, whe hew pergery ©A Ane Cotherime of Brmadenidurg, his gacti. lint it would in tedinns to ematugue the jowellad mirnors.

 arm, in green chanel, enrichal with diamenhen a tecen. mation of great benuty, nad one which Christinn IV. gave only to his enperinl fivemates. 16 is sery vardy seen suspended ronad then neck even of the numerons worthiss, or rather nututilitites, for which his huge reign was so remmeknhle. Hire, thin, aro preserw, the collar and linen, stanud with howad, worn ly King

Clristinu in the naval battle of Femern, in which he received twenty-three wounds, nad lost his right eye; alko the balges of the Gater of the variens Danimh sovercigns who have been invested with the orderthe earliest, from its workmunship, I imagine to tre that of King Jolm, whe receivel it from Henry VUL; likewise the roles of the orler sent by (Qneen Elizabetl) to Frederick II--roles which he positively derlined to put on, to the great semdal of her aubassadur, Lord Willoughby.
In eompany with numerous likenesses of Clristim 1V. and his first queen is an interesting miniature of Kistine or Clristian Mumk, to whom he wiss morgamatically married in 1615 , and hy whom he hati at numerens oflkpring; nmil in a small nallegorical portriat may see tho whole fanily grouly complete, amongst whom my liear Ulfeld and liis wife Elemura.

It was in the garden of losenborg that Christian first asscmblled hix eonucil, as wedl as lis family, hit mother-in-law, ohd Ellen Narssiin, aud the children of Christima herself; mud made kiown to them the ninetevu puints ou which he thuygh fit to aceuse Clristim. Hamuilal Schestel, his sen-in-law, and Cortitz Ulifill. who afterwards married lis duughter Eleamor, the two lust speikers of the day, were deputed as adweates. the latter fir the detenee, the fimmer for King Cluristins, They grew so excited, that, cre long, buth were cugyed in a pitch Inttle limeore the Court-louse. A tor the preceedings nud the acensation made befire (ver bect able to make hemad or tail of it. Eiseryikenty spake nt the snme time, und the continuel exchanation. of "(Trmulmamma," "Your Majesty," " 1ady Ellom," introutting ench other, renders the whole athin on confuxis n; hut, when the trinl was over, Christinta was finmi " Sot tuilty."
This acquittial dial ins, lowerer, serve her much, fir He was hopriwed if her rank of Comutess of Slessigy Hrlattin, no lumger prayel for in the clurelines, aul lanished tu an chil maner-hruse in Jutlinut, where sle was kept in a sert of imprisoument-iren burs to ler windews-with urders for the future to style herestif Mre, thuistim, of Poller.
Gof of the argmonts l,romght up against King Cluistinn at the trial ly Cirfitz Ulfedd was his oft noctinn with Viluke Kruse, mee tire-wonan to 'hristina. From this priond Clristian lived antirels with Vibeke whe, thongfl far from leautiful, wh his sinecren uffection ly her gentle plualities. No sumpert. however, was the king deved, than the Munkites dros. liw wut of the custe, and demanded that she shaud he. charged witl "calumy" "quines hlur ir mother ; hut wo thetr bue mere of lier uniti, in the fedlowing fith of Miys 11, kinge comfesm: - - 'Jlis day was the Lady Vilukis a lin intered in the eluret ontside the merth gate of the eity." No gruad fimeral fier lier ; thengh, in Dr.

 wilnum, tonss of "lyldes ? hame, large pike, juts of thine wine, wikd grese, well to in 'stalled ax,", ull whid freents were gratecfilly received, but she died too late? mul got no timemal serment.
Anung the efliects of Frederic 11I.'s time-whos: enmelleil cipher hrooches, with peadaut pearls, aro

Femern, in which he ad lost his right eye the various Danish ted with the orderhip, I imagine to be it from Henry VII at by Queen Elizabeth he positively deelined al ot her umbassudur, ikenesses of Christimp teresting miniature of whom he wats morgaby whom he hat : pall allesorical portrait - Van der Veme, yon I) complete, amongyt Elemora.
"nhorg that Christian vell is his family, his in, aud the children ot rwn to them the ninefit to aeruse Christin: cw, and Cortitz Ulfild. chter Elemor, the two deputed as ndercente: wer fir Kinge Christine, are long, lunth wern the Court-honse. As censation made befure Hren, no listarian has tail of it. Everylowly continued exclamatimi jiestr:" "Iarly Eillan. ars the whole athin was over, Christinal wns
"re, nerve her much, fing if Comentess of Shesvig in the churclies, ant - in Juthind, wheres ster wont-iren hars tolat tuture to style herelf hat up norainst king Ulffite was his mit wice tire-womath mistian lived cutirel) rom leantiful, wom his yualities. No sermon an the Minkitew Irm, dred that she shemble to their mether ; hat w. forlowing Gth of May 1hr: Lamrits Jamherin, was the Iarly Vilaksou idwe the morth gate in - her ; thengh, in lr: 'ul proot' that 10 cma uer with hetter thinge red ders, earp :ant? pike, pots of libine alled us,'" ull whid but she dicel tow late',
III.'s tim-whow jendaut pearls, art well worthy of notice-aro many miniatures of high interest, by an artist mamed Pricur, a puinter of great merit. That of the sovereign himself, 1663 , is of great beauty, ns well as one of Charles II. of England and the Duchess of Cleveland. Further on, momewhat in the buck ground-ns she deserves to be-in a corncr, sceaks, Mrs. Sophia Moth, mistress of Christian V., the only portrait of her, 1 believe, extant-a fair-haired, iusipid beauty, and one whose famo is not freo from repronch, for her share in the fill of Crilfenfeld. She received, so dectare the scandal-mongers of the chay, sumdry sacks of gold as lribes to use her influence with her sovercign in compassing the overthrow of a minister to whom Denmark owed much. Dimghter of the royal physician, she was crented Countess of Simso, anil was mother of two Gyldenlowes, of whom all historians speak well. Molesworth says "The young gentlemen are handsone and hopeful, and looked upon as mecessary omaments to the crown." On thesechildren Christim $\dot{\text { Vin }}$. conferred ertain privileges, giving to them and their descembants the title of Excellency, as well as precedence over the rest of the nolility, with in extra theuron on their coronets, and permission to wear the semplet liveries, which put the nobles in a passion if it did nothing else.
In an adjoining room is the portrait of Christian V., ombrodered in silk ly Eleanor Ulfold during her rigoroms captivity at Copeubagen in the Blatarn, or Blue Tower ; aromal the portrait is worked the following inscription in Damish verse:-" Rehold here a king of angelic minl, who governs his peophe and his country in virtue and piety; behold a great monarch, whose head is worthy to wear for a thousind years all the crowns of the universe." Awfil flatiery! but, like the starling, she "conld met wet out."
A miniature of Quen Amw of England and her bushand Prince George deserves notice. The portrinit of Aune, a gen of beanty, fitt liair und pretty, with pouting lips and lazy eve, in all the fresluness of early youth, gives promiso of an incoleat dinpusition easily led. She conth bo peevish, too, at times. Prince George, almirably wigged, a thorongh gentleman; I believe few people have an iden how very lundsomo l'vince George was in his youth -handsomo as an animal, with no expression or intellect depieted in his countename.
Lastly, the enamellind portmit of Griffenfeld, the celebrated minister, by whoseadviee Christian Viereaten the titled nobility, to console the old families for the loss of their feudal rights-a rery wiso coup detat on his purt, for fearflly were the parlier soverigus trammelled hy the arrogane of their molles; hat, like all reformes, Gritlionfld becme mpepular, and his ruin was suou compassel.
Dis rise, fis always oecmred in those ages of neeromancy, was foretold by an old woman when he wat " child in his nurso's arms:-"You hold a ghlders aple in your hamb, mes son; take goon eare not to let it till." After the death of his fiather he was taken into the house of Bishop Brochmam, who presented him to king Frederie IV., by whom ho was given a peusion of 300 dellats to travel. He visited Laghand, and became so estemed ly the learned, that his per:trait was phaced in the Bodleian Libraty at Oxford, whero he pursuen his studies-"not nu meomumen event in those days," says Molesworth. On his return, he becume secretary to Vico-chamedher Wimh. Ono day, lnving a letter to deliver to the king's puge, he desired to speak with the king himself, and, hasing succended, told Cluistian his history, and from that day his fortume was mate. Sy his talents herose to the highest oflices in tho state, and possessed the entire confidenee of the king.
Louis XIV., in speaking of Griffenfeld to the Manish ambassalor, is reported to have said,-"I cannot refrain from testifying the great esterm in which I hoh the grent Chancellar of the Danish kingiom whom I look upon as one of the greatest ministers of Burope." Gritlonfud made the aneient nolles ferl his power, and they formed a phot against him, at the head of which was Sophia Moth. The weak king was gained by the conspirators, and (riffenfeld was arrested on unfoombed charges. One of the acensations hrought agiast him was that of having endeavoured to got created :m English puer. Dis defenee was admimblo. thet his doom was alrendy sealed; ho was condemnend to first lese his hand, he fiecopitated, and broken on the wheel.

The sentence was ordered to he carried inte exeention on the 11 th of Junc. Griffenfele lost ame of his comate, but received the sacrament. Ewerything was done to make him fiel uncomfortable; in the evening his grave-clothes were brought to the prison, mud the following moruing his eoffin, the outside of which way covered with pitch, nad the insile with cottor. When he heud tied njp his hair (or rather taken oti' his wig) lis ewenteleon was hroken to pieces ly the executioner, who exelaimed, "This is not without enuse, but for your hal deeds;" whereupon ho replied without hositation, "What the king has given me he has now taken away." When he hall tinishell phaying and given as sign to the execntioner to eut off his heal, the general adjntant cried out, "Stop! his Majesty; in his meres, spures his life;" to which Griffenfehl rephien, "The merey is more eruel than tho punishment: I have not escaped doath, except for a moro cruel tito ;" und he begred later, through the medium of Comit Schaek, to enlist as a common soldier. He died at Tronyem, where he hat heen removed from the eastle of Munkluln on acechut of his serious illness, atter a rignrous imprisomment of twenty-one years. Huc and Cry roprosentations, hy Husmam, of the execution of the "once Conat Griflenfeld, now l'eter Schumateher," wero not wanting, und I have seen several preserved :umong the Atialher eollection of engravings in tho Royal Library. The ex-minister is certainly not representel to nd-vantage-kneeling withont his wig lefure the block, in presence of hix excentioner, Jatheran priest, and cotlin: a look of phamere in depheted on the the of the lystanders. Ahwin the viguette stmals a medallion furtrait of the eriminal, with the duygrel, -
" With thim has rovtane phayed as with a ball,

'The king miswed his talented minister, and one day sail at at eahinet enomeil, "Griffenfeld alome knew better what served to the wanta of the state than my whole calinet."
The ohjeets of the time of Frederick 1V., though benutiful, are chicetly of loeal interest: complinents from sowereign to cloctor, fiom emperor to monarch; pishols from Louis XIV., swords from Charles XII of Swelen; added to which is tho celehrated collection of Murano ghas presented to Prederic liy the repmbie of Veniec, mul lronght by him from laty. There ne also tine sprecimens of the engraved German ghass, and the gollen momed mby beakers are of expuisite leanty. In a small picture commemorative of the coronation of this monateh is represented a megro boy holding be a chain a huge mastill, the king's favourte duig. It is related that the page had erders to hold the minal during the edremony; hut, dazaled by the phendour of the seene, he stared aromed forgettul of his charge: suddenly, at the moment when the primite was alout to phace the erown upon tha brow of the king, the dog, fincying some mischicl' was intented to his master, sprang fiom his keeper, und to the consternation of those present yushed to the throne, and, placing his fore paws on the knees of the sovereign, growled defimes to all the court, dixplaying his sharp white teeth reudy to devour the hishop at the first movement mato to continue the ceremony; it required the authority of the king himself to pacify the mastiff, and to induce the officials to proceed with the earomation.

And now with Freteric V. commenees an erat of peculiar interest to England and the English visitor: The portrait of this monareh we have alrealy commented upon in the halls of the academy of Suro; but here side by side he langs with his tirst quecn, Lauisa, ditughter of George II. of England. Of a noble presence, nez en l'air, her head thrown back, hee portmait is the we plus ultra of regial dignity; conscious of her hirth, as a daughter of Enghand should be, conscions of her bellity as a woman, and perlaps of the admisation

ROUND TOWER, COPENHAGEN.
she could never fitil to command, slie stands, bemutiful, henefient in expression, wid of all liassian hauteur and (ieman moryue. I returned twice to gaze upon this purtmait, and felt proud to see a princess of one royal stock stand out an a constrllatiom among the chunser' specimene of (hrman royalty. "She was as good as she was hemutiful," observed the custodian: "even now, and she died in 1757, the peasants will still relate to you mechotes of ber gowduess. She gave ten thousimed crowns anmally out of her pin-money in pensions alone. And to think ly whit a bad woman she was rephaced! It was a sad liny for Demmark when she died." There are many souvenirs uf Queen Loulisa, besitles two smafllowes with her miniature painted on a purple gromad. She devoted much of her leisure hours to the oceupation of turning and carving in ivory, of which are here preserved many specimens.

We now turn to the successor of our English prinecss, Juliam Maria of Brunswick, married to Frederick V'. the year after the denth of his former queen. In comitenance somewhat lundsome (and I have seen other portraits far more flattering than that of lusenborg), in expression vilhamous, of a bad beanty, fine bust, and well-romuled arm, $n$ want of shade about lier fiece, she aplears a woman cajuble of tascinating any man around whom she spreads her toils-for heut she had none-and driving lint to perdition in this world and the next ; dangerons she looks, and dangerons she proved herself' to be. Juliana held no place in her hushand's affections.
at the first movement ly ; it required the acify the mastiff, and I with the coronation. commences an era of 1 the English visitor. c have illeady comteademy of Soro ; but is first queen, Lomist, id. Of a noble pre. wn back, lier portmit nity ; consciuns of her hould be, conscions of pes of the admiation ory, of which are her: ' our English princess, rried to Frederick V: firmer quen, In e (and I have seen ; than that of Roseno a lad beanty, fine want of slate about apulle of faseinating Is her toils-for haurt to perdition in this, he looks, and danger. tulima held no pline

The story of the intrigues by which she compassed the ruin of our English princess Queen Carmline Matilla, and organised the plot which terminated in the death of Strucusee, ne too well known to require repetition. But I will guote the accomnt given by Wraxall in his memoirs, 1775 , in which gear ho visited Copenhagen:-
"One night, at a grand ball at the palace, the queen, after daneing us usual one country-dance with the king, gave her hand to struense for the remainder of the evening: at two oelock in the morning she retired, followed by him ant Count Brantt. The queen downger, mid her son Prinee Frederie, hastened to the king's private chamber, where he was alremly in Led: they knelt down beside him and implored him to save himself and Denmark from ianenting destruction, by ordering the arrest of those they termed the nuthors of it. The half-imbecile king at tirst was most unwilling. Comut Fantzan came to the dome of her Majesty and knocked; in woman of the bed-ednamber was orderel torake tho gueen and inturm her she was arrested. Carbline, seizing the infant l'rincess Louse in her arms, endeavoured to gain the king's apartment, but withont suecess; whe wis then hurved into a carriage lalf undesseld and continel like a state prisnuer in the castle of K miburg, from which she was released hy the argument of a strong fleet suat from England."

From this period all geoll feeling between the courts of England and Denmark ended, the bombardment of Copulngen in later days tending little to restore the cordiality hetwen the two countrics, who for se maty centuries had lien bound together ly the strungest ties of fimmily alliance.

I timb, dite July, 1itl, a memorial from Peter Als to Stracase, coneeming a portrait to be panterl of Quena Caroline Matida, with the lirince Loyal on her kuces, for the Duke of Gloucester. Als hegs to lamw in what the first designs displeased, whe suggests to paint her either as a godeless or Amazon, or che in the style of Vamlyke, or in the gala conturue of the day. The lant was adopted, and the pieture, a small fulllength, is in the Roval Collectionat Copenhagen. The Duke of Gioncester, on his visit, gave the tuen mi]alatable advice, and the portrit was never sent. Als also mentions having painted a picture of the queen the sane year, which she gave as a present to Cutat Rantza, who subsequently artested her.

At the contlagration of the palace of Christianshors in 179 J , eight different portraits of Caroline Matilda, by Angelien Kauffinam and other urtiste, were consmand. At the perioul of her disprace they wero removed from the state apartments of the palace to a lumber chamber in the upper story, aud there perished in the flames.

But we must visit the Ridedesaul, with its riehly elecorated eciling and its ancient tapestry, the work of the brothers Vin der Eiken. This tulpestry; whieh was made at Kicge, five miles Danish distant from Copenhagen, abont the year 1.690 , represents the victories of Cluristian V.: it is of adminable execution. ${ }^{1}$

[^17]In front of the throne stand the coronation chairs of the king nad queen, placed under a ditis; that of thes king is formed of the ivory of the narwal. It wats constructed hy order of Christian IV., und was first used at the coronation of Prince Christian (called V.), clected to tho throno during the lifetime of his fither, who survived him.

Within this castlo of Rosenhorg is contained the: regilia of the country, anong which appear lurilliant ant dazzling the $j$ swals of Queen Mulalenar ; she hequeatheal then to the country with whose money they had been purchased.

The crown of Christian IV., by Thomas Fiuren of ${ }^{\circ}$ Odense, of gold enamel and jewels, is perhaps the finest specimen of the goldsmith's art in the seventeenth century now extant. It is no longer usel, being that of an elected sovercign, open. The crown of Christian V.. first heretitary monarch, very inferior as a work of urt, is elosed. His queen, not being of the Latheran persmasim, coull not by liw bo erowned (guen of Denmark: the queen's crown is of Madalena's time: The seeptre is of expuisito workmanship.

Arranged aromed, stand, or rather crawl, the three eolossal silver lions of Denmark. These royal grairupeds, like our own berfeaters, form part wid lareel of all regal ceremonies, juyous or lugulirions. They emigrato to the eatheelral church of Roskilde and uecompany the decased sovereign to his latst resting$1^{\text {hace, and again appear at Fredriksborg at tho }}$ coromation of his successo:.

IL.

 hhare of a beammenase boo.
A emant sum mat a forsty moming in Janary inducet us to risit the Palace of Freteriksborg, two iniless distant from Cupuharen. Jamary is not the month usually selectod fin roming throngh mindabited houses: Int I was anxions to see a portrait of Sophia Madalena: Queen of Sweden, of which Her Majesty the Queen Hewage hat spoken to me. How bright the eonntry lowk. on a tine firnty morning! how bracing the air! It is quito refreshing to quit the city. We passed ly
This Francis hlein was barn at Rostock, but bred in the Currt of tho líhe of Deumark at Copenlagen. To improve his rkill he travelled into Italy, and lived at Venier, und becmue dirst known to Sir Ifenry Woot tun, who was the English Lieger there. Inded there is a stiff eontrst between the Duteh and Italians which thould expeed in thit mystery; and therefore Elein inAcavourel to mite their perfections. After his return to Danmark he was invited thenee into Kinghod by Prince Chartor, rirtnoso, julicinus in all liberil mphanical arts which provected in che proportion. And thouph likein clanced to come over in his ubsence (beiug then in Spritn), yet Kiog James gave orduy for his ento taimuent, allowing him liberal neconmolations; and fent him hack to the King of Dennark with a letter whieh, tion the form thereol', I conceive not unworthy to be ingerted, transeribing it with my own land as followeth, out of a copy comparel with the original." We spare the reader his Majesty's Latin epistle. "I perecive that princes when writing to princes subserike their names, and generally sujerseribe them to subjests. But the King of Jommark detained him all that summer (ariae willingly part with a jewel) to perfect a piece which he had begrun for him hefore. This ended, then over he comes, and settled with his fauily in London, whero he received a gratuity of the humdred ponads per annum, well paid hiul until the beginning of' our civil wars. And now furvet opus of tapestry at Morechirk, his terigning being the soul, as the working is the bsly of that mystery."-F'uller's Worthies p. 358.
coronation chairs of a dais; that of the e narwal. It wis IV., und was filst hristiun (called V.), fetime of his father, or is contaned the ich appear brillimit Madalena; she he4 whose money they

y Thomas Fiuren of is prepajes the finest in the seventeenth er used, being that of own of Christial V., ferior ats a work of ug of the Jutheran erownel Gueen of of Madalenil's tinte: auship. her cratwl, the three These royal graiorm part and pareel lugulrions. They h of Rocskillde and to his leat restimg. reteriksborg nt the Ma Certcra-Fishone -THe hamarr.Mhlis-ruing in Janary ins. deriksborg, two miles ry is not the mouth It uninhabited hooses; of Sophia Matalena, r Majesty the Queen w bright the country how bracing the air! sity. We passed by but bred in the Cuart To improve his will enies, and becane first de English Lieger there. the Duteh and I talians anl therefore Klein en. ifter lis return to Denad by Prince Charice, a cil arts which proeecedal haneed to come over in King Junes grave orlur al necommolntions ; and witha a letter whiel, fisp liy to be inserted, triuseth, out of a copy conn. he reader his Majesty's when writing to prinees rscribe them to subjects. afl that summer (nouc iece which he land berqun r he comes, and settled ecivil a gratuity of vie n) until the begiming of 'tapestry at Morcelarti, ing is the boly of that the equaro reservoirs of the water compuy, now firmly frozen over, where myrimls of shall boys in sibot:, with satchels on back, were diverting themselve; with the prastime of sliding ( 1 trist not on their way to schmil). We then rigtaged wh into a cross woul, tumed wit hy a Lateher's shop-slagter-mester in Dimish. He lives next door to the cartiot, who anmmeers to the pulhe how daily he conveys "priredlin" of all sorts to mal from the town. Near the gate of the phate giruhns stands an ahuirably-executed statue of Wrederic $V$ LI, the most popular and noss ledowed monarel that wer sat on tho Dinish thrune. It is sainl to be an excellent likeness, in the frockenat, veni-military, in which he walked and taiked duily in that very hooblity-a residence lue much loved. The patace is well phaced, athe connands a splendid view of ('oprohagen and its covirons. Frederikshwer contains little to repay you for the trouble of wand ring through dismathet woms, beyond a portrait of the late Qued Dowager ly Jumb, ant the full-lusth of the decen of Sweden, by I know Iw it inhabited :ugan by some fiture soverish, or

 :rone to allow it to foll into deray. I wats shertan to see the the staceo ecilings, wems of their kim, falling and are fine specine is of the hambork of an matien entury. The wond aremm the patace are chaminge, even at this setson. The womenters were hater at work, thiming mal carting anse tive tres, near the little Yorwegian hat and bugn" "Theme was lite and freelnees in the acene. Froteribalurg was hailt ing Freletic IV., when Trine hasal. The phasmery and fitzocmerio, fin which the king received jearly supplics of bivis irom Englanl, from his mate, irinee Geoge of bumak, has houg sheo disalymod.
'The environs of Chpenhage are hatatifil ; and the drives to the Deer-purk, where in smmane-time a fair is hed, and the su-called Itomitase of Mataleme, wedt repmy the tronble. Frederiketal un the lake, nad Lyngh, with its jahate of sorgentit, the resileme of Her Majesty the Qucen Dumuer: the forent of Jamentory; Chanlotwhand, wher the firework haza of a summers eve; the bathenfolate of Klanemherg, on the Somm-all form agreable promembers oh an idhe day ; but there is nothing more to say about them. Blue tiesh or bite salt water (as the cilse may bey), beed-trees, deer, a silla residme-when yon hate come int. las a bearing basketa lomed with the bliacflowes; il the primatu jitrinoser, numatel into little masere. The atemer to Blsimere will lewe you at Dellevoc, firwa whel, yon may wis in a carmere the prettiest sites in the herighbortherd of Coprobagen.

Flytteriag has at hath amival, and to-diy we lease wer apartments in the Analiegade, acomating to law, Copmhargen. For the last the days carthouls of turniture lave been tariod off in suecesin, grahatly reducing us to tho strict mecess, cire of chaiss and heolstem (1 myself retired at onse in dignity to my ohd quarters at the "Royal"). We are, hownerer, at last. mader way, mud embark on buand the fast stemahoat Horatio, which in two homr's time Inuls us at omr destination.

We ne now completely estahlishad at Marienlyst ; somowhat coll, if the truth be told, but where to gos at this semsou of the yeme becomes a puzeler. Too carly to travel, heartily tired of Cupenhatgen, we were ghat "f " chnug", mad foring is sure to come sumo time or wher. I must now give you some deseription of our tances from the town ol Elsinore. The house is of ennsiderable architectural pretensions, built what the Fruch call è ui-cote, or, in plain, intelligible English, latf-way $u_{p}$ the hifl, werhmes and surroumbed by Iusmiant wonls. The carden in front, with its avenes of elipped limes, fimms the publice promenalo of the matives. Beyom, from our wiulow; we gaze on tho dark blue waters of the Soumb, ever gay with its numberlens shiphing, frigates, stemern, and merchatmen. Ohl Krunhorg stamh isolated, with lur picturesque irrgular towers, and the consts of Swoden apmar searemy at a stones throw; the kullen hials in the distance ; the rimal town of Helsingborg, with her messive splure watch tower, looks joon and mean, ynite ent out ly the frowning turet:s of her Dathish sistur, Alarimpsat haste of a certain historic interest, partienarly thas English, for here was tommed, cmly in the filtenth centory, a ('umelite eloister hy our Eug. Lish phenss Gueen Dhiliph, of whon the Dunes think so much, and if whon we, her comtrymen, know so little. Then came the lithemation; monks and nums Were swept away, that the envent and its posarsions fill to the ('rewn of Jetmank. The site was charmives, and later Frederic IV. here constructed :an I talian vill:, where he resided in the summer seasm. Frow him it laterel into the $l^{\text {nosesesion of the Conets Dolthe, }}$ of Quecn Iulam Mima, from whose secomi nume it drives its preat andhation.

Yes, thm these very windows Juliana, in her jog and littemnes, may have quand on the phism of her vistim Qnem Cumbline Matildie and trimuhat at the sucess of ! !uy intrigne.
Well, dulimm dited; Marimyst still eontinued royal property: hat was deserted. Ajurtanemts we granted therein to manns thenagers, directors of the Sound hans, we, matil the year 1 s.50, when the prenent king de terminel to convert it into a sort of Chelseat Ilosprital for sollius mutilated huring the was. This ifla was, however, never carrint out; the inwalids preferred reviding in thene own hanees, and the property, with its :mponing wods, was then $l^{\text {minelased by the town of }}$ Elinume, who have retat it on a lease of uinety-nine Yems t., its present proprector, Mh, Nithamen. The estahlishment noms on the lat of June, so we are sure of : m math's quict at any wate. The buthing here is excellent, nul 1 have no doubt, when more known (fior it is nuw in it: intaney), Matimlyst will become one of the must favenite watering blaces of Northern Europe.
We inhalit the promier. The bel élege-not according to rath, but on weount of the vinw-is on our second ; a suite of aprartments richly painted and deeorated in the style of the last century ; medallions of Trederic and dulimat sumome the mirrors-he in all the $1^{\text {nik }}$ d'une berate insolente, she so lumdsome you eomilh :hmost pardon her wiekeducss in her later days. Fero :ae the dining, realing-roms, mad restamant. Views of Veniec, not quite Cimaleti, tulorn the walls - pleasmat to look upon as ohd acequintances, not as works of :att. The view firom the windows is glorious,

IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic
Sciences

Corporation

and (the palace being lmilt ì mi-côte) you walk ont from thenco across a wooden bridge staight into the wools above. On our stalibease stand twoliure white glazed Fayence busts of Christian V I. and his som Fiederic V., in all the glory of elephants and periwigs - gombnatured faces, with the frout firyant so remarkable among all monarehs from the commenconent en the eighturnth century. Jook at the liombons, the Austrians, George III., and now the honse of "honboug-all alike. 'The forment receles, giving in wir mout menier to their majesties. Juw is this to be weomated for? Sthistian iV. nod his son lave intellectual fices; Iouis XILI. and XIV. are not wanting. The Stharts have foreheats straight and broatl enorgh to eomtain the well-known horeditary obstinaey of therir race. Unless the murses of that century indalged in some pendiar Inmbiging or manipulation of the intant hend, like that which exists among eertain tribes of ohe land Indians, this formation can only be attributed tw the weight of the pigtails attacheri to the wigs by which their youthfal heads were disfigureal. Hhe this the reason ar mot, when pigtats whit ont findelames came in again, as we may see hy thoir desemilats the monarelis of the present century.

We monnt au secont. A dom leads yom direct into the words, now carputed with the flowers of the suml fughs melk (yellow bind's milk), and tomates by which the palace is inminatell chaming retreats in summer season, where yon may mion thase two lusuria. son seldon fomml combined-shalu, anl the fresh, bracines sea air. Inu tom the the dight, and hefore passing though the opren gate which hals inte the forest fimb yourself in front of a mised momul, onde surmonnted by a eross (pattly fiallon), the su-called "Itanlet: "'mals:" mon more his gliwe of sepulture than that uf Flypiter. Indual, its urigin datos fiom within the liast thirty yours. Ihams Ambersen assured me that, when he was a seholate at Jiminom, it existal not. In the grood old times, when the formel daties still wore, and myrials of ships of all hations stopped at lilsinore to pay their dues and be phumbered by the inhalnitants. each fresh lenglish saibor, on his first armal, domanded to be conducted to the tomb of $1 \mathrm{H}_{\text {amber }}$ Now, un the nutside of the town, he the strand Vei, in the garden of a rexident merchani, stoml and still statmes a hoi ur batrow, one of the twenty thonsibul which are seat terend so phontifully over the Dianish dominions. 'Jhis bane row, to the great imborance ol' its possenser, was selther upon ats a fit restimghace for shakeperes hero. Winried and tormented by the numeroms visitors, who allowed him to prace, hat, at his orn oxpense, urecterl this monmment in the pullic sumben of the Marienlyst, caused it to be mumounted by a erows and "hall-erased of "otober, ald styla, the yeme abmas. Anminably, too, it suceemled. I'he lhitish pulblic were content, mul the worthy merelant allowerl to sumk" his pipe in peaer moler the gratefill shate of his charmille.

It is, howevor, most simeriarly disagreeable to hase now, at the elevonth home, mo's ferlings wombled, Inment, insteral of heing a "beantifil Janixh purnee," in "hank volvet and hagles," aml dyint nt filsinome, was nothing hat a Julhud pinate, noin of a mbinshing "smar konge" "f the Isle of Morm, in thas Limintionde. It is all of a jiece with Hamibal uot molting the Alps with vinegar-min historieal faet pould-pouled by those lenroed in chomistry of the present contury. But I hope to tell you more of I Iamlet liereafter, when wo arnin visit Jutland.
'Tlee monks of the eonvent of Miarienlyst dis. tinguished themselves greatly at the period of the Reformation, equecially one L'anl Eliasen, commonly called "Iurn-cont." INe was noboly then, but hater was midu Protestant Professor of Theolory in Copenlamgen. Another monk, Framz. Wormorison, became the first Protextant preveher in Seania-Skime th: Danes write it-much to the eredit of Mindenlyst, fore she was but a bon eonvont.

Afterwards, within tho iomain of the monastery hamd by was fimmed it hospital for foreign seamen, and in the days of Christian IV. ume garden was known by the appellation of "Kromborg's Jamblate," and here the liner posisessed a "lyst" honse, where he loved to pass his heimme hours and drink his wine in compmy with Miss. Kiaren Andorslinter, whose son, I Ians Ulrik, one of the dyblonloves-a distinguished man-lneame later governor ot the exathe. As for poor Karen, she grew hear-yed, hath to wear spectacles; so the king married her ofl to a parson. You will see her portatit at lunsenborg-not the hally with parts in her hatir: sho is another, Kirsten Majsdatter, who died sulihonly while sittint at a lookins-glitss, briding those very ornaments moneng her golden treases. An nwfin warnind to had Prindfotk and others.

Christim I V., in his jommal of Nay 5th, I $0: 99$, motos Jown: "I Uliristian I $\vec{J}^{\prime}$. wont fiom Frederikisorg to Kronborg. A little lose opmed the don hy the chimney of the kitchen, wit in the gavden-homse (Kromboris Landehave); aml when I sent to see who was them, there was nobaly." Not very abarming, but he was "Ways soreing visions. Dere, too, he mate his "cure," :anl took his puwdur for "spileptic dits." Not that lus suldered firn then more than you or 1 . He got drank, tumblay down like his mejghbens, and on his recovery dechard it was "rpilepsy." No one contrulicted His Majesty : it was mot rtiopucte: so ho lolieverl it :amd
 "seruncherl mallefintors' skulls," mingled with some bygone nustrma : the grater the villuin, be he langed or decapitatem, the more alle ecions the remady.

Capital funishmment still exists in Demmark: none af your new-dimeded philanthropic: guillotines, bat wo e:ppitation, as in ilays of yorr, by sword and block ; and now, even in the present cent ry, when an execution takesplace eithre in the Islami of Amak or Moen, the egileptie: stome aromind the sathold in crowis, edp in latuld, remly to ghati tho red blood as it flows from the still 'Iuivering hody of the malefacter:

Along the conat extenols for miles a heochen forest with walks ent ont fire the ollentation of the visiturs: no moderwood-i shatly canny overheal, mader whith the: exhilurating seit-aie circulates. The beed ure buw hallosax, lat the gromme is mateted with grem musses, through which pierees the deliente flowers of the soowy woul-suntel with its trefoil-leaf, und the wood memuns, its petals varying from rose to white: in tho masily parts lelow wo find the golden heste-bov (horsés-hoof), lambat blom, fruers sark (ome limbis smock), and the fladstierno; tho pile green lenves of tho lily of the valley und the eonval huve nlemdy pros trumed thensolvers, fut shiver and tremble in the blast as though they lume neted unwisoly; tho cowslipis (knedriver, cow-driwer, as they hero eal' them) and the oxljps-shame on them for theid elleminacy l-tack their blossoms sturdily under their stalks within their

et hereafter，when wo

of Marienlyst dis－ at the perioll of the （11）Eliasen，eommonly wholly then，but later ot Theology in Cupen－ Wirmorlsing，becamo 1．Seania－Skirue th？ ulit of Marionlyst，fur aill of the monistery （in boreign seamen，anil gitden wis known by Landelave，＂mud here use，where he loverl to $k$ his wine in company whose son，II tus Uhik， rguished man－leceane S for pour K：arm，she pretacles ；so the king on will see her portratit the prithly in her haire： ter，who died smidenty ；，briading those very $\therefore$ ses．Anuwlis warn－ of May 5th， 1609 ，nomes from Frederiksborir tor 1 the done by the ehim－ gaven－lunse（Krmburs tor see wha wis there， ：alaming，but la was o，he mule his＂curc，＂ piti－Jits．＂Nist that he ou or I．We got drunk， us，and on his recourny o one contrulicterl llis ：sul ho helieved it and －puwdirys comprosed ot mingled with some： to villan，be bee hatgel lous the remedy． sts in Demmark：nome pie guillotines，hut do－ y swurd tud bloek；mul ry，whin an execution of Amak of Moen，tho wolle in crowids，cup in and ats it flows from the fictor： ：miles a lienchen forest atation of the visitors： ，overhead，under which lates．The beeds are is enrpeted with greon a deliente flowers of the ehoil－leaf，und the wool in rose to white；in tho the：golien heste－hov wers sterk（ont laty＇s das prale green lenvis of onval havo alremly pro－ und tremble in the lilast sely ；tho eowalijs（kie－ ne eal＇them）and the heit eflemninncy 1－tuck heir stalks within thuir coronal of lenves，determined to bide their time and not be canght committing any imprudence． ＂Visit the Hammer－mills，＂sidid llans Andersen； ＂it is a charming walk．＂Aud who is n better juige： of what is picturesque than Hans Andersen？one of nature＇s poets；none of your thnght mhairers of the beantiful，blessed or rather cursed with an artistic rye， a bore to everybody．We were not testined to arrive there on our first attempt：we passed the ghas mimm－ fatenty on the sea－shore－very black it looked，with its smoke curling languitly in the char atmosphers－ant then turned off to gain the road．The beeeli－masts had sown themselves，and were springing up in thousmuls； und here we met two manky pigs，tethered in the forest，left to cater for themselves，us thongti in Octeber： poor wretehes！they ran up，evilently very hungry，as soon ats they saw us，grunting their complaints most energetieally．In this woon you will find a little elog＇s cemetery－small mommls of eirth and heipes of stone， sach as a Sumalimavian dogr slomad lio muder．Dinish laties are ：hpt to be sentimuntal，lut in a mimajre fishion，as the following ane alote will show．One day， olserving a small tombstone in the lbotanical fiarden －－erected to the memery oft a lapheng ly a lanly of rank，said the gardener－I knelt down and deciplered the inscription，which ran thas ：－

> " Here lies Giardato, it fath hful friend,
> lborn at Rome in the Th vear of Pills VI.'s pantiliente, Died at Comentaren in that remarkithe winter when sugar was sold at tis ak. the proud.

We wero attracted by a pine wosl to tho left ；it was not the direct roal，hat wonnakind was sure we conld iset ronnll sumehow ；and sis wo did，thel lost our way，und atter some two liours＇walling foumb onselves Hear whare we had set ont，so give np the llanmer－ milk：hat it wats very lumatitul－the turest diversified by mysterions dark blar lates，full of dish they saty； soneliow I should not like to bathe in their waters； they hate a tanm－ish lows，as though neenpied ly gigantic efts，und all solts of abominations，such as ant sees in Italims tyotheratios＇shops mal necromannerss bouses in the thentres．We come seross bow dere，mo game．lefere the year＇5t there forestsabotholad with stags，ehevreul，hanes，se ；now there are ohly foxes． latlur，und invites the fimersu ministers ：memited at his Court to assixt at the excention．Last nutram the Englixh Minister carricd wway the phlan leclore all Eriulent，＂said the Jinten，＂il cat tillimert hebitut＂ clez lui．＂

Our．walk to the 1 lammer－mills and the village of Thellehuck dis，howeror，come of two days hater，med well it repaid our itouble Sublenly amones the ride woulluml sermery you come wh little villase，with turning water－mills，emrlens，and homestends ot almost Dutch nentness．I＇lis is the（ierman rolnhy－the com－ greqution of St．Mary＇s－istablishenl hy tho celehmated Connt Schimmelmmin，in the last century，for the mannfarture of urms．
＇I＇lie villasto of I Hellobrek extomen alomig the ser－shore． A mimenlons drunght of thales land heen takin two nights before in the nets；evory garden，every pieco of wasto gromal，was hang with col ant tomalers， split up，trying in the sma．In eneln cot tago window blessom splendid treo carmations；the me de la $1 / 0$－ lemele and tho Ardolnée，one muss of tlowers．We re－
tmrned by the sea－shore，and found the flufly blue anmone－the＂spring cow－bell，＂as it is here called－ growing in the sea sathed．

As we strolled through the woods，the voice of thas enckoo rangs shilly throngh tho air，entirely，too，levoid of Dunish accent．Many naturalists dechure that the motes of the simging－hirds dither according to the elimate， in whielı thry dwell．Perhaps I am have of hearing， for I have never yet fouml it out．

X．

 －lnecuote ur a stom，
We lave this morning lionised the town of Elsiuore． It bonsts of nothing remarkable；its streets aro narrow ；the long，low，many－windowed houses are ot respectable＂yparance；many spacious，botsting an nir of better days．On the whole，it reaninds one of some ald motten borough，once a stronghold of corruption，mov Aleprived of its intiguitoms corporation，fallen trom its： high estate．The hately built Ramdinus is a malding of ennsidemble pretension，motelled on the red hriek Gathic prenliar to these northern cimes－a most ereditable edifies，but（there is always a but）badly placed in the centre of a long strent，half coneented by the mbuinines humses．Its construction was a regular joh；whenide of the neighbouring squaro wats offered to the anthorities for a trilliag sam；the proposition was， however，nesatived by the chiuf magistrate of the phace， －＂It wull be too fiu renuved from his own dwelling；
 แいいin』．＂

Bhinore possessos two elumehes，both of great an－ tinnity，wif ral brick，well proprtioned，but rixtematly farfally degraterl．That utst．Olat unce piqued itwolf on its pire，which was hown duwn，in 1737 ，during a hurricame，which sums to have seat half the charelt－ sterples in Denumak toppling over liku nimplus； either the hariane wats very violent，or the spites hadly built．

Thise interior is rich in carved and gilded altarpiece anl ormamonts of papistic times．Then theme is tho Sweders－an said the enstorle：hut when I heard who it was from，I no longer trubled myself about it．Den－ clurelt it ist．May lies，we rather maco lay，in－ torral leyeke，tho colebnted finomite ot King 1 laristian If． Sume historians mbate that 1）yveke died at Elsinure， otherwise it seoths a stmage place tu have silected lir lore sepulture，when wo consider the way in which eity：Dyveke，fiom all necomats，was much too wimple－ minded in girl to think of bequenthing lier hody to be hurict my whers．

The walks in the neighbourhood of Elsinom are churming，purtirulaty that along the Stmanlvei，by the shore of tho Sumbl－in suecession of eomitry houses and finhing villages，and well－kept gordens bright with jlawers：they lave a well－to do prosperous air，us everything has in Demmark．An hone＇s walk brings you to 16 Innisenette enlled I ahhaborg，leyond which you turn to unter tho forest of Egebaksving，il favourite summer drive of tho Elsinetians．

A ten minutes' walk, avording all dusty roals, across the common or waste lam which runs down to the sea-shore-in England it would have heen the paralise of geese, crickiters, ind donkeys, but hero it is deserted, exeept by the shamphooters, who kept up a cross-fire, practising at their targets from eight ocelock till six of an evening-brings us to the ewstle of Kronborg. (Nec p. 361.) The row lies between two dirty stagnant pronls, dignitied oy the appellation of Jolgor Dansk's Spectacles: if they fitted his fice, he muth have had one eye ronsiderably harger than the other.

We pass the drawbridge and enter the second gite? of the castle. Verses in the Danisi tongue by the Scotchman, Bithop Kinso, and the more illustrions puls of Tymo brahe, aborn the portals and edebate the erection of the buildings. There is one thing sume in the worh-momehs never :llowed their ignd works to be hill in seeret: on overy side you see inseriptions, in letteps of gold, mmoning limw Christian V. erstored this, mil Frederic IV. whitewashed that. But I must give yon some aceount of the histury of the castle.
There is no doubt but, from the earlien perion of history, a casthe of sme kiml, built fin the protection of the Sound, existed on the site merar where Kromburg now stands. In the year lows the preealing the town, mear the strmanei, named after the fomders, of which furmtities are taken in firmo of the batteriou-wis in a state of excellent repule This firtows boing fomed nasuitel th the exigencien of the times, Finut lrempic II. determinel to rebuill it on a si:ale of umprecelented grombine : the whole of the and the builling wat to cont his subjects "not one puny." This was more easy ot oxecution ta Frederic, first irnowed brotestant sovereign of Demarke, than it wonld have proved to hater memards. He hat lands, phate and tretsure-was thash of money, and did not wind apmbling it. The pxisting eathe wat then commenem in the your !ota, and emphod in the conve of nino years. Hishol Kinsu and Tyoln, Braho both sumg its pratives, and the talents of libbent were called int, phy-sme what hater, I imbine-fior the Wentation of the ehapel. The castle is strougly fortified with domberbastim, mont, ind rampurt, after the mimur of preading ages.
 other Wamish building of hes sisterenth eentury; it is Imilt of tine s milatome, the ouly specimen in the kingom.
 from all apperame of formolity by the ghaint mion pasmblikeminareshy whieh its towers are summatel. TI. hofy dack turne tom, rising from its reaber, higher years have suffers so litue fiom modern ablitions and improvement; whe tower has, untintmataly, bern de-I sie the whinal hwl adrowly beron altered: it Was an eyosure, bat in seoprdace with the styon of the remaindor, "apmal and onamented. It, bwover, fill inturnem during the reign of Prederice VE, at hat atrocity; it was repared-aplare athe hideons-a fearfinl momment of the mere. Formerly it served as a telegraph, now as a prowder magaine; mad maless it be hown up, or the pwader beconcs damp, will, I foar, ramain matouched. You enter the interior court throngh a richly omamentol gateway, guaridel by statues and overhong by a beatitul oriol wimbow, enriched with tho arms and ciphers of its fomaders. Opposite to yon stands the chapel (the wirks of Rubens have long since disippearel) ; the fithory of the time of Christian IV. have been hately restored, not too carelully. It is curions to trace, ats you em by the turret to the right of the olock, the grambial tramition from the (bothic to the Remassame. Tho whole of the ormaments are of tho later perionl; bat thare is still oecosiomily a sort of feeling as it the architect was not quite decided in his viows: whether he was or not, Kromborg is one ol tho most pertect specimens of its erab-anspuided, mutonchent, and mi-repairel-to bo met with in Europe. It his hong ceated to be reenpied as a royal residence. One wila is alune retained fir the nse if his $m$ gosty ; the rast is ocempied by the Gamal Commantint, the oflemes, amd the girisom. Abse the entrance of the clocktower, sum ounting the omoments, appurs the hes 1 of at huge mastiff, h hling in his foro paws a heme like shiehi, with the eiphur of 'ree levie 11. , and below the finomite devico of the king, "I. I. W. Is, Tren int evergholy save his roval master. Over the other han :pyars the devico of his yuren-good Quren Syhin (My hopris in (intalone). Within the dangem mithe compr tower, that of the restaration, whoming the win.

 stone above the ontrace, basw no donht of its iden tity, was sitnated the torthe chrmber in thes gome hy: nome of yone pepistieal virgin, whatioed yon to then arms, anl, lamed like it fricmatom, then stuck you brimful of ponknives, but gend wholushe l'rotertant who rofised to emuct their metater, righfally or wromsfully, and bring then to the blow --and very pressa mive implements they were, I douht ant. In the centre of the enurt omea stmol a fimmation, tosving the water high have bern very ornammata. Smar thirty or firty inon hooks, tistomed intu the wall, wimin, vies the tarder of King Frobric, hung, when gume abombed, with deer, hare, and eppreabia, a protty some, only two of Krontherg Cistle, which emmmber a viow of the catios o s m my herthaning:

 them-ynu empliments to the goneral, and a shat to the soldier who bringe it. 'lhis is one of the fiw mont; thoy are math tor exelnsive, and else to tha by thetir prition are entitlel to the proserssion of thes: eards selfina or never axa them, whilu athers to whom the admission womlit bo a bose ate deprived of the mingmoat. But, as l wid blore, the rampute of Kionborg aro chirming : before thom the thathes ever.
les damp, will, I fear, or the interior comrt rotevaly, ginarded by fitul orim wimbow, anherse of its fomadres. hipel (the works of wed) ; tho fitturs of boen lately restored, is ta trace, is you cut he elock, the gradual he Remissamee. 'Thn ho latter perioul; bat to of teeling as if the In his views: wherthev : of the most pirifiect , untonchent, and unEuncupe. It has lomp resileme. Ona silo his majesty; the mest ammbint, the allivers, ntratee of the elocknts, "plunats the heal in fore paws a hate rederic $11 .$, and hiclow "T. I. W. Is, 'l'ren ist tht, whose protrat iny Freluric, :Inl lit - Uver the asher dwor "-rood Quen Sy thans antint alloin" thin the thatesen on the on, aljomints tho winn. jolly fat tum, carom in nis domht of its idenmber in luye golloly: who ativel you tar haip h:m, thon sturls you Whishos ate l'rotaitint
 , of eforinet monny, to say wothiug of hater wir virlellinas silyjecta wer, rightitilly or whong
 not. In the erotre of tesavily the watere high A robetringe, it mos nur chinty or finety iron math, one the larder gume ahomblel, with protty sume, only tor ter che paser of 1 (6as), rik for ever, the wimb atathed a viow of the coxela in a sight whicls
 "6: 4enaral, and a dillue 'This is ong of the fiw ast the D bish gwerainsive, anl alse to th. hilu wallis. 'Ilowe wh, Che jowservioun of thes. 1, whilo others to whom 'al nev deprived of the Dforo, the rimplarts of o them the tishors over.
lastingly ply their trade-hloumders, ated a fish called "grece-bone," a hom-fish, wre their prog. Hat Shakspere semrehed tho world round he never eould have selleted so fitting a lacality fir the ghast-scenc. I eam seo the ghost myself-p:ale moon, clouds litting oir her, trowning castle, and the spaco necessary to follow him; lut the romance of Kromberg is over ; her bastions are relolent with thep-purple violets, and the mante huls of is statice-Krigekarl, or the Warrior, they here e:ll it-which looks ansit it shouk be smathing hetter, hut will, 1 dire say, turn out common thifit after all. When the fishing-hats return at sumset, a little girl rum down to the shore side, and waits; as they pass lex, a small thmmer is thrown to her from each hoat; whe gathers them up in her apron, and then returns to he castle. I womler if this bo a relie of hereditary hatk-mail, exacted in former days from the fishermen who east thair urts muler the shadow of the fortress.
Ohl Miy-lay. The storks arrived this morning, so wi may roally expect summer ; for storks, unlike mortals, are never wrong in their ealculations-odd hiris they are. It must be a eurious sight to witness mat of their gatherings previmes to tepurture at the "pproach of winter. A triend of mino cane across mu assembly of four handred perched on the eaves of a firm-huse in Zealand, amd wateloed their procedings. lietore starting they passed in revien tho whole flock, :and singled out and sepratatol the aged mal waikly trom the rest, and then, with ome necort, pounced uron them, becking thom literally to pieces; this comemony wor, they stirted for Egyp. How they got tho in "putation fin tilial piety I' camot inagine. I hemel a rumbins anedote about them a fow days since: an binglish manhincturer settled somewhre in Zealand, : musal himelf hy changing the ergs laid by a stork. who ammally buite her nest on his house, for those of :an nw. In due comrso of tinne the egge were hatehed, and lu was stateled one morning by a trementons row ming on in the nest of the pareut storks. The male, in a violent state of excitiment, thew romad and round his nest; tho temale chattered away, protecting her hustlings muler her wings: it was quite evident that the stork was not satisfied with the prodnee of his holpmate: there was somothing doulittul about the whole allair; be would not reengnise the otlispring. Atter a viokent dispute the mule plew nway, and shartly returnel, acermpmied ly two other storks-birds of conseplower and dignity. They sat themselves down on the roof, nud listemed to the pros and cons of the mattor, 11 sm . Stork was compelled to riso and exhihit her vhilimen. "Can they be mine?" exclaimed the sturk. "Happen what may I will nevor recognise then," On her side Mrs. Stork protestenl and fluttered, inn" avowed it was all witcheralt - never hat stork pussussed so faithtinl a wife before. Alas! alas! how seldon the gentle sex meets with finstiee in this word When julged hy man or, in this ciane, ly stork kimul. The jublgris looked wombrous wise, cousulted, and then of a sudiden, without pronouncing sentence, regatelless of her shrieks for merey, fell on the injured Mrss. Stork, mad peeked her to denth with their long shary haks. As for the young owls, they would mot detile their bills by toneling them; so they kicked them nut of the nist, and they were killed in the tmmble. The fither stork, hroken-hearted, quitted his nbode, mil never aguin returned to his former haiding-phee. Sis years have elapsell mol the nest still rematios empty - so stited my informant.

NI.

Cmisthan hostoasid and tifs Swrish Offierrs-Hfrechach, the arverinnds-1)eath of (Quben Jelana - Nomweonis Ampitrieathe-l'ine hela-nones-Eshos, its Confent and lake.
The weather is bright. It would ho imprulent to mighanomool, so this morning we started fir Fredenswerk might have heen sparel). (Our road then hy through the Marianalund Fovest ; the libliage gohlen green-mitiom, martistic, if you will-and most mpaintable. Ilow happens it that what is most tial in Nature seldom sneceeds in art or mects with the "purohation of a painter?
But the earriage stops by the wool-side. We are at hostgand So. At the fion of the hill, tringel with the feathery fluwers of the bukblat (horg-lyain), hes is small hine taarn, of that peenliar bhe muprolucealde by frussim, cobult, of ultrunarine, ly hrish eyes, or the retlex on a raven's wing: a blue of its own; I must term it "mose blue," $-a$ tint proluced by tho rellection of the sum over the waters of a lank momass. The lathowers are engaged cutting doep inth the swamp; they carry off the black mud in their carts and spread it in thin layers to dry, to be used as tued for winter eonsumption. These morasses breome dry as tonchwood in summer senson. A few days, sinee, some loys enguged in searching for plovers' "goss, desirous to frighten the parent birds from their nests, set tire to the harren turt' : the conflagratinn extemed wide, and caused great anxicty belore it was ellectually extinguished.

We stand by a circle of stones, the entre of which, of large dimensions, is inscribed with the eipher $11 . \mathrm{R}$. and the date 1659 , denoting the secne of some untorgotten story. The initials are thosi ut Rinstraarl. He never suved Demmark, yet the story of his tair wife (the Dunish Peuelopie) must not be prassed over:

When in the year l659) Kronborg was in possession of the Swedes, Hans Rostgurd, together with Piarson Gerner, student 'likjob, Steenwinkil the: Danish engineer, and the Einglish Colonel Hutchinson-whon had been hribed by the Danes for the sum ot 1000 ducats to desert from the Swedes-formed a phan to rectako the castle. Student 'Tikjob enleavoured to gain Copenhagen in a boat, elarged with letters and dew batehes relating to the proposed nttack. He was, however, bomuled by a Swedish vessel, when, to sive the letters intrusted to his care, he fastened them to a stome arrit cast them into the Somul. As ill luck wonld have it, tho string slipred, the stume sumk, and the piapress thoating on the watere were pieked up, real, nind the plat cliseovered. Hatehinson immediately took refinge on boad an English versel. Stcenwinkel wats takin amb met with the just punishant of his double treachury. Lostgard tork harsis, hat, fimding himself pursmel, when he readhel the spot where this cirele of stones now stands he kille, lis eharger, slipped out of his clothes, cast his plumad hat and his sword into the lake-therely deceising his ennmies, who, imagining her lud bren kilhed, ceased in their pursuit-and ho in disgrise gutined Cipenhagen.

His lair and gonthifil wite inhahited her manor of Rastgmarl, at a short distance from Elsinore, ono of the most hemtiful residences in the mighhominood. A widow (for sheh sho was supposed to lee), young, rich, and pretty, was too great a prizo in the matrimonial market to escape the notice of the Swedish othicers. A company was now quartered at the manorhouse, and the whole corps, from the colonel down to the beardless ensign, comnenced paying their addresses to her. Kirstine Rostgard was a femme d'esprit, and well she played her cards. Reveal her husband's existence she dire not: the soldicrs would have no longer treated her house and gardens with the contsideration thay now showed, each hoping, in course of time, it might become his own possession.

When prossed by the most ardent of her adorers, she legged for time-she was so late a widow, nud, though she had her troubles with Rostgaard, still shic owed it to her own self to wait till the year of monrning was expired; and then the coquetted so cleverly that each individual of the whole hand imagined himself to bo tho favoured one. "How," she asked,

CHATEAU OF ROSENBORG.
repronclifully, to the colonel, "etur you inugine I could look for one moment on that beardless lientemant, with blue eyes and pink cheeks, like in girl in miform, when you, a proper man, are present? But be prodent; think of my good name." To the younger officers sho termed the colonel "vieille perruque;" and so on, till tho year elupsed and the peice was signod; she then male them a profond reverence, thanked them for the consideration thuy had shown to her geods anl chattels, introduced to them her resuscitated husband, Hans llustgaard, und showed them the door most politely. Such is the history of Rostgard. Kirstine died soon after and he mariod in secoml time. Ife is represented in his epitnphinm with his two wives, a rose, mud a skull.

The Esrom huko appears in sight ; we arrive at the village of Fredensborg, hatt tht the inn, order dimer, and then preceed to visit the palace und its firr-faned aelt loping, in course of possession.
ardent of her adorers, so late a widow, and, with Rostgaarl, still she $t$ till the year of mournre coquetted so eleverly olo bamd imagined hinu-
"How," she asked, her resuscitated hasband, od that the door most of Rostganrl. Kirstine ied asecond time. He is in with his two wiver, a a sight ; we arrive at the at the inn, order dinner, paluce nnd its fur-funed gardens, planted at the termination of the village, for the Danes lave no conception of the grandeur of isolntion in their country residences; provided one side looks on a wood, a lake, or a garden, the entrance-court may be " cheek by jowl" with the humblest cottage. A dozen clippel lime trees form their idea of an approsch, with a pavement like the "pitching" of our Saxon forefathers. At Fredensborg tho entrance-court is paved; the stones run up to the very lime avenue, to the pelestal of the statuc of Peace, by Wiedewelt, now all blackened and lichen-grown, which costI am afraill to say how many thonsand thalers to His Msjesty King Frederic IV., founder of the palace. Stone-stone-stone! not an ell of verdant turf to refresh the eye. Then, too, the palaee, of brick and stono eopings, never boasting of any architeetural beauty in its most palmy days, has been most ignominiously and glaringly whitewashed.

" Don't visit the interior," sail the Elsinorians; "not worth seeing." I didn't disputo the poiut, but followed ny own dovices. There are rich old cabinets and mirrors, fincly-carved sofis and consoles; $\pi$ bureau of marqueterie, much usel by our friend Jnliang, an exquisite piece of furniture, falling to decay nmong the rest. The hall where the celebrated treaty was signed (though this has now becomo $n$ disputed point) is grand and imposing. I was sorry to see the roof defective and the water stre:ming in over the pictures painted to celebrate the event. The palace is a most habitable abode; the bedrooms have all separate exits into the gallery which surrounds the great hall-an uncommon luxmry. The pictures are the refuse of the roynl collections; among them I observed one good portrait of the founder Frederic IV., and in eharming full-leugth likeness of the Arveprinds, son of Julianaand father to Christian VIII., a benutiful boy,-Frederie the Hunchback he was popularly termed. At the ago of eleven he fell down the stairense at Amatienborg, injured his spine, and never reeovered from the efleets of the aceident. There is also a portrait of tho brother of Queen Juliana, the eelcbrated Duke of Branswick, who fell at Jena.
Ot all extraordinary puzzlo-brained inventions is a frame arranged like a Venetian blind, with portraits of sovereigns of the honso of Austrin, painted on triangular pieces of wood. First the Emperor Joseph ; pass your hand, turning the wool, MarinTheresa comes out; turn again, and the Emperor Francis makes his appearanec. We were pointed ont the "growth" of King Frederic VI., pencilled on the door-posta, and, courtier-like, wero profoundly astonished how his Majesty had increased in stature from the year '78 to that of ' 83 .

We next visited the Royal Chapel, fitted, in accordance with the date of the building, with closets and pews-no questions of sittings here-the royal household all arrunged sud mashalled necording to raak and precedence, their offices registered on tho doors; women on one side, men on the other; ladies of rank, maids, de., down to the wives of the very stablemen. Then on the aale division, hof-marshals and kammerjunkers, physicians, cooks, "tho livery" of his Majesty, "livery of hor Majesty; the whole concluding with the stable-folk. The royal closet is situnted on the floor at the end of the ehapel, beyond the seat ullotted to the grooms-a disagreeable vieinity; but yenrs since -thanks to snuff-taking-noses were less sensitive than they are in the present generation.

Here, at Fredensborg, in her latter days, Queen Juliana held her court right royally, and, whatever may havo been her faults, was kind and liberal to the poor and to those around her. She was by nature a queen, and loved the pomp snd state from which sovereigns in the present age withdraw thomselves as much as their position allows them. On the 4th of September, 179C, the queen celebrated her sixty-seventh birthdily. Juliana was strong and robust, and, as far as human foresight could foretell, might live for years. Congratulations, offerings, arrived from all qnarters; visitors from the court, from Copenhagen ; all was gratifying; and when tie bsnquet prepared in honour of the event was announced, never had she walked into the diningroom with firmer step or in higher spirits.

The toast of the day, "The Queen's 1 Lealth !" was proposed, and drunk by the guests with enthusiasm; all appeared couleur de rose; but at that very banquet Juliana had signed her own death warrant. Each year, on the anniversury of her natal day, the queen cansed to le served to her a national dish composed of applev, thick and glutinous, iumersed in fresh warm sheep's milk-& dish she mueh affected. Of this she nte somewhat too freeiy. An indigestion ensted, from which she could never bo relieved. The room in which Julisna breathed her last is situated on the first floor of tho left wing, as you appronch the thirl and fourth wiudows from the corps de betianent, looking upon the court.

The palace has a melancholy, deserted nir, and some of the rooms are lent out to poorer members of the nobility. Its gardens are renowned, laid out in the old French style. "How like Versailles," we exclaimel; "with its statues and avenues of fragrant limes." In the so-cilled Marble Gariens are many small statnes, of no partiealar excellence, by Stauley, an English artist, the same who executed the monument of Queen Lonisa in the cathedral of Roeskilde.

Then there is the lion of tho palace, the Norwegian amphithentre, in three tiers, round which aro ranged a series of stone statues in Norwegian coatumes. The appearance of this assembly is so strange $I$ could not help langhing, but to a Norwegian they are most intereasting. It is now ene hundred und twenty years since they were placed there, and the peasant remains dressed as though it were yesterlay-the druminer, the priest, the fisherman, and mountaineer from Tronyem, Bergen, and elsewhere ; the bride-a crownel bride too-all the wedding party. I should like to watch them by the pale moonlight ; they must surely become animated from time to tine, and hold dance and revel together. How Hans Andersen can ever have let such a subject slip through his fingers, to me is a mystery.

The French garden amalgamates itself into the native woods, which run down to the lake's side. Here is situated the skipperhuus, whero you may hire boats, sail or row, fishing-rods and hooks, with bait according to your fancy. Esrom lake is renownsd for its perch.

We dined at the little inn in the open uir untar den Linden; a gool little dinner, served on old chinathreo marce, coffee inoluded.

At soven o'clock we started on our journey home, tnking Esrom and Solyst on the way, throngh the woods by the b:unk of the lake. The folinge is somewhat relieved this evening by an admixturo of larch and birch. Our road ran by a picturesque village, proud of itu healing spring. In olden times there was latter days, Queen y, nul, whatever may d liberal to the poor as hy nature a queen, n which sovereigus in lives as much as their 1 of September, 179C, (y-seventh birthday. und, as far as human live for years. Con$n$ all quarters; vivitors ; all was gratifying ; n honour of the event alked into the dining. er sjirits.
bueen's Health!" was ests with euthusiasm ; at that very banquet h warrant. Bach year, lay, the queen ciused sh composed of apples, on freah warm sherp's Of this she ate some:h ensued, from which The room in which ated on the first floor h the third and fourth hent, looking njon the deserted air, anl some poorer members of the owned, laill out in the rsailles," we exthimed; of fragrant limes." In re many small statues, y Stanley, an Euglish ae monument of Qucen zille.
palace, the Norwegian and which aro ranged a vegian costames. The o strange I could nut gian they are most indred and twenty years d the peasant remains terday-the druminer, countaineer from Trontho bride-a crowned urty. I should like to ight ; they must surely time, and hold dance uns Andersen can ever ough his fingers, to me ates itself into the na, the lake's side. Hero sre you may hire boats, lces, with buit aecording enowned for its perch. the open air untar ders sarved on old clina-d on our journey liome, the way, throngh the 1. The folinge is somean admixture of larch a picturesque village, colden times there was astrunge custom in Zenland, and may be elsewhere, of interring a living horso in every churchyard leforo niny luman being could be buried there. This horse renppears, nnd is known under the name of tho "Hellhorse." It has but three legs; but ill luck to the man who sees it, for it foretells his own denth. Hence it is said of one who has recovered from a dingerous illness, "He has given a bushel of oats to the Hell-horse." Further on stands the rustic fishing-house of His Majesty, with a rudo stone kitchen rango outside, sufficient to fry your perch-or boil them, if you like it better. Solyst is a small house on the lake side, where striangers breakfast or driuk their coffee on the terraces.

And now we approach Esrom. There stands the old black jail, and the antique farmhouse, whitowashed, once her klister. Our horses stop to water ; so we walk down to tho farmyarl gates, and enter the court. Esrom was mother clurch to Soro and also to others in the Island of Rugen. Few and slight are the remains of her former glary. A convent of Cistercians of Clairvaux, feunded by Arelibishop, Eskihd in the twelfth century, stood high in lank amoug the klosters of Zealind. Here Queen IIedvig found her last resting-place, and two of the ill-fated offispring (Magnus and Erik) of Erik Menved and Qnecon Ingebort.

Atter the Reformation the lanis fell to the crown; the materials of the ohurch were used by that ruthless destroyer King Frederic for the construction of Frederiksborg. 1 observed a stone inserted in the wall hearing his cipher, "F.," encireled by the serpentine "S." (Frederic and Sophia), summonted by a crown, the dite 1569, a sort of Protestant seal he placed up, all ceclesiastical hildings whiel came into his posscssion. Another, later, of Christian V., 1607; he repuired the onthonses, and wished the world to be aware of the thet. Some meient iron cramps in the wall, fleur-de-lisés in honour of Mary, were all that remainell of Loman Catholic times; the curved claniss of its abbots uro preserved in the museun at Copenhagen. We saw tho anderground crypt, vanlted and supported on columns, which undermines the whole buileliug and keeps it dry in this watery neighhombhool, and the worthy fathers from rheunatic pains and aguo.

XII.

The Palace of Fredraiksioro-Tur Mrbmad, Tsmband, Fomithlas tif biath of Cuhistian IV.-Heosemold Lconomi of cimistlan if.-Punishment of his Peculating Mint-biatthi-Royat Battces-Tine Riddehsale - Diestuuction of the palace of Fabderinbiona dy Fire.
It was high time to leave Marienlyst: the senson land commenced-an nrmy of waiters mrived from Hamburg. The restamunt was now open; visitors poured in by tho stemors-cilled for hottled-beer and beefsteaks, amd, whint was more, smoked on the staircaso; to add to our annoyanee, it brass band commeneed to play from six to cight every morning.
All this movement and bustle would have beell vell enough hal we uot looked on Marieulyst as our own property for the last six weeks; so, though I was somy to leave the glorions bathings in tho Sound, we packed up nind strurted for Fredensborg, where we passed one night, and the following evoning made for Frederiksberg, a drive of three quaters of an hour.
No palace existed on this spot previous to the reign of King Frederic II., whe exchanged the lands of the suppressed convent of Skov Kloster with the eclebrated Admiral Herluf Trolle for the maner of Hillerod, on which he caused the carlier castle of Frederiksborg to be constructed. Of this building little now remains; its site is occmpiel hy the royal stalles and outhonses; stout stumpy towers, one at each comer of the moat, it has, wreathed round with iron cramps bearing the date 1562 , and the motto in German of the pious Queen Sophia.

Frederic If, was, when we consider the age he lived in, a right-minded, honourable man. In carly life he was much attached to a young and benutiful girl, Dagmar Hardenberg by mane, who, though of noblo birth, behnged to no princely house; make her his queen he could not, and ho was too ligh principled to, take advantago of her youth, so he remained a bachelor until he was thirty-cight years of age, when, yielding to tho entreaties of his advisers, he, much agninst his will, contracted an alliance with the Princess Sophia of Mecklenburg. Trudition relatos how Dagmar was present at the coronation of the queen, which took place in the Frue Kirke of Copenhagen, but, overcome by her feolings, fainted away, was carried ont of the church, and died shortly atter broken-hearted. Two daughters were the produce of Frederic's marriage, nund, in despair at the non-arrival of an heir to the cruwn, he begm to regret he had yielded to the desire of his nolles.
During the celebration of the Whitsuntide festivities, in the spring of the year 1576 , there appeared at court an atged peasant from the Island of Samso, who informed the king that, when ploughing his field ly the sen-shore, ho was accosted by it mermaid, who ordered him to go direet to court, and announce to the king that the green should bear lim a son within the sueceding year, alding, "Tell his Majesty my name is Isbrand, and 1 an grandlanglter of the mermaid who 1 ," garet." When the king and queca heard this good news they were greatly rejoiced, and all the court with them, and the aged peasant returned to his home laden with presents. Aud now time rolled on, the hopes of the nation were verified, and great was the joy thereat.

It was the 12th of April, 1577, that Queen Sophia, when walkiug with her laties of henour somewhere on the Roeskilde road, was suddenly taken ill, and before aid und assistance could be procured, the youthful l'agan, later Christiau, heir to the crown of Deumark, made his appearance, not under the blue eanopy of heaven, but under a hawthorn-tree, whieh of cousse happened to come into fall flower just one month befire its usual period of blooning-a vory graceful compliment on the part of Dame Nature to the newborn princeling.

Well, great was the joy of the whole nation at the birth of the wished-for heir, but the hilarity of the court was somewhat disturbed by a second visit from the agent peasand of Samso, with a message from the mermaid to the king, telling him that, if he did not at once cease from his lublits of inelriety, ho wonld never live to see lis son a grown man; at which Frederic becamo exceeding wroth, and dismissed the messenger this time with no presents, but with thrents aud menaces.
The prophecy of the mermail eaue to pass after all, for Fralerie quitted this world a victim to his inebriety before the youtlifill Cluristinn had attained his eleventh yeur. On the whole ho was one of the best und wisest sovereigns Demark ever possessed-n littlo arbitrury in his ordinances. He is said, during the conrse of his life, to have rend the Bible through twice "from Genewis to Revelations,", whieh, eonsidering what a deal he lind to di, and that reading was somewhat of un effort in those days, was very much to his credit.

The earlier eastlo of Vrederie II. was of small dimensions, and his son Christian IV. determined to erect on the same site a building of uaprecelented splendour. When tho plans were submitted to his comeil, they all exelaimed at the extravagnuee of the design, and prophesiel that tho king would never be able to put into excention so expensive un undertaking; but Christian laughed at their tears, and not only compheted his palace, hint, with a sort of havado, ereeted a summer-honse in the adjoining ferest, which he termed his spare penge, the produce of his ceonomies. There ean be no doubt he did things at a chenper mete than unst sovervigus, for he was a practicul man-saw to everything, even to the most mimute detnils: he employed no master of the works; he every Saturiay night paid his workinen their wages himself, seated on n stone in the - rrd by, which is still pointed out to the visitor. XIV. of Deumark did not disse smallest detnils of household dain to ente eo smallest detnils of household though, on the other hand, whenever he did maything, lee did it well, and the monmments of his reign remain still untonched by the ravages of time, while those of his suceessors huve long since pussed awny.

Who was the real arehiteet of the existing palnce none can say. It may be inferved that Christian employed many different artists to design plans, and adppted then according to his pleasure. In the ehurch of the uljoining villate of Slangermp hangs the epitiplhium of John of Fribourg, which declares him to have been the architect of Frelerikslorg, followed up with a modest remark, that, when the palace no longer exists, his name would be remembered. In all prohalility John of Fribwurg, Steenwinkel, David Balfom: Inigo Jones, all in the yently service of the Danish king, shared alike in its construction.
Wearrived by the long avenue to tho gate-honse, passing to the left the old-fashioned garden which runs down to the edge of the liake, from whieh the palaee rises imposines, with its lofty towers. These towers of Christim IV's days are mique in Eurepe, with their lotty enjs, half pilire, half cupola, spitted with erowns, and surmounted by turning vaics. (See p. 373.)
The gate-house under which we now pass is of stone nud eonuected with the eastle by acorridor supported on six urches, which traverses the mont, in the style of Chenonceanx ; this is the only portion of the building constrneted in stone-work. In a room close to the gate-house was situated the mint of Christian I'V., for he eoined his moncy under his own eyes, and, when struck ofl, the gold was brought in sacks to his own upartment, whence he saw it poured down a shaft, which still exists, into the treasure-room below. Monstrous shump was King Cluristian, as his mint-master, Johu Engelbreeht by name, of peenlating mind, found to his cost ; for, convicted of cheating his royal master, Christiun made no trinl, no fuss, lut ordered out the culprit into the courtyard of the eastle, and there on all improvised bloek of stoue (which the custode will point out) chopped ofl his head with his own royal hands.

Passing along the mont-side, wo arrived at another gatewny into the onter court, built of red miek, stone mullions nnd copings, mueh in the style of Hampions Court Pahace. To the right, in fileo of the castle, stands tho lofty eloek-tower, and then, turning to the lridge, you arrive at the splendid Remaissanco guteway, richly ornamented and decorateal with the shields anel armorial bearings of Christim himself, and those of his Queen Anne of Brandenburg. A screen-work of briek, enriched with twelve niches, rach containing a stone statne, sepnates the cour $d^{\prime} h$ onener from the moat. Very graml is the inaer court; to the right stands the ehapel, above which is phaced the Riddersand ; in front an ornamented marblo logria, filled with statues of the sime material, and riehly ormamented with eopper. This gallery is known to have been erected from tho designs of Steenwinkel. In former duys the mullions of the windows wrire gilded; two or three have been restored some yenrs since-a barbarons taste, imitatal in later lays by the Russian Empress at her palace of Tranko Celo.

Tuming to the right, we now enter the chapel thirugh its lighly-wrought dowrway. The sacred edifiee is long and narrow, too narrow jerhaps for the hanty of its propertions, and is surrounded by a gallery : it is goryeous in Remaissnnee fret-work, gorgeons in its gilding and eolonr, all of which tone down together, one with unother, into a harmony which commands your almiation. The roval chosets below are of expuinite margueterie; the high altar a chef-dicuere of chony, mother-0'-pearl, und goldsmith's work; the puppit a gem of richness.
Alowe, aljoining the organ, richly carved, paintel, and gilded-all in charneter with the biniding-is the royal eloset, lined with ebony, marqueterie, mal vin phaelled pietures by Butch artists of merit, chietfsnered subjects, with the exception of one by Rombhald Timm, $n$ chawing master of Soro, in which Christinn is represented elad in his shrond, praying hefore Our Saviour, who "ppenrs in the clouls ahove. In this eloset stnuds a table of Florentine mosaie, in which you will observe a round hole pierced on one side, the work of Czar Peter. He could not believe it was inlaid; so, practical and disagreeable, he bored a hole with his dagger, just as a child pulls to gineees the works of his watch, or some toy set in motion by simple melnuism. On the windew yon will see ringraved, by the hamas of King Christian VI. himself, the words-" Muke haste umel satve your soul." Hete in this royal chapel is solemnisel the coronation of morh Danish sovereign. The silver lions from lioseniborg come down for the oceasion, ns well as the chairs of silver and the hom of the marwal. Along the gallery up stuirs are suspended the shields of the knights of the "most noble order of the Elephant," one of the most tueient orders of chivalry existing, nad of which all crowned heads, highoesses royal and serene, together with the leading diplomatists of Europe, wo members; and further down those of the Grimel Cross of the Dannelrog. After the denths of the knights the shielcis are removed to the Riedersall below, a fine oblong room of Christinn IV.'s period, vaulted and supported down the centre with columns of marble, and hmg with black and gold stamped leather: this once formeed the banqueting lall, where after the great hunting parties King Christian dinel, together with his brother huntsmen.

Mounting a winding staircase, yeu now enter the

- we arrived at another wilt of red brick, stone I the style of Hamptom in fiee of the easth, and then, tmrning to (a splendid Remissance ond deeorated with the * of Christian himself, 10 of Brandenhurg. A with twelve niches, wath rates the cour d'hement the inner court ; to the © which is placed the mented marble loggia, material, and rielly orsallery is known to lawe is of Stecnwinkel. In o windows wero gilded; red sone years siace-a ter hays by tho Rassian 1ko Celo. enter the chapel tharough Tho sucred edifice is long Hes for the hematy of its. ed by a gillery: it is work, gorgeous in its, tone down tugether, onwhich communds your below are of exquisite chefteremere of chuny, h's work; the pulpit a richly carved, paintel, ith the building-is the $y$, marqueteric, and rim artists of merit, clinet ${ }^{-}$ ption of one ly Recinlolet ro, in which Clmistim is il, praying hefore Our clouds above. In this ntine mosnie, in which to pierced on whe side, te comld not believe it lisagremable; be bared a child pulls to pieces the toy set in motion by rimilew yon will see ri; Christimn VI. himself, save your soul." Here al the coronation of mels c lions from lioseruborg is well as the chairs of wal. Along the gallery elds of the knights of the hamt," one of the most sting, mod of which all -al ind serene, together f Europe, we menbers; he Grund Cross of the If tho knights the shiekis a belew, a fine ollong , vaulted mad supported is of murble, nud hung ather: this onee formed fter the great homting ogether with his brother se, you now enter the Tidelorsanal-like all rooms of this elate, long ama somewhat low; the eeiling a most elnbornte work num one of exquisite beanty-gihled und pinted nfter the manner of the day. Twenty men were nceupical during seven years before this work was brought to a termination. The Swedes are ateused of emrying ofll the silver capituls and bas-relief: of the lofty lilack marble chimney-piece, as well as of destroying the "Minstrels' Gallery," during the war of lGig, lat tlose who ought to be well infonnel declare they wero melted down hy the Danes themselves when in want of money. The tapestries havo linen moved, waiting matil they cun he wairel, but the rom is hong round with tull-length piortraits of varions putentates of Emuper. perhaps tho lenst interesting series of tho collection.

One of the most beantiful npurtments in the palace is that temed the eouncil-chunber, gorgeonsly decorated in the taste of tho last century, and hung with the portinits of tho house of Ollenhong down to Christian V., by Daguerre. It is in this and on adjoining room that his present Mujesty keeps his privite collection of Scmalinavian antiquities-a collection of great interest-the greater part being the produce of his own researehes.

TOWER, CASTLE OF FREDERIKSBORG.
Externally the castle of Frederikshorg has suffered but little, and the good taste of the lato King has eaused to disappear the miditions and alterations of sueceeding monarels. But the interior has femrfully suffered nt the hands of the fair Madulena, who tore up the marble floors and removed the ehimuey-pieces to adorn her phantom pulace of Hirschholn. The fine pendant ecilings have mostly heen eovered over"or destroyed, and beyond the Riddersaal and the chapel-both gems ot art-Fredorikubarg can bonst of hittle which calls to mind the artistic taste of its founder.

Bat you may pass a pleasant time enough, lodged at the small hotel, wandering through the neighombond of the eastle. Wonnt to the extreme ead of the fine old but somewhat neglected garden, and you will gain a glorious view of the palace and the lake : then there is the bath-house of King Christian, and the "rocknug stono" which lies half imbelded in the earth by tho forest side; :and further removed still, a site elearel out in the forest, with massive stenes rangel round, where according to tradition some peace was signed, which I do not call to mind.

It was not a little singular that Maryat, to whom we are so largely indebted tor one of the most lively anl graphic descriptions of Copenlingen and its environs that has been yet publishel, should have been at Elsinore at the vory time whon the splendid palace of Frederiksborg was destroyed by fire, Deeember 17 th, 1859. On that day, too, he penned the last puge almost in his journal.

I little thought to resume my pen to record so sad an event-a national misfortune to Denmark. I way sitting in my room at the Oresuml, in Elsinore, Insily and hitppily immersed in my books, when the chanbermaid announced, "Slot brander in Frederiksbory!" (The cartle's on fire!) On crossing over to the police oflice the telegraphic despatch left mo doubt that the story was too true. Engines aml the members of the fire-lstigade were hurrying off to lend their aid. In threenpuinters of in hour's time I was myself en routh, fist as Datiid post-horses could carry me.

The day was cold, forgy ; tho snow lay thick upon the gromid. As we deseended the hill, ftom behind the wools to the left, which obscure the palite from view, rose volumes of black cloudy smoke, curting and dispersing itself in the misty atmosphere. Those ghorious minaret-like spires eupping the castle turrots were not. The gate-homse stood thefore us intact, and thein in one monent the whole building lay disenvered before us, roofless, blackened, still burning, a ruin. It was a sad sight. There was the council-chamber, which spamed the waters-now a red Bridge of sighs -guttel; those glorions towers, triumphs of the nuthern lemaissance, were there no longer, the liast hatl fallen at eleven o'clock, slaking the very earth as it fill ; of Caroline Matilda's window, too, not one restige remaining; the tire still rising from time to time, licking away the woolwork around the stonenullioned windows, as though it were grease: never wat devastation more complete. Thon, as we passed the gateway, there stood the chapel half consmedthe riddersital, that gem of art, all fallen in-and, turning into the outer court beyond the moat, oh ! what a sight it was ! that splendid palace-unique in its style in Europe-a tottering, blackenel ruin, and all around frozen. The court was heaped with furniture, pictures, and humdreds of oljeets besides, suatehod trom the fury of the devoming clement; and what rubbish had been sitvel! what pots and pans, commodes and chairs, slichels of the Elephant, shields of the Danacbrog. My first iupuiry was alter the fate of the gallery: all gave a different answer. The pictures from the riddersial hatd been saved: stange tate those portatits-hey ahone eseaped the condagration of Christi:uborg in 1796. But the billiard-room? - Ai: lost. Queen Suphia?-Gone. I bowed my hear. 'That trinmph of portrait-printing-that elefdrenvre of Jacub von Dort. I asked no more questions: time would show the extent of the evil.

In a comutry like Denmark-fallon from its high estato anong tho prowers of Enropo-this ealamity will ho deeply felt ; for they live in the prat, in the memory of their own glorions history. Still I fear many of the Danes really do not know the extent of the loss they have sustuined-nat in the cas"le of Frelericksborg itsolf-that was their pride, thair glory-but in the splendid historic gallery, of which so few pictures will be again seen.
The fire had burst out early in the morning in the room lately restored by the king for his own private collection-a roum on the upper story aljoining the tower, towarls the riddersaal. The workmon were ocenpied in repairs. Whether it was a flue-whether a misplaced stove-in which the evil originated, matters little: the result is the same. The lake was frozen aver-this hiach added to the difficulties; the pipes of thu: engines, themselves far too short, were frozen, and conhl nut at finst be workel; and the fire, which at five o'clock wist scarcely looked mon as langerons, in the space of a few hours had reduced this beantiful monument of Christian IV.'s taste to its present sial comdition.
'Towards three oclock the royal carriages were ordered round to convey the court to Copenhagen. The king had retired to one of the buiblings of the outer comrt when all wat over, having remaned at his post till the very last, superintenling the removal of the valuables. As His Majesty descended the steps on his way to the carriay he stayed for one moment to great me, mul, as I expressel to him my sympathy at the terrible misfortune which hiad overwhelmed him, he kinuly prossed my hame. Le: could only ntter the worls "Queh matheur irrépurathe-quel malheur irréparahh!!" And it was so indeed, for Evedericksborg ean mover hes again what it once was: it was his pride, liis hobby, and he had donc, by julicious reparation, much to restore it to its pristine conditiom.

Before leaving I again sought out my good firiend Gylliek-he who, during the lint twenty years, liad, as cnstellan, done more towards the restoration of Frederikshorg than any human being alive. "I wish y"u gooll bye for evir, Gyllick; I shall never retarti. I have passel too many happy days in that deat ald gallery, stadying the history of Dennark in the portraits of her ruless, ever to bear the sight of its desolation. I have visited Freaicrikubory in its shory -I have seen it under the excitement of its flames I can never again lonk on it as a ruin." "But," he replied, "do not say that : come again in the springtime; we may again build up the chureh, and perhaps some of your old friends may still be sprured to ns."

Thor palace is still, however, a place of tiary-like beanty. The therule as represented at puge 369 rematins entire, and the interior of the chapel is stibl ai of the conts of uras of the Kuights of the Eloph ... i. But Frederick VII. liments his palice, as do also :th true Danes and all lovers of art and historp throughont the wido world. Fredericksborg was not merely a ruyal pulace, it was also n national palace.

But the billiard-room?
-Gunc. I bowed my ait-printing-that chetI asked 110 more questent of the evil. K-fallen from its high ropo-this calamity will the past, in the memory Still I fear many of the extent of the loss they awle of Fredericksborg thair glory-but in the hich so few pietures will ly in the morning in the fing fur his own private per story adjoining the 1. The workmen were $r$ it was a flue-whecther the evil originated, mat. ne. The hake wis frozen ieulties ; the pipew ol the t, wero frozen, and could the fire, which at five on as thagerons, in the ced this beintiful monuto its present sall con-al carriages were ortered Copenhagen. The kinir ling of the outer comer ained at his post till the emoval of the valuthles. stepu on his way to the ment to greet me, and, mpathy at the terrible selmed him, he kimily only ntter the worls el mallheur irrépatahle!" ericksborg can never be is his pride, his hobly, is reparation, much to 012.
lit out my good friend ast twenty years, had, its te resteration of Freileg alive. "I wish yom shall never retnm. I days in that dear ohd Demmark in the purbear the sight of its aceriksbors in its whry itemeat of its flimes s a ruin." "But," he e again in the springhe church, and perhips ;ill be spited to us.' , it place of tiary-like ed :tt pago 369 remains latpel is sti!? yui of the ,f the El oph .. t. But uce, as do also inl trite listor $\gamma$ througiount the as not merely in royal lace.
ross, w.c.

[^0]:    * tioka in teelundic means a glacier.

[^1]:    Moorish women who die infore they are marriond new huried in weliling elithes, wad the tridil song is sung over the corpse hefore it leares the house.

[^2]:    ${ }^{2}$ The Georgians are nill Christians of the Greck Chureh, and take their mme from their patron St. George.

[^3]:    ${ }^{1}$ This netion, besides heing deemed by the Mowrs as exphatien for crimen, is fikewise eonsidered the greatest respect that cinn be puid to the depurted.

[^4]:    - The beads liy which the pashansays his prayers are considered so strong a tulismun in the lumels of the greatest erimitul, that they remier his life mered while they ure in his poasestion.

[^5]:    ritels on the Shores of the Baltic, f'c. By S. S. Hill. 19

[^6]:    ${ }^{1}$ On Gaster Thursday also, I was told tho Russians nll hear war tapers in the churehes. During the reading of the Cinspets the mirson standing neurest lights his tnper at that of the oflecinting priest, and commuileates the light to his nelghburus, which is soon dilhised throughout the whole chureh. Eneh jerson takes the tuper (the light of the Gosyel) home with bim. What a simple symbol I

[^7]:    Russia and her C:ars, ly E. J. Brabazon.

[^8]:    The Dead Sea, foc, by Captain Willian Allen, R.N., vol. II, p. 131 , et seq.
    "Kharmuth waa a fumous impostor, founder of a seet cailed Carmathiana, very similar to that of the Assassing, One of the taspata of this seet was, that the sonl of the founder traisuigrates into the braly of tho successor, nuld that the pormon who helid the oflec of chlaf among them was the personitication of the origimi founder of the seet.

[^9]:    ${ }^{1}$ It must not be omitted, however, that in Pococke's timo that traveiler describes the Christinus of the several denominations as going there to celebrate the festival of the transfiguration, and ho adds, they have built altars against several of the large trees, on : which they administer the aacrament.

[^10]:    on hals way to the oriturs of Lebanon, Tho neressity for this perutar detome, mud the relatlve shmation of fluees, cim mily be made ciens ly the nutiepated publiention of the survey in question.

[^11]:    ${ }^{1}$ The scientific commission sent in 1857 by the minister, Don Manuel Siliceo, to the Popocatepetl and the Iztnceihualt, was composed of four persons-Mesarg. A. Sountag, in chargo of the geodosic observitions; Jules Laveiriere, tho historian and artist of the expedition; D1, F. Sumichrast, naturalist; and Messrs. Salazar and Ochon, medical men.

[^12]:    ${ }^{1}$ Irr a recently published work, L'Océanie, Auntelle: Colunies, Migrations, Melanges, pur Altred Jacolss.

[^13]:

     ing at the sum time, that the passane to syduey now plivetel, rid smothampton and kipph, never in less than hifig-the days, conht In pertimmed hy blat rume in furty four, or in cheven chys has.

     ellint harhmer. Wr. Seman wonla alsw, instend of making the terminns of the propomed ronte at Sydney, woult make it at Strishane, the capital of the new and thorishimg colong of (Quer is. hamb, and alrealy combeted he telograph nod stean with every Wy two days of thme, world thets lo saved. Dr. Serman womld prosedel to Itrinhate in almost a straight lime from sau Inan del Sur, calling on the way at the French colony of New Calalonia, at the rijis, und the Sharguesus. Thatit womh he low far south to render it a embronient place for tourling at. Mr. Comsul the purpore, the weessity fire giving jrotection to the bijil Islamiers. It in guite evilent, that tho lrench hasing vectpied Sew Cumbenia, the Somety INdunds, mul the Marquesas wo are If present left withont a shyple commerefial or stemalanat stationwithont a foos . indeed, in the wholo of Polynevin or Gevanin, or on the 1 " if romte from Anstralia and New Yenhand to Central or South Amerien, or to Britiah Columbla.

[^14]:    I " Lex Orece," saty a lirench writer " par vanité emulhissent les moindres elones, en leur domant une origine illuntre.

[^15]:    ${ }^{1}$ It should be unclerstood that a Creole is a person bom in tho West Indies, of a race not indigonous to tho islands. They may be white Creoles, coloured Creoles, or black Creoles. Pequle talik of Creole horses and Creole poultry: those namely which have not been thenselves imported, but which have heen bred from in. ported stock. Tho meaning of the word Creole is, I think, sometimes misunderstood.

[^16]:    ${ }^{1}$ King IRing, when woumlod soverely In battle, determined to dio ; so ho ordered the dend holies of his warriors to bo phaced in n ship, together with that of his gneen, Alpol, nad neated himself at tho stern. The slip was tonded with piteh mad sulphur nad set on fre, nind so hu sailed out to sea. Ition tho jlunged his sword linto his body, mad perisecel. A hol was ruised la his heneur.

[^17]:    ${ }^{1}$ Jiclative to the tapestry manufacture of Demmurk, we give the following extract from Fuller:-"The making of tipestry was cither unknown or mused in England till almat the end of the reign of ling James, when he gave two thonsand pounts to Sir Frnueia Crane to build therewith an house at Morechark for that purpose. Here they only imitated old patterns, butil they had proeured one Franeis kidin, a German, to be their designet.

