...That... Preposterous ..Will..

BY L. G. MOBERLY.

CHAPTER I.

"I am afraid you will not find the will as straightforward as one could have wished. There are some strange provisions and quite unlooked-for complications."

Mr. Bray, the family solicitor of the late Mr. Godfrey Haines, the richest man in Sinsley, looked gravely across the table at the only other occupant of the room. "Complications? Provisions? What do you mean?" The second voice was abrupt, impetuous, and there was a note of surprise in it. "Surely my godfather has not gone back on his promise?"

"Not exactly, and yet—possibly you will say that he has done so. The deliberation of the lawyer's words made the young man sitting opposite to him fidget irritably. "I assure you, Mr. Dayrell, I was quite as much surprised as you can possibly be when I saw your godfather's latest will."

"Surely you drew it up?" Impatience was now the chief sound in the young man's voice. "Surely he gave instructions to you about it?"

"Unfortunately not. Had he done so, I should most certainly have mentioned with him for inserting a clause which would have—"

"Which virtually alters the meaning of the whole document?"

Alan Dayrell stirred yet more uneasily in his chair. He was a tall, good-looking young fellow of perhaps twenty-two or twenty-four years, with a pleasant, debonair expression, blue eyes of peculiar brightness and keenness, and a clean-shaven face which allowed one to see the well-cut mouth and strong chin. Alan Dayrell might be and was still a very young man, but he had that in his face which presaged that he would carve out a name for himself upon the tablets of fame. The marks of a strong character were written large upon him for all men to read.

He had been summoned to the lawyer's office that morning to hear the particulars of the will of his late godfather, Mr. Godfrey Haines, whose heir he was universally supposed to be; and Mr. Bray's words had a disconcerting sound in the ears of one who had been brought up to the belief that an assured and wealthy future awaited him.

"Do you mean to say that there is some flaw in the will's so-called 'allegation'?" You speak as though a disaster had happened," Dayrell spoke quickly. "Let me come to the point: tell me at once what this new will is."

Mr. Bray sat back in his chair for a moment, looking contemplatively at the young man. Perhaps he was wondering how he would receive the findings that awaited him; perhaps his rather grim lawyer's soul was sorry for what must undoubtedly come upon young Dayrell if anything of a blow; perhaps he was even admiring the handsome young face with its strong and masterful personality. Who knows? Mr. Bray's face was almost void of expression, and absolutely non-committal. His rather small grey eyes, having swept his companion from head to foot, were lowered once more to the table, and to a large sheet of parchment spread out upon it.

"I will tell you the main points first," he said at last, "and then I will read you the actual will. I may add that this will was handed to me by Mr. Haines' house-keeper on the day of the funeral. She informed me that her late master had desired that it should not be given to me till then."

"But I was at the funeral," Alan Dayrell interrupted. "Why could you not have told me then about this will? Why have you waited a week? Why?"

"I had an excellent reason," the lawyer answered mildly, raising his hands with a little soothing gesture. "When the house-keeper handed me a sealed envelope, I at once opened it. I found there a note from Mr. Haines, addressed to me. It was very short, but quite clear. It informed me that the document accompanying it was his latest will; that he wished the instructions therein contained to be carried out to the letter; and the contents of the same were not to be communicated to you until a week had elapsed after the funeral. then seek out the lady, and acquaint her with them also."

"And she is bound by conditions too?" Dayrell asked curiously. "By Jove, my godfather has played us a pretty trick—quiet old man as he seemed, he must have been maturing all these elaborate plans on the very last occasion we met."

"Mr. Haines, though very quiet, had a way of—of observing and knowing things, for which people hardly gave him credit," said Mr. Bray. "I suppose you have not offended him in any way which could account for this business?"

"Not that I recollect," Dayrell began, then checked himself suddenly, and flushing darkly; "at least—not in any way which could account for this extraordinary affair. Naturally, we did not always agree on every subject."

"Naturally not," the lawyer replied suavely, but his keen glance marked the traces of embarrassment on the young man's face. "In any case, it is too late now to try and account for the strange newness of his behaviour to you. Tomorrow I must go and interview Miss Miranda Hume, and explain to her—"

"And to begin with, please explain to her that it would be impossible, quite impossible for me to accede to the terms of this preposterous will under any circumstances I could consent to such a farce as a marriage of this sort would certainly be."

"Quite so, quite so," the lawyer agreed; "but the young lady, though there are conditions attached to her receiving the money, is not so hampered as you are, Mr. Dayrell. The money, with the exception of your small legacy, is to be all hers, unless she marries any one excepting yourself within the next three years. In that case the money goes to you. If she marries you, the money is to be equally divided between you. If she does not marry in the next three years, the money remains hers."

"The will is ridiculous, simply and solely ridiculous. If the woman has a grain of sense, she will either elect to remain single, or sit tight where she is for three years, and then marry whom she pleases. In any case I'm done out of the fortune."

"Possibly the lady may be very attractive," Mr. Bray ventured to throw in.

"Possibly she may be; it makes no difference to my sentiments. I am not going to be introduced into a sordid marriage of this description. My grandfathers were a poor man, working in an office, and working hard to get a salary of two hundred a year. If I had been an idle beggar, he might have been justified in making a fool of me. As things are, I must go and interview Miss Miranda Hume, but make it perfectly clear to her that I have no intention of selling myself for money."

TO STAMP OUT CHILD LABOR

The President and Officers of Pawtucket Mills Arrested for Violating Law.

PAWBUCKET, R. I. Jan. 7.—Warrants have been sworn out in the 10th district court against the Lorraine Manufacturing Co., and the Slater Cotton Co., for alleged violation of the new child labor law, which requires certificates from children under 14 years of age that no child under 14 shall be permitted to work in the mills. James R. McCall, president of the National Cotton Manufacturers' Association, is president of the Lorraine Mills. The penalty for violation of the law is a heavy fine.

The action of the factory inspector follows his announcement of a determined crusade against the practice of employing children in the mills. He declares that the practice is so prevalent that it has become a state scandal, and he is determined to make an example of some of the largest establishments.

A HORRIBLE CONSPIRACY

Negro Soldiers Plotted to Murder Every White Officer

One of the Results of Roosevelt's Action in Discharging Negro Regiment Without Honor.

EL RENO, Okla., Jan. 8.—Belief of the army officers at Fort Reno that a conspiracy to murder every white officer at Fort Reno, beginning with Captain Edgar A. Macklin, against whom it is said many negro soldiers at the post entertain a grudge as a result of the affair at Brownsville, Texas, and the discharge of the negro soldiers that followed, became known today as a result of the preliminary hearing in the case of Edward L. Knowles, corporal of Company A, 25th Infantry, who was held on a charge of assault with intent to kill Captain Macklin on the night of Dec. 21, Knowles was bound over to await the action of the Canadian court grand jury at the opening term of court.

All of the officers now go heavily armed and protected throughout the night.

Every effort has been made to keep the alleged conspiracy a secret, but it is learned that an investigation is now being conducted at several army posts and important places throughout the country, and within a short time several arrests of members of the troops recently discharged without honor are expected to follow.

Information was received here tonight that the arrest of a negro soldier was made at La Junta, Colo., today.

THEY WENT ON SKATES TO ROOSEVELT'S RECEPTION

Many Children Skated to the White House Doors on New Year's Day and Passed through Reception Room with Skates Slung Over Their Shoulders---Teddy Was "Dee-lighted."

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 3.—The annual public reception at the White House took place as usual on New Year's day and was free from any of the disagreeable features which Washingtonians have feared ever since the public reception at Buffalo when President McKinley was assassinated. The day was a beautiful one, spring-like and sunny, a bad beginning for the president since the size of the crowd with which he must shake hands is influenced to a great extent by the weather. By eight o'clock a line had begun to form from the White House gates and when the doors were closed it was estimated that the president had shaken hands with ten thousand people. It was the largest number that was ever admitted to the White House and at least a thousand too late to obtain admission, were turned away.

The reception proper begins at eleven o'clock when the diplomatic corps is formally received and the reception to the general public does not take place until the president has received the justices of the supreme court, the army, navy, and marine corps, senators and members of the lower house, representatives of the grand army and other organizations. The senatorial contingent was unusually interesting this year by reason of the fact that it was led by Senator Foraker whose differences of late with the president are known throughout the breadth of the land. Neither one of the gentlemen though allowed an expression to escape him that would indicate any disagreement between them and their greetings and wishes for the New Year were as cordial as though they were in perfect accord about railway regulation and the Brownsville troops.

Chinamen in the Line
The line which waits outside the White House is always an interesting one. The diplomats and the representatives of the army and navy are always gorgeous creatures in their full dress uniforms and the beautifully gowned women in the receiving party always attract attention. For real interest there is nothing like the self invited free born American citizens who assemble for the purpose of having their hand shaken by the president and of having one fleeting moment in his presence. They are of all ages, all sizes, all conditions, and nearly all of them this year there were fewer of the colored population than before, but a number of Chinese laundrymen were present. One of them from a party of Chinese students visiting here had joined the crowd.

Children Went on Skates
There is always a liberal sprinkling of children in the gathering and since the president's views about large families are so well known there is a freedom about bringing the children that has never been realized before. Many came unaccompanied by parents though several skated down to the line on their roller skates and went through the White House, greeted the president, smiled at Mrs. Roosevelt and stared at Mrs. Longworth, their skates all the while slung over their shoulders. Mrs. Longworth was scarcely less eagerly looked at than the president. She

NEWSPAPER MAN

J. A. Phillips Died in the House of Commons Press Gallery.
Ottawa, Jan. 8.—J. A. Phillips, a well known Ottawa newspaper man, died at 9 o'clock this evening in the press room of the house of commons, where he had worked for many years. During the past six or seven years he was connected with the local press, but occasionally visited the gallery.
He walked into the press room about 8.30 this evening, complaining that he had difficulty in breathing, and a half hour later he passed away peacefully, shaking hands and bidding good bye to those around him. Medical aid was at hand, but was futile.
The late Mr. Phillips was a son of Arthur P. Phillips, of Barbados, and was born in Liverpool in 1842. He started his journalistic career in New York in 1865, and came to Canada in 1870, when he joined the staff of the Montreal Star. In his history of the Dominion. Later on he became connected with the press gallery, and was for a few years in the public works department. During the short session of '96 he was president of the gallery, being Ottawa correspondent of the Montreal Gazette.
The deceased could write a good story, and was the author of some patriotic pieces, such as The Flag For Me. He was a staunch Conservative, and leaves no family. His wife died several years ago.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS FOR CANADA'S TRADE

The Montreal Trade Bulletin's
Prediction for the Current Year.
(Montreal Trade Bulletin)
That Canada and the U. S. have just passed through a year of commercial prosperity almost unprecedented in their history cannot be denied, but whether the year upon which we are now entering will be one of unbroken success, similar to that of its predecessor remains to be seen. There is some doubt upon this important subject, at least as regards the United States, where speculation on a prodigious scale has produced an overstrained money market and abnormally high rates of interest, and we notice that fears are entertained by a portion of the United States press that the speculative price of stocks is too fast to last. Canada is altogether differently situated to the Republic south of us, as the former has entered a period of unexampled expansion in her vast north-western empire, which is bound to continue for a long time, millions of acres of which are being brought under the plough, and there is no reason why it should not continue, if not surpass, that of 1906, if only a due amount of caution is exercised by our merchants in avoiding the danger of overtrading, and giving too much credit.

The pure food law is now in effect and smother all foods bottled or packed must bear on the label an accurate statement of the contents, of what ingredients composed and of all adulterants or preservatives used. The law makes the obligation one which comes nearer the people than almost any passed in recent times. It does the health of every household in the land. It is one of the measures passed by congress last year and it is supposed that the right month since its enactment have been open by manufacturers in preparing their foods and food packages to comply with the new law.

DEATH OF THE SHAH

Ruler of Persia Passed Away Last Night
Teheran Streets Are Deserted and City is in Darkness---A Time of Lamentation.

London, Jan. 8.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Teheran, in a telegram sent last night at 11.30 o'clock, says:
"The Shah of Persia died this evening, though no public announcement of the fact will be made until tomorrow (Wednesday)."
"It was evident yesterday (Monday) that the end was rapidly approaching, and four injections of camphor were employed to prolong the ruler's life. All the Shah's vital functions were suspended today and, at 5 o'clock this evening, the heir apparent and the ministers were summoned. The women of the palace also began preparing for mourning."
"Soon after sunset the doors of the harem were closed. This was the sign that all was over. The news of the Shah's death reached the foreign ministers late this evening, but the public is still unaware of his majesty's end. The streets are deserted and the city is in darkness."
The late Shah leaves many children, and will be succeeded by his eldest son, Mohammed Ali Mirza, the Valiabad, or heir apparent, and governor of the province of Azerbaijan, who was born in 1872, and who is now in Teheran.
The new Shah has shown strong force of character, and the general view is that a strong ruler at Teheran will be the best corrective to European intrigues.

DOES NOT LOOK FOR LOW MONEY RATES
The Foreign Financial Situation
Must Be Taken Into Account
(Bradstreet's)
While the old year did not come to an end without whisperings of pending financial troubles growing out of the continued high rates for money and the enormous shrinkage of values for certain inflated stocks, Wall Street men met with no disturbing incidents of that kind. In fact, the January 1 disbursements and the shifting of balances which they involve, passed off without mishap, and, as might be expected, the money market has developed a better and easier tone, this being particularly true as regards time loans which are again being offered rates considerably higher than in the past. Money is also coming back from the interior to a certain extent, and there is a general impression that the loan market has seen the worst and may tend to ease still further in the ensuing weeks. At the same time conservative financial authorities do not seem inclined to accept the theory that the New York loan market is likely to exhibit a prevalence of extremely low rates in the early part of 1907. The foreign financial situation cannot be left out of account in this connection, and it is considered rather significant that the rates for demand sterling have advanced sharply, leading, in fact, to some discus-

NEW HOME

Natural History Society Opened
Its New Building Last Evening.
Anticipations were fully realized last evening when the Natural History Society's building was thrown open for public inspection and an opportunity given to examine its many rooms with their interesting features and admirable collections, every case being labelled, with contents neatly arranged and classified. The formal opening of the new building was held last evening, and proved very successful. About 200 ladies and gentlemen made up a representative gathering, and the proceedings were much enjoyed.
President John V. Ellis occupied the chair, and on the platform were Mayor Sears, U. S. Consul Willich, Dr. H. S. Bridges, Dr. G. U. Hay, Rev. W. C. Gagnor, General Warner, Dr. G. F. and Mrs. Matthew, Mrs. E. L. Fiske, and others.
Senator Ellis spoke of the work done by the ladies' committee with the society and of the way it had developed in recent years to meet the educational requirements. He alluded briefly to the financial aspect and to the new building not yet paid for, expressing the hope that many of their friends present would, at a later date, be able to come to their assistance.
This evening, at 7.30 o'clock, in St. Paul's church, His Lordship Coadjutor Bishop Richardson will institute Rev. E. B. Hooper to the rectorate of St. Paul's parish, after which Rev. Mr. Hooper will be inducted by the church wardens. At the conclusion of the service the members of the congregation will hold a reception for their rector and his wife in the Sunday school house.

SLEUTH NABS DR. FLOWER AFTER TWO YEARS' CHASE

Mine Swindler Found Disguised in Philadelphia—"Professor Oxford," Benevolent Looking, Whose Scheme Robbed Victims of $1,000,000 and Caused Three Suicides, Found Selling Spurious Stones.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7.—After a chase lasting more than two years, and which reached through Mexico and a good part of South America, Dr. R. C. Flower, the colossal mining stock swindler, was arrested in this city.

At the time he was taken into custody he was posing as "Professor Oxford," a benevolent looking, whose scheme robbed victims of $1,000,000 and caused three suicides, found selling spurious stones.

"Oxford" made indignity denials that he was the man called for in the warrant. He was the same brilliant, suave promoter there. Before he could be arrested he learned of McConville's presence and disappeared.

Perrelli won. The wrestling match between Perrelli and Mousquet here tonight was won by Perrelli who secured the second and third of the three throws.

WILL WIND UP BUT NOT SELL

Directors of the Fredericton Boom Company Refuse an Offer of $40,000—Company Lost Last Year.

Federicton, N. B., Jan. 8.—The annual meeting of the Fredericton Boom Company was held at the office of A. F. Randolph & Sons this afternoon and was fairly well attended, about 500 votes being represented by persons and by proxy.

The business of the company has been unprofitable for a number of years and a resolution was passed authorizing the president to wind up its affairs as soon as possible, the stockholders being willing to pay their double liability rather than continue.

Recently the People's Bank of New Brunswick obtained a judgment against the company for $25,000, but there are assets, which, it is said, will supply cover this claim.

Miss Grace F. Turnbull left yesterday for Berlin on a trip to the Mediterranean with Mrs. Harold Robertson, of Yarmouth. Mrs. S. Alward accompanied her to Boston.

TENDERS FOR A NEW BERTH

Board of Works Orders Plans for 600 Foot Wharf—Tenders Close Jan 24.

The board of works last evening decided that plans and specifications should be prepared at once for a 600 foot berth in Charlottetown. A committee of the whole board was appointed with power to call for tenders and with instructions to have the plans on exhibition Jan. 14 and tenders closed by Jan. 21 at noon.

Ald. Baxter favored setting definitely the kind of timber to be used and the sizes permitted so that no question could arise in the future.

Some discussion followed as to what dredging the government should be asked to do. It was generally agreed that the dredging should commence at the end of the present berth and be carried out in the direction of the harbor line, enough being left in the rear for the supports for the warehouse and railway line.

The director agreed in the suggestion to dredge to 32 feet, adding that steamers could load deeper than at present if they had the depth.

The wedding of Miss Patience Peet of Prince street and William F. Dunham, of Fairville, N. B., took place last evening at nine o'clock at the Methodist parsonage, west end. Rev. H. D. Marr officiated.

A wedding that has aroused much interest and elicited many good wishes was solemnized yesterday afternoon at four o'clock in St. Luke's church, Westford, when Miss Edith Elizabeth Nutter, daughter of James Nutter, of Westford, and Dr. Duncan Robertson, of Westford, son of G. Heber Arnold, of St. John, were united in marriage by Rev. H. W. Colston, pastor of St. Luke's.
